There is very much demanded of the soprano by Verdi. The part is almost impossible to even the concert singer. But Mr. Curley knew he was provided for in the actions of the part when he engaged Caroline Hudson-Alexander. Mme. Alexander did some of the best work ever heard in this city and some remarkable artists have appeared here. Singing with the chorus, in quartet, or in solo passages, the flutelike beauty of her notes brought into the thoughts of very many of the audience the word "wonderful." In a remarkable performance of soloists, chorus and of orchestra, the artistic success of Mme. Alexander is still most conspicuous. Her range is marvelous and the sweetness of her voice most notable.

While she was previously thoroughly established in the good favor of Schenectadians, her praises will be more strongly spoken now than ever before.—Union Star.

Caroline Hudson-Alexander has a soprano voice of rare beauty, which floated out into the great auditorium with angelic sweetness.—Gazette. (Advertisement.)

Marie Sundelius' Summer of Work and Recreation.

Caught for a few minutes' telephone chat before her departure for the North Shore on Wednesday of last week, Marie Sundelius told the MUSICAL COURIER Boston representative of the delightful summer she has been spending at North Bridgton, Me., with occasional trips elsewhere to fill summer engagements. Recent among these were appearances as chief soloist at the Maine Saco Valley Music Festival, August 1; a recital at the Temple of Arts, Bar Harbor, Me., on August 11, and her appearance at the final of Mrs. Hall McAllister's North Shore musicales, on August 14.

Mme. Sundelius' fall season, too, starts unusually early, with the first date booked for September 1, at Syracuse, N. Y.

News from Cordelia Lee.

From Manager Antonia Sawyer's office comes the first news of Cordelia Lee, the violinist, who is one of her artists, and is abroad at the present time. She will sail on the Bergens Fjord, which is expected to leave Christiania on September 2.

SEASON 1914-1915 MRS. H. H. A. BEACH M. H. HANSON 437 Fifth Avenue New York

SEASON 1914-1915 MAUD POWELL H. Godfrey Turner 1400 B'way, New York

NELSON AND HIS ORCHESTRAL BAND
OF MINNEAPOLIS
Assisted by Celebrated Soloists, Will Make a Concert Tour During Months of October and November, 1914. For dates address
OTTO L. HEEGER, Mgr., Shiffman Building - St. Paul, Minn.

FLORENCE MULFORD CONTRALTO
Of the Metropolitan Opera Company
Personal Address: 1104 Broad Street, Newark, N. J.
Phone, 525 W-Market
HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, 27 West 42d Street NEW YORK

IMPERIAL ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC AND DRAMATIC ART IN VIENNA
School year begins September 20th. (Admission at other times only by special arrangement)
Magnificent new building, with finest, most thorough and most modern equipment of any musical institution in the world. Eighty-five eminent masters.
Regular Courses in All Branches of Vocal and Instrumental Music. Fee $60 to $120 per year.
Opera School with its Own Specially Equipped New Theater for Rehearsals and Performances. Fee $120 per year.
MASTERSCHOOL FOR PIANO: Prof. Leopold GODOWSKY. MASTERSCHOOL FOR VIOLIN: Prof. Otto ŠEVČIK
Fee for Each Masterschool $160 per year
For Further Information Apply to the Office of the IMPERIAL ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC - - - - Vienna, III., Lothringerstrasse 14

LINCOLN SUMMER NOTES.

Lincoln, Neb., August 1, 1914.

One of the finest piano recitals ever presented by a student at the University School of Music was that given by Edith Lee Bagnell, graduate with Lura Schuler Smith. A large and enthusiastic audience greeted this charming young lady, whose playing was of a nature such as to attract so cultured an assembly.

It is a delight to hear the beautiful and characteristic etude in B flat major by Chopin given with such insight into the real beauties of this romantic composer; and the Beethoven sonata was presented with a mastery most unusual.

While every number on the program gave pleasure, it is doubtful if the Rubinstein concerto in D minor has ever been better played by a student in point of both technic and interpretation. Her friends predict a brilliant career for this talented and persevering pianist. She is to be a member of the faculty of the University School of Music during the coming year. The following was her program: Sonata, Op. 57, Beethoven; prelude, B flat major, Chopin; "Soirees de Vienne," No. 6, Schubert-Liszt; "Vogel als Prophet," Schumann; "La Campanella," Paganini-Liszt; concerto, D minor, Rubinstein. Orchestral parts on second piano were supplied by Mrs. Smith.

VISIT OF FORMER LINCOLN GIRL.

Mr. and Mrs. August Hagenow are enjoying a visit from their daughter, May Belle Hagenow Furbush, pianist and resident of Boston for the last ten years. She has achieved marked success as a musician of culture, having studied piano with Mrs. Will Owen Jones and Carl Stasny, violin with Emil Mahr, pipe organ with Henry Dunham, harmony and theory with Blanpied and Louis C. Elson. Lincoln is indeed proud of her talents and welcomes her return.

LINCOLN NOTES.

The various bands are busy discoursing summer out of door music, which is thoroughly enjoyed by every one.

The latest fad, the roof garden concerts and dances, are quite the style and will doubtless be a prominent affair for the summer months.

A successful summer school has been carried on by the University School of Music and considerable work is being done.

Many Lincoln teachers are out of town enjoying a much earned rest. Miss Klinker is in Europe; Louise Zumwinkel is taking university work at Boulder, Col., thus combining duty and pleasure; Sidney Silber is enjoying the lake breezes in Wisconsin; Edith Lucille Robbins is resting in Northern Minnesota; while Mr. Frysinger is renewing old acquaintances in Pennsylvania; Mr. Mills is in Michigan, and Messrs. Carder, Cornell and Roseborough are in Colorado.

Hazel Kinscella, the successful pianist, is teaching in the summer school of the University School of Music, and played at the convocation of the State University on Friday. She has recently received a letter from Helen Jeffy, saying her father was very much improved in health. They are at Bradley Beach, N. J., at present.

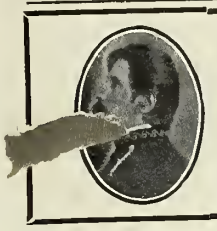
Annette Abbot was the soloist of the celebration at Doane College, Crete, in honor of Dr. Fairchild's forty years of service. She sang "Roses," the poem of which was written by Mrs. Fairchild and set to music by W. I. Andrus, who was director of the conservatory for several years.

ELIZABETH EASTWOOD LUCE.

Music Born of Sorrow.

There is no nation naturally musical; it is because it has passed through such tribulation that it has been driven to express its sorrow and anxiety in its airs and compositions. Bach, the writer declares, is the culminating expression of sufferings induced in Germany by the thirty years' war fifty years before Bach's time. People sing "like cowards," he continues, to keep up their spirits in bad moments, and he finds that the real countries of music are nearly all frontier provinces exposed to external vicissitudes. England he finds exempt to a large extent from the occasions in which poets "learn in suffering what they teach in song" because it is protected from invasion by the girdle of the seas. Music, then, he argues, is not an art of peace; it originates in strife and anxiety, not in tranquillity and concord. The overprosperous countries, he discovers, "not only have no history; they have no music."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Park Bands Vindicated.



Now that summer is with us and music is almost at a standstill, says the Saturday Sunset, of Victoria, B. C., music pupils should not neglect the opportunity of listening to the military bands in the parks in the evenings and Sunday afternoons, as the one, two, three; one, two, three of the dreamy waltz, and the varied rhythms of the operatic potpourri will keep them refreshed at least in a few musical ideas, and help them to remember much that has been taught them during the active season of study.

JEZZY DUFAU
COLORATURA SOPRANO
Concert Recital
Chicago-Philadelphia Grand Opera Co.
Under Management of HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Building, Chicago

VAN YORX
THEO. ——— Tenor
Will teach throughout the Summer
Studios: 21 West 38th Street, - New York
3701 Murray Hill

BISPHAM
SEASON 1914-1915
For terms and dates apply to all managers
Personal Address
44 W. 44th Street - New York

GABRILÓWITSCH
THE EMINENT RUSSIAN PIANIST
AMERICAN TOUR JANUARY-APRIL, 1915
Management, LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, N. Y.
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

GIUSEPPE CREATORE AND HIS BAND
NOW BOOKING FOR 1914-1915
OFFICE: 1512 TRIBUNE BUILDING, - - - CHICAGO, ILL.

WHITEHILL
BASS-BARITONE
Formerly Metropolitan Opera
Management:
THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th Street, New York

A NAME TO CONJURE WITH!
THIBAUD
For Terms and Dates Address
A Violinist Whom France Declares to Be Without an Equal
Thibaud's American visit last winter was the violinistic sensation of the season. His return in the Fall will be an event of first importance.
LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, New York

U. S. KERR
BASSO CANTANTE--Song Recitals and Oratorio a Specialty
For Bookings Address 538 West 143d Street, New York City
'Phone 3313 Audubon

JULES FALK VIOLINIST
NOW IN AMERICA
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th Street, New York

The Guilmant Organ School
DR. WILLIAM C. CARL, Director
A School for Students with serious aims, who desire to become expert Organists. REOPENS OCT. 6th.
Send For New Catalogue. 44 West 12th St., N. Y.

LEONARD BORWICK PIANIST
WILL TOUR AMERICA SEASON 1914-15
"Borwick is a great deal more than a mere virtuoso. He is a true and refined musician."—Dresden Deutscher Wacht.
Management—WOLFSOHN BUREAU, 1 West 34th St., New York. Steinway Piano Used

MADAME ANITA RIO

CELEBRATED AMERICAN PRIMA DONNA SOPRANO

after six years of operatic successes in Europe, will return to this country in September for Concert and Oratorio Engagements.

Management - - MUSIC LEAGUE OF AMERICA,
HOWARD E. POTTER, Business Manager
AEOLIAN HALL - - - NEW YORK

RICCARDO MARTIN

FAMOUS TENOR

Metropolitan Opera Company

Available for Concerts

October, November, 1914. May, 1915

Management:
CHARLES L. WAGNER, 1451 Broadway, N. Y.

Three years with the late Putnam Griswold.
Former accompanist for Jadlowker of Berlin Royal Opera.
At present with Orville Harrold and George Dostal.

EMIL J. POLAK

ACCOMPANIST and COACH

Address: 217 East 71st Street, New York City — Telephone 923 Lenox

Zoellner Quartet

Coast to Coast Tour 1914-15

H. Culbertson, Fine Arts Bldg, Chicago

BARITONE

Concert, Oratorio, Recitals, Etc.

BERNHARD STEINBERG

Mr. Steinberg disclosed a voice of really beautiful timbre, and one which in mezza voce he used with much delicacy. . . . His intelligence of interpretation was unusual, and his musical instincts sincere and sure. It is to be hoped that Mr. Steinberg will be heard again, and that his music will include some of the Jewish ritual.—New York Tribune.

Address all communications to - JULIUS C. MEYER, Secretary
1425 Broadway, Suite 69-70, New York City Tel. 7222 Bryant.

The Famous Prima Donna of the Paris Grand Opera

MLLE. ALICE VERLET

"With the exception of Mmes. Patti and Melba, no voice of exactly the same quality has been in this country for a long period. . . ."
—London Morning Post, March 22, 1909.

Will Tour the Season 1914-15 in U.S.A. and Canada and is now being booked for Concerts and Recitals.

By Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave.
New York

Press Praises Ward Lewis.

Ward Lewis, the accompanist, is the recipient of the following praiseworthy press criticisms:

It was one of the most finished quartet appearances Wichita has ever had. To Ward C. Lewis, pianist, is due much credit. . . . Mr. Lewis gave two piano numbers very satisfactorily. His work as accompanist was very noticeable.—Wichita (Kan.).

Ward C. Lewis, as accompanist, did exceptionally well. He is an artist as a pianist.—Eau Claire (Wis.) Leader.

The two piano numbers, given by Mr. Lewis, were very enjoyable. His liquid scale passages, and the shading, especially in the toccata, were worthy of mention. Too much cannot be said of Mr. Lewis' accompaniments. There was not a single moment when he was not thoroughly in sympathy with the singers. Indeed, his work as an accompanist was just what such work should be—so sympathetic that the listener does not feel conscious of the accompaniment until attracted to it by its very art.—Galesburg (Ill.) Evening Mail.

Mr. Lewis proved himself an adept accompanist, and his solo numbers met with marked favor, he being recalled.—Galesburg, Ill., Republican-Register.

Ward C. Lewis, the accompanist, rendered pastorale by Scarlatti-Tausig and toccata by Theodore Hoeck in a masterful manner.—Marion (Ohio) Daily Star.

Mr. Lewis, as accompanist, was self effacing. As a soloist, delicate handling of his music characterized him. The Scarlatti-Tausig encore number was a pastorale that was beautifully done.—Hutchinson (Kan.) Gazette.

Ward Lewis, the accompanist, played the accompaniments and a couple of solos in an accomplished manner.—Aberdeen (S. Dak.) Daily News.

Mr. Lewis is an accompanist of ability and contributed in large measure to the interest of the program.—Winona Independent.

A delightful atmosphere was created by the sympathetic accompanying of Mr. Lewis, who also played a number of solos. The response to each hearty encore was most generous on the part of the quartet and was appreciated by the audience who were most enthusiastic in their praise of the ability of the artists.—Freeport (Ill.) Journal-Standard.

Mr. Lewis, the accompanist, played with unusual skill.—Evansville (Ill.) Review.

Ward C. Lewis, the pianist who acted as accompanist, and also gave a piano number, is a factor not to be overlooked in the success of the quartet.—Marinette (Wis.).

Ward C. Lewis, as accompanist, deserves the highest praise for the capable manner in which he filled that difficult position. He adapts himself to the composer and artist alike and makes himself a worthy support to the singers. In solo work he proves to be the master of the instrument.—Traverse City (Mich.) Record-Eagle.

The accompanist, Ward C. Lewis, who pleased the audience with his solo work, added not a little to the quality of the entertainment by the aid he gave the singers in keeping in constant sympathy with them.—Muskegon (Mich.) Chronicle.

Accompanists generally draw scant notice from the audience, but Ward C. Lewis, beyond being applauded highly for two piano solos, certainly convinced the audience with his delicate and sympathetic playing of the accompaniments. Many of them held an important part in the ensemble, and Mr. Lewis was always able to draw the most out of them. He deserves much more than a mere passing consideration.—Manistee (Mich.) Daily News. (Advertisement.)

Louise Gerard-Thiers in Europe.

Among the prominent musicians in Europe for whom grave concern has been felt is Louise Gerard-Thiers, of Carnegie Hall, New York City. Mme. Thiers up to July 25 was in Munich, Germany, but on that date she left on a tour up the Rhine, with Cologne as her destination. After a short stay there she was to go to Paris. Several attempts to reach her by cable have been unsuccessful, and the State Department advised her representative at Carnegie Hall that American consuls have been cabled for information concerning her. Several years ago Mme. Thiers, while spending the summer in Berlin, was subjected to considerable annoyance on account of being mistaken for a Russian spy. Being of a distinct foreign type, and not having a passport at the time, she could not convince them of their mistake and that she was an American, until she appealed to the American consul. The last three years, however, she has always carried her passport and it is believed that the fact that she is an American will enable her to get out of Germany unhindered.

Bar Harbor Concert.

A concert will be given by the Bar Harbor Choral Society in the Building of Arts at Bar Harbor, Me., on August 27, under the direction of Maurice C. Rumsey. There will be a chorus of ninety voices and an orchestra of players from the Boston Symphony. The soloist will be Courtlandt Palmer, who will play the Liszt piano concerto in E flat.

The program will also include Coleridge-Taylor's cantata, "Hiawatha's Wedding Feast," for chorus, tenor solo and orchestra.

Explained.

Mrs. Bluffe—Melba sounded hoarse last night.

Mrs. Huff—Your record must have got cold.—The Smart Set.

JOHN REBARER

CONCERT PIANIST

Address L. R. REBARER

420 Madison Ave. New York City

MME. MARIE

RAPPOLD

Celebrated Prima Donna Soprano

of the Metropolitan Opera Co.

Available for Concerts — January to June, 1915

Exclusive Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY

"The perfection of Quartet playing."—London Daily Mail.

The World's Greatest Chamber Music Organization. The

FLONZALEY QUARTET

Tour 1914-15 Now Booking

Management: LOUDON CHARLTON, 868 Carnegie Hall, New York

YVONNE DE

TRÉVILLE

Coloratura Soprano

Grand Opera Prima Donna

NOW IN AMERICA

SEASON 1914-15 BOOKING

Available for Concerts, Musicales, Recitals and Festivals.

European Address: 68 rue de l'Aurora, Bruxelles, Belgium
American Address: - 62 De Hart Place, Elizabeth, N. J.
Cable Address: Detreville-Bruxelles

If you would know why it is some grand pianos lose that beautiful tone quality that is so attractive at first, write Kranich & Bach for a booklet that tells just how this is brought about. There is much other information that is of value pertaining to grand pianos in these books, and they can be had free, upon request.

KRANICH & BACH
New York

DJANE LAVOIE-HERZ
CONCERT PIANIST
Touring Canada and United States Season 1914-1915
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.
Steinway Piano used.

WILLIAM WHEELER TENOR
Soloist Worcester Festival
O. J. EHRGOTT
156 Fifth Ave.
Personal Representative
Personal Address: 61 Hamilton Place, New York

FRANCIS ROGERS BARITONE
Recital, Oratorio, Concert
Also a few Pupils
563 Park Ave., New York
Management: LOUDON CHARLTON
Carnegie Hall

JULIE JANSEN WYLIE Soprano
Management, Iris Pendleton, Philharmony Hall, Wichita - Kansas
New York Address, 736 W. 181st Street

LILLIAN SHERWOOD NEWKIRK
VOICE CULTURE, ITALIAN METHOD.
Special attention to tone production.
1425 Broadway, Metropolitan Opera House Bldg., New York.
Mail address, 11 Morgan Ave., Norwalk, Conn.

Adele Krueger
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Concert, Oratorio, Recital
Management of Miss Annie Friedberg, 1425 Broadway, New York

LEO BRAUN
Voice Culture : Repertoire
Opera Concert Oratorio
Studio: 446 CENTRAL PARK WEST

GEORGE HAMLIN
Will, without fail, fill his engagements in America next February, March and April.
HAENSEL & JONES, AEOLIAN HALL, NEW YORK

ALBERT SCHOTT
DRAMATIC TENOR
In America Season 1914-1915. Available for Recitals, etc.
For Terms, Dates, etc., Address temporarily, care Musical Courier, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York.

R. E. Johnston Presents by Courtesy of Senator and Mrs. W. A. Clark
ANDRE TOURRET
French Violinist and
CAMILLE DECREUS
French Pianist (Ysaye's pianist for past two seasons)
IN JOINT RECITALS—SEASON 1914-15
All business communications should be sent to R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway - New York
CHICKERING PIANO USED

MANUEL
QUIROGO
THE WONDERFUL SPANISH
VIOLINIST
American Tour Opens Carnegie Hall, October 17th
Direction Sam S. and Lee Shubert
MANAGEMENT, R. E. JOHNSTON,
1451 BROADWAY - - NEW YORK CITY

OVIDE MUSIN'S Virtuoso School of Violin
Recognized as the HIGHEST SCHOOL of violin playing in the U.S

Instruction given by this world renowned Virtuoso in person, in the Authentic tempos, style, fingering and bowing of the classical repertory, ancient and modern. Musin's SPECIAL SYSTEM greatly LESSENS the time ordinarily spent in acquiring technic and bow control. Special SUMMER COURSE for Teachers and Professionals. Piano, Harmony, with eminent teachers. Singing with Mme. Ovide Musin, Coloratura Soprano. Write for outline of Course by CORRESPONDENCE, and THEMATIC CATALOGUE of compositions and editions by OVIDE MUSIN. Dormitories for limited number of students in School. Practice Unrestricted. CHAPERONAGE. Address the REGISTRAR, 51 W. 76th St. N. Y.

ELEANOR HAZZARD PEOCOCK TO MAKE AMERICAN TOUR.

Gifted Lieder Singer Will Present Attractive Programs on Tournee Through Her Native Country During the Coming Season.

Eleanor Hazzard Peocock, the noted American lieder singer, will make an extensive tour of her native land this coming season under the management of the Concert Direction M. H. Hanson. Mrs. Peocock has sung in Germany and England, but her appearances in this country have been confined to the Middle West. During the 1914-1915 season, however, she will be heard in the East, and then New York, Philadelphia and Boston audiences will have an opportunity to hear this fine artist in recital work and study the effect of the original ideas and methods that have made her work unique.

Mrs. Peocock was born in Detroit, Mich. She began her studies with Professor F. H. Pease of the Ypsilanti Normal College; three years with John Dennis Mehan followed, after which she came to New York to coach with Oscar Saenger. A little later she went abroad and worked in Paris with Jessie Baskerville, who was for eleven years the coach of Mme. Calvé. In Berlin Mme. Gadski heard Mrs. Peocock and being impressed by the beauty of her voice undertook its direction.

Mrs. Peocock's first European recital was given in Berlin at the Bechstein Saal and she was enthusiastically received both by the press and the public. The critics wrote of her "astounding versatility," her "great artistic temperament," her "vocal dexterity," and her "touching interpretations." A series of recitals in London followed which were equally successful.

Mrs. Peocock's programs are always interesting and unique, the following being one which she presented recently in Detroit and which shows the great range of the singer's art:

Se tu m'ami (arietta).....Pergolosi
Wonne der Wehmuth.....Beethoven
Charmant papillon.....Campra
Amarilli (madrigal).....Caccini
Zigeunerlieder, op. 103 (cycle of seven songs)....Johannes Brahms
  Hey There, Gypsy.
  High and Towering Rima Stream.
  Know Ye, When My Loved One.
  Loving God, Thou Knowest.
  Sun Brown Lad to Dance Is Leading.
  Art Thou Thinking Often Now?
  Rose Buds Three All on One Tree.
Angedenken.....Peter Cornelius
Veilchen.....Peter Cornelius
Wiegenlied.....Peter Cornelius
Folksong.....Old French
De mode Moder (Kolnish).....Arnold Mendelssohn
Sne.....Sigurd Lie
Folksong.....Brahms
Suicidio aria (La Gioconda).....Ponchielli
The Maiden and the Butterfly.....D'Albert
The Blue Bell.....MacDowell
The Little Red Lark.....Old Irish
Within a Mile of Edinburgh Town.....Old Scotch
Invocation to the Sun God.....Zuni Indian
Nymphs and Fauns.....Bemberg

The College News, of Ypsilanti, Mich., under date of August 6, 1914, has the following to say concerning the splendid art of Mrs. Peocock:

However greatly one may have anticipated hearing Eleanor Hazzard Peocock in a program of children's songs and stories, the rapture of the realization altogether exceeded expectations. From the moment that Mme. Peocock, in fresh pink and white, charming curls showing beneath a stunning little bonnet with long, broad pink ribbons, came down to the front of the large stage in happy child fashion, to the moment when she smiled and bowed her last recalls, the spell of the enchantment never lifted. All abandoned themselves to a season of pure joy, revelling in dolls and the voice of the wind and charming concerts about flowers and stars and being "skeered" with just an occasional note of the pathos which attaches to being little sometimes. The little pink and white girl recited little poems in a manner which makes "recited" a pale misnomer; rather she confided tales of her own happy, imaginative hours with the gingerbread man who was so irresistibly surgary and sweet with our hired girl, seen with juvenile eyes; with the squirrel meeting a lamented fate at the railroad track. It was fascinating to hear the experience of "seein' things at night," topped with the naive admission that it's "most allers when I'm bad" that the phenomenon occurs; of equal facination was the tale of the poor little doll who located her excruciating pain in her sawdust. It was verses like these over which people laughed till they wept, and the only reason they suspended applause was in order to hear more. In the wind piece Mme. Peocock displayed her transcendent art, which is, above all things, beautifully proportioned. The soft sighing of the wind was but a breath, delicate as the tracery of a cobweb or the etching frost upon the window pane.

Some of the numbers were purely beautiful and particularly in these the sweet reaches of Mme. Peocock's voice were heard. Enchantingly expressive were the shades and values of her voice, the ingenuousness of her manner, the archness of her looks and the way of her entrances and exits. It was a treat altogether such as no other could surpass, and the opinion was universal that it rested only with Mme. Peocock herself as to how wide should be her field of success in this astonishing and original line, for a sense of humor, broad, true and exquisite as Mme. Peocock's is a rare find, and rarer is found its union with such a voice and resources.

"So he praised her singing, did he?"
"Yes; said it was heavenly."
"Did he really say that?"
"Well, not exactly, but he probably meant that. He said it was unearthly."—Liverpool Mercury.

AFTER all buying a piano is a serious matter that requires a good deal of judicious consideration. Before you decide on a piano you want information as to its reputation. You want to make sure, furthermore, that this reputation stands firmly on accomplishment. And this can only be done by personal investigation.

Do you know the history of the Chickering Piano

—a history of more than ninety years of success? Have you heard the Chickering of 1914 played? Have you asked your friend who owns a Chickering what he thinks of his piano?

Chickering & Sons
Boston
Division of American Piano Company

FOUNDED JANUARY, 1880

MUSICAL COURIER
A WEEKLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND ALLIED ARTS

ESTABLISHED
BY
MARC A. BLUMENBERG

PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY
BY THE

GRAND PRIX
PARIS EXPOSITION
1900

MUSICAL COURIER COMPANY
(Incorporated under the laws of the State of New York)
LOUIS BLUMENBERG, President
ALVIN L. SCHMOEGER, Sec. and Treas.
437 Fifth Ave., S. E. Cor. 39th St. - - - New York
Cable address: Pegujar, New York
Telephone to all Departments 4292, 4293, 4294, 7357 Murray Hill
LEONARD LIEBLING - - - - - EDITOR
H. I. BENNETT - - - - MANAGING EDITOR

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 19, 1914.

No. 1795

OFFICES AND REPRESENTATIVES

MIDDLE WEST DEPARTMENT—
Chicago Offices, 615 to 625 Orchestra Building, Rene Devries, General Representative, in charge.

UNITED STATES AND CANADA

BOSTON—
Blanche Freedman, 108 Hemenway St., Suite 7. 'Phone: B. B. 5554.
SAN FRANCISCO—
Alfred Metzger, Rooms 1009-1010, Kohler & Chase Building, 26 O'Farrell Street.
PHILADELPHIA, PA—
Harold Parry Quicksall, 5719 Windsor Place.
PITTSBURGH, PA.—
Hollis Edison Davenny, 5012 Friendship Ave., E. E.
ST. LOUIS, MO.—
Ernest R. Kroeger, Musical Art Building, St. Louis, Mo.
ST. PAUL, MINN.—
Johnson McClure Bellows, Musical Editor of St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press.
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Miss Ruth Anderson, 49 So. Eighth St.
LOUISVILLE, KY.—Katherine Whipple-Dohhs, 425 Fourth Avenue.
COLUMBUS, OHIO—Miss Emily Church Benham, 1299 Bryden Road.
BUFFALO, N. Y.—Cora Julia Taylor, 819 Richmond Avenue.
NEW ORLEANS—Harry B. Loeh, Box 79.
LOS ANGELES—Mrs. Jane Catherwood, 1110 W. Washington St.
KANSAS CITY—Geneve Lichtenwalter, 600 Studio Bldg.
CINCINNATI—
Mrs. Jessie P. Tyree, 9 The Westmoreland, Mason St., Mt. Auburn.
OMAHA—Jean P. Duffield, 205 Boyds Theatre.
LINCOLN, NEB.—Mrs. E. S. Luce, 1614 O St.
PROVIDENCE, R. I.—William Place, Jr., Jackson Bldg.
DES MOINES—Mrs. Caroline Young Smith, 1082 21st Street.
DENVER—Mrs. Dolores Reedy-Maxwell, 1516 Milwaukee St.
PORTLAND, ORE.—John R. Oatman, 445 Sherlock Bldg.
WICHITA, KANS.—Ralph Brokaw, 109 East 3d St.
VICTORIA, B. C.—Miss May Hamilton, 524 Michigan St.

EUROPEAN

BERLIN, W.—
Arthur M. Abell, Jenaer St. 21.
Cable Address: Abell, Wilmersdorf, Berlin.
PARIS—
H. O Osgood, 43 Boulevard Beausejour.
DRESDEN—
Mrs. E. Potter-Frissell, Eisenstuckstrasse 16.
MUNICH, GERMANY—
Miss Alice L. Bryant, Finken Strasse 2.
VIENNA—
Frank Angold, Florianigasse 60.
MOSCOW, RUSSIA—
Ellen von Tidehöhl, Arbatte, 34 Deneschny.
ROME, ITALY—
Mrs. Dolly Pattison, 9 Piazza di Spagna.
BRUSSELS, BELGIUM—
Luella Anderson, 52 rue de l'Ermitage.
STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN—
Louisa Upling, Roslagsgatan 19.
LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND—
W. J. Bowden, 22 Fern Grove.

For the names and addresses of correspondents and representatives not in this list, apply to main office.

SUBSCRIPTIONS: (In Advance)

United States	$5.00	Canada	$6.00
Great Britain	£1 5s.	Austria	30 kr.
France	31.25 fr.	Italy	31.25 fr.
Germany	25 m.	Russia	12 r.

Single Copies, Fifteen Cents, at newsstands.
Back Numbers, Twenty-five Cents.

Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class Matter.

THE MUSICAL COURIER is for sale on the principal newsstands in the United States and in the leading music houses, hotels and kiosques in Belgium, England, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Switzerland and Egypt.

American News Company, New York, General Distributing Agents.
Western News Company, Chicago, Western Distributing Agents.
New England News Company, Eastern Distributing Agents.

ADVERTISING RATES:

On reading page, per inch, per year	$400.00	Front pages, per issue	$500.00
On advertising page, per inch, per year	200.00	Line (agate) rate on reading page, per issue	1.00
Column rate, per issue	150.00	Line (agate) rate on advertising page, per issue	.50
Full pages, per issue	400.00

THE MUSICAL COURIER EXTRA
Published every Saturday by Musical Courier Co.
Devoted to the interests of the Piano Trade.

Where is opera war now?

This is preeminently the moment for the musical mobilization of the American musician.

"Opera tango" is the latest recorded official dance. The "symphony trot" ought to come next.

America has lost the tennis championship of the world, but retains the world's championship at ragtime.

What gain to have opened the Panama Canal if the Metropolitan Opera House has to remain closed?

Those musicians who were not able or did not care to go to Europe this summer, are feeling particularly happy just now.

Loudon Charlton has received a cablegram from Ossip Gabrilowitsch, who is at Zurich, Switzerland, stating that the distinguished pianist-conductor and his wife, Clara Clemens-Gabrilowitsch, are safe in the Swiss city. It is expected they will sail for America as soon as possible.

Manager Charles L. Wagner arrived at Quebec on Monday, August 17, on the Allan Line steamer Tunisian after a most exciting ten day trip. As the MUSICAL COURIER goes to press it is not known definitely whether John McCormack is on the same boat or not.

Oscar Hammerstein plans to open his Lexington avenue theatre next Saturday evening. Instead of performing grand opera there, as he had planned to do before the Metropolitan secured an injunction against the venture, he will display moving pictures interspersed with grand opera excerpts accompanied by orchestra.

Carl Flesch will sail from Holland at once for the United States instead of at Christmas time, as originally intended. His tour of the United States and Canada will begin October 1, according to a new schedule arranged by his managers, Haensel & Jones. Flesch is a naturalized citizen of Holland, although he was born in Hungary.

"After a most hazardous trip from St. Petersburg, Russia, across Germany and into the very heart of the war zone," says an account received in this office, "Anna Pavlowa, the Russian ballerina, has arrived in England and now is at her summer home, 'Ivy House,' just outside of London. Pavlowa and her entire ballet and symphony orchestra of close to 100 will positively come to America for the tour opening at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, November 3. Pavlowa's tours of Germany and Austria and the English provinces have been cancelled. This will leave her free to come to America several weeks ahead of schedule."

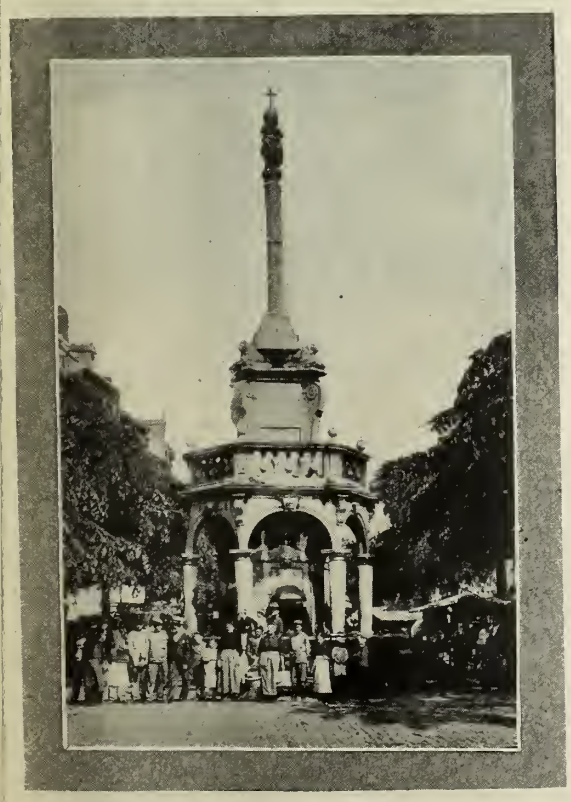
M. H. Hanson, who was caught in the war regions, has succeeded in reaching London, and will remain there for a short time assisting his artists in their preparations to reach America. He has already arranged the transportation for some of them, and announces that he has in America at the present moment ready for early engagements: Marcella Craft, dramatic soprano (of the Royal Opera, Munich), who will open her tour in Southern California in early November; Myrna Sharlow (of the Boston Opera), whose opening concert is in St. Louis in November; Vera Barstow, the American violinist; Winifred Bambrick, the Canadian harpist; Luella Chilson-Ohrman, soprano; Florence Blumenschein-Rowe, soprano; Eleanor Hazzard Peocock, lieder singer; George Sheffield, tenor; Lucy Marsh, soprano, and Vida Llewellyn, pianist.

Arthur Hartmann, the violinist, now in Paris, announces his intention to undertake an American tour this season, beginning about October 1.

It appears from several letters received by the MUSICAL COURIER that the opinion quoted in the previous issue of this paper regarding the management of the recent organist convention at Ocean Grove, N. J., to the effect that the arrangements were not satisfactory because of the distance of the Methodist Church, where meetings were held, from the North End Hotel headquarters, and that there was not the same cohesion this year as in former years among the visiting organists, is not the opinion of the majority of those who attended the gathering. "There was much enthusiasm among the members of the association," says the most authoritative of the communications, "and this convention was generally voted to be the best we ever have held." The MUSICAL COURIER is glad to present both sides of the matter.

A unique point will arise in Boston should the Boston Symphony Orchestra be compelled to reorganize owing to the presence of a number of its players in Europe. The body as constituted now is non-union, but in the event of the engaging of new players, it is difficult to see how any but union musicians can be secured, for nearly all our competent resident orchestral players in America (except in the Boston Symphony) are union musicians and are not allowed to perform with their non-union colleagues. It will be interesting to see how Mr. Higginson, the founder of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Mr. Ellis, its manager, will circumvent the difficulty. They are men of resource, however and have proved their mettle on previous occasions In case Dr. Muck and most of the Boston Symphony Orchestra players do not return to this country in time for the regular season, it is possible that the concerts of the society may have to be abandoned for patrons hardly would accept the substitute leaders and men in place of the absentees. It is to be hoped that the war may cease before the fall, for a disbandment of the Boston Symphony Orchestra would mean nothing less than a musical tragedy for this country.

A contest is threatened over the will of the late Lillian Nordica, made on Thursday Island. The document was filed for probate here by one of the executors, who said that the "original will is in the possession of George W. Young, the husband of the decedent, or his attorney, John C. Tomlinson and although the same has been duly demanded of them they have declined to surrender it." The executor asks the court to issue an order for the production of the original. George W. Young, the late singer's husband, receives nothing under the will, but it refers to him in this way: "In the distribution of my property I am not forgetful of my husband, George W. Young, to whom I have advanced over $400,000 in cash, which I estimate as the full or more than full share to which he might be entitled in my estate." The value of the estate was not given, but those who are in a position to know estimate it at about $1,000,000. All of the residue is given to three sisters, Imogene Costillo of Los Angeles, Cal.: Annie Baldwin and Ion Walker, of Boston. Apart from some smaller bequests, $30,000 is left to E. Romayne Simmons who had been Mme. Nordica's accompanist and secretary for sixteen years. The will was drawn by ex-Governor Adams of Colorado, on board the steamship Tasman, which went ashore at Bramble Bay on December 28, 1913.



THEATRE PLACE, LIEGE, SHOWING STATUE TO GRETRY CONTAINING HIS HEART.

By the courtesy of the famous Belgian violinist, vide Musin, we are able to present our readers ith a number of photographs recently made in iege, Belgium, which city has been the birthplace so many musicians of world-wide renown.

The veteran violinist was just at the end of a ng day's work and his last pupil was putting his strument away when the MUSICAL COURIER repre- ntative called at Ovide Musin's Virtuoso School f Violin in Seventy-sixth street, New York, and sked for an interview.

Ovide Musin's comments on the war were worthy f a sturdy patriot and of an artist.

His admiration for the music and intellectual pre- minence of Germany is profound and sincere. But e keenly feels what he calls "the affront which the ggressive military policy of Germany's leaders has given my native land" and fears that "the priceless works of art and the ancient architectural and historical treasures of Belgium are doomed to partial or complete destruction, no matter which army wins."

LE PÉRON, LIEGE.

Such buildings as the Church of St. James (Eglise St. Jacques), the Law Courts (Palais de Justice), the Cathedral could never be replaced. The church dates from the year 1016, and the Cathedral from 968. An exploding shell could shatter them and forever destroy the sentiments and romances that have put a halo of glory over the hoary buildings. The destruction of a New York skyscraper would mean only the loss of so much money. But those who have lived for years in Europe learn to revere the ancient landmarks as objects beyond all money value and which can be made press, many of these buildings that have taken centuries to finish may be shapeless heaps of stones.

WHAT LIEGE MAY LOSE.

only by the long, slow march of generation after generation of men and women for centuries.

"The scenery around Liege," says Musin, "is the finest in Belgium. In the spring time the cherry blossoms in this Meuse valley make an indescribably beautiful picture. No one could help but love a land that woos with such blushing glories."

The assembled armies now have other thoughts than to preserve ancient cathedrals and works of art or to respect the rights of cherry trees:

> Now for the bare-pick'd bone of majesty
> Doth dogged war bristle his angry crest
> And snarleth in the gentle eyes of peace.
> —Shakespeare ("King John").

These views (pages 21-24) show how Liege looked in July, 1914. Even now, while we go to BUEREN MOUNTAIN, LIEGE. ABOUT 350 STEPS.

Charity often begins at At Homes, as the artist knows who has been foolish enough to appear there without pay.

Siegfried O'Houlihan says that he does not know whether to change his first name to Francois or Sergius.

PANORAMA OF LIEGE.

GOVERNOR'S PALACE, LIEGE.

OLD HOUSES AT VISÉ, NEAR LIEGE.

Photo by Aimé Dupont.

OVIDE MUSIN,
Belgian violinist.

REFUGEE HOWARD WELLS RETURNS.

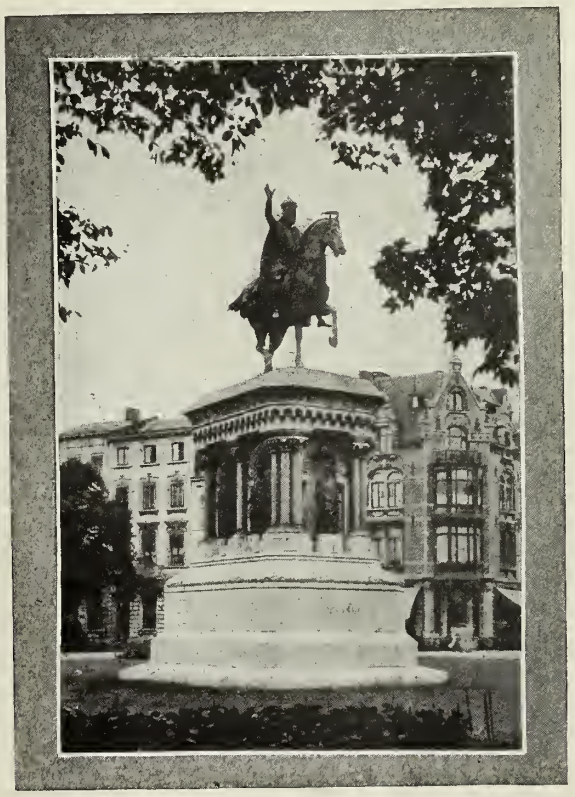
Howard Wells, the Chicago pianist and pedagogue, who has been in Europe seven years, making his headquarters in Berlin, returned to this country last week on the steamship Philadelphia. Mr. Wells tells a remarkably interesting story of his experiences and adventures abroad. At the MUSICAL COURIER offices, where he called shortly after his arrival in New York, Mr. Wells said in substance as follows:

"When the political disturbances began between Austria and Servia, I kept a sharp eye on the situation, and, being interested in politics, I was enabled to see which way the wind was blowing. As soon as it became apparent to me that Germany would go to war in case of the rejection of its ultimatum by Russia, I made my arrangements to leave the city; and as a matter of fact, I accomplished my departure just one hour before war was declared officially. I had only two dress suit cases, and I caught the last train which left Berlin before the government dedicated all the railroads to the transporting of troops. Conditions in Berlin before I left were very bad so far as Americans were concerned. I tried to get some supplies to take on my journey, such as coffee, tea, bread, butter, etc., but could not

EUGEN YSAYE,
Belgian violinist.

ST. JAMES' CHURCH, LIEGE.

THE CATHEDRAL, LIEGE.



THE LAW COURTS, LIEGE.

CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC, LIEGE.

secure them, for I had only paper money and nobody would accept it. The largest bill that the shops were willing to change was five marks. The day I left the Reischbank had announced to the public that they would give gold for paper money, and I went there in order to get some currency. However, when I reached the building I found thousands of people standing outside and cluttering the streets for many blocks around. In fact, there was such a vast crowd that the Reischbank officials became doubtful about opening the bank, and I thereupon left and have not found out since whether the gold was paid out as promised.

"I had not much difficulty in reaching Harwich, England. The harbor was lined with English warships to the number of forty or fifty.

"Shortly before I left Berlin, I saw Leschetizky, with whom I had dinner. The operation on his eyes proved to be successful and he was doing very well in health. Helen Stanley and Mary Cavan also were in Berlin, at the Hotel Cumberland. Mr. and Mrs. William Hinshaw were in the German capital, quietly living in a flat of their own. Two of Mr. Hinshaw's three sons were my pupils. Just a few days before the declaration of war, the Hinshaws had cancelled their passage to America, which would have been for August 15. I have no doubt that they regret this step exceedingly now.

STATUE OF CHARLEMAGNE, LIEGE.

"Of my other Berlin friends, most of them were scattered at the vacation resorts. Mr. and Mrs. King Clark were in Switzerland; Theodore Spiering and his family were at some North Sea place; Tina Lerner and her husband were at the Brenner Pass, in Austria; George Hamlin was at Cortina, Italy; Hannah Butler was somewhere in Switzerland. One of the last musical experiences I had in Berlin was to attend a Wagner performance at the Royal Opera, wherein William Hinshaw and Mariska Aldrich took the leading parts.

"I arrived in London August 2 with about five pounds in English money and some German money in my possession. No one would take the German money. My English money was soon gone, and it was due to the generosity of Mary Münschhoff, the well known singing teacher of Omaha, that I was enabled to get a bit of money for necessities. She very generously loaned me three pounds and also helped out some other Americans who were as destitute as myself. She secured passage on the Celtic for herself and now is bound for New York.

"I saw Edgar Stillman Kelley in London. He has secured a sailing for some time late in September. He was in good spirits and did not seem to be worried. I attended the mass meeting of Americans at the Savoy. There were over two thousand present, and that did not by any means represent the large number of our compatriots stranded in the English capital. Most of them are in need, but are being helped on all sides.

ART GALLERY, LIEGE.

CANAL TO MAESTRICHT, HOLLAND, LIEGE.

"In order to secure sufficient money to engage a steerage passage on the Philadelphia, I had to leave my watch as security. However, I felt that in spite of the various discomforts I had to inconvenience, I was extremely fortunate, and I have no complaint to make.

"I shall go to Chicago at once, my former home, and engage in teaching and concert playing there, because I see no immediate prospect of resuming my Berlin activities."

THE POINT OF VIEW.

Our Chicago office reports that the general musical topics on Michigan avenue at the present time seem to be exclusively military and warlike, and musicians in that part of the country had been wondering whether the season of 1914-1915 would be a poor one for the Middle West artists, until the MUSICAL COURIER "round robin" last week of the managers eased the minds of the guessers.

"Probably the coming season will be one of the best for the native or resident musicians," reports our Chicago representative, "and the managers in the Middle West at least are already using to good advantage the report that many of the foreign artists will be unable to fulfill their engagements here. From hearsay it might be added that the plan seems to be working especially well and the Middle West managers now are for the first time entering upon a musical season fully equipped to deal with the situation and to compete with their better established and older brothers from the East who, up to date, always had succeeded in securing for their talent the 'cream engagements' and left only 'sour milk' for the Western artists. Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Omaha, St. Paul, Kansas City and many other cities in the Middle West harbor talented musicians, many of them yet unknown to the musical public outside of their own territory and who will take this opportunity to be brought out and to make a name for themselves in a field in which many of them might have remained obscure figures. Even if war is a human curse and a universal calamity, it may do some good here if it helps the Middle West musicians to gain recognition and shekels."

ST. PAUL ORCHESTRA DISBANDS.

At a meeting of the directors of the St. Paul Symphony Orchestra, held August 12, it was decided to discontinue the orchestra. This decision was made necessary by the committee's inability to increase the guarantee fund to a sufficient sum to insure continuing the orchestra on its accustomed high plane. The guarantee fund, as it stood, was $45,000, but the organization was confronted with a deficit of at least $50,000 and no additional subscriptions could be obtained.

The situation was aggravated further by the present unfortunate European conditions and resulting financial uncertainty in this country, which made it seem hopeless to try to obtain subscriptions. It also caused doubt whether or not some of the St. Paul orchestral players and soloists engaged who are in Europe could return in time. Therefore in view of all the circumstances the directors decided that they had no other alternative.

LOS ANGELES CONDUCTOR IN AUSTRIA.

Henry Schoenfeld and Frederick Brueschweiler are being mentioned as possible substitutes for Adolf Tandler, the conductor of the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra, who now is in Austria and probably will be drafted into military service there, for he is a native of that country.

OUR MUSICAL WAR MAP.

This map, shown on the opposite page, has not been accepted by any of the geographical societies of the world. It probably never will be accepted. From a cartographical point of view it may have its defects. It might even be modestly becoming on our part to assume that it is not perfect. It would unquestionably have filled the mind of Constantine Porphyrogennetos with awe. He never aspired to such accuracy. His map makes Turcia and Francia side by side without any inconvenient Servia, Austria or Switzerland in between. Shakespeare dabbled a bit in amateur geography and made Bohemia a seaside country—see "The Winter's Tale," Act III, scene III—"Our ship hath touch'd upon the deserts of Bohemia." Shakespeare did not refer to airships. He distinctly says sea in several places. Of course, Constantine Porphyrogennetos—his nickname may have been more concise—might have had his mind's eye fixed on the future.

Perhaps before the present war is over France and Turkey may be neighbors. Possibly the coast line of the Continent will remain somewhere near its present position. If the war lord levels the mountains of Norway to fill in the Dutch marshes and to make a dry road to England it will be necessary to bring the northwestern maps of Europe up to date.

Up to the time of writing, however, the remark of Julius Cæsar still holds: "Gallia est omnis divisa in partes tres"—all Gaul is divided into three parts.

The map we reproduce shows where some of the great and lesser musicians were born. Between these men there is no war.

Weber, Brahms, Mendelssohn, Spohr, Meyerbeer, Handel, Franz, Wagner, Bruch, Beethoven, Bach, von Bülow, Schumann, Moszkowski, Cramer, Gluck, Strauss, Henselt, Dvorák, Haydn, Schubert, Czerny, Liszt, Mozart are not in arms to slay and butcher Grétry, Franck, Guilmant, Field, Balfe, Purcell, Sullivan, Bizet, Gounod, Saint-Saëns, Berlioz, Godard, Debussy, Rameau, Massenet. If ever that great phalanx of German and Austrian musicians should invade France, Belgium or England, how would they be received? Not with shot and shell, or bayonet and mine; but with rousing cheers, long hand-shaking and embraces. "Hoch der Kaiser!" would be roared through the British Isles for the Emperor Beethoven, and the princes imperial of harmony and song would be carried to the halls of festival.

Imagine good old J. S. Bach with a rifle wasting his precious time for a temporary boundary line!

If Shakespeare, Newton and Darwin came back to life and set out for Germany today not one of the Emperor William's scholarly soldiers would level a carbine at three such musketeers. Dante, the gloomy bard of Italy, and Molière, the impersonation of the finest French wit, are not enrolled among the enemies of the Fatherland.

Those who wish to see the political map of Europe are referred to ordinary publications. This is a map of harmony, not discord. According to the commonplace political maps of Europe, Meyerbeer is the capital of Germany, Clementi the capital of Italy, Czerny the capital of Vienna and Gounod one of the capitals of France.

Sicily produced two famous composers. Sardines do not come from Sardinia. In fact, sardines do not come from anywhere; they have to be taken. Cans are provided for that purpose. Napoleon came from Corsica, however. In the moral philosophies of Artemus Ward we are told that "Napoleon tried to do too much and he did it." Certainly as an islander Napoleon was a failure; for the Italian island of Corsica, small as it is, is miles ahead of the British island of St. Helena, where he ended up.

If we made painting the subject matter of the map instead of music we should find Holland and Spain more conspicuous than Germany. England's painters, too, overtop her composers. Italy in painting has been as generous as in music.

In the art world today France leads, but we are concerned at present with music

Copies of this map, with MUSICAL COURIERS attached, are on sale everywhere.

THE WORCESTER FESTIVAL.

Worcester's (Mass.) fifty-seventh annual music festival will be given in Mechanics' Hall from September 21 to September 25, inclusive. According to the usual custom there will be five concerts and nine public rehearsals. For this festival the program committee has selected three choral works, one which has never before had a festival presentation, one grown familiar from many repetitions, and one which was given only a few years ago.

The new work is Wolf-Ferrari's "La Nuova Vita" and the others are Mendelssohn's "Elijah," which is to be given for the ninth time, and Bruckner's "Te Deum."

The soloists secured include the following: Sopranos—Alma Gluck, Florence Hinkle and Olive Kline; contraltos—Mildred Potter and Christine Shutz; tenors—Evan Williams and William H. Pagdin; baritone—Clarence Whitehill; bass—Herbert Witherspoon.

Efrem Zimbalist has been engaged as the solo violinist for the Thursday afternoon concert and Rudolph Ganz the pianist for Friday afternoon. Miss Hinkle, Miss Potter, Mr. Williams and Mr. Witherspoon are the quartet for "Elijah," and Miss Kline, Miss Shutz and Mr. Pagdin will sing in the "Te Deum." Mr. Whitehill and Miss Kline will be soloists for the new work, "La Nuova Vita" and the soloists for "Artists' Night," which always closes the festival, will be Miss Gluck, Mr. Williams and Mr. Whitehill.

Members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Festival chorus, which numbers 450 voices in all, will assist.

WATCH AMERICAN MANAGERS.

A dismal voice comes from out of the editorial depths of the Philadelphia Press:

> Left to our own resources, the coming musical season is likely to be a dismal one. We have no great conductors to fill the places of those from foreign shores, not enough individual artists, not even choristers or musicians enough. An exclusively American season would be a makeshift and, like most makeshifts, far below the standard to which we are accustomed.
>
> Whatever else we may lack, we are not lacking in appreciation. We have been used to the best, and not even an appeal to our patriotism can make us satisfied with less than the best. The enormous musical appetite seems destined to remain unappeased this year unless the war is ended soon, or unless some way be found to transport that celebrated legion of foreign song birds and virtuosos to our shores.

The best answer to the pessimism of the Philadelphia Press is to watch the feverish activity of our American concert managers. They one and all are making preparations for a bumper season.

LATEST ULTIMATUM.

"If you want to know who we are:
We are gentlemen of Japan."

—Gilbert and Sullivan.

The Musical Courier War Map.

MORE MANAGERIAL VIEWS.

Laszlo Schwartz, manager for Helen Ware, expressed himself as follows to a MUSICAL COURIER representative upon the subject of the great war and how it may affect the European and American concert fields:

"Two years ago, while arranging for Helen Ware's concert tours from the Balkans up to Copenhagen, I had the good fortune to be able to make a general survey of the European concert field, just after and during the Balkan war at that time. In the southeastern part of Europe, where, outside of a few cities such as Budapest, Lemberg, Cracow, Warsaw, Sofia, Trieste, Bucharest, etc., but few concert series exist, the losses will not be so great, for at best, in comparison with other European centers in this part of Europe, there is rarely great activity in the concert field. Budapest, with its two symphony orchestras and two opera houses, will be the greatest loser of those countries. The tours of the National Symphony Orchestra will, of course, be abandoned, and, as during the Balkan war, the concert series managed by private managers will eventually have to be abandoned for lack of patronage. Out of thirty-two concerts in Hungary and the Balkans we lost twelve. Most of these were in the Balkans.

"Under present conditions, with Austria-Hungary's entire army mobilized, it would be impossible to give any concerts in that part of Europe. Austria-Hungary alone would hardly cause the situation to become desperate, but with Germany, France, England, Russia and all the smaller countries of northern Europe following the lead, annihilating the entire concert field for this coming season, we face a problem never before presented in the musical history of the world.

"The question is: 'What will become of all the European musicians?' Most of the men must fight, of course. But the women?

"An exodus of artists from Europe is unavoidable. Where will they go? Surely not to China or Japan, nor to South America, for a tour there would be a great risk, as the traveling expenses are great. Therefore, they will come here in great numbers—I mean all those who can possibly avoid military duty. Will our present and prospective prosperity suffice for the extra pressure? Is it the American artist's duty to reach out a helping hand to those worthy European artists who will find it impossible to eke out a decent living here in a strange land? Will it prove a happy compulsory invasion that will eventually give some of our small cities new teachers of merit, lending additional stimulus to local musical activities? Will the Musical Union help or will it pull up its drawbridges and hang out a sign: 'God helps those who help themselves'?

"On my recent trip throughout the United States I found conditions excellent in the Middle, North and Southwest. They have many a bushel of wheat and corn where hardly any grew for years. This should cause a liberal circulation of currency, so if the managers, as well as the clubs and the MUSICAL COURIER, put forth a grand effort to increase our musical activities during the coming season we may master the situation and rise to the occasion in a manner that will add new glories to the American genius, and incidentally enable us to reach out a helping hand to our fellow artists from the 'Lands of Trouble.'"

From Wendell Heighton, manager of the Minneapolis Orchestra, comes the following letter under date of August 11:

"When your wire came I was just starting home from San Antonio, Tex., arriving yesterday. Knowing that you publish on Wednesday I knew it was too late to wire you last night. Am sorry it happened so. Personally I am considerable of an optimist, and I believe this country will have an excellent musical season next year—this coming season. The Northwest especially is in good condition and we expect to have our most successful season here, and our orchestra is finer than ever. Several of our men are in Europe, including Czerwonky, but the latter is in London, and I think all but possibly one have escaped being dragged into the army.

"I think business conditions may be very satisfactory in this country for some time to come, but if the war continues for some months we must ultimately feel the effects of the tremendous destruction of so much of the world's wealth—a portion of the loss must fall on us, though less than upon Europe, of course.

"With best wishes, I am,

"Sincerely yours,

"WENDELL HEIGHTON."

A telegram received too late for insertion in last week's MUSICAL COURIER was this one:

"St. Paul, Minn., August 10, 1914.

"To the Musical Courier:

"In view of the fact that the great Northwest is about to harvest one of the greatest crops in its history and the attendant financial gain thereof, the coming season looks at the present time as though it will be the best ever. If European war does not prevent our conductor, concertmaster and several orchestra members from returning to this country and we can obtain artists engaged, this organization will have the most successful season in its career.

"EDMUND A. STEIN,

"Manager St. Paul Symphony Orchestra."

POL PLANCON DEAD.

Pol Plancon, the well known French basso, died in Paris, August 12, 1914, after an illness which dated from last June. He was born June 12, 1854, at Fumay, France.

Plancon first came into wide notice in Paris in 1883, when he appeared at the Grand Opera as Mephistopheles in Faust. He jumped into instant fame through his unique conception of the role, which he regarded as the personification of an Evil One cynical rather than ferocious, subtle rather than melodramatic, polished in a worldly way, and not without a literally diabolical sense of humor.

After establishing a connection with Covent Garden in 1891, Plancon came to the Metropolitan Opera House, November 29, 1893, and joined the company which included the two De Reszkes, Nordica, Eames, Calvé and Melba. He was found to possess, in addition to his ability as an impersonator of Beelzebub, a fine timbred and lyrical voice, flexible, resonant, excellently placed and splendidly managed in connection with that purity of diction and elegance of vocal phrase which constitute the main essentials of the best French singing style. A man of imposing physical presence, personally genial and well mannered, and gifted also with the tact and intelligence which helped him to steer clear of the usual intrigues and imbroglios which are a part of the intense life back of the operatic scenes, Plancon became very popular with his fellow artists and the public, and it was with real regret that New York parted from him in 1906. The reasons given for Plancon's retirement were his desire to be with his aged mother in France. Also he was said to have amassed sufficient means to permit him to live without further labor.

Aside from his successful singing of the chief basso roles in the French and Italian productions here (he sang in German, too), Plancon had endeared himself to the patrons of the Sunday evening Opera concerts, especially through his performance of "The Palms" and "The Two Grenadiers."

Some of the operatic parts which Plancon interpreted here and at Covent Garden (where he sang for thirteen summers) were, aside from Mephistopheles, St. Bris in "Les Huguenots," Joseph in "Cinq Mars" (Gounod), Eustache in "Etienne Marcel" (Saint-Saëns), Colonna in "Petrarch" (Duprat), Pittacus in "Sapho," Don Gormas in "Cid," Francis I in "Ascanio" (Saint-Saëns), Il Re and Ramfis in "Aida," the Friar in "Romeo and Juliet," King Henry in "Lohengrin," Garrido in "Navarraise," Ariofarme in "Hero and Leander" (Mancinelli), the Friar in "Much Ado About Nothing," the King in "Princess Osra," Phanuel in "Herodiade," the King in "Hamlet," Vulcan in "Philemon and Baucis," etc.

Photos copyright by Aimé Dupont New York.
POL PLANCON AND SOME OF HIS OPERATIC ROLES.

A VALUED COMPLIMENT.

The National Federation of Musical Clubs.

Mrs. Julius Eugene Kinney, president
737 Corona St., Denver, Colo.

Mrs. J. H. Smissaert
Corresponding secretary
Wolfe Hall, Denver, Col.

Mrs. Theodore Thomas
Honorary president

Mrs. J. S. Morris
Treasurer
Waupun, Wis.

Ninth Biennial Festival, Los Angeles, Cal., 1915.

American Music
Mrs. Jason Walker

850 McLemon Ave.
Memphis, Tenn., August 10, 1914.

To the Musical Courier:

Allow me to express the thanks of the American Music Committee of the National Federation of Musical Clubs, for the generous attitude of the Musical Courier toward the great work of the Federation—the $10,000 Prize Opera Competition. The steady support your paper has given this contest from the beginning has been of inestimable value. Conscious of honest intentions, actuated by the highest motives in planning all the details of this tremendous undertaking, the American Music Committee is satisfied to let all premature criticism be answered by the logic of events. It is the hope of the committee that all "lovers of America" will unite with it in the earnest endeavor to view the competition from the national standpoint, rather than the personal—from its inception to what we all feel sure will be a splendid conclusion.

Again thanking you for all courtesies shown this committee, I remain, Yours very sincerely,

Susan B. Walker.

Mrs. Jason Walker.

MACMILLEN'S WAR BUDGET.

Francis Macmillen has written to his American managers from Dresden, Germany, giving an account of himself since the beginning of the war. Macmillen takes a cheerful attitude concerning conditions and assures his manager that he anticipates no personal trouble. He says he can be expected in America by September.

"Now that the first great excitement occasioned by the declaration of war is a matter of history," writes Macmillen, "if it were not for the sad partings of wives from their husbands, lovers from their sweethearts and mothers from their boys—for all are on the way to the front—there is little in this city of Dresden to disturb our peaceful pursuits.

"Although martial law prevails as a matter of precaution, and despite the fact that Dresden is a hotbed of English speaking people—particularly Englishmen—there have been no anti-British disturbances here of any consequence. Naturally there have been heated discussions in the cafes and in the streets, but they have been quickly and effectively stopped by the police, who are showing no partiality.

"The German love of order and discipline has tended to peace and quietude. Englishmen and Germans walk side by side and even engage in free and open comment on the war, more like friends than foes. Germans have shown a most fair and tolerant spirit toward them. As for Americans, through the prompt and willing efficiency of German officials, they have suffered no real hardships here.

"As for my own experience, it warrants nothing but praise for the Germans. I didn't realize that it would be possible to live within the boundaries of the German Empire when she was at war with all but one of the great nations on her border, and be so little inconvenienced by it. All my fears about starving or being turned out of house and home were dispelled very early in the fray, when my good German friends began literally to bombard me with their hospitality.

"My first anxiety was to obtain ready funds. This, thanks to the prompt assistance of the German officials, I found to be comparatively an easy task, once my identity as an American citizen was established beyond doubt. Never before did I feel so secure in the fact that I was duly registered at police headquarters, according to a custom for which those who have nothing to fear from the law should give nothing but thanks. Being thus properly registered, doubly secure in the fact of my long residence in Germany from time to time, without a passport of any kind to aid matters, I was instantly counted among the neutrals and made secure against any possibility of arrest as a spy. As a neutral I was not only shown every courtesy, but the German officials went out of their way to look after my welfare. The Dresdner Bank, although its officials could not, as a war precaution, cash my draft on New York, they at once vouched for my integrity at the American consulate. Through this courtesy I was able to obtain ready money without a moment's delay. Later, I was handed ample funds by agents of our Government, which, I am told, came through to me with unusual rapidity, owing to the intercession of my personal friend, Mr. Bryan, the Secretary of State.

"In the hotel where I am living the proprietor, with a generous sweep of his arm, declared that I was his guest until I could obtain funds.

"My mother and I have, in consequence, met with little or no real inconvenience on account of the war. We are assured that in a few days, when the Government has finished the work of the first mobilization and the trains are running again, we will be permitted to leave the country at our leisure.

"At the American legation I hear nothing but praise for the manner in which the German officials have aided the American attaches. It is only through the prompt and efficient service of the Germans that the legation force has been able to render ready assistance to the many stranded Americans caught by the fortunes of war."

CHORAL PRIZE COMPETITION.

It is stated officially that fully two dozen choral and other musical organizations from as many cities will compete for the $25,000 in prizes at the international eisteddfod to be held the last week in July, 1915, at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition. At the 1914 eisteddfod, held in Pittsburgh, Pa., where there were over 40,000 paid admissions, the first prize was awarded to the Choral Union of Scranton, Pa.; the second to the Chicago Choral Society, and the third to Cleveland, Ohio. These three organizations, among which the greatest rivalry exists, all will be at the exposition to compete for the main choral prize of $10,000 and for choruses of 150 voices. The second prize will be $1,000 and the third $500. Some of the other prize competitions are as follows: Mixed choirs of fifty to sixty voices, $1,000 to $250; male chorus, $3,000 to $750; women's chorus, $1,000 to $500; military band, thirty to forty pieces, $2,000 to $1,000; children's choirs and various quartets, duets and solos, $50 to $250. For the best essays and poems in both English and Welsh eight prizes ranging from $100 to $300 are offered, the subject of the English poem being "The Meeting of the East and the West." All competitions are open to the world. Among the other cities which have planned to send choral or other musical organizations to San Francisco are Philadelphia; Johnstown, Pa.; Pittsburgh, Pa.; Boston; Chicago; Des Moines, Ia.; Denver, Col.; Granite City, Ill.; Canton, Ohio; the Tabernacle Choir of Salt Lake City; St. Louis; Butte, Mont.; Seattle; Tacoma, Spokane; Portland; Vancouver; Victoria, B. C.; Saskatoon, Can.; Los Angeles; Sacramento; San Diego, and Berkeley.

ALBERTO BACHMANN.

We have just learned to our regret that a recent article has injured the feelings of Alberto Bachmann. The article in question was written in a humorous vein, as any one who read it must have seen, and it could not have conveyed a serious impression to the mind of any one, unless a strained interpretation was placed upon it.

Probably owing to the fact, however, that Mr. Bachmann may not be very familiar with American conditions, and particularly is apparently not experienced in American journalistic methods, he may have taken this article in a much more serious sense than that intended to be conveyed to our readers.

However feeble our humor may have been, our intentions, nevertheless, were perfectly good. If Alberto Bachmann believes that his dignity as a serious artist has been affected by our levity, there is nothing left for us to do but to express our regret that his feelings were unintentionally hurt by an article which, when read in the right spirit, could not, we believe, convey any impression which would offend the average person, and we feel that perhaps Mr. Bachmann may be oversensitive in this matter, and that he has taken our article seriously, when we intended it to be taken humorously.

Let us briefly review the case:

Some weeks ago, the Musical Observer was enlivened by an animated, but more or less friendly, dispute, between Alberto Bachmann and Ovide Musin, concerning the performance and interpretation of certain works for the violin. We treated, or tried to treat, the whole matter in a jocular vein, suggesting that the two disputants fight a musical duel, one playing Tartini's "Devil's Trill" and the other performing Scarlatti's "Cat's Fugue," and that a reconciliation be effected in a Pleyel duet.

We also took occasion to poke fun at ourselves, by insinuating that we, as American journalists, were offended at the idea of being classed with Englishmen like Shakespeare and Milton.

If we were to say in the Musical Courier that Beethoven knew nothing about sonata form, that Wagner should have taken lessons in orchestration, that Schubert never had a melody in his head, we do not believe that any reader of such statements would take them seriously, particularly in view of the fact that the Musical Courier is the best known musical authority published in the world, and that the members of its staff are well known musical writers and reviewers, justly famed for their sound knowledge of music and musical conditions.

In these circumstances, in the case we have supposed, would any reader believe that the Musical Courier did not know that Beethoven knew something about sonata form, that Wagner knew something about orchestration, and that Schubert knew something about melody?

The supposed humor of the situation lies in asserting that which everybody knows to be the exact opposite of what we mean. Whether our readers or the public would call this sarcasm, or satire, or humor does not make much difference. It is no slur on a violinist to tell him to play the "Devil's Trill," for that is one of the standard classics for the violin. Scarlatti's "Cat's fugue" is a harpsichord composition and is utterly unplayable on the violin. These facts are known to persons who have only a comparatively slight acquaintance with music, and, of course, are known to many of the readers of the MUSICAL COURIER, who, we trust, have seen the humor of the musical duel.

We cannot understand how such humor could induce Alberto Bachmann to believe that we intended to make fun of his artistic merits, or to lower his dignity. He has only to look through the files of the MUSICAL COURIER for years past, to find some kind of a caricature of all the great musicians, alive or dead. From what we have learned, in the course of our experience, many musicians in all parts of America and Europe, are pleased at the publicity which humorous articles give them and many receive these articles in the way, and in the sense that they are intended to be received, and in the spirit in which they are written.

There is no accounting, however, for human nature, which, at times, may become serious, and fails to regard in a light vein, what the average reader would consider to be merely light bantering humor.

It was with no little surprise that we learned that Alberto Bachmann had taken our good natured banter seriously, and imagined that we had intended to injure him.

As Shakespeare says, "A jest's prosperity lies in the ear of him who hears it, never on the tongue of him who makes it."

We feel confident that when Alberto Bachmann calls to mind our explanation, and the fact that many of our readers are musicians and music lovers, he will see that a much greater liberty of humor and latitude of pen are allowed us, than if we were writing to a wholly unmusical public, which is unfamiliar with musical facts, musical criticisms and reviews.

The MUSICAL COURIER reaffirms herewith what it previously published about Alberto Bachmann on December 13, 1913:

Alberto Bachmann is a versatile violinist, and not alone a virtuoso of ample gifts, but also a composer and author of international repute.

Since his arrival in this country but two months ago, Mr. Bachmann has traveled considerably and devoted much time to his literary and musical duties.

Mr. Bachmann's concert work, however, has not been neglected. He already has been heard on numerous occasions and bookings are being made rapidly for the remainder of the season.

On November 30, at the Princess Theatre in Montreal, Canada, Mr. Bachmann scored one of the most brilliant successes thus far credited to him in this country. In another part of this issue of the MUSICAL COURIER will be found an interesting press criticism commenting upon his success on this occasion.

Mr. Bachmann is a Frenchman in every sense of the word, although his parents were Russian. He was born in Geneva in 1875 and at the age of ten years won the first prize at Lille, France, for violin playing. He has studied with Ysaye, Thomson, Hubay and Petri and makes his home in Paris.

The success of Bachmann's numerous compositions—several hundred have been published—has won for this artist an international reputation. His books, too, are well known and widely read. A letter written by Jan Kubelik, which speaks for itself, is reproduced herewith, and is but one example of the esteem in which fellow artists hold this violinist:

DEAR MR. BACHMANN—I have just received some of your compositions and books on the violin and violinists, which I find very interesting. I must thank you most heartily for sending me those, and I hope to play your "Magyariana" as soon as time permits me to study same.

With kindest regards. Very sincerely yours,

JAN KUBELIK.

One of Mr. Bachmann's best known volumes is "Great Violinists of the Past"; this book, it is said, cost $4,000 to publish. He is at the present time busy on a new book, "How to Play the Violin," which he expects to publish in the near future.

[illegible] these circumstances we think that if Alberto [illegible]mann feels he has in any way been injured by [illegible]mor, we owe him an apology, and we hereby fully retract anything which was contained in any article that we wrote about him which he feels could possibly reflect on his ability or standing as an artist or man, as we had no intention of making any attack upon Mr. Bachmann. We do this even though we sincerely believe that no article appearing in our columns concerning Mr. Bachmann is susceptible on any reasonable interpretation of injurying or defaming him.

The policy of this paper has always been to act fairly and justly toward every one, and if we feel that any one about whom an article has been written can, by any interpretation of it (even by a forced or strained construction of the article), be placed in a light different from that which we intended to convey, we believe it is only fair to the person in question, as well as to our readers and the public, to avow our real intention in writing the article, and frankly to state that we did not intend the article to be accepted in any different light from that in which we had actually intended it to be taken.

FROM THE WAR ZONE.

The accompanying picture and letter were received by the MUSICAL COURIER, August 13, 1914:

Ostende, Belgium, July 31, 1914.

To the Musical Courier:

Although I may get into trouble for attempting to send a photograph out of this country at the present time, I shall take the chance. The snapshot was made at the time it became apparent that Liege, only a few miles away, was being attacked. Godowsky is much worried, as he has a number of pupils with him from Vienna, Americans being among them. By the way, I forgot to mention in my recent letter from here that Longone, husband of Carolina White, conducted the "Tosca" performance. Hastily, LOUIS BLUMENBERG.

SNAPSHOT IN FRONT OF THE CONCERT HALL ON THE BEACH, OSTENDE.

To left of reader, Louis Siegel, the violinist; Leopold Godowsky and Louis Blumenberg.

BURKE ON MUSIC.

In the year 1750 Edmund Burke, who at that time had not yet become a famous statesman, published his "Philosophical Enquiry Into the Origin of Our Ideas of the Sublime and Beautiful." It is a work that once was widely read, but which has now very little influence on current thought.

Burke's opinion on the beautiful in music is hardly that of most of our modern composers. It is well worth reading, however, for it is not devoid of truth.

In the introduction which he wrote for the second edition of his essay in 1757 he says: "The most powerful effects of poetry and music have been displayed, and perhaps are still displayed, where these arts are but in a very low and imperfect state. The rude hearer is affected by the principles which operate in these arts even in their rudest condition; and he is not skillful enough to perceive the defects. But as the arts advance toward their perfection the science of criticism advances with equal pace, and the pleasure of judges is frequently interrupted by the faults which are discovered in the most finished compositions."

We find to our regret that our science of criticism keeps pace with the performances we hear in such abundance during the musical season. If we could get the pleasure from the fine performances we used to derive from even the most mediocre concerts our cup of joy as critics would indeed be full and overflowing. In Section XXV of the original essay Burke says concerning the sense of hearing: "In this sense we find an equal aptitude to be affected in a soft and delicate manner; and how far sweet or beautiful sounds agree with our descriptions of beauty in other senses, the experience of every one must decide. Milton has described this species of music in one of his juvenile poems ('L'Allegro.') I need not say that Milton was perfectly well versed in that art; and that no man had a finer ear, with a happier manner of expressing the affections of one sense by metaphors taken from another. The description is as follows:

—and ever against eating cares
Lap me in soft Lydian airs;
In notes with many a winding bout
Of linked sweetness long drawn out;
With wanton heed and giddy cunning,
The melting voice through mazes running;
Untwisting all the chains that tie
The hidden soul of harmony.

"Let us parallel this with the softness, the winding surface, the unbroken continuance, the easy gradation of the beautiful in other things; and all the diversities of the several senses, with all their several affections, will rather help to throw lights from one another to finish one clear, consistent idea of the whole, than to obscure it by their intricacy and variety.

"To the above mentioned description I shall add one or two remarks. The first is: That the beautiful in music will not bear that loudness and strength of sounds, which may be used to raise other passions; nor notes which are shrill or harsh, or deep; it agrees best with such as are clear, even, smooth and weak. The second is: That great variety and quick transitions from one measure or tone to another, are contrary to the genius of the beautiful in music. Such transitions often excite mirth, or other sudden or tumultuous passions; but not that sinking, that melting, that languor, which is the characteristical effect of the beautiful as it regards every sense. The passion excited by beauty is, in fact, nearer to a species of melancholy than to jollity and mirth. . . ."

If Burke came back to us from the shadowland he would find many changes in our modern music. In 1750 Bach died, Handel was sixty-five years old, and Haydn eighteen. Gluck was in the heyday of his powers and beginning to produce his masterworks. Mozart, Beethoven and Weber, with all the later composers, were as yet unborn. In those days it might do to preach that music should be "clear, even, smooth and weak."

But, shades of "Heldenleben," think of telling a modern composer that "the beautiful in music will not bear that loudness and strength of sounds which may be used to raise other passions; nor notes which are shrill or harsh, or deep."

Perhaps these modern works are not really beautiful—an opinion in which Burke would probably concur.

On second thought, however, we think we prefer our prickly Schönberg and our thorny Scriabine to the sugary charms of Fisher's "Minuet" and the watery wastes of Drs. Arne and Pepusch, which supplied the British public of Burke's epoch with so many of its musical thrills.

George Dostal at Rochester.

George Dostal, the Bohemian tenor, appeared at the eleventh annual open air festival in Seneca Park, Rochester, N. Y., on the afternoon and evening of August 13, as the principal soloist of the occasion. At the afternoon performance the tenor's singing of Wagner's "Preislied" revealed him immediately to his new friends as an artist of rare worth. The beauty of his lovely lyric voice led his hearers to become boisterously enthusiastic, and the encore, "O schöne Zeit," an old German lied, had to be repeated. The ariosa from "Pagliacci," and "Siciliana," from Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana," together with the quartet from "Rigoletto," in which he was assisted by Mmes. Stoddart and Van de Veer and Mr. Curtiss, and several encore numbers, including "Then You'll Remember Me" and Sanderson's "Until," comprised his share of the evening performance. Dostal's remarkable voice was the subject of much discussion among the Rochester musicians and critics. One writer, in speaking, said: "He not only has an extremely beautiful voice, but he sings beautifully, and the most universal and universally condemned tenor faults do not mar his singing, which is of such an exquisitely pure, smooth lyric quality." The simplicity of style is a source of ever increasing surprise and pleasure for all audiences who have heard him. The appealing humanity of the man is none the less attractive, and present indications for his future career are most promising.

The tenor will be heard at Asbury Park, N. J., as soloist at the Elks' musical festival, on the evening of August 27.

Alexander Bloch Heard From.

Alexander Bloch, the American violinist, who is now at Loschwitz bei Dresden, where he has spent the summer coaching with his former teacher, Leopold Auer, cabled the MUSICAL COURIER recently to the effect that it would be impossible for him to forward communications out of the country after that date, August 3, but that everything was all right with him, and he expected soon to be able to leave the war zone.

Mr. Bloch had booked return passage on the steamship Grosser Kürfurst, sailing from Hamburg on August 29. At present he is accompanied by his cousin, Blanche Bloch, who had spent the season in Berlin as a member of the Schnable piano class.

Philip Spooner in Switzerland.

Philip Spooner, the young American tenor, is in Europe; at last reports he was at Interlaken, Switzerland, from whence he wrote as follows: "It is very cold here, but the air is bracing. I take long walks and automobile rides, despite the rain, and am growing fat. We went from Paris to Geneva and stayed there a few days."

While in Paris, Mr. Spooner was heard at a dinner musicale, and such was his success that he had several offers for next summer, should he go to Europe. Mr. Spooner's whole letter is written in a most cheerful vein, showing that he had no idea what the very near future would bring to pass in European affairs.

A Successful Deverell Pupil.

Lula Ogden, a bright young pianist of Alabama, returns to America especially well equipped for her future as a musician. She has studied five years with the well known pianist, Frances E. Deverell, director of the Severell School for Girls, which is situated next to the embassy in Paris, and two years with Philippe, the distinguished pianist and composer of the Paris Conservatoire. Miss Ogden is a very conscientious student and plays with much finish and delicacy of feeling, and both of her teachers predict for her a very successful career.

Robsarte Opens Season.

The war caused a sudden change in the plans of Lionel Robsarte, the New York vocal teacher. Mr. and Mrs. Robsarte have been taking a canoe trip in northern Canada. One of their guides, coming back with supplies, brought the first newspaper they had seen in six weeks, giving details of the war. Mr. Robsarte, intent on protecting his securities, made a bee line for the nearest railway and New York, and is now busy in his studio at the Hotel Woodward.

The Piersols in Canada.

Benton Piersol and his wife, Marie Ladue Piersol, are enjoying the cooling breezes of Lake Huron at Goderich, Ontario, after a successful season. With the Piersols are Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Mount, of Philadelphia (Mrs. Mount is a pianist and accompanist of more than the ordinary ability); also Mrs. Collins, president of the Matinee Musical Club, of that city. Mr. Piersol was the soloist at last April's concert of the New York Philharmonic Society under Josef Stransky in Detroit, and will open the season in November with the New York Symphony Society on a Wagnerian program. Marie Ladue Piersol has been engaged for the April concert with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra in Detroit.

THE "ELIJAH" AT OCEAN GROVE.

Huge Audience Hears Impressive Rendering of Well Known Oratorio—Soloists, Chorus and Orchestra Enthusiastically Received—Other Concerts Announced.

At the Ocean Grove (N. J.) Auditorium, under the direction of Tali Esen Morgan, an unusually impressive performance of Mendelssohn's "Elijah" was given on Saturday evening, August 15. The seating capacity of the vast Auditorium was taxed to its limit by the great audience which assembled for this work. The soloists were as follows: Elijah, David Bispham; King Ahab, Dan Beddoe; Widow of Israel, Myrtle Thornburgh; Queen Jezebel, Alice Louise Mertens; Youth, Anna Ballard-Lewis; organist, Clarence Reynolds; solo cellist, Julius Herner.

David Bispham's masterly interpretation of the role of Elijah is too well known to require any special comment in this place. He was in splendid voice and was greeted by an ovation from the appreciative music lovers present. Bispham's interpretations are, above all things, broad and intellectual and these characteristics are especially appropriate to this great oratorio. It was evident, too, that the Elijah on this occasion felt fully the religious intensity and import of the role and he delivered the recitatives and arias with an impressiveness, a solemnity, and a depth of spiritual fervor which no lesser artist could attain. One of the most impressive portions of Bispham's work on this occasion was the recitative and duet, "Give Me Thy Son," and his invocation to the people, "Rise, Then, Ye Priests of Baal," was wonderfully masterful and stirring, as was also his prayer, "Lord, God of Abraham." The allegro aria, "Is Not His Work Like a Fire," was done with tremendous spirit, and the coloratura passages in this were heard with unusual clarity and distinctness in spite of the vast dimensions of the auditorium.

Mr. Beddoe had, of course, less opportunity to be heard upon this occasion, but the beautiful quality of his tenor was greatly enjoyed. His singing of "If With All Your Hearts" was delicate and tender in the extreme, and the remarkable carrying power of his voice, as well as the beauty of the upper notes, was particularly appreciated and earned for the singer hearty applause. Mr. Beddoe was no less successful in the final aria, "Then Shall the Righteous Shine Forth."

The other soloists, including the quartet, which was placed high up on one of the smaller balconies at the side of the organ, were effective in their respective roles.

The work of the chorus was especially fine. The entire body of singers trained by Mr. Morgan was present and entirely filled the space allotted to them on the stage. The grouping of this chorus was effective, the men being placed in the center, and the ladies in a semicircle beside and behind them. The orchestra was in the center below and the organ console was between the chorus and the orchestra.

Mr. Morgan was greeted by prolonged applause upon his appearance on the stage, and the work of the chorus was so stirring, the beauty of tone so great and of such pure sonorous quality, that the audience was deeply moved and gave frequent expression of its appreciation. Mr. Morgan proved himself not only to be an excellent, careful trainer of voices, able to inspire singers and to get from them the very best quality of tone without any screaming or forcing, but he proved himself to be, above all things, a musician of learning. His interpretations are not only thoroughly musical, but are strictly traditional. Under his direction the works of the great masters are heard as one would have them heard.

Further entertainments are announced for Friday afternoon, August 21, and the following days, consisting of a grand opening concert, the coronation of Queen Titania, Sousa and His Band with the Ocean Grove children's chorus, and on Wednesday, the Fairyland Festival, announced to be the last big concert of the season under the direction of Tali Esen Morgan.

Wrong, by Heck!

Cleveland, Ohio, August 10, 1914.

To the Musical Courier:

It is not my custom to comment on articles I see in papers—but here is one I cannot resist.

My knowledge of farm life and the use of farm implements is that corn is usually cultivated and not "plowed" (as you said), especially when it gets to be as high as shown down on Mr. Kinsey's "old farm," a picture of which you published recently in your columns.

Who is the "farm editor" of the MUSICAL COURIER?

Yours very truly,

GAY DONALDSON.

Frances E. Deverell and Her Work.

Miss Deverell, the well known pianist, and director of the Deverell School for Girls, which is situated in a splendid building next door to the American embassy, Paris, is unusually well fitted for the work which she has in hand. Before opening her school, Miss Deverell was, for some years, busily engaged and widely known as a pianist and teacher, both in America and abroad. She received her musical education from William Sherwood, of Chicago, Felix Moreau, Wager Swayne and Harold Bauer, of Paris. All of these teachers speak in the highest terms of Miss Deverell's talent and attainments. Sherwood says: "She has real talent—she is a brilliant player and a fine teacher." Felix Moreau writes: "Her playing is filled with fine musical feeling and vital understanding"; and she has a large number of excellent press notices from various points of the Middle West and South: Chicago, Atlanta, Rome, Nashville, etc.

The war, of course, makes uncertain the date of the opening of the Deverell Paris school. Meantime, should that be delayed, Miss Deverell will continue her career as pianist and teacher in this country.

Polak at Elks' Festival.

Emil Polak, the prominent New York pianist and accompanist, will officiate in the double role of accompanist and soloist at the Elks' music festival, which will be held at Asbury Park, N. J., August 25-27-29. This young American pianist's efficiency as coach and accompanist has led him to a position of wide popularity in this country, and he already has served some of the world's most prominent vocalists and instrumentalists.

During the Asbury Park engagement, besides his piano solos on each of the three evenings, he will accompany the following artists: George Dostal, Orville Harrold, Florencio Constantino, Alice Nielsen, Rosa Olitzka and Miss Mylott. The festival, which is a new venture for the Elks of that city, promises to be one of the most important musical events of the present Asbury season, and lavish preparations are being carried out, which promise well to fulfill all expectations.

Roderick White Returns.

Roderick White, the violinist, has returned to his home in Grand Rapids, Mich. He left Europe on one of the last boats to reach New York after the war broke out. Although war was not declared until two days after sailing, the steamer—a German liner—took the precaution when stopping at Cherbourg of waiting for passengers three miles out, instead of entering the breakwater as usual.

Mr. White had before him an extensive tour covering Europe and England, with several Berlin appearances, but is one of the many who will be unable to fill his engagements abroad this season.

Dudley Buck Pupil Wins Success.

At the evening concert given in Woodside Park, Philadelphia, on August 10, Katherine Galloway, soprano, was the soloist. Her program number was "A Red, Red Rose," by Hastings, but such was the applause that Miss Galloway was compelled to add a number of selections as encores. Miss Galloway, who is an artist-pupil of Dudley Buck, the eminent New York vocal teacher, has an excellent voice and is blessed with a charming personality, which is instrumental in gaining for her instant favor with her audiences.

The McConnell Vocal Trio in Atlantic City.

The McConnell vocal trio, consisting of Marie McConnell, first soprano; Minnie McConnell, second soprano, and Harriet McConnell, contralto, are enjoying the invigorating ocean breezes at Atlantic City, N. J.

Harriet McConnell, the contralto of this charming trio, has accepted a position as soloist at the Church of the Blessed Disciple on East Eighty-ninth street, near Madison avenue, New York, beginning October 1.

Band Leader Dies.

Benjamin Wechsler, fifty-one years old, the director of Wechsler's Military Band of Brooklyn, dropped dead in the bandstand in Fort Greene Park, Brooklyn, Sunday afternoon while listening to applause for a selection his band had just finished playing.

Fortunate Restraint.

"Everybody rises to his feet when the band plays the 'Star-Spangled Banner.'"

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne. "What a fortunate thing it is for our national dignity that the melody isn't brisk enough to permit the crowd to tango."—Washington Star.

ADELE KRUEGER TELLS OF EXCITING VOYAGE ACROSS THE ATLANTIC.

[An Interview.]

"IT was a wonderful trip and one I shall never forget." When the giant steamship Kaiser Wilhelm II steamed into New York harbor August 6, and finally landed her passengers upon American soil after a thrilling trip across the Atlantic, there was probably no one more anxious to be the first to step ashore than Adele Krueger, the well known dramatic soprano, who with her husband had been spending the summer abroad.

"After all it's nice to be back in America," said Mme. Krueger, and Mr. Krueger thoroughly agreed with her.

At their home in Staten Island shortly after their arrival, Mme. Krueger related quite in detail some of the most sensational incidents of their remarkable return voyage. It would be impossible to express in words the excitement that prevailed among the passengers, or of all the unusual happenings that took place. Nevertheless a few of the facts will reveal much of the mysteriousness in which the huge sea monster succeeded in evading the enemies' vessels.

"Tell me, Mme. Krueger, did you have a chance to see very much of Germany before your hurried escape from the war zone?"

"Considerable. We visited in Bremen, Hamburg, Dresden, Weimar, Wurtemberg, Nürnberg, Düsseldorf, and we also went to Holland, to Brussels and to London."

"How was it the Kaiser Wilhelm II did not leave from Bremen as usual?"

"It was because of an accident which the steamship met with when in a collision a few days before, that she was forced to put into an English port, and for this reason we sailed from Southampton. It was only by the merest chance that we succeeded in securing passage on this vessel."

"After you had pulled out of Southampton, your voyage became an exciting one from the very start?"

"No," replied the artist, "nothing unusual happened until we were a considerable distance out. From the time we left the Channel until we reached American waters, we never sighted another vessel. It seemed to be the policy of the captain to avoid all smoke, no matter what it might have proven to be. Only once did we sight smoke, and then we turned southward, continuing our course in a southerly direction for a large part of the distance. We must have gone as far south as Baltimore before reaching our destination."

"Were you in communication with any other vessels?"

"Yes, twice we talked with the Kronprinzessin Cecilie. We had understood that she was heading for Bremen by way of northern England and the Irish coast, and were much surprised when we later discovered that she had returned and had successfully reached Bar Harbor, Maine."

ADELE KRUEGER AND HER HUSBAND, ERNST KRUEGER, ON THE S. S. "KAISER WILHELM II," ARRIVING IN NEW YORK, AUGUST 6, 1914.

"But your own trip, was it full of excitement?"

"Indeed, yes," continued the madame. "The third night before we reached New York we shaded every light and every precaution was taken to prevent being seen. On the last night out, most of the lights were extinguished, even the red lights in the gangways."

"You knew all the time, however, just what was going on in Europe? That is, by your wireless reports you knew how the war was progressing?"

"To a certain extent. Naturally, we could not get all the details or even all the news, yet we were kept well informed as to what was going on in a general way. We were able to pick up wireless reports continually. Our wireless operator was always busy."

"Then when you approached New York?"

"Well, our last day's run was the most exciting of all. Nothing of an alarming nature happened and in fact everyone made the best of the situation. Nevertheless war talk was on the lips of all and the majority of us expected hourly to be stopped and to be taken to some French or English port."

"Were you ordered to bed earlier than usual or did the captain surprise you with a speech of explanation?"

"No, quite to the contrary. We received no orders and except for the turning out and shading of the lights, little out of the ordinary took place. It was the constant watch for the enemies' vessels that kept us in a continual state of alarm, particularly those who were anxious to reach America."

"Now that you are back, safe in the United States, what is your general opinion of the present state of affairs in Europe?"

"I believe this war had to come, and that it was only a question of time. On several occasions in the past, the Kaiser has prevented hostilities, but with the natural course of events he was unable to prevent the present struggle."

"And what do you believe the result will be?"

"That I do not know, naturally, but I thoroughly believe that Germany is in this present struggle for her very existence, and for this reason alone she will never give up until completely and unquestionably beaten, or until she has succeeded in triumphantly defeating the allies."

Sibyl Sammis MacDermid and the Stray Dog.

Sibyl Sammis, soprano, and James G. MacDermid, composer, of Chicago, are now enjoying a week's cruise of the Great Lakes on the steamship South American.

The accompanying snapshot of Mrs. MacDermid was taken at Asheville, N. C., where she was introduced (as she was all through the South this summer) as "the girl with the million dollar smile." The dog strayed into the picture just before Mrs. MacDermid was "snapped."

SIBYL SAMMIS MacDERMID AT ASHEVILLE, N. C.

Mrs. Williston to Sing at Lord & Taylor's

Mrs. Artha Williston, soprano, who will open her season at the Maine Music Festivals, has been engaged for one week's concerts at Lord & Taylor's department store, New York. These concerts will be in their beautiful new Chickering Hall.

Samuel Gardner at MacDowell Festival.

Samuel Gardner, the young American violinist, who came [illegible]ich prominence last season as a result of his splen[illegible], and also in view of the fact that he is an all American product, having studied only in this country, will be heard as soloist at the MacDowell Festival in Peterboro, N. H., on Thursday afternoon, August 20. Mr. Gardner is under Foster & David's management, and as he is one of the very promising members of the younger American violin fraternity, it is safe to assume that much will be heard of his activities during the coming season.

Julia Claussen's Children.

In the accompanying snapshot are shown from left to right, Huldah Voedisch, sister of Alma Voedisch, the Chicago manager, and Bojian and Sojior Claussen, the two daughters of Julia Claussen, contralto of the Chicago Grand Opera Company.

THE CLAUSSEN CHILDREN.

Sheffield Knows Geometry.

George Sheffield, the Chicago tenor, paid New York a short visit last week, during which he perfected his Eastern bookings for next season, and spent some pleasant hours with his friends in the metropolis. Mr. Sheffield expects this winter to have the banner season of his career, and says that he would have even more dates if geometrical rules did not prevent a body from being in two places at the same time.

De Gogorza Believed to be En Route Here.

Antonia Sawyer, manager for Emilio de Gogorza, feels very much encouraged over the report from Hayden Eames (brother of Emma Eames-de Gogorza), stating that Mr. de Gogorza is probably on his way to America, as he was in Italy at the time the war began, and it is reported that the Italian steamships have been authorized to bring Americans across. This is especially good news, inasmuch as Mr. de Gogorza will sing at the Maine Music Festivals in early October.

Baroness Von Turk-Rohn's Engagements.

Baroness Olga von Turk-Rohn, the Austrian soprano, who returned this month from Vienna, where she had been called to participate in several festive musical occasions, is now busily engaged in preparing concert programs for her 1914-15 tour throughout the United States and Canada. The baroness is under the management of the Metropolitan Musical Bureau, the same agency which brought her into special prominence at her last season's American debut. She is the happy possessor of a remarkable voice and, above all, a personality that is most appealing. Her wide European experience as a member of the Vienna Royal Opera and in many concert tournees all over that continent has made her an artist who has much to give, and in the giving knows thoroughly how to best meet every demand made upon her gifts.

BARONESS OLGA VON TURK-ROHN.

Baroness von Turk-Rohn will be heard at Asbury Park on the afternoon of August 22 and both in the afternoon and evening of the following day at the same popular resort. She will appear at Richmond, Va., during the week of October 5 as principal soloist at the festival to be held in that city.

Helen Bixby Wetzel in London.

Helen Bixby Wetzel, the well known soprano, left Milan, Italy, on July 21, for London, where she will continue her work until her return to Italy for the fall season.

The accompanying picture taken on the S. S. Berlin

HELEN BIXBY WETZEL ON THE STEAMER "BERLIN."
She is seated on lower step at the right.

shows Miss Wetzel seated on the lower step and wearing a broad smile.

Klibansky Summer Pupils.

Sergei Klibansky's summer session for vocal pupils has proven most successful, this teacher having been compelled to visit his studio, 212 West Fifty-ninth street, New York, daily, instead of tri-weekly, as planned. Many of the pupils are from the West, the majority being teachers themselves, who take this means of studying with an eminent authority during their own vacation period. The class has brought Mr. Klibansky in touch with earnest teachers and students from all parts of the country, eight States being represented, and one pupil from Australia. August 18 he left for the Adirondacks, where he will lead the "simple life" for a while, planning to resume teaching about the middle of September.

Following are the names of the summer students of this year: Arthur L. Tebbs, Dayton, Ohio; G. H. Lehman, Bluffton, Ohio; George Johnson, Cincinnati, Ohio; Betty Powers, Cincinnati, Ohio; Erick Lucas, Fort Smith, Ark.; Virginia Estill, Sweet Briar, Va.; Miss Dotson, Danville, Va.; Mrs. H. L. Simons, St. Paul, Minn.; Miss W. P. Bussey, Augusta, Ga.; H. Roger Naylor, Trenton, N. J.; Tracy J. Kingman, Munsey, Ind.; Myrtle Hambough, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; Lillian Green and Dr. Kerbel, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Robert H. Marshall, Rochester, N. Y.; Charles A. Stebbins, J. M. Hemhagen, Mr. Copeland, R. S. Mosher, E. L. Mosher and Miss C. Dritz, New York; M. S. Miller, Fiji Island.

Diana Yorke Sings with Orchestra.

One of Oscar Saenger's young artists, Diana Yorke, is gifted with a lovely soprano voice and charming personality, which made an excellent impression on her audience at Briarcliff Lodge, Sunday, August 2, when she sang with an orchestra under the direction of Lucius Hosmer, formerly conductor of the Chicago Opera Company. Her numbers included the aria from "Madame Butterfly" and a group of English songs. Owing to her success at this concert, Miss Yorke has been asked to sing there again later this season.

DIANA YORKE.

Edmund Burke in "Dylan."

"Magnificent" is the term used by the Irish Times to describe Edmund Burke's performance of the Sea King in the new opera, "Dylan," recently given at Drury Lane. The Irish baritone's depiction of the role was warmly commended by all the London critics.

"Mr. Burke gave a very fine reading," said the Standard, while the Clarion declared that Burke's singing and impersonation were "the triumph of the evening."

"Mr. Burke fully deserved his cordial reception," was the comment of the Sunday Observer, agreeing with the Sketch, which stated that the baritone "added to his reputation and received a well deserved ovation." The Express called Burke's performance "the outstanding feature of the evening," while the Queen said: "Mr. Burke has never used his fine voice to better advantage than as the Sea King, and his dignity of bearing made the reading of the part memorable." (Advertisement.)

American Institute Recitals.

Leslie J. Hodgson, pianist, and McCall Lanham, baritone, teachers at the American Institute of Applied Music, summer session, each gave a solo recital at headquarters, the former on July 29, the latter, July 24. Mr. Hodgson, whose repertoire embraces the classics and moderns, played works ranging from Handel to the Americans, Griffes and Scott. Mr. Lanham sang fourteen songs, all by modern composers, and both artists were heard by the good sized gathering representing the summer student class which attends all these affairs.

Katharine Goodson's Dates.

Katharine Goodson, the English pianist, who begins her American tour in January, 1915, has been re-engaged by many orchestras, clubs and societies for which she has played every season when making her American tour.

This wonderful artist has the rare ability to hold the admiration and enthusiasm of her public from year to year by her personal charm as well as by her remarkable playing, which is "born in the heart," as the music of every true artist should be.

Miss Goodson's New York recital will probably take place in January. During this same month she will play at several concerts in Canada, beginning January 4; also at Auburn, N. Y., January 8; Aurora, N. Y., January 11; Ottawa, January 14; Chicago, January 18; a recital in Brooklyn, January 21, and in Birmingham, Ala., January 25. In February, Miss Goodson will go again to Canada. playing in Guelph, Ontario, on February 16; Detroit, February 18; St. Paul, February 25; Kansas City, March 2; Columbus, Ohio, March 9; Cincinnati, March 11; Detroit, March 16; Hartford, March 25, and Bridgeport, Conn., April 14.

"Before the War."

The accompanying picture shows the New York concert manager, M. H. Hanson, at Lucerne, with Arthur George, the American baritone. This photo was taken on July 26, before the war clouds broke over Europe.

M. H. HANSON AND ARTHUR GEORGE AT LUCERNE.

HELEN BLAIN CONTRALTO
Address: Usual Agents
Residence: 29 Upper Baker St., Regent's Park, London, N.W.
Telephone 471 Maytair

YEATMAN GRIFFITH SOLE TEACHER OF FLORENCE MACBETH
PRIMA DONNA COLORATURA OF THE CHICAGO OPERA COMPANY
Studios: Holland House, 143 Maida Vale, London

MURIEL LITTLE (Leipzig Diploma)
Voice Production Taught on Method of
ELENA GERHARDT
2 Wellington Road, N.W

The most eminent Composers, best Songs and Song Cycles are to be found in the Catalogue of
BOOSEY & CO. NEW YORK and LONDON
FREE on request. THEMATICS of latest important additions
9 East 17th Street New York

HERMANN KLEIN
Teacher of Some of the Most Successful Singers Now Before the Public
Co-Editor, Garcia's "Hints on Singing"; Author, New English Version of "Carmen"; Translator, Metzler's Mastersongs, "Lieder in English."
BECHSTEIN HALL STUDIOS, LONDON
Private address, 40 Ave. Road, Regent's Park, N.W.

Cable: Keynote, London
CONCERT DIRECTION
DANIEL MAYER
Established 1890
Chatham House
George Street
Hanover Square, W.,
LONDON, ENGLAND
ENGLAND'S PREMIER AGENCY

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. HUBBARD
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
SYMPHONY CHAMBERS BOSTON.

IRMA SEYDEL
European Tour, July, 1914—Jan. 1915
American Tour, - after Feb. 1, 1915
Address THEODORE SEYDEL, 70 Westland Ave., Boston

GEORGE EVERETT
BARITONE—Boston and Covent Garden Opera Companies
In London Until July 28,1914
Address Frederick M. Waterman, 177 Huntington Avenue, Boston

FELIX FOX PIANIST
Summer Classes June 8 to July 25
STEINERT HALL ANNEX - - BOSTON, MASS.

WILLARD FLINT BASS
Soloist Nine Times, HANDEL and HAYDEN SOCIETY
246 Huntington Avenue, Boston
Management: Briggs Musical Bureau - Chicago

CLARA TIPPETT
TEACHER OF SINGING
321 Pierce Building - - - Boston, Mass.

Priscilla WHITE Teacher of Singing
602 Pierce Building
BOSTON - MASS.

CHICAGO MUSICIANS REPORT FROM EUROPE.

Several Members of Tonal Fraternity Are Heard From in the War Zone—Midsummer Doings in the Big Western Metropolis.

Chicago, Ill., August 15, 1914.

Marie C. Bergersen, one of Chicago's popular and talented young pianists, who has been studying at the Imperial Conservatory in Vienna, Austria, is, according to a cable received from Rotterdam, Holland, on board the S. S. New Amsterdam bound for New York. Much anxiety was felt for her safety. Her father, Louis B. Bergersen, of 3269 Wrightwood avenue, was recently in Washington and sent funds through the State Department for her return.

Cablegram from Birdice Blye in Switzerland.

Mrs. Blye has been overwhelmed with telegrams and telephone calls inquiring about the safety of Birdice Blye in Europe. It is wonderful how quickly a chord of sympathy is touched in all hearts, and messages have been received from all over the country where Miss Blye has made friends by her playing and her attractive personality. Especially appreciated were a card from Vice-president Marshall and a telegram from James Hamilton Lewis, United States Senator from Illinois.

Miss Blye is very devoted to her mother and has written her every day since she went abroad. She has made an extensive tour covering many weeks in Italy, but at the outbreak of hostilities was in the south of France. Letters being delayed, fears were entertained that she and her friends had gone to Paris in the rush of thousands to that city during the panic, but a cablegram received last Wednesday reported her safe in Geneva.

Vida Llewellyn Safe in London.

Vida Llewellyn, the American pianist, who was in Berlin at the beginning of the war, cabled her father that she was well and safe in London. Miss Llewellyn will return to the United States as soon as possible in order to be back in time for the opening of her concert tour, which has been booked by the Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, of New York.

Greetings from the Bergeys.

Theodore S. Bergey and his wife are now motoring through Kentucky. They sent a postcard to this office from Mammoth Cave, Ky., after visiting the Marble Temple in that locality. The Bergeys said that were having a very fine trip and expect to be back in Chicago the first part of September.

Mabel Sharp Herdien at Midway Gardens.

The Midway Gardens management made such a flattering offer to Mabel Sharp Herdien, Chicago's well known soprano, that for the past week she has been heard nightly in several selections, meeting on each occasion with the full approval of the audience, which showed its appreciation by asking repetitions and encores after each number.

Rose Lutiger Gannon, contralto, will be soloist next week with orchestra.

Walter Spry's Interpretation Class.

Walter Spry has successfully maintained the Interpretation Class of the Walter Spry Music School since the foundation of the institution nine years ago. He devotes two programs a month to the pupils and plays two programs each month to the advanced students. Mr. Spry will give the following programs, beginning in September:

Prelude and fugue, G minor (Well Tempered Clavichord)....Bach
Andante from the Surprise Symphony.....Haydn-Saint-Saëns
Sonata in A flat, op. 26.....Beethoven
Chaconne in G major.....Handel
Tambourin.....Rameau-Godowsky
Scherzo from Scotch Symphony.....Mendelssohn
Nocturne, op. 9, No. 1.....Chopin
Polonaise, F sharp minor.....Chopin
Fantasie from sonata, C minor.....Mozart
The Linden Tree.....Schubert-Liszt
Hark! Hark! the Lark.....Schubert-Liszt
Romanza Intermezzo, finale from op. 26.....Schumann
Waltzes.....Brahms
Sonnette de Petrarce, No. 123.....Liszt
Concert Study in D flat.....Liszt
Hungarian Rhapsody No. 8.....Liszt

Lucille Stevenson Presents Pupil.

Last Wednesday, August 12, in the Auditorium Building, Lucille Stevenson presented her pupil, Margaret Stevenson, in a song recital. The program included selections by Schumann, Clara Schumann, Meyerbeer, MacFadyen and Foote, all of which were beautifully interpreted by the young soprano and reflected great credit upon her able and popular mentor.

Pittsburgh Ladies' Orchestra in Chicago.

The Pittsburgh Ladies' Orchestra, of which Albert D. Liefield is the able director, gave an interesting and well attended concert at the West Side Y. M. C. A. on Saturday evening, August 8. This orchestra is now on a three weeks' tour through Illinois.

Celene Loveland Appreciated.

Celéne Loveland, pianist and instructor, has been most successful since her return from abroad, receiving not only praise from the press and public alike, but also being the recipient of letters from her students who, in glowing terms, express gratitude to their capable teacher for the progress made or for positions secured. Miss Loveland will tour under the management of Gertrude V. O'Hanlon this coming season, and she will also maintain her piano studios in this city.

Henrietta Weber at Lake Chautauqua.

Henrietta Weber, the well known lecturer, has left for a series of operatic lectures at Lake Chautauqua. Irene Larkin, as heretofore, will preside at the piano. At the conclusion of the series Miss Weber will go to New York, where she will arrange the dates for her series of lectures in the metropolis for the coming winter. Before leaving Chicago, Miss Weber had signed one hundred and thirty-five engagements for lecture-recitals during the coming season—probably a record for any musician at this early date.

Maurice Rosenfeld Lectures.

The two lectures given during the summer session of the Chicago Musical College by Maurice Rosenfeld were largely attended by out-of-town teachers and students.

The first on "Parsifal" is considered one of the most concise essays on this subject. It was illustrated by Burton Thatcher, baritone, and by A. Leon Bloom, pianist.

The second, on "The Appreciation of Music," treated the art in a colloquial manner and was made up of anecdotes, short biographical sketches, and amusing incidents in the life of many distinguished musicians. Its particular feature, however, was the fact that music was not discussed from any technical standpoint.

This lecture was also illustrated. Sarah Irene Campbell, soprano, sang a group of songs by Schubert, Schumann and Brahms, and Annette Waxmann and Esther Ruekberg, pianists, played selections by Liszt, Ganz, Dohanyi and Rachmaninoff.

Mme. Olitzka's Vacation.

Rose Olitzka will leave this week for her vacation on the Jersey Coast and also to fulfil her concert engagements at Asbury Park. From information at hand, Mme. Olitzka's coming season will be one of her best.

Wichita Correspondent in Chicago.

Ralph Brokaw, the well known violinist, of Wichita, Kan., and the Musical Courier correspondent in that locality, called at this office recently on his way to Wabash, Ind., to which place he will motor from here. Mr. and Mrs. Brokaw will probably motor as far as Cincinnati, returning in about two weeks to Chicago, where they will remain until early in September, when they will return to Wichita to resume teaching at the Powers-Myers Conservatory, where Mr. Brokaw is head of the violin department.

Interesting Program at MacBurney Studios.

A program of unusual interest was given by Grace Ann Yeager, soprano, with the assistance of John Doane, accompanist, at the MacBurney studios on Monday evening, August 3, and was enjoyed by a large audience. The program comprised songs of the old "folksong" type—the first part consisting of Deutscher Liederschatz and the latter of Shakespeare songs. Miss Yeager has a charm-

FRANCES INGRAM
Management: SHAW & TUCKER Orchestra Building, Chicago

GLENN DILLARD GUNN
PIANIST
421-424 Fine Arts Building - - Chicago, Ill.

LEON SAMETINI
Holland's Greatest VIOLINIST
Management ALMA VOEDISCH
3941 Rokeby Street, Chicago

Mrs. STACY WILLIAMS Voice Production :: Repertoire ::
In Europe June 15 to September 15
For information, prospectus, etc., address
Mrs. Williams, 405-406 Kimball Hall - Chicago, Ill.

Lucille STEVENSON (TEWKSBURY) SOPRANO
Address: 4439 Berkeley Avenue, Chicago
Telephone, Oakland 1570

LECTURES, OPERA TALKS, AND PIANO LECTURE RECITALS
By
HENRIETTE WEBER
Also the Larkin-Weber Recitals
Consisting of
OPERA, LECTURE RECITALS AND MELODRAMES and
THE CHICAGO PIANO QUARTETTE
Henriette Weber, piano; Fritz Itte, violin;
Carl Klammsteiner, cello; A. Van Der Voort, viola.
Specializing in Opera Programs.
Arrangements with Distinguished American Singers as Soloists
FOR TERMS AND DATES ADDRESS MISS H. WEBER
Auditorium Building, Chicago, Ill., Phone Harrison 4868-4869

MARION GREEN
BASSO CANTANTE
Auditorium Building, Chicago
Home Phone: Ravenswood 5774 Studio Phone: Harrison 4868

THOMAS N. MAC BURNEY
BARITONE
Voice Production Song Recitals
Three years assistent to Frank King Clark
Suite 609 Fine Arts Building, Chicago, Ill
Phone Harrison 6889

MR. and MRS. HERMAN DEVRIES
Voice Production.
STUDIOS: 518-528 FINE ARTS BUILDING, CHICAGO
Preparation for Oratorio, Opera, Concert, in English, French, German, Italian Public Recitals for Pupils, Fine Arts Theatre
Public Opera Performances for Pupils, Studebaker Theater

BUSH TEMPLE CONSERVATORY
N. Clark St. and Chicago Avenue, Chicago
Kenneth M. Bradley, President
SUMMER SESSION
BEGINNING JUNE 22
Special Courses in MUSIC, Expression, Languages, Public School Music, Dramatic Art
Conducted by an unsurpassed faculty, including:
Mme. Julie Rivs-King, Guy Herbert Woodard, Grace Stewart Potter, Mae Julie Riley, Herold von Mlokwitz, Frank B. Webster, Eleanor Smith, Ernest O. Todd, Mme. Justine Wegener, Edgar A. Nelson, Edward Dvorak, Adelaide G. Lewis
The management announces the exclusive teaching engagement of the world's most famous baritone: CHARLES W. CLARK
Students wishing private lessons with any of the above named artists should make application in advance.
The Bush Temple Conservatory is the only music school in Chicago which has its own Dormitory.
Reservation of rooms must be made in advance.
For Catalog and Special Literature Address: Edward H. Schwenker, Sec'y

ing presence and a voice of rare richness which promises well for the future. Her diction was notably good in the German songs, and the entire program was given with considerable style. Mr. Doane gave the soloist splendid support at the piano.

ARTHUR MIDDLETON'S RECITAL.

On Monday evening, August 3, Arthur Middleton presented an interesting and varied program in Assembly Hall, Chicago University, and again demonstrated that he is one of the best equipped and most versatile artists in America. Mr. Middleton possesses a voice of unusual timbre, power and musical quality, which has grown in volume in the last few years until it is equal to any demand that may be made upon it. Unfortunately Chicago has been slow to realize a fact which the East has been quick to grasp, namely, that there are few voices of like calibre, also that the West can produce artists the equal of any in the world. Mr. Middleton has developed along interpretive lines, his enunciation is clear and distinct, and the text of the song is at all times of primary importance. Thus in the group of Kipling Ballads, the story of each one was impressed upon the listener with dramatic force and intensity, while the two Beethoven numbers were interpreted with a simplicity of style and a legato tone which could not be excelled. He was enthusiastically received and responded to several encores. He was handicapped by his accompanist, who was evidently not at his best, and seemed to be under the impression that he was the soloist at times.

Helen Ware's Philosophy in Life and Music.

Helen Ware, the talented young violinist, whose fine interpretations of Hungarian and Slavic music have gained for her a name whenever and wherever she has appeared, will probably be heard next season in joint recitals with Rudolph Ganz and Harold Bauer.

Not long ago the writer of these lines had the pleasure of visiting Helen Ware in the inner sanctum of her study, or "workroom," as Miss Ware calls it. While viewing the many trophies that decorate the "workshop" of this tireless worker, gathered from all corners of the world, he caught sight of a small card holding a place of honor between the portraits of her two masters, Sevcik and Hubay. It was just an unpretentious little visiting card with only a few lines scrawled on it, and yet these lines told the tale of her whole life's work, of all her ambitions, and expressed her ideals and understanding of life and art as has no other visiting card that the writer has ever received from her numerous artist friends. These are the lines:

HELEN WARE.
Back to nature after a busy season.

TEMPO MODERATO—POCO A POCO CRESCENDO.

"These much meaning words contain about all the philosophy I can live up to," said Miss Ware. "It is a splendid religion that fits most occasions and phases of life, especially in reference to an artistic career.

"American students of art would do well to pay homage to this safe and sane philosophy, for indeed in our feverish, madly rushing life one has to struggle not to be carried away with the tide. Art cannot be rushed, and the sooner a young artist can make up his mind that great things in life, among them an artistic career, can only be accomplished poco a poco—tempo moderato, the better it will be for all concerned."

If one is to judge by Miss Ware's brilliant career, then her little visiting card ought to be used as a charm by every worthy young artist, for Helen Ware has climbed high up the ladder of fame rung by rung with an eye fixed on the very top, and it does seem as if nothing could stop this plucky artist from getting there, after her own fashion—poco a poco.

Emma Loeffler at Riverhead.

Assisted by Margerite Murphy, accompanist, and Garfield Corwin, pianist, Emma Loeffler, the well known New York soprano, gave a recital recently at the Auditorium, Riverhead, L. I. She was well received and enthusiastically encored, her program being as follows:

Dearest ..... Sidney Homer
The Birth of Morn ..... Franco Leoni
Spirit Flower ..... Campbell-Tipton
Berceuse ..... Guy d'Hardelot
The Nightingale Has a Lyre of Gold ..... Benjamin Whelpley
Mimi aria, from La Boheme ..... Puccini
Mattinate ..... Fosti
Der Schmied ..... Brahms
Morgen Hymne ..... Henschel

The local press was enthusiastic in its praise of Miss Loeffler's work, commenting as follows:

The concert given last Friday evening at the Auditorium was a great success. There was a good audience present who by their frequent applause showed their appreciation of the high class program presented. Emma Loeffler, soprano, was one of the best ever heard in this village.—Riverhead County Review.

It is seldom that a Riverhead audience is treated to such good music as that given at the concert here last Friday night by Emma Loeffler, a soprano with a wide reputation. Charmed with every number on the program, the audience, and those not in attendance who have since heard of the merit there presented, join in the hope that at some not distant time these talented musicians will again visit Riverhead and confer another treat by their presence and their command of the technic and the soul of their noble art. —Riverhead News. (Advertisement.)

By direction of the King of Bavaria a bust of J. S. Bach has been placed in Walhalla at Ratisbon.—London Musical News.

Mme. Rosa Olitzka
Celebrated Russian Contralto
ASSISTED BY
Kathleen Hart, Soprano
Exclusive Management West of Cleveland
By special arrangement R. E. Johnston
Elizabeth Rothwell Wolff, Soprano
From Royal Court Theatre Darmstadt.
Walter Henry Rothwell at the piano, condr.
St. Paul Symphony Orchestra
AND
Miss Edna Gunnar Peterson, Pianist
Mr. Albert Borroff, Basso-Cantante
Lecture Recitals, Oratorio
Mme. Cora Kempre, Soprano
Fresh from European Operatic Triumphs
Miss Esther May Plumb, Contralto
Recitals, Oratorio
Mr. Ridgley Hudson, Tenor
Recitals, Oratorio
Miss Clara Williams, Soprano
Oratorio
Miss Celéne Loveland
Piano Lecture Recitals
AND
Metropolitan Grand Opera Quartette
Exclusive management:
GERTRUDE V. O'HANLON
Cable Building Chicago, Ill.

Falk Taking a Walk.

This is a picture of Jules Falk, the noted violinist. Such information is volunteered in case some of our readers might think that possibly it was one of the champion walkers, just starting out with his bow and arrow. Even if Mr. Falk has his bow, his arrow is not to be feared except by the "wild beasts" whose natures he would fain subdue by the "music of sweet sounds" which he would draw from this same "arrow." Mr. Falk is "busy" resting this summer in preparation for his coming season, which promises to be an extremely active one.

JULES FALK RUSTICATING.

Martha Steele at Ocean Grove and Asbury Park.

Martha S. Steele, the well known contralto, of Pittsburgh, Pa., has been busy filling engagements since she has been in Asbury Park, N. J. On Sunday evening, July 26, she made her first appearance at the Auditorium in Ocean Grove in a special sacred song service before an audience of more than five thousand people. Mrs. Steele says this is the largest audience before which she has appeared, and also that the Auditorium is the most wonderful building in which she has ever sung.

On Wednesday evening, August 5, and Friday evening, August 7, she sang in concerts at the Auditorium, Ocean Grove, and later on Friday evening sang at a reception held at the home of Mrs. Bruce Keator, Asbury Park, given for the members of the National Association of Organists. On Sunday, August 9, she sang at the First M. E. Church in the cantata, "The Christ Child," by C. B. Hawley, when Mr. Hawley himself conducted the solo choir and chorus.

Mrs. Steele also appeared as soloist with the Bostonian Orchestra, Belle Renfrew, conductor, at the Arcade, during the week from August 8 to August 14 inclusive.

Before returning to her home in Pittsburgh, Mrs. Steele will visit in Baltimore and Washington, returning the latter part of August to her summer home at "Valley Camp," where she has a cottage among the picturesque hills of the Alleghanies.

Zoe Fulton with Festival Orchestra.

A record-breaking audience listened to the concert of the Pittsburgh Festival Orchestra, Carl Bernthaler, conductor, recently, when, with Zoe Fulton, contralto, as soloist, it gave the following program:

March from symphony, Leonore ..... Raff
Overture, Martha ..... Flotow
Waltz, Weanner G'muth ..... Komzak
Aria, O Mio Fernando (La Favorita) ..... Donizetti
Miss Fulton.
Excerpts from The Tales of Hoffmann ..... Offenbach
Selection, Il Trovatore ..... Verdi
In the Garden ..... Lund
Aria, O Don Fatale (Don Carlos) ..... Verdi
Miss Fulton.
La Lettre de Manon ..... Gillet
Grand fantasy, Madame Butterfly ..... Puccini

Miss Fulton was in excellent voice and her numbers were especially enjoyed by her hosts of admirers in the vast throng. After her first aria, she sang with delightful interpretation Homer's charming composition, "Dearest." Following her aria from "Don Carlos," she gave as an encore the barcarolle from the "Tales of Hoffmann," with orchestral accompaniment. This latter encore the audience would fain have heard again, but Miss Fulton could not be induced to repeat it.

MARGARET HARRISON SOPRANO
68 West 56th Street New York

DONALD CHALMERS BASSO
Address for the Summer
29 Ocean Pathway, Ocean Grove, N. J.
RECITALS :: ORATORIO :: OPERA

EVAN WILLIAMS
TENOR
Akron - - - Ohio
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU

Horatio Connell
BASS BARITONE
Management HAENSEL & JONES, AEOLIAN HALL, NEW YORK

PHILIP SPOONER TENOR
205 West 57th St., New York City
'Phone, 6510 Columbus

GENEVIEVE FINLAY-STEWART
DRAMATIC CONTRALTO
HAENSEL & JONES Aeolian Hall, New York

THOMAS FARMER Baritone
Engaged for St. Paul by Handel Society, London, May 12th
Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York

PAUL DUFAULT
TENOR
Address 339 West 23rd Street Tel 7731 Chelsea

CAROLL BADHAM PREYER
TEACHER OF SINGING—Italian Method (Lamperti diploma)
Studio: 27 West 67th Street Tel. Columbus 1123

George CARRÉ
TENOR
15 East 10th St. Tel. 2927 Stuyvesant New York

Christine MILLER Contralto
Personal address: 1003 Heberton Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.
Management: HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York

REINALD WERRENRATH
BARYTONE
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th Street, - - New York

EDGAR
STILLMAN-KELLEY
STEINWAY HALL, NEW YORK, N. Y.

REBECCA DAVIDSON PIANISTE
Management: WALTER ANDERSON
171 West 57th Street New York

Joseph Baernstein Regneas
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
133 West 80th St. Tel. Schuyler 3786 New York City
Mr. Regneas will teach but 3 days weekly during July and August.
No interviews granted excepting by appointment.

BARONESS Olga von Türk-Rohn SOPRANO
"Europe's Famous Song Bird"
Season 1914-15 Now Booking
Management
Metropolitan Musical Bureau, New Brunswick, N. J.

CECIL FANNING Baritone
H. B. TURPIN Accompanist
Having returned from a year of concert giving in Germany, Italy and England, are
NOW AVAILABLE FOR RECITALS IN AMERICA
Address: H. B. TURPIN, Dayton, Ohio

SAN DIEGO VISITED BY MUSICAL COURIER LOS ANGELES CORRESPONDENT.

Enterprise and Activity in Musical Fraternity—Los Angeles Brevities.

1110 W. Washington Street,
Los Angeles, Cal., August 1, 1914.

Following the recent convention of the music teachers of California at San Diego, the writer spent a few days visiting in this charming city, meeting many of the musical fraternity. I wish it were possible to speak at length of the many interesting people it was my pleasure to see, and it is my hope some time to be able to do this.

San Diego boasts many well equipped and capable musicians. The MUSICAL COURIER representative, Tyndall-Gray, who owns one of the large music stores, and his wife, Florence Schinkel-Gray, a most gifted pianist, are among the important members of the musical colony. Any newcomer to San Diego seeks first Mr. and Mrs. Gray, and always finds a cordial reception and helpful advice. Mrs. Gray is one of the most successful piano teachers in the Southwest and has charge of the music at the Bishop School, one of the largest girls' schools in this section. She teaches, besides, a large private class. The Gray home is the rendezvous for all artistic people; their Sunday afternoon musicales have become an established feature.

Among the others whom I had the pleasure of meeting and visiting with was Gertrude Gilbert, president of the Amphion Club and recently appointed to represent music on the Woman's Board of the Panama-California Exposition. Miss Gilbert is non-professional, but she gives lavishly of her time and energy toward all musical advance; she has been the president of the Amphion Club for eight years, with the exception of two years spent abroad, and has been very much engrossed in the success and the working of the club.

CATHERINE SHANCK.

The Amphions bring most of the visiting artists to San Diego. The club calendar extends from October to April, and the local programs alternate with those of the international artists. These latter programs are given in the Spreckels Theatre, as beautiful a building as any in the Southwest. The former are given in the Wednesday Club House. Last season they presented Carreño, Charles W. Clark, Charles Wakefield Cadman and the Princess Redfeather, Emilio de Gogorza, Carrie Jacobs Bond and the Flonzaley Quartet; this gives a very fair idea of the quality of the concerts given.

Miss Gilbert is very popular by reason both of her ability and her genial personality. In the new position relative to the music of the exposition she must prove most efficient, and the choice has given universal satisfaction. The plans for the music of the exposition are still in embryo, but are forming.

Another of the musicians I very much enjoyed meeting was Paul Emmett McCarty, pianist, organist and teacher. Mr. McCarty, like many another, came West on a visit and has never returned to the East. He was a student at Syracuse, N. Y., and studied under such men as Dr. George Parker, Adolf Frey and Berwald. He played in church at Auburn, N. Y., and did a great deal of public work in the East before coming to San Diego, although he is still a very young man. He has been located in San Diego five years, playing all this time at St. Joseph's Church, where his monthly programs have been a feature. He has been very active in club work in San Diego; was director of the American Music Club and is on the board of the Amphion

FLORYN OPERA PRODUCING CO., Inc.
1482 Broadway, Room 1105
Three Opera Bouffe Co's in repertoire
Applications in writing from Aspirants with good voices and talent will be considered

MARGARET KEYES CONTRALTO
WITH CHICAGO GRAND OPERA CO.
Management, THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU 1 W. 34th St., New York
Personal Address, 600 West 138th St. Phone 1810 Audubon

Walter Henry Hall
Professor of Choral Music
Columbia University
Address, 49 Claremont Avenue

FLORENCE TRUMBULL
PIANISTE
Vorbereiterin (ASSISTANT) to Theodor Leschetizky
VIII Laudongasse 22 - - - Vienna, Austria

CORNELIUS VAN VLIET
Dutch Cellist
2514 Emerson Ave. S., Minneapolis, Minn.

Carl Pohlig
CONDUCTOR
Address: VILLA POHLIG, PLANEGG
near Munich, GERMANY

MARGARET HUSTON
SOPRANO
In Europe Season 1914-15

Nana GENOVESE
MEZZO SOPRANO. Formerly Manhattan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts, Recitals and Musicales
EXCLUSIVE MANAGEMENT, ANNIE FRIEDBERG, 1425 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

J. FRED WOLLE
ORGANIST
Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau
1 West 34th Street, New York

GIORGIO M. SULLI
Teacher of Carmen Melis, Clara Clemens, Mme. Martha de Lachmann, Reinhold von Warlich, Mario Sammarco, Lena Mason, Tarquinia Tarquini and other well-known singers of Grand Opera or Concerts. Musical Director of the Labor Temple Choir, New York. Teaching during summer, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday only. Special terms.
VOCAL STUDIO, 1425 Broadway
Metropolitan Opera House Building, New York
(Phone, 2762 Bryant)
Public Recitals throughout season for advanced pupils. Write for Circulars.

JAN SICKESZ DUTCH PIANIST
American Tour Begins October, 1914
Management ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, New York
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

Club. He has a large class of pupils and is in much demand musically and socially.

There were many others, such as Albert Conant, organist of the First Christian Science Church, president of the Music Teachers' Association of San Diego; Mrs. Zay Rector Bevitt, exponent of the Dunning system, who gives the courses in this work in many of the coast cities; Alice Farnham, who not only sings, but is a successful maker of violins; Willibald Lehmann, who came a year ago from Cincinnati and has established a good class in voice work and made an impression by his wonderful accompanying; Florence Norman Shaw, head of the Leipsic School for Violin and Piano; Claude Webster, formerly of Philadelphia, who is now one of the most successful piano teachers; Helen Engel Bosworth, violinist of rare ability; Chesley Mills, the interesting director of the Popular Symphony Orchestra; Blanche Lyons, soprano, for two years soloist with Ohlmeyer's Band at Coronado and now in charge of the voice department of the Bishop School; Aline Barnett Price, who has composed some of the most beautiful songs it has ever been my pleasure to hear. There are many others I would be glad to mention if space permitted, and it is my hope to be able to do this from time to time, when I visit San Diego.

MRS. SHANK'S PLANS FOR NEXT YEAR.

When seen in her Los Angeles studio on my return from San Diego, Catherine Shank, the popular soprano and teacher, spoke of her plans for next year. Early this fall Mrs. Shank will give a program herself. She is heard very frequently during a season at various affairs, but it has been some time since she has given an exclusive recital. Also she plans to give monthly pupils' recitals during the year and to do more ensemble work. This is a line in which she has been very successful and she will establish among the pupils some concerted combinations.

GERTRUDE GILBERT,
Of San Diego, president of Amphion Club and chosen to represent music on the Woman's Auxiliary Board of the Panama-California Exposition at San Diego.

Mrs. Shank announces that she has purchased a lot at Point Firmin, overlooking the harbor, and will build a summer home and studio with the intention of spending each year the warm months there, taking with her a limited number of pupils. This is a plan which has been tried successfully in the East and in Europe, and in no place in the world could more beautiful spots be found for summer study than in California.

Things remain quiet with the Los Angeles musicians, not much of interest going on.

ELLEN BEACH YAW TO GIVE CONCERT.

For the benefit of the Lark Elen Newsboys' Home, Ellen Beach Yaw will give a concert at her home in Covina on August 8. The concert will take place in the Italian gardens of her villa. She will be assisted by Oscar Seiling, violinist; Josephine Williams, reader; Celeste Ryus, Edith Noble, Myrtle Gonzales and a pageant of young women. Mme. Yaw is noted for her philanthropic work, and the Newsboys' Home is one of her pets.

MRS. DREYFUS GIVES MEMORIAM CYCLE.

Estelle Heartt-Dreyfus, assisted by Prof. Louis Dreyfus, reader, accompanied by Mrs. Hennion Robinson, gave at the Beverly Hills Hotel, Sunday evening, the song cycle "In Memoriam," by Alfred Tennyson, with music by Liza Lehmann.

MRS. BRADLEY IN ITALY.

Mrs. Charles Bradley, whose recital in the spring prior to her departure for Europe was reviewed in these columns, has made an immediate success in Italy. Her phenomenal contralto voice could not help but attract attention and she has been engaged to make her debut as Azucena in "Trovatore" at Desio, Italy, early in September. Mrs.

PAUL EMMETT McCARTY,
Teacher of organ, piano and theory, San Diego, Cal.

Bradley is essentially fitted for opera and a bright future is predicted for her by her many friends.

JANE CATHERWOOD.

Edith Thompson Arrives After Exciting Trip.

Edith Thompson, the Boston pianist, who has been spending the summer in Holland and Belgium, reached home safely last week on the Hamburg-American liner Cincinnati after an exciting and eventful voyage. Miss Thompson was especially fortunate in returning on this boat, as it was the last steamer to sail from Hamburg before the port was closed. It was not until they were four days out that the passengers learned of war being declared, and after that there was a constant state of excitement and thrills. Miss Thompson tells of staying up all night the last night on board so that she might be sure to be on hand to witness the "capture," if there was one.

Miss Bispham Is Safe in Italy.

Vida Bispham, daughter of the celebrated American baritone, cabled her father that she is safe in the mountains in Italy after a visit in Rome with Mrs. Raymond Maude, daughter of the great Swedish prima donna of a past generation—Jenny Lind. Although thoroughly an American, Miss Bispham was born in Florence, Italy, while her father was finishing his studies there. She is an excellent linguist, pianist and singer, although her father refuses to allow her to consider a professional career. Mr. Bispham has cabled her to remain until travel is less uncomfortable, as he regards her as perfectly safe where she is.

Rock of Ages.

Ethel, when she was four years old, used to like very much to go to church and especially enjoyed the singing. One day the choir sang "Rock of Ages, Cleft for Me," and after she got home she was heard singing very seriously, "Rock the babies, kept for me."—Exchange.

HOWARD WELLS
PIANIST AND TEACHER
Authorized representative of
LESCHETIZKY
KUFSTEINER, ST. 6 BERLIN W., GERMANY

ELEANOR HAZZARD
PEOCOCK
(SOPRANO)
Exclusive Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON
437 FIFTH AVENUE - - - NEW YORK CITY

OLGA AND HELENE CASSIUS
Vocal Instruction
Pupils prepared for the operatic and concert stage. Specialties: Placing of ruined voices, rectifying of wrong methods of breathing by articulation of consonants and voice inflection, and fundamental building of speaking voice. Send for Olga Cassius' "Die Erzieuhung der Stimme und Atmung."
Studio: Prager Str. 35, Berlin, W.

MAURICE ARONSON VERA KAPLUN
PIANIST-PEDAGOG CONCERT-PIANISTE
BERLIN, W. BOZENER ST. '8

VICTOR HEINZE
Send for free booklet "Studying Music Abroad"
Pianist and Teacher. Most modern principles. Thorough artistic education. Eminently successful.
PETER VISCHER STR. 19 BERLIN-FRIEDENAU

VITTORINO MORATTI
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
For four years the only assistant of the late G. B. LAMPERTI
Authorized representative of his method
BERLIN W., MOTZ ST. 53

GEORGE FERGUSSON
BARITONE
VOCAL INSTRUCTOR
Augsburger St., 64 Berlin W., Germany

SUMMER CLASS FOR THE
LESCHETIZKY METHOD
UNDER INSTRUCTION OF
MRS. POTTER-FRISSELL
IN NEW SCHANDAU-OSTRAU, SAXON SWITZERLAND, GERMANY
Address Villa 6, as above.
Class continues until October 15, 1914

King Clark Studios
Kurfürstendamm 63, Berlin, W.
Cable Address: KINGARK, BERLIN

MAESTRO FRANZ EMERICH VOCAL INSTRUCTION
and MADAME TERESA EMERICH
PUPILS PREPARED FOR THE OPERATIC AND CONCERT STAGE

Some Distinguished PUPILS of MAESTRO and MME. EMERICH:

CHARLES DALMORES, tenor, formerly Metropolitan Opera Co. and Covent Garden. Lohengrin at Bayreuth festival.
ADAM DIDUR, basso, Metropolitan Opera Co.
FRANCIS MACLENNAN, tenor, Berlin Royal Opera and Hamburg Opera.
*HANS TANZLER, tenor, Royal Opera, Karlsruhe.
CAVALLIERE MARIO SAMMARCO, baritone, formerly Metropolitan Opera Co. and Covent Garden.
PUTNAM GRISWOLD, basso, formerly Metropolitan Opera Co., Berlin Royal Opera and Covent Garden.
*MARGUERITA SYLVA, Carmen in the guest performance of Caruso at the Berlin Royal Opera.
MARGARETHE MATZENAUER, mezzo-soprano, Metropolitan Opera, New York.
*HELENA FORTI, soprano, Dresden Royal Opera.
MARY CAVAN, soprano, Hamburg Opera and Chicago Opera Co.
HEINRICH HENSEL, Dramatic Tenor, Hamburg, Stadt Theatre.

INSTRUCTION GIVEN IN ENGLISH, GERMAN, FRENCH AND ITALIAN
*The names marked * are those of pupils of Mme. Emerich.* 'Telephone Amt. Pfalzburg No. 2067 BERLIN, W.W. Nicelsbergerplatz 1

MARQUIS de TRABADELO
4. rue Marbeuf, Paris

Frederic Ponsot Seul professeur de chant diplome par Mme. Mathilde Marchesi 151 Rue de Rome

Jean Verd PIANIST 35 Rue Vineuse - Paris

CAMILLE DECREUS
47 rue de la Tour :: :: :: PARIS

THUEL BURNHAM
PIANIST
IN PARIS ENTIRE SUMMER
119 Rue de la Tour (XVI.) Paris

Charles BOWES Vocal Instruction
Studio: 10 Rue Herran, Paris

VON STEEGE VOICE PLACEMENT
6, Chaussée de la Muette Opera, Repertoire
Director, Compagnie Internationale Lyrique

E. BERTRAN 28, RUE COPERNIC PARIS
Specialist in Voice Placement Opera Concert

ELISABETH MACK Gesture Dramatic Action
LECTURE—RECITALS
French and English Readings America, October to April Address, care Musical Courier
(especially for opera students) Courses Begin April 1, 1914 Paris, 43, rue Michel Ange

Wager SWAYNE Pianists Prepared for Public Appearances
39 Rue de Prony (Parc Monceau) - - PARIS

DELMA-HEIDE
30 Rue Marbeuf (Champs-Elysées), Paris
Maestro di Bel Canto Italiano
Prepares Singers for Opera and Concert in Italian, French, German and English.

Jean de Reszke
53 Rue de la Faisanderie
Paris

L. d'AUBIGNÉ
Teacher of Singing
30, AVENUE KLEBER :: :: PARIS

LAMPERTI-VALDA
SCHOOL OF SINGING
61 Avenue Niel - - Paris, France
All Communications to Be Addressed to
Mme. GIULIA VALDA

ARTHUR
ALEXANDER
TENOR
Teacher of Singing
14, rue Raynouard, Paris

American Tour Beginning
February 1915
Management M. H. HANSON

Marcella Craft Is Interviewed.

Marcella Craft is one of the American artists who has succeeded in winning laurels abroad. Nearly fourteen years ago she went to Europe as a young girl to study for opera, aided by a number of philanthropic persons of her home town, Riverside, Cal. She was soon found to be wonderfully gifted, and to possess every requisite for winning success in her chosen field; and by progressive steps through the smaller opera houses, she finally arrived at what must be considered the very top of the European ladder, being a regular member of the staff of the Munich Opera, or rather the two Munich opera houses, the Hoftheatre and the Prinz Regenten Theatre, where the festivals are held.

Miss Craft has now come to America to make a tour of this country under the management of M. H. Hanson. Her tour begins, or will probably begin (for the European war may necessitate some changes), at Riverside, Cal., there being a strong feeling among the people of that city that they should have the honor of first hearing their native daughter, and of starting her out with their best wishes on her tour, which will take her across the continent, and will present her to the best audiences to be found in America, including those of the principal symphony orchestras.

Miss Craft was seen recently while in New York by a representative of the MUSICAL COURIER, and she said

MARCELLA CRAFT.

among other things, that in spite of her many years spent abroad and her great success in foreign fields, she is more American than ever, "although," she added, "in perhaps a saner way."

"I have no patience," she said, "with the Americans who are so ignorant about other countries that they think their own the only country in the world, and that nothing not American is worthy of consideration. I think that too intense a spirit of nationalism in art is a thing to be feared, as being certainly dangerous to art's best interests, and those who claim that America can get on without Europe are more influenced by self-interest than by any real love of their art. The way to take Europe is to pick out and adopt all that there is good in it and leave the rest, but that does not mean that the American should be, or ever is, placed at a disadvantage, provided he possesses equal merit. I do not believe that any American is really at present handicapped here in America because of his nationality. The fact that an artist is an American works neither to his good or bad fortune. An American is just as welcome on the stages of our opera houses as a person of any other nationality, and if ever the time comes when an American is accepted here simply because he is an American, it can result in nothing but unqualified injury."

Miss Craft was asked whether she would not miss her European home, and in answer to this she acknowledged that, of course, she had been extremely well placed in Munich, but after all she was glad to get back to her native country for a while.

"My contract with the Munich Opera was for five years, and is just now about to expire. I was anxious to get back to America and requested that two months be taken from it, so as to permit me to be in this country in time to pay some visits before my tour should begin. After an enormous amount of red tape, the matter having even to be taken to the king himself, this was allowed."

"The Munich Opera," continued Miss Craft, "is in a precarious position. The court is very poor and the king is no friend of opera. The present year may be the end of the Prinz Regenten Theatre, as that theatre does not find favor with the king, who looks upon opera merely as 'Ein noetiges Ubel—und nicht so sehr noetig.' That is: 'a necessary evil, and not so very necessary.'"

Speaking of her life in Munich, Miss Craft said: "Of course, the work at the theatre kept me very busy all the time and I lived very quietly. I had a large terrace and amused myself doing garden work on it. I had a beautiful bed of flowers that I kept in order entirely myself. Of course, I will miss that, but even more than that I am anxious about my trunks, which are all in Munich,

JOHN HEATH PIANIST AND TEACHER
(Care Paris Office, Musical Courier)

ARNOLDE STEPHENSON SOPRANO
Management: Daniel Mayer, London A. Dandelot, Paris

MARTINUS SIEVEKING Pianist
INSTRUCTION BY A NEW METHOD.
Pupils limited. Results guaranteed.
36, rue Theophile Gautier, Paris, XVI.

WILLY von SADLER
TEACHER OF SINGING (Italian Method)
STUDIO 23, rue de l'Universite - - - PARIS

REGINA DE SALES TEACHER OF SINGING
Pupils Prepared for Opera, Oratorio, Concert
40 Rue de Villejust (Ave. du Bois de Boulogne), Paris.

THE FRANCES E. DEVERELL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS
9 rue de Chaillot. Paris, France (Champs-Elysées). Exclusive residence district. Thorough French Course. Art lectures in great galleries. Season box at Opera. Travel classes. Address Mrs. G. J. Deverell, 109 Cedar St., Lapeer, Michigan, or Mlle. Deville Chabrol, 82 rue Vaneau, Paris.

GABRIEL LAPIERRE
(With Melba and Kubelik in America, Winter 1913-14)
Teacher of Singing
15 bis Boul. Jules Sandeau - - PARIS

Mme. KATE ROLLA
Former Prima-Donna, Covent Garden, London; Imperial Opera House, Moscow and St. Petersburg; San Carlo, Naples; Metropolitan, New York, etc.
PUPIL OF MARCHESI
Voice Culture, Opera or Concert, Repertoire, Diction.
Paris Studio
Pupils taken En Pension. Address, 11 rue Scribe.

OSCAR SEAGLE
"New House," Bramber, Sussex, England, from June to September, 1914
IN AMERICA OCTOBER TO MAY, 1914-1915
Managamant: Loudon Charlton, Carnegie Hall, New York

SHEET MUSIC IN PARIS
The only store carrying a large stock of German, Russian, English and American music as well as French music.
MAX ESCHIG
TWO STORES—
13 Rue Lafitte (Near Boulevard des Italiens)
48 Rue de Rome (Near the Conservatory)

CHARLES W. CLARK
AMERICAN TOUR SEASON 1914-15
BARITONE Dr. Frederick Clark, Personal Representative
12 Rue Leonard de Vinci, :: PARIS

including all of my costumes, orchestra scores, and other things which would be very necessary to me just now. I do not know whether I will be heard in America in opera, although I have had several tentative offers. Opera has been my especial field and I know most of my roles, about forty of them, in three languages, French, German and Italian, so that I am ready to go on in any language that is required. Almost the only operas of which I do not know the leading roles are the Wagner works. In these I took only small parts as required by my contract with the Munich authorities. I was greatly shocked and distressed at the assassination of the Archduke Ferdinand, as I had appeared in a gala performance before him only two weeks earlier."

One of Miss Craft's pleasant reminiscences was her creation in alternation with another artist of the role of Suzanne in Wolf-Ferrari's "Secret," under the personal direction of the composer, the orchestra being conducted by Mottl. Wolf-Ferrari may almost be considered a resident of Munich, as he has spent many years there, and several of his works have been given their first performance in the Munich Opera. Miss Craft says that Mottl used to be an incessant cigarette smoker, and always had a cigarette in his mouth, except when he was on duty at the opera house where smoking is not permitted. During a rehearsal of the "Secret of Suzanne," smoking cigarettes was, of course, taking place constantly on the stage, as the artists had to accustom themselves to do it naturally, as if they were themselves inveterate smokers. Miss Craft, by the way, said that she had never smoked a cigarette in her life before, and had actually to practise the art just as she had to rehearse her role. During one of the rehearsals, Mottl watched them enjoying, or appearing to enjoy, their cigarettes on the stage, and finally remarked in a dry voice, "Sie haben es gut da oben"—"You're in luck up there."

During a rehearsal of this work, Miss Craft asked for some advice from the composer, but noticed as she spoke that Wolf-Ferrari was entirely absent-minded. A moment later he apologized for his impoliteness, saying, "I am hearing it for the first time." And at the end of the rehearsal, he exclaimed, referring to the orchestration, "Es ist eine Parfumierte Cigarette"—("It is a perfumed cigarette.")—an excellent description. Miss Craft adds that Wolf-Ferrari himself calls for modern costuming in this opera, as cigarette smoking became prevalent only in recent years.

At this point the interview had necessarily to be cut short, as this gracious artist had to leave to catch her train for the West.

George Hamlin Safe in Milan.

George Hamlin is shown in the accompanying snapshot, standing in front of the house where Tiziano is said to have been born in 1477.

The picture at the present time is doubly interesting, as it was taken in Cortina, Tyrol, just before the European war broke out. A cable received from the popular American tenor announces that he and his family are safe in Milan, Italy.

GEORGE HAMLIN IN CORTINA, TYROL.

A man who thinks extremely well of himself is an egotist; a man who can make the world think extremely well of him is a genius.—Winnipeg Town Topics.

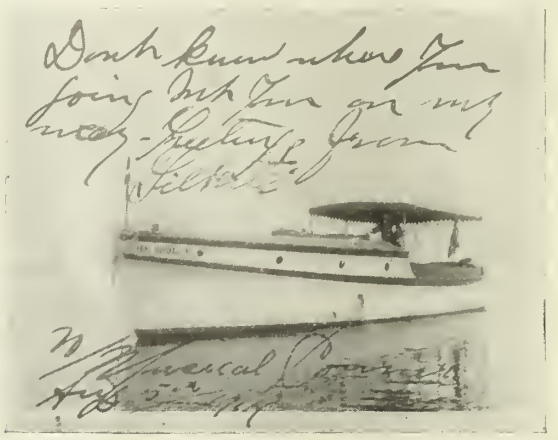
Vera Barstow at Beverly.

Vera Barstow, the noted young American violinist, is spending the month of August at the home of Mrs. Robert Evans, Beverly, Mass.

A NEW SUMMER PHOTO OF VERA BARSTOW.

Marie Kaiser in Italy.

Manager Walter Anderson has been much concerned about his soprano, Marie Kaiser, who sailed for Europe early in July, and though supplied with plenty of funds, it was nearly all in express checks and letters of credit. No word has been received except a post card dated Rome, July 23. Miss Kaiser had with her a letter of introduction to the American Consul, and the probabilities are that she and her mother, who is with her, will be able to secure passage home in time to fill the engagements booked for her in October.



MARIE KAISER EN ROUTE TO EUROPE.

PIANOS IN PARIS
Weber & Steck Pianos. Pianolas. Pianola-Pianos
We invite comparison with any and all French makes both as regards quality and price.
Renting for Music Students a Specialty
THE AEOLIAN CO., 32, AVENUE DE L'OPERA

"Captain" Hallett Gilberté on His Way.

Hallet Gilberté in his forty-foot motor boat, near his summer home, "Melody Manse," Lincolnville Beach, Maine, is herewith presented to readers of the MUSICAL COURIER. He is having a beautiful summer, fishing, sailing, and "with a house full of company," as he writes. The Gilbertés are genial hosts and enjoy nothing better than congenial company. Mr. Gilberté is assembling a program of "All American Songs" for his appearance this coming season, and including works by Chadwick, Cadman, Foote, Huhn, MacFadyen, Russell, MacDermid, etc., also a group especially written for him, by Kramer, DeVere, Herzberg and Claude Warford. He will also sing four of his own new songs, comprising his "Sea Song Cycle." This will furnish a program of much interest and variety, and should appeal to a wide circle of lovers of vocal music.

Spalding Honored.

Albert Spalding, the American violinist, originally made his contract for three months for his American tour, owing to his many European engagements, but on account of the war conditions in Europe, he will undoubtedly remain in America for the entire concert season. Fortunately Mr. Spalding arrived in America before the war difficulty began.

Andre Benoist relates a very interesting incident which occurred in St. Petersburg, where Mr. Spalding was playing. After the concert, a small, energetic little man came to the stage and with enthusiastic gesticulations said, "Why do American people want to hear foreign artists when they have so great an artist as you." When Mr. Spalding learned that the modest little man was the great pedagogue, Leopold Auer, who was in attendance with his class, he felt the magnitude of this compliment.

Some Band.

Mere symphony orchestra enthusiasts may be envious of the Kuntuckians who have the privilege of hearing an organization characterized in the Kingman Herald:

"The band is getting on fine. At the concert Friday night they played No. 10 in the black book and No. 23 in the red book and nobody missed a note—not even Salty Wilson, who is usually asleep half the time."—Houston (Tex.) Chronicle.

MRS. KING CLARK Mezzo Soprano
American Tour
WHOLE SEASON 1914-15
Management, M. H. Hanson
437 Fifth Ave. New York

KATHARINE COODSON
"A POETESS OF THE PIANO"
In America January to April 1915
TOUR NOW BOOKING
Management: Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York.
KNABE PIANO

IN ALL THE KEYS.

Emma Thursby and her sister Ina have been spending five delightful weeks with Clara Louise Kellogg-Strakosch, at New Hartford, Conn. Miss Thursby did not go abroad this season, which was most fortunate, considering the troublous times. She is in New York for a few days weekly to hear young singers who have been waiting for her advice. This week she and her sister go on a cruise with Mr. and Mrs. Henry Doscher, on their yacht "Gurah," and later to Vineyard Haven as guests of Mrs. John R. MacArthur. Miss Thursby will begin her studio work in September. She has many pupils from the West and South who are anxious to begin then, and on every trip to the city she finds pupils waiting for her help. Former pupils abroad continue to enjoy great success, viz., Marta Wittkowska at Covent Garden, London, and Meta Reddisch in Rome and Florence, since her triumph in South America.

Margaret Ashmead Mitchell gave a recital at Wayne, Pa., with great success. The Wayne papers spoke of her excellent voice and varied program, the beauty of her tones and charm of manner, "which has made her such a favorite in musical circles, and did great credit to her teacher, who was present."

Harry Johnson Spanell, an enthusiastic former pupil of Miss Thursby, now director of singing at the Baylor University, Waco, Texas, recently conducted a splendid performance of "The Holy City," by Gaul. The University chorus and orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Spanell, was assisted by Mrs. Frank Blankenberg, soprano; Mrs. James Bennett, contralto; David Ormisher, tenor, and Joseph Rucker, bass, all of Dallas, Texas. The audience was made up of people from all over the State, who were most liberal with applause and deep appreciation. The University Chorus is ranked among the first in the State, and to Mr. Spanell belongs the credit for bringing such a musical treat to that city.

After finishing a very busy summer season of six weeks' teaching at the University of Vermont, and giving several of their joint recitals, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Nichols, the well known recital pair, will fill a series of eight engagements in the central part of Pennsylvania, beginning August 18, at Newport. They will then take a few weeks rest near Ocean Grove before beginning their fall work. In November they will make their first joint recital tour of the season 1914-15, and will go as far west as Arkansas, filling engagements en route.

Emma A. Dambmann left her bungalow at Musicolony, August 1, going to Watch Hill, R. I., with her husband, Hermann G. Friedman, the New York attorney, where they are enjoying the surf swimming (in which Mme. Dambmann is expert), playing cards, tea dansants, and automobiling with friends. She enjoys all this temporarily, but for one of her vigorous temperament, does not care for many weeks of it. In the early autumn she will announce something of special interest to singers, managers, etc.

Younghansz's Orchestra, with William Casey, Jr., baritone and pianist, contributes greatly to the enjoyment of guests of Hotel Martin, Utica. A recent program included such pieces as Suppé's overture, "Morning, Noon, Night," excerpts from "Madcap Princess," and Chaminade's "Air de Ballet." They play "request numbers" of all kinds, apparently having an unlimited repertoire.

George J. Kochl, of Syracuse, N. Y., is musical director of the excellent orchestra at Hotel St. Charles, Oneida Lake, N. Y. They play at lunch and dinner, and have superior soloists among their number.

Max Jacobs and his string quartet took part in a concert at Stony Brook, L. I., not long ago, with the success which always accompanies their playing. The quartet played four times, and Mr. Jacobs gave two violin solos, followed by an encore piece. Rafael Daiz, the Spanish tenor, also took part.

Vernon Archibald, the baritone and teacher of New York, is summering at Marquette, Mich., studying with his old singing master, L. A. Torrens. He expects to remain there until the last Sabbath of September, when he returns to resume his position at Madison Avenue M. E. Church, New York. Friends of Mr. Archibald have seen some beautiful trout, the result of his piscatorial ability.

Eleanor Patterson, the American contralto, had a most successful experience at Short Beach, where she sang at the home of the noted writer, Ella Wheeler Wilcox, with whom she is a great favorite. Miss Patterson has several pictures of herself and Mrs. Wilcox, taken together, which she treasures highly.

Platon Brounoff conducted the City Orchestra August 6 at the Recreation Pier, 129th street, New York. Each number was received with acclaim, so that fourteen pieces were played, closing with "America," when the audience wildly applauded orchestra and conductor. The concerts continue Thursdays at 3 p. m.

Miss Pettingill's "Music Methods of Beginners," illustrated with color materials, embraces also the departments for piano, voice, organ, stringed instruments, harmony and composition, at her studio in the Musical Art Building, St. Louis. Teachers' classes began August 15.

Many musical numbers featured the program of the recent British Club meeting at Providence, R. I. Quartets and duets, vocal, piano and concertina, were among the selections given. The meeting was voted a success.

A new choir composed of some of the best vocal talent of Fredericksburg, Va., has been organized and may be heard at St. Mary's Catholic Church, where their music adds greatly to the enjoyment of the service.

A most interesting musicale was given recently at Five Points, Birmingham, Ala., the chorus, which was assisted by the local orchestra, numbering about fifty persons.

The Dallas (Texas) Country Club has been giving a series of band concerts during the summer months for members of the club, their families and visiting golfers, who come from various points in Texas and from adjoining States to participate in the various golf tournaments. These concerts are given by Paul Harris' band and are greatly enjoyed by those privileged to attend.

A feature of the annual convention of the supreme council, Knights of Columbus, which met recently in St. Paul, Minn., was the concert by the St. Louis Choral Club, assisted by Frances Vincent Coveny, soprano; Francis J. Rosenthal, basso, and Mrs. Henry C. Soucheray, pianist. The club gave the following numbers: "On the Sea" (Dudley Buck), "A Cavalier Song" (Homer B. Hatch), "Song of Death" (Bach), "The Christian Martyrs" (L. de Rille), and "The Banks of Allan Water" (C. E. Horn).

At Fairfield, N. Y., a concert was given by Memoli's Band, under the auspices of the Music Study Club. A large crowd was in attendance and was most enthusiastic.

A benefit concert was given recently at Lynn, Mass., with the Oleland Musical Trio, of Chelsea, Mass., as the main attraction.

During the concert at Bienville Square, Mobile, Ala., the chairman of the music committee of the Chamber of Commerce of that city was successful in collecting funds to insure future concerts at this point.

At a recent concert, given at Capital Park, Binghamton, N. Y., the following numbers were played. March from "Tannhäuser" (Wagner), overture, "Italian in Algiers" (Rossini); selection, "Traviata" (Verdi); valse danseuse (Miles); Andante from Surprise symphony (Haydn); "Dance of the Serpents" (Boccalari).

At a recent Sunday evening service at the First Baptist Church, of Long Branch, N. J., Charlotte Anthony, of Rochester, N. Y., whistled several solos, much to the delight of every one. Other musical numbers were furnished by Ethel Shurry, Chester Dennis, Russell Woolley and the Apollo Male Quartet.

Under the auspices of the Men's Bible Class, an interesting musical program was given at the Bethany Baptist Church, of Scranton, Pa.

A pleasing recital was given by the pupils of the summer class of Edna T. Bradfield, Wilmington, Del., which was largely attended; among the numbers heard were selections by Beethoven, Mozart, Wieniawski, Deberiot, etc.

At the age of sixty-nine, Martha B. Swiezewski, of Kansas City, Mo., never misses an hour a day of practice on the piano. Mrs. Swiezewski studied fourteen years under Louis Koehler at Koenigsburg, Germany, and then taught music for twenty-five years in Europe. After making her home in America, she continued to teach until recent years. She studies, talks, thinks and lives music and expects to continue doing so until the last.

An association has been organized entitled the Ontario (Canada) Musical Festival Association, the objects being the encouragement of music in all its branches by means of annual musical competitions and festivals.

Eva Holman has been tendered the position of soprano soloist in the quartet of the First Presbyterian Church, of Freeport, Ill., much to the delight of her many friends and admirers in that city.

Periodic concerts are given by the Catholic Sailors' Club, Montreal, Canada. These concerts are greatly enjoyed both by participants and audience.

Blanche Rae Edwards, John C. Thomas, Sara Edwards, Elfreda Wegner, Edna Temple, Harlan P. Briggs, and Vernon Dalhart were principals at a recent presentation at Olympic Park, Newark, N. J., of Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Goldoliers." The work of these artists was most enjoyable.

Mrs. Scott, Quanta McCue, George Freeman, and Lou A. Werner made up the quartet which was heard recently in a sacred concert at Chattanooga, Tenn.

Works by Wagner, from Flotow, Hollins, Schumann, Saint-Saëns, etc., were played at an organ recital given by Dr. Edwin Arthur Kraft, city organist of Atlanta, Ga., in that city.

Elsie Woodcock, a native of Wheeling, W. Va., has recently returned home after a number of years spent in Germany, where she received instruction from Xaver Scharwenka.

Under the direction of Mrs. J. Harry Gardner, the Riverside (Fla.) Etude Club gave an interesting benefit musicale consisting of violin, vocal and ensemble piano music. The program was varied and enthusiastically applauded by a representative audience.

Trinity Church, Waterbury, Mass., is the possessor of a new organ. Sydney Webber is organist at this church.

WANTED

WANTED.—A position by a female violinist in an educational institution in the United States. Has a European education, training and experience. Credentials and references furnished. Address "S. A. M.," care MUSICAL COURIER.

WANTED—There is a splendid opportunity for a good piano, violin or singing teacher to connect with a musical institution of the highest standing in one of the leading cities of the United States by investing moderate sum in the institution. Only men or women of superior ability, culture and refinement considered. Steady income assured to the proper persons. All communications confidential. Send photo, credentials, telephone number and complete particulars to "Cooperative Opportunity," care of MUSICAL COURIER, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York.

HOTEL POWHATAN WASHINGTON D.C.
HOTEL OF AMERICAN IDEALS
The Hotel Powhatan is the best, at the same time the newest, hotel in Washington.
Famous Pennsylvania Avenue, at the junction of 18th and H Streets, affords the site for this most luxurious and modern hotel.
Write for booklet with map.
CLIFFORD M. LEWIS, Manager

Vocal Studio and Opera School (Italian Method)
KARL SCHNEIDER
PHILADELPHIA: 1705 Chestnut St. October to May MUENCHEN, Germany: 9 Friedrich Str June to Sept 15

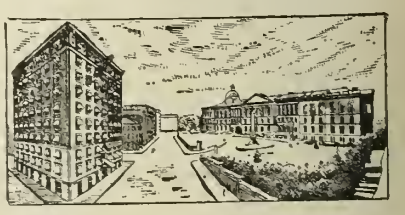
ZOE FULTON
PRIMA DONNA CONTRALTO
Direction: Marc Lagen, 500 5th Ave., New York
Per. Add.: Pennsylvania College for Women, Pittsburg, Pa.

DAVID H. SCHRYVER Phone
Voice Production, Diction, Sight Reading, etc:
76 Rodney St., (20th Year) Brooklyn, N. Y.



WALTER SPRY
Piano Lecture-Recitals
Address Fine Arts Bldg. Chicago

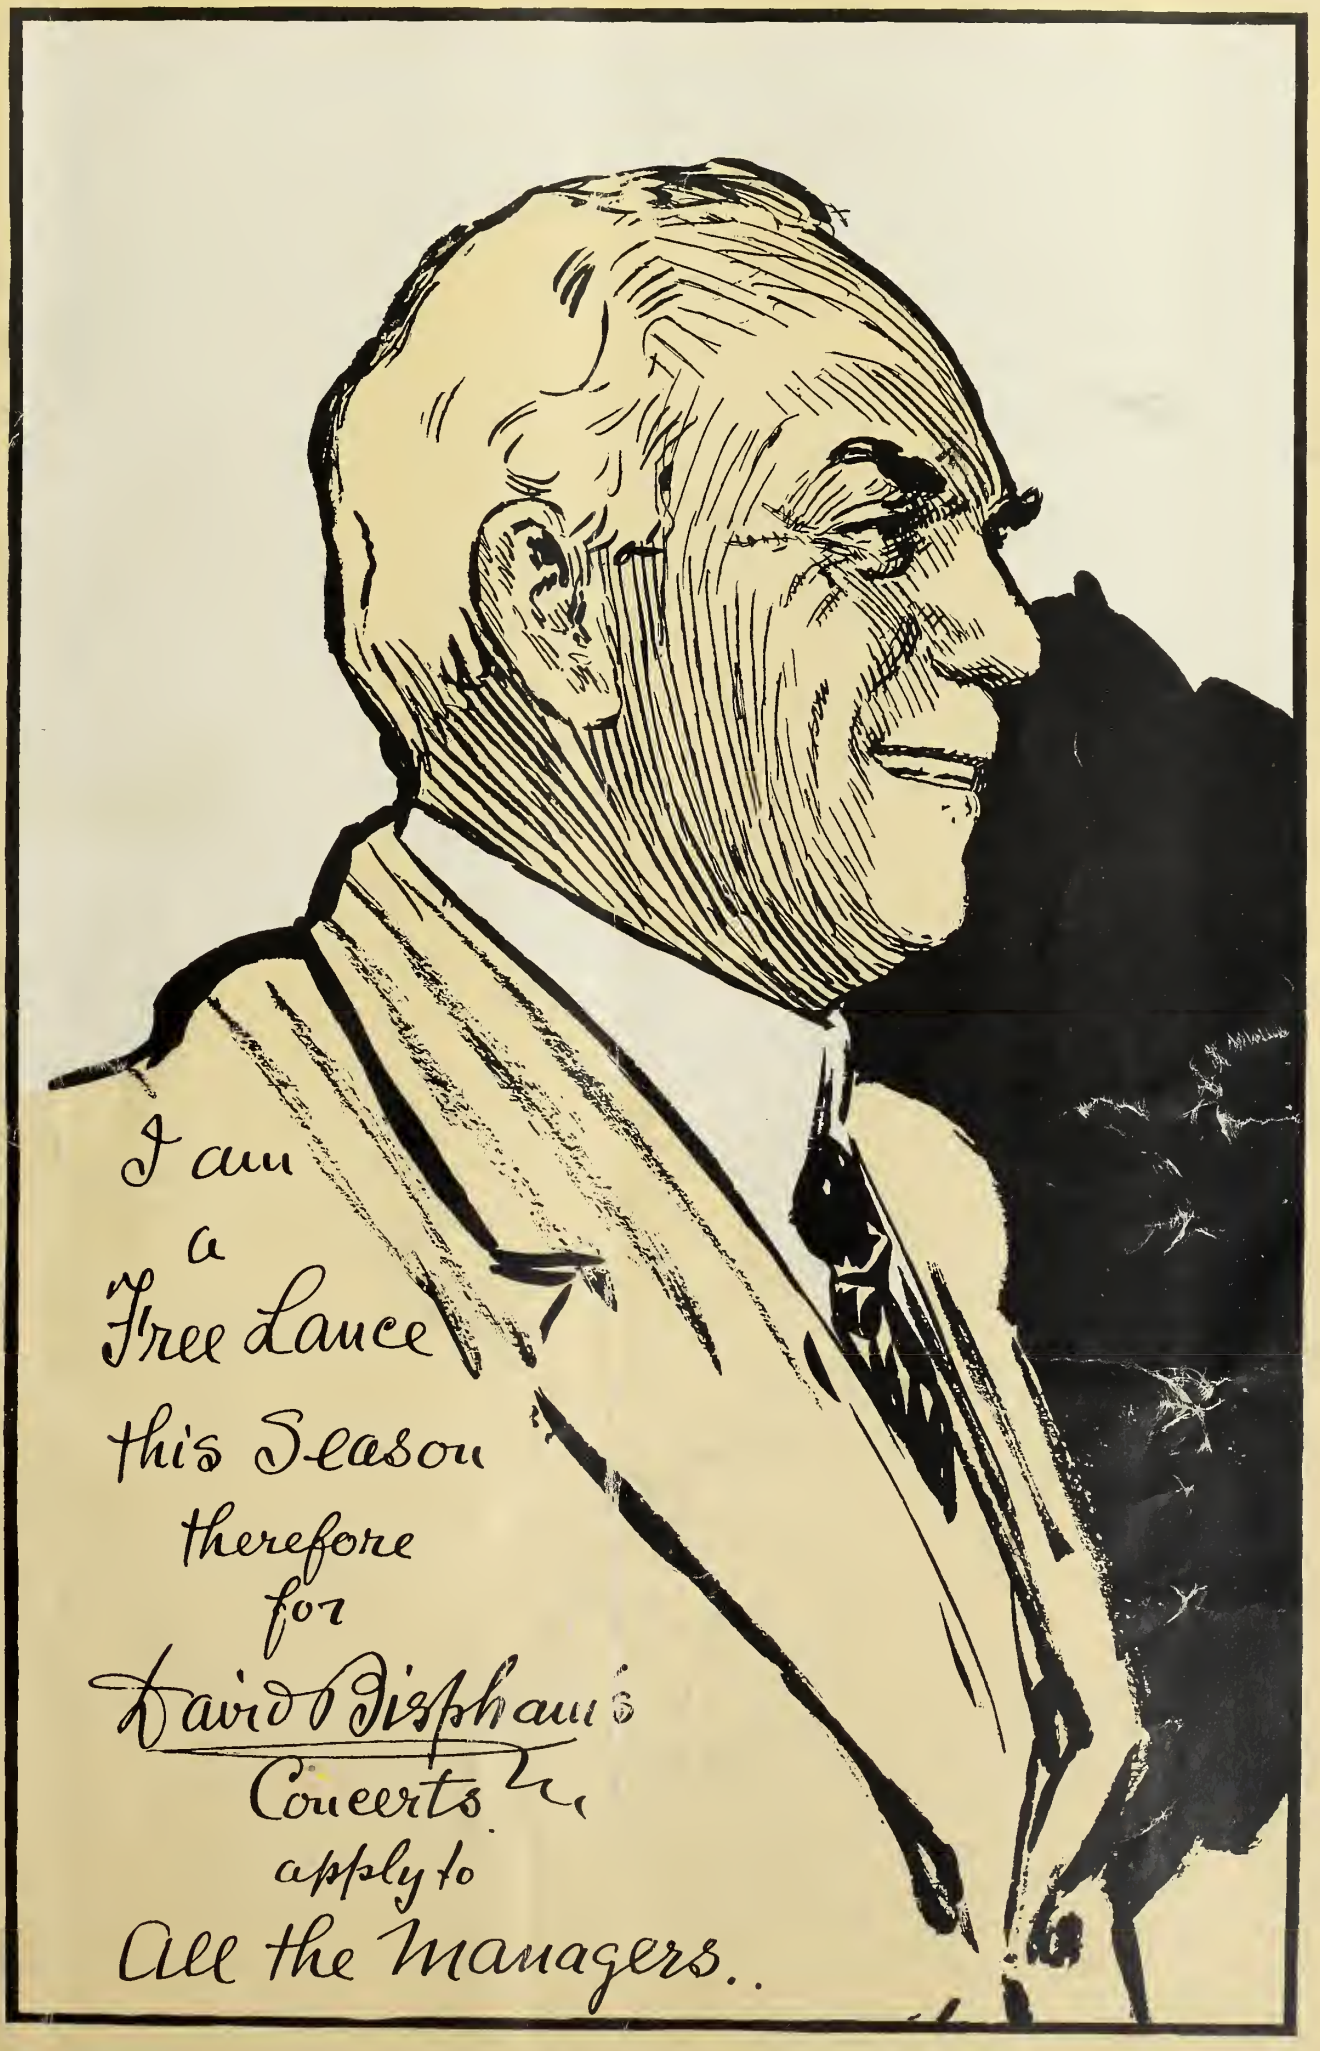
CELÉNE LOVELAND
Pianist
4620 Lake Park Ave., Chicago
Phone, Kenwood 5871

HENRY P. SCHMITT
VIOLIN INSTRUCTION
Residence Studio: 203 W. 81st St., New York. Tel. Schuyler 9517

E. W. REICHLIN CONCERT ORGANIST
Pupil Guilmant and Widor
Accompanist to Leading Artists
16 East 88th Street Tel. 3300 Lenox

GAMBLE CONCERT PARTY BOOKING EVERYWHERE
CHARLES WILSON GAMBLE, Pilot - - East End, Pittsburg, Pa.

Commonwealth Hotel
OPPOSITE STATE HOUSE, BOSTON, MASS.
Offers room with hot and cold water for $1.00 per day and up, which includes free use of public shower baths.
Nothing to equal this in New England
Rooms with private baths for $1.50 per day and up; suites of two rooms and bath for $4.00 per day and up.
ABSOLUTELY FIREPROOF
Strictly a Temperance Hotel. Send for Booklet
STORER F. CRAFTS - - Gen'l Mgr.



UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS
28 AUG 1914

MUSICAL COURIER

A WEEKLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND ITS ALLIED ARTS

Thirty-fifth Year | Price 15 Cents | Subscription $5.00 | Foreign, $6.25 Annually

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 8 | NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 26, 1914 | WHOLE NO. 1796

INTERNATIONAL MUSICAL AND EDUCATIONAL AGENCY.
Church, Concert and School Positions Secured.
MRS. BABCOCK,
CARNEGIE HALL, New York.
Telephone: 2634 Columbus.

CLIFFORD DEMAREST, F. A. G. O.,
ORGANIST—COMPOSER.
Recitals—Instruction.
Church of The Messiah, 34th St. & Park Av., N.Y.C.

M. F. BURT SCHOOL
Sight-Singing, Ear-Training, Musical Stenography. Normal courses in Public and Private School Music. Special coaching for church trials.
New York School, 1202 Carnegie Hall.
Address Brooklyn School, 1202 Lefferts Place.

PAUL SAVAGE,
VOICE CULTURE.
803 Carnegie Hall,
New York.

H. RAWLINS BAKER,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Studio, 622 Aeolian Hall.
Tel. 8296 Bryant.

MAX KNITEL-TREUMANN,
BARITONE.
Voice Culture—Art of Singing.
Studio, Carnegie Hall.
Mail address: Fifth Ave., New Rochelle, N. Y.

MRS. HENRY SMOCK MISS SUSAN S.
B O I C E.
VOCAL STUDIOS.
43 E. 27th St., N. Y., Tel. 1977 Mad. Sq.

EUGENIE PAPPENHEIM,
THE CELEBRATED PRIMA DONNA.
Voice Culture in All Its Branches.
The Evelyn, 101 W. 78th St., New York City.
Telephone: 7048 Schuyler.

MARY HISSEM DE MOSS,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
106 W. 90th St. Phone, 3552 River.
Exclusive m'g't of Haensel & Jones, Aeolian Hall.

MME. MINNA SCHLOEMANN,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION—Serious Pupils Only.
10 Manhattan Ave., N. Y. Phone, 4845 Riverside.

HENRY T. FLECK,
Head Musical Department,
Normal College, New York.
69th St. and Park Ave. - - - Tel. 2443 Plaza.

FLORENCE E. GALE,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals and Concerts.
Instruction, Leschetizky Method.
151 W. 70th St. Telephone, 5331 Columbus.

HATTIE CLAPPER MORRIS,
TEACHER OF SINGING IN ALL BRANCHES.
1730 Broadway, Cor. 55th St.
Telephone, 4117 Columbus.

ZIEGLER INSTITUTE OF NORMAL SINGING
MME. ANNA E. ZIEGLER, Director.
Met. Opera House Bldg., 1425 B'way, New York.
Tel. 1274 Bryant.

HENRIETTA SPEKE-SEELEY,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
[illegible] Broadway—Metropolitan Opera House.
[illegible] 85th St. Phone, [illegible] Lenox.

GRAND CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC,
113 West 85th St., New York. Tel. 4152 Schuyler.
Special course for teachers and professionals. Degrees granted. Thorough course for beginners.
Dr. B. Eberhard, Pres. (Thirty-ninth year.)

ELIZABETH K. PATTERSON,
SOPRANO. TEACHER OF SINGING.
Studio: 257 West 104th Street.
'Phone, 8101 Riverside.

JANET BULLOCK WILLIAMS,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
122 Carnegie Hall.

JAMES P. DUNN.
Composer and Organist, St. Patrick's Church, Jersey City. Instruction, Piano, Organ. Theory and Sight Singing. (Specialty Gregorian Chant and Catholic Church Music.) Phone, 782-R Bergen.

SIGNOR FILOTEO GRECO,
THE ART OF SINGING.
Studio: 62 East Thirty-fourth Street, New York.
Telephone: 4879 Murray Hill.

LOUISE KELLOGG,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
1211 Carnegie Hall. Tel. 1350 Columbus.

MORITZ E. SCHWARZ,
Ass't Organist, Trinity Church, New York.
RECITALS AND INSTRUCTION.
Address Trinity Church, New York.

ADOLF GLOSE,
Concert Pianist, Piano Instruction. Coach for professional and advanced singers.
Residence studio: 81 Morningside Ave., City.
'Phone, 2193-J Morningside.

LISBET HOFFMANN,
PIANIST.
12 Pierce Street, Stapleton (Staten Island).

DUDLEY BUCK,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
Aeolian Hall, 33 West 42nd St.
Phone, 7498 Bryant. New York.
Special Summer Course.

WILBUR A. LUYSTER,
SIGHT SINGING SPECIALIST.
(Galin-Paris-Chevé Method).
Instructor 8 years at Metropolitan Opera Co. All Singers taught to read (church or otherwise), Rhythm, Ear Training, Supervisors' Course.
Tuesday and Friday Classes. 64 E. 34th St., N. Y.
Tel. 5469-J Bedford. 127 Quincy St., Brooklyn.

MISS EMMA THURSBY,
SOPRANO.
Will receive a limited number of pupils.
Residence, 34 Gramercy Park.
Phone, 3187 Gramercy. New York City.

BRUNO HUHN,
[illegible] West 96th St., New York.
STYLE, DICTION, REPERTOIRE, ETC., TO VOCALISTS.
[illegible] during the Summer.

DR. A. MADELEY RICHARDSON
Member of the Faculty of Institute of Musical Art.
VOICE PRODUCTION AND TONE-PLACING.
Teacher of singing, from the earliest stages to Opera, Oratorio and Recital work.
Tel. Morningside 7587. Studio, 490 Riverside Drive.

CLAUDE WARFORD,
TENOR.
Metropolitan Opera House.
1425 Broadway, New York.

CARL M. ROEDER,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
607 Carnegie Hall and 423 East 140th St.

FREDERICK E. BRISTOL,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
No. 143 West 42d St., New York.

MR. CHARLES LEE TRACY,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Certified Teacher of the LESCHETIZKY METHOD.
Studio: Carnegie Hall, - - New York City.

JOSEPH PIZZARELLO,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Voice Developed—Style, Opera.
851-852 Carnegie Hall, New York.

WILLIAM NELSON BURRITT,
VOICE SPECIALIST
AND REPERTOIRE BUILDER.
128A East 19th Street.
Tel. Gramercy 3848.

WALTER L. BOGERT,
Ex-President of N. Y. State Music Teachers' Ass'n.
TEACHER OF SINGING.
Baritone. Lectures and Recitals.
130 Claremont Ave., New York. Tel. 291 Morn'side.
Tuesday and Friday, Aeolian Hall.

Piano Instruction Telephone
Theory of Music 7280 Schuyler
CARL HAHN,
Studio: 172 West 79th St. (The Avonel).

F. W. RIESBERG,
INSTRUCTION—PIANO, ORGAN, HARMONY.
With the "Musical Courier"; Sec'y Manuscript Society; Organist Central Baptist Church, New York. 439 Fifth Ave.; Tel. 4292 Murray Hill.
Residence, Park Hill, Yonkers, N. Y.

JESSIE DAVIS,
PIANIST.
Concerts—Recitals—Lessons.
Studio: 701 Pierce Bldg., Boston.

CARL FIQUÉ, PIANO
KATHERINE NOAK-FIQUE,
Dramatic Soprano
FIQUE MUSICAL INSTITUTE,
128 DeKalb Avenue, Brooklyn.

MISS GENEVIEVE BISBEE,
—Leschetizky Method—
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
Also [illegible] number of resident pupils received.
[illegible] 6th St. 'Phone, 1369 Plaza.

WARD LEWIS,
ACCOMPANIST—With Mr. David Bispham season 1914. With Riheldaffer-Gailey Co. touring West, Summer 1914.
547 Riverside Drive, New York.
Phone, 3753 Morningside.

ALICE GARRIGUE MOTT,
ART OF SINGING.
172 West 79th St., New York.

ESPERANZA GARRIGUE,
ART OF SINGING.
Heathcote Hall, 609 West 114th St., New York.
Tel. 7814 Morningside.
(Bet. Broadway and Riverside Drive.)

MME. EMMA A. DAMBMANN,
(MRS. HERMANN G. FRIEDMANN.)
CONTRALTO.
Vocal Instruction, Concerts.
Residence Studio, Hotel Calumet
Phone: Columbus 1628. 340 West 57th St.

THE NEW YORK INSTITUTE FOR VIOLIN PLAYING, PIANO AND VOCAL CULTURE, 230 East 62d Street
Complete musical education given to students from the begining to the highest perfection.
F. & H. CARRI, Directors.

MARY T. WILLIAMSON,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals, Concerts, Instruction.
Leschetizky Method. 21 East 75th St.
'Phone, 1302 Lenox.

MR. AND MRS. THEO. J. TOEDT,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Home Studio: 163 East 62d St., New York.

T. TERTIUS NOBLE,
ORGANIST AND MASTER OF THE CHOIR.
Lessons in Organ, Theory and Composition.
St. Thomas' Church, Fifth Ave. and 53d St.

VON DOENHOFF,
VOICE—HELEN. PIANO—ALBERT.
1186 Madison Ave.
'Phone: 1332 Lenox.

DANIEL VISANSKA, VIOLINIST.
Nine years of successful teaching and concertizing in Berlin. Will accept engagements and a limited number of pupils.
Address: 25 West 126th St., New York.
Phone, Harlem 3427.
[In Philadelphia Mondays. Address 1821 Diamond St.]

ELENA DE OLLOQUI,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
111 East 62d St., New York. Tel., 2285 Plaza.

MME. LISETTE JOSTY-HAMMOND,
"Voice-placing and Singing" through "Correct Italian Enunciation."
Metropolitan Opera House Bldg.,
1425 Broadway, New York.

HERBERT WILBER GREENE,
SCHOOL OF SINGING.
Director of the Brookfield Summer School of Singing.
[illegible] Carnegie Hall, N. Y. City.

MUSICAL COURIER

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 8. NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 26, 1914. WHOLE NO. 1796.

VIENNA MUSICAL SITUATION PRIOR TO THE GREAT WAR.

Delayed Letter to the Musical Courier Tells of Night Funeral of Murdered Archduke and His Wife—City Was in Mourning—Musical Season Reviewed—Franz Schmidt's New Opera "Notre Dame" Wins Success—Artists Who Have Sung and Played—Personal Mention.

[The following letter was written by the MUSICAL COURIER Vienna correspondent about five days previous to Germany's declaration of war against Russia.—Editor MUSICAL COURIER.]

Vienna; July 26, 1914.

Normandy! Dear, sunny Normandy!

Who would not love the wide, rolling cornfields ablaze in crimson, blue and gold, and the good red roads running through tall avenues of poplar and elm topped by distant steeples or the gray turrets of some mediæval chateau? I am writing at an open window to the sound of the little waves gurgling on the beach. But why should they remind me of the Vienna I have just left?

For Vienna was very dreary when I left. The long black streamers sagging down the house fronts writhed in the stifling sunshine, and I shall not soon forget that phantom funeral in the night—the long lines of somber horse stealing up on muffled hoofs through silent lanes of spectators, bearing the remains of the murdered Archduke and his wife to the station. Eerie.

Who does not feel the pathos of ballroom airs played on a hand organ in summer? Partners flown, friends gone. I was sitting in my room one morning when a lament came from the heatridden courtyard. Very wheezy it was. I recognized the waltz, "Alone at Last," and its appropriateness. It was too much, however, too obvious when "The Girl in the Sleeping Car" followed, so I packed my things and left suddenly—an exodus something in the nature of a landslide. I found it in my belongings later, unpacking.

In Review.

It has occurred to me that a good way of anticipating next season would be to review the last.

Vienna is conservative. I have often indicated as much, and the widespread regret at the passing of the old Bösendorfer Saal, and in another sense the scanty respect accorded to modern composers, will serve for the present as brief illustrations. Conservative, and yet Athenian enough to appreciate things new, particularly when they take the form of the Konzerthaus, the magnificent new home of music opened last October. The Imperial and Royal Academy buildings and theatre are situated in the right wing, and this thriving institution has taken full advantage of the new facilities thus afforded it.

The new Konzerthaus, in fine, has more than fulfilled the brilliant things prophesied of it at the outset of the season, and is in truth a worthy monument to the enterprise of a people whose love of music is historic. Its splendid halls have furnished a noble setting to many a memorable performance this season. We have seen Siegfried Ochs at the time of the Bach "boom" directing and controlling sonorous massed choirs and orchestras to storms of applause, we have had Bruno Walter in the "Creation," to say nothing of Ferdinand Löwe's magnificent work on the occasion of the four great inaugural concerts in October last. Franz Schalk, Richard Strauss and Felix Weingartner also have been the objects of rousing demonstrations on different occasions throughout the winter.

ROBERT DOLEJSI,
The second American to win the Austrian state diploma for violin. This picture was taken in Bohemia.

The Konzerthaus also has shown itself to be admirably adapted for the housing of great social and charity gatherings, meetings and entertainments. Several big charity balls at which royalty was present were interspersed during the season between the more "legitimate" evenings, and were well attended and entirely successful all round.

The Royal Opera.

Praise implies the necessity for censure. Let us try a little of the former for a change, for Director Gregor's policy, the utilitarianism and unwelcome disciplinarianism of which evoked so much adverse criticism from press and public alike, has vindicated itself in well attended houses and a very satisfactory season, financially and otherwise.

In addition to the usual repertoire we have had a Verdi cycle—in connection with the centenary festivals last November—the exploitation of "Parsifal" and just so much Puccini as is good for us. "The Girl of the Golden West" was launched for the first time here in November last in the presence of the composer, and, thanks to careful nursing, ran to the end of the season.

A new opera, Franz Schmidt's "Notre Dame," based on Victor Hugo's novel of that title, was brought out in April and met with signal success. I am dealing more fully with it below.

Those prime favorites, Selma Kurz and Mme. Bahr-Mildenburg, Mlle. Lima, Alfred Piccaver, William Miller and James Goddard, did splendidly throughout the season and have added to their reputations. The last four named are all Americans. James Goddard has left us and his genial presence will be much missed.

Director Gregor informs me that the following new operas will be produced at the beginning of next season: Weingartner's "Cain and Abel," Pfitzner's "Arme Heinrich," and a new opera by Schilling, which will be staged simultaneously with the date of its production at Stuttgart on November 7.

"Notre Dame."

Franz Schmidt's new opera, "Notre Dame," was performed at the Royal Opera on April 1 and made perhaps the hit of the season.

Franz Schmidt is a Vienna "child" and a great favorite. He is a cellist in the Opera orchestra—the renowned Philharmonic—and has been for some twelve years or more a deservedly popular figure there, as he is in Vienna musical circles at large.

Since his great triumph Schmidt has been almost unanimously hailed as Austria's foremost musician, and judging by what I have heard of his work he certainly does seem excellently equipped for future justification of his claims

ROYAL CASTLE AND THE CASTLE COURT. COURT CIRCLE AND ROYAL MUSEUM, VIENNA.

FERDINAND'S BRIDGE, VIENNA.

SPEEDWAY. HIGH STREAM FOUNTAIN. SCHWARZENBERG PALACE, VIENNA.

to this proud title. His beautiful E flat major symphony recently convinced us that Schmidt is unquestionably "thoroughbred." His imagery is delicate, his sense of harmony sure and keen, his orchestration sound and yet imaginative—in short, everything is there. His work is pleasantly natural. Nothing is forced.

"Notre Dame!" The reader may remember Goethe's strictures on Victor Hugo's strident romance, communicated to Eckermann in 1831—"I have just read this book, and needed no small amount of patience to be able to finish it. It is void of all truth, of all nature, the characters are grimacing wooden dolls instead of convincing flesh and blood, they move as the author wills them to move. The most repulsive thing I ever read."

The aged Bard of Weimar could scarcely have been expected to take any other attitude. His great sunlit eyes were always turned toward the face of nature, the true to life, the eternally human. We are dealing now, however, with music, not with literature.

GEORGE BEACH AND MME. MYLER, SEVCIK'S FIRST ASSISTANT, IN THE WIENER WALD.

"Notre Dame" represents, perhaps, to label it briefly, the dawn of the romantic-realistic school, of which Victor Hugo was "the father and Zola the 'enfant terrible.'" What material for a Meyerbeer, a Halévy, a Verdi! The picturesque grandeur and squalor, gilded luxury and noisome poverty, the old Montfaucon high road and the gibbets creaking in the wind, and all the gruesome romanticism of the period.

True, many composers have attempted the theme, with more or less success—chiefly less. The list is at my elbow, but let us return to Franz Schmidt.

He began the work twelve years ago, and has kept his head coolly and steadily throughout this time, during all the swing of the pendulum, the disquieting vagaries of musical taste and tendency. Curiously enough, his score reveals no weariness. Naivete, if anything, and lyrical freshness and spontancity. The libretto might be improved upon, but unfortunately first class operatic librettists are not philanthropists and must be generously paid, and so the lowly cellist had to turn to his friend, Leopold Wilk, who has nevertheless contrived to furnish a very creditable text.

As I have indicated, his orchestration is sound and thoughtful throughout, reaching its height perhaps in the sweet gipsy intermezzo (the woodwind is very effective here), the somber passacaglialike overture to Act II, and the artfully varied graduations of the instrumental conversation. The lyrical passages are very sweet, very compelling, but there is perhaps a lack of penetration, of synthesis in the final accent to the dramatically powerful close.

A romantic opera is of course since time immemorial little more than an excuse for a great love duet. Schmidt's "Notre Dame" is no exception, and I shall not soon forget the tremendous roar of applause that broke out immediately after the great love scene between Phœbus and Esmeralda in the second act. Thunderous and insistent, it lasted for ten minutes, and the composer, who seemed dazed and overcome by the staggering warmth of his reception, had to come forward and bow his acknowledgments again and again.

In general texture the opera will compare most readily with the works of Smetana, to whose influence much of Schmidt's success is undoubtedly due. It is, however, contended, and apparently with reason, that his harmony and orchestral technic are richer than those of Bohemia's arch musician.

VIDA
LLEWELLYN
PIANIST
In America 1914-1915

. . . . "The pianist has at her command a sonorous and refined tone and a very remarkable technic."
—Berliner Borsen Courier.

New York Recital, November 14th
Aeolian Hall

CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue New York City

Franz Schalk, who conducted with heart and soul for his humbler colleague, was the object of a rousing demonstration at the close. Well he deserved it, as did the members of the magnificent orchestra, every man of whom played as if it had been his own work. A memorable evening it was, on which every man gave of his best to assure the success of a work which will henceforth occupy a permanent place in the repertoire of the Royal Opera.

"Kommen Sie Wieder!"

And now let us take a few pianists.

The list is a formidable one, and my memory is no more infallible than that of—but I shall jot down what I remember. We have had Bachaus, with his neat literary style; Rosenthal, in a Saint-Saëns concerto; d'Albert from time to time during the season; Dohnanyi, Emil Sauer, Ganz, Lhévinne, Scharwenka, Gabrielle Leschetizky, Carl Friedberg, Edouard Risler, Lamond, Ignaz Friedmann, Artur Rubinstein, Arthur Schnabel, Max Pauer, Georg von Laléwicz, Norah Drewett, our favorite Alfred Grünfeld, a player of the salon type, who is a law unto himself in Vienna; Augusta Cottlow, the distinguished and popular American pianist; and our own Mme. Melville-Liszniewska, who scored such a triumph at the Musikvereinsaal and elsewhere with her Chopin interpretations this season, and Mme. Paola St. Angelo, an Anglo-Italian artist and a relative of Garibaldi.

Violinists.

Another legion, to whom we extend the same invitation. Ysaye, representing the Old Guard; Burmester, whose reception in the same hall (the Konzerthaus) was identical, both artists responding to recall after recall until the lights were turned out; Hubermann, Daisy Kennedy, Frank Gittelson (a young American of rare promise this); his compatriot, Roderick White; Arrigo Serato, possibly the finest violinist in Italy today; Siegmund Feuermann, the wonder child; Manen, Zimbalist, Enesco, Flesch, Willy Hess, Alfred Wittenberg, Ondriczek, his pupil Bohuslav Orel, Laszlo Ipolyi, May Harrison, Isolde Menges, Adolf Busch, the fiery young Rhinelander, and the scholarly Arnold Rosé.

Among the cellists Pablo Casals came twice. He has a worthy understudy in the young Italian, Enrico Mainardi. Paul Grümer increased his reputation, too.

Singers.

Many old favorites, and some new ones. Slezak gave two recitals in which the encores outnumbered the items on the program and enthusiasm broke all bounds; grand old Matteo Battistini created a similar scene in February; Johannes Messchaert sang some ten times during the season; Mme. Tetrazzini swept the Konzerthaus off its feet with her wonderful gyrations in the third octave; Mme. Cahier was heard at the Volksopera and in a recital at the Konzerthaus; Edyth Walker appeared at the Royal Opera in the "Ring"; Julia Culp came again to prove what a favorite she is; Ottilie Metzger, Lula Mysz-Gmeiner, Fritz Feinhals, George Hamlin, Yvette Guilbert, Walter Kirchhof, all were very warmly received. Messchaert, Culp, Slezak, Battistini, Kauffmann, Cahier, Walker, all command a good following here and are sure of a great reception every time they appear.

MARGUERITE MELVILLE-LISZNIEWSKA AND FAMILY ENJOYING AFTERNOON TEA AT THEIR VILLA IN POTZLEINSDORF, NEAR VIENNA.

I have not thought it necessary to mention Selma Kurz and Mme. Bahr-Mildenberg, of the Royal Opera. They belong "to us."

Chamber Music.

The principal chamber music evenings this season have been furnished by the Rosé Quartet, the Brussels Quartet, the Sevcik Quartet, the Bohemian Quartet, of Prague, and the new Konzerthaus Quartet, under the leadership of

VERA BARSTOW VIOLINIST
1914-1915 Season Now Booking
Management, Concert Direction M. H. HANSON, 437 Fifth Ave., New York

Mme. OLIVE FREMSTAD
Exclusive Management FOSTER & DAVID, 500 Fifth Avenue, New York
NOW IN AMERICA—DATES BOOKING SEASON 1914-1915
STEINWAY PIANO USED

Adolf Busch. This last named quartet, the united ages of which come to a little over a hundred, has already accomplished great things this season, and will go farther. Their leader has set himself the highest ideals. They have been chosen to represent the chamber music department at this year's Mozart Festival in Salzburg in August, and are the special protégés of Lilli Lehmann.

PAOLA ST. ANGELO IN AUSTRIAN PEASANT COSTUME.

ORATORIO AND SYMPHONY.

In addition to the periodical recitals by the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra under the leadership of Weingartner and Franz Schalk, orchestral orgies that fill the great hall of the Musikvereinsaal each successive time, I have written about Arnold Schönberg's "Gurre-Lieder" and its ecstatic reception (what a pity that the cost of production should render its more frequent performance prohibitive!) and the great Bach revival under the magnetic baton of Siegfried Ochs. The Schubert Festival and Mahler's mammoth symphonies have also formed outstanding features of the season. Young Erich Korngold's "Sinfonietta" was also very warmly received, as I wrote in January. His literature for the piano does not attain the same standard as his orchestral work. Novak is also preparing a suite which will be heard next season, I understand.

PERSONAL MENTION.

At the recent Meisterschule final examination for piano the prize and state diploma for 1914 were won by Harry Neuhaus, of whom I have written before. Prof. Leopold Godowsky speaks very highly of this talented young pianist. He is a Pole and a cousin of Szymanowski.

The snapshot reproduced in this letter shows Mme. Melville-Liszniewska with her husband and family in their picturesque villa in Pötzleinsdorf, a suburb of Vienna. The villa and grounds are on a hill commanding a superb panorama of the city, and I agree with Madame that it is a mistake to go away when you have fresh air and the country in your own home.

Paola St. Angelo will return to Vienna at the end of August to resume her private and tuition work. Inez Schneider, of Cologne, and Marie Hertenstein are among the list of former pupils of hers; both were sent her by Professor Leschetizky, and both are doing well. Mme. St. Angelo has been having a very successful time in England, at Harrowgate and other fashionable watering places. At the former place she was recalled six times after her rendering of the exacting E flat concerto of Liszt, and came in for a sheaf of very complimentary press tributes.

That grand old master of the violin, Professor Sevcik, has once more left Vienna with his thriving colony of violin students for Pisék, his picturesque retreat in Bohemia. Pisék is an ancient town, dating from the twelfth century, on the banks of the old world Ottava. Every summer the joyous crowd, "Bohemians" in every sense of the word, repairs there for study and recreation. I am preparing an article on Sevcik and his colony at Pisék, which will appear shortly.

A FAMILIAR COURTYARD IN FAST DISAPPEARING OLD VIENNA.

POLICE DEPARTMENT, SCHOTTENRING, VIENNA.

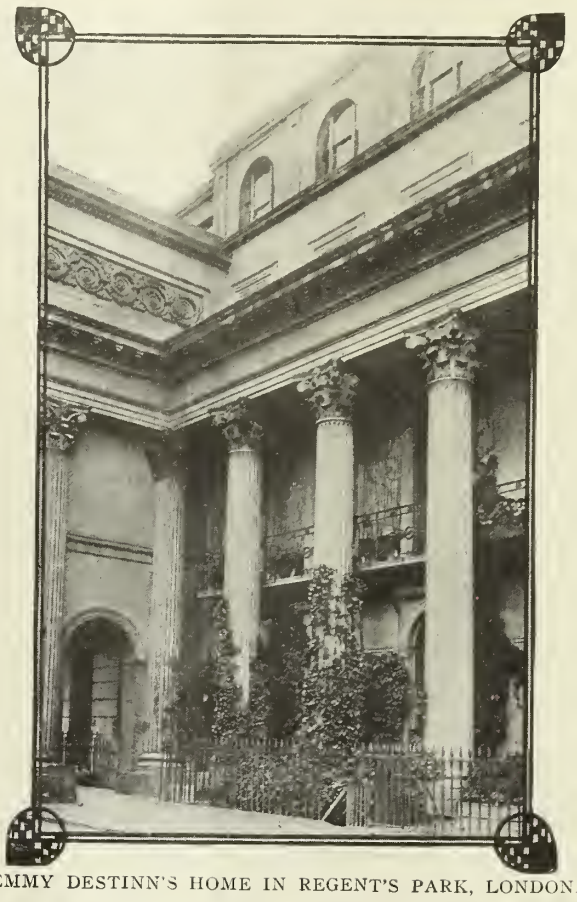
Robert Dolejsi, whose photograph is shown in this letter, is, or rather was, a Sevcik star pupil and is the second American to have gained the Meisterschule prize and Austrian State Diploma for the violin. Dolejsi is returning to America in September to give a series of recitals, beginning with Chicago, his native town.

FRANK ANGOLD.

Mary S. Warfel in the West.



Mary S. Warfel, the talented young harpist, spent a delightful vacation on the Pacific coast. Her trip was marked with many unique experiences and she played at a number of recitals.

After an appearance at Riverside, Cal., the audience was so well pleased with her work that she was offered a series of engagements as harp soloist and piano accompanist for the season of 1914-1915. She also gave recitals at Coronado Beach, and at a private musicale in Los Angeles she scored a marked success. Other appearances included San Francisco, Salt Lake City, Manitou and Den[illegible] reports a splendid time in which work and play were combined so evenly that it was hard to know where play stopped and work began.

Destinn and Gilly in London.

Emmy Destinn, the Metropolitan Opera soprano, is one of the few fortunate artists who are not liable to be molested in any way by the present war. Instead of going to her chateau in Bohemia where she had intended to pass the summer, she remained in her London home in Regents Park. Mme. Destinn closed the Covent Garden season in a performance of "Aida" on July 28, and was to have left London the following day. But with her keen foresight she was quick to perceive the imminent danger approaching and decided to remain in London until matters calmed down. Her servants were therefore ordered the following day to unpack the numerous trunks ready to be shipped to Bohemia. It is gratifying to know that the noted soprano can be relied upon to appear at the Metropolitan when the season opens.

Another prominent artist now remaining in London is Dinh Gilly, the French-Algerian baritone, who appeared at Covent Garden in the last performance of "Aida" as Amonasro. Mr. Gilly is an Arab by birth, but was raised in Paris, and his sentiments are entirely with France. He is liable to be pressed into service any minute. In a letter to his private secretary, who is at present in New York, he says: "I don't believe in war and I hope this will be the last war this world will ever see. The Teutonic spirit of militarism is bound to be crushed and a strongly united democratic Europe will surely be the outcome of this war."

EMMY DESTINN'S HOME IN REGENT'S PARK, LONDON.

A hundred and fifty-four unpublished works by Rossini have been discovered. They are contained in sixteen albums, and consist mainly of songs and pieces for the piano. —London Musical News.

WALTER PETZET.

THE XAVER SCHARWENKA

Master School of Piano Playing and Teachers' Seminary

Faculty: Director, Prof. Xaver Scharwenka, Court Pianist to the Emperor of Austria-Hungary; Assistant Director, Prof. Walter Petzet; Principal Assistants: Miss Martha Siebold, Miss Isolde Scharwenka.

THE MASTER SCHOOL OF PIANO PLAYING is in no way connected with the Klindworth-Scharwenka Conservatory of Music, with which Prof. Xaver Scharwenka has severed his connection.

The new institution is a special school for pianoforte playing, and affords its pupils the opportunity to acquire a complete pianistic training for the concert stage, or to thoroughly equip themselves for the profession of piano instruction.

The first term begins September 1, 1914.

Any desired information, prospectus, etc., sent on application to

THE MASTER SCHOOL OF PIANO PLAYING
BLUMENTHALSTR. 17, BERLIN, W.

XAVER SCHARWENKA.

CHICAGO MUSICIANS RETURN FROM THE WAR ZONE.

Two Prominent Artists Are Back in Uncle Sam's Domain—Vacation News and General Chat of the Week in the Middle West Metropolis.

Chicago, Ill., August 22, 1914.

The following letter written on board the steamship Canopic reached this office the early part of the week:

DEAR MR. DEVRIES—Owing to the war my European trip was cut short. I left Milan for Naples on an hour's notice and caught this boat two hours before it sailed. It is filled with refugees without baggage and money because the moment war was declared American checks were not accepted. The voyage has been a thrilling and perilous one, owing to German warships on the African coast. Followed from Gibraltar to the Azores by special escort of ten English torpedo boats. Our destination was uncertain until four days ago when our course was made clear. All lights out at night for ten days and we had to retire in the dark, making our way slowly to safety. The boat was manned by special captain. We have had no war news for two days.

I shall spend the remainder of my vacation in Maine, etc.

(Signed) HANNA BUTLER.

Mrs. Butler's many friends are overjoyed at her return and hope that hereafter she will spend her summer vacations at home.

HOWARD WELLS "HOME AGAIN."

Another welcome visitor to this office during the past week was Howard Wells, who, after an absence of seven years spent in Europe, returned sooner than he anticipated to his native land. Mr. Wells told a thrilling story which has been published in the MUSICAL COURIER, therefore the present writer will not attempt to amplify, but will content himself by adding that Mr. Wells looked the picture of health and that he is back here for good, ready to sign many contracts and to enroll many piano students for himself and Mrs. Wells' class. It may be added that Mr. Wells' large European class will follow its distinguished mentor as early as possible.

Mr. and Mrs. Wells' new studios will probably be located in the Fine Arts Building. It may also be stated that Oliver Ditson will bring out next month another theoretical piano book from the pen of this versatile and prolific artist, Howard Wells. Mr. Wells' plans for the coming season will be published in the MUSICAL COURIER some time in the near future and another announcement relative to the book above referred to will be made as soon as it comes from the press.

HAZEL EDEN MUDGE ENJOYING BELATED SUMMER VACATION.

Hazel Eden Mudge, the well known soprano, left this week for a well earned vacation which was belated on account of filling many dates all through the hot spell. Mrs. Mudge and her husband have gone to Estey Park, Colorado, where they will remain for the next three weeks. Upon her return Mrs. Mudge will start filling dates already booked for her through Harry Culbertson, her exclusive manager.

SÉBALD'S ORCHESTRA AT BISMARCK GARDEN.

The Bismarck Garden will hereafter harbor the Sébald Symphony Orchestra, directed by Alexander Sébald. Two weeks ago the Steindel Symphony Orchestra completed its engagement at the Park.

GERTRUDE V. O'HANLON BACK IN CHICAGO.

Gertrude V. O'Hanlon, the popular and energetic manager, has returned to Chicago from her booking tour through the West.

MORTIMER WILSON LEAVES ATLANTA.

Mortimer Wilson, for the last two years conductor of the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra, is in Chicago visiting friends. Mr. Wilson is well known in Chicago. He studied violin with Max Bendix and the late S. E. Jacobsohn, and harmony and composition under the late Frederic Grant Gleason.

EDOARDO SACERDOTE "SAFE."

The various daily papers in Chicago have announced that Edoardo Sacerdote, the well known conductor and coach, now teaching at the Chicago Musical College, was marooned in the war zone. The many friends of Signor Sacerdote will be glad to know that such a statement is absolutely erroneous and that the distinguished teacher is safe in Chicago, where he remained during the summer instructing a very large class at the college.

VIOLA E. FOOTE IN CHICAGO.

Viola E. Foote, a graduate of the College of Music of Cincinnati and a soprano of no small attainment, has come to reinforce the ranks of professional singers in Chicago.

Miss Foote, who was among the visitors at this office this week, came well introduced, not only on account of a letter received from her friend and protector, Mrs. Adolph Klein, of Cincinnati, but especially through her own merit, as news of Miss Foote's success with the Cincinnati Orchestra at the "Zoo" had, through different channels, reached this department.

MARION GREEN BACK FROM THE EAST.

Marion Green has just returned from a three weeks' tour through the East, where he met many of his old friends and became acquainted with another legion. The popular basso-cantante already has been engaged as soloist on the Beethoven program to be given on December 8, by the Minneapolis Orchestra, at its regular series of home concerts under the leadership of Emil Oberhoffer.

FLOYD LE PAGE, OF SPOKANE, MAROONED HERE.

Floyd Le Page, the attractive and talented soprano, who was on her way from Spokane, Wash., to Milan, Italy, where she was to have resumed her studies under Cotogni, informed a representative of the MUSICAL COURIER that she would remain in Chicago or in New York City until the end of September before undertaking a perilous journey. Miss Le Page said: "I prefer to be marooned in Chicago than on the high seas or even on terra firma on the other side of the pond."

LARKIN-WEBER RECITAL BRINGS LARGE AUDIENCE.

This office has received information to the effect that Henriette Weber and Irene Larkin gave their first program last Monday afternoon ("Pelleas et Melisande") at Chautauqua, N. Y., in the Hall of Philosophy, which accommodates one thousand people, and there was such a tremendous demand for seats that the management announced that the remainder of their programs would be given in the Amphitheatre, which holds four thousand people.

At the first program the audience was most enthusiastic and the Weber-Larkin programs are already one of the main attractions of the 1914 Chautauqua.

A CORRECTION.

This department erred when it stated that Arnold J. Gantvoort was the manager of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, as every one in the musical field knows that Mr. Gantvoort has been for many years manager of the College of Music of Cincinnati. The error was due to this writer's lapsus linguæ and the correction is made most cheerfully.

Revival of Spanish Music.

Reference was made in this column to the enthusiasm of Emma Eames, Emilio de Gogorza, Schelling, Paderewski, and others over the works of the Spaniard, Granados, whose opera has been accepted for performance at the Grand Opera. It will be the second Spanish operatic novelty there, as the Opera Comique not long ago successfully produced one by Manuel de Falla under the title of "La Vie Breve." The Philharmonic Orchestra of Madrid has also been in Paris, while a choir from Barcelona has given three concerts in London. Reviewing the situation, a writer in the London Musical Record devotes an article to what he calls "The Spanish Revival." Frenchmen like Bizet, Chabrier, Lalo, Ravel and Debussy have turned to Spanish national music for inspiration, and now Spain seems to awaken from a long sleep. Besides Granados and De Falla, several other composers—Albeniz, Chapi, Turina and Pedrell—have written pieces that are being talked about. Altogether the outlook for something new and worth while seems promising.—Toronto (Canada) Globe.

FRANCES INGRAM
Management: SHAW & TUCKER Orchestra Building, Chicago

GLENN DILLARD GUNN
PIANIST
421-424 Fine Arts Building - - Chicago, Ill.

LEON SAMETINI
Holland's Greatest VIOLINIST
Management ALMA VOEDISCH
3941 Rokeby Street, Chicago

Mrs. STACY WILLIAMS
Voice Production :: Repertoire ::
In Europe June 15 to September 15
For information, prospectus, etc., address
Mrs. Williams, 405-406 Kimball Hall - Chicago, Ill.

Lucille STEVENSON (TEWKSBURY)
SOPRANO
Address: 4438 Berkeley Avenue, Chicago
Telephone, Oakland 1570

LECTURES, OPERA TALKS, AND PIANO LECTURE RECITALS
By
HENRIETTE WEBER
Also the Larkin-Weber Recitals
Consisting of
OPERA, LECTURE RECITALS AND MELODRAMES and
THE CHICAGO PIANO QUARTETTE
Henriette Weber, piano; Fritz Itte, violin;
Carl Klammsteiner, cello; A. Van Der Voort, viola.
Specializing in Opera Programs.
Arrangements with Distinguished American Singers as Soloists
FOR TERMS AND DATES ADDRESS MISS H. WEBER
Auditorium Building, Chicago, Ill., Phone Harrison 4868-4869

MARION GREEN
BASSO CANTANTE
Auditorium Building, Chicago
Home Phone: Ravenswood 5774 Studio Phone: Harrison 4868

THOMAS N. MAC BURNEY
BARITONE
Voice Production Song Recitals
Three years assistant to Frank King Clark
Suite 609 Fine Arts Building, Chicago, Ill.
Phone Harrison 6889

HERMAN DEVRIES
Formerly Baritone with the Metropolitan Opera House, New York; Covent Garden, London; Grand Opera and Opera Comique, Paris; Theatre Royal de la Monnaie, Brussels, Etc.
VOCAL TEACHER
MRS. HERMAN DEVRIES
ASSOCIATE VOCAL INSTRUCTOR
Studios: 518-528 Fine Arts Building - - - Chicago, Ill.

BUSH TEMPLE CONSERVATORY
N. Clark St. and Chicago Avenue, Chicago
Kenneth M. Bradley, President

SUMMER SESSION
BEGINNING JUNE 22
Special Courses in MUSIC, Expression, Languages, Public School Music, Dramatic Art
Conducted by an unsurpassed faculty, including:
Mme. Julie Rive-King, Guy Herbert Woodard, Grace Stewart Potter, Mae Julie Riley, Herold von Mickwitz, Frank B. Webster, Eleanor Smith, Ernest O. Todd, Mme. Justine Wegener, Edgar A. Nelson, Edward Dvorak, Adelaide G. Lewis
The management announces the exclusive teaching engagement of the world's most famous baritone: CHARLES W. CLARK
Students wishing private lessons with any of the above named Artists should make application in advance.
The Bush Temple Conservatory is the only music school in Chicago which has its own Dormitory.
Reservation of rooms must be made in advance.
For Catalog and Special Literature Address: Edward H. Schwenker, Sec'y

C. L. WAGNER BACK FROM EUROPE.

An Interview with the Well Known Concert Manager Who Has Just Returned from the War Zone—Some Interesting Facts and Humorous Incidents Related—John McCormack Expected in America Very Soon to Begin Concert Tour—Rudolph Ganz Expected Here in September—Caruso and McCormack's Children Become Warm Friends.

[Manager Charles L. Wagner arrived at Quebec on Monday, August 17, on the Allan Line steamer "Tunisian" after a most exciting ten-day trip.—Editorial in the MUSICAL COURIER of August 19, 1914.]

When the above message was received in New York last week there were many anxious friends of the well known manager who found occasion for particular joy.

Back again in his New York office Mr. Wagner warmly congratulated himself because he is an American citizen and home in the U. S. A.

"I sailed from Liverpool on the steamship Tunisian, August 6," said the manager to a representative of the MUSICAL COURIER. "The boat was scheduled to leave August 5, and when we arrived at the Euston Station for the boat train, we were informed that the sailing had been canceled, but I went on to Liverpool, and the next day we managed to get out; landed in Quebec, Sunday night, August 16.

"We lost two days on the way, so we were on the this particularly to show you that it was not necessary to sing a single French song in this French land, and that his wonderful English diction created the same enthusiasm as it does in New York or San Francisco. When he gave the famous McCormack song, 'Good-night, Beloved, Good-night,' they came near tearing the roof off the Kursaal. At the age of thirty I think McCormack is entitled to be known as the world's greatest singer. At least his manager thinks so."

"Where is Rudolph Ganz?"

"I have not heard anything further from Rudolph Ganz, but I fully expect him to be here in time to open at the Worcester Festival, September 25. I had letters and a telegram from him while in London."

CARUSO PLAYING CARDS WITH THE CHILDREN OF JOHN McCORMACK.

vater for ten days. The second night out we sailed all ight without any lights, for fear the Germans would get is, but from the loaded condition of the boat, I was much nore afraid of 'germs' than of Germans. The fifth day ut the engines were silent and for eighteen hours we drifted in a dense fog, afraid to move. The wireless could ot locate anybody, and the next day we were grateful to ur cautious captain, for we passed six huge icebergs off he Grand Banks of Newfoundland. The usual sailing list f the boat was about fifty first class passengers, and the thers in proportion; we had 140 first class, 330 second lass, and over 700 third class passengers.

"The late General Sherman made the statement that war is hell,' but that statement is obsolete. Standing on he docks at Liverpool waiting, I could only think that war s even worse than hell, for hell is not surrounded by vater."

"But how about John McCormack?"

"I left Mr. McCormack in fine condition, and he will ake the first sailing possible. The Cunard people have romised to get him out within the next month, and the robabilities are that we will open our tour a little earlier han we had planned originally. He is in excellent shape nd has had Edwin Schneider with him all summer, work-ng up wonderful new programs."

"Did McCormack achieve his usual successes in Eu-ope?"

"I was more than pleased with his marvelous success t Ostend on Sunday night, August 2. In this French com-unity he sang two arias, with the orchestra—the 'La oheme' aria and 'Elisie d'amor—Una furtiva lagrima.' o the first number he gave four encores in English, and o the second number five encores in English. I mention

"And the Mozart Festival was called off?"

"Yes," continued Mr. Wagner, "the Mozart Festival was called off by Mme. Lehmann, hence I missed the one object of my trip to Europe."

"Did you have trouble getting passage across?"

"Considerable. I think that all Americans ought to resent the action of both the Hamburg-American Line and the North German Lloyd. Hundreds of people holding tickets on these lines were there, but the offices were closed, not even a single clerk being left to give out information. This was the least they could have done at such a trying time. Thomas Cook & Sons did the same thing. The American Express Company was very kind and generous, and the British railroads were exceptionally generous in posting notices at every hotel, offering to cash checks and letters of credit to help the Americans along."

"But how did you manage to get out with a German name?"

"Can you imagine anything more discouraging than a man with my name trying to get on an English boat? It's a good thing I did not use the name I was christened with—Carl Ludwig. I would probably have been shot if I had had that name tacked on to me. I had so many turn downs by the English clerks that it became humorous. You know if the average English clerk had any sense of humor, he would die laughing at himself."

The accompanying snapshot was taken on the deck of the Kaiser Wilhelm II in May and shows Enrico Caruso playing cards with Cyril and Gwen McCormack, the two children of John McCormack. On arriving in London, Mr. Caruso gave an interview to the Times, in which he spoke of the great pleasure he had with these two children, and of his full appreciation of young Cyril's telling him in all honesty: "I know you are the greatest Italian tenor, but my papa is the greatest Irish tenor." This beautiful, simple side of the great Caruso has always been a source of much joy to his many friends, and he has no greater admirer than John McCormack.

Margaret Keyes' Engagements.

Margaret Keyes has been engaged for song recitals before the Matinee Musical Club, of Springfield, Ill., and the Tuesday Musical Club, of Akron, Ohio. Both recitals will take place during the month of October. She has also been engaged for one of the concerts to be given by the Rochester Symphony Orchestra and for a concert with the Apollo Club, of Minneapolis.

HOWARD WELLS
PIANIST AND TEACHER
Authorized representative of
LESCHETIZKY
KUFSTEINER, ST. 6 BERLIN W., GERMANY

ELEANOR HAZZARD
PEOCOCK
(SOPRANO)
Exclusive Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON
437 FIFTH AVENUE - - - NEW YORK CITY

OLGA AND HELENE CASSIUS
Vocal Instruction
Pupils prepared for the operatic and concert stage. Specialties: Placing of ruined voices, rectifying of wrong methods of breathing by articulation of consonants and voice inflection, and fundamental building of speaking voice. Send for Olga Cassius' "Die Erzieuhung der Stimme und Atmung."
Studio: Prager Str. 35, Berlin, W.

MAURICE VERA KAPLUN
ARONSON
PIANIST-PEDAGOG CONCERT-PIANISTE
BERLIN, W. BOZENER ST. 8

VICTOR HEINZE
Send for free booklet "Studying Music Abroad"
Pianist and Teacher. Most modern principles. Thorough artistic education. Eminently successful.
PETER VISCHER STR. 19 BERLIN-FRIEDENAU

VITTORINO MORATTI
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
For four years the only assistant of the late G. B. LAMPERTI
Authorized representative of his method
BERLIN W., MOTZ ST. 53

GEORGE FERGUSSON
BARITONE
VOCAL INSTRUCTOR
Augsburger St., 64 Berlin W., Germany

SUMMER CLASS FOR THE
LESCHETIZKY METHOD
UNDER INSTRUCTION OF
MRS. POTTER-FRISSELL
IN NEW SCHANDAU-OSTRAU, SAXON SWITZERLAND, GERMANY
Address Villa 6, as above.
Class continues until October 15, 1914

King Clark Studios
Kurfürstendamm 63, Berlin, W.
Cable Address: KINGARK, BERLIN

YVONNE DE TREVILLE AND HER PET BEAR.

Ernest Hesser at Winona Lake.

Ernest Hesser sends greetings from the Winona Lake (Ind.) Chautauqua, where he is engaged for the summer, singing at the Chautauqua and having charge of the public school music department at the Winona College summer school. Mr. Hesser is a baritone well known in the West and Middle West. He holds the position of supervisor of music of the Pasadena (Cal.) public schools and is most successful with his recital work. His programs show that he is featuring the American composer, such names as Cadman, Huhn, MacDowell, Hadley, Ware, Harris, Homer and Carpenter frequently appearing. In the hands of this excellent artist it is a worthy and successful effort.

De Treville's Bear Is in Brussels.

One of Yvonne de Tréville's causes for anxiety is the little bear which was presented to her during her last Western trip and shipped by the famous soprano to Brussels, there to await her return.

Although according to last accounts "Mr. Teddy" was well and happy, it is doubtful if the sounds of cannonading will be as soothing as those of Mlle. de Tréville's beautiful voice.

E Pluribus.

Walloon Lake, Mich., August 15, 1914.

To the Musical Courier:

I read with much interest the article in this week's MUSICAL COURIER on America's coming season, and especially the paragraph: "This is the moment for America to rally around the standards of its native musicians and break the spell of long indifference under which some of them have been suffering."

I believe that if three-quarters of the foreigners who come here each season seeking gold, were to remain away, we have in these United States of America plenty of material to draw from to take their places.

Yours sincerely, WALTER SPRY.

Martial Musicians.

Owing to the war, one West End restaurant has lost the whole of its orchestra, with two exceptions, and they are to leave later.—London Musical News.

London Before the War.

[From a Toronto, Canada, exchange.]

After spending twenty-four days on the ocean on account of the Sicilian breaking her machinery and the Scotian encountering icebergs, Boris Hambourg gives the following sketch of the concert season in London:

London is with every season becoming more and more the chief musical center of Europe and at present ranks second to Berlin. The season is at its height during May, June and July and as the rest of Europe has its season in winter, everybody from everywhere flocks to London. As a general rule there are three concerts given every afternoon and evening during this time. There are four concert halls, the Albert Hall, seating over 10,000; the Queen's Hall, seating over 2,000; the Bechstein and Aeolian halls, each seating about 700—the Albert Hall being used chiefly for large festivals and choral concerts. Artists like Melba and Clara Butt, however, give concerts there annually and draw huge crowds. This summer, as usual, the music lover has a veritable feast of good things. Those who preferred symphonic music, there was the London Symphony, conducted by Nikisch, the Queen's Hall Orchestra, conducted by Sir Henry J. Wood, and the Beecham Orchestra, conducted by Thomas Beecham, the latter giving a concert entirely devoted to the works of Frederick Delius, whom many judges consider the English composer of the day. For those preferring singing there were Melba, Elena Gerhardt, Frieda Hempel, Alma Gluck, Pasquale Amato and others of like caliber. Among the instrumentalists who appeared either with orchestra or in recital were Paderewski, Pachmann, Godowsky, Mark Hambourg, Kreisler, Thibaud and Zimbalist. One extraordinary orchestral concert was that given in aid of the Empress of Ireland fund. Albert Hall was engaged for the occasion and the orchestra was composed of four hundred musicians, drawn from the symphony and opera orchestras of London. There were six conductors on the program: Sir Henry J. Wood, Percy Pitt, Giorgio Polacco, Landon Ronald, Sir Charles Stanford and Thomas Beecham. No account of the London musical season would be complete, however, without mentioning the superb opera houses of Covent Garden and Sir Thomas Beecham's season at Drury Lane. At the former Melba and Caruso combined in a memorable performance of Puccini's "Boheme." Though Covent Garden is fairly conservative and produces chiefly standard operas, yet this season the management found room to include such modern works as Debussy's exquisite "Pelleas et Melisande" and Charpentier's "Louise," besides Mozart's "Don Giovanni" and "Nozze di Figaro" and Boito's rarely heard "Mefistofele." The Beecham season at Drury Lane has undoubtedly been the chief attraction of the season, and the world of art and fashion could be found there nightly. The management presented a remarkable repertoire of Russian opera ballet, and German and English opera. A special feature was made of Strauss and Chaliapine nights. No fewer than ten premieres were introduced, including such important works as Strauss' "The Legende of Saint Joseph," which the composer conducted in person at the three first performances; Rimsky-Korsakoff's delightful opera ballet, "Coq d'Or," his last work, finished only three days before his death; Maurice Ravel's ballet, "Daphne et Chloe"; Stravinsky's ballet, "Le Rossignol," and Joseph Holbrooke's "Dylan," the only English novelty, being its first performance on any stage. Great interest centered, too, in a revival of "Der Rosenkavalier," which many consider the best work Strauss has yet produced.

Mottl Widow Impoverished.

At Vienna the widow of the celebrated conductor, Felix Mottl, who, as Henriette Standhartner (his first wife), was formerly a singer at the royal theatres at Karlsruhe and Coburg, finds herself in a condition not far removed from poverty. In an appeal to the public, where she draws attention to her undeserved straits, she says that since last January she has endeavored to give singing lessons, but has not been successful in gaining a single pupil. Her only means consist of an income of £5 a month. All she desires is that by her public appeal she may be enabled to earn her living as a teacher of singing.—London Musical News.

Sara F. Troutman in Canada.

Sara F. Troutman, of Pittsburgh, Pa., is enjoying a delightful summer at Georgian Bay, Canada, where all nature combines to make glad the visitor to its shores.

SEASON 1914-1915 MRS. H. H. A. BEACH M. H. HANSON 437 Fifth Avenue New York

SEASON 1914-1915 MAUD POWELL H. Godfrey Turner 1400 B'way, New York

IMPERIAL ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC AND DRAMATIC ART IN VIENNA

School year begins September 20th. (Admission at other times only by special arrangement)

Magnificent new building, with finest, most thorough and most modern equipment of any musical institution in the world. Eighty-five eminent masters.

Regular Courses in All Branches of Vocal and Instrumental Music. Fee $60 to $120 per year.

Opera School with its Own Specially Equipped New Theater for Rehearsals and Performances. Fee $120 per year.

MASTERSCHOOL FOR PIANO: Prof. Leopold GODOWSKY. MASTERSCHOOL FOR VIOLIN: Prof. Otto ŠEVČIK

Fee for Each Masterschool $160 per year

For Further Information Apply to the Office of the

IMPERIAL ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC - - - - Vienna, III., Lothringerstrasse 14

RUDOLF BERGER

FAMOUS TENOR of the Metropolitan Opera Company

Available for Concerts May and June, 1915

Management: R. E. JOHNSTON

1451 Broadway - - New York

Burnham's Second Paris Recital.

Thuel Burnham's second Paris recital since his return from America was as great a success as his first, which is saying all that can be said. Enthusiasm was not lacking and Burnham himself was in great mood. He did some of the most beautifully contrasted playing he has accomplished yet. In the Mozart sonata, with which he opened his program, he gave the true classical atmosphere and outline. His repose and restraint in this number were admirable. The simplicity and naivete of the opening theme, and the purling, faultless bravura of the runs and florid figures of the variations were alike marvelously beautiful. His piano tone seemed narrowed down almost to that corresponding to the harpsichord of Mozart's time, with almost no pedal, with however no suggestion of dryness and no extremes of coloring except for a ravishing pianissimo at times. The sonata was given a reading that only a true artist with inspired insight and feeling and at the same time absolute mastery of his resources could give.

When Burnham attacked the "Carnaval," it was as if he had another's instrument to play upon. There was all the orchestral resonance and gorgeousness of color of which the modern Steinway grand is capable. It was a broad, big, masterful performance, as perfect in its way as his reading of the Mozart sonata. But what a contrast in style and manner! The restraint and severity of the classical mood was entirely abandoned and the great Schumann number was played with a temperamental exuberance and spirit that were truly inspiring.

THUEL BURNHAM ON HIS RECENT AUTOMOBILE TRIP THROUGH FRANCE.

Burnham closed his program with a group of Schubert beautifully played, ending with a sensational performance of the "Marche Militaire."

Katherine Noack Fiqué Delights Large Audience.

The well known dramatic soprano, Katherine Noack Fiqué, who is rusticating at Mount Desert, Me., sang at a concert there given by the Northeast Harbor Choral Society, on Thursday evening, August 13. Her numbers were "Caro mio ben," old Italian aria, Giordani; "One Fine Day," from "Madame Butterfly," Puccini; "The Trout," Schubert; "Ouvre tes yeux bleues," Massenet; "Niemand hat's gesehn," Loewe, and "The Danza," Chadwick.

Mme. Fiqué's success was so great that she had to respond to double encores.

While practising in her cottage at Anticou, John D. M. Priest, director of the Northeast Harbor Choral Society, heard her voice from the distance, and drawing nearer, became more and more impressed, with the result that he engaged this charming artist as chief soloist for the annual summer concert.

Sokoloff's New York Recital.

Those who heard of Nikolai Sokoloff's recent London successes are anticipating his New York recital which will take place November 20 at Aeolian Hall. The program, which is to be published later, is sure to be fine and interesting, as Sokoloff's arrangement of programs always show the musician as well as the artist, and will give him every opportunity of displaying the very beautiful full, rich tone and splendid style which so impressed the London critics.

JEZZY DUFAU
COLORATURA SOPRANO
Concert Recital
Chicago-Philadelphia Grand Opera Company
Under Management of HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Building, Chicago

VAN YORX
THEO. ——— Tenor
Will teach throughout the Summer
Studios: 21 West 38th Street, - New York
3701 Murray Hill

BISPHAM
SEASON 1914-1915
For terms and dates apply to all managers
Personal Address
44 W. 44th Street - New York

GABRILÓWITSCH
THE EMINENT RUSSIAN PIANIST
AMERICAN TOUR JANUARY-APRIL, 1915
Management, LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, N. Y.
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

GIUSEPPE CREATORE AND HIS BAND
NOW BOOKING FOR 1914-1915
OFFICE: 1512 TRIBUNE BUILDING, - - - CHICAGO, ILL.

WHITEHILL
BASS-BARITONE
Formerly Metropolitan Opera
Management:
THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th Street, New York

A NAME TO CONJURE WITH!
THIBAUD
For Terms and Dates Address

A Violinist Whom France Declares to Be Without an Equal
Thibaud's American visit last winter was the violinistic sensation of the season. His return in the Fall will be an event of first importance.
LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, New York

U. S. KERR
BASSO CANTANTE--Song Recitals and Oratorio a Specialty
For Bookings Address 538 West 143d Street, New York City 'Phone 3313 Audubon

JULES FALK VIOLINIST
NOW IN AMERICA
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU 1 West 34th Street, New York

The Guilmant Organ School
DR. WILLIAM C. CARL, Director
A School for Students with serious aims, who desire to become expert Organists. REOPENS OCT. 6th.
Send For New Catalogue. 44 West 12th St., N. Y.

LEONARD BORWICK PIANIST
WILL TOUR AMERICA SEASON 1914-15
"Borwick is a great deal more than a mere virtuoso. He is a true and refined musician."—Dresden Deutscher Wacht.
Management—WOLFSOHN BUREAU, 1 West 34th St., New York. Steinway Piano Used

The Virgils' Summer Session.

Mr. and Mrs. A. K. Virgil are among those whose plans have been frustrated by the European war. They intended to sail August 8, and after spending a few days in England to go on to Berlin for the reopening of their school, September 1. Realizing the impossibility of carrying out their plans, they canceled their passages and now are arranging a different program for the season.

Their summer session at the College of New Rochelle, N. Y., which ended August 7, was attended by students—principally teachers—from all parts of the country. Mr. Virgil's remarkable ability as an educator and his power to enthuse his students were again demonstrated. All those who come under his influence and that of Mrs. Virgil, his inspiring coworker, are bound to return to their own fields of labor better prepared to do efficient teaching and more desirous to make of themselves and their pupils all that is possible.

Nothing would go to show that Mr. Virgil has been teaching for over fifty years—his energy, his elastic step, the forcefulness of his instruction, the freshness of his ideas, the vivacity of his manner, all prove that hard work, if approached and performed in the right way, keeps the mental and physical machinery in good order, and does not wear it out before its time.

Mr. and Mrs. Virgil have agreed to make the College of New Rochelle their summer headquarters. This announcement has caused much pleasure, as students can study there under ideal conditions. They can enjoy the advantages of college life, of ideal surroundings, and can study with far less effort and strain than in New York, where Mr. and Mrs. Virgil have so frequently conducted summer sessions.

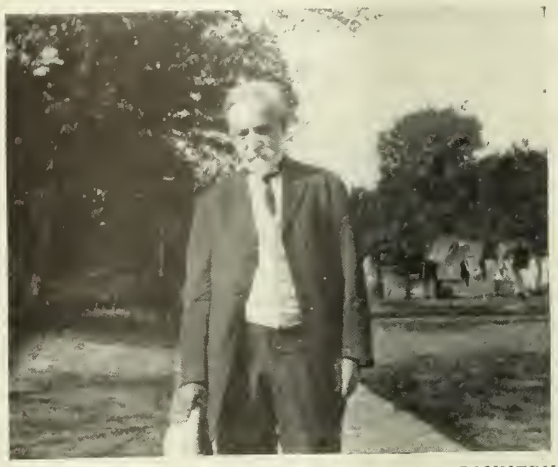
The college has grown remarkably during the last few years, and its influence is being felt throughout the country. Hitherto the music department of the college has been carried on in one of the regular college buildings, but arrangements are now being made to erect a special building for the School of Music. This will include a recital hall at which, during the concert season, leading artists will be engaged to appear.

Three special recitals were given during the summer session, the proceeds being devoted to the Music School building fund. N. Stuart Smith played the following program:

La Cathedrale engloutie	Debussy
Jardins sous la pluie	Debussy
Arabesque No. 2	Debussy
Etude en Octaves No. 3 (d'apres J. S. Bach)	Phillip
Thema, op. 10, No. 2	Moszkowski
Air de Ballet, op. 36, No. 5	Moszkowski
En Automne, op. 36, No. 4	Moszkowski
Etude de Concert No. 2	Chaminade

This young artist, who has had the advantage of instruction in interpretation from Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler, plays with rare finish. He shows excellent control, his phrasing is always intelligent and his pedaling good. Altogether his performance is very artistic and thoughtful.

Quite one of the most interesting features of the session was the brilliant recital by Pasquale Tallarico, who can now be classed as one of the most prominent and promising of the younger pianists of the day.



His exacting program was as follows:

Prelude and fugue, A minor	Bach-Liszt
Sonata, op. 57	Beethoven
Fantasiestück, op. 111, No. 2	Schumann
Traumeswirren	Schumann
Nocturne, G major	Chopin
Ballade, A flat	Chopin
Prelude, G minor	Rachmaninoff
In the Night	Novak
Fairy Burlesque	Tallarico
Staccato Caprice	Vogrich
Gnomenreigen	Liszt
Chant Polonaise No. 5	Chopin-Liszt
Rhapsody No. 10	Liszt

Young Tallarico seems to possess all the qualities essential to success as a public player, and it seems safe enough to predict for him a brilliant future. He already has a fine technical equipment and his interpretations are always musicianly. Physically, mentally and musically, he is endowed far beyond the average, and persistent hard work should make for him a prominent place in the musical world.

Francesco Maltese, violinist, assisted by Estelle Davis, professor of oral English at the College of New Rochelle, gave a very interesting program, August 4. Mr. Maltese's numbers included compositions by De Bériot and himself, and Mrs. Davis gave a number of interesting readings from modern poetry in a sympathetic manner.

"All work and no play make Jack a dull boy," Mr. Virgil believes; therefore he encourages the students to take proper recreation, and himself indulges in out of door exercise between lessons. Here is a picture of him taken by one of the students who "snapped" him while he was enjoying a country walk.

A. K. VIRGIL ENJOYING A WALK IN THE COUNTRY.

Mr. Virgil is a great advocate of physical exercise and deep breathing, and attributes his vitality to daily attention to proper exercise.

Oscar Seagle Hard at Work.

Bramber, Sussex Co., Eng., August 8, 1914.

If one happens to be awake during the night, the thunder of huge guns may be heard from the direction of Portsmouth, where the naval reserves are practising in order to support the first fleets; or in the day, if one will climb to the summit of the South Downs, destroyers may be seen rushing up and down the Channel upon secret errands. The young men of the village are gone, horses and automobiles are being requisitioned, and but a few nights ago the clamorous buzz of an aeroplane was heard, although the government has forbidden amateurs to fly.

THE GARDEN OF "THE NEW HOUSE," OSCAR SEAGLE'S SUMMER HOME IN SUSSEX, ENGLAND.

A German spy was captured on the downs, and imprisoned only sixteen miles away, where hundreds of his compatriots are detained.

There is no boisterousness, no emotion; Englishmen are but following England. When the first news of the war came, the American colony here, with Oscar Seagle, the American baritone, was affected in no small degree. The declaration of war came on the August Bank Holiday, and the holiday for banks was extended till yesterday, so money was scarce. Change was pooled so those without could enjoy the comforts; the banks are open now and there is not the scarcity of money reported. The most disquieting news was the removal of the German boats, and the probable withdrawal of English vessels. That scare has passed. Most of the colony will remain until Mr. Seagle leaves, the latter part of September. These first days of tension have upset the routine of work, but now may be heard scales and songs on every hand. Rudolph Engberg and Gustav Holmquist, of Chicago, sail tomorrow.

High Honors Paid Elman in Antipodes.

Latest direct news from Australia and New Zealand, where Mischa Elman is touring this summer, is to the effect that the celebrated Russian violinist has been received and honored like a king. His steamer was met by a private launch, and the reception committee (which included many of the distinguished men) was headed by the Premier of Australia. As a rule, celebrated visiting artists are, it is said, received by the Lord Mayors of the principal cities.

Elman gave four concerts in one week in Sydney and four in Melbourne, and as hundreds were turned away from each, undoubtedly several thousand persons in those two cities were unable to hear the violinist. The musical public and the society element treated Elman with royal favor. After each concert he was nearly exhausted on account of many encores and recalls.

In each State visited, Elman was received by the Governor, and had he accepted half the invitations for receptions, dinners, etc., it would have been a physical impossibility for him to have filled his concert engagements.

Up to the date of Elman's last letter to his managers in New York, he had not heard of the European war. This epistle came from New Zealand, a country he described as "very beautiful"; moreover, the fortunate young man wrote that "he was in perfect health and having a glorious time."

Francis Rogers Preparing for Big Season.

Francis Rogers, the well known baritone, writes as follows: "I have been spending a very quiet summer in Rhode Island, swimming and playing tennis, the principal object being to refresh myself after the fatigue of last season, which was an arduous one for me, and to store up electric current for this coming season, which promises to be even busier than last."

Then to prove that he has been very "quiet," Mr. Rogers proceeds to enumerate some of his engagements during this summer season. As has already been mentioned in these columns, Mr. Rogers sang recently at the Building of Arts in Bar Harbor, Me. In addition, he has twice appeared in private musicales at Newport. In September he will be heard in public in a recital with Alice Preston, the soprano; and later in the same month will give a joint recital with Mrs. Rogers at Lenox, Mass.

Mr. Rogers will, as usual, be under the management of Loudon Charlton, who promises him a very busy season, including a New York recital and several educational programs at schools and colleges. Besides his concertizing, Mr. Rogers will devote certain mornings of each week to teaching, in which pursuit he finds much to interest him. As this time will necessarily be limited, those who desire to study with Mr. Rogers should write him at an early date so as to insure being accepted, as a certain number only will be granted that privilege.

Florence Hinkle's Changed Plans.

Florence Hinkle is to remain in this country all of next spring. Because of the European war, the Mendelssohn Choir, of Toronto, which had engaged Miss Hinkle for its European tour (which was to have been made during April and May, 1915) has had to abandon the trip.

Rather than be forced to send Enrico Caruso to the front, Italy prudently decided to keep out of it.—New York American.

SCHUMANN-HEINK
TOUR--SEASON 1914-15--NOW BOOKING
STEINWAY PIANO USED
Direction: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th Street, New York

Myrtle ELVYN
RENOWNED AMERICAN PIANISTE
Now Booking For American Tour 1914-1915
Concert Direction, HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Bldg., Chicago
KIMBALL PIANO USED

WITH A VIEW TO MAINTAINING THE HIGHEST POSSIBLE STANDARD OF MUSICAL EXCELLENCE AND THOROUGHNESS

THE von ENDE SCHOOL OF MUSIC OF NEW YORK CITY has inaugurated the following schedule of work together with stringent final tests for certificates and diplomas

VIOLIN DEPARTMENT

SCHEDULE OF WORK REQUIRED IN THE REGULAR DEPARTMENT OF THE PRESCRIBED COURSE FOR VIOLINISTS

Grade.	Principal Subject.	Theory.	Supplementary Theory.	Lectures and Mus. Hist.	Secondary Subject.	Chamber Music. Orchestra.	Choral Practice.
I.	Violin.	1st Year Harmony (3 terms).	Elements of Theory. Rhythm. Solfeggio.	Literary and Art Lectures and Mus. Hist.	Piano.	Sonatas: Bach, Haydn, Haendel, Mozart.	Chorus. Opera. Oratorio.
II.	Violin.	2d Year Harmony (3 terms).	Ear Training.	Literary and Art Lectures and Mus. Hist.	Piano.	Trios: Mozart, Haydn, Beethoven, etc. Orchestra.	Chorus. Opera. Oratorio.
III.	Violin.	Harmonic Analysis (1 term). Counterpoint (2 terms).	Musical Form.	Literary and Art Lectures.	Piano.	Quartets: Haydn, Mozart. Orchestra.	Chorus. Opera. Oratorio.
IV.	Violin.			Literary and Art Lectures.	Piano.	Quartets: Beethoven. Orchestra.
V.	Violin.				Piano.	Quartets: After Beethoven to modern.

THE FINAL TEST FOR CERTIFICATES. (VIOLIN)

The final test for certificates of the Regular Department for violinists of the Prescribed Course, requires the musicianly performance of a standard violin concerto, such as the Mendelssohn, Bruch, Mozart, Spohr, Vieuxtemps or Saint-Saëns; excerpts from the Bach Sonatas, several Rode Caprices and Gavinies Etudes played from memory; an average of ninety per cent. in the Theoretical work, a creditable performance as first violinist of a Beethoven string quartet, and ninety per cent. attendance record at Lectures, Classes and Recitals of the school as assigned.

SCHEDULE OF WORK REQUIRED IN THE ARTISTS AND TEACHERS DEPARTMENT OF THE PRESCRIBED COURSE FOR VIOLINISTS

Grade.	Principal Subject.	Theory.	Chamber Music in Relation to Forms Studied in Composition Class.	Secondary Subject.	Pedagogy. Score Reading. Conducting.
IV.		Counterpoint (3 terms).
V.		Counterpoint (1 term). Canon and Fugue (2 terms).			Pedagogy.
VI.	Violin. Advanced Technique and Repertoire.	Composition. Orchestration.	Important Chamber Music Works.	Piano.	Pedagogy.
VII.	Violin. Advanced Technique and Repertoire.	Composition. Orchestration.	Important Chamber Music Works.	Piano.	Score Reading and Conducting.
VIII.	Violin. Advanced Technique and Repertoire.	Composition. Orchestration.	Important Chamber Music Works.	Piano.	Score Reading and Conducting.

THE FINAL TEST FOR DIPLOMA OF GRADUATION. (VIOLIN)

The final test for a diploma of graduation of the Artists' and Teachers' department for violinists of the Prescribed Course, requires a musicianly performance of either the Beethoven, Brahms, Paganini, or Ernst F sharp minor concertos; the Bach Chaconne, several Wieniawski and Paganini Caprices by memory, an average of ninety per cent. in the theoretical work, a creditable performance as first violin in a modern string quartet, ninety per cent. attendance record at Lectures, Classes and Recitals at the school as assigned, and a test in score reading and conducting.

Copyright, 1914, Herwegh von Ende.

Christine Miller Gives Brilliant Recital

Following her appearance in Jacksonville, Ill., last March, Christine Miller, the popular American contralto who is now in Europe, received the following praiseworthy press criticisms:

Christine Miller, contralto, appeared in a recital in Music Hall of the Woman's College last night as a number on the artists' course given by the institution. Miss Miller has a magnificent voice, a profound knowledge of the art of singing, a style peculiarly her own, and these qualifications, together with splendid interpreting powers, made her artistic singing enjoyable in the extreme. The large and critical audience manifested by its numerous recalls and its insistent demands for extras its admiration of the excellent singer.—Jacksonville, Ill., Daily Journal, March 3, 1914.

Miss Miller has a mellow, beautiful contralto voice. Her tones are rich, sweet and unusually delicate. The program was one well suited to show her excellent technic and versatility. In "The Idyls of the South Sea" her voice showed particularly well its mellow resonance and rich delicacy. In the song of farewell from "Jeanne d'Arc," Miss Miller showed strong dramatic talent and the splendid qualities of her voice. Jeanne's farewell, with its regrets, its ambition and its foreshadowing of tragedy, was interpreted with great power and beauty. Miss Miller possesses a charming personality. Her responses to encores were gracious and liberal.—Jacksonville, Ill., Courier, March 3, 1914. (Advertisement.)

Pontius and His Touring Car.

William H. Pontius, vocal teacher and director of the Minneapolis School of Music, is an enthusiastic automobilist. The accompanying snapshot of the clever driver was taken recently in Dubuque, Ia., from which city Mr. Pontius sent the following information regarding his summer outing: "Just to let you know that I am enjoying a motor trip vacation through Minnesota, Iowa, Illinois and Wisconsin. Roads beautiful and weather propitious. Professor and Mrs. A. L. Kleine, of the Dubuque Academy of Music, will drive back with me. Also G. A. Grimm, of this town. We hope for an enjoyable trip."

WILLIAM H. PONTIUS IS AN ENTHUSIASTIC AUTOMOBILIST.

Enjoying Life.

Annie Louise David and Walter David, are truly enjoying life in the accompanying picture. Frances Sprague, whose home in Berlin has been a Mecca for Americans during the last few weeks, is pictured at the wheel of Commodore Hammond's yacht, Fantasy. Onset, Mass., seems to have been the scene of many a pleasant vacation.

ANNIE LOUISE DAVID, FRANCES SPRAGUE, WALTER DAVID.

Arrigo Serato's Art.

Arrigo Serato, the distinguished Italian violinist, has, it is said, created a new epoch in the violin realm. For a considerable period in the history of music there have been few violinists of the very first rank; not one of Latin origin; but the advent of the new genius, Serato, has added a new and important chapter, for he is not only a master violinist, but an artist of such commanding power as to prove conclusively that musical standards have been revolutionized since the time of Paganini. Serato is an Italian; Italy claims him so, but for all of that, he is endowed with the intellect and musical gifts that enabled him to absorb the qualities of the profound German school, without losing the warmth and ingratiating individuality of the Latin race. Serato has lived for many years in Germany, and has made a thorough study of the German classics; nevertheless, in his performance, he makes apparent the fact that a new and remarkable violinist has risen up to excite wonder. In Serato's intellect and temperament are said to be wedded the classical spirit with the modern grace and verve. Serato is a true genius, and it is claimed that he has united the well nigh impossible gamut, reaching from the highest virtuosity to the sincerest musicianship that is oblivious of mere technic.

Serato's playing is remarkable and of deep interest not alone to musicians, but also to the average music lover because of its sheer beauty. The spiritual, the poetic, the intellectual qualities that make an artist great, are his to command, yet one is ever mindful of his Italian blood and Latin temperament, which penetrate through every phrase, enhancing the music with true emotion and feeling.

"Hiawatha" Given at Wa-Y-a-Ga-My.

Walter Spry, the well known American pianist and instructor, sent the accompanying post card to the MUSICAL COURIER's Chicago office.

Mr. Spry, who, with his family, is enjoying a well deserved rest at Wallow Lake, Mich., wrote on the reverse side of the card: "You spoke of my sending you a postal and thought you might find this one useful. Yours sincerely."

Mr. Spry's addition to the summer staff of this paper is valuable, and more "news" is to be expected from him in the near future.

GREETINGS FROM WALTER SPRY.

SLEZAK
The Great Czech Tenor
In America January, February, March and April, 1915
Exclusive Management:
HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York City
Hardman Piano Used

HENRIETTE BACH
VIOLINIST. Management, Wolfsohn Bureau, 1 W. 34 St., N. Y.

The HAMBOURG CONSERVATORY of MUSIC
PROFESSOR MICHAEL HAMBOURG, JAN and BORIS HAMBOURG
Summer Course for Teachers, Amateurs and Professionals by these famous artists. TORONTO, CANADA.

GIUSEPPE FABBRINI DISTINGUISHED ITALIAN PIANIST
Minneapolis

LIMA O'BRIEN
ACCOMPANIST
21 West 30th St. :: :: :: :: New York City

FREDERIC C. FREEMANTEL Teacher of Singing
89 South Tenth Street Minneapols, Minn.

The MEHAN Summer School for Teachers and Singers
July 7—Aug. 15. Appointments By Mail
Season 1914-15 Begins Sept. 15
SUITE 70, CARNEGIE HALL, TEL. 5946 COLUMBUS

The Eminent Austrian Pianist
MME. MARIE VON UNSCHULD
Piano Recitals and Lectures on Technic by Motion Pictures
EUROPEAN CONCERT BUREAU, 1320 F St., Washington, D. C.

GAREISSEN STUDIO HALL: 64 East 34th St. NEW YORK CITY.

MABEL
GARRISON
SOPRANO
Metropolitan Opera Company
Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway : : New York City

JANE OSBORN-HANNAH
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Song Recitals Concert and Orchestral Appearances
AVAILABLE ENTIRE SEASON
Personal Management Chas. L. Wagner, 1451 Broadway, New York

JOHN McCORMACK
CELEBRATED IRISH TENOR
In America Entire Season 1914-15
Always and only under personal management of Chas. L. Wagner 1451 Broadway New York
Steinway Piano Used

RUDOLPH GANZ
"THE PIANIST WITH A MESSAGE"
Returns to America for
Season of 1914-1915
Exclusive Management, CHARLES L. WAGNER
1451 Broadway, New York
Steinway Piano Used

ALICE NIELSEN
Prima Donna Soprano
SEASON 1914-15 AMERICAN CONCERT TOUR
Personal Management, CHAS. L. WAGNER
1451 BROADWAY - - NEW YORK

THE HELENE MAIGILLE AMERICAN SCHOOL OF BEL CANTO.

"A School Which Sets the Standard in Vocal Art."

On September 8 and during that week, Helene Maigille will be at the Helene Maigille American School of Bel Canto, New York, to receive applicants and prospective pupils and answer all inquiries regarding the courses to be pursued at the school. Opening with a large enrollment of enthusiastic pupils from many States in the Union, the second year of this successful school of singing will begin its activities on Monday, September 14, in its home at Carnegie Hall, New York, where every facility and encouragement to excel will be given the ambitious pupil.

Best of all, this school of singing is not alone for the beginner nor even for the advanced student in this most difficult and exacting of arts, but soloists who have the slightest fault or who wish to profit by the accurate teaching of this "wonderful and progressive authority" on the voice will find, as several well known professionals discovered during the summer session, "a new world will be opened unto them."

This is not to be wondered at when one remembers that Mme. Maigille has been renowned for many years as one of the greatest exponents of bel canto, and the graduates of her method have long been noted as successful singers and teachers. Herself a pupil of the great Rosina Laborde, Helene Maigille continues the traditions and vocal methods of that celebrated teacher, and an opportunity to learn in detail the lovely old Italian method from an authority is indeed welcome.

The basis of the Helene Maigille American School of Bel Canto is the genuine Italian style, modified, however, by her wide experience with modern improvements, wherever these live up to the name. Only apt pupils with good natural voices are accepted and the diploma is not available to any whose only qualification is that they can pay the tuition fees. Mme. Maigille endeavors to make thoroughness and honesty the foundation of her school.

It has been indomitable perseverance which has placed Mme. Maigille among the first teachers of the country, and the influence of her school is bound to make itself felt in the world of music. She is no theorist; she knows whereof she teaches, is a woman of inspirational personality, broad experience, and one who is not only a voice builder and a thorough musician, but a charming woman of keen intellect and broad culture as well.

In this school, under the best of influences, the pupil, brilliant or plodding, will be given not only a thorough understanding of pure vocal production, but will be prepared in all requisites for appearance in recital, concert, oratorio, opera or teaching, according to the individual need of the pupil.

Those who are familiar with the work of Mme. Maigille's pupils remark their pure diction, superb breath control, and ease and abandon in singing; in fact, Mme. Maigille knows how to produce the finished artist.

Some years ago when the MUSICAL COURIER predicted a great future for Mme. Maigille, calling her then the "American Marchesi," the prediction seemed in jeopardy through many circumstances which surrounded the broader activities of which this extraordinary woman is capable. Now, in her own words, Mme. Maigille summarizes the effect upon her career as a teacher, of the MUSICAL COURIER'S prediction and faith in her gift of teaching.

She says: "The faith you then expressed meant more to me than you ever knew. It was a beacon light which kept ever flashing and leading me onward to the goal. Its broadening influence was ever the dominant still small voice that kept me repeating over and over again, 'Some day I will prove their faith was not misplaced.'

"Artists in opera, church and concert who began their successful work under my care and who later entered upon successful careers, need no further mention—they are too well known; nor do the dramatic favorites, lecturers, and church dignitaries who owe their splendid voices and diction to the vocal method need reiteration. Now comes, at last, my dream fulfilled—a school of singing which I intend shall set the standard, an 'American School of Bel Canto' which will prove its title as the 'foremost school of singing in this country,' not as a title but as a fact.

"What I hope you will privilege me to reiterate, however, is my own deep appreciation that your faith was ever my own silent watchword. Not more potent in the great affairs of his own life, as editor and owner of the MUSICAL COURIER, was the ever present and potent influence, the late Marc A. Blumenberg, exercised over my career. He kept my own faith in my method an ever present lantern to light the way until I felt the moment had come to present my best to him. The editor and councillor, Marc A. Blumenberg, is gone. But long may his worthy associates and successors live to carry on the work of chiselling the monument he left to them to complete.

"And when, as time goes by and our country realizes its debt to the MUSICAL COURIER, and still further realizes

EDYTH WALKER
(Imperial Royal Chambersinger, Court of Austria--Hungary)
Dramatic Soprano
Metropolitan, New York.
Covent Garden, London.
Imperial Royal Opera, Vienna.
Royal Opera, Berlin.
Festspielhaus, Bayreuth.
Royal Opera and Wagner Festivals, Munich, etc., etc., etc.
Season 1914-1915 with the
Chicago Opera Company

The Sensation of the Year
CARL
FLESCH
The Great Hungarian Violinist
Second American Tour
January and February, 1915
Management HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO

BARONESS SIGNE VON RAPPE
SOPRANO
Prima Donna, Vienna and Stockholm Operas. Principal Soloist 6th QUADRENNIAL MUSIC FESTIVAL OF THE AMERICAN UNION OF SWEDISH SINGERS, MINNEAPOLIS, JUNE 8-9, 1914.
"A voice of great range and brilliance."
—Minneapolis Tribune, June 9, 1914
American Tour, March-May, 1915
OPERA :: LIEDER :: ORATORIO
in Swedish, Italian, German, French and English
Sole Management:
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

EFREM
ZIMBALIST
Celebrated Violinist
— Will return to —
AMERICA
Season 1914-1915
For Terms and Dates available
Apply
WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th St., New York
STEINWAY PIANO

Season 1914-1915
ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, New York
Has the Honor to Present the Violinist

SPALDING

Assisted at the Piano by
ANDRÉ BENOIST

Steinway Piano

THOMAS J. KELLY
Conductor Mendelssohn Choir.
VOCAL COACH
Lecture Recitals with Mrs. Kelly.
209 SOUTH 35th AVE., OMAHA, NEBRASKA

Mme. DE VERE-SAPIO
Prima Donna Soprano from Paris Grand Opera; La Scala, Milan; Covent Garden, London; Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., etc., etc., in America Season 1914-15. For terms and dates address:
65 Central Park West, New York.

ROMUALDO SAPIO
Formerly Conductor Metropolitan Opera, New York, and having coached the majority of great operatic artists, among whom: Adelina Patti, Nordica, Tamagno, Etc.
VOCAL STUDIO, 65 CENTRAL PARK WEST, N. Y.

Ellen Keller
VIOLINIST
In America Season 1914-15. NOW BOOKING
Exclusive Management;
Gertrude F. Cowen, 1451 Broadway, New York City

NEW YORK COLLEGE OF MUSIC
128-130 East 58th Street
CARL HEIN Directors AUGUST FRAEMCKE
The college has for its object the universal higher education in all branches of music—Department for those who desire to teach music—Course for Supervisors of Music in Public Schools—Opportunities and training for public appearance—40 Instructors of highest reputation—Newly engaged, Rubin Goldmark, Composition; Michel Sciapiro, violin.
CATALOG ON APPLICATION

ARTHUR SHATTUCK
The Distinguished American
PIANIST
In America Season 1914-15
Management, HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York
Steinway Piano Used

that it represents all that is best and highest in the cause of music, artists, teachers and students may well seek its counsels and splendid pages to be in the company of men and women who have so nobly helped to make musical history in these United States, and seek to be among the new helpers in the great march of progress which lies before them in any department of musical endeavor. They will broaden their own sphere of action by so doing, and bring far more belief in their ability in the world around them as well as prove by their works and continued successes that publicity is far more meritorious and to be commended than silence.

"First, know yourself, your possibilities, your successes, and then let the world know that you are the one to give the best, and only the best, and the world will take you at your own valuation. Never, in the history of music in America, was America so ready for complete, worldwide recognition of its own institutions. Today this country can be ransacked for a complete corps of artists to replace the foreign singers now facing battle in their different countries and women singers who may not find transportation, and the American artists can be found, too.

"The Metropolitan would prove its strength instead of weakness by opening its stage door to the American singers, and in six months it would, from seeming defeat, rise up and give a splendid season of grand opera. Then a national opera would have been born and crowned with the acclaim of every living American whose heart and soul are able to thrill to the voices of his own countrymen and countrywomen. Victory, instead of defeat! The glorious awakening to the fact that Berlin, Paris, St. Petersburg, Vienna, or Milan have no more to offer in excellent voices than New York, Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia, New Orleans or San Francisco.

HELENE MAIGILLE.

"It will be found that teachers abound who can produce voices in their studios as great as have been heard, but silent for want of opportunity. Concert recitalists who charm the world as lieder singers would grace with equal effect the 'national grand opera' stage. The opportunity is unique in the annals of music.

"This winter will further prove that the severing of home ties, as in the past, for long sojournings in foreign ports by talented pupils, is unnecessary and will never again prevail in such a degree.

"Here we will give the best: Here we have the best.

"Here our own talent will be welcomed as never before.

"If our arms had to be crossed and the clash of sabre tears asunder the governments of the Old World, leaving modern civilization to stand aghast at the spectacle, let us be profoundly thankful that, at least, one sure sign has arisen in this calamity like an avenging hand, that points at last to our own well conditioned clime, where from this hour the arts and sciences will flourish to the greatest extent that our human knowledge can conceive. And if force of arms was necessary to prove to us our own splendid growth, excellence, and greatness, let us, one and all, cease to condemn the nations hurling defiance at each other and pushing civilization backward in their own countries; and instead welcome the emancipating hand that so swiftly forced upon us an enlightenment of our own country's strength and resources, our unequalled greatness, and recognition of its unchallenged worth.

"Long live America! Long live its faithful teachers! Long live its great educational, industrial, musical and other art centers! Last and best—long live its gloriously talented youth, who now realizes that in his country he may find culture and knowledge, higher and nobler than he could find in any foreign city, and which at the present

The Knabe
The World's Best
Piano

has no peer—it ably represents the highest achievement in present day piano building.

The numerous types of Player Mechanisms incorporated in enable anyone to play with all the finesse of a skilled pianist.

KNABE PLAYER-PIANOS

Representatives throughout the world. Catalogs and information forwarded upon request. New York prices universal with freight and expenses added to outside points.

THE KNABE
The World's Best Piano

SOUSA AND HIS BAND

"HEARD THE WORLD AROUND"

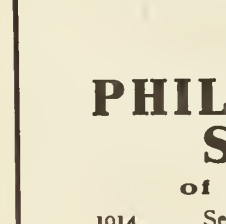
Office: 1 West 34th Street

Telephone 6128 Greeley

Alexander BLOCH

CONCERT VIOLINIST

Management, Foster & David, 500 Fifth Avenue, - New York



KIDD KEY CONSERVATORY SHERMAN TEXAS

Hans Richard has been made Director in the Conservatory and is assisted by an able corps of teachers. Bendetson Netzorg has also been added to the Conservatory faculty. For catalog address

MRS. L. A. KIDD KEY

INEZ BARBOUR SOPRANO Concert-Recital-Oratorio

Management: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th St., New York

FLORENCE AUSTIN

America's Violinist

Season 1914-1915 Now Booking

Address:

THOMAS McGRATH, 133 East 34th St., New York

Phone Murray Hill, 2239

JANE CATHERWOOD SOPRANO and TEACHER

Fowler Apartments, 1110 W. Washington Street

Los Angeles, Cal. Phone 20584

MARY DENNISON GAILEY

VIOLINIST

Address, Russell Bridges, Empire Life Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Yolanda MERÖ Hungarian Pianist

STEINWAY PIANO USED

Under the exclusive management of CHARLES L. WAGNER, 1451 Broadway New York City

FRANCES ALDA SOPRANO OF THE METROPOLITAN OPERA CO.

Assisted by Gutia Cassini, Cellist, and Frank La Forge, Pianist

SEASON 1914-15 NOW BOOKING

Exclusive Management for Concerts: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York City

Baldwin Piano Used

Dramatic Mezzo Soprano

SARA HEINEMAN

Concerts and Recitals also Southern Folk Songs in Costume

In Europe During Summer

Mail to Musical Courier - - - 437 Fifth Avenue

Baroness Evans

Von KLENNER

America's Representative of the GREAT GARCIA VOCAL METHOD

Grand Prix—Paris Exposition, 1900. Summer School—Point Chautauqua, Chautauqua Lake. N. Y. June 25th to Aug. 27th, 1914.

Tradition Languages Repertoire Diction Special Courses for Teachers. Address, New York Studio, 952 Eighth Avenue

THE PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY

of NEW YORK

1914 Seventy-Third Season 1915

JOSEF STRANSKY, Conductor

SUBSCRIPTION SERIES:

New York, Brooklyn, Baltimore and Washington.

TOURS;

New England, New York State, Canada, Middle West, South

Prospectus on application to

FELIX F. LEIFELS, Manager Carnegie Hall, NEW YORK

moment combined Europe is flinging with arrogant scorn in each others' faces, calling upon cannon ball and shell to work indelible ineffaceable ruin upon even the time honored monuments of the hand and brain of peaceful genius, covering the landscape with dead and dying, which upon its seats of learning in literature, science, art and music a reign of blood and terror has fallen which make their little pretentions to superiority in manners and arts over our own magnificent republic seem like the acts and imaginings of madmen and savages in their wild march to give such hideous battle in these days.

"Let every teacher awake to his opportunity; now indeed is the appointed hour when America will prove that it does in actual truth lead the world in music, as it does in government, finance and scholastic institutions."

Germaine Schnitzer to Play in Denver.

Germaine Schnitzer, the pianist, will be one of the attractions again when she appears as soloist with the Denver Symphony Orchestra, on November 6. It is the second time that this famous artist has been booked to appear at these concerts.

In one of the accompanying pictures Mme. Schnitzer is shown in the act of starting out in her auto from Edge-

MOTORING BRINGS AN APPETITE.

EN ROUTE.

mere, L. I., where the artist has a summer home. In the other picture she is seen taking refreshments to fortify herself for her homeward trip.

At the Mississippi State Chautauqua.

Every season at the Chautauqua at Crystal Springs, Miss., a medal is offered for the best playing of a certain composition. All contestants perform the same piece and are then given tests in sight reading, etc. This contest is open only to the best colleges in the State.

This season six different colleges were represented and the medal was awarded to Elsie Barge, of Brookhaven, Miss., who is a pupil of Miss McCoy, of Whitworth College. During the past eight years every time Whitworth College has entered the contest it has won.

Other medals for Whitworth have been given to Jemmie Vardeman and Annie Blue; a year ago Mary Ellis, a Whitworth College girl, now living in Memphis, Tenn., carried off the honors.

Adah Sampson-Thomas in Long Island.

Adah Sampson-Thomas, voice teacher of Pittsburgh, Pa., who has been spending her vacation at Manhattan Beach and points on Long Island, expects to return to Pittsburgh early in September.

MARIE SUNDELIUS Soprano

Exclusive Management

GERTRUDE F. COWEN, 1425 Broadway, New York

MME. GRACE HALL RIHELDAFFER

SOPRANO

624 9th AVE., MUNHALL, PITTSBURGH, PA.

Florence Hinkle

....SOPRANO....

Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th St., New York

BYFORD RYAN

Three Years Leading Tenor, Opera Comique, Berlin

Vocal Studio: 28 West 63rd Street - - New York

Lionel Robsarte

Opera Tenor

Instructor to the Profession. Hotel Woodward, N. Y.

ADELAIDE GESCHEIDT

DRAMATIC SOPRANO

Instructor of the Miller Vocal Art Science and The Art of Singing

817 Carnegie Hall Tel. 1350 Columbus

JOHN THOMPSON AMERICAN PIANIST

IN AMERICA SEASON 1914-1915

Management: ROBERT P. STRINE, Estey Hall, Philadelphia

Miss LEGINSKA

Hotel Grenoble, Seventh Ave. and 56th St., New York, Tel. 909 Columbus

"One of the most remarkable women pianists now before the public."—N. Y. Tribune, April 22, 1914.

HELEN BIXBY WETZEL

Coloratura Soprano

Now appearing with several Italian Grand Opera Companies. MILAN, ITALY

GERMAINE SCHNITZER

THE FAMOUS AUSTRIAN PIANIST

In America Season 1914-1915

Direction: R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, New York City

BALDWIN PIANO

LESLEY MARTIN, Bel Canto

STUDIO: 1425 Broadway, New York

SINGERS — Susanne Baker Watson, Cora Cross, Pauline Fredericks, Andrew Mack, Nellie Hart, Marion Stanley, Estelle Ward, Gertrude Hutcheson, George Bemus, George Gillet, John Hendricks, Dr. Eugene Walton Marshall, Fiske O'Hara, Horace Wright, Mabel Wilbur, John H. Stubbs, Edward Foley, Albert Wallerstedt, Umberto Sacchetti and many other singers now before the public in opera and church work.

Season 1914-15

LOUIS SIEGEL

Violin Virtuoso

FIRST AMERICAN TOUR

Management: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York

1914-15 SEASON 1914-15

GRACE POTTER

PIANIST

MARIE HERTENSTEIN

PIANIST

FRANCIS MACMILLEN

VIOLINIST

Exclusive Management S. E. MACMILLEN, 618 Candler Bldg., 220 West 42nd St., New York. Phone Bryant 8520

Oscar Saenger

TEACHER OF SINGING

From the rudiments of tone placing to artistic finishing for concert, oratorio, recital and opera. Teacher of famous Opera and Concert singers, among whom are:

Mme. Marie Rappold, soprano; Miss Florence Hinkle, soprano; Miss Mabel Garrison, soprano; Miss Helen Warrum, soprano; Mme. Bernice de Pasquali, soprano; Mr. Rudolf Berger, tenor; Mr. Heinrich Hensel, tenor; Mr. Orville Harrold, tenor; Mr. Paul Althouse, tenor; Mr. John Young, tenor; Miss Lila Robeson, contralto; Miss Mildred Potter, contralto; Miss Kathleen Howard, contralto; Mme. Josephine Jacoby, contralto; Miss Sibyl Conklin, contralto; Mr. Henri Scott, basso; Mr. Allen Hinckley, basso; Mr. Louis Kreidler, baritone; Mr. Albert Wiederhold, bass-baritone; Mr. Leon Rains, basso.

TEL. 687 LENOX STUDIO: 6 EAST 81st St., NEW YORK

Resume Teaching October 1st.

MADAME ANITA RIO

CELEBRATED AMERICAN PRIMA DONNA SOPRANO

after six years of operatic successes in Europe, will return to this country in September for Concert and Oratorio Engagements.

Management - - MUSIC LEAGUE OF AMERICA,
HOWARD E. POTTER, Business Manager
AEOLIAN HALL - - - NEW YORK

MME. MARIE
RAPPOLD
Celebrated Prima Donna Soprano
of the Metropolitan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts — January to June, 1915
Exclusive Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY

GEORGE
DOSTAL
DISTINGUISHED BOHEMIAN TENOR
First American Concert Tour Season 1914-1915
Exclusive Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, NEW YORK

Three years with the late Putnam Griswold.
Former accompanist for Jadlowker of Berlin Royal Opera.
At present with Orville Harrold and George Dostal.
EMIL J. POLAK
ACCOMPANIST and COACH
Address: 217 East 71st Street, New York City
Telephone 923 Lenox

After Nine Years in Leipsic
MRS. CARL ALVES
will resume residence in New York next August, beginning vocal instruction September 15
Applications may be made now with
C. WALDEMAR ALVES
48 West 90th Street -:- New York

YVONNE DE
TRÉVILLE
Coloratura Soprano
Grand Opera Prima Donna
NOW IN AMERICA
SEASON 1914-15 BOOKING
Available for Concerts, Musicales, Recitals and Festivals.
European Address: 68 rue de l'Aurora, Bruxelles, Belgium
American Address: - 62 De Hart Place, Elizabeth, N. J.
Cable Address: Detreville-Bruxelles

MY DAY DREAM—A COUNTRY HOME.

By Margarette Matzenauer,
Prima donna contralto, Metropolitan Opera Company.

The one great passion of my life has been the dream of a beautiful home. This home dream crept slowly into my soul long before the face of my tenor husband came to smile at all other hopes and fears. But when he did come into my life it required no pleading to make him feel the beauty of the vision of a home our very own.

But my dream home is not located in the city. I love the city—to the cities of the world both myself and my husband owe our all, but I do not want my really, truly home in any great city. New York is exceedingly attractive—I think it is the most wonderful city in all the world. New York ever presents a vision radiant with splendors of wealth and power. The attractions are myriad: the beautiful parks, the wide smooth streets, the palatial homes, and at night the seemingly never ending gleam of electric lights. The lambent flame of New York's delightful life has filled our horizon with the glory of an endless sunrise, but when I think of my dream home I invariably locate it away from the seething tide of Broadway, out in God's own beautiful country.

MARGARETE MATZENAUER.

The stamping place of the millions is a good place for business and the only place where opera could be made possible, but with my idea of a home comes the longing for the open country. The smell of the green fields and the wild flowers, with a fresh breath of the salt sea, and quiet woodland roads and the kindly eyes of horses, cows and dogs—these, together with the mellow influence of the moon and the stars o' nights, lost to the people who house themselves amid the glare of a billion electric lights.

At my country home there will be nothing cultivated, forced or artificial on the wide stretch of lawn—just trees, shrubs and wild flowers. I love the wild flowers best, for they ask nothing and give everything.

My home must have a long water front, for I love boating, fishing and swimming. I can't remember the day when I could not swim, and I have always enjoyed telling of the big fish I nearly caught and the baiting of a hook never was a secret to me. And as for handling a sailboat, I have been out sailing in some pretty rough weather all alone and have always managed to get back. Sailing a boat is one of my ideas of real sport. Every woman should be a sailor. Sailors soon learn that winds and tides have souls. One must study their temperaments, moods, for the face of the water is ever changing, from laughter to tears, from joy to anger, and each speaks a new message. The tides speak with authority and eternal mystery. With never a break they ebb and flow twice each day, and the sailor must know their hours and plan life in harmony with them.

MME. MATZENAUER, THE PRIMA DONNA CONTRALTO, AND HER BABY, ADRIENNE.

Another of my ideas of real sport is swimming in salt water. I know of nothing so invigorating as a dip in the ocean. From early spring to late fall I have a daily swim in salt water, and I firmly believe ocean bathing is one of the highways to health and happiness.

The country roads about my dream home will be such as invite the motorist. I love a motor car. I have a new self starter and I am never so happy as when speeding over country roads, but I confess I am afraid to drive my car in New York City. I am not a speed maniac, but I do love to get over the ground, and fast driving is impossible in the crowded city streets.

My dream home is in the country. Do I have one? No. Here I am in one of Broadway's biggest apartment hotels, right in the heart of things. I can't seem to tear myself away from the lights that never grow dim and the life that never sleeps. And I suppose all my life I will just go on being a singer in opera and a dreamer of dreams.

[This article was written by Mme. Matzenauer during her residence in New York City last winter.—Editor MUSICAL COURIER.]

Nikolai Sokoloff in America.

Nikolai Sokoloff is congratulating himself that he was obliged to return to America earlier than he expected, on account of some very important business that could not be postponed. Otherwise he would have been caught in London, wondering if he was going to be able to get back in time for his engagements. He is spending the month of August in Michigan at Mackinac Island, which, he writes to his manager, Johanna Sherrick, is a wonderful place to work and play in.

Carrol Preyer Is in Holland.

Carrol Badham Preyer, the well known vocal teacher of New York, is at present in Holland, where she is visiting relatives. It was her intention to go to Italy to introduce her former pupil, Inez Barbour, before the concert audiences of a number of the leading cities of that country; on account of the present situation in Europe, however, Mme. Preyer has been forced to abandon this project.

ADA SODER-HUECK
THE EMINENT GERMAN CONTRALTO,
famous for her correct Voice Placement and Tone Development is open for a limited number of engagements. Singers prepared for Church, Concert, Opera. Celebrated Garcia Method taught.
Metropolitan Opera House, 1425 Broadway, New York Phone 6221 Bryant

Accompanist
CECIL TEAGUE
ADDRESS, 131 WEST 42nd STREET, NEW YORK CITY
Telephone, Bryant 4657

MADAME
Artha Williston
Dramatic Soprano

First appearance this season at the Maine Music Festivals in October, singing Elijah
Management:
Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York

HARRISON WALL JOHNSON
CONCERT PIANIST
Minneapolis

FLORYN OPERA PRODUCING CO., Inc.
1482 Broadway, Room 1105
Three Opera Bouffe Co's in repertoire
Applications in writing from Aspirants with good voices and talent will be considered

MARGARET KEYES CONTRALTO
WITH CHICAGO GRAND OPERA CO.
Management, THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU, 1 W. 34th St., New York
Personal Address, 600 West 138th St. Phone 1810 Audubon

Walter Henry Hall
Professor of Choral Music
Columbia University
Address, 49 Claremont Avenue

Angelo CORTESE
America's Distinguished
HARPIST
Management, Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, N. Y.

CORNELIUS VAN VLIET
Dutch Cellist
2514 Emerson Ave. S., Minneapolis, Minn

Carl Pohlig
CONDUCTOR
Address: VILLA POHLIG, PLANEGG
near Munich, GERMANY

MARGARET HUSTON
SOPRANO
In Europe Season 1914-15

Nana
GENOVESE
MEZZO SOPRANO. Formerly Manhattan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts, Recitals and Musicales
EXCLUSIVE MANAGEMENT, ANNIE FRIEDBERG, 1425 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

J. FRED WOLLE
ORGANIST
Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau
1 West 34th Street, New York

GIORGIO M. SULLI
Teacher of Carmen Melis, Clara Clemens, Mme. Martha de Lachmann, Reinhold von Warlich, Mario Sammarco, Lena Mason, Tarquinia Tarquini and other well-known singers of Grand Opera or Concerts. Musical Director of the Labor Temple Choir, New York. Teaching during summer, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday only. Special terms.
VOCAL STUDIO. 1425 Broadway
Metropolitan Opera House Building, New York
(Phone, 2762 Bryant)
Public Recitals throughout season for advanced pupils. Write for Circulars.

JAN SICKESZ
DUTCH PIANIST
American Tour Begins October, 1914
Management ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, New York
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

Heinrich Hensel's Tristan.

Hamburg, June 10.—The well known writer on Wagnerian matters, Professor Ferdinand Pfohl, writes: "Kammersänger Heinrich Hensel has made a valuable addition to his repertoire in the role of Tristan, a powerful role which this excellent Wagner singer lacked up to the present. And so we people of Hamburg may look forward with joy to an interpretation of Tristan by Hensel which will be genuinely Wagnerian, broad, impressive, and worthy of this brilliant interpreter of Siegfried, whose work is to him a joy, and who never ceases to strive for self improvement. Heinrich Hensel, the star tenor of the Hamburg Municipal Theatre, is also one of the few famous singers, who, even in the summer, gives himself no rest. The words from "Freischütz," "All the world has gone to rest," certainly do not apply to him, the tireless worker, who, from his summer home in the Taunus, is ever journeying forth to new conquests. Occupied as he is during the winter season filling engagements in Hamburg, Brussels and London, in Paris, Antwerp and Berlin, in Lubeck, Hanover and Aachen, welcomed everywhere for the thoroughness of his art and his fascinating personality, he yet always finds energy for a busy summer season. A burden? Hensel seems to find it no burden to extend his work beyond the limits of the regular season by appearing at countless concerts and festivals. His appearance at the Danzig and Antwerp festivals, at Karlsruhe, Chemnitz and Mannheim, and in opera and concert at Kassel, Basel, Nurnberg, Dortmund and Essen, come alternately with concerts at Marienbad, Karlsbad, and Franzenbad, the famous Bohemian resort in which music is held also to be part of the cure. An iron constitution must be necessary to all this, and an unbroken artistic enthusiasm. Ever increasing work! Some people call it the curse of fame; others, the blessing of fame; and to the latter Heinrich Hensel belongs.—Hamburger Nachrichten.

Louise Jansen Wylie at Ogunquit, Me.

The accompanying picture of Mme. Wylie, the well known soprano, and her husband was taken recently on board the steamer Northland en route from New York to Portland. The popular soprano is spending the month of August at Ogunquit, Me., with a coterie of New York artists, and when not working with her coach, may be found indulging in some seaside sport with the same vigor and earnestness which characterize her singing.

LOUISE JANSEN WYLIE AND MR. WYLIE ON BOARD THE STEAMSHIP NORTHLAND.

Mme. Wylie writes that "great excitement prevailed in the Ogunquit colony one morning last week when heavy firing was heard off the coast. Wild rumors of a conflict between the German and English warships following a Cunard liner were circulated. Later, however, it proved to be Uncle Sam's Jack Tars at target practice, and tennis, bathing and bridge once more became the all absorbing topics."

George Everett a Yachtsman.

George Everett, the baritone, has been spending a week on the private yacht Eudora II, Captain Bradshaw commanding, which has been leisurely cruising along the Atlantic coast.

DJANE LAVOIE-HERZ
CONCERT PIANIST
Touring Canada and United States Season 1914-1915
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.
Steinway Piano used.

WILLIAM WHEELER TENOR
Soloist Worcester Festival
Personal Address: 61 Hamilton Place, New York
O. J. EHRGOTT
156 Fifth Ave.
Personal Representative

FRANCIS ROGERS
BARITONE
Recital, Oratorio, Concert
Also a few Pupils
563 Park Ave., New York
Menegement: LOUDON CHARLTON
Carnegie Hall

LOUISE JANSEN WYLIE Soprano
Management, Iris Pendleton, Philharmony Hall, Wichita - Kansas
New York Address, 736 W. 181st Street

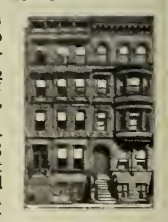
LILLIAN SHERWOOD NEWKIRK
VOICE CULTURE, ITALIAN METHOD.
Special attention to tone production.
1425 Broadway, Metropolitan Opera House Bldg., New York.
Mail address, 11 Morgan Ave., Norwalk, Conn.

Adele Krueger
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Concert, Oratorio, Recital
Management of Miss Annie Friedberg, 1425 Broadway, New York

LEO BRAUN
Voice Culture : Repertoire
Opera Concert Oratorio
Studio: 446 CENTRAL PARK WEST

GEORGE HAMLIN
Will, without fail, fill his engagements in America next February, March and April.
HAENSEL & JONES, AEOLIAN HALL, NEW YORK

ALBERT SCHOTT
DRAMATIC TENOR
In America Season 1914-1915. Available for Recitals, etc.
For Terms, Dates, etc., Address temporarily, care Musical Courier, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York.



R. E. Johnston Presents by Courtesy of Senator and Mrs. W. A. Clark
ANDRE TOURRET
French Violinist and
CAMILLE DECREUS
French Pianist (Ysaye's pianist for past two seasons)
IN JOINT RECITALS—SEASON 1914-15
All business communications should be sent to R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway - New York
CHICKERING PIANO USED

MANUEL QUIROGO
THE WONDERFUL SPANISH VIOLINIST
American Tour Opens Carnegie Hall, October 17th
Direction Sam S. and Lee Shubert
MANAGEMENT, R. E. JOHNSTON,
1451 BROADWAY - - NEW YORK CITY

OVIDE MUSIN'S Virtuoso School of Violin
Recognized as the HIGHEST SCHOOL of violin playing in the U.S.

Instruction given by this world renowned Virtuoso in person, in the Authentic tempos, style, fingering and bowing of the classical repertory, ancient and modern. Musin's SPECIAL SYSTEM greatly LESSENS the time ordinarily spent in acquiring technic and bow control. Special SUMMER COURSE for Teachers and Professionals. Piano, Harmony, with eminent teachers. Singing with Mme. Ovide Musin, Coloratura Soprano. Write for outline of Course by CORRESPONDENCE, and THEMATIC CATALOGUE of compositions and editions by OVIDE MUSIN. Dormitories for limited number of students in School. Practice Unrestricted. CHAPERONAGE. Address the REGISTRAR, 51 W. 76th St. N. Y.

MARGARET HARRISON SOPRANO
68 West 56th Street New York

DONALD CHALMERS BASSO
Address for the Summer
29 Ocean Pathway, Ocean Grove, N. J.
RECITALS :: ORATORIO :: OPERA

EVAN WILLIAMS
— TENOR —
Akron - - Ohio
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU

Horatio Connell
BASS BARITONE
Management HAENSEL & JONES, AEOLIAN HALL, NEW YORK

PHILIP SPOONER TENOR
205 West 57th St.. New York City
'Phone. 6510 Columbus

GENEVIEVE FINLAY-STEWART
DRAMATIC CONTRALTO
HAENSEL & JONES Aeolian Hall, New York

THOMAS FARMER Baritone
Engaged for St. Paul by Handel Society, London, May 12th
Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York

PAUL DUFAULT
TENOR
Address 339 West 23rd Street Tel. 7731 Chelsea

CAROLL BADHAM PREYER
TEACHER OF SINGING—Italian Method (Lamperti diploma)
Studio: 27 West 67th Street Tel. Columbus 1123

George CARRÉ
TENOR
15 East 10th St. Tel. 2927 Stuyvesant New York

Christine MILLER Contralto
Personal address: 1003 Heberton Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.
Management: HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York

REINALD WERRENRATH
BARYTONE
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th Street, - - New York

EDGAR
STILLMAN-KELLEY
STEINWAY HALL, NEW YORK, N. Y.

REBECCA DAVIDSON PIANISTE
Management: WALTER ANDERSON
171 West 57th Street New York

Joseph Baernstein Regneas
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
133 West 80th St. Tel. Schuyler 3786 New York City
Mr. Regneas will teach but 3 days weekly during July and August.
No interviews granted excepting by appointment.

BARONESS Olga von Türk-Rohn SOPRANO
"Europe's Famous Song Bird"
Season 1914-15 Now Booking
Management
Metropolitan Musical Bureau, New Brunswick, N. J.

CECIL FANNING Baritone
H. B. TURPIN Accompanist
Having returned from a year of concert giving in Germany, Italy and England, are
NOW AVAILABLE FOR RECITALS IN AMERICA
Address: H. B. TURPIN, Dayton, Ohio

Celéne Loveland "Gathering Atmosphere."

Celéne Loveland, the popular and talented American pianist, is seen in the accompanying picture "gathering atmosphere," having added to her large repertoire, among other musical selections for her coming concert tour, "In an Old Cemetery."

CELÉNE LOVELAND.

George Hamlin Safe in Milan.

One of the few private cables which has managed to find its way out of war-harassed Europe is from George Hamlin, and announces the safe arrival of himself and family in Milan, Italy. When the war broke out, the Hamlin party was in the Austrian Tyrol en route to Kassel, Germany, where Mr. Hamlin was to make some appearances in German opera. Repeated cablegrams sent by the Chicago press and by Haensel & Jones, Mr. Hamlin's New York managers, failed to locate the popular tenor, so that his reassuring message of a few days ago came as a great relief.

Like most of the Americans stranded on the other side, Mr. Hamlin reported that he was unable to obtain money; however, as two American banks promptly cabled funds over to him, the family is probably comfortable at this time.

Fortunately, Mr. Hamlin's American tour of the coming season is not scheduled to begin until next February, when he will, without question, be able to fill his engagements. In fact, it is a matter of speculation whether he will not cancel his European dates, which were to keep him abroad until the middle of January, and come back to America as soon as possible. With the probability that many of the foreign singers will be obliged to remain in their own countries this season, Haensel & Jones would be glad to have an artist of Mr. Hamlin's distinction to use the entire season.

"Fish Stories" by Riesberg.

Plymouth Reservoir, Chenango County, N. Y., is the scene depicted herewith. F. W. Riesberg and Mrs. Riesberg are just returning from an hour of fishing, during which they caught thirty-seven flounders, sixteen bullheads,

THE RIESBERGS GO A-FISHING.

a whitefish and parapoposolopsis. Mr. Riesberg says he lost a pickerel weighing six pounds, and when asked how he knew it weighed that much, said, "Why, by its scales."

But the best fish he ever landed, said this fisherman, is his companion in the boat, who weighed 100 pounds when "landed," but now weighs 140.

STEINWAY

Steinway Skill Experience and Ability Alone Can Produce a Piano of Steinway Merit

TO attain the world-popularity of the Steinway was possible only by superior merit. This merit consists in the unsurpassed qualities of tone and workmanship. These are the distinctive features in the Steinway of to-day. The first Steinway Piano was the result of an art ideal. Through four generations this ideal has been upheld and maintained, to the end that proficiency has become a tradition in the Steinway factories and that the Steinways are recognized everywhere as past masters in their craft.

Purchase a Steinway and you possess the world's greatest piano —perfect in tone and workmanship.

Write for illustrated literature about the Steinway Piano and name of the Steinway dealer nearest you.

STEINWAY & SONS
Steinway Hall
107-109 East 14th St., New York
SUBWAY EXPRESS STATION AT THE DOOR

FOUNDED JANUARY, 1880

MUSICAL COURIER
A WEEKLY JOURNAL
DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND ALLIED ARTS

GRAND PRIX
PARIS EXPOSITION
1900

ESTABLISHED
BY
MARC A. BLUMENBERG

PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY
BY THE

MUSICAL COURIER COMPANY
(Incorporated under the laws of the State of New York)
LOUIS BLUMENBERG, President
ALVIN L. SCHMOEGER, Sec. and Treas.
437 Fifth Ave., S. E. Cor. 39th St. - - - New York
Cable address: Peguiar, New York
Telephone to all Departments 4292, 4293, 4294, 7357 Murray Hill
LEONARD LIEBLING - - - - - EDITOR
H. I. BENNETT - - - - MANAGING EDITOR

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 26, 1914.

No. 1796

OFFICES AND REPRESENTATIVES

MIDDLE WEST DEPARTMENT—
Chicago Offices, 615 to 625 Orchestra Building, Rene Devries, General Representative, in charge.

UNITED STATES AND CANADA

BOSTON—
Blanche Freedman, 108 Hemenway St., Suite 7. 'Phone: B. B. 5554.
SAN FRANCISCO—
Alfred Metzger, Rooms 1009-1010, Kohler & Chase Building, 26 O'Farrell Street.
PHILADELPHIA, PA—
Harold Parry Quicksall, 5719 Windsor Place.
PITTSBURGH, PA.—
Hollis Edison Davenny, 5012 Friendship Ave., E. E.
ST. LOUIS, MO.—
Ernest R. Kroeger, Musical Art Building, St. Louis, Mo.
ST. PAUL, MINN.—
Johnson McClure Bellows, Musical Editor of St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press.
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Miss Ruth Anderson, 49 So. Eighth St.
LOUISVILLE, KY.—Katherine Whipple-Dobbs, 425 Fourth Avenue.
COLUMBUS, OHIO—Miss Emily Church Benham, 1299 Bryden Road.
BUFFALO, N. Y.—Cora Julia Taylor, 819 Richmond Avenue.
NEW ORLEANS—Harry B. Loeb, Box 79.
LOS ANGELES—Mrs. Jane Catherwood, 1110 W. Washington St.
KANSAS CITY—Geneve Lichtenwalter, 600 Studio Bldg.
CINCINNATI—
Mrs. Jessie P. Tyree, 9 The Westmoreland, Mason St., Mt. Auburn.
OMAHA—Jean P. Duffield, 205 Boyds Theatre.
LINCOLN, NEB.—Mrs. E. S. Luce, 1614 O St.
PROVIDENCE, R. I.—William Place, Jr., Jackson Bldg.
DES MOINES—Mrs. Caroline Young Smith, 1082 21st Street.
DENVER—Mrs. Dolores Reedy-Maxwell, 1516 Milwaukee St.
PORTLAND, ORE.—John R. Oatman, 445 Sherlock Bldg.
WICHITA, KANS.—Ralph Brokaw, 109 East 3d St.
VICTORIA, B. C.—Miss May Hamilton, 524 Michigan St.

EUROPEAN

BERLIN, W.—
Arthur M. Abell, Jenaer St. 21.
Cable Address: Abell, Wilmersdorf, Berlin.
PARIS—
H. O Osgood, 43 Boulevard Beausejour.
DRESDEN—
Mrs. E. Potter-Frissell, Eisenstuckstrasse 16.
MUNICH, GERMANY—
Miss Alice L. Bryant, Finken Strasse 2.
VIENNA—
Frank Angold, Florianigasse 60.
MOSCOW, RUSSIA—
Ellen von Tideböhl, Arbatte, 34 Deneschny.
ROME, ITALY—
Mrs. Dolly Pattison, 9 Piazza di Spagna.
BRUSSELS, BELGIUM—
Luella Anderson, 52 rue de l'Ermitsge.
STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN—
Louisa Upling, Roslagsgatan 19.
LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND—
W. J. Bowden, 22 Fern Grove.

For the names and addresses of correspondents and representatives not in this list, apply to main office.

SUBSCRIPTIONS: (In Advance)

United States	$5.00	Canada	$6.00
Great Britain	£1 5s.	Austria	30 kr.
France	31.25 fr.	Italy	31.25 fr.
Germany	25 m.	Russia	12 r.

Single Copies, Fifteen Cents, at newsstands.
Back Numbers, Twenty-five Cents.

Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class Matter.

THE MUSICAL COURIER is for sale on the principal newsstands in the United States and in the leading music houses, hotels and kiosques in Belgium, England, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Switzerland and Egypt.

American News Company, New York, General Distributing Agents.
Western News Company, Chicago, Western Distributing Agents.
New England News Company, Eastern Distributing Agents.

ADVERTISING RATES:

On reading page, per inch, per year	$400.00	Front pages, per issue	$500.00
On advertising page, per inch, per year	200.00	Line (agate) rate on reading page, per issue	1.00
Column rate, per issue	150.00	Line (agate) rate on advertising page, per issue	.50
Full pages, per issue	400.00

THE MUSICAL COURIER EXTRA
Published every Saturday by Musical Courier Co.
Devoted to the interests of the Piano Trade.

It is likely that no Wagner cycle will be given at the Metropolitan next winter.

A cablegram was received last week by Mason & Hamlin from Ossip Gabrilowitsch, saying laconically, "All's well."

Advices from Buenos Aires state that the present musical season there is a disastrous one, owing to economic conditions. The Colon and Coliseum opera companies are suffering heavy losses.

Anna Case in Paris last week, after a strenuous trip from Switzerland, said that Braun and Goritz, of the Metropolitan, are in the German army, and that Andreas Dippel intended to abandon his light opera season here.

A cablegram received last week from Louis Koemmenich, conductor of the New York Oratorio Society, announced that he and his family are safe in Lucerne. According to present plans, Mr. Koemmenich will probably sail for New York from Genoa about September 3.

The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau has received a cable from Alma Gluck stating that she sailed from Havre August 22 on the Espagne and furthermore that her husband, Efrem Zimbalist, is on the same boat. According to advices, this steamer is due in New York about August 30.

In Boston the Transcript, frankly labeling its story a rumor, says: "With no definite announcements from the management, rumors are rife as to the future of the Boston Theatre. The most interesting, as well as the one with the most solid foundation, gives it to Mr. Constantino, the tenor so often heard at the Boston Opera, for a season of opera, largely Italian 'classics.' According to hearsay, he is to occupy the house with his own company for a portion of the months preceding the regular season at the Boston Opera. He will not compete with the latter either in prices or time; the scale of admission will be somewhere in the neighborhood of two dollars. Details as to the company, the exact repertoire, or the number of performances a week are not yet forthcoming. The war and the consequent difficulty in getting musicians and minor singers are to be reckoned with."

The Englishman who stated recently in a periodical that no composer intends his vocal music to be sung in any language but the original text may have forgotten that Wagner did translate one or more of his operas into French, that they might be understood in France. We know many composers, but never heard one object to a good translation of operas or songs into other languages. The objection to adequate translations seems to come from all quarters except from the composers themselves. In France all operas and classic songs are sung in French. The translations sometimes are good and sometimes not, but the words are understood by the audience—a method demanded in Continental Europe—and the translations always gave a clue to the original text (the inspiration for the music), if not quite perfect. A well known Chicago composer, Eleanor Everest Freer, sent songs (written to the best English lyrics) to different friends in Europe. The criticism of the music left nothing to be desired; but there was always added: "As we do not understand English, the songs are valueless to us and our artists." As soon as several of these songs appeared with a foreign translation, the answer immediately followed: "Ah, now we can even better understand your music, since we read the translation and can grasp the poet's thought." If we continue to sing operas and songs in four languages, why not in forty, for nearly as many tongues are represented in this country? Was not an Arthur Nevin opera given its first hearing in Berlin? But the original text was translated into German, or the performance would have sufficed only for the American colony. And as to "novelties." Some fifty composers have sent works to the Los Angeles Opera Contest. These must all be from the pens of writers of talent, or they would not choose so ungrateful a calling as that of an American composer. This proves that a small number, at least, of our musicians are at work, and all fields of music must be represented if our singers, conductors and publishers care to find out what we have in this country—the foreign supply being, temporarily, somewhat cut off. But firstly and lastly, any one who asserts that vocal music loses by being sung in English is against the progress of musical art in England and America and proves himself or herself to be wanting in experience and intelligence.

An interesting development of the American musical situation in its relation to the European war is the fact that all our music students who had been planning to go abroad this fall will be compelled to remain here, while most of those now in Europe may be counted upon to return to this country very shortly. That should give our native teachers hope for an unusually busy season. Our musical neighbors in Canada also are being benefited, for the war affects them only remotely. Advices from Toronto sent in answer to a MUSICAL COURIER telegram state that an unusually large number of American students are enrolling with teachers there. The Hambourg Conservatory wires as follows: "We are daily answering applications from points all over the United States, and many enrollments from your country have resulted. Evidently no cessation of business or artistic activity will result here from the war abroad, as our roster of Canadian students for the coming season is larger than ever. Every sign seems to indicate that Toronto will enjoy the biggest and best musical year in its history."

WHAT WAR MEANS IN ENGLAND.

Under the caption of "The Shadow of War," London Musical News, in its issue of August 8 1914, gives us the picture of the grim realities of war as they are viewed by and will affect the English musician and his public:

At the present moment the grim spectre of fratricidal strife hovers threateningly over the whole of Europe, and all the nations are arming themselves against possible contingencies, no country knowing from one hour to another whether it will not be dragged into the conflict. Musical News is not a political paper, and ordinarily does not travel beyond its own natural sphere, but now the participation of the United Kingdom has become a fact, then every citizen, whatever his occupation, is called upon to face the situation. Sir Edward Grey, in his masterly speech delivered in the House of Commons on August 3, said that whether we went to war or not, we were bound to suffer enormously. Our commerce will be hard hit; in many quarters there will be untold privation and distress, and the inevitable result will be that music in its many forms of activity will feel the pinch. It was so during the South African War, which, compared to the present conflagration was but a tiny flare-up; no conflict of modern times approaches this in magnitude, and it is evident that for many years to come we shall have enough to do thinking of the necessaries of life, without troubling much about the luxuries.

Musicians follow a peaceful avocation, and they are not likely to be called upon to shoulder a rifle, but none the less they can prove themselves true sons of this great Empire and aid in upholding those traditions of fortitude and endurance which have been handed down to us by our fathers through the long ages. Many ways will doubtless open out in which they can help, but at the present juncture all can do well by preserving a level head and by practising a wise economy. To give way to panic is to imply want of faith in ourselves and our country, a faith which hitherto we have never lacked. Our earnest hope is that the very violence of the war will lead to the speedy resumption of peace and the reestablishment of harmony between the nations.

MacDOWELL FESTIVAL AT PETERBOROUGH.

In Picturesque New Hampshire Village the Annual Commemorative Celebration of the MacDowell Association Takes Place August 19 to August 23—Large Audiences in Attendance—Idealistic Project of the Late Composer Has Another Interesting Demonstration.

BY LEONARD LIEBLING.

One of a long, winding procession of motors, carriages and pedestrians, all traveling uphill toward a common destination, our car slowly climbed its way and helped to form a picture which an amateur photographer snapped and called "The Ascent to the American Bayreuth."

The title was not a good one, chiefly for the reason that the beautiful wild scenery we were traversing was infinitely more picturesque than that at Bayreuth, and also because when we reached the top of the hill which leads away from the quaint old village of Peterborough, in the State of New Hampshire, we found ourselves gazing at an al fresco theatre, consisting of wooden benches tiered at an elevation, and a large stage clearing cradled in thick woods redolent of piney odors, with the blue skies for a ceiling and the misty mountain perspectives for the framing side and rear views.

Seated in the front row at the Festspielhaus in Bayreuth the visitor looks at a lifeless curtain hung a few yards away; from any of the benches at the open air auditorium of the Peterborough Hill, the spectator rests his gaze on six miles of mountain vista, with mighty Monadnock forming a background in proud eminence and raising its towering head like a huge, kindly beacon guiding the way to where a real labor of love is being wrought in the name of art and of one who believed in art.

It would be an easy task to say something more about the lovely natural surroundings amidst which the MacDowell Memorial Colony makes its home, but that is not the purpose of the present piece of writing, which represents experiences recorded as the result of a visit to Peterborough pursuant to a wish to become acquainted at first hand with an artistic movement whose nature is generally understood but dimly from the printed descriptions.

What is the Peterborough movement? The history and object of the colony are best explained in these excerpts from the booklet published by the MacDowell Association:

"The MacDowell Memorial Colony, with its artists, writers and composers, with its isolated studios in the woods, and its great outdoor stage, is the realization of what was once a dream in the mind and in the heart of Edward MacDowell. Mr. MacDowell himself felt that the greater productivity of the last years of his working life was due to the uninterrupted leisure and the stimulating surroundings afforded him by a little cabin, built among the pines of the Peterborough woods. Here in the summers of those few last years he composed the 'Norse' and 'Keltic' sonatas, the 'New England Idyls,' the 'Fireside Tales' and many songs and choruses.

"During his last illness Mr. MacDowell's mind began to fret itself with the thought that the lovely old Peterborough place which had grown so dear to him should soon have to be disposed of like any other property. This regret was followed by the wish that in some way it might be saved to give to other artists the inspiration and the opportunity for work which it had given him. Mrs. MacDowell, without knowing at that time how it was to be realized, made her husband the solemn promise of devoting her life to its fulfillment.

"Shortly before Mr. MacDowell's death a way opened. The Mendelssohn Glee Club, of New York, had raised a fund for some sort of memorial.

MRS. E. A. MacDOWELL,
Founder and chief patron of the MacDowell Festival at Peterborough, N. H.

GENA BRANSCOMBE AND HER CHILDREN.

EDWARD A. MacDOWELL

GROUP OF COMPOSERS.
From reader's left to right: Henry F. Gilbert, Arthur Nevin, Lewis M. Isaacs, Mabel Daniels, W. H. Humiston.

REINALD WERRENRATH,
Baritone.

A MORRIS DANCE.
"Jenny Pluck Pears," from Playford's "Dancing Master" (1650).

THE FESTIVAL FORCES.
Reader's left to right: Arthur Hackett, Olive Kline, Reinald Werrenrath, Margaret Dunlop, Josephine Knight, Eusebius G. Hood, Marguerite Webster, Percy Stephens.

At Mrs. MacDowell's suggestion this memorial took the form of an endowment of the Peterborough property for the purpose of establishing an artist colony. From the group of men and women most deeply interested in the project, The Edward MacDowell Memorial Association was formed and incorporated under the laws of the State of New York.

"This was in 1907. Since then the work of the association has progressed steadily. . . . From June to October every year the colony has a resident population of from fifteen to twenty artists, who live the same simple life and work amid the same surroundings that proved so inspiriting to MacDowell. In size the property has grown from eighty to four hundred and fifty acres; a farm of fifty acres is under excellent cultivation; a model dairy supplies the needs of the colony. The association has built a beautiful outdoor theatre with a seating capacity of fifteen hundred. For five years now it has given an annual festival of music and dramatic spectacles where American composers have presented and in many cases conducted their own works.

"The colony is self-governing, with a board of its own to regulate all its communal interests.

"The class of worker eligible for residence at the colony is the productive or creative artist as opposed to the interpretative. For instance, in music the composer is eligible and the singer and the instrumental performer are not. This is a general, not a hard and fast rule, for in art creation and interpretation often overlap.

"Resident artists pay board at the fixed rate of a dollar a day. This rate was established when the cost of living was lower than it is now. The association has been unwilling to increase the rate, as it feels that a dollar is as much as many artists can afford."

I have quoted the foregoing description because it dispensed so completely the belief which I long had held that the MacDowell Association is a charitable institution paternally helping the struggling student to secure a foothold on the bottom rungs of the ladder to fame. I know that other persons shared such an erroneous impression with me, and it is pleasant to be able now to free the colony and its sponsors of the libel.

As a matter of fact, the association, far from being a body of wealth eager to do charity, has to undergo a continual struggle to obtain funds wherewith to carry on the colony work in spite of the money received for the board and lodging of the artists. I have no idea of what the general expenses, administrative and otherwise, amount to, but one item on which figures were obtainable, is the orchestra brought over from Boston to assist at the rehearsals and the five days' festival. There are fifty players, who received $10 a day each, had their traveling expenses paid, and were housed and fed by the MacDowell Association during the Peterborough stay. The total outlay for the orchestra, I was told by one of the officials, amounted to more than $5,000. As the colonists pay $7 per week each, and there are fifteen, the income totals $105 per week, or for a period of three months $1,260—about one-fourth of the cost of the orchestra for the five days' festival. Everything else is provided for by Mrs. MacDowell on the same generous scale.

A special train brought seventy choristers from Nashua, N. H., and took them back after the concert at which they assisted. Motors and carriages were at the constant disposition of the festival forces, the press, and every one officially connected with the celebration. A huge factory had been converted into what was known as "The Festival Dining Hall," where hundreds of persons were served excellent meals at a price which surely must have represented a large loss to the association. Composers were granted every wish in regard to rehearsals, number of men required in the orchestra, etc., and the builders of the pageant had but to make a suggestion in order to have it carried out at once by Mrs. MacDowell's big force of mechanical assistants. Special electric lighting was installed for the pageant, and as late as four hours before its beginning I heard the conductor ask for a new music stand, as the one he had was too small to bear the heavy orchestral score; the chief dancer in the pantomime begged for a lighter couch in one of the scenes, as that in use was too heavy to be moved quickly during the dark change; the orchestra men requested that the electric bulbs be entirely restrung so as to drop exactly above their music; and the stage manager insisted that two medieval torches be contrived for the "Pan" spectacle. Everything was done as desired, even though the stand, couch and torches required expert carpentry work.

Mrs. MacDowell, kindly, earnest, indefatigable, laboring incessantly and self sacrificingly, in order to realize and perpetuate the idealistic project of her late husband, was here, there and everywhere. She constitutes the soul, the spirit, and the practical directing head of the MacDowell Association, although she wears no title of that sort and never tires of declaring that she is not seeking credit for herself nor glory for Edward MacDowell, but is carrying out merely the role of a pioneer in helping to establish firmly a movement whose future she will glady and confidently place in the hands

AFTER REHEARSAL.
On the Town Hall steps. From reader's left to right, top row: Reinald Werrenrath, E. G. Hood (conductor), Wm. Arms Fischer (of Oliver Ditson Co.), Lewis M. Isaacs, Mr. Austin (of the Arthur P. Schmidt firm); lower row: Arthur Hackett, Margaret Dunlop, Olive Klein, Percy Stephens, Gena Branscombe, Josephine Knight, Marguerite Webster.

Photos 2, 3, 4, 5, 8, 9 and 12 copyrighted, 1910, by the MacDowell Memorial Association.

INTERESTING SCENES AT PETERBOROUGH.

(1) The audience and the orchestra. (2) The pageant forces. (3) A pageant scene. (4) "The House of Dreams," in "Deep Woods," where MacDowell wrote "To a Water Lily," "To a Wild Rose," etc. (5) A pageant scene. (6) The "Lower House," residence of members of the MacDowell Colony. (7) View of Peterborough and Mt. Monadnock in the distance. (8) Bark studio. (9) The pageant stage, with Mt. Monadnock in the rear distance. (10) Part of the MacDowell Colony. (11) Hillcrest barn, formerly MacDowell's billiard room. (12) "Hillcrest," the MacDowell residence at Peterborough.

others when she considers her own work in the use finished.

The booklet quoted from before says frankly that "for the development and management of the property and for the support of the Colony, the association needs the income of $100,000, added to its present small endowment." The deficit has been met hitherto by Mrs. MacDowell out of her own limited means, which represent the proceeds of lectures given by her during the winter. Contributions have been made by clubs and individuals, both in money and studios built. Yearly contributors are made associate members as follows: Annual, those who pay $5; Sustaining, those who pay $10 or less than $25; and Fellowship, those who pay $25 or more.

The president of the MacDowell Association—or to give its full title, the Edward MacDowell Memorial Association—is Frank S. Hastings; vice-president, Benjamin Prince; secretary, Howard Mansfield; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Edward MacDowell. The directors are John W. Alexander, Horatio J. Brewer, Walter Cook, Caroline B. Dow, John W. Frothingham, Frank S. Hastings, Mrs. MacDowell, Howard Mansfield, Mary Morison, Benjamin Prince, Edwin Arlington Robinson, Louis Morris Starr, Frederick A. Stokes, Gwendolyn Valentine, Louise Veltin.

The present members of the association are: John W. Alexander, George P. Baker, Mrs. Perkins Bass, Mrs. William H. Bliss, Horatio J. Brewer, Chalmers Clifton, Walter Cook, Miss Caroline Dow, Charles Tyler Dutton, Mrs. Thomas Emery, Henry T. Finck, Arthur W. Francis, John W. Frothingham, Mrs. John L. Gardner, Hamlin Garland, Herman Hagedarn, Mrs. Arthur C. James, Robert Underwood Johnson, Arthur Knox, Mrs. Edward MacDowell, Percy MacKaye, Howard Mansfield, Mrs. Howard Mansfield, Helen Mears, Ferris J. Meigs, Mary Morison, Benjamin Prince, Robert H. Robertson, Allan Robinson, Edwin Arlington Robinson, Mrs. William Schofield, Isaac N. Seligman, Frederick K. Seward, Mrs. Charles Sprague-Smith, Louis Morris Starr, Frederick A. Stokes, Gwendolyn Valentine, Louise Veltin.

In discussing the question as to the possibility of making the Colony self-supporting, Mrs. MacDowell said: "The position that the association takes in this matter is not always understood. As well ask: 'Why should not institutions like the American Academy of Art at Rome be self-supporting?' The Colony is no more a business undertaking than the Academy at Rome. That the summer board of fifteen or twenty artists is not sufficient to pay for the equipment and maintenance of the Colony is no more surprising than that the tuition of the students in any college is not sufficient to pay for its equipment and maintenance. Like the Academy in Rome, like any great university, the Colony must have its equipment and must have at least a small endowment to accomplish the ends for which it was established."

There is this difference, however, between the Colony and the universities, that the latter are actively educational in purpose and that they make a certain degree of work obligatory on the part of the students. As I understand it, the members of the Colony are not required to show any definite art product as an immediate result of the sojourn at Peterborough. Nor are the festivals confined exclusively to the current works of the colonists. There is no rule approximate, for instance, to the one that governs the stay in Rome of the Prix de Rome winners, obliging them to send to the Paris Conservatoire annually a composition written at the Villa Medici. Also, there is no time limit at Peterborough, restricting the colonists to enjoyment of the association's privileges for a stated period, say of two or at the most three summers. However, the personnel of the directorate, among which are the names of some excellent business men and splendid executives, seems to speak assurance for the early regulation of such matters based upon past and present experience and the immediate future of the Colony, therefore, may safely be left in their hands.

It was a grateful experience to note the spirit of love and sympathy with which the MacDowell memories associated with Peterborough are kept alive, and to observe the unaffected veneration of the pilgrims who journeyed to the picturesque Log Cabin set so romantically in the deep pine woods, and to the grave of the composer, crowning a slight elevation that commands a view of the green slopes for miles around. It is a spot where any man would wish to sleep the eternal slumber, and Mrs. MacDowell very wisely has made the tomb a thing of beauty by marking the resting place with only a grass mound and inclosing it within a wide rustic wooden fence bordered with cheerful growing flowers.

"That American composer who has a real message to deliver," remarked one of our party at the grave, "need never fear indifference or neglect on the part of his compatriots."

"Certainly not when he has a soulmate like Mrs. MacDowell," amended one of the listeners.

Now let us see what was brought forth in the way of music during the five days at Peterborough from August 19 to August 23. Following is the opening scheme:

FIRST PROGRAM.
Wednesday afternoon, August 19.
(On the Pageant Stage.)

American Hymn.....Keller
(For brass instruments.)

Festival March.....Gena Branscombe
(Written for this Festival.)
Orchestra conducted by E. G. Hood.

The Highwayman.....Deems Taylor
(Written for this Festival.)
Ballad for Solo Baritone, Chorus of Women and Orchestra.
Conducted by E. G. Hood and sung by Reinald Werrenrath and female chorus from the Peterborough MacDowell Club.

Southern fantasy.....William Humiston
Conducted by Composer.

Youth Will Dance.....Ferdinand Reyher
(A play in one act, introducing Old English Morris Dances, staged and under the direction of A. Claud Wright, of England, assisted by Esther Willard Bates. Alvin A. Lucier, violinist.)

CHARACTERS.
(In the order of their appearance.)

Richard Danby, a Puritan minister.....Herbert Nichols
Dick, a weazened relic of Merry Mount days, who once fiddled .....Alvin Lucier
Lady Howard, who loves the Old English dances, Mrs. J. W. Ritchie
Mary, her daughter.....Charlotte Spaulding
Joseph Davenant, a Puritan youth.....Almerin Gowing
Norris Wiley, an English officer, disguised as a schoolmaster .....A. Claud Wright
Tudor Fleming, a brother officer of Wiley's, Parker Fillmore
Elders, Young Puritan Men and Women.
Young Puritan men and women.
Agnes Crimmins, Elsie DeWitte, Ruth Ellsworth, Anna Hurley, Winifred Lamb, Lillian Link, Louise Shannon, Charlotte Spaulding, Doris Humphrey.
J. R. Abbott, Edward Ballantine, F. T. Chamberlin, Alfred J. Colburn, H. Emetaz, Alberin Gowing, H. H. Harbour, Wm. K. Williams.
(Written for this Festival.)

Edward MacDowell had a keen understanding of the interrelation and interdependence of all the arts and that is why the colony is not confined only to musicians and why the programs of the festivals contain beside music, also drama, pantomime, pageantry and dancing.

After the formal brass chorale the fifth festival was opened with the Branscombe march as the first number. Gena Branscombe, a Canadian composer, is not a member of the colony. Known hitherto chiefly as a writer of songs and pieces for violin and piano, this was her initial work for orchestra, and it revealed pleasant melodic outlines and orchestration not too monophonic to lack character. Marches are extremely difficult in the matter of instrumentation. Even the mighty Wagner made a dry job of the "pièce d'occasion" which he wrote for the Philadelphia Exposition. Tschaikowsky showed the most fertility in his presentment of the march that helps to make the "Pathetique" symphony a suite. Raff's "Lenore" march is too long. Gounod's, in "Faust," is trivial. Wagner did better with his "Tannhäuser," "Parsifal" and "Meistersinger" promenades. Verdi's "Aida" masterpiece leads all operatic marches if Tschaikowsky's "Eugen Onegin" polonaise is ruled out of competition as being a dance. Sousa revolutionized the brass band scoring of marches. Schubert composed some melodious ones principally in order to give Liszt, Tausig and a host of more recent adapters a chance to show how the immortal Franz should have written them. If Gena Branscombe had entitled her work, "Hommage á Peterborough," or "Festival Prelude," she would have spared MUSICAL COURIER readers this rambling discourse in 4-4 metre.

Reinald Werrenrath, after rehearsing in Deems Taylor's "The Highwayman," gave me a glowing account of the composition and after hearing it I must concede that Mr. Werrenrath is as good a critic as he is a vocal artist. The Taylor cantata, based on a romantic ballad by Alfred Noyes, shows not only striking promise but also significant achievement. The poem lacks dramatic movement, contrast, and climax, but Mr. Taylor has sensed the defects cleverly, and through ever shifting harmonic and rhythmic changes and a piquant and arresting style in orchestration contrives to keep the listener under the spell of the music and to thrill him at the author's anticlimax wherein he encompasses the death of his hero in exactly the same manner as that of the heroine some dozen lines before.

The Taylor score, before all things, starts out with the premise that it is a good idea to possess a melody or two before beginning a composition, and the Taylor scoring concerns itself primarily with setting off and otherwise adorning his melody or two. The result is a thoroughly pleasing composition which charms by reason of its beauty (an old fashioned virtue, it must be admitted) and grips through the intensity of its emotional expression, direct and unforced. The dramatic moments have point and yet are not brusque and the lyrical episodes please with the smoothness and grace of the writing for the singing and orchestral voices. What Mr. Taylor is capable of doing in the way of "color," "atmosphere" and "climax" in the ultra modern sense, I do not know, but it is to be hoped that he will not be coaxed into writing any "Cosmos" or "The Descent of Man," or "The Conquests of Alexander" symphonic poems. I thank him for starting his larger orchestral career with such a delightful work as "The Highwayman" and I know that many others in the audience thanked him too, especially after hearing certain other detonating lucubrations later on.

The only objection that can be made to the composition is the form in which Mr. Taylor has set it. The virile portions of the ballad need a more vigorous choral support than is given by female voices alone. The composer is of this opinion too, and already has started to rearrange the work for mixed chorus. In its new form it should win lasting popularity with singing societies.

The performance was a splendid one under the sympathetic and authoritative direction of Eusebius Godfrey Hood, of Nashua, N. H., who had charge of all the choral contributions to the festival. Mr. Hood had received the score of "The Highwayman" only four weeks before the concert and was enabled to hold only eight rehearsals in advance of the performance. His singers have body of tone, excellent shading and notably good diction. Reinald Werrenrath delivered the solo measures with a voice unfailing in tonal purity and loveliness of timbre. It is a voice of sensuous quality and yet underlaid with sufficient sonority and virility to make it thoroughly manly. Aside from their finished tonal application, the Werrenrath performances are instinct also with finically correct musicianship and rare appreciation of text values. He aided "The Highwayman" materially in registering an emphatic and resounding success. Mr. Taylor was present and had to bow in response to the warm plaudits.

William H. Humiston's "Southern Fantasy," an unpretentious piece, is music that suggests rather than asserts. Fragmentary motifs and familiar sequences recognized as Southern in the negro sense are scored amiably and with some taste.

"Youth Will Dance," a loosely patched series of dialogues supporting enough plot to allow the interspersion of long stretches of Old English dancing, ended the program in appropriate even if lengthy fashion. Morris dances are not very attractive at best in these days, when the terpsichorean art is a general accomplishment and the rude stamping, leaping and running of former times has become refined into rhythmic movement infinitely more sensuous and graceful. A half hour of Morris dancing should be sufficient to please even its most ardent admirers, of whom A. Claud Wright appears to be one. However, fifteen dances proved to be very tedious and unvaried in spite of Mr. Wright's valiant sprinting, hopping and jigging.

SECOND PROGRAM.

Thursday afternoon, August 20.
(In the Town Hall.)

March from Lenore.....Raff
Orchestra conducted by E. G. Hood.

Aria, Il est doux (Herodiade).....Massenet
Josephine Knight.
Conducted by E. G. Hood.

Violin solos—
An Old Love Tale.....Gena Branscombe
Carnival Canadian.....Gena Branscombe
Samuel Gardner.
(Accompanied by the composer.)

Love Dreams; miniature suite for orchestra.Arthur Nevin
(First performance.)
Twilight at Vine Acre.
'Neath the Balcony.
The Brook at Dawn.
Butterflies.
At the Tournament.
(Conducted by the composer.)

Symphonic prologue, Riders to the Sea..Henry F. Gilbert
(Orchestra conducted by the composer.)

Three songs—
A Lovely Maiden Roaming.....Gena Branscombe
Dear Little Hut.....Gena Branscombe
If You E'er Have Seen.....Gena Branscombe
Josephine Knight.
(Accompanied by the composer.)

Violin solos—
Caprice Viennois.....Kreisler
Hjere Kati.....Hubay
Marguerite Webster.
(Accompanied by Ruth E. Ashley.)

Poem with music, King Robert of Sicily..Rossetter G. Cole
(The composer reading; Mrs. Cole at the piano.)

Raff's "Lenore" march, led con amore by the doughty E. G. Hood, preceded some soprano singing by Josephine Knight, which revealed earnestness and knowledge of the Massenet vocal manner.

Gena Branscombe's violin numbers evidenced decided melodic gifts and her workmanship shows distinction and taste. The "Carnival" particularly stirs the pulses and is done with fetching esprit. It would repay violinists to look up the piece as an effective morceau of the class of Hubay's "Hjere Kati" or Kreisler's "Caprice Viennois." Samuel Gardner played the selections with neat technic, refined delivery and a sweet though small tone.

Arthur Nevin's miniature suite, "music written frankly in miniature style," as the composer put it before the concert, pleased every one unequivocally. Its playful programmaticisms are done skillfully and throughout the entire suite runs a vein of light and gracious melody which made one wonder why the Nevin talent does not put itself in the service of American comic opera, a field in which a Yankee Sullivan or Johann Strauss is badly needed. This is not intended as a reflection on Mr. Nevin, for Leoncavallo and Puccini are among those who recently tried for the by no means easily acquired pelf of comic opera.

Henry F. Gilbert's symphonic prologue, highly thought of by various members of the colony, did not stir my imagination or arouse me to musical response. The program note told this story:

"Riders to the Sea" is a poignant and powerful tragedy in one act by J. M. Synge, perhaps the most talented of the younger school of Irish dramatic poets. It tells of an old fisherman's wife in the Aran islands, who, having been previously bereft of her husband and five sons, now loses the sixth and last son through the same fateful agency—the mighty and terrible sea. The ultimate effect of this tragic blow is not grief, but resignation. The inward eye of the old mother is turned far from the things of earth. Hope departs forever, and a feeling of rest and peace takes its place. For now she feels that it is finished; that bitter life can demand no more of her; that her debt to fate is paid.

Mr. Gilbert, in his symphonic prologue, has presented the two dominant moods of the play. First, there is the elemental mood of the impersonal; the irrevocable sea. This eventually gives place to the human emotion; the lament, or song of grief. There is a last tragic cry at the culmination of the lament, after which the music fades through ever more peaceful harmonies to the end. The work is dedicated to Mrs. Edward MacDowell, and receives its first performance at this festival.

The play undoubtedly is better than the Gilbert music, for the latter did not convey to me either the sense of the "impersonal" sea, nor could I detect in the Mother's Song a sincere and successful tonal delineation of the "inward eye turned far from the things of earth," and the bereaved woman's human song of grief. The thematic material of the symphonic prologue is commonplace, its scoring sounds obvious and no moment of strong emotional upliftment marks the composition from end to end. The Sea has been depicted in music so often and so well by the masters that it seems odd for Mr. Gilbert to wish to add another tonal portrait to the large gallery. As a model for his lament he should have studied more thoroughly the examples close at hand in the shape of MacDowell's "Legend" and "Dirge" from the "Indian Suite." Those are singularly fine specimens of sustained power in the musical expression of intense grief.

Miss Branscombe's songs are the manifestations of pronounced ability as a writer for the voice. She has the knack of illustrating poems effectively and doing it without setting the interpreter an almost symphonic task in the manner of other young composers of the day. "If You E'er Have Seen" is an especially sprightly song, with a well conceived violin obligato. It was played by Samuel Gardner. Miss Knight's renderings were complimented also in the applause to which Miss Branscombe had to bow frequent response.

Poor Marguerite Webster had the peculiar mishap to find after beginning her playing that one of the joints in the belly of her violin was open, and though she bravely finished her two pieces, the effect was neither musical nor serious.

Rossetter G. Cole's reading and composing are too well known to need detailed comment here. His "King Robert of Sicily" has been delivered publicly over 400 times by David Bispham. Mr. Cole recited the poem with thorough understanding of its content and Mrs. Cole assisted sympathetically with the incidental piano music.

THIRD PROGRAM.
(At the Town Hall.)
Thursday evening, August 20.

Overture, The Magic Flute.....Mozart
(Conducted by E. G. Hood.)

The Death of Minnehaha.....Coleridge-Taylor
Cantata for soprano, baritone, chorus and orchestra.
Sung by Olive Kline, Reinald Werrenrath and the Peterborough MacDowell Choral Club.
(Conducted by E. G. Hood.)

Hiawatha's Vision, from The Departure of Hiawatha, Coleridge-Taylor
Reinald Werrenrath.

Fairy scherzo for orchestra.....Mabel W. Daniels
(Conducted by the composer.)

Aria, Dost Thou Know That Fair Land? from Mig... Tho...
Marguerite Dunlap.

Cello solos—
Nocturne.....Popper
Spanish Dance.....Popper
Carl Webster.

Aria, Wie nahte mir der Schlummer, from Freischütz, Weber
Olive Kline.

Andante Cantabile, from quartet op. 11....Tchaikowsky
(Orchestra conducted by W. H. Humiston.)

Songs—
I Am Thy Harp.....Huntington Woodman
His Lullaby.....Carrie Jacobs Bond
The Bluebell.....MacDowell
Marguerite Dunlap.

Songs—
Sylvelin.....Sinding
In the Woods.....MacDowell
Pastoral.....Old English
Olive Kline.

Songs—
To a Messenger.....Frank la Forge
The House of Memories.....Florence Alward
The Ringers.....Herman Lohr
Reinald Werrenrath.

Inflammatus from Stabat Mater.....Rossini
Miss Kline, Peterborough MacDowell Choral Club, and Orchestra.
(Conducted by E. G. Hood.)

Conductor Hood did a spirited Mozart reading, and then covered himself with glory in the Coleridge-Taylor presentation, in which he brought forth all the requisite poetry, the sinister gloom and the passion. His choral forces produced nobly resonant tone when required and yet managed with equal success the moderate strains and even the pianissimo dynamics.

Olive Kline, the soprano, has a voice of exceptional freshness and of youthful quality, and sings in a manner to justify brilliant expectations for her future as an oratorio and concert artist. Perhaps grand opera may claim her, however, for Miss Kline's figure is heroic in height and proportions. She was at her best in the "Freischütz" aria, of which she gave a spirited account, although "Sylvelin" was done with much charm, the MacDowell song revealed a fine legato and the concluding "Pastoral" demonstrated effective breath control and purity of tonal emission. With added experience Miss Kline surely will rank with the leaders in her profession.

Mr. Werrenrath gave a noble version of the "Vision," in which every nuance had its full musical and emotional value. His Lied interpretations, which show this artist at the top of his powers, caused the usual tumultuous acclaim, after the audience had enjoyed the temperamental Werrenrath in La Forge, the romantic Werrenrath in Alward, and the humorous Werrenrath in Lohr.

Marguerite Dunlap has a contralto organ of uncommon richness and she uses it with deep intelligence. Full of musical feeling was her singing of the "Mignon" aria and it made a deserved hit. Of the song group I liked Miss Dunlap in all three, for she gave them with sincerity, stylistic finish and keenly sensed tonal coloring.

Well played cello solos and a rousing "Inflammatus" finale completed the very variegated program.

A word should be said for Ruth Ashley, who played most of the piano accompaniments at the festival with unerring taste and skill.

Mabel W. Daniels' scherzo is a mild and inoffensive bit, euphoniously scored and excellently conducted by the composer.

FOURTH PROGRAM.
Friday evening, August 21.
(At the Town Hall.)

Overture, Freischütz.....Weber
(Conducted by E. G. Hood.)

Piano concerto, E flat.....Liszt
George Halprin.
(Conducted by Chalmers Clifton.)

Three Bohemian Folksongs.
Louise Llewellyn.
(Accompanied by Edward Ballantine.)

Songs—
Now Sleeps the Crimson Petal.....Quilter
Before the Dawn.....Chadwick
Spirit Flower .....Campbell-Tipton
Arthur Hackett.
(Accompanied by Ruth Ashley.)
Suite, two movements, piano and violin,
W. H. Humiston
W. H. Humiston and Samuel Gardner.
Two movements from suite "Atalanta"...Lewis M. Isaacs
Dawn: Dance of the Dryads.
The Boats of King Iasius.
(Conducted by W. H. Humiston.)
Duet, "Tales of Hoffmann."
Olive Kline and Marguerite Dunlap.
(Accompanied by Ruth Ashley.)
Prelude to "The Delectable Forest"...Edward Ballantine
(Conducted by W. H. Humiston.)
Songs—
The Early Morning.....Graham Peel
Witch Woman .....Deems Taylor
Fuzzy Wuzzy .....Arthur Whiting
Reinald Werrenrath.
(Accompanied by Ruth Ashley.)
Legend from Indian Suite.....MacDowell
(Conducted by E. G. Hood.)

The Friday evening concert, not previously scheduled, and given as compensation for the postponement of the outdoor pageant owing to rain, was held at the Town Hall and consisted of some of the Saturday afternoon numbers and several impromptu selections.

George Halprin, in the Liszt E flat piano concerto, was hampered by the stiff and arbitrary conducting of Chalmers Clifton, who gave the soloist absolutely no chance for effects gained through variations of tempo, and beat uncompromisingly strict time while the soloist and the orchestra propelled themselves through the concerto like a company of Prussian infantry doing "parade step." Under these circumstances a review of Mr. Halprin's playing is out of place, but it may be said that his technic was ample (except where he could not hold to the tempi he had practised) and that his tone has ring and depth. The audience liked him tremendously and made him play Chopin's G sharp minor study as an encore.

Miss Llewellyn's folksongs were not as much admired as her costume, a peasant affair in brilliant colors, with knee skirt and bright red stockings. Her numbers were out of the general scheme of the festival, and she did not sing them well.

Arthur Hackett's smooth voice and polished delivery made him a welcome feature of the program. He sounded the sentiment of his songs without affectation and through well considered tone projection and facile handling of climaxes made every note tell to the utmost.

The Humiston suite is good in construction but not interesting in its basic material. Samuel Gardner, who never had seen the suite until a few hours before he played it, made a better showing than Mr. Humiston at the piano.

Lewis M. Isaacs set himself altogether too big a task in attempting to tonalize "Atalanta." His music is extremely light, and verges in spots on the banal. It is one of the chief faults of the young American composers that they are not content to write merely "Rondos," "Andantes," "Scherzos," and "Airs," like the great composers when they gave their early works to the world. Our native tone creator never seems willing to seize upon a much lesser subject than "The Destruction of Carthage" or "The Dawn of Consciousness."

Edward Ballantine's prelude is part of the incidental music to an idyllic play in one act by Hermann Hagedorn. The instrumentation is more fertile than the subject matter, and shows a surprising degree of deftness. Mr. Ballantine manages to get much "atmosphere" of the forest without reminding us of "Pelleas et Melisande" except in a touch of Debussyism at the start of the work. Of the purely (new) orchestral works played at the Festival, Mr. Ballantine's is far and away the best.

Deems Taylor's "Witch Woman," in the inimitable Werrenrath version, made a small sized sensation. It is one of the vital contemporary songs. "Fuzzy Wuzzy," in Whiting's superficial setting, was dignified by the delivery of the singer.

Big and grand and uplifting was MacDowell's "Legend" after some of the labored and distorted music which had gone before. The clarity of the MacDowell scoring and the definiteness of his musical ideas came as a benison to at least one tortured musical soul. The orchestra was led in inspiriting fashion by E. G. Hood.

FIFTH PROGRAM.
Saturday afternoon, August 22.
(At the Town Hall.)
Overture, Freischütz .....Weber
Conducted by E. G. Hood.
Songs—
Invocation to Eros.....Kursteiner
Long Ago .....MacDowell
Autumnal Gale .....Grieg
Marguerite Dunlap.
(Accompanied by Ruth Ashley.)
Piano concerto, E flat.....Liszt
George Halprin.
(Conducted by Chalmers Clifton.)
Two movements from suite, "Atalanta"...Lewis M. Isaacs
Dawn: Dance of the Dryads.
The Boats of King Iasius.
(Conducted by W. H. Humiston.)
Breton and Bohemian Folksongs.
Louise Llewellyn.
(Accompanied by Edward Ballantine.)
Prelude to "The Delectable Forest"....Edward Ballantine
(Conducted by W. H. Humiston.)
Songs—
Ultima Rosa.....H. R. Spier
Witch Woman .....Deems Taylor
When Stars Are in the Quiet Skies,
David Stanley Smith
Fuzzy Wuzzy .....Arthur Whiting
Reinald Werrenrath.
(Accompanied by Ruth Ashley.)
Legend from Indian Suite.....MacDowell
(Conducted by E. G. Hood.)

Miss Dunlap's songs again emphasized her right to be classed as an artist of sterling merit. The MacDowell lyric, by the way, overtopped even Grieg.

The piano playing of Mr. Halprin suffered from the same drawbacks which were noticed on Friday.

A very good piece of writing is "Ultima Rosa," by Spier, a New Yorker. The Smith song was ordinary in harmony. Taylor and Whiting scored again decisively with Mr. Werrenrath's artistic support.

SIXTH PROGRAM.
(On the Pageant Stage.)
Saturday evening, August 22.
Legend from Indian Suite.....MacDowell
(Conducted by E. G. Hood.)
Pan and the Star: Pantomime in one act. Scenario by Joseph Lindon Smith. Music by Edward Burlingame Hill.

CAST.

Pan .....Joseph Lindon Smith
Syrinx .....Mlle. Lada
Priest .....Henri Emetaz
Art .....Mrs. Robert M. Parmelee
Terpsichore .....Mlle. Lada
(Muses, Vestal Virgins, Dryads, Fauns, Shepherds, Boccaccio, Raphael, Velasquez, Fra Fillipo Lippi, Giotto, Van Dyck, Da Vinci, Dante.)
(Conducted by Chalmers Clifton.)
Interpretative dances by Mlle. Lada—
Kamarinskaja .....Glinka
Valse Triste.....Sibelius
Second rhapsody .....Liszt
(Conducted by Henry F. Gilbert.)
Comedy overture.....Henry F. Gilbert
(Conducted by the composer.)

"Pan and the Star" was intended to be a sort of apotheosis of the entire festival, as orchestra, singing voices, dancing, pantomime and sculpture were exemplified in the production. The program gave a long and rambling story as the plot, which at best is incoherent, but the pith of the argument seems to be that with the birth of Christianity, paganism died and modern art came into being. The idea is carried through in pantomime and dance, with the employment also of a singing chorus and large orchestra.

The music which Mr. Hill has written for this spectacle follows the rambling story too closely to be coherent or to give him much opportunity for the achievement of unity in style. He has some pretty ideas, and they are presented with a sure touch so far as orchestral dress goes. His instrumentation flows smoothly and his motifs are characteristic enough to hold the attention of the musical auditor in spite of the fascination exerted by the pageantry on the outdoor stage.

The decorations, lighting, grouping, and costumes were worthy of the best professional theatre. Mlle. Lada, who did the premiere pantomiming, gyrated with much grace, and later in the evening did several solo dances with orchestral accompaniment, in which she showed taste but not much variety of style.

Owing to the noisy departure of hundreds of the spectators after the Lada dances, the Gilbert overture had very little chance to be heard properly. It appeared to consist of several negro rhythms strung together rather loosely and given a semblance of seriousness by being worked into a fugal movement of a few measures.

SEVENTH PROGRAM.
Sunday afternoon, August 23.
(Conducted by E. G. Hood.)
Chorale A. D. 1620.....MacDowell
Largo .....Handel
Oben, wo die Sternen glühen .....MacDowell
Reinald Werrenrath.
Dirge, from Indian Suite.....MacDowell
The Creation.....Haydn
Soloists: Miss Kline, Mr. Hackett, Percy Stephens, Peterborough MacDowell Choral Club, MacDowell Choir of Nashua, and Orchestra.

A full voiced choir sang the MacDowell chorale beautifully and then gave a confident and well rounded hearing of "The Creation," the music of which E. G. Hood seemed to have at his fingers' ends.

Reinald Werrenrath impressed the audience deeply with his heartfelt interpretation of MacDowell's finest song.

Olive Kline, in the Gabriel music, respected traditions, and tempered her tones modestly. Percy Stephens, the basso, on the other hand, sang with stress, and produced superabundant vocalism, even though his conception of the text was good and his diction left nothing to be desired.

The Festival's last notes caused regret that it was all over. To hear "The Creation" sung with Monadnock as the distant back wall of the auditorium, to see Pan and the nymphs disporting themselves under the star spangled black sky with an orchestra and mysteriously stirring leaves as obligato music and softly lighted pines and oak giants as the scenic accessories—those were moments worth going all the way to Peterborough to experience even if there had not been as a fitting finale a wild midnight motor dash along the banks of the Merrimac in order to catch the Bar Harbor Express at Lowell, Mass., bound for New York and prosa.

MARCELLA CRAFT PROTESTS.

The MUSICAL COURIER is in receipt of the following letter from Marcella Craft's manager, which explains itself:

New York, August 17, 1914.

To the Musical Courier:

Miss Craft telegraphs us from Chicago that she is disturbed on account of the daily newspaper announcements connecting her name with the Century Opera Company.

She has no contract with this opera company, and is only considering in the vaguest manner some "guest" appearances with them, and desires that you please point out the mistake of her being announced as a member of this opera company.

Very truly yours,
CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON.

STRASSBURG'S CATHEDRAL.

Strassburg Cathedral, had it eyes to see and a tongue to tell, could unfold many a romance and describe many an event that now live only in the sepulchral black and rusty white of old books.

Its medieval Latin name was Monasterium Sanctæ Mariæ Virginis, but today it is called the Minster or the Cathedral. It was founded in 1015 by Bishop Wernher von Hapsburg and continued by Bishop William I. In its style the French influence predominates, and it is evident that the architects who built the nave during the years 1250-1275 were thoroughly familiar with the older church of St. Denis near Paris. The irony of fate has again brought a Hapsburg, a William and the French together in Strassburg.

The present struggle in Alsace and Lorraine is by no means the first this ancient tower has looked down upon. The inhabitants of Stratisburgum defeated a French army as long ago as 1445.

In 1520 the Reformation gained a footing at Strassburg and for the next century and a half the old cathedral heard no more of the Roman Catholic liturgy, but was filled with the hymns and chorales of the Protestant service. In 1681 the great French monarch and conqueror, Louis XIV, seized the city, and the Lutheran music was silenced. By the treaty of Frankfort in 1871, the city was restored to the empire of Germany.

No man can tell what is to happen now. The armies of the Kaiser and the French republic are locked in a deadly grip today in and about Strassburg. Will the glorious old cathedral fall? A stray shell from a modern heavy gun could topple the tower to the pavement. Its height is 465 feet and it is made of delicately chiseled stone throughout. Beside the six or seven hundred feet of a New York skyscraper, or the 985 feet of the Eiffel Tower in Paris, this Strassburg spire may not seem high. But we must not confuse modern steel work with ancient stone work.

Our modern St. Patrick's Cathedral in Fifth avenue, New York, by no means surpasses the Cathedral of Strassburg, in spite of the many centuries that intervene.

Strassburg Münster.	New York Cathedral.
Feet.	Feet.
Length, 363	400
Width, 135	180
Height, 99	112
Spire, 465	332

These prosaic figures, however, give no suggestion of the poetry and beauty of the buildings. The patient hand of time has softened the outlines and mellowed the face of the ancient building in a way that no modern structure can imitate. Centuries alone can add the blending of color, the moss and the indescribable charm which the magnificent minster of Strassburg has in such abundance.

Our brand new cathedral, fortunately, has never witnessed the scenes of horror that have so often been enacted within sight of the ancient building.

Well might Strassburg's münster recite the dismal lines of Southey:

With fire and sword the country round
Was wasted far and wide,
And many a childing mother then,
And new born baby died;
But things like that, you know, must be
At every famous victory.

They say it was a shocking sight
After the field was won;
For many thousand bodies here
Lay rotting in the sun;
But things like that, you know, must be
After a famous victory.

Whichever way the famous victory goes, we hope the "frozen music"—as de Staal called architecture—will not be ruined by an abominable cannon ball.

The autographs of Herder, Lavater, Goethe,

STRASSBURG CATHEDRAL.

Voltaire and others cut in walls can never be replaced even if the ruins should be rebuilt.

L'ITALIANO IN IL BRONXICO.

This is the home of a Neapolitan musician in the great northern suburb of New York City—to wit, the Bronx. He is a peripatetic artist whose instrument is on wheels in a kind of delivery truck which he hitches himself to and hauls from street to street. He usually plays near windows where he isn't wanted so that he may collect a revenue for being ordered to move on. His technic is good, but his tone is inclined to resemble that of tin cans rolling down stone steps.

A NEAPOLITAN'S HOME IN NEW YORK.

He differs from the ordinary composer of good music in that he makes money at his job [illegible] composer doesn't.

Meeting with a hand organ was the turning [illegible] of his career as an artist. From that time he became cranky.

This house is his house. Here is where he sips his chianti and takes his dolce far niente.

SAWYER ARTISTS RETURNING TO AMERICA.

Antonia Sawyer has received either letters or cables from the following artists, assuring her they have arranged transportation and will be in America on scheduled time for all concert dates.

To begin with, Mme. Eames-de Gogorza and Emilio de Gogorza will be in New York the middle of September.

Mme. Culp and Coenraad von Bos are expected October 1.

Cordelia Lee will arrive September 15.

Katharine Goodson, instead of coming to America on January 1, as originally arranged, will be here December 1.

Because of the necessity of canceling Miss Goodson's bookings in Europe, Mrs. Sawyer is arranging bookings for the month of December in America for Miss Goodson.

A cable from Eleanor Spencer's brothers states that Miss Spencer will be in America September 1.

According to reports from these artists, none of them has been greatly inconvenienced on account of war conditions. Every effort is being made by the authorities in Europe to aid all artists and other professional people who are "bread winners" in returning to America to fill important engagements.

ECHOES OF THE OPERA WAR.

Oscar Hammerstein, famous in opera war as a generalissimo of bravery, resource and wit, is not the man to let the present European strife go by without comment germane to the happenings of the moment, and to the New York Review he said last week in accents forte:

There is no need to worry; we shall have all the grand opera that we can stand, perhaps more than we care for, but as to quality there may be something to be desired, however; there usually is at the Metropolitan.

If the worst comes to worst, some of the Met's millionaire directors have, I hear, nice tenor voices, and will be able to come to the rescue by singing a few roles themselves.

Then they have Mr. Gatti-Casazza, who is a basso profundo when he chooses to be one. He would make an admirable Mephistopheles in "Faust" in emergency.

Some of their attorneys also are singers, I should judge, by their melodious pleadings at the bar, at least they are sweet singers in the ear of Justice, and they might be requisitioned, also. So there is nothing to worry about at tht Metropolitan. No matter what happens, there can be a season there.

Personally, as is well known, I am not adverse to giving grand opera myself.

I do not think that the war is going to last very long. I expect to see the German army in Paris in two weeks from today. That will end it.

As to the present whereabouts of the French army, the war correspondents are all wrong. The French army is not in Alsace, not in Belgium, not in Lorraine—it is playing the Orpheum Circuit.

The Serenaders.

A fiddler tried a serenade;
She didn't smile on him;
She scorned the music that he made,
Zim-Zim.
A fellow with a banjo came.
The damsel didn't think
It worth emerging for his game,
Plink-plink.
The third arrival won the girl,
Although his tune was punk.
He drove up with a noisy whirl,
Honk-honk.

—Puck.

POPE PIUS' INFLUENCE ON CHURCH MUSIC.

Pope Pius X, who died on Wednesday, August 19, exerted a powerful influence on the music of the Roman Catholic Church. He restored Gregorian music to the position it had held in medieval times and from which it had been thrust by the intrusion of secular music. In such matters as music it appears that the popes of Rome are at liberty freely to indulge their personal tastes. One of them may permit the freest employment of modern harmonies and dramatic effects, together with the presence of females in the choir. Another is of the opinion of the Greek statesman, Pericles, that "the less women say in public the better," and rigorously applies the rule of the Apostle Paul as expressed with such simple directness in the fourteenth chapter of the first epistle to the Corinthians: "Let your women keep silence in the churches."

The policy of the late pontiff, Pius X, is clearly shown in the paragraph from the New York Evening Sun, which we quote:

"Anybody who in any way is found to be imbued with Modernism is to be excluded without compunction from these offices, and those who already occupy them are to be removed. The same policy is to be adopted toward those who favor Modernism either by extolling the Modernists or excusing their culpable conduct, or by criticising scholasticism and the Holy Fathers, or by refusing obedience to ecclesiastical authority in any of its depositaries; and toward those who show a love of novelty in history, archæology, Biblical exegesis and, finally, toward those who neglect the sacred sciences or appear to prefer to them the profane."

It was only to be expected, therefore, that modern music was doomed when Giuseppe Sarto, the former village priest, was elected Pope of Rome. To modern ears there is something strangely remote and uncouth in Gregorian music, though much of it is unquestionably beautiful. Its effect, however, is monotonous to those who have become accustomed to the richer harmonies of our day. The Church recognizes over 600 of these compositions which are commonly called Gregorian, and to those musicians who wish for a practical guide to the performance and interpretation of Gregorian music we recommend "The Model Accompaniment of Plain Chant," by Edwin Evans. A concise historical review of Gregorian music can easily be found in Grove's Dictionary of Music. It is hardly worth our while to fill up space with mere quotations which are within the reach of everyone, but perhaps our readers may find an interest in this very unusual list of the popes. It has been compiled with no little labor. It gives at a glance the great interval that separates Pope Gregory the Great from the composers of modern music.

Pope John XXII issued an edict in 1322 against the encroachments of modern secular music on the authorized Gregorian music of the Roman Catholic liturgy, and at various periods there have been attempts to reform Church music and prevent the outside atmosphere of the love song and the theatre from penetrating to the organ loft of the churches. Pope Pius X was not the first to abolish secular abuses.

Chronology of the Popes, from St. Peter to the present day:

A. D.

54, St. Peter of Bethsais in Galilea, the see at Rome.
65, Lin, Tuscan.
78, Anaclet, Athenian.
91, Clement I, Roman.
96, Evariste, Greek.
108, Alexander I, Roman.
119, Sixtus, Roman.
128, Telesphore, Greek.
139, Hygin, Athenian.
142, Pius I, Aquileia.
157, Anicet, Syrian.
168, Soter, Campania.
177, Eleuthere, Greek.
193, Victor II, African.
202, Zephyrin, Roman.
218, Callixtus I, Roman.
223, Urban I, Roman.
230, Pontianus, Roman.
235, Antheres, Greek.
236, Fabian, Roman.
250, Cornelius, Roman.
252, Luce I, Lucca.
253, Stephen I, Roman.
257, Sixtus II, Athenian.
259, Denis, Greek.
269, Felix I, Roman.
275, Eutychian, Tuscan.
283, Caius, Dalmatia.
296, Marcellinus, Roman.
308, Marcel I, Roman.
310, Eusebius, Greek.
Melchiade, African.
314, Silvester I, Roman.
336, Marcus I, Roman.
337, Julius I, Roman.
352, Liberius, Roman.
355, Felix II, Roman.
366, Damasus I, Spaniard.
385, Sirice, Roman.
398, Anastasius I, Roman.
401, Innocent I, Albano.

POPE PIUS X.

417, Zosimus I, Greek.
418, Boniface I, Roman.
422, Celestin I, Campania.
432, Sixtus III, Roman.
440, Leo I the Great, Tuscan.
468, Ilario, Sardinia.
471, Simplex, Tivoli.
483, Felix III, Roman.
492, Gelasius I, African.
496, Anastasius II, Roman.
498, Symmachus, Sardinia.
514, Hormisdas, Frosinone.
523, John I, Tuscan.
526, Felix IV, Samnite.
530, Boniface II, Roman.
532, John II, Roman.
535, Agapit I, Roman.
536, Sylverius, Campania.
538, Vigil, Roman.
555, Pelagus I, Roman.
560, John III, Roman.
574, Benedict I, Roman.
578, Pelagus II, Roman.
590, Gregory I, or the Great, Roman.
604, Sabinian, Blere.
607, Boniface III, Rome.
608, Boniface IV, Marse.
615, Deusdedit, Rome.
619, Boniface V, Naples.
625, Honorius I, Campania.
640, Severinus, Roman.
John IV, Dalmatia.
641, Theodore, Greek.
649, Martin I, Todi.
655, Eugenius I, Roman.
657, Vitalian, Segni.
672, Adeodatus, Roman.
676, Domnus I, Roman.
678, Agathon, Sicily.
682, Leo II, Sicily.
684, Benedict II, Roman.
685, John V, Syria.
686, Conon, Sicily.
687, Sergius I, Syria.
701, John VI, Greek.
705, John VII, Greek.
708, Sisinus, Syria.
Constantine, Syria.
715, Gregory II, Roman.
731, Gregory III, Syria.
741, Zacchariah, Greek.
752, Stephen II, Roman.
757, Paul I, Roman.
768, Stephen III, Sicily.
772, Adrian I, Roman.
795, Leo III, Roman.
816, Stephen IV, Roman.
817, Pascal I, Roman.
824, Eugenius II, Roman.
827, Valentine, Gregory IV, Roman.
844, Sergius II, Roman.
847, Leo IV, Roman.
855, Benedict III, Roman.
858, Nicholas I, Roman.
867, Adrian II, Roman.
872, John VIII, Roman.
882, Marin I or Martin II, Tuscan.
884, Adrian III, Roman.
885, Stephen V, Roman.
891, Formose, Roman.
896, Boniface VI, Stephen VI, Roman.
897, Roman I, Tuscan.
898, Theodore II, John IX, Tivoli.
900, Benedict IV, Roman.
903, Leo V, Ardea, Christopher, Roman.
904, Sergius III, Roman.
911, Anastasius III, Roman.
913, Laudon, Sabine.
914, John X, Ravenna.
928, Leo VI, Roman.
929, Stephen VII, Roman.
931, John XI, Roman.
936, Leo VII, Roman.
939, Stephen VIII, German.
942, Marin II, or Martin III, Roman.
946, Agapit II, Roman.
956, John XII, Roman.
964, Leo VIII, Roman.
965, John XIII, Roman.
972, Benedict VI, Roman.
974, Domnus II, Roman.
975, Benedict VII, Roman.
983, John XIV, Italian.
985, John XV, John XVI, Roman.
996, Gregory V, Roman.
999, Silvester II, Auvergne.
1003, John XVII, John XVIII, Roman.
1009, Sergius IV, Roman.
1012, Benedict VIII, Roman.
1024, John XIX, Roman.
1033, Benedict IX, Roman.
1046, Gregory VI, Roman.
1047, Clement II, Saxon.
1048, Damasus II, Bavaria.
1049, Leo IX, German.
1055, Victor II, German.
1057, Stephen X, Lorraine.
1058, Nicholas II, Burgundy.
1061, Alexander II, Milan.
1073, Gregory VII, Tuscan.
1086, Victor III, Benevento.
1088, Urban II, Lasery.
1099, Pascal II, Tuscan.
1118, Gelasius II, Gaeta.
1119, Callixtus II, Burgundy.
1124, Honorius II, Bologna.
1130, Innocent II, Roman.
1143, Celestin II, Tuscan.
1144, Luce II, Bologna.
1145, Eugenius III, Pisan.
1150, Anastasius IV, Roman.
1154, Adrian IV (Breakspeare), England.
1159, Alexander III, Sienna.
1181, Luce III, Lucca.
1185, Urban III (Crivelli), Milan.
1187, Gregory VIII, Clement III.

1191, Celestin III, Roman.
1198, Innocent III (Conti), Anagni.
1216, Honorius III (Savelli), Rome.
1227, Gregory IX (Conti), Anagni.
1241, Celestin IV, Milan.
1243, Innocent IV (Fieschi), Genoa.
1254, Alexander IV (Conti), Anagni.
1261, Urban IV, Troyes.
1264, Clement IV (Foucauld), Languedoc.
1271, Gregory X, Piacenza.
1276, Innocent V, Savoy; Adrian V, Genoa.
1277, Nicholas III (Orsini), Roman.
1281, Martin IV, Montpince.
1285, Honorius IV (Savelli), Roman.
1287, Nicholas IV, Ascoli.
1292, Celestin V, Neapolitan.
1294, Boniface VIII (Gaetani), Anagni.
1303, Benedict XI (Boccasini), Treviso.
1305, Clement V (De Gouth), Gascony.
1316, John XXII (D'Ouse), Quercy.
1334, Benedict XII, Roix.
1342, Clement VI, Limousin.
1352, Innocent VI, Limousin.
1362, Urban V (De Grissac), Gevandan.
1360, Gregory XI, Limousin.
1378, Urban VI (Prignani), Naples.
1389, Boniface IX (Tomacelli), Naples.
1404, Innocent VII (Meliorati), Abruzzi.
1406, Gregory XII (Corario), Venetian.
1409, Alexander V (Philarge), Crete.
1410, John XXIII (Cossa), Naples.
1417, Martin V (Colonna), Rome.
1431, Eugenius IV (Condolmere), Venetian.
1447, Nicholas V, Sarzana.
1455, Callixtus III (Borgia), Spain.
1458, Pius II (Piccolomini), Sienna.
1464, Paul II (Barbo), Venetian.
1471, Sixtus IV (De la Rovere), Savona.
1484, Innocent VIII (Cibo de Melfe), Genoa.
1492, Alexander VI (Lenzoli Borgia), Spain.
1503, Pius III (Piccolomini), Sienna.
Julius II (De la Rovere), Savona.
1513, Leo X (Medicis), Florence.
1522, Adrian VI (Florent), Holland.
1523, Clement VII (Medicis), Florence.
1534, Paul III (Farnese), Rome.
1550, Julius III (Del Monte), Rome.
1555, Marcel II (Crevin), Fano.
Paul IV (Caraffa), Naples.
1559, Pius IV (Medichini), Milan.
1566, Pius V (Ghislieri), Liguria.
1572, Gregory XIII (Buoncompagni), Bologna.
1585, Sixtus V (Peretti), Ancona.
1590, Urban VII (Castagna), Genoa.
Gregory XIV (Sfrondati), Cremona.
1591, Innocent IX (Facchinetti), Bologna.
1592, Clement VIII (Aldobrandini), Bologna.
1605, Leo XI (Medicis D'Ottoiano), Florence.
Paul V (Borghese), Rome.
1621, Gregory XV (Ludovisi), Bologna.
1623, Urban VIII (Barberini), Florence.
1644, Innocent X (Pamphili), Rome.
1655, Alexander VI (Chigi), Sienna.
1667, Clement IX (Rospigliosi), Tuscany.
1670, Clement X (Altieri), Rome.
1676, Innocent XI (Odescalchi), Milan.
1689, Alexander VIII (Ottoboni), Venice.
1691, Innocent XII (Pignatelli), Naples.
1700, Clement XI (Albani), Urbino.
1721, Innocent XIII (Conti), Rome.
1724, Benedict XIII (Orsini), Rome.
1740, Benedict XIV (Lambertini), Bologna.
1750, Clement XII (Corsini), Florence.
1758, Clement XIII (Rezzonico), Venetian.
1769, Clement XIV (Ganganelli), S. Angelo in Vado.
1775, Pius VI (Braschi), Cesena.
1800, Pius VII (Chiaramonti), Cesena.
1823, Leo XII (Della Genga), Spoleto.
1829, Pius VIII (Castiglioni), Cingoli.
1831, Gregory XVI (Cappellari), Belluno.
1846, Pius IX, Ancona.
1878, Leo XIII, Voscian.
1903, Pius X, Venetian.
1914, ———?

LEONARD BORWICK'S ORCHESTRAL DATES.

Leonard Borwick's orchestral dates are augmenting constantly. Recent additions to the list are engagements with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra for January 5, 1915, with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Boston during April, and with the New York Symphony Orchestra during January in New York, and again during March, both in New York and in Brooklyn.

AMERICA'S HOST ABROAD.

[The MUSICAL COURIER is endeavoring to keep the subjoined list up to date. As soon as arr[illegible] reported in this country their names are removed from this roster. Should there be an oversight, or should any of America's musical personages now abroad not be included in the appended table, the MUSICAL COURIER would be grateful to receive such information so as to be able to keep the reference schedule correct.—Editor MUSICAL COURIER.]

A

Arthur M. Abell, Mariska Aldrich, Luella Anderson, Arthur Alexander, J. Allen, Leonora Allen, Paul Althouse, Richard Aldrich, Cecil Ayres, Pasquale Amato, Paolo Ananian, Frances Alda, Richard Arnold.

B

Louis Blumenberg, Alexander Bloch, W. L. Blumenschein, Mrs. Marc A. Blumenberg, Birdice Blye, Alice L. Bryant, Mrs. Norah Brandt, Enid Brandt, Mrs. H. H. A. Beach, Charles Bowes, Eddy Brown, Thuel Burnham, John Braun, Alice Bingham, Mrs. George Beck, Helen Blain, Lillian Blauvelt, Carlo Buonamici, Rudolf Berger, Carl Braun, Alessandro Bonci, Ferruccio Busoni, Willy Burmester, Amadeo Bassi, Lucrezia Bori, George Barrere, Grace Burnap, Mrs. Hope Hopkins Burroughs, Mrs. A. M. Blair.

C

Enrico Caruso, Julia Claussen, Cleofonte Campanini, Anna Case, Dr. William C. Carl, Shanna Cumming, Mr. and Mrs. King Clark, Arthur M. Curry, Claude Cunningham, Augusta Cottlow, Pauline Curley, Lucy Call, Grace Cole, Marian Clark, Kittie Cheatham, California University Glee Club, Gertrude Cleophas, Jane Noria-Centannini, Maria Cavan, Julia Culp, Francis Coppicus, Jacques Coini, Ernesto Consolo, Charles Cooper, Andrea Casertani, Lina Cavalieri.

D

Frank Damrosch, Mildred Dilling, Laurette Duval, Vernon d'Arnalle, Adamo Didur, Charles Dalmores, Norah Drewett, Andreas Dippel, J. F. Delma-Heide, Jenny Dufau, Emmy Destinn, Eleonora de Cisneros, Gaston Duchamel.

E

Annie Ellermann, Albert Elkus, Emma Eames, Edwin Evans, Rudolph Engberg, C. A. Ellis, O. Gordon Erickson, William Engle.

F

George Fergusson, Truman Fassett, Mrs. E. Potter-Frissell, Benjamin Fabian, Geraldine Farrar, William Förster, Anna Fitzhugh, Carl Flesch, Edoardo Ferrari-Fontana, Flonzaley Quartet, Martha Falk-Mayer, S. M. Fabian.

G

Giulio Gatti-Casazza, Frank Gittelson, Louise Gunning, Leopold Godowsky, Katherine Golcher, Katharine Goodson, Esperanza Garrigue, Hedwig Glomb, Emily Gresser, Mary Garden, Paolo Gruppe, Emilio de Gogorza, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, Clara Clemens-Gabrilowitsch, Aristodemo Giorgini, Heinrich Gebhard, William J. Guard, Paolo Gallico, Albino Gorno, Johanna Gadski, Otto Goritz, Dinh Gilly, Elena Gerhardt, Joseph Gotsch, Mr. and Mrs. Felix Garziglia, Mrs. Warner Gibbs, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Gans.

H

Julia Hostater, Kathleen Howard, Victor Harris, David Hochstein, Ellis Clark Hammann, Sara Heineman, W. H. Henderson, Sue Harvard, Margaret Huston, George Hamlin, Edwin Hughes, Ada Soder-Hueck, William Hinshaw, Edward Hargreave, Karleton Hackett, George Nelson Holt, Gustav Holmquist, Elmer G. Hoelzle, Edna ver Haar, Allen Hinckley, Genevieve Houghton, Ragnahild Holmquist, Alfred Hertz, Heinrich Hensel, Frieda Hempel, Marie Hertenstein, Josef Hofmann, Hans Himmer, Edna Hoff, Walter Heermann.

J

Sascha Jacobson, Anna Taylor Jones, Carl Jörn, Edward Johnson, Frank Norris Jones.

K

Grace Kerns, Mme. Rider-Kelsey, Marie Kaiser, Earle G. Killeen, Sergei Kotlarsky, Morgan Kingston, Mr. and Mrs. Knupfer, Georgia Kober, Adele Krueger, Fritz Kreisler, Dr. Ernst Kunwald, Leopold Kramer, Louis Koemmenich, Henry Kaspar, Mrs. Joseph Kaspar, Mrs. J. B. Kendall.

L

Felice Lyne, Albert Lindquist, Kathleen Lawlor, Leslie Loth, James Liebling, Cordelia Lee, Lucille Laurence, Marie White Longman, Josef Lhevinne, Tina Lerner, Georges Longy, Frank la Forge, Theodor Latterman, Henri Le Roy, Mario Lambardi, Dr. and Mrs. Lovette.

M

Charles Henry Meltzer, Alice Garrigue Mott, Florence MacBeth, Zettali Martin, Adolph Mühlmann, Marguerite Melville, Beulah Munson, Alma Moodie, Francis Maclennan, Florence Easton Maclennan, Christine Miller, Riccardo Martin, Harry Munro, Marie Mohler, Francis Macmillen, Isolde Menges, L. H. Mudgett, Dr. Karl Muck, Ottilie Metzger, Lucien Muratore, Vannie Marcoux, Margarete Matzenauer, André Maquarre, Elisabeth Mack, Yolanda Mérö, Hans Merx, John McCormack, Daniel Maquarre, Katharine McNeal, Wilhelm Middelschulte.

N

F. Wight Neumann, Louise Nikita, Emma Nevada, Mignon Nevada, Hildegarde Nash.

O

Hendrikje Ohlsen, H. O. Osgood, W. B. Olds, Professor Otto, Mrs. Charles Orchard, W. B. Olds, Margarete Ober, Emil Oberhoffer.

P

Elizabeth Kelso Patterson, Paul Petri, Carroll Badham Preyer, Louis Persinger, Mrs. Dolly Pattison, A. Buzzi-Peccia, Henry Perry, Daniel Protheroe, Eleanor Pochler, Harry Phillips, May Esther Peterson, Ignace Jan Paderewski, Lucille Peck, Eleanor Peocock, Kathleen Parlow, Giorgio Polacco, F. Parme, S. van Praag, Anna Pavlowa.

Q

Alfred Quinn.

R

Titta Ruffo, Kate Rolla, Claude Reddish, Meta Reddisch, Leon Rains, Anita Rio, Max Rabinoff, Ettore Ruffo, Otto Roehrborn, Elizabeth Reeside, Léon Rothier, Henry Russell, Marie Rappold, Albert Reiss, Jacques Renard, H. Royer.

S

Helen Stanley, Gaston Sargent, Viola Gramm-Salzedo, Gladys Seward, Arnolde Stephenson, Leon Sametini, Carl Stasny, Wager Swayne, Irma Seydel, Theodore Seydel, Arthur Shattuck, Kurt Schindler, Ernestine Schumann-Heink, Ernest Schelling, Sigismund Stojowski, Philip Spooner, Albert Stoessel, Paul Steindorff, Theodore Spiering, Oscar Saenger, Andrea de Segurola, James Sauvage, C. Wenham Smith, Ethel C. Smith, Pitts Sanborn, Oscar Seagle, Katherine Stevenson, Herman Sandby, Ella Spindler, Alexander Savine, Frank Steen, Edgar Stillman Kelley, Eleanor Spencer, J. D. Sample, Leo Slezak, Mario Sammarco, Jan Sickesz, Arrigo Serato Sevcik Quartet, Antonio Scotti, Max Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Otto T. Simon, Josef Stransky, Giulio Setti, Leo Schultz, Ann Swinburne, Herbert Foster Sprague, Rudolph E. Schirmer, Arthur P. Schmidt.

T

Louis Campbell-Tipton, Louise Gerard-Thiers, Della Thall, Adolph Tandler, Arturo Toscanini, Jacques Thibaud, Luisa Tetrazzini, Otto Tuft, Oswald Thumser.

U

Otto Urack, Josef Urban, Jacques Urlus.

V

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Volpe, Daniel Visanska, Otto A. Voget, Edna ver Haar, Coenraad von Bos, Luisa Villani.

W

Felix Weingartner, Herbert Witherspoon, Helen Bixby Wetzel, Mrs. Stacey Williams, Edyth Walker, Hermann Hans Wetzler, Clarence Whitehill, Marie Louise Wagner, Nancy White, G. C. Weitzel, Louise St. John Westervelt, Helen Warrum, Coral Wait, Carolina White, Priscilla White, Frank, Waller, Beatrice Wheeler, Herman Weil, Anton Witek, Vita Witek, E. Walther, Edith Bower Whiffen.

Y

Eugen Ysaye, S. Contantino Yon, Pietro A. Yon.

Z

Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler, Alice Zeppilli, Katherine Ziegler.

Returned and Returning.

Leopold Stokowski, conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra, and his wife, Olga Samaroff-Stokowski, the pianist, arrived in New York this week on the steamer Noordaam.

Hannah Butler, the Chicago soprano, has returned to this country and is at present in Maine.

M. H. Hanson, the New York concert manager, is expected home this week via Montreal.

Alma Gluck, the prima donna soprano, and Efrem Zimbalist, the Russian violinist, sailed from Havre August 22, and are due in New York about August 30.

Louis Victor Saar, composer-pianist, and teacher of theory at the Cincinnati College of Music, is at present with his family in Wisconsin, having returned from abroad Wednesday, August 12.

Gertrude F. Cowen, the New York concert manager, returned from Europe last week.

Daniel Protheroe, the Chicago conductor, returned this week from the war zone on the steamship Campania.

Mary C. Bergersen, a Chicago pianist, is reported to be en route home from Vienna on the steamship New Amsterdam.

Charles L. Wagner, the New York concert manager, returned last week via Quebec.

Richard Czerwonky, concertmaster of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, returned to this country last week.

Vida Llewellyn, pianist, who is to make an American tour this coming season, arrived in New York last Sunday, August 23, on the steamship Cameronia and will spend the balance of the summer at her home in Chicago.

PUBLICATIONS AND REVIEWS

NOTICE TO PUBLISHERS.

This department is devoted to a review of old and new music publications, musical literary works and anything pertaining to the publishing of matters in music.

Only such publications and compositions will be reviewed as are deemed worthy of notice, and the MUSICAL COURIER reserves to itself the privilege of rejection. It is also understood that any work or composition or book reviewed in this column relinquishes its copyright to any part or all of its parts so far as a review of the same can be applied. This does not mean that the MUSICAL COURIER assumes or claims any interest in the copyrights; it merely means that we are not to be held for any infringement of copyright by handling copyright publications or works in this department.

Particular attention given to works of American composers and their products.

Albert Stahl, Berlin.

VARIATIONS ET FUGUE SUR UN THÈME ORIGINAL. Composed for the piano by Martinus Sieveking.

There are fourteen variations, a difficult free fugue, and again more variations in this brilliant and solidly constructed work of twenty-seven pages. The original theme is simple and diatonic. It might have served for one of Weber's genial set of variations. But only a composer who had lived after Schumann and Brahms could have written some of the later variations of this set. The four part fugue is immensely difficult and is only to be attempted by the most advanced players, who have not only polyphonic skill, but a command of octaves as well, and plenty of freedom in moving their hands rapidly across great stretches of keyboard for distant chords. There is a good deal of modern spirit and force in the fugue, which is by no means too formal and academic for the accompanying variations. This work is worthy of the serious attention of concert pianists, for whom it is evidently intended. Writers of this class of work must be prepared to live on glory or on funds collected from other sources. To put it mathematically, we might say that remuneration for a musical work decreases according to the square of the counterpoint. This work contains a lot of fine counterpoint.

D. Rahter, Leipsic.

QUINTET IN D MINOR, for piano, two violins, viola and cello. Composed by W. H. Pommer, op. 21.

This is a work that makes little more than a moderate amount of exertion on the part of the performers and does not require concert violinists to perform. From the comparative simplicity of the string parts we are inclined to think that the composer is primarily a pianist. The piano part is certainly more difficult than any of the string parts are for their respective instruments, particularly the cello part, which, with the exception of an awkward passage here and there, might be read at sight by an expert performer.

Musically, the work is melodic and direct, free from exaggerations and subtleties, and one that would be quite likely to appeal to intelligent amateurs as well as to professional players. It is written in four sections—allegro con moto, andante non troppo, allegro assai e con brio, and allegro vivace—though the music is intended to be continuous and without the breaks so characteristic of classical chamber music. The engraving and printing of this quintet is in the finest German style and could not be bettered.

F. E. C. Leuckart, Leipsic.

Piano Compositions by Emil Kronke—CHANT NAPOLITAN, FOUR GERMAN DANCES, MENUETTO, SCÈNE ROMANTIQUE, VALSE LÈGÉRE, TROIS PENSÉES MUSICALES, TROIS VALSES EROTIQUES.

These works belong to the medium grade of teaching pieces and are suitable for almost any good amateur pianist. They are well written, melodious and attractive compositions without pretentions or distinction.

Rob. Forberg, Leipsic.

PIANOFORTE-STUDIEN FÜR DIE LINKE HAND ALLEIN. By Mary Wurm.

These studies for left hand alone are not merely finger exercises, as the following list will show:

No. 1. Forty daily studies.
No. 2. Song without words.
No. 3. Idylle, etude.
No. 4. Little song.
No. 5. Chopin's E flat nocturne transcribed for left hand alone.

From a musical point of view, these left hand performances are without attraction. It does not help the music in the least for the audience to watch a pianist keep his balance by holding on to the piano stool while he twists and forces his left hand to the upper part of the keyboard, where it does not belong. As studies for the left hand, these works have value nevertheless. No pianist can be a great performer today who has not "two right hands."

Verlag von H. Neal, Heidelberg.

AUF EINER BURG, a cycle of piano pieces. Composed by Heinrich Neal.

There are ten of these little pieces, more or less after the style of Grieg's "Lyrical Pieces." They are moderately difficult, well written, and musically attractive pieces which might enjoy a certain amount of popularity among teachers. The German titles of the ten numbers are: "Morgendämmerung," "Linde im Schlosshof," "Irmgard," "Altes Lied," "Fahrender Sänger," "Stürmische Werbung," "Heiligenbild," "Auszug zum Kampf," "Schweres Lied," "Frühling."

G. H. van Eck & Zoon, Haag, Holland.

FANTASIE VOOR VIOOL EN PIANO, or, Fantasie for violin and piano. By D. Stalman.

This is essentially a violin solo with an easy accompaniment for the piano. The violin part is by no means easy; but the difficulties in the violin part are written by a violinist who knows how to make them effective. There are many changes of tempo in this short work of seven pages. A uniformity of style, however, makes the work coherent in spite of ever changing time and key signatures. Students of the violin who have got beyond the first grades and are looking for a pleasing solo of no great depth might easily find this fantasie of D. Stalman to their taste.

One Century Ago.

One hundred years ago the musical world observed the centenary of Johann Christopher von Gluck, the melodious German, who yet lives through his operas "Orfeo," "Alceste," "Iphigenia in Aulis" and "Iphigenia in Taurus." While Gluck was a German by birth, his brilliant successes were in Paris. He took the tragedies of Corneille and Racine as models upon which to form the splendor and grandeur of musical harmony. The opera of "Iphigenia" was his greatest work. When it was performed for the first time in Paris in 1774, it was an immediate success, and even the literary circles took up the question of its merits. Jean Jacques Rousseau became an appreciative admirer of Gluck, and Marie Antoinette, who was then the dauphiness at Paris, became one of his pupils.—Waltham, Mass., Daily Free Press-Tribune.

David Robinson Opens Season.

David Robinson, violin virtuoso, and formerly concertmaster of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, has resumed teaching. He has a large class of advanced violin students. Mr. Robinson will also accept engagements for concert and ensemble playing.

International Battle Hymn.

(Blanks to be filled in according to the singer's sympathies.)

Ye sons of ....., awake to glory!
The voice resounds like thunder peal,
And beardless boys and grandsires hoary
Bind firm the belt and bare the steel.
Ye mariners of ....., arise!
To arms, to arms! Ye men of .....!
On sea and land the banner flies!
Brave hearts and true defend the .....!

Oh, ... who have with ..... bled,
The God of ..... defends the right;
Far has the mighty summons sped;
To arms! To arms! And forth to fight!
"On, on to .....!" rings the cry,
And loyal soldiers follow all.
See where the foemen's banners fly!
Forward, to conquer or to fall!

Almighty Ruler, guard our cause,
And o'er our armies stretch Thy hand;
To vict'ry lead! No rest, no pause,
Till ..... is driven from our land;
Till haughty ..... is humbled low,
Her bones are broken on the sod;
Forth with our conquering army go
And vindicate our right, in God.

Brave hearts and true, awake to glory!
Hark, hark, the myriads bid you rise.
'Mid clash of steel, through combat gory,
Follow where fame and honor lies!
Stand ye for ..... until your arms
Have hurled proud ..... in flight!
Brave hearts and true, in war's alarms,
May God be with us and the right.

DENVER PHILHARMONIC ORCHESTRA SEASON WILL BEGIN OCTOBER 15.

New Business Manager Engaged—Noted Soloists Will Assist Orchestra Which Is to Be Enlarged—Chamber Music Series at Brown Palace—Summer Orchestral Concerts in the Parks.

2735 East Colfax Avenue,
Denver, Col., August 10, 1914.

Announcement has been made to the effect that Robert Slack is to be associated with the Denver Philharmonic Orchestra as business manager, having signed a contract with that organization for three years.

Mr. Slack has for many years past managed a series of artistic concerts, bringing to Denver many noted artists. This series will be discontinued and as manager of the Philharmonic Mr. Slack will bring celebrated artists to appear at each orchestral concert. The concerts, six in number, will be given at the Auditorium at night instead of the afternoon, as has heretofore been the custom.

The large seating capacity of the city's building will enable the organization to make the prices of admission lower than usual.

The first concert will be given October 15, with Julia Claussen, contralto, of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, as soloist. Other artists engaged are Rudolph Ganz, Arrigo Serato, John McCormack, Elena Gerhardt and Alma Gluck.

The orchestra, under Horace Tureman, will be enlarged and every effort is being put forth to make it one of the best in the West.

A LECTURE-RECITAL.

John Orth, the eminent Boston pianist, who is visiting in Denver, gave a lecture piano recital—"With Liszt in Weimar"—at the Central Christian Church on Wednesday evening, July 29. A good sized audience was present to greet Mr. Orth and a musical treat was enjoyed.

CHAMBER MUSIC SERIES.

A series of four concerts of chamber music is being given during the month at the Brown Palace Hotel by Alexander Saslavsky, violinist, Alfred de Voto, pianist, and Herbert Riley, cellist.

The program for the first concert consisted of Handel's sonata, No. 4, in D major; Mozart's trio, in G major, and Beethoven's "Kreutzer" sonata. This program, given on Thursday morning at 11 o'clock, was well attended by an audience of more than three hundred people.

The second concert, Thursday morning, August 6, was as well attended and the program equally as interesting as the first. Schubert's trio in B major; sonata in D minor, by Corelli; sonata in G major, by Grieg, and the Mendelssohn trio in D minor were given.

SUMMER ORCHESTRAL MUSIC.

The orchestral concerts at Lakeside will continue during August, while those at Elitch's Gardens will close on Friday, August 14. The programs at both places have been most enjoyable and instructive. The attendance has been good, considering that they have been given on the same day and hour at each resort.

The local soloists appearing at Elitch's have been Della Hoover, violinist; Miss la Zar, soprano; Evalyn Knapp Martin, soprano; Everett Steele, pianist, and Mrs. Roblin Davis, contralto.

Those singing with the Cavallo Orchestra at Lakeside were: Agnes Clark Glaister, soprano; Bertie Berlin, soprano; Maud Norman Reilley, contralto.

Dr. Francisco P. Cavallo, New York basso, and brother of Conductor Cavallo, will appear with this orchestra on Friday afternoon, August 14, singing "It Is Enough," from "Elijah."

ARTISTS TO BE HEARD NEXT WINTER.

Mme. Gadski, Maude Powell and Germaine Schnitzer will be presented to Denver audiences during the winter in concerts given by the Cavallo Orchestra.

DOLORES REEDY MAXWELL.

Air Pressure in Musical Instruments.

In an interesting article in the Philosophical Magazine, Mr. Foord refers to Dr. Stone's table of wind pressure required to play various notes of the scale on various wind instruments. The table indicates that as the notes rise higher in the scale the air pressure necessary to produce them increases with most wind instruments, although not with all. In the clarinet, for example, the pressure decreases from the low notes to the high ones, varying from 15 inches of water to 8 inches. Mr. Foord repeated these experiments on the clarinet and saxophone, playing the whole range of notes first loudly and then softly. For the clarinet it is found that the pressures fall as the notes rise, agreeing with Dr. Stone's table, although the inverse law holds good for the oboe, bassoon, horn, cornet, trumpet, euphonium and combardon. With the saxophone it is found that the pressure corresponding to notes at the beginning and end of the register are equal, the pressure rising to a maximum at the note D about half way through the scale. —Altoona (Pa.) Times.

Pasquale Tallarico's Success.

This young pianist of Italian parentage came to New York when he was ten years old and has studied exclusively in his land of adoption. His growth, intellectually, technically and musically, has been steady, and, it is said, he bids fair to become a pianist of prominence. A musical temperament, a winning personality, together with dignity and grace of manner on the platform, are strong factors in the makeup of a concert artist, and these young Tallarico possesses.

He made a successful debut last season at Aeolian Hall, New York, and has followed this up by appearances with the Philadelphia Orchestra (under Leopold Stokowski) and recitals in various important musical centers. Wherever he has played he has created an excellent impression. His success in Lowell, Mass., was remarkable, as the following extracts from his criticisms will show:

Perhaps nothing pleased more than the "Sonata Appassionata" of Beethoven; the pianist grasped the big pulsing motif and brought it forth in a manner which bespoke his blood. Theatricalism was not present. . . . May pianists of the type of Tallarico come here frequently!—Lowell Courier-Citizen.

A large audience enjoyed the artistic work of Pasquale Tallarico. . . . His work in the Beethoven sonata was a revelation and delight. . . . In the Chopin ballade, Liszt's "Gnomenreigen" and second rhapsody he exhibited a wonderful degree of virtuosity and command of his instrument.—The Lowell Sun.

Other recitals were equally successful, notably one at the Mary Baldwin Seminary, Staunton, Va.

The Staunton Daily News said:

Pasquale Tallarico had double cause to feel highly flattered last night when he appeared at the Mary Baldwin Seminary, for not only was he received with rapturous applause, but he rendered several numbers on his program decidedly better than they have ever been heard before in this city. . . . The seminary is to be congratulated in the very highest terms for giving Staunton music lovers this artistic treat.

Tallarico is spending the summer in the White Mountains, studying and enjoying nature. He expects to tour the country quite extensively this season and has arranged to go West for recitals in October and November and South following his return from the West.

Katharine Goodson Facing Phenomenal Season.

One of the American war refugees, who saw Katharine Goodson while in London recently, said the famous pianist, despite the raging conflict in Europe, would return to America next winter and "face a phenomenal season." The artist was at her home, 14 St. John's Wood Road, London, when last interviewed, and while much concerned over conditions, was happy in the thought that she was soon to pay another visit to America. This will be Miss Goodson's sixth tour of the New World; her manager has contracts for three orchestral appearances and fifteen recitals with many tentative dates. Miss Goodson will arrive in time for her first New York recital, which takes place at Carnegie Hall, on January 2. Some of the important appearances for January, February and March will be as follows:

January 8—Auburn, N. Y.
January 11—Aurora, N. Y.
January 18—Chicago, Ill.
January 21—Recital in Brooklyn.
February 16—Guelph, Canada.
February 18—Detroit, Mich.
February 25—St. Paul, Minn.
March 2—Kansas City, Mo.
March 7—Wichita, Kan.
March 9—Columbus, Ohio.
March 11—Cincinnati, Ohio.
March 25—Hartford, Conn.
March 26—Greenfield, Mass.
April 14—Bridgeport, Conn.

Asbury Park Music Festival.

A music festival is to be held in Asbury Park, N. J., by the B. P. O. Elks, No. 128, at the Beach Auditorium on the evenings of August 25, 27, and 29. The following artists have been engaged to appear on Tuesday evening, August 25, Mabel Garrison, Orville Harold, and Eva Mylott. On Thursday evening Alice Nielsen, George Dostal and Nahan Franko will be heard, and on Saturday evening, August 29, Alice Nielsen will again be heard, the other artists being Rosa Olitzka, Florencio Constantino, Jerome Uhl, and Emil Polak.

These concerts are to be given in order to raise money for the new building that has just been erected by the Elks in Asbury Park.

Gabrilowitsch Safe.

London Charlton has received a cable dispatch from Ossip Gabrilowitsch, the Russian pianist, stating that he and his wife, Clara Clemens-Gabrilowitsch, are safe in Zurich, Switzerland. Mr. Gabrilowitsch and his wife were living in Berlin at the outbreak of the present hostilities, and as the pianist is a Russian, there was much anxiety as to his welfare, fears which the message just received place at rest. Both Mr. and Mrs. Gabrilowitsch are scheduled for American concert tours this forthcoming season. They were not planning to come to this country before December, but Mr. Charlton now thinks that the European situation may prompt them to sail much earlier than they had expected. The Zurich telegram, in accordance with present regulations, was in French, and told of the artists' good health as well as their safe arrival in Switzerland.

VIDA LLEWELLYN HAS ARRIVED IN AMERICA.

Brilliant Pianist Reaches New York from Europe and Will Remain for the Balance of the Summer in Chicago—Will Tour This Country During Coming Season—Relates Exciting Experiences in War Zone.

Vida Llewellyn, the brilliant pianist, who is to tour America this season under the management of the Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, arrived in New York, Sunday, August 23, on the steamship Cameronia of the Anchor line after an exciting time.

When the war clouds began to gather, Miss Llewellyn was making the Rhine journey up the river to Mainz and thence to Wiesbaden and Frankfurt. The first signs of war were the military guards lining the bridges and the adjacent river banks, and on the rail trip between Wiesbaden and Frankfurt. Miss Llewellyn saw that the railroad stations were occupied by companies of soldiers.

VIDA LLEWELLYN.

On the day before mobilization was ordered (July 31), Miss Llewellyn left Frankfurt for Berlin. Even then, she says, the trains were crowded to the limit and people sat on suitcases or stood in the aisles, passages and vestibules wherever there was an inch of space. Miss Llewellyn was permitted to draw £20 in paper (not gold) in Berlin, no larger sum than this being allowed. From Berlin she went to the Hook of Holland and there embarked for England. The trains on this trip were again overcrowded and no attempt was made to adhere to any schedule time. As for baggage, Miss Llewellyn, being so fortunate as to speak German, was able to look after her own, standing at the door of the baggage van and personally seeing to it that it was put on the right train and not removed on the way. She says that she had no great trouble in accomplishing this, and that she met with none of the discourtesy from the Germans, of which other travelers so bitterly complain. In London Miss Llewellyn remained a week and a half waiting to get passage, and finally sailed in a room built especially in the steerage. This, says Miss Llewellyn, was not particularly uncomfortable, although far forward. The trip was quiet and uneventful.

Miss Llewellyn, who was to have remained in Europe all summer preparing for her coming tour, and had planned to sail by the Prinz Friederich Wilhelm on October 6, will now go to her Chicago home for the remainder of the summer.

Fremstad to Sing with New York Symphony.

Olive Fremstad's first appearance in New York City next season will be as soloist with the New York Symphony Orchestra at its pair of concerts in Aeolian Hall, October 31 and November 1.

Slezak's Long Delayed Letter.

A delayed letter from Leo Slezak, the giant Czech [illegible] which evidently had been opened many times [illegible] by its frequent handling that it had suffered [illegible] twenty-six day transit from the singer's home in Bavaria to the office of Haensel & Jones, in New York, says among other things, that the former Metropolitan Opera favorite is temporarily laid up with a badly sprained ankle.

According to the letter Mr. Slezak was out on his country estate with his children and dogs making a few hundred feet of film with his moving picture camera when he accidentally stepped into a small hole in the turf. Owing to his great weight, the sprain is a severe one, but the tenor says his voice is in no way affected by his crutches.

The singer tells in his humorous way of his trouble in getting a pair of crutches in the neighboring village large enough for him. Slezak says that finally one of his farm hands made him a pair by cutting down two fair sized young cypress trees. The upholstering for the armpit rests required part of a sofa pillow for each crutch.

That the giant tenor did not dream of war is indicated by the fact that he mentions in his letter that he has received word that he is to sing for his beloved emperor at the Royal Palace early in October, and that the summons further stated that he might expect another royal decoration at the time of the October visit to the palace.

Slezak is due in America late in December. His concert itinerary extends from coast to coast and lasts well into May. The great popularity of Slezak in the Far West is indicated by some twenty engagements in California, Oregon, Washington and British Columbia, and his tour includes nearly all of the important cities of the United States and Canada.

Stickles Pupil in "Elijah."

Notable among the many attractive features which marked the performance of Mendelssohn's "Elijah," conducted by Tali Esen Morgan in the Auditorium at Ocean Grove, N. J., on Saturday evening, August 15, was the admirable work of the contralto, Alice Louise Mertens, as Queen Jezebel. This young artist, who is a pupil of the prominent New York vocal teacher and coach, William Stickles, possesses a voice of richness and rare beauty. The exquisite contralto quality of her voice, with its manifold color resources, makes her gift one that undoubtedly will attract wide attention in the concert and oratorio field. Her interpretations were characterized by original impressiveness and with a keen appreciative sense of the spiritual solemnity contained in the work. These effective attributes were strikingly displayed in her appealing rendition of "O Rest in the Lord." Miss Mertens, both as a musician and a singer, is another addition to the distinguished list of convincing results hailing from the Stickles studio.

Victor Harris in New York.

Victor Harris was caught in Etretat, the French resort, at the outbreak of hostilities. He says the excitement was great, of course, and in a remarkably short space of time all of the men had left town, only old men, boys and foreigners, chiefly Americans, remaining. At first Mr. Harris did not take the matter seriously, but after four days he saw that it was time to move. In order to accomplish this he had recourse to a hay wagon for himself and a second hay wagon trailing on behind for the trunks. In this way he reached port and embarked for England and thence, via the steamship St. Louis for America.

Mr. Harris announces that he is remaining in New York and will be found at his usual address.

Frank Gittelson Heard From.

Frank Gittelson, the noted American violinist, who has been concertizing in Europe during the past two years and who is to play here for the first time professionally this coming fall, has been heard from. The agents of the Holland-American line in Rotterdam cabled his father, who is a prominent physician living in Philadelphia, for funds to prepay the passage to this country of Mr. Gittelson and his mother, and it is presumed they will arrive here within a short time. Mr. Gittelson opens his tour on October 28, when he will be the soloist with the Philadelphia Orchestra in his home city, Philadelphia.

Foster & David Prospectus.

Foster & David are preparing an elaborate prospectus of the artists under their management. It will be extensively illustrated and will be distributed gratis to their clients early in September.

Samuel Gardner at MacDowell Festival.

Samuel Gardner, violinist, was one of the artists appearing at the MacDowell Festival at Peterborough, N. H., on August 20.

Cecil Fanning at Monteagle Assembly.

Cecil Fanning the American baritone, scored a brilliant success at the Monteagle Assembly, Tennessee, when he appeared there on August 11, 12, 13 and 14 in four wholly different recital programs.

The following notice, taken from the Nashville Banner of August 17, speaks of his performances during that week and includes the program of English songs used on the last evening of his engagement at the Assembly. A more detailed review of the four programs used will appear in the next issue of the MUSICAL COURIER:

Monteagle, Tenn., August 17.—The idea of having two music festivals during the season, one in the first half, the other in the second half, was a most happy one, as it enabled the guests who came for either part of the summer to have an opportunity of hearing a special musical program. The present week has been a festival of song. On all sides have been expressions of highest praise for the splendid programs given this week, in four recitals by the gifted and accomplished young singer, Cecil Fanning, who was so ably assisted at the piano by H. B. Turpin. Mr. Fanning's versatility is remarkable, and his memory prodigious, while he conquers all the difficulties in the way of a singer. His reception at the assembly has been such as might gratify any singer, the enthusiasm enkindled amounting to an ovation.

It was with great manifested pleasure that the audience heard the announcement that Mr. Fanning would remain at Monteagle until today. In addition to the following program four encores were given:

SHAKESPEAREAN SONGS.

If Music Be the Food of Love (Twelfth Night) (1781), John Clifton
I Know a Bank (Midsummer Night's Dream).....Henry Parker
Cuckoo Song (Love's Labor Lost) (1710).....Dr. Arne
Over Hill, Over Dale (Midsummer Night's Dream) (1784), Thomas Cooke

RUSSIAN SONGS.

A Song to India.....Rimsky-Korsakoff
O Thou Billowy Harvest Field (Tolstoi).....Rachmaninoff

FOLKSONGS.

Turn Ye to Me.....Old Highland
Caller Herring' .....Old Scotch
Meet Me by Moonlight Alone.....Old English
The Keys of Heaven (dance song).....Old English
Air from the cantata, Sir Oluf (libretto by Cecil Fanning), Harriet Ware
I Had a Dove (adapted from Keats).....Carl Busch
The Fool of Thule (Bowles).....Pietro Yon
I Mind the Day (Moira O'Neill).....Charles Willeby
Someday, Sometime (Clark).....Palmer John Clark
The Charge of the Light Brigade (Tennyson)....Alfred Hiles Bergen

(Advertisement.)

The suggestion of a statue to Nordica calls attention incidentally to the fact that we have few statues to women. And that is especially unfortunate when you think how much more graceful skirts are than pantaloons.—Boston Budget.

JUST PUBLISHED

THE FAMILY MUSIC BOOK

The Most Marvellous Collection Ever Published—800 Pages; 252 Pieces

THE FAMILY MUSIC BOOK is handsomely bound in flexible cloth, printed from beautifully engraved plates, in the best manner, on excellent paper and presents an appearance of unsurpassed elegance. It contains music for piano solo, piano 4-hands, piano 6-hands, vocal solos and duets, classified as follows:

PIANO MUSIC

27 Drawing-room Pieces
18 Operatic Arrangements
14 Easy Classics
13 Sunday Music
12 Marches
10 Waltzes
2 Polkas
2 Mazurkas
1 Schottische
2 Lancers and Quadrilles
11 Jigs, Reels, and Modern Dances
9 Four-hand Pieces
4 Six-hand Pieces

VOCAL MUSIC

27 Ballads
7 Convivial Songs
8 Plantation Songs
5 French Children's Songs
6 German Children's Songs
20 English Children's Songs
10 Sacred Songs
9 Patriotic Songs
9 National Songs (Foreign Nations)
12 Hymns
14 Vocal Duets

The Name of the Book—"THE FAMILY MUSIC BOOK"—implies the purpose which the collection is to serve.

All the material has been very carefully selected, both as to classifications and the individual pieces.

The Piano Music is uniformly of moderate difficulty—within the means of the average player; and the vocal numbers in addition to being of the same grade of difficulty, possess the special advantage of having easy accompaniments—also within the means of the average pianist.

The vocal numbers throughout are for medium voice, thus being available for all singers.

Among the pieces, both piano and vocal, will be found many old favorites, universally known and loved, and many new compositions, interesting, charming and beautiful.

THE FAMILY MUSIC BOOK belongs in every household. It appeals alike to those who cultivate music seriously, and to those who love it merely for its own sake.

THE FAMILY MUSIC BOOK is also essentially a GIFT-BOOK.

The aggregate value of the music contained in the book is

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY DOLLARS ($150)

The Price is ONLY ONE DOLLAR

Cost of shipping extra: Parcel post, any point within 150 miles of New York, 10c.; any point within 300 miles, 16c.; any point within 600 miles, 27c. Add 5 cents for insured parcel post. Further distances by express. All points as far as Mississippi River, 35c. All points west of Mississippi River, 45c.

For Sale by Music Dealers, Department Stores, Stationers, and wherever music is handled.

Published by G. SCHIRMER NEW YORK

Madame OTTILIE METZGER

THE GREAT GERMAN CONTRALTO (Second American Tour)

and THEODOR LATTERMANN

THE FAMOUS BASS-BARITONE (First Appearance in America)

Who are now singing in the Hamburg Opera will arrive in America early in February

Opera :: Concert :: Oratorio

Management: Music League of America, Howard E. Potter, Business Manager
Aeolian Hall, New York

Louis Victor Saar Back from Europe.

"After all kinds of excitement, which prevailed during my last days in Europe, before and during mobilization," writes Louis Victor Saar, the well known pianist, composer and teacher of composition at the Cincinnati College of Music, in a letter to the MUSICAL COURIER, from Provemont, Mich., and dated August 17, 1914, "I returned to New York last Wednesday (August 12) on the steamship Potsdam, and went West that very afternoon to join my wife and children, who are summering here and of course worrying. I consider myself very lucky that I made my escape as quickly and safely.

"While abroad I heard from a number of friends in the profession, who, I am afraid, are still detained. My friend, Wilhelm Middelschulte, from Chicago, with whom I went abroad on the Kronprinzessin Cecile, must still be in Dortmund. Dr. Kunwald wrote to me from Berneck (Fichtelgebirge) and Louis Koemmenich from Interlaken. He and his family intend to spend August in Lausanne. I know that Theodore Spiering tried very hard to come over here permanently. This unfortunate situation is bound to play havoc with many plans and projects for this coming season.

"I sincerely hope, however, that this may be a grand chance for the Americans, or shall I say 'local artists,' to come in for his or her rights."

Matzenauer to Appear in Concert.

Margarete Matzenauer, prima donna contralto of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who will tour in concert under the direction of Messrs. Haensel & Jones, prior to and after her opera season, cabled her managers that, along with her husband, Edouarde Ferrari-Fontana, tenor of the Boston Opera Company, she would sail for America early in September.

Mme. Matzenauer is passing the summer at Ferrari Villa, Cesenatico, Italy, with her husband and little daughter, Adrienne, who is now seven months old. Immediately after her arrival in America, Mme. Matzenauer will busy herself making a series of talking machine records. In addition to her appearances at the Metropolitan Opera House, she has been engaged for twelve performances with the Boston Opera Company, where her husband is the leading dramatic tenor.

Yvonne de Treville at Brooklyn Institute.

The last engagement arranged for by the late Prof. Franklin Hooper at the Brooklyn Institute of Fine Arts and Sciences was that of Yvonne de Tréville, who is to give her famous costume recital, "Three Centuries of Prime Donne," there on November 4. Mlle. de Tréville will be assisted by her beautiful pianist, Edith Bowyer Whiffen, who accompanied her on her tour last season. Mrs. Whiffen, though marooned in Lugano, Switzerland, with the Ernesto Consolo family, expects to sail for America the end of August.

OBITUARY.

Joseph T. Ohlheiser.

Joseph T. Ohlheiser, a violinist with a studio at 427 Fine Arts Building, Chicago, died last week, at a hospital in Auburn, N. Y. An operation was performed a month ago and he seemed to rally until Saturday, when he had a relapse.

Mr. Ohlheiser became an assistant to the late S. E. Jacobson at the Chicago Musical College twenty-three years ago. Among his pupils were Cyrus McCormick, Marshall Field III, and Walter Schultz, now famous in Berlin. Since 1907 he devoted his entire time to giving private lessons. He resided at 5352 Lakewood avenue, Chicago. Funeral and burial took place in Auburn, his boyhood home. He was a former member of the Theodore Thomas Orchestra.

John Culbertson.

John Culbertson, brother of Harry Culbertson, the well known musical manager, died suddenly at his home, in Dubuque, Ia., on Friday, August 14. Mr. Culbertson was well known in the musical field and at one time was associated with his brother Harry on the Western Herald, a monthly musical paper now out of existence. John Culbertson was also connected with the Harry Culbertson Bureau and made for his brother and his artists many warm friends throughout the country.

The deceased, who had only reached his twenty-ninth birthday, is survived by his father and several brothers and sisters.

HOW TO PLAY THE VIOLIN.

ILLUSTRATED BY FRANCIS MACMILLEN.

The center picture shows the virtuoso holding the violin in the correct position, it also illustrates the correct posture of the body while playing. These two essentials are absolutely necessary, Mr. Macmillen says, to virtuosity, which, when analyzed technically, means tone production.

In present day violin playing, tone is everything. Mr. Macmillen has it, a big, lucious cellolike tone, one which makes that creepy feeling go up and down the listener's spine—the true sign that a responsive chord has been struck between player and listener.

Note the elevation at which Mr. Macmillen holds the instrument, high and free from contact with clothing, chin or body, except at the very point where it is chucked firmly but not too tightly in the angle between the chin and the collar bone, resting on the latter. Note also the body and clothing is brought into contact with the violin, thereby reducing to a minimum any interference contrary conditions might have with the vibrations of the wood in the violin. Young players can assume the position shown by Mr. Macmillen without fear of contradiction.

Picture No. 2 illustrates the correct manner of holding the bow. Note here the position of the fingers on top of the heel. Each has its specific use, opportunity for which appears at every sweep of the arm. The bow is held firmly but not so tightly that the fingers become cramped or the thumb fatigued as it supports the under drive of the bow.

Pictures Nos. 3 and 4 depict the correct position, front and back view, of the figures, hand and wrist when playing at the nut or rest of the violin. Observe the curve of the frontal position of the instrument—held not at the side, as is practised by most amateurs, but well toward the audience.

FRANCIS MACMILLEN'S PICTORIAL ILLUSTRATIONS OF "HOW TO PLAY THE VIOLIN."

The use of this frontal position must be obvious to the close observer. It enables the virtuoso to cover the strings with a full sweep of the bow without the necessity of stretching the bow arm to its limit to reach a violin held at a point farthest from it. Rather it furnishes easy communication between the bow and the strings. Furthermore, it adds to the sonority, depth and carrying power of the tone, in that the last possible portion of the wrist—away from the neck, not close to it—a mistake so many make, due to a desire to force the wrist and forearm to assist in supporting the instrument. The fingers, it is seen, are upright on the fingerboard—not flat on them—note how they fall with hammerlike precision on the strings.

Illustration No. 5 shows Mr. Macmillen's bow arm, wrist and hand, when playing at the heel of the bow. The wrist is gracefully curved and the fingers accurately poised.

A valuable lesson, these illustrations, for they depict the salient features on which the virtuoso of today depends for success, and to them Mr. Macmillen attributes the wonderful abilities which have brought to him unstinted praise from nearly every quarter of the globe.

Picture No. 6 shows Macmillen's remarkable hand

Haggerty-Snell Musicale.

Ida Haggerty-Snell gave a complimentary musicale last Monday evening to her friend, Josephine Theis, from Austin, Texas. Emily Fisher, Laura Levussore, Charles Norton Hunt and Matibel French furnished a most enjoyable program. Miss Fisher sang most beautifully several ballads, and captivated the audience with Cadman's "At Dawn." Miss Levussore gave three piano selections with real artistic finish. She has wonderful talent and delighted the audience with "Scharston," by Joseffy, "Aufschwung," by Schumann, and "Valse de Ballet," by Poldini.

Mr. Hunt, always a favorite, won much applause with his beautiful baritone songs, the most enjoyable of which was Jacob Bond's "Perfect Day."

Matibel French sang several songs, and by request gave "Elizabeth's Prayer," from "Tannhäuser." Miss French has a dramatic soprano and excels in Wagner's songs. Her enunciation is superb and her tone brilliant and musical.

Mme. Haggerty-Snell's musicales are always enjoyable, and this one was no exception to the rule.

Annie Louise David's Engagements.

Annie Louise David, harpist, will begin her season at Springfield, Mass., on October 10. Later in the season she will appear in the Thompson course of concerts at Williams College.

NORAH DREWETT
THE FAMOUS PIANIST
SEASON 1914-15
Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON : : : 437 Fifth Avenue, New York
STEINWAY PIANO USED

HINSHAW
Metropolitan Opera
BARITONE
Berlin Wagner Ring Festival, June 23rd to Aug. 21st
American Tour
DECEMBER TO JUNE
Management R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway, N. Y.

BOSTON SUMMER NOTES.

Boston, Mass., August 22, 1914.

Mrs. Hall McAllister's series of North Shore musicales was brought to a successful close on August 14, when Marie Sundelius, soprano, and George Rasely, tenor, furnished the program and were assisted at the piano by Louise McAllister, Mrs. McAllister's talented and accomplished daughter.

Mme. de Berg-Lofgren, of this city, whose pupil, Bettina Freeman, is to sing leading soprano roles with the Century Opera Company in New York this winter, has received a schedule of Miss Freeman's roles for the first seven weeks of her engagement. They are Matilda in "William Tell," Elsa in "Lohengrin," Leonora in "Trovatore," Maliella in "Jewels of the Madonna," Marguerite in "Faust," Santuzza in "Cavalleria Rusticana," and Elizabeth in "Tannhäuser."

Symptoms of the fond parent are easily discernible in the happy expression worn by Felix Fox these days, and may be directly traced to the recent arrival in this "vale of tears" of eleven pounds of youthful masculinity known as Richard B. Fox.

Ethelynde Smith has been varying her summer vacation with an occasional song recital, her most recent taking place at Alton Bay, N. H., on August 3, when the local paper (Farmington, N. H.) News) has this to say of it: "The song recital was a complete and gratifying success. The club house was filled with music lovers of Alton Bay and they were amply repaid by a well selected program of songs rendered in a truly artistic manner. From the group of German songs which opened the program to the children's group with which it was concluded, it was a continuous musical treat." BLANCHE FREEDMAN.

Laura Maverick and Carl Hahn Ready for Busy Season.

Up in beautiful Merriewold Park, N. Y., Laura Maverick, the contralto, is spending her summer days, and amid work and play she is a very busy person, indeed. She declares she has benefited much by her rest and is ready to work hard again as soon as next season begins. Her voice is in splendid condition and she is studying several new songs which she intends to add to her already varied repertoire. She is ready to accept engagements at very short notice, and for this reason givers of concerts will learn with pleasure that she and her husband, Carl Hahn, the pianist, are in this country and are available for concert dates, should artists already engaged be unable to fulfill them.

Managers and those to whom falls the duty of engaging artists for concerts will doubtless be glad to know that Mme. Maverick and Mr. Hahn are available, as they are exceptionally well equipped with an unusually extensive repertoire.

Beatrice la Palme Scores in Chicago.

A recent communication from Chicago states that opera goers at Ravina Park are most enthusiastic over the recent appearances there of Beatrice la Palme, the Century Opera prima donna. She has sung in "Tales of Hoffmann," "Pagliacci," "Boheme," "Martha" and "Secret of Suzanne," on each occasion winning enthusiastic applause.

BEATRICE LA PALME AND LOUIS KREIDLER REHEARSING SCENE OF THE "SECRET OF SUZANNE" IN THE OPEN AIR, RAVINA PARK, CHICAGO.

The accompanying snapshots show the noted singer and Louis Kreidler, also of the Century Opera Company, rehearsing scenes from the "Secret of Suzanne" in open air.

Katharine Goodson Safe in Her London Home.

Katharine Goodson, the distinguished English pianist, was on the point of starting for a holiday in Switzerland and Freibourg, when the war news made it necessary for her to change her plans. It had been arranged for her to go to Freibourg on her return journey from Switzerland to make a number of records for the Welte-Mignon. This has necessarily had to be postponed, and her tour of twenty-three concerts on the continent in Belgium, Germany, Austria and Hungary in November will probably have to be abandoned.

Klibansky Studio Recital.

A very interesting program, followed by an informal reception to visitors and pupils, was held at the studio of Sergei Klibansky, Friday afternoon, August 14. This enjoyable affair marked the close of the summer term of this vocal school. Distinct advancement in their art was noted in the case of the several pupils who have already made professional appearances, while the progress attained by the pupils who have more recently come under Mr. Klibansky's training was astonishing to their friends.

Among those taking part on the program were Virginia E. Estill, displaying a soprano voice of beautiful lyric quality; Arabel Marfield, a mezzo-soprano particularly rich in quality; Betty Powers, a coloratura soprano, possessing remarkable brilliancy in the upper register; Mrs. J. Vincent Cooper, and Lalla B. Cannon, both of whom have made a splendid impression during the past season in this city and on their Maine tour, where they appeared in recitals, and J. M. Sternhagen, whose baritone voice has very sympathetic quality, and whose excellent interpretation was appreciated.

The interest and enthusiasm displayed by the auditors and the high standard set by the performers reflected the ideals and aims of this successful teacher. Mr. Klibansky has left for a well deserved vacation in the Adirondacks, and will open his fall term September 15, at his studio, 212 West Fifty-ninth street, New York City. Following was the program:

Aria from Jeanne d'Arc ..... Tschaikowsky
Spirit Flower ..... Campbell-Tipton
Virginia E. Estill.
Aria from Rigoletto ..... Verdi
Betty Powers.
My Heart Is a Lute ..... Huntington Woodman
Aria from Carmen ..... Bizet
Arabel Marfield.
Her Rose ..... Coombs
Krishna ..... Branscombe
Baciami ..... Tosti
J. M. Sternhagen.
Traum durch die Dämmerung ..... R. Strauss
Inter Nos ..... Macfadden
Aria from Troubadour ..... Verdi
Mrs. J. V. Cooper.
Aria from La Juive ..... Halevy
Lalla B. Cannon.
Accompanists: Nina Melville, Ch. A. Stebbins.

Harry P. Archer in Pittsburgh.

Harry G. Archer, pedagogue, has returned to Pittsburgh, Pa., after a sojourn of five years in Berlin, Germany. He has taken a suite in the Penn Building, and intends to take up the work of teaching piano, organ and theory. During the month of August, Mr. Archer will be in his studio betwen the hours of ten and twelve, and two and five o'clock, for the purpose of consulting those who desire to study.

HELEN BLAIN CONTRALTO
Address: Usual Agents
Residence: 29 Upper Baker St., Regent's Park, London, N.W.
Telephone 471 Maytair

YEATMAN GRIFFITH SOLE TEACHER OF FLORENCE MACBETH
PRIMA DONNA COLORATURA OF THE CHICAGO OPERA COMPANY
Studios: Holland House, 143 Maida Vale, London

MURIEL LITTLE (Leipzig Diploma)
Voice Production Taught on Method of ELENA GERHARDT
2 Wellington Road, N.W.

The most eminent Composers, best Songs and Song Cycles are to be found in the Catalogue of
BOOSEY & CO. NEW YORK and LONDON
FREE on request. THEMATICS of latest important additions
9 East 17th Street New York

HERMANN KLEIN
Teacher of Some of the Most Successful Singers Now Before the Public
Co-Editor, Garcia's "Hints on Singing"; Author, New English Version of "Carmen"; Translator, Metzler's Mastersongs, "Lieder in English."
BECHSTEIN HALL STUDIOS, LONDON
Private address, 40 Ave. Road, Regent's Park, N.W.

Cable: Keynote, London
CONCERT DIRECTION
DANIEL MAYER
Established 1890
Chatham House
George Street
Hanover Square, W.,
LONDON, ENGLAND
ENGLAND'S PREMIER AGENCY

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. HUBBARD
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
SYMPHONY CHAMBERS BOSTON.

IRMA SEYDEL
America—Entire Season 1914-1915
Address THEODORE SEYDEL 70 Westland Avenue, Boston

GEORGE EVERETT
BARITONE—Boston and Covent Garden Opera Companies
In London Until July 28,1914
Address Frederick M. Waterman, 177 Huntington Avenue, Boston

FELIX FOX PIANIST
Summer Classes June 8 to July 25
STEINERT HALL ANNEX - - BOSTON, MASS.

WILLARD FLINT BASS
Soloist Nine Times, HANDEL and HAYDEN SOCIETY
246 Huntington Avenue, Boston
Management: Briggs Musical Bureau - Chicago

CLARA TIPPETT
TEACHER OF SINGING
321 Pierce Building - - - Boston, Mass.

Priscilla WHITE Teacher of Singing
602 Pierce Building
BOSTON - MASS

GERTRUDE F. COWEN HAS RETURNED FROM THE WAR ZONE.

The New York Concert Manager Tells the Musical Courier of Her Trying Experiences in Europe When the Great Struggle Began—Was Conferring with Andreas Dippel in Carlsbad When War Between Austria and Servia Was Declared.

Gertrude F. Cowen, the concert manager of New York, returned last week from the European war zone and her interesting and exciting story, as told to the MUSICAL COURIER, is as follows:

"When literally overtaken by the war, for I was in Carlsbad, in conference with Andreas Dippel regarding some very important plans for the coming season, when war between Austria and Servia was declared, no one, and I least of any, took the situation seriously. It seemed impossible to conceive such an outbreak, such a conflagration in this enlightened (?) era of civilization.

" However, conditions loomed still more seriously on the following day, Saturday, July 25, when several hundred men among the 'Kürgaste,' left in a body to join their respective regiments, at the call of their different governments. Even the orchestra was left without a conductor, while a young and untried substitute endeavored to lead the organization, with but serio-comic results. That same evening guests were warned to leave the resort, even though hotel keepers pooh-poohed all idea of danger.

"Not waiting further warning, I went on to Munich, and found that fascinating city much exercised over the Austrian war, but hoping against hope that this condition would be localized, and none of the world powers, which naturally included Germany, would be drawn into the melee.

"The German press, too, was most circumspect, so that the real condition of affairs was totally unknown to most of us, except as we heard the different reports from various unofficial sources. Thus Mrs. H. H. A. Beach, a resident of Munich the past three years, warned me about the serious state of existing conditions, while Mr. and Mrs. Leopold Stokowski, Mme. Cahier and other friends all awaited expectantly the news as it filtered through from day to day. At length, as rumor would not be downed, I visited the American consul, in search of advice. That individual frankly and pithily expressed himself in this wise: 'Get out, while the going is good.' Waiting for no further instructions, I secured accommodation forthwith for Ostend, and left that night—the scene of this leave taking now remaining an ever vivid memory in my mind.

The Munich station was jammed to the doors with a frantic, howling mob, with each individual endeavoring to secure tickets and dispose of luggage ahead of the others, porter service being conspicuous by its absence, soldiers everywhere, and no one knowing whether trains did run or would run at all—in short, everything was in a state of utter and dire confusion and demoralization.

At length, after endless struggles to attend to the checking of my luggage (for I was alone), I secured my berth by the fraction of a second, and we were off—an hour late, to be sure, but none the less started.

"Throughout the night, the same scenes were repeated at very station, so that the next morning the sight meeting our eyes literally beggared description. The train corridors were filled with men and women stretched on the bare floor, standing, leaning, or hanging to anything that promised relief to aching muscles; small luggage piled to the roof, and no visible mode of entrance or egress anywhere. Breakfast, of course, being conspicuous by its absence, we were cheered by the fond belief that a 'Speise-Vagon' would be attached to the train some time before we reached Köln, and thus we might be able to secure a meal.

"Thoughts of this kind were entirely eliminated, however, when, nearing the frontier, fleeing fugitives added their harrowing tales to the visible evidences of war horrors meeting our eyes—with mobilization going on everywhere, and soldiers being driven in open freight cars, like cattle to the slaughter, while their womankind bade them heartbreaking farewells.

"On reaching Herbesthal, the German frontier town, we were ordered out of the train, and soldiers with fixed bayonets assigned to 'escort' us over the frontier into Belgium territory—a walk of about ten minutes' duration.

"After endless delays, the train we secured on the other side brought us into Brussels, our route being over the Liége and adjacent territory, where the terrible bombardment followed only a few short hours later.

"Brussels, which we reached late that night, was enveloped in a dense pall of gloom, German money being tabooed and the hotels refusing to charge meals to the room, demanding money in advance for entertainment. In this way a ten mark gold piece which I tendered for dinner came back minus two mark for 'exchange.' Hastening on to Ostend the following morning, I discovered that my luggage consigned to that station had not yet broken through the frontier, and that if we did not leave within twenty-four hours, at the suggestion of the British consul, I would be marooned there for some time to come, England's declaration of war making the 'bottling up' of the Channel an imperative necessity.

"London, the scenes at the Hotel Savoy, where American enterprise had immediately organized a relief bureau for stranded compatriots, and the bombardment of those steamship offices still left open for accommodation, is too much a matter of current history to require further dilation on my part—but, the room on the steamship Finland, so fortunately secured only three days before the breaking forth of hostilities, was a hard and fast fact, which added the only gleam of sunshine to an otherwise cheerless and luggageless state of existence. My being able to bring two friends, Daisy Green and Nellie Ormond, of Boston, both stranded in London, along with me also helped brighten conditions, so that when the Finland did finally sail, a day late, to be sure, we were all prepared to make the best of circumstances, in which heroic resolve we were amply aided and abetted by an interesting array of professional men and women from all parts of America—fellow strandees and luckless, though lucky voyagers, with ourselves."

SOUSA AT OCEAN GROVE.

The "March King" and His Great Band Play to Thousands of Delighted People in Huge Auditorium on Jersey Coast.

Tali Esen Morgan, director of music at the Ocean Grove Auditorium, again proved his splendid ability by his arrangement of the festival of the Coronation of Queen Titania, which was held at Ocean Grove on the afternoons and evenings of August 21 and 22. These festivities consisted of concerts, afternoon and evening, by Sousa and his Band, assisted by the Sousa soloists, Grace Hoffman, soprano; Susan Tompkins, violinist; Herbert L. Clarke, cornetist, and also Morgan's famous children's chorus. Sousa's great band was in its usual fine form and the vast audiences of 10,000 or more people who went to hear the famous organization were as generous with their applause as Sousa was with his encores.

Among the important numbers heard Friday afternoon at the opening concert were: "Carnival Overture," Berlioz; "In a Haunted Forest," MacDowell, which was given a wonderfully effective reading, and a brilliant rendition of Liszt's "Twelfth Rhapsody."

The coronation of Queen Titania, which took place Friday evening, included many brilliant and spectacular features, the decoration of the Auditorium and the [illegible] effects being especially beautiful.

Saturday afternoon's concert was particularly [illegible] ing, being devoted exclusively to the compositions of Sousa, compositions both serious and popular, but [illegible] evidencing a genuine genius for invention and a brilliant and thorough knowledge of every detail of the composer's art.

Saturday evening, the final concert, afforded music lovers an opportunity of hearing "The Sorcerer's Apprentice" (Dukas), that brilliant scherzo in the ultra modern French manner which has taken the musical world by storm. It is safe to say that there are few bands which would dare to undertake the rendition of this music, which was originally conceived and scored for orchestra, and certainly no leader could have given it a more effective reading.

It need scarcely be added that in all of these concerts many popular and semi-popular pieces were heard, and numerous encores from the pen of Sousa himself. The whole festival was a magnificent success.

Herbert L. Clarke was accompanied by band and organ in his beautiful cornet renditions of "The Lost Chord" and "The Holy City," and by the organ alone in "Nearer, My God, to Thee." These numbers were delightful features of the Sousa concerts at Ocean Grove. Saturday afternoon Mr. Clarke played, by request, the ever popular "Moonlight Bay."

Sousa's assisting femininc soloists were most satisfying, Grace Hoffman, soprano, being the possessor of a clear and powerful lyric soprano voice and pleasing stage presence, while Susan Tompkins is a violinist of rare capability, her intonation being excellent.

Spalding Over 3,000 Miles from War Zone.

While walking up Fifth avenue one day last week, Albert Spalding was stopped by a number of his friends, who congratulated him on his return before war was declared.

"Yes," said the American violinist, "it feels good to be over 3,000 miles from the war zone; we had rather a narrow escape, as we arrived on the Kronprinzessin Cecile on her last trip from Europe. Like all good Americans, I am neutral and hope that right and justice will win in the unfortunate conflict now raging in the beautiful countries we have visited so many times."

Mr. Spalding said he was spending the remainder of the summer rehearsing for his coming American tour. With his accompanist, Andre Benoist, Spalding works a number of hours every day at the Spalding villa at Monmouth Beach, N. J. The artist has prepared most attractive programs for his American season and everything indicates that it will be his greatest year in the land of his birth. He has promised a reasonable number of surprises in the way of novelties. The Spalding tours in Europe during the past four years have enhanced the artistic prestige of this gifted young man, and, at the same time, his concerts in eleven countries have succeeded in arousing interest and enthusiasm for American artists abroad. Mr. Spalding has played in France, Northern Germany, Holland, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Finland, Russia, Italy, England and Egypt. As some readers will recall, on the last trip abroad, Spalding was able to purchase a wonderful Guarnerius violin, dated 1735, an instrument which connoisseurs have declared to be one of the most perfect in existence. The artist has other valuable violins, but this one is a marvel, combining, as it does, a tone of mellow richness in the lower octaves with flute-like timbre in the upper tones.

When not working with his music, Spalding is out of doors every minute, either engaged in a friendly game of golf, motoring or taking a stroll by himself.

A high musical authority who heard Spalding the last time he played in Holland has written to this country, stating that "Spalding's playing will prove a revelation to Americans; this American, whose advancement has been phenomenal, now ranks with a few of the great masters of the bow."

Martin and Bloch at Wellesley

One of the first recitals of the season at Wellesley College, Mass., will be given by Frederic Martin, basso, and Alexander Bloch, violinist, on October 16.

MRS. KING CLARK Mezzo Soprano
American Tour
WHOLE SEASON 1914-15
Management, M. H. Hanson
437 Fifth Ave. New York

KATHARINE COODSON
"A POETESS OF THE PIANO"
In America January to April 1915
TOUR NOW BOOKING
Management: Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York.
KNABE PIANO

MARQUIS de TRABADELO
4, rue Marbeuf, Paris

Frederic Ponsot Soul professor de chant diplome par Mme. Mathilde Marchesi 151 Rue de Rome

Jean Verd PIANIST 35 Rue Vineuse - Paris

CAMILLE DECREUS
47 rue de la Tour :: :: :: PARIS

THUEL BURNHAM
PIANIST
IN PARIS ENTIRE SUMMER
119 Rue de la Tour (XVI) Paris

Charles BOWES Vocal Instruction
Studio: 10 Rue Herran, Paris

VON STEEGE VOICE PLACEMENT
6, Chaussée de la Muette Opera, Repertoire
Director, Compagnie Internationale Lyrique

E. BERTRAN 28, RUE COPERNIC PARIS
Specialist in Voice Placement
Opera Concert

ELISABETH MACK Gesture Dramatic Action
LECTURE—RECITALS
French and English Readings
America—October to April
Address, care Musical Courier
(Especially for opera students)
Courses Begin April 1, 1914
Paris, 43, rue Michel Ange

Wager SWAYNE Pianists Prepared for Public Appearances
39 Rue de Prony (Parc Monceau) - - PARIS

DELMA-HEIDE
30 Rue Marbeuf (Champs-Elysées,) Paris
Maestro di Bel Canto Italiano
Prepares Singers for Opera and Concert in Italian, French, German and English

Jean de Reszke
53 Rue de la Faisanderie
Paris

L. d'AUBIGNÉ
Teacher of Singing
30, AVENUE KLEBER :: :: PARIS

LAMPERTI-VALDA
SCHOOL OF SINGING
61 Avenue Niel - - - Paris, France
All Communications to Be Addressed to
MME. GIULIA VALDA

ARTHUR
ALEXANDER
TENOR
Teacher of Singing
14, rue Raynouard, Paris
American Tour Beginning
February 1915
Management M. H. HANSON

Two Energetic Philadelphians.

Thaddeus Rich, dean of the College of Music of Temple University, Philadelphia, Pa., and E. F. Ulrich, director of the Festival Chorus at that institution, are shown in the accompanying pictures. Although the College of

THADDEUS RICH.

Music is a new department of Temple University, its capable dean and enthusiastic director purpose making it an organization that will be known far and wide throughout the music world for its efficiency and thoroughness. All lovers of things musical will surely extend hearty good wishes to Messrs. Rich and Ulrich in their endeavor.

The festival given last spring by the Temple University, at which Mr. Ulrich conducted the Festival Chorus and

Photo by G. Bohl's Studio, Philadelphia, Pa.
E. F. ULRICH,
Director of Festival Chorus at Temple University College of Music.

Mr. Rich appeared as one of the soloists, is to be an annual affair. Judging from the results obtained last spring and the enthusiastic comment heard on all sides regarding the venture, this festival will rapidly develop into one of the leading institutions of its kind in this country.

Only One Sousa.

What might be called "a race war of Sousas" is going on down at Coney Island, says the Brooklyn Daily Eagle. The white Sousa, the real Sousa, John Philip Sousa, the Sousa of the old Marine Band, the Sousa so often decorated in Europe, is at Luna Park. The "Black Sousa" is advertised at Steeplechase Park. The world doesn't know so much about the Black Sousa, but Manager Tilyou is doubtless convinced that he is a drawing card.

Late Saturday night an up State Supreme Court Justice, seeking a rest at Manhattan Beach, granted to the white Sousa an order to show cause to be served on the brunette Sousa, preliminary to a request for an injunction to prevent his competition with John Philip. It is declared that grave injury is done by the unfair use of the well known bandmaster's name.

Of course, some critics will hold that Sousa is inferentially advertised by the Steeplechase. "The Black Patti" was never heckled by courts. A "White Blind Tom" would never have been heckled. Art ought to know no color lines, and that's the black and white of it. But managers of show places will understand John Philip Sousa's point of view, and will sympathize with him in his contention.

JOHN HEATH PIANIST AND TEACHER
(Care Paris Office, Musical Courier)

ARNOLDE STEPHENSON SOPRANO
Management: Daniel Mayer, London A. Dandelot, Paris

MARTINUS SIEVEKING Pianist
INSTRUCTION BY A NEW METHOD.
Pupils limited. Results guaranteed.
36, rue Theophile Gautier, Paris, XVI.

WILLY von SADLER
TEACHER OF SINGING (Italian Method)
STUDIO 23, rue de l'Université - - - PARIS

REGINA DE SALES TEACHER OF SINGING
Pupils Prepared for Opera, Oratorio, Concert
40 Rue de Villejust (Ave. du Bois de Boulogne), Paris.

THE FRANCES E. DEVERELL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS
9 rue de Chaillot, Paris, France (Champs-Elysées). Exclusive residence district. Thorough French Course. Art lectures in great galleries. Season box at Opera. Travel classes. Address Mrs. G. J. Devereli, 109 Cedar St., Lapeer, Michigan, or Mlle. Deville Chabrol, 82 rue Vaneau, Paris.

GABRIEL LAPIERRE
(With Melba and Kubelik in America, Winter 1913-14)
Teacher of Singing
15 bis Boul. Jules Sandeau - - PARIS

Mme. KATE ROLLA
Former Prima-Donna, Covent Garden, London; Imperial Opera House, Moscow and St. Petersburg; San Carlo, Naples; Metropolitan, New York, etc.
PUPIL OF MARCHESI
Voice Culture, Opera or Concert, Repertoire, Diction.
Paris Studio
Pupils taken En Pension. Address, 11 rue Scribe.

OSCAR SEAGLE
"New House," Bramber, Sussex, England. from June to September, 1914
IN AMERICA OCTOBER TO MAY, 1914-1915
Management: Loudon Charlton, Carnegie Hall, New York

SHEET MUSIC IN PARIS
The only store carrying a large stock of German, Russian, English and American music as well as French music.
MAX ESCHIG
TWO STORES—
13 Rue Lafitte (Near Boulevard des Italiens)
48 Rue de Rome (Near the Conservatory)

CHARLES W. CLARK
AMERICAN TOUR SEASON 1914-15
BARITONE Dr. Frederick Clark, Personal Representative
12 Rue Leonard de Vinci, :: PARIS

DAVID BISPHAM'S HOME IN ROWAYTON, CONN., ON LONG ISLAND SOUND.

DAVID BISPHAM'S PLANS.

Distinguished American Baritone Will Sing as a Free Lance This Season—Enjoys Week Ends at His Attractive Summer Home on Long Island Sound.

As already announced in the MUSICAL COURIER, David Bispham, the celebrated and popular American baritone, will sing as a free lance during the approaching season in concerts and all-English lecture recitals. This means that Mr. Bispham will be booked by all managers, and he is represented by none of them in particular.

Mr. Bispham is spending the week ends and most of each week at his charming home in Rowayton, Conn., on Long Island Sound. He has the major part of his large library there and has a spacious room for his own study and practice, of which he does more than many artists do in the beginning of a career. It is for this reason that his repertoire is one of the greatest of any living artist. There is little in worthy song, oratorio or even opera literature that this American baritone does not know, because ever since he has taken himself out of the operatic field he has continued to work on all the modern operas if only for the purpose of knowing them and of having them should portions of them be required in his recital work.

Mr. Bispham enjoys the outdoor life which his country home invites and the friends who enjoy his hospitality attest to the fact that it reflects the tastes and the intellect of its owner.

Mr. Bispham is preparing a large number of new concert programs this summer, as he will fill a number of engagements in recital. The overwhelming success he enjoyed in the title role of the recent performance of "Elijah" at Ocean Grove, N. J., proved his voice to be in most admirable condition and he is keenly alive to the value of singing his numbers in English.

Some Robsarte Aphorisms.

Lionel Robsarte, the Trabadello representative and assistant, whose New York class numbers many singers prominently in the public eye, has issued a little folder containing his likeness, the endorsement of the great A. de Trabadello, of Paris, list of professional pupils singing in grand opera abroad and in America, in opera comique, concert, church, song recitals, teachers located in various parts of this vast country, and the following sound sense, stating some of his principles:

Self deception, the specious flattery of friends, the hardly disinterested estimate of instructors, all are pitfalls besetting every vocal student.

"Practical results" is the standing by which all work is measured in the Robsarte studio, and the universal recognition it enjoys in the musical world bespeaks its thorough demonstration.

A contract showing increased earning capacity would seem a very definite indication of progress.

Mr. Robsarte sang in opera in Italy, toured this country two years with Mme. Schumann-Heink and again was leading tenor with the Royal Carl Rosa Opera Company, of England. His knowledge of professional requirements—what constitute effects and defects—was learned at first hand.

Mr. Robsarte does not strive to be merely a vocal instructor, in a restricted sense. The bridging of that vast chasm which separates the professional from the non-professional, the development of such technic, histrionic and vocal, as shall permit of a vivid portrayal of the emotion of the text, the co-ordination of the psychological, the vocal and the physical—none of these are lost sight of.

Mr. Robsarte, himself an operatic tenor and actor of many years' experience, should be able to speak with authority.

Mr. Robsarte studied for twelve years under such masters as deTrabadello, Lherie, Koenig, Sbriglia and Cognet, of Paris; Cortesi, Vannucini, of Florence, and Santley, of London; for six years he taught under the personal supervision of the Marquis de Trabadello, of Paris, and thus secured his "hospital practice." The traditions and action of the modern repertoire are taught in their minutest detail. Associated with the Robsarte studio are a number of competent assistants, who coach, instruct in sight reading and languages, etc. All have separate studios, and, under Mr. Robsarte's direction, supplement his own work.

The Violin Department of the Von Ende School of Music.

In many respects has the history of the Von Ende School of Music, New York, been an unusual one. In the numerous music schools it is the piano department which it first organized and to which are successively added departments for the teaching of singing, violin, other instruments, theory, etc. The nucleus of the Von Ende School of Music was the violin school founded by Herwegh von Ende some years ago. It was the extraordinary encouragement which that school found among some of the most eminent musicians of the city which suggested its enlargement into a full fledged conservatory. The violin department is still an important feature and enjoys an enviable reputation among musicians and music students all over the country. With the new schedule of work which the faculty has outlined for the prescribed course and which goes into effect this year, violin instruction in that school has been raised to a standard fulfilling the highest demands of serious and ambitious students. By this schedule of work with the rigorous examination upon which will depend the bestowal of certificates and diplomas, the school has inaugurated a policy of honesty and conscientiousness which proves indeed that the Von Ende School of Music is a school with ideals.

The faculty of the violin department shows the same happy combination of European and American elements which characterizes the school in general. American born, though of German descent, and educated in Berlin, where he played among the first violins of the Philharmonic Orchestra, Mr. von Ende has rapidly earned for himself a place among the most eminent violin instructors of New York and a reputation throughout the country. He has turned out a number of pupils who are now successful soloists. The best known among them is Sergei Kotlarsky, who when a mere boy was a member of a concert company headed by no less an artist than Caruso. Kotlarsky has received the hearty approval and encouragement of Ysaye and other authorities, has been concertizing in Europe and Mexico for the past year and recently made his debut as conductor of an orchestra.

Mr. von Ende's first assistant in the violin department of the school is J. Frank Rice, who after studying with him for eight years, is now considered one of the most able and conscientious teachers of the violin. Mr. Rice is a man of rare qualities of character and of a sympathetic personality, which, added to his accomplishments as a musician, make him a conspicuous figure in a faculty distinguished for the striking individuality of its members. Another assistant in the violin department is Edwin Wickenhoefer, a violinist and teacher of pronounced ability and seriousness of purpose, unusually well equipped to prepare students for advanced instruction.

The greatest name on the faculty list is that of Anton Witek, who was for sixteen years concertmaster of the Berlin Philharmonic and has now for some years filled the same position in the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Witek's Berlin reputation as a soloist, ensemble player and teacher has more than been justified by the work he has done since coming to this country. Mr. Witek has charge of special courses for advanced students and professional violinists, both technical and interpretative, and gives regular instruction to a limited number of gifted students. His engagement at the Von Ende School of Music has attracted much attention and brought applications from violin students throughout the country.

With such a faculty to direct the individual training of each student, free instruction in theory and history of music and opportunities for ensemble work, the violin department of the Von Ende School of Music offers extraordinary advantages to serious and ambitious violin students.

PIANOS IN PARIS

Weber & Steck Pianos. Pianolas. Pianola-Pianos

We invite comparison with any and all French makes both as regards quality and price.

Renting for Music Students a Specialty

THE AEOLIAN CO., 32, AVENUE DE L'OPERA

Gescheidt Combines Teaching and Resting.

Adelaide Gescheidt, the exponent of Miller Vocal Art-Science, is having a very busy summer, combining pleasure and special teaching and coaching at her home, "The House in the Tree Tops," Chappaqua, N. Y. Much work has been accomplished with several of her advanced pupils. The accompanying snapshot shows her with her rising young twenty year old tenor, C. Judson House, already an excellent artist, perusing a particular work preparatory to coaching. Miss Gescheidt lays great stress on becoming familiar mentally with a work in every detail before singing it, in order to insure the best results. This young tenor, who scored such a success at the Saratoga Convention of the New York State Music Teachers' Association, in June, singing with the New York Symphony Orchestra, has had a long list of engagements during the past three months. It is interesting to note in this singer's voice its similarity to that of the favorite, Evan Williams.

ADELAIDE GESCHEIDT AND C. JUDSON HOUSE.

Prominent dates in Mr. House's list are: Soloist, Wagner Program, F. A. M., directed by Dr. Rübner, April 14; Stainer's "Crucifixion," Church of the Incarnation, April 10; Gaul's "Joan of Arc," New York Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, Brooklyn, May 19; Sullivan's "Golden Legend," Saratoga, June 18; University Glee Club, Northport, L. I., July 11, and Lake Mahopac, August 8. It is safe to say more will be heard of him during the impending season.

Famous Cellist (carrying his instrument from the station to the concert hall)—For why you follow me this half hour, mine poy? Is it money then you wish, poor ting?

Boy—Lor' no! I'm waiting to see yer chin that thing!—Printer's Pie.

The Famous Prima Donna of the Paris Grand Opera

MLLE. ALICE VERLET

"With the exception of Mmes. Patti and Melba, no voice of exactly the same quality has been in this country for a long period. . . ."
—London Morning Post, March 22, 1909.

Will Tour the Season 1914-15 in U.S.A. and Canada and is now being booked for Concerts and Recitals.

By Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave. New York

Articles of general musical interest, with or without pictures, will be examined by the Musical Courier if sent on approval, accompanied by stamped envelope for the return of the manuscript. In the event of its acceptance, such matter will be paid for at space rates. Address all manuscripts to The Musical Courier Company, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York, Southeast corner of Thirty-ninth Street.

IN ALL THE KEYS.

Martha E. Pettit, pianist, and Henry Ulrich, baritone, appeared recently in recital at the Wildmere House, Lake Minnewaska, N. Y.

Works by Bach, Offenbach, Safranek, Suppe, Dvorák, Balfe, etc., were heard at a recent concert given in Washington Park, Milwaukee, Wis., under the direction of Hugo Bach.

Pine Orchard, Conn., had the pleasure of listening to an excellent rendition of Liza Lehmann's "Persian Garden," which was given at the Shelton Inn. The quartet was composed of prominent local musicians, viz., Margaret Hogan, soprano; Susan Hawley Davis, contralto; Alexander Howell, tenor; and Robert Clarke, bass. They were assisted by a violinist and a harpist. Piano accompaniments were played by Lorenzo Oviatt, organist of the North Church.

Emma Gruber, soprano, gave a recital at Dansville, N. Y. She was assisted by Charles W. Knappenberg, baritone, and Marion Cushing, entertainer and organist. Miss Gruber's program consisted chiefly of Italian, French and German songs, which were well received.

The concerts at Olcott Park, Virginia, Minn., have been a pleasing feature of this summer season's entertainments.

Members of the vested choir of the Church of the Holy Trinity, Allentown, Pa., recently sang at St. John's Lutheran Church, Coplay, Pa. The soloists were Mrs. A. P. Schneider, contralto; Miss Fegley, soprano; John Rowland, tenor, and Fred Freund, tenor. Elmer E. Frederick presided at the organ.

A mixed chorus of Polish singers was heard recently in a concert at Kosciusko Park, Milwaukee, Wis. The singers were directed by C. J. Malek and rendered the "Polonaise" in honor of Thaddeus Kosciusko, whose monument is a prominent feature of the park. The entire program pertained to Poland and referred to the patriotism of its sons.

Scranton, Pa., is blessed with a musical organization which is not afraid to work these summer days. The Scranton Musical and Dramatic Club has been rehearsing faithfully, and the public may, it is reported, confidently expect some delightful entertainments this coming winter season.

The Luther College Concert Band of sixty pieces, Decorah, Iowa, gave an excellent concert recently at Manitowoc, Wis. A chorus of forty-five male voices and a tenor soloist, Ingolf A. Grindeland, were also heard in several selections.

More than sixty singers and soloists who recently were heard in "Martha" were entertained by the Scranton, Pa., Saengerbunde. A most delightful evening was spent, during which several chorus numbers relieved the usual routine.

Professor Edward A. Mueller, of Hamilton avenue, Trenton, N. J., announces that he will resume his classes for the study of piano, organ, harmony and counterpoint the first week of September.

Miss Willie Gibbs presented her pupil, Annie Katherine George in a piano recital at her studio in Dallas, Tex. Miss George was assisted by Maud Gibson, reader, and Kate Gibson, vocalist. A representative audience was present and enjoyed the offerings of these three young ladies.

Ruth Kemper, a talented young violinist of Toronto, Canada, played at the Hamilton, Canada, Exposition, and the Port Jervis, N. Y., Chautauqua, and at the banquet of the Grand Lodge of the Ontario, Canada, Odd Fellows. Her teacher is Luigo von Kumito, the well known violinist of Toronto.

Rochester, N. Y., is justly proud of its unique Community Chorus, which does all it can to make the musical life of that city a power to be reckoned with as well as enjoyed.

"The Crusaders" (Gade) marked the closing of the Alberta, Canada, Musical Competition Festival, which has become an established institution there.

A remarkable four-part chorus of one thousand voices was a feature of the Hamilton, Canada, Industrial Exposition. Another chorus of a thousand voices was composed of children, whose work, under the direction of Professor James Johnson, was very interesting.

Marie Stilwell, contralto; Maurice Warner, violinist, and Lee Cronigan, pianist, were heard recently in a series of musicales at Kingston, Canada.

Albert Downing, of Toronto, Canada, is busily engaged in forming a musical society which will be known as the Toronto Philharmonic Society.

Edna Coulter, of Oakland, Cal., is a talented young musician who is rapidly winning her way in her chosen field.

Before the church was closed for the month of August the choir of the Dayton (Ohio) Presbyterian Church gave a sacred concert, which was greatly enjoyed, as was also the assistance given by Mabel Lee, who proved a valuable addition.

Frances Carleton, vocalist, has been appearing frequently this summer at Louisville, Ky., where she is a general favorite.

At the concert given at Fayette Park Club House, Paterson, N. J., last Saturday evening, August 22, Helen J. Fay sang "Winona," by Bartlett, and "Carissima," by E. Lane Wilson. Both songs were thoroughly appreciated by the audience.

The Nordica Statue.

136 West Seventy-seventh Street,
New York, August 14, 1914.

To the Musical Courier:

In response to the numerous inquiries sent me to learn whether the Nordica memorial will take the form of a music stand in Central Park, I wish to say that the memorial was conceived and intended as a tribute to the artist and woman, Lillian Nordica, and the splendid work accomplished by this woman during her lifetime.

I am voicing the sentiment of all those who have signified their interest in this movement by accepting a place on a committee, when it is announced that the memorial will be in the form of a statue of Lillian Nordica and not in the form of a bandstand or anything else.

We hope that the officials of the city will feel inclined to permit the statue to be placed in Central Park when it is completed; as the work will be intrusted to a capable, artistic sculptress, such as Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney's work has shown her to be, and that the proper commission will pass on the work. It is safe to assume that nothing will be offered to the park that will not be of value, both from an ornamental and artistic standpoint.

Up to the present no member of our committee has approached any member of the Park Department.

To my mind there can be no more beautiful band pavilion than the present one, with its canopy of blue skies and surrounding foliage.

It would be a better plan, if more money were to be expended on the park concerts, more concerts given, more men used, and better salaries paid so that the players might devote their time to this purpose alone.

In Italy, where open air concerts, given by municipalities, are more common than anywhere else, they use portable bandstands on public squares. This I have seen in Naples, Rome, Florence, and many smaller cities, in Germany and France.

The love for open air concerts will grow here, not because of beautiful bandstands, but when more numerous opportunities to hear them are afforded.

May I close by adding that a very touching incident occurred this week in connection with the Nordica memorial. One of the last things that the eminent French basso, Pol Plancon, did just previous to his death was to send a letter paying a very high tribute to Mme. Nordica and regretting that his ill health would prevent him from taking an active part in the memorial.

Recent letters from Cosima Wagner, Mme. Schumann-Heink, Frances Alda, Mrs. Reginald de Koven, David Bispham and others have shown the broadcast interest that the artistic world is taking in this movement.

Very sincerely yours,

ALBERT MILDENBERG, Chairman,

Frank Gittelson in Berlin.

The following interesting article is culled from the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin of August 3, and will be of interest to the many friends in this country of Frank Gittelson, the well known violinist:

"A promising first tour of America threatens to be nipped in the bud for a young Philadelphian, who has achieved artistic triumphs abroad and has been hailed as a genius. He is Frank Gittelson, son of Dr. Samuel J. Gittelson, 1017 Spruce street. He has been studying in Europe for several years, recently won much favorable notice from musical critics for his playing in concert, and had completed all arrangements for a tour of this country, to include concerts in Boston, Chicago, New York and other cities. He was to have been soloist with the Philadelphia Orchestra at the Academy of Music, October 30 and 31.

"The young man's mother, and sister Elinor, are abroad with him. Dr. Gittelson said today that he was in a fever of suspense over the predicament of his family. His last message from them was a letter dated July 22. When the situation became grave, he began bombarding them with letters and cable messages, but not a word has he heard, although he is satisfied, he said, that they have been making just as frantic efforts to get in touch with him. They were at Warnemunde, a watering place in Germany on the Baltic Sea. Dr. Gittelson said he would not fear so much if assured they had got back to Berlin.

"Miss Elinor Gittelson, who is sixteen years old, has achieved some distinction in writing verse. She has contributed to Philadelphia papers since she was nine years old and is on the contributing list of a children's magazine."

Since the above article was published, Dr. Gittelson has received information through the State Department that the virtuoso and his mother are in Berlin, and that they are making every effort to return to this country. They will probably come to America by way of Holland.

Mildred Potter to Sing in Minneapolis.

Mildred Potter has been engaged to sing the part of Delilah with the Philharmonic Society, of Minneapolis, in February next.

Dan Beddoe's Evanston Engagement.

Dan Beddoe has been engaged to sing with the Evanston Choral Society, of Evanston, Ill., on November 19.

WANTED

WANTED—A good teacher of piano, whose studio is in New York, and who has studied with Monsieur Isidore Philipp in Paris; a teacher who not only uses the French method, but prepares pupils for study with M. Philipp and one thoroughly prepared to teach, wanted by a young pupil who studied in Paris with this teacher. Address "R. H. A.," care MUSICAL COURIER, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.

WANTED.—A position by a female violinist in an educational institution in the United States. Has a European education, training and experience. Credentials and references furnished. Address "S. A. M.," care MUSICAL COURIER.

WANTED—There is a splendid opportunity for a good piano, violin or singing teacher to connect with a musical institution of the highest standing in one of the leading cities of the United States by investing moderate sum in the institution. Only men or women of superior ability, culture and refinement considered. Steady income assured to the proper persons. All communications confidential. Send photo, credentials, telephone number and complete particulars to "Cooperative Opportunity," care of MUSICAL COURIER, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York.

ZOE FULTON
PRIMA DONNA CONTRALTO
Direction: Marc Lagen, 500 5th Ave., New York
Per. Add.: Pennsylvania College for Woman, Pittsburg, Pa.

WALTER SPRY
Piano Lecture-Recitals
Address Fine Arts Bldg. Chicago

GAMBLE CONCERT PARTY
CHARLES WILSON GAMBLE, Pilot
BOOKING EVERYWHERE
East End, Pittsburg, Pa.

DAVID H. SCHRYVER
Phone
Voice Production, Diction, Sight Reading, etc:
76 Rodney St., (20th Year) Brooklyn, N. Y.

MUSICAL COURIER

A WEEKLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND ITS ALLIED ARTS

Thirty-fifth Year | Price 15 Cents | Subscription $5.00 | Foreign, $6.25 Annually

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 9 | NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1914 | WHOLE NO. 1797

ROBERT GOTTSCHALK,
Tenor.
To my only teacher, Dudley Buck, in grateful recognition for his having developed in me the true meaning of real art.
ROBERT GOTTSCHALK.

EDGAR SCHOFIELD,
Baritone.
To my maestro, Dudley Buck, with sincere appreciation for his invaluable instruction, from
EDGAR SCHOFIELD.

ENRICHETTA ONELLI,
Dramatic soprano.
To mio caro Maestro Dudley Buck, in remembrance of many hours pleasantly spent in hard work and appreciation for making success possible, from
ENRICHETTA ONELLI.

KATHERINE GALLOWAY,
Soprano.
To the most conscientious teacher I know, Dudley Buck, with full appreciation. Your sincere pupil,
KATHERINE GALLOWAY.

Photo by Mishkin, New York.
MARIE MORRISEY,
Contralto.
To Dudley Buck, to whose thorough training and sincere interest I owe my every success.
Devotedly his pupil,
MARIE MORRISEY.

DUDLEY BUCK

Vocal Instructor, Five of His Artist Pupils And Their Testimonials to Their Distinguished Teacher

INTERNATIONAL MUSICAL AND EDUCATIONAL AGENCY,
Church, Concert and School Positions Secured.
MRS. BABCOCK,
CARNEGIE HALL, New York.
Telephone: 2634 Columbus.

HELENE BARTENWERFFER
MEZZO SOPRANO—VOCAL INSTRUCTOR.
111 W. 74th St. Tel. 4934 Columbus.

M. F. BURT SCHOOL
Sight-Singing, Ear-Training, Musical Stenography. Normal courses in Public and Private School Music. Special coaching for church trials.
New York School, 1202 Carnegie Hall.
Address Brooklyn School, 1202 Lefferts Place.

PAUL SAVAGE,
VOICE CULTURE.
803 Carnegie Hall,
New York.

H. RAWLINS BAKER,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Studio, 622 Aeolian Hall.
Tel. 8296 Bryant.

MAX KNITEL-TREUMANN,
BARITONE.
Voice Culture—Art of Singing.
Studio, Carnegie Hall.
Mail address: Fifth Ave., New Rochelle, N. Y.

MRS. HENRY SMOCK MISS SUSAN S.
B O I C E.
VOCAL STUDIOS.
43 E. 27th St., N. Y., Tel. 1977 Mad. Sq.

EUGENIE PAPPENHEIM,
THE CELEBRATED PRIMA DONNA.
Voice Culture in All Its Branches.
The Evelyn, 101 W. 78th St., New York City.
Telephone: 7048 Schuyler.

MARY HISSEM DE MOSS,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
106 W. 90th St. Phone, 3552 River.
Exclusive m'g't of Haensel & Jones, Aeolian Hall.

MME. MINNA SCHLOEMANN,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION—Serious Pupils Only.
10 Manhattan Ave., N. Y. Phone, 4845 Riverside.

HENRY T. FLECK,
Head Musical Department,
Normal College, New York.
69th St. and Park Ave. - - - Tel. 2443 Plaza.

FLORENCE E. GALE,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals and Concerts.
Instruction, Leschetizky Method.
151 W. 70th St. Telephone, 5331 Columbus.

HATTIE CLAPPER MORRIS,
TEACHER OF SINGING IN ALL BRANCHES.
1730 Broadway, Cor. 55th St.
Telephone, 4117 Columbus.

ZIEGLER INSTITUTE OF NORMAL SINGING
MME. ANNA E. ZIEGLER, Director.
Met. Opera House Bldg., 1425 B'way, New York.
Tel. 1274 Bryant.

HENRIETTA SPEKE-SEELEY,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
1425 Broadway—Metropolitan Opera House.
Residence, 2184 Bathgate Ave. Phone, 3967 Tremont

DUDLEY BUCK,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
Aeolian Hall, 33 West 42nd St.
Phone, 7408 Bryant. New York.
Special Summer Course.

GRAND CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC,
113 West 85th St., New York. Tel. 4152 Schuyler.
Special course for teachers and professionals. Degrees granted. Thorough course for beginners.
Dr. B. Eberhard, Pres. (Thirty-ninth year.)

ELIZABETH TOPPING
PIANO INSTRUCTION.
254 W. 104th St. - - - New York.

ELIZABETH K. PATTERSON,
SOPRANO. TEACHER OF SINGING.
Studio: 257 West 104th Street.
'Phone, 8101 Riverside.

JANET BULLOCK WILLIAMS,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
122 Carnegie Hall.

JAMES P. DUNN,
Composer and Organist, St. Patrick's Church, Jersey City. Instruction, Piano, Organ. Theory and Sight Singing. (Specialty Gregorian Chant and Catholic Church Music.) Phone, 782-R Bergen.

SIGNOR FILOTEO GRECO,
THE ART OF SINGING.
Studio: 62 East Thirty-fourth Street, New York.
Telephone: 4879 Murray Hill.

LOUISE KELLOGG,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
1211 Carnegie Hall. Tel. 1350 Columbus.

MORITZ E. SCHWARZ,
Ass't Organist, Trinity Church, New York.
RECITALS AND INSTRUCTION.
Address Trinity Church, New York.

ADOLF GLOSE,
Concert Pianist, Piano Instruction. Coach for professional and advanced singers.
Residence studio: 81 Morningside Ave., City.
'Phone, 2193-J Morningside.

LISBET HOFFMANN,
PIANIST.
12 Pierce Street, Stapleton (Staten Island).

WILBUR A. LUYSTER,
SIGHT SINGING SPECIALIST.
(Galin-Paris-Chevé Method).
Instructor 8 years at Metropolitan Opera Co. All Singers taught to read (church or otherwise), Rhythm, Ear Training, Supervisors' Course.
Tuesday and Friday Classes. 64 E. 34th St., N. Y.
Tel. 5469-J Bedford. 127 Quincy St., Brooklyn.

MISS EMMA THURSBY,
SOPRANO.
Will receive a limited number of pupils.
Residence, 34 Gramercy Park.
Phone, 3187 Gramercy. New York City.

BRUNO HUHN,
231 West 96th St., New York.
STYLE, DICTION, REPERTOIRE, ETC., TO VOCALISTS.
Will teach during the Summer.

DR. A. MADELEY RICHARDSON
Member of the Faculty of Institute of Musical Art.
VOICE PRODUCTION AND TONE-PLACING.
Teacher of singing, from the earliest stages to Opera, Oratorio and Recital work.
Tel. Morningside 7587. Studio, 490 Riverside Drive.

JOHN W. NICHOLS,
TENOR.
330 W. 58th St., N. Y. C. Phone, 1434 Columbus.
Management: A. Friedberg, 1425 Broadway.

CLAUDE WARFORD,
TENOR.
Metropolitan Opera House.
1425 Broadway, New York.

CARL M. ROEDER,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
607 Carnegie Hall and 423 East 140th St.

FREDERICK E. BRISTOL,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
No. 143 West 42d St., New York.

MR. CHARLES LEE TRACY,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Certified Teacher of the LESCHETIZKY METHOD.
Studio: Carnegie Hall, - - New York City.

JOSEPH PIZZARELLO,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Voice Developed—Style, Opera.
851-852 Carnegie Hall, New York.

WILLIAM NELSON BURRITT,
VOICE SPECIALIST
AND REPERTOIRE BUILDER.
128A East 19th Street.
Tel. Gramercy 3848.

WALTER L. BOGERT,
Ex-President of N. Y. State Music Teachers' Ass'n.
TEACHER OF SINGING.
Baritone. Lectures and Recitals.
130 Claremont Ave., New York. Tel. 291 Morn'side.
Tuesday and Friday, Aeolian Hall.

Piano Instruction Telephone
Theory of Music 7280 Schuyler
CARL HAHN,
Studio: 172 West 79th St. (The Avonel).

F. W. RIESBERG,
INSTRUCTION—PIANO, ORGAN, HARMONY.
With the "Musical Courier"; Sec'y Manuscript Society; Organist Central Baptist Church, New York. 439 Fifth Ave.; Tel. 4292 Murray Hill.
Residence, Park Hill, Yonkers, N. Y.

JESSIE DAVIS,
PIANIST.
Concerts—Recitals—Lessons.
Studio: 701 Pierce Bldg., Boston.

CARL FIQUÉ, PIANO
KATHERINE NOAK-FIQUE,
Dramatic Soprano
FIQUE MUSICAL INSTITUTE,
128 DeKalb Avenue, Brooklyn.

MISS GENEVIEVE BISBEE,
—Leschetizky Method—
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
Also limited number of resident pupils received.
38 East 60th St. 'Phone, 6109 Plaza.

WARD LEWIS,
ACCOMPANIST. With Mr. David Bispham season 1914. With Rhelda ffer-Gailey Co. touring West Summer 1914.
517 Riverside Drive, New York.
Phone, 3753 Morningside.

ALICE GARRIGUE MOTT,
ART OF SINGING.
172 West 79th St., New York.

ESPERANZA GARRIGUE,
ART OF SINGING.
Heathcote Hall, 600 West 114th St., New York
Tel. 7814 Morningside.
(Bet. Broadway and Riverside Drive.)

MME. EMMA A. DAMBMANN,
(MRS. HERMANN G. FRIEDMANN.)
CONTRALTO.
Vocal Instruction, Concerts.
Residence Studio, Hotel Calumet
Phone: Columbus 1628. 340 West 57th S

THE NEW YORK INSTITUTE FO
VIOLIN PLAYING, PIANO AN
VOCAL CULTURE, 230 East 62d Str
Complete musical education given to studer from the begining to the highest perfection.
F. & H. CARRI, Directors

MARY T. WILLIAMSON,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals, Concerts, Instruction.
Leschetizky Method. 21 East 75th St.
'Phone, 1302 Lenox.

MR. AND MRS. THEO. J. TOEDT,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Home Studio: 163 East 62d St., New Yor

T. TERTIUS NOBLE,
ORGANIST AND MASTER OF THE CHO
Lessons in Organ, Theory and Compositio
St. Thomas' Church, Fifth Ave. and 53d S

VON DOENHOFF,
VOICE—HELEN. PIANO—ALBE
1186 Madison Ave.
'Phone: 1332 Lenox.

DANIEL VISANSKA, VIOLINIST.
Nine years of successful teaching and concert in Berlin. Will accept engagements and a lim number of pupils.
Address: 25 West 126th St., New York.
Phone, Harlem 3427.
[In Philadelphia Mondays. Address 1821 mond St.]

ELENA DE OLLOQUI,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
111 East 62d St., New York. Tel., 2285 I

MME. LISETTE JOSTY-HAMMON
"Voice-placing and Singing" through "Corr
Italian Enunciation."
Metropolitan Opera House Bldg.,
1425 Broadway, New York.

HERBERT WILBER GREENE
SCHOOL OF SINGING.
Director of the Brookfield Summer School of Si
701 Carnegie Hall, N. Y. City.

MUSICAL COURIER

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 9. NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1914. WHOLE NO. 1797.

"AIDA" GIVEN UNDER BATON OF MASCAGNI.

Rome Hears Open Air Performance of Verdi's Masterpiece Led by Modern Composer—Humperdinck Writes Moving Picture Music—Americans Successful.

Rome, July 27, 1914.

Open air performances are quite the style now after the big success among the pyramids at Cairo. "Aida" was given at the Arena of Verona last year with fine financial and artistic results, so the Romans thought they would not be outdone and they gave a really magnificent performance of "Aida."

Mascagni's baton, while sometimes stimulating, at other moments is so slow and dragging as to make everything lifeless and heavy.

The scenery was picturesque, the big columns being painted with Egyptian hieroglyphics, and walls were added for interior decoration, while fixed pyramids with real palms could be seen through the columns, and the Nile appeared to be really running in the background, with beautiful natural trees and a small temple, sphinxes, etc., adding to the illusion. The whole effect was undeniably poetic, and what with the suggestive music, and some good singing, made up an ideal performance.

True it is that details at times were lost (the place holds 60,000 persons), but on the other hand the brass, which in a theatre is nearly always harsh, was delightful to listen to.

Juanita Capella was an Aida who was heard to good advantage. She sang the big aria of the Nile especially well. Amneris was a youthful and promising mezzo soprano who hails from the school of Mme. Brizzi, one of the best in Rome. The tenor (ah, those tenors!) was a great disappointment, his "Celeste Aida" being a disaster.

The costuming was gorgeous and all the scenic accessories were in harmony. Witnessing and especially listening to this outdoor performance one can readily understand the enthusiasm the ancients had for their amphitheatres. Of course, this Stadio is too large, as is the Arena in Milan, which is of still more colossal proportions. The ideal al fresco theatre is the Arena at Verona, the proportions there being perfect. This year Mme. Gay did her picturesque Carmen there.

"Aida" is to have eight, perhaps ten, hearings, according to the public patronage.

One thing is true, however, that if every evening the performance is to end at 2.30 a. m., no one will go after a while, as the spot where the Stadio is built is near the Tiber and the dampness, especially after midnight, is almost unbearable.

Other Outdoor Art.

At Rimini (now called the Italian Ostende) they are also giving outdoor performances in a theatre built for the purpose. The opera is "Isabeau." The old Greek Amphitheatre of Siræusa, Sicily, was to have opera also, but it has been decided to give "Agamemnon" in spoken prose. The same plan has been adopted by the old Amphitheatre at Fiesole, near Florence

Notes and Mention.

Mascagni will direct his "Iris" at Casalmonferrato in September.

Meta Reddisch, the young lyric soprano, has had success as Gilda at the theatre in Lyons, France, where an Italian company is singing.

At Pesaro Zandonai's "Francesca da Rimini" has pleased the public.

Pavia has also its open air performances, "Norma" being the opera.

Humperdinck has written music for a religious drama film for the biggest moving picture house in Rome.

The season at the Adriano came to an abrupt close. Forrest Lamont, the American tenor, sang the last performances of "Trovatore" with ever increasing success. His voice is agreeable although not voluminous, and he sings in excellent style and with earnestness and sincerity.

The operas given during the short season were "Puritani," "Poliecto," "Trovatore" and "Traviata."

At the Augusteo the season 1914-1915 promises to be interesting for novelties. So far it is known that symphonic impressions entitled "Villa d'Este," by Maestro

CHURCH OF ST. PETER IN THE PALACE OF THE VATICAN, WHERE THE SUCCESSOR TO THE LATE POPE IS BEING ELECTED.

EXTERIOR OF THE AMPHITHEATRE FLAVIO DETTO IL COLOSSEO.

INTERIOR OF THE AMPHITHEATRE FLAVIO DETTO IL COLOSSEO.

Filippo Guglielmi, and the second and third movements of young Garofalo's symphony are to be played.

Another young American, Laya Machat, made a success in "Puritani." Her voice has improved greatly since last season and her singing of the difficult music (that is, technically difficult) was laudable.

Duchess Massari (Maria Waldmann), the first Amneris, has made a present of a monument of Verdi to the city of Ferrara, her residence. The monument was inaugurated some days ago. At the same time a slab with an inscription to the memory of the librettist Solera was also inaugurated. Besides a great many souvenirs and unpublished letters of Verdi are to be given to the museum of Ferrara, all through the munificence of the Duchess.

At Villa Umberto I a monster concert took place for the benefit of the Red Cross. About 50,000 persons were present. Vessella, the bandmaster, conducted. D. P.

Carl Hahn to Teach Cello and Piano.

Carl Hahn has decided that in addition to his pedagogic duties as a teacher of piano, he will also give instruction in the art of playing the cello. For this purpose, he has affiliated himself with the Robyn Studios, New York, as cello instructor. Mr. Hahn was formerly instructor of cello at the Cincinnati College of Music. Students of this instrument will learn with pleasure of this decision on the part of Mr. Hahn.

Mme. Guercias Returns from Europe.

Mme. Guercias, the operatic soprano, has returned to New York from Europe after an exciting trip. Mme. Guercias was in Vienna when war was declared and she experienced great difficulty in reaching a seaport. After considerable delay she obtained passage on the steamship Caronia.

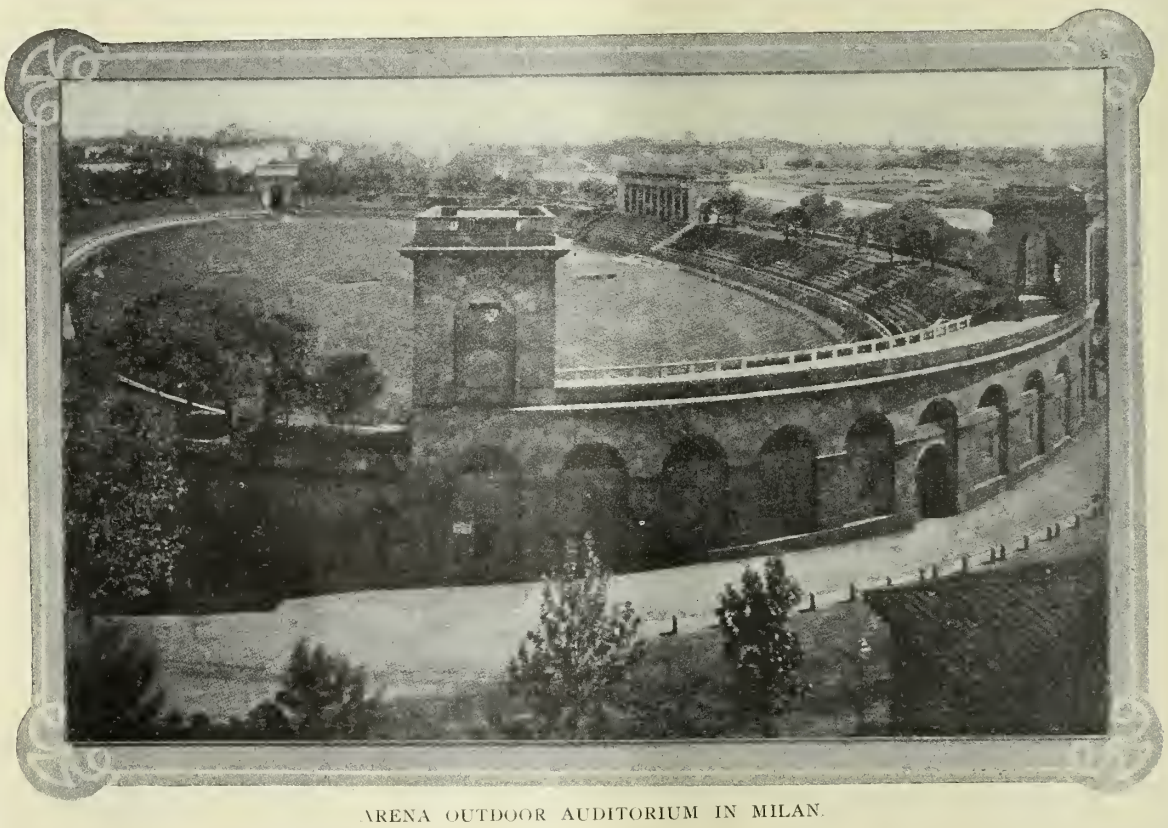
"What's that the orchestra is playing?"

"Aren't you ashamed," she answered, "not to recognize that! Why, that's Hendel's Tango!"—Winnipeg Town Topics.

The Music Teachers' Association, of California.

San Francisco, August 20, 1914.

To the Musical Courier



I am requested by the State Board of the Music Teachers' Association to forward to you a copy of the following resolution passed by them August 6th:

"Resolved, That to the press we owe unbounded praise for the liberal support given to our every movement, and for the unlimited space placed at our disposal, whereby our work has been given so much valued publicity.

The State Board keenly appreciated your generosity, and the interesting articles concerning the recent convention held at San Diego. They also wish to acknowledge their appreciation of your desire to uphold the Association in its policy of "standardization," a difficult but necessary problem.

Thanking you most sincerely, I am. Yours truly,

MARIE WITHROW, Corresponding Secretary.

ARENA OUTDOOR AUDITORIUM IN MILAN.

Byford Ryan Resumes Work.

Byford Ryan, the eminent tenor and vocal teacher, for some years leading tenor at the Opera Comique, Berlin, sends word to the MUSICAL COURIER that he has returned from his vacation and is to be found at his studio, 28 West Sixty-third street, New York.

Strauss Explains.

The great German composer, Richard Strauss, does not often talk about himself, but he made an exception the other day in Paris, where he went to superintend the production of his "Joseph Legend." He confessed to a representative of Comoedia that he loves the orchestra better than anything else.

"It is my passion, my world and my laboratory," he declared. "If I were Jupiter it would be my splendid thunder, and I pity that god for not having had anything but a monotonous and unvarying din to express his feelings. Variety is necessary—light and shade and, if possible, colors! But that is neither simple nor easy. I have played the piano ever since I was six, and already began to compose at that age. I was what we call an infant prodigy. My first orchestral symphony was executed while I was still at school, and all the critics agreed that I was a wonder master of instrumentation. At twenty I was conducting the orchestra at Meiningen, where Hans von Bulow engaged me for two years. Now I am fifty, and certain critics reproach me for complication and the celebrated discords. This is because, in spite of my labor and knowledge, I have not yet found out how to express myself more simply. Paradox, if you like!—but I write as I feel—I have no principles, but am a free man."

This confession is certainly a relief, for it was the general impression that these "celebrated discords" were the result of an overweening desire to attract attention.—Winnipeg, Canada, Town Topics.

Charles Widor has been appointed perpetual secretary of the French Académie des Beaux-Arts, a much coveted post. The voting was unanimous. By this appointment there is a vacancy in the musical section of the Académie, in connection with which the name of Claude Debussy is being mentioned.—Exchange.

NORAH DREWETT
THE FAMOUS PIANIST
SEASON 1914-15
Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON : : : 437 Fifth Avenue, New York
STEINWAY PIANO USED

MRS. KING CLARK Mezzo Soprano
American Tour
WHOLE SEASON 1914-15
Management, M. H. Hanson
437 Fifth Ave. New York

[CORRECT WAY TO HOLD VIOLIN]

Season
1914 - 1915
October to May (Inclusive)

Tour Now Booking

FRANCIS

MACMILLEN

Violinist

EXCLUSIVE DIRECTION: S. E. MACMILLEN, 220 W. 42nd STREET, NEW YORK CITY

MARQUIS de TRABADELO
4, rue Marbeuf, Paris

Frederic Ponsot Soul professor de chant diplome par Mme. Mathilde Marchesi 151 Rue de Rome

Jean Verd PIANIST 35 Rue Vineuse - Paris

CAMILLE DECREUS
47 rue de la Tour :: :: :: PARIS

THUEL BURNHAM
PIANIST
IN PARIS ENTIRE SUMMER
119 Rue de la Tour (XVI) Paris

REGINA DE SALES TEACHER OF SINGING
Pupils Prepared for Opera, Oratorio, Concert
40 Rue de Villejust (Ave. du Bois de Boulogne), Paris.

VON STEEGE VOICE PLACEMENT
6, Chaussée de la Muette Opera, Repertoire
Director, Compagnie Internationale Lyrique

E. BERTRAN 28, RUE COPERNIC PARIS
Specialist in Voice Placement
Opera Concert

ELISABETH MACK Gesture Dramatic Action
LECTURE—RECITALS
French and English Readings
America—October to April
Address, care Musical Courier
(Especially for opera students)
Courses Begin April 1, 1914
Paris, 43, rue Michel Ange

Wager SWAYNE Pianists Prepared for Public Appearances
39 Rue de Prony (Parc Monceau) - - PARIS

DELMA-HEIDE
30 Rue Marbeuf (Champs-Elysées,) Paris
Maestro di Bel Canto Italiano
Prepares Singers for Opera and Concert in Italian, French, German and English

Jean de Reszke
53 Rue de la Faisanderie
Paris

L. d'AUBIGNÉ
Teacher of Singing
30, AVENUE KLEBER :: :: PARIS

LAMPERTI-VALDA
SCHOOL OF SINGING
61 Avenue Niel - - - Paris, France
All Communications to Be Addressed to
MME. GIULIA VALDA

ARTHUR
ALEXANDER
TENOR
Teacher of Singing
14, rue Raynouard, Paris

American Tour Beginning
February 1915
Management M. H. HANSON

Helen Bixby Wetzel in Lower Tyrol.

The accompanying snapshot shows Helen Bixby Wetzel, the young American prima donna, now appearing with great success in opera in Europe. The picture was taken during her engagement in Lower Tyrol with an Italian company, when she sang Gilda and the leading role in one or two other operas, among them "Don Pasquale." With her in the group are the impresario and two other members of the company.

HELEN BIXBY WETZEL AND OPERATIC ASSOCIATES.

Miss Wetzel, who is now in London, will soon return to Italy to fill other engagements.

The Way to "Land 'Em" (Dates and Fish).

From far up in the heart of the Maine woods, Horatio Connell, the well known baritone, sends the accompanying snapshot of himself, showing one of his twenty pounders, although Mr. Connell admits that twenty pounders do not comprise his daily haul. He is enthusiastic over the country, the air, the fishing, and in fact over everything. His cabin, which is made of logs, is situated on the side of beautiful Spring Lake, filled with many different varieties of the finny tribe. He writes that the duck shooting will commence September 1, and he hopes to be able to enjoy this sport, too, before leaving his camp.

HORATIO CONNELL.

Mr. Connell declares he is feeling in fine spirits and ready for a season which gives every prospect of being a strenuous one.

He Doesn't.

At a provincial concert Sir Michael Costa was conducting an orchestra which included some local assistance. At one of the rehearsals a local gentleman was evidently playing far away from his copy, when Costa stopped his progress. Addressing the delinquent, he said as rapidly as he could utter the words: "I beg your pardon, sir; your copy must be wrong. You are playing the wrong notes. Have you the right place?" The poor offender said: "Yes, sir, this is the piece. In four flats, is it not?" "Yes, sir, in A flat major," quickly replied the conductor. "Well," said the offender, "yer see, Mister Costa, awm bound ter tell yer that in ma part o' t' country where I coom from, you know, these fower flats, some plays 'em and some doesn't—I doesn't!"—Monthly Musical Record.

Song Written for Yvonne de Treville.

The song, "If You E'er Have Seen," by Gena Branscombe, which was sung at the recent MacDowell Festival at Peterborough, N. H., was written for Yvonne de Treville and is dedicated to that remarkable coloratura soprano. Miss de Treville will use it on her programs this winter.

Bruno Huhn Resumes Vocal Instruction.

Bruno Huhn, the well known vocal instructor and composer, has resumed teaching at 231 West Ninety-sixth street, New York City.

JOHN HEATH PIANIST AND TEACHER
(Care Paris Office, Musical Courier)

ARNOLDE STEPHENSON SOPRANO
Management: Daniel Mayer, London A. Dandelot, Paris

MARTINUS SIEVEKING Pianist
INSTRUCTION BY A NEW METHOD.
Pupils limited. Results guaranteed.
36, rue Theophile Gautier, Paris, XVI.

WILLY von SADLER
TEACHER OF SINGING (Italian Method)
STUDIO 23, rue de l'Université - - - PARIS

THE FRANCES E. DEVERELL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS
9 rue de Chaillot. Paris, France (Champs-Elysées). Exclusive residence district. Thorough French Course. Art lectures in great galleries. Season box at Opera. Travel classes. Address Mrs. G. J. Deverell, 109 Cedar St., Lapeer, Michigan, or Mlle. Deville Chabrol, 82 rue Vaneau, Paris.

GABRIEL LAPIERRE
(With Melba and Kubelik in America, Winter 1913-14)
Teacher of Singing
15 bis Boul. Jules Sandeau - - PARIS

Mme. KATE ROLLA
Former Prima-Donna, Covent Garden, London; Imperial Opera House, Moscow and St. Petersburg; San Carlo, Naples; Metropolitan, New York, etc.
PUPIL OF MARCHESI
Voice Culture, Opera or Concert, Repertoire, Diction.
Paris Studio
Pupils taken En Pension. Address, 11 rue Scribe.

OSCAR SEAGLE
"New House," Bramber, Sussex, England, from June to September, 1914
IN AMERICA OCTOBER TO MAY, 1914-1915
Management: Loudon Charlton, Carnegie Hall, New York

SHEET MUSIC IN PARIS
The only store carrying a large stock of German, Russian, English and American music as well as French music.
MAX ESCHIG
TWO STORES—
13 Rue Lafitte (Near Boulevard des Italiens)
48 Rue de Rome (Near the Conservatory)

CHARLES W. CLARK
AMERICAN TOUR SEASON 1914-15
BARITONE 12 Rue Leonard de Vinci, :: PARIS

THE RENAISSANCE OF IMPROVISING.

BY HARRIET WARE.

The other day, while viewing one of the Shakespeare classics as thrown on the moving picture screen, my attention was distracted by the pianist, who, truly inspired by changing scenes, and the dramatic play of emotions, improvised in a most spirited and expressive manner.

Unconsciously my mind wandered back to a little house in Akron, Ohio, where my dear friend Mme. Remenyi spent her last deays. The widow of the famous violinist used to comment sadly upon the fact that improvising is a lost art in our day. Mme. Remenyi was wont to rhapsodize over the wonderful performances she had heard formerly, when such men as Brahms, Remenyi, Wagner, Chopin, and the rest of the great musical lights of that period would gather about Liszt in Weimar, or meet in the Paris salons and hold those memorable impromptu concerts that as yet have never been equalled. According to Mme. Remenyi, Liszt, Chopin and Rubinstein were the greatest masters in the art of improvising.

"It is hardly conceivable," said she at our last meeting, "how any artist ever could reach such a climax of exaltation while interpreting the composition of another as Liszt would attain while expressing the very breath of his own being."

The importance of cultivating improvisational powers took on a new aspect for me after Mme. Remenyi's spirited discussions of this fascinating subject, and since then I have devoted considerable time to the study of this matter.

When I first became interested in Hungarian music (during my student days in Budapest) I was astonished at the number of pianists, violinists and cellists who would improvise from fifteen to forty-five minutes, weaving their rhapsodies of folksongs or classic motifs in haphazard succession. Brilliant cadenzas and modulations would serve as stepping stones from one theme to another. I have never yet seen a musician get more joy out of playing than these temperamental Magyars.

It may be timely here to remark that the Hungarian folksong is the nearest approach to the purely improvised form of music. In the orthodox Jewish synagogue there has been, and in those of the smaller communities there still is, a certain amount of improvising done by the cantor. To this day every good cantor takes pride in his own arrangement of "Kol Nidrei," and some of the other important holiday Psalms. But on the whole, the art of improvising has almost totally disappeared, even among them. For a while they added their own grace notes and cadenzas to the given melody, but with time the Halévy and other versions of the temple services became a permanent institution, and have been taught very strictly to the younger generations of orthodox cantors.

One can readily conceive what a wonderful inspiration the power of improvising may become in the musical life of the individual as well as the masses. Such mode of musical expression stimulates one's power of imagination and greatly enlarges one's scope of musical self expression. All musical or intellectual shortcomings, on the other hand, find their way to the surface in improvisation.

HARRIET WARE,
The accomplished interpreter of Hungarian and Slav music.

"With the neglect of improvising most of the romanticism of musical art has died." Such was Mme. Remenyi's remark in closing her lamentation over the irreparable loss of general improvisation among artists.

If the kind reader will follow me back to the "movie," I will endeavor to point out just to what extent we may hope to see a revival of the art of improvising through the truly artistic film theatres.

If we proceed from the theory that improvising is the musical description of a mental vision, or the direct expression of our emotions of the moment, then we are bound to appreciate the important part that the "movie" may play in the revival of this lost art. A wonderful source of inspiration is an artistic film to any artist whose improvising talents are sensitively dependent on their sense of sight and emotional stimulus. As the plot of the play unfolds itself before the pianist's eyes, unsonsciously he enters into its spirit, and through the vision his emotional powers are awakened, enabling him to express in music what he feels and sees.

Violinists, too, could be stirred into some kind of musical expression. Who would laugh at the idea of using the highest grade films for an experiment in some of our best conservatories in order to ascertain the existence of dormant improvising talent among the students? With a mechanical device already on the market that records improvisations, such an experiment may help us to discover many a slumbering talent of great composers to be. Our young artists would receive encouragement by realizing the fact that they are not merely parrots in the realm of music, but have ideas of their own and the power of expressing the worthiest within themselves.

The moving picture has come to stay. We are dependent upon it in almost every branch of science. It has taught the followers of the arts undreamt of and invaluable lessons. The wonderful glass eye of the movie camera has penetrated into many a secret of nature. The beautiful landscapes that we rushed past in trains and motors are brought back to us on a frail ribbon. Nature condensed in all its beauty and grandeur, at the command of man it unfolds itself to surpass his wildest dreams and boldest flights of imagination.

In many cities large orchestras are employed to furnish music for the picture play. Indeed, in Copenhagen my good friend, Mr. Petersen, the conductor of the symphony orchestra, with forty of his men, plays a strictly classic program accompanying the highly developed artistic films.

The film has opened a new field to the composer; why not use it also to stimulate a universal renaissance of extemporizing?

Could you picture to yourself a nobler pastime for true musicians than gathering for a feast of extemporizing? It would be but a question for many a dormant non-creative musical talent to become so thoroughly roused to the exaltation of improvising, that eventually they would hardly need the visions thrown on the screen in order to stimulate musical creative powers.

While in its primitive state, the "movies" appealed mostly to the crude element of humanity, but today, in its highly developed form, presented in our best theatres, they lure men and women whose appreciation of the beautiful and artistic is such as to demand not only the very best pictures, but also a musical accompaniment of decided merit. If the musician will co-operate with the producer they should have no trouble in perfecting the picture play to a point where they can assure the public of a genuine treat for ears as well as for eyes.

The systematic encouragement of improvising in our schools of music and also in the home would mark the beginning of a new epoch in our musical life, one that holds forth such possibilities as to surprise even the boldest dreamer of dreams.

The Effects of War.

The police of San Francisco have closed a moving picture house and arrested the proprietor on a charge of inciting to riot because pictures were shown purporting to represent the Franco-Prussian war.

Hotel managers throughout the city have ordered their orchestras to play no national or patriotic airs, not even Hungarian dance music. Repeated clashes among guests offended because this or that air was or was not played taught the managers that absolute suppression was the course of wisdom.—Duluth (Minn.) Herald.

PIANOS IN PARIS

Weber & Steck Pianos. Pianolas. Pianola-Piano

We invite comparison with any and all French makes both as regards quality and price.

Renting for Music Students a Specialty

THE AEOLIAN CO., 32, AVENUE DE L'OPERA

Announcement Extraordinary

VICTOR BENHAM

Pronounced by the European Press as "America's Greatest Pianist"

Owing to the war conditions in Europe, will remain in New York during this season and will accept a limited number of pupils. Mr. Benham's pupils are accepted by the world's famous pedagogues, including Leschetizky, Phillip, Godowsky, etc.

For terms etc., address Victor Benham, Steinway Hall, New York, East 14th Street.

DUDLEY BUCK, TEACHER OF SINGING.

There is one teacher of singing in New York City who has no reason to complain because of lack of work, and that teacher is Dudley Buck. So incessant have been the calls upon his time for instruction that he has been obliged to devote the major share of the summer to his large class. However, Mr. Buck now feels that he must have a little change, so he has decided to spend the month of September in the Adirondack Mountains, where he hopes to gain a surplus of energy and health to carry him through the approaching season, which promises to be an extremely strenuous one with him.

A glance into Mr. Buck's cool and attractive studio in Aeolian Hall, New York, these days, even when the country is so warm, might lead one to wish that his summer days could be spent amid such pleasant surroundings. Mr. Buck is most enthusiastic concerning this summer season and says that he thinks New York as a warm weather resort is not to be equalled anywhere.

Elsie T. Cohen, the charming accompanist and assistant to Mr. Buck, also has remained in town this summer, but will be away during September.

Mr. Buck has been singularly blessed with ambitious and studious pupils, who have preferred to remain in the city and learn more of the art of singing rather than merely to have a good time and rest on their laurels. There is an old adage to the effect that "a man is known by the company he keeps," and it seems as though in regard to teachers this might be changed to run like this: "A teacher is known by the work of his pupils." Mr. Buck is keenly enthusiastic over the work of his faithful pupils and they are equally proud of him and eager to endorse him whenever opportunity presents itself.

Among those who have been faithful in attendance at the Buck studio this summer may be mentioned Marie Morrisey, Katherine Galloway, Enrichetta Onelli, Robert Gottschalk, Edgar Schofield, and a number of others, some of whom have and others who have not as yet reached the artist class.

Marie Morrisey, whose work has received frequent mention in the MUSICAL COURIER this past year, has a beautiful contralto voice, distinctive for its clarity and beauty of expression. Mrs. Morrisey made her debut last fall, and was heard in several concerts and at her own recital in Aeolian Hall, New York, where she scored a pronounced success with the music lovers present.

The excellent soprano voice of Katherine Galloway has earned for her justly merited success in the concert field, where she was heard many times last season. Gifted with a charming personality, in addition to her lovely voice, Miss Galloway is always a favorite with her audiences. At present she is in Philadelphia, where she is filling a long engagement as soloist with the Edmund Tiersch Orchestra.

Another pupil of Dudley Buck, who is the possessor of a beautiful soprano voice is Enrichetta Onelli, who has sung in opera in Europe and in concert here. Miss Onelli's voice is of excellent dramatic quality, an assertion which the public will be given a chance to see proved this winter, for Miss Onelli will be heard this coming season, many engagements already having been booked.

Robert Gottschalk possesses a remarkable tenor voice of beautiful quality and wide range and he will be a valuable addition to the concert field. Although he is now equipped for church, concert, recital, oratorio, and, in fact, for opera, he will continue to study diligently under the direction of Mr. Buck.

The splendid baritone voice of Edgar Schofield is rapidly winning for him merited recognition, and success seems certain to crown his efforts.

Mr. Buck has received many offers of church positions and concert engagements, but he has declined, saying he does not care to reenter the concert field; thus is the concert field the poorer, and his pupils the richer, by this decision.

Curfew for Berlin?

The sophisticated tourist to the German capital had always supposed that the much vaunted night life there was a thing apart from the existence of the average Berliner citizen. Cafes that opened their doors only at midnight, cabarets that lasted until dawn, dance palaces where fashionable clothes and expensive wines figured more prominently than dancing—all those elaborate precautions for costly but rather joyless nocturnal gayety seem to have been staged for the American sightseer rather than for home consumption. The same seemed to be true of the equally celebrated Paris night life, where no self-respecting Parisian would dream of seeking amusement in the dives and dance halls of the Montmartre. But now Berlin is threatened with a curfew law, sponsored by no less a personage than the empress herself. The good empress, while frowning upon the gay night life for moral reasons, adds the astonishing information that it is affecting the health of the citizens of Berlin to an alarming degree. Berlin was once the healthiest capital on the continent, but is no longer. In the last year 43 per cent. of all the males insured were ill for at least three days, and 45 per cent. of the females were ill for the same length of time. This is due, concludes the empress, to late hours spent in participating in the night life instead of sleeping. The empress does not object to Americans and other foolish tourists spending in nocturnal revelry the precious hours that should be devoted to sleep, but she does object most vigorously now that native sons and daughters have contracted the habit.—Philadelphia Press.

It Must Have Been a Good Joke.

These three jolly artists seem to be enjoying a good joke, but whatever it is they fail to divulge it and so the

THE LAUGHING TRIO.
Grace Hall Riheldaffer, Mary Gailey and Ward Lewis.

onlookers can only smile in appreciation of their mirth. This is the "Laughing Trio," more generally known as Grace Hall Riheldaffer, soprano; Mary Dennison Gailey, violinist, and Ward Lewis, pianist and accompanist. Their present season will close in Ohio on August 31, and from thence they will go to Lake Chautauqua for an appearance.

Carl Pohlig, the new conductor of the Braunschweig Opera, had planned for a "Salome" revival in September.

George Ade's Formidable Rival.

George Hamlin, it is said, has announced that he intends to become a "literary person" and "write pieces" for the newspapers.

"It is reported," says Mr. Hamlin, "that my old friend, George Ade, author of countless 'Fables in Slang,' has engaged a singing teacher and is preparing to enter grand opera as a tenor. I consider this a direct attempt on Ade's part to steal my business, so I have dashed off a fable in slang which I hope you will print—it may cause George Ade to think twice before he encroaches on my chosen field of endeavor.

"My first fable in slang," continued Mr. Hamlin, "is entitled 'How Nero Got By as a Singer,' and runs as follows:

When Nero, the Roman Emperor, made his debut as a singer to his own cithara accompaniment, he had his success insured. In the bright lexicon of the imperial youth there was no such word as "fail." He averted such a possibility by inaugurating a method which even at this late date is still in use, and has helped many a grand opera singer get by. Shush! (business of whispering) Nero invented the claque!

I hold no brief for Nero, nor am I trying to add another bit of infamy to his already checkered career. But as a singer, he was a wise guy. He did not stage his initial performance in Rome, but tried his talent on the dog, over in Naples.

Several bands of lusty young Neapolitans were rehearsed to applaud, and the applause was arranged to come in three degrees—the bumbi, or hum of bees; the imbrices, or rattle of hail as on a tin roof, and the clashing of porcelain vessels together. The claque became letter perfect in its part.

And did Nero make good?

He did.

Night after night the human bees hummed sweetly in Nero's ears, the hail pattered and the vessels clashed in joyful tumult. And the very best people in Naples fell for the glad clamor and added their plaudits to swell the enthusiasm. Nero's "golden voice" was said to be decidedly classy.

The news of Nero's Neapolitan knockout traveled to the Eternal City, and messengers were sent to implore the possessor of the heavenly voice to return, so that the citizens of Rome might hear and rejoice.

Nero graciously consented to give a "request performance" in his home town—and he took his claque with him. His first appearance in the seven hilled city was a riot—a copper riveted cinch.

Moral—A little boosting doesn't hurt.

Ellen Keller Scores.

Ellen Keller, the brilliant and beautiful young violinist was the soloist recently at a concert given in the fashionable Waumbek Hotel at Jefferson, N. H. She played Brahms and Schubert numbers with signal success. Another one of her important summer engagements was at a Pride's Crossing musicale, where she gave the program with Marion Green, and performed four compositions in such admirable style that she was encored enthusiastically after each of them.

Miss Keller will tour this season under the management of Gertrude F. Cowen.

Charles Bowes to Locate in New York.

Charles Bowes, the eminent vocal instructor and specialist in tone production, sends word from his Paris home that he is planning to return to America as soon as he can get away and will locate in New York. Mr. Bowes' close association with De Reszké and with Oscar Seagle, and his widely known eminence in his specialty of tone production, will make him a welcome addition to New York educational circles.

HINSHAW

Metropolitan Opera
BARITONE
Berlin Wagner Ring Festival,
June 23rd to Aug. 21st

American Tour
DECEMBER TO JUNE
Management R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway, N. Y.

Mme. OLIVE FREMSTAD
Exclusive Management FOSTER & DAVID, 500 Fifth Avenue, New York
NOW IN AMERICA—DATES BOOKING SEASON 1914-1915
STEINWAY PIANO USED

LOS ANGELES CONDUCTOR BACK FROM EUROPE.

Adolf Tandler Welcomed Home by Friends and Officers of the Orchestra—Quiet Summer Season Reported—Ellen Beach Yaw's Unique Concert for Newsboys' Home—Current Paragraphs of Interest.

1110 West Washington Street,
Los Angeles, Cal., August 24, 1914.

The summer season is marked by an unusually quiet condition in the musical line; as a rule this season is less inactive on the coast than in other sections, the climate here permitting work to be carried on much more comfortably than is possible in most places; but August and the early part of September are taken almost universally by the musicians as a vacation time. Most of the studios are closed and the rest are doing very little work.

Calvin Cady, of New York, is conducting his annual summer classes, which are well attended and most interesting.

ADOLF TANDLER RETURNS.

Great relief and pleasure were felt by the many friends of Adolf Tandler, conductor of the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra, when he safely reached home during the past week, after several narrow escapes. Mr. Tandler might be eligible to conscription in the Austrian army, as he was an officer. He served his allotted time, however, but as a reserve he might still be liable, as his papers of American citizenship are not yet secured. But application for same had been made, of which he held sufficient proof to save him from complication.

The Los Angeles Symphony officers and friends were considerably alarmed at one time, but Mr. Tandler's return has settled all question of the future of the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Tandler reports having had a delightful visit and was the recipient of many honors and congratulations from his former masters and confreres.

ARTHUR BABCOCK IN RECITAL.

Arthur Babcock, assisted by Clyde Collison, pianist, gave a recital before the Woman's Music Study Club of Long Beach last month which is well spoken of by the Long Beach press. Indeed, it seemed to arouse great enthusiasm. Mr. Babcock is noted for his well considered programs, which always present unhackneyed numbers. Mr. Collison as pianist and accompanist come in for his share of praise.

MME. YAW'S MOONLIGHT PAGEANT.

Ellen Beach Yaw has to her credit many philanthropies little known to the general public, but a number of years ago she established for the newsboys, the Lark Ellen Home for Boys, in which she has never lost her interest, still looking after the wellfare of its inmates. On Saturday evening, August 8, she gave a benefit in the gardens of her Italian villa, at Covina.

The program shows great diversity; in fact, it was headed "Moonlight Vaudeville," but in this day and age the word "vaudeville" is not incompatible with the highest type of entertainment.

A very pretty effect was secured when Mme. Yaw sang her own group, the "Coo-Coo and Firefly," and "Skylark," the lights being turned out with the exception of the electrical arrangement of fireflies which she used on the Orpheum circuit last year. These were placed among the orange trees at the back of the stage and the effect was fairylike as the lights flitted to and fro among the foliage. It was in every way a great success and netted a goodly sum for the home.

MRS. TIFFANY RETURNS.

Mrs. Willis N. Tiffany, the popular soprano, returned a few weeks ago from several months' stay in Europe. She comes back greatly refreshed and enthused by her trip and the months of study, and her beautiful voice is lovelier than ever. All her friends and the public will look forward to hearing her again. For the present she is resting quietly, but will resume her church position on October 1 and expects to give a number of recitals as well as continue her teaching.

LEBEGOTT AND HIS ORCHESTRA GO TO VENTURA.

Early in August Edouard Lebegott took his orchestra to Ventura, Cal., and gave two concerts on the Chautauqua Course in progress there. Mme. Lebegott accompanied the orchestra as soloist. The reports from the management are most enthusiastic and nothing during the session gave greater pleasure or satisfaction than these concerts.

JANE CATHERWOOD.

Marie Hertenstein Heard From.

"There is one country just now where the individual is lucky to have a police record. Not a bad one, of course, but at least it is well to be known to the police," as Marie Hertenstein, the American pianist, who temporarily is marooned in Berlin, wrote in a letter received [illegible] recently.

MARIE HERTENSTEIN.

When war broke out she, like hundreds of other [illegible] icans accustomed to living in Europe for many [illegible] unprovided with a passport.

As everyone in Germany is registered with the police, Miss Hertenstein was on record. And, as she has spent much time studying abroad, her record extended over a period of years. On this account, it was with little difficulty that she succeeded in convincing the police that she was a good American citizen with no intention of being anything but neutral in this "war of wars." Consequently, her liberty temporarily withheld, quickly was restored.

She was financially aided by the American Government agents in Berlin, it has been learned by S. E. Macmillen, her manager. Therefore, she is in no way endangered by the precarious conditions prevailing in Germany. She expects to arrive in New York by October 1. Plans for her tournee are progressing without interruption and it is expected by her manager that "her debut in New York will establish her claim to high rank as a pianist."

Seagle Gives a Benefit.

The little English village of Beeding made a gala occasion recently of a concert given for its benefit by Oscar Seagle and some of his pupils. The quaint little town hall was crowded to its capacity, and the audience, so the baritone writes his manager, Loudon Charlton, was a joy to sing to. Days in advance the ticket supply was exhausted, and enthusiasm waxed so high that the two hour program was doubled by the demand for encores.

Although Mr. Seagle, like all artists, delights in an audience that is musically alert, he insists that his interest is especially aroused by one that is openly unmusical. To reach such an audience through compositions that may in some respects be above their understanding, is, he declares, the highest satisfaction. He believes a good song should make an appeal to many grades of intelligence.

"A species of pleasure insurance" is what one Seagle enthusiast terms the baritone. Concert goers, he contends, ordinarily assume a risk when going to hear a singer, and they are fortunate if out of a lengthy program they hear a half hour of excellent singing. "In Seagle's case," says he, "they run no such risk. This American baritone is a singer of songs. He has spent years to attain this distinction. A Seagle program does not mean a passable aria, an indifferent group of French songs, and a fair example of lieder singing; but it means that the charm of French songs will be revealed in their elusive delicacy; that the breadth and warmth of German songs will be uncovered as if for the first time, and that English songs will be rendered with a clarity and intelligence altogether too rare among contemporaneous singers."

Mr. Seagle will spend the entire season in America, the European war having naturally interfered with his original plan of devoting only a few months to concert work before returning to Paris.

The League of German-speaking music critics held its second conference at Essen on May 23. Its membership has increased from twenty-two to forty-two, but this seems a small number for the German Empire, to say nothing of Austria.—Exchange.

AMERICAN TOUR—NOVEMBER—MAY 1914—1915

WILLY BURMESTER
THE GREAT GERMAN VIOLINIST

Mr. Burmester will make his First Orchestral Appearance next season, November 6th, with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, playing the Paganini Concerto No. 1.

Other Orchestral Engagements are with the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, San Francisco Symphony Orchestra.

STEINWAY PIANO USED

For dates and terms apply to CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON, 437 Fifth Ave., New York

Season 1914-1915
ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, New York
Has the Honor to Present the Violinist

SPALDING

Assisted at the Piano by
ANDRÉ BENOIST

Steinway Piano

THOMAS J. KELLY

Conductor Mendelssohn Choir.
VOCAL COACH
Lecture Recitals with Mrs. Kelly.
209 SOUTH 35th AVE., OMAHA, NEBRASKA

Mme. DE VERE-SAPIO

Prima Donna Soprano from Paris Grand Opera; La Scala, Milan; Covent Garden, London; Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., etc., etc., in America Season 1914-15. For terms and dates address:
65 Central Park West, New York.

ROMUALDO SAPIO

Formerly Conductor Metropolitan Opera, New York, and having coached the majority of great operatic artists, among whom: Adelina Patti, Nordica, Tamagno, Etc.

VOCAL STUDIO, 65 CENTRAL PARK WEST, N. Y.

Ellen Keller
VIOLINIST
In America Season 1914-15. NOW BOOKING
Exclusive Management;
Gertrude F. Cowen, 1451 Broadway, New York City

NEW YORK COLLEGE OF MUSIC
128-130 East 58th Street
CARL HEIN Directors AUGUST FRAEMCKE
The college has for its object the universal higher education in all branches of music—Department for those who desire to teach music—Course for Supervisors of Music in Public Schools—Opportunities and training for public appearance—40 Instructors of highest reputation—Newly engaged, Rubin Goldmark, Composition; Michel Sciapiro, violin.
CATALOG ON APPLICATION

ARTHUR SHATTUCK

The Distinguished American
PIANIST

In America Season 1914-15

Management, HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York

Steinway Piano Used

Mary Lindsay Oliver's Versatility.

Mary Lindsay Oliver, the Scotch pianist and teacher, of Moline, Ill., has been spending the last four weeks at Crystal Lake, Ill., practising and living as much as possible the "simple life" out of doors. Miss Oliver is very fond of all country occupations and much of her spare time has been given to swimming, riding, driving and sketching. She has always been an enthusiast of the brush. Miss Oliver has also done a little teaching, as two voice pupils were with her the first three weeks. In the meantime, her studio in Moline has been in the care of Violet Nordquist, who has been a pupil of Miss Oliver for nearly six years and has been carrying on a certain number of lessons for her. Miss Oliver will return to Moline about September 3 to a very large class of both piano and voice pupils.

During the season Miss Oliver expects to fill a number of recital engagements and will probably run one or two artists' concerts at her studios during the year as she usually does. The past year was the most successful of the many successful ones she has had since coming to America and she anticipates a still greater achievement during the coming season. Among Miss Oliver's plans is the furthering of the interests of a young tenor whom she believes to hold great promises of a career and for whom she has assumed much personal responsibility in the elementary preparation of his voice, which she trusts will be heard in the future.

MARY LINDSAY-OLIVER.

Miss Oliver's interest in the local musical situation of Moline, Rock Island and Davenport is never failing, and she is interested in a series of three concerts to be given in Moline, opening with a recital by Myrtle Elvyn; a second concert by Aresoni, tenor, and a third by the Zoellner Quartet. The Choral Union of Moline will also give its annual winter concert and May festival.

Miss Oliver's work is somewhat prolific, when the fact is considered that it involves that of a piano soloist, a teacher of both piano and voice as well as harmony, a concert manager and a critic, as well as contributor of several articles on musical subjects and some compositions, both for voice and piano, in all of which she is accredited with a distinct and unusual success.

Julia Claussen Denies Cancelation of American Tour.

From Julia Claussen, Swedish contralto, now in Stockholm, comes an emphatic denial that she has canceled her American concert tour on account of the European war.

If Sweden becomes involved in the threatened war, Mme. Claussen's husband, Captain Claussen, of the Swedish army, may rejoin his regiment, according to a cable received last week from Mme. Claussen by her manager, Alma Voedisch, of Chicago, but, even so, the contralto will return to America in ample time to begin her concert tour and later to sing the principal contralto roles with the Chicago Grand Opera Company.

When Mme. Claussen returned to Europe last spring for her operatic season at Covent Garden, London, she left her two little daughters, Sonya and Bojian, at a convent school in Chicago, so her home ties are equally divided between Sweden and Chicago, and not even a war in which her native country is concerned would keep her away from her children for more than four months at a time.

EDYTH WALKER
(Imperial Royal Chambersinger, Court of Austria--Hungary)
Dramatic Soprano
Metropolitan, New York.
Covent Garden, London.
Imperial Royal Opera, Vienna.
Royal Opera, Berlin.
Festspielhaus, Bayreuth.
Royal Opera and Wagner Festivals, Munich, etc., etc., etc.
Season 1914-1915 with the
Chicago Opera Company

The Sensation of the Year
CARL FLESCH
The Great Hungarian Violinist
Second American Tour
January and February, 1915
Management HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO

BARONESS SIGNE VON RAPPE
SOPRANO
Prima Donna, Vienna and Stockholm Operas. Principal Soloist 6th QUADRENNIAL MUSIC FESTIVAL OF THE AMERICAN UNION OF SWEDISH SINGERS, MINNEAPOLIS, JUNE 8-9, 1914.
"A voice of great range and brilliance."
—Minneapolis Tribune, June 9, 1914
American Tour, March-May, 1915
OPERA :: LIEDER :: ORATORIO
in Swedish, Italian, German, French and English
Sole Management:
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

EFREM ZIMBALIST
Celebrated Violinist
— Will return to —
AMERICA
Season 1914-1915
For Terms and Dates available
Apply
WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th St., New York
STEINWAY PIANO

"The perfection of Quartet playing."—London Daily Mail.
The World's Greatest Chamber Music Organization. The

FLONZALEY QUARTET

Tour 1914-15 Now Booking
Management: LOUDON CHARLTON, 868 Carnegie Hall, New York

Madame Helene Koelling

COLORATURA SOPRANO

TOUR NOW BOOKING

Management, Antonia Sawyer: 1425 Broadway, N. Y. City

ELEANOR SPENCER
PIANIST

Returns to America Season 1914-15

Management, Antonia Sawyer
1425 Broadway, New York

MASON & HAMLIN PIANO

BARITONE

Concert, Oratorio, Recitals, Etc.

BERNHARD STEINBERG

It is a rich voice of large volume and full-reaching power, and one admirably adapted to the kind of singing which dominated the program, the robust and dramatic. . . . In the matter of musical taste and feeling in the interpretation of his songs Mr. Steinberg was entirely satisfactory. He sings with a good deal of authority and repose, and does not fail to convey the proper mood of his song.—Times.

Address all communications to - JULIUS C. MEYER, Secretary
1425 Broadway, Suite 69-70, New York City Tel. 7222 Bryant.

YVONNE DE

TRÉVILLE

Coloratura Soprano
Grand Opera Prima Donna
NOW IN AMERICA

SEASON 1914-15 BOOKING
Available for Concerts, Musicales, Recitals and Festivals.

European Address: 68 rue de l'Aurora, Bruxelles, Belgium
Amerloan Address: - 62 De Hart Place, Elizabeth, N. J.
Cable Address: Detreville-Bruxelles

Percy Hemus Announces Plans.

Bronzed and showing an enviable tan gained from a season at the seashore, Percy Hemus, the eminent baritone, was in New York this week arranging for his return about September 15.

Mr. Hemus in mentioning his summer at the shore said: "I find that work is the only real enjoyment when one spends an entire season at the shore. At first one feels that he can rest for a month or so, but after a few days he turns to work for his enjoyment.

"With Gladys Craven (Mrs. Hemus) I have been preparing our programs for the coming season. We gave a recital in Asbury Park, N. J., about two weeks ago and had a crowded house, which was most gratifying, considering the hot weather. Most of my work is in the preparing of my New York recital, which will be given in Aeolian Hall on November 6.

"This season I will devote considerable time to teaching. I am hearing from pupils from all parts of the country and have reason to know that I will have a large class. Some of those who will be busy this coming season are: Ethel Kinnaman, who has been on tour with Pryor and his band. She has had an ovation wherever she has sung. Elyce Bowen returns to the stage this fall. Charles Tingle has signed a three year contract with Mr. Savage and will be heard in the leading tenor role of 'Sari.' And, as the papers have announced, Eleanor Painter will return to this country as a star under the management of Andreas Dippel."

PERCY HEMUS.

Birds as Musicians.

The real musicians are the birds, and it is interesting to know that the young fledglings, in some cases at least, have regular singing lessons from the mother. A wren whose nest was in a box near a country house was watched by the family as she patiently instructed her little ones. Placing herself on one side of the opening, and in front of her pupils, she first sang her entire song very distinctly. One little flutterer opened its mouth and tried to follow her, but after a few notes its voice gave out and it lost the tune. Mamma wren immediately took up the melody at that point, and sang it through as clearly as possible, when the youngster tried it again and finished triumphantly.

Then the mother sang again, and another nestling followed her, breaking down as the first had done, and beginning afresh. Sometimes there were three or four failures before the tune was carried through, but the wren always began where the little one broke down and sang to the end. These singing lessons lasted for some time, and several of them were given every day.—Toronto, Canada, Globe.

During a performance of Shakespeare's "Tempest" at Munich, so violent a storm broke out that it was impossible to hear the voices on the stage, and it was not until an hour had passed that it was practicable to continue.—London Musical News.

Francis Rogers Sings at Newport.

Francis Rogers sang recently after a dinner party given by George Scott, at Newport, R. I., in honor of Lady and Sir Michael Herbert.

JOHN REBARER
CONCERT PIANIST
Address L. R. REBARER
420 Madison Ave. New York City

RICCARDO MARTIN
FAMOUS TENOR
Metropolitan Opera Company
Available for Concerts
October, November, 1914. May, 1915
Management:
CHARLES L. WAGNER, 1451 Broadway, N. Y.

WINNIFRED
BAMBRICK
Canadian Harpist

"—she has enormous virtuosity."
New York Herald

"—exhibits surprising vigor of style."
New York Times

"She aroused sincere enthusiasm."
Brooklyn Daily Eagle

Management: M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue -:- New York

Musicians who find it impossible to secure the proper regulation or touch in a grand piano, should write Kranich & Bach for information regarding the action patented and used only in the Kranich & Bach Grands. Therein are given some facts that are of value to any teacher of the piano, and also of value to any musician who desires to secure the greatest return for demands made upon the tonal qualities of the instrument. Free for the asking.

KRANICH & BACH
New York

DJANE LAVOIE-HERZ
CONCERT PIANIST
Touring Canada and United States Season 1914-1915
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.
Steinway Piano used.

WILLIAM WHEELER TENOR
Soloist Worcester Festival
O. J. EHRGOTT
156 Fifth Ave.
Personal Representative
Personal Address: 61 Hamilton Place, New York

FRANCIS ROGERS BARITONE
Recital, Oratorio, Concert
Also a few Pupils
563 Park Ave., New York
Management: LOUDON CHARLTON
Carnegie Hall

LOUISE JANSEN WYLIE Soprano
Management, Iris Pendleton, Philharmony Hall, Wichita - Kansas
New York Address, 736 W. 181st Street

LILLIAN SHERWOOD NEWKIRK
VOICE CULTURE, ITALIAN METHOD.
Special attention to tone production.
1425 Broadway, Metropolitan Opera House Bldg., New York.
Mail address, 11 Morgan Ave., Norwalk, Conn.

Adele Krueger
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Concert, Oratorio, Recital
Management of Miss Annie Friedberg, 1425 Broadway, New York

LEO BRAUN
Voice Culture : Repertoire
Opera Concert Oratorio
Studio: 446 CENTRAL PARK WEST

GEORGE HAMLIN
Will, without fail, fill his engagements in America next February, March and April.
HAENSEL & JONES, AEOLIAN HALL, NEW YORK

ALBERT SCHOTT
DRAMATIC TENOR
In America Season 1914-1915. Available for Recitals, etc.
Exclusive Management Concert Direction, M. H. HANSON, 437 Fifth Ave., New York

R. E. Johnston Presents by Courtesy of Senator and Mrs. W. A. Clark
ANDRE TOURRET
French Violinist and
CAMILLE DECREUS
French Pianist (Ysaye's pianist for past two seasons)
IN JOINT RECITALS—SEASON 1914-15
All business communications should be sent to R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway - New York
CHICKERING PIANO USED

MANUEL QUIROGO
THE WONDERFUL SPANISH VIOLINIST
American Tour Opens Carnegie Hall, October 17th
Direction Sam S. and Lee Shubert
MANAGEMENT, R. E. JOHNSTON,
1451 BROADWAY - - NEW YORK CITY

OVIDE MUSIN'S Virtuoso School of Violin
Recognized as the HIGHEST SCHOOL of violin playing in the United States

Instruction given by this world renowned Virtuoso in person, in the Authentic tempos, style, fingering and bowing of the classical repertory, ancient and modern. Musin's SPECIAL SYSTEM greatly LESSENS the time ordinarily spent in acquiring technic and bow control. Piano, Harmony, with eminent teachers. Singing with Mme. Ovide Musin, Coloratura Soprano. Write for outline of Course by CORRESPONDENCE, and THEMATIC CATALOGUE of compositions and editions by OVIDE MUSIN. Dormitories for limited number of students in School. Practice Unrestricted. CHAPERONAGE. Address the REGISTRAR,

51 West 76th St., New York.

Maximillian Kotlarski, Another Parsons, Artist-Pupil.

Maxmillian Kotlarski, born September 28, 1897, in New York City, entered the von Ende School of Music in 1911. At the entrance examination he evinced so much talent that he was awarded a scholarship, and assigned by Albert Ross Parsons, director of the piano department, to Antoinette Ward for thorough training. Under that excellent teacher, young Kotlarski developed notable capacity for piano technic, together with warmth of temperament and musical insight. His scholarship was renewed, and in 1912 he entered the class of Mr. Parsons, with whom he has studied ever since.

In 1913 he won the silver medal for piano playing, and in 1914 the gold medal, the award being made by nine noted musicians not connected with the school, the jury making their ratings behind a screen, and the competitors being known to them solely by numbers, and not by names.

Kotlarski won for "superior effectiveness in concert playing."

The following are some of the comments which the MUSICAL COURIER has made at different times on Mr. Kotlarski's playing:

"Mr. Kotlarski showed virtuoso technic, repose, and much dash in Liszt's Rhapsody XIV." "Tremendous bravour and clean cut technic." "The Schulz-Evler 'Blue Danube' arrangement, a work exceedingly difficult, was played by M. Kotlarski. It was sheer brilliance, especially amazing, when the technics and pyrotechnics of the piece are considered."

MAXMILLIAN KOTLARSKY,
Artist pupil of Albert Ross Parsons.

The Fresh Air Art Society.

When Nikolai Sokoloff was in London he was invited by John Powell, the interesting young American musician and pianist, to become one of the charter members of a most interesting society called the Fresh Air Art Society, its purport being to bring fresh air into all the arts. Among the number of distinguished people who joined as charter members were Auguste Rodin, Camille Flammarion, Efrem Zimbalist and the remarkable young Russian pianist, Benno Moiseiwitsch.

A few well known musicians belonging to the society gave a concert at Aeolian Hall, Bond street, and Sokoloff played the A major Brahms sonata with Vernon Warner. In speaking of the concert, the Musical Standard said of Sokoloff:

"Nikolai Sokoloff played the Brahms sonata in G major. Mr. Sokoloff is one of those unhurried players, whose brilliant execution is almost hidden, so finely is it done, and in such a tranquil manner. His playing of the sonata was one of the most charming studies in its quiet perfection that we have heard for a long time."

Mary G. Wilderman Is Home from Abroad.

Mary G. Wilderman, pianist, who has been spending some years in Berlin and has given a number of successful recitals and concerts in Europe, returned to America on the steamship Philadelphia, August 12. She had much difficulty getting passage and had to come in the steerage. She will be heard in America this season.

EMIL J. POLAK
ACCOMPANIST AND COACH
Address: 217 E. 71st St., New York City Telephone 923 Lenox

FLORYN OPERA PRODUCING CO., Inc.
1482 Broadway, Room 1105
Three Opera Bouffe Co's in repertoire
Applications in writing from Aspirants with good voices and talent will be considered

MARGARET KEYES CONTRALTO
WITH CHICAGO GRAND OPERA CO.
Management, THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU, 1 W. 34th St., New York
Personal Address, 600 West 138th St. Phone 1810 Audubon

Walter Henry Hall
Professor of Choral Music Columbia University
Address, 49 Claremont Avenue

Angelo CORTESE
America's Distinguished HARPIST
Management, Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, N. Y.

CORNELIUS VAN VLIET
Dutch Cellist
2514 Emerson Ave., S., Minneapolis, Minn.

Carl Pohlig
CONDUCTOR
Address: VILLA POHLIG, PLANEGG
near Munich, GERMANY

MARGARET HUSTON
SOPRANO
In Europe Season 1914-15

Nana GENOVESE
MEZZO SOPRANO. Formerly Manhattan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts, Recitals and Musicales
EXCLUSIVE MANAGEMENT. ANNIE FRIEDBERG. 1425 BROADWAY. NEW YORK

J. FRED WOLLE
ORGANIST
Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau
1 West 34th Street, New York

GIORGIO M. SULLI
Teacher of Carmen Melis, Clara Clemens, Mme. Martha de Lachmann, Reinhold von Warlich, Mario Sammarco, Lena Mason, Tarquinia Tarquini and other well-known singers of Grand Opera or Concerts. Musical Director of the Labor Temple Choir, New York. Teaching during summer, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday only. Special terms.
VOCAL STUDIO. 1425 Broadway
Metropolitan Opera House Building, New York
(Phone, 2762 Bryant)
Public Recitals throughout season for advanced pupils. Write for Circulars.

JAN SICKESZ
DUTCH PIANIST
American Tour Begins October, 1914
Management ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, New York
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

WHITEHILL
BASS-BARITONE
Formerly Metropolitan Opera Management; The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th Street, New York.

SLEZAK
The Great Czech Tenor
In America January, February, March and April, 1915
Exclusive Management:
HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York City
Hardman Piano Used

HENRIETTE BACH
VIOLINIST. Management, Wolfsohn Bureau, 1 W. 34 St., N. Y.

The HAMBOURG CONSERVATORY of MUSIC
PROFESSOR MICHAEL HAMBOURG, JAN and BORIS HAMBOURG, Directors
Unsurpassed faculty of over sixty teachers. Re-opens September 1st
TORONTO, CANADA

GIUSEPPE FABBRINI DISTINGUISHED ITALIAN PIANIST
Minneapolis

LIMA O'BRIEN
ACCOMPANIST
21 West 30th St. :: :: :: :: New York City

FREDERIC C. FREEMANTEL Teacher of Singing
39 South Tenth Street Minneapolis, Minn.

Mr. and Mrs. JOHN DENNIS MEHAN Season 1914-15 Begins Sept. 21, 1914. Until Sept. 19, Tel. Coney Island 2267
STUDIO: 70 CARNEGIE HALL
Telephone Columbus 5946

GAREISSEN STUDIO HALL: 64 East 34th St. NEW YORK CITY.

MABEL
GARRISON
SOPRANO
Metropolitan Opera Company
Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway : : New York City

JANE OSBORN-HANNAH
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Song Recitals Concert and Orchestral Appearances
AVAILABLE ENTIRE SEASON
Personal Management Chas. L. Wagner, 1451 Broadway, New York

JOHN McCORMACK
CELEBRATED IRISH TENOR
In America Entire Season 1914-15
Always and only under personal management of Chas. L. Wagner 1451 Broadway New York
Steinway Piano Used

RUDOLPH GANZ
"THE PIANIST WITH A MESSAGE"
Returns to America for
Season of 1914-1915
Exclusive Management, CHARLES L. WAGNER
1451 Broadway, New York
Steinway Piano Used

ALICE NIELSEN
Prima Donna Soprano
SEASON 1914-15 AMERICAN CONCERT TOUR
Personal Management, CHAS. L. WAGNER
1451 BROADWAY - - NEW YORK

The Zoellner Quartet's Activity.

It is of interest to note in what degree the Zoellner Quartet has contributed to the steadily growing and broad demand in America for chamber music. Aside from filling a long tour, which embraced many of the Eastern States, the entire Middle West, the Pacific Coast (exclusive of the Northwest), and the Southern States, the Zoellners enjoyed the distinction of introducing to American audiences the following important and interesting new works: The Dohnanyi quartet, op. 15, the Glazounow suite, op. 35, the Brandts-Buys "Romantische Serenade" and the Sinding trio for two violins and piano, op. 92; besides this they revived, with distinct success, the Cesar Franck quartet. The novelties which the Zoellners will offer this coming season will be the quartets of Darius Milhaud, Gustave Samazeuilh and Arthur Nevin, who is also composer of the opera "Poia," which was produced at Berlin. The Milhaud work is described as original in conception and ultra-modern, if not daring, in treatment. The production of this work promises to be one of the interesting features of the coming chamber music season.

THE ZOELLNER QUARTET AT QUATRE BRAS, NEAR WATERLOO, BELGIUM, IN 1912.
From left to right: Antoinette, Joseph Zoellner, Sr., Amandus and Joseph, Jr.

When playing in communities where chamber music, in its best form, has not been previously heard, the Zoellners have adopted the plan of including on their programs, in addition to the standard classics, a group containing at least one movement from works of the different modern schools—the Russian, the French, the Dutch, and oftentimes a work by an American composer. Thus, they have been able to carry to all parts of the country a definite interest in the different modern schools. The Zoellners have been very highly complimented by the presidents of clubs and universities for their industry in arranging such programs.

Harry Culbertson, the American manager of the Zoellner Quartet, reports that a very large portion of the 1914-1915 tour of the Zoellners is already completely booked.

Schoenefeld Out.

720 South Broadway,
Los Angeles, Cal., August 12, 1914.

To the Musical Courier

As the time set for the entry of scores in the $10,000 prize opera contest of the National Federation of Musical Clubs now is past I respectfully request the editor of the MUSICAL COURIER to publish this announcement of the withdrawal from the contest of Henry Schoenefeld, of Los Angeles, owing to the shortness of time allotted for composition.

I wish it clearly understood that his withdrawal is made with no criticism of the committee in charge of the contest. It is simply to do justice to Mr. Schoenefeld, who signified his intention of entering the contest but who has since discovered his inability to complete his opera within the short space of one year without materially slighting the composition by extreme haste which, of course, in any art is fatal to artistic achievement.

Writing you as his librettist I deem it permissible to speak of Mr. Schoenefeld's participation in previous notable musical contests, else this letter might appear a presumption. In 1892 he had the honor of winning the first prize offered by the National Conservatory of Music of New York for the best American symphony, bestowed by Antonin Dvorák, chairman of the judges. Again in 1899 he received the Henry Marteau prize in Paris for the best American sonata for violin and piano.

In the light of Mr. Schoenefeld's noteworthy orchestral work I think it is to be regretted that he was unable to compete in the opera contest. But the possibility of similar future contests offering him the opportunity to contribute an original operatic addition to American music will be looked forward to with interest and pleasure by his friends.

Yours respectfully,
BERNARD MCCONVILLE.

Steinway Fame Has Encircled the World

Wherever love of music prevails—in the palace of Old World royalty, in the mansion of aristocracy, in the home of the true music lover everywhere—the

Steinway

is known and preferred above all other pianos. Supremacy of tone and workmanship has achieved this international renown, and four succeeding generations have faithfully upheld the art ideal which produced the first Steinway.

When you buy a Steinway you buy the Standard Piano of the World.

STEINWAY & SONS
Steinway Hall
107-109 East 14th St., New York
SUBWAY EXPRESS STATION AT THE DOOR

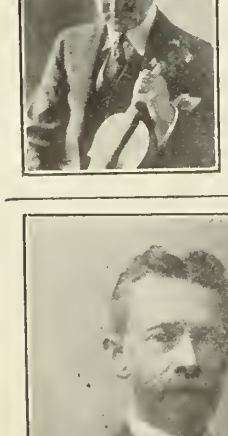
Represented by the Foremost Dealers Everywhere

CLARENCE EDDY
AVAILABLE FOR ORGAN DEDICATIONS AND RECITALS
Address: 510 OAKWOOD BOULEVARD CHICAGO
Season 1914-15

SEASON 1914-1915 MRS. H. H. A. BEACH
M. H. HANSON 437 Fifth Avenue New York

SEASON 1914-1915 MAUD POWELL
H. Godfrey Turner 1400 B'way, New York

JEZZY DUFAU
COLORATURA SOPRANO
Concert Recital
Chicago-Philadelphia Grand Opera Company
Under Management of HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Building, Chicago



VAN YORX
THEO. ——— Tenor
Studios: 21 West 38th Street, - New York
3701 Murray Hill

GABRILÓWITSCH
THE EMINENT RUSSIAN PIANIST
AMERICAN TOUR JANUARY-APRIL, 1915
Management, LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, N. Y.
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

GIUSEPPE CREATORE AND HIS BAND
NOW BOOKING FOR 1914-1915
OFFICE: 1512 TRIBUNE BUILDING, - - - CHICAGO, ILL.

A NAME TO CONJURE WITH!
THIBAUD
For Terms and Dates Address
A Violinist Whom France Declares to Be Without an Equal
Thibaud's American visit last winter was the violinistic sensation of the season. His return in the Fall will be an event of first importance.
LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, New York

U. S. KERR
BASSO CANTANTE--Song Recitals and Oratorio a Specialty
For Bookings Address 538 West 143d Street, New York City 'Phone 3313 Audubon

JULES FALK VIOLINIST
NOW IN AMERICA
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU 1 West 34th Street, New York

The Guilmant Organ School
DR. WILLIAM C. CARL, Director
A School for Students with serious aims, who desire to become expert Organists. REOPENS OCT. 6th.
Send For New Catalogue. 44 West 12th St., N. Y.

LEONARD BORWICK PIANIST
WILL TOUR AMERICA SEASON 1914-15
"The concert revealed a star of the first magnitude, Leonard Borwick,—a poet pianist to whom we listened with ever-increasing amazement."—Dresden Nachrichten.
Management—WOLFSOHN BUREAU, 1 West 34th St., New York. Steinway Piano Used

Della Thal Returns from Europe.

Della Thal, pianist, has just returned to Chicago from Europe, where she spent several months. Miss Thal informed a representative of the MUSICAL COURIER that she left Paris on August 1 and reached Boulogne to sail for America on the same day. It will be remembered that August 1 was the day that the French mobilization took place, and Miss Thal had some very interesting things to say about this.

"When I reached Boulogne," said Miss Thal, "I stopped at a hotel for my lunch, but as I was ready to give my order I noticed quite a little commotion among the waiters, who, as a matter of fact, were mostly Germans and Austrians. They walked out as one man and were replaced by French maids. After lunch, at about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, just before I got on the tender to get out to the Holland-American liner Potsdam, on which I returned, I saw French soldiers leaving for the front and also the departure of the reservists for their different stations. I had booked my passage on the steamer Imperator, but as you know, that was the first ship to be held and the officers of the North German Lloyd Company in Paris gave me an order on the Holland-American Line securing a first-class cabin, which though an inside one, was comfortable. The North German Lloyd people, however, still owe me quite a little bit of money, but they informed me that the rebate would be paid only after the war was over.

DELLA THAL,
The Chicago pianist who has just returned home from war racked Europe.

"Anyway," continued Miss Thal, "I am glad to be back home with my parents and friends, and though I, as well as the other American pianists will be more busy this season, due in some way to the lack of European talent, I cannot feel but commiseration for all of the musicians who have been called to their colors, and it will be a happy day for me when peace will have been restored."

Dietrich Piano School Removal.

Walter N. Dietrich, director of the Dietrich Piano School, Philadelphia, Pa., announces that after having been located in the Keith Building, Chestnut and Eleventh streets, that city, for the past ten years, the school has now moved to the Estey Building, Seventeenth and Walnut streets.

The Dietrich Piano School is one of the best known and established piano schools in this country, and Mr. Dietrich is fortunate in having the assistance of the following able musicians: Rae Benjamin, Edna Hoffmann, Ruth Pendleton and Albert Hardenberg.

Minna Schloemann at Long Branch.

Minna Schloemann, vocal teacher of New York, who is spending the summer at Long Branch, N. J., will resume teaching on September 21. While in Long Branch many of her pupils are continuing their studies with her.

Gadski's Husband Here.

Hans Tauscher, husband of Mme. Gadski, arrived in New York last week aboard the freight steamer Noorderdyk. Mme. Gadski now is en route to this country.

Mrs. Franklyn Knight's Success with St. Louis Orchestra.

The following press notices regarding Mrs. Franklyn Knight's second tour with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra once more give evidence of the esteem in which the public and press alike hold the distinguished contralto:

The aria, "Ah, Rendimi," from Rossi's "Mitrane," was excellently suited to Mrs. Knight's richly emotional contralto; and for an encore, this favorite St. Louis singer gave the familiar "Year's at the Spring" with much joyful optimism in its voicing.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch, May 6, 1914.

Mrs. Franklyn Knight, the St. Louis vocal representative on the tour, contributed to the program the delightful old aria, "Ah, Rendimi," from "Mitrane," by Rossi. Mrs. Knight has a rich alto voice, strong and clear throughout its entire compass, which is a long one. Persistent applause added the song "The Year's at the Spring" to the evening's entertainment.—St. Louis Republic, May 6, 1914.

Mrs. Franklyn Knight, contralto, sung an aria from "Mitrane," by Rossi. Mrs. Knight is an artist of handsome stage presence, as well as superb voice and excellent style. She was recalled and sang a little song which proved so popular with the audience that she repeated it.—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Mrs. Franklyn Knight, contralto, made herself so popular with the audience that it compelled her to sing three times instead of one. Her principal number was the aria, "Ah, Rendimi," from Rossi's "Mitrane." As an encore she sang "The Year's at the Spring," by Theo. Hoeck. Her voice is rich and with good range.—Birmingham News.

Not the least on the program was the delightful singing of Mrs. Franklyn Knight, contralto, whose solo, "Ah, Rendimi," from Rossi's "Mitrane," brought forth a storm of applause from the appreciative audience.—Galveston News.

Matinee.—In Mrs. Knight's singing of her great aria in the afternoon she revealed a depth of emotion, distinctness of enunciation, velvety tone and musical finish which delighted her audience.

Evening.—Of the three, Humperdinck's "Wiegenlied" was decidedly the favorite. Mrs. Knight's lovely voice and her most beautiful

MRS. FRANKLYN KNIGHT.

German made this a dazzling little number. Responding to a vociferous recall, Mrs. Knight sang in a perfect manner "Drink to Me Only with Thine Eyes."—Meridian Dispatch. · (Advertisement.)

A. Carbone Ready for Fall.

A. Carbone, the well known New York vocal teacher, announces the resuming of his regular daily teaching on Monday, September 14, at his studio in Aeolian Hall, West Forty-second street, New York. Signor Carbone is planning to give, during the winter, some operatic performances with his advanced pupils.

Jenny Larson Arranges for Appearances.

Jenny Larson, dramatic soprano, who arrived in New York recently, after having studied in Berlin and Paris, already been arranged for appearances in a number of recitals and concerts this coming season.

In Paris Miss Larson studied with Mme. Organi.

A local band was one day playing at Dunfermline, when an old weaver came up, and asked the bandmaster what they were playing.

"That's 'The Death of Nelson,'" solemnly replied the bandmaster.

"Ay, man," remarked the weaver, "ye ha'e gi'en him an awfu' death."—Monthly Musical Record.

A. CARBONE

MASTER IN THE ART OF SINGING

(Late Leading Singer (for twelve seasons) with the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company)

RESUMES DAILY TEACHING SEPT. 14th

Art of Singing from the first rudiments to the classic "Bel Canto"

School of Opera, with Acting and Modern Languages. Carbone's Breath Controller recommended by famous singers, teachers and physicians as unique apparatus for breathing exercises. Circular sent on application

Thirty Years' Experience. Highest References. AEOLIAN HALL, WEST 42nd STREET, NEW YORK CITY

MAESTRO FRANZ EMERICH VOCAL INSTRUCTION

PUPILS PREPARED FOR THE OPERATIC AND CONCERT STAGE

and MADAME TERESA EMERICH

Some Distinguished PUPILS of MAESTRO and MME. EMERICH:

CHARLES DALMORES, tenor, formerly Metropolitan Opera Co. and Covent Garden. Lohengrin of Bayreuth festival.
ADAM DIDUR, basso, Metropolitan Opera Co.
FRANCIS MACLENNAN, tenor, Berlin Royal Opera and Hamburg Opera.
*HANS TANZLER, tenor, Royal Opera, Karlsruhe.
CAVALLIERE MARIO SAMMARCO, baritone, formerly Metropolitan Opera Co. and Covent Garden.
PUTNAM GRISWOLD, basso, formerly Metropolitan Opera Co., Berlin Royal Opera and Covent Garden.
*MARGUERITA SYLVA, Carmen in the guest performance of Caruso at the Berlin Royal Opera.
MARGARETHE MATZENAUER, mezzo-soprano, Metropolitan Opera, New York.
*HELENA FORTI, soprano, Dresden Royal Opera.
MARY CAVAN, soprano, Hamburg Opera and Chicago Opera Co.
HEINRICH HENSEL, Dramatic Tenor, Hamburg, Stadt Theatre.

INSTRUCTION GIVEN IN ENGLISH, GERMAN, FRENCH AND ITALIAN

*The names marked * are those of pupils of Mme. Emerich.* 'Telephone Amt. Pfalzburg No. 2067 BERLIN, W.W. Nicelsbergerplatz 1

NELSON AND HIS ORCHESTRAL BAND

OF MINNEAPOLIS

Assisted by Celebrated Soloists, Will Make a Concert Tour During Months of October and November, 1914. For dates address

OTTO L. HEEGER, Mgr., Shiffman Building - St. Paul, Minn.

FLORENCE MULFORD CONTRALTO

Of the Metropolitan Opera Company

Personal Address: 1104 Broad Street, Newark, N. J.
Phone, 525 W-Market

HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, 27 West 42d Street
NEW YORK

JUST PUBLISHED

THE FAMILY MUSIC BOOK

The Most Marvellous Collection Ever Published—800 Pages; 252 Pieces

THE FAMILY MUSIC BOOK is handsomely bound in flexible cloth, printed from beautifully engraved plates, in the best manner, on excellent paper and presents an appearance of unsurpassed elegance. It contains music for piano solo, piano 4-hands, piano 6-hands, vocal solos and duets, classified as follows:

PIANO MUSIC	VOCAL MUSIC
27 Drawing-room Pieces	27 Ballads
18 Operatic Arrangements	7 Convivial Songs
14 Easy Classics	8 Plantation Songs
13 Sunday Music	5 French Children's Songs
12 Marches	6 German Children's Songs
10 Waltzes	20 English Children's Songs
2 Polkas	10 Sacred Songs
2 Mazurkas	9 Patriotic Songs
1 Schottische	9 National Songs (Foreign Nations)
2 Lancers and Quadrilles	12 Hymns
11 Jigs, Reels, and Modern Dances	14 Vocal Duets
9 Four-hand Pieces
4 Six-hand Pieces

The Name of the Book—"THE FAMILY MUSIC BOOK"—implies the purpose which the collection is to serve.

All the material has been very carefully selected, both as to classifications and the individual pieces.

The Piano Music is uniformly of moderate difficulty—within the means of the average player; and the vocal numbers in addition to being of the same grade of difficulty, possess the special advantage of having easy accompaniments—also within the means of the average pianist.

The vocal numbers throughout are for medium voice, thus being available for all singers.

Among the pieces, both piano and vocal, will be found many old favorites, universally known and loved, and many new compositions, interesting, charming and beautiful.

THE FAMILY MUSIC BOOK belongs in every household. It appeals alike to those who cultivate music seriously, and to those who love it merely for its own sake.

THE FAMILY MUSIC BOOK is also essentially a GIFT-BOOK.

The aggregate value of the music contained in the book is

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY DOLLARS ($150)

The Price is ONLY ONE DOLLAR

Cost of shipping extra: Parcel post, any point within 150 miles of New York, 10c.; any point within 300 miles, 16c.; any point within 600 miles, 27c. Add 5 cents for insured parcel post. Further distances by express. All points as far as Mississippi River, 35c. All points west of Mississippi River, 45c.

For Sale by Music Dealers, Department Stores, Stationers, and wherever music is handled.

Published by G. SCHIRMER NEW YORK

SOUSA AND HIS BAND

"HEARD THE WORLD AROUND"

Office: 1 West 34th Street

Telephone 6128 Greeley

Alexander BLOCH

CONCERT VIOLINIST

Management, Foster & David, 500 Fifth Avenue, - New York

KIDD KEY CONSERVATORY SHERMAN TEXAS

Hans Richard has been made Director in the Conservatory and is assisted by an able corps of teachers. Bendetson Netzorg has also been added to the Conservatory faculty. For catalog address

MRS. L. A. KIDD KEY

INEZ BARBOUR SOPRANO Concert-Recital-Oratorio

Management: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th St., New York

FLORENCE AUSTIN

America's Violinist

Season 1914-1915 Now Booking

Address:

THOMAS McGRATH, 133 East 34th St., New York

Phone Murray Hill, 2239

JANE CATHERWOOD SOPRANO and TEACHER

Fowler Apartments, 1110 W. Washington Street, Los Angeles, Cal. Phone 20584

MARIE KAISER

SOPRANO

Management: WALTER ANDERSON, 171 West 57th St., New York

Yolanda MERÖ Hungarian Pianist

STEINWAY PIANO USED

Under the exclusive management of CHARLES L. WAGNER, 1451 Broadway New York City

FRANCES ALDA SOPRANO OF THE METROPOLITAN OPERA CO.

Assisted by Gutia Cassini, Cellist, and Frank La Forge, Pianist

SEASON 1914-15 NOW BOOKING

Exclusive Management for Concerts: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York City

Baldwin Piano Used

Dramatic Mezzo Soprano

SARA HEINEMAN

Concerts and Recitals also Southern Folk Songs in Costume

In Europe During Summer

Mail to Musical Courier - - - 437 Fifth Avenue

Baroness Evans

Von KLENNER

America's Representative of the GREAT GARCIA VOCAL METHOD

Grand Prix—Paris Exposition, 1900. Summer School—Point Chautauqua, Chautauqua Lake. N. Y. June 25th to Aug. 27th, 1914.

Tradition Languages Repertoire Diction Special Courses for Teachers. Address, New York Studio, 952 Eighth Avenue

THE PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY of NEW YORK

1914 Seventy-Third Season 1915

JOSEF STRANSKY, Conductor

SUBSCRIPTION SERIES:
New York, Brooklyn, Baltimore and Washington.

TOURS;
New England, New York State, Canada, Middle West, South

Prospectus on application to

FELIX F. LEIFELS, Manager Carnegie Hall, NEW YORK

Macmillen Writes.

Among the hundred or more letters from Americans in Germany brought to this country by Dr. Karl G. Bertling, assistant director of the American Institute in Berlin, who was sent to this country as the Kaiser's personal representative to disseminate official news of the war, was a missive to the MUSICAL COURIER from Francis Macmillen, inclosing the accompanying photograph, which was taken at Loschwitz, in Saxon-Switzerland, near Dresden, during war times.

Macmillen's letter was written in German, and he explained that until peace is declared all communications from Germany must be in the language of the country, as they are read by censors.

Judging from this snapshot, it would not seem that Macmillen or the others in the party were suffering any great inconvenience or hardships on account of the war. He says: "Law and order prevail in Dresden, and in spite of all the great crowds and the intense excitement prevailing, I have not witnessed one accident or a fight, nor seen a single evidence of drunkenness."

Macmillen mentions a jolly dinner party at the house of Prof. Leopold Auer, which included as guests Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Volpe, of New York. He adds that Mrs. Volpe contemplates going to Berlin this winter to study voice culture. He says all Germans believe the war will be of short duration. Peace, they think, will be established within a few months, at the most.

A WAR TIME SNAPSHOT.

Left to right, standing: Mrs. Arnold Volpe, Arnold Volpe, Mme. Stein, Francis Macmillen; Leopold Auer is seated.

To Appear in New York in Grand Opera.

Ernest Briggs announces that Lydia Sturtevant, contralto, who was for a season understudy with the Chicago Grand Opera Company and afterwards prima donna in the Sheehan Opera Company, has been booked for a complete season which will be spent in New York City. She is engaged for sixteen weeks with the New York Italian Grand Opera Company and will also make a number of guest appearances under the Aborns with the English opera company at the Century Theatre, New York. She has also been booked for a number of recital engagements in the East by the Eastern booking agents of the Briggs Musical Bureau, and will appear in a series in New York City given under the auspices of the Scottish societies. Some of the roles in which she will appear during the coming season are Herodiade in "Herodiade," Azucena in "Trovatore," Nancy in "Martha," the Queen in "Bohemian Girl," Gertrude in "Hansel and Gretel," Zanetto in "Zanetto," Pierotte in "Linda di Chamounix," Lola in "Cavalleria Rusticana," Madalena in "Rigoletto," Madlon in "Andre Chenier." Her repertoire also includes Amneris in "Aida," Leonora in "Favorita," Laura and Cieca in "Gioconda," Ulrica in "Masked Ball," Delilah in "Samson and Delilah," Siebel in "Faust," Erda in "Rheingold," Erda in "Götterdämmerung," and others.

"Pa, what is a saxophone?"

"A saxophone is a cornet that has curvature of the spine, cramps and a bad case of hoarseness."—Winnipek Town Topics.

MARIE SUNDELIUS Soprano

Exclusive Management

GERTRUDE F. COWEN, 1425 Broadway, New York

MME. GRACE HALL RIHELDAFFER

SOPRANO

624 9th AVE., MUNHALL, PITTSBURGH, PA.

Florence Hinkle

....SOPRANO....

Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th St., New York

BYFORD RYAN

Three Years Leading Tenor, Opera Comique, Berlin

Vocal Studio: 28 West 63rd Street - - New York

Lionel Robsarte
Opera Tenor
Instructor to the Profession. Hotel Woodward, N. Y.

ADELAIDE GESCHEIDT

DRAMATIC SOPRANO

Instructor of the Miller Vocal Art Science and The Art of Singing

817 Carnegie Hall Tel. 1350 Columbus

JOHN THOMPSON AMERICAN PIANIST

IN AMERICA SEASON 1914-1915

Management: ROBERT P. STRINE, Estey Hall, Philadelphia

Miss LEGINSKA

Hotel Grenoble, Seventh Ave. and 56th St., New York, Tel. 909 Columbus

"One of the most remarkable women pianists now before the public."—N. Y. Tribune, April 22, 1914.

HELEN BIXBY WETZEL

Coloratura Soprano

Now appearing with several Italian Grand Opera Companies. MILAN, ITALY

GERMAINE SCHNITZER

THE FAMOUS AUSTRIAN PIANIST

In America Season 1914-1915

Direction: R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, New York City

BALDWIN PIANO

LESLEY MARTIN, Bel Canto

STUDIO: 1425 Broadway, New York

SINGERS — Susanne Baker Watson, Cora Cross, Pauline Fredericks, Andrew Mack, Nellie Hart, Marion Stanley, Estelle Ward, Gertrude Hutcheson, George Bemus, George Gillet, John Hendricks, Dr. Eugene Walton Marshall, Fiske O'Hara, Horace Wright, Mabel Wilbur, John H. Stubbs, Edward Foley, Albert Wallerstedt, Umberto Sacchetti and many other singers now before the public in opera and church work.

Season 1914-15

LOUIS SIEGEL

Violin Virtuoso

FIRST AMERICAN TOUR

Management: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York

1914-15 SEASON 1914-15

GRACE POTTER

PIANIST

MARIE HERTENSTEIN

PIANIST

FRANCIS MACMILLEN

VIOLINIST

Exclusive Management S. E. MACMILLEN, 618 Candler Bldg., 220 West 42nd St., New York. Phone Bryant 8520

Oscar Saenger

TEACHER OF SINGING

From the rudiments of tone placing to artistic finishing for concert, oratorio, recital and opera. Teacher of famous Opera and Concert singers, among whom are:

Mme. Marie Rappold, soprano; Miss Florence Hinkle, soprano; Miss Mabel Garrison, soprano; Miss Helen Warrum, soprano; Mme. Bernice de Pasquali, soprano; Mr. Rudolf Berger, tenor; Mr. Heinrich Hensel, tenor; Mr. Orville Harrold, tenor; Mr. Paul Althouse, tenor; Mr. John Young, tenor; Miss Lila Robeson, contralto; Miss Mildred Potter, contralto; Miss Kathleen Howard, contralto; Mme. Josephine Jacoby, contralto; Miss Sibyl Conklin, contralto; Mr. Henri Scott, basso; Mr. Allen Hinckley, basso; Mr. Louis Kreidler, baritone; Mr. Albert Wiederhold, bass-baritone; Mr. Leon Rains, basso.

TEL. 687 LENOX STUDIO: 6 EAST 81st St., NEW YORK

Resume Teaching October 1st.

MARGARET HARRISON SOPRANO
68 West 56th Street New York

DONALD CHALMERS BASSO
Address for the Summer
29 Ocean Pathway, Ocean Grove, N. J.
RECITALS :: ORATORIO :: OPERA

EVAN WILLIAMS
— TENOR —
Akron - - Ohio
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU

Horatio Connell
BASS BARITONE
Management HAENSEL & JONES, AEOLIAN HALL, NEW YORK

PHILIP SPOONER TENOR
205 West 57th St., New York City
'Phone, 6510 Columbus

GENEVIEVE FINLAY-STEWART
DRAMATIC CONTRALTO
HAENSEL & JONES Aeolian Hall, New York

THOMAS FARMER Baritone
Engaged for St. Paul by Handel Society, London, May 12th
Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York

PAUL DUFAULT
TENOR
Address 339 West 23rd Street Tel. 7731 Chelsea

CAROLL BADHAM PREYER
TEACHER OF SINGING—Italian Method (Lamperti diploma)
Studio: 27 West 67th Street Tel. Columbus 1123

George CARRÉ
TENOR
15 East 10th St. Tel. 2927 Stuyvesant 'New York

Christine MILLER Contralto
Personal address: 1003 Heberton Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.
Management: HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York

REINALD WERRENRATH
BARYTONE
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th Street, - - New York

EDGAR
STILLMAN-KELLEY
STEINWAY HALL, NEW YORK, N. Y.

ARTHUR DAVIDSON PIANISTE
Management: WALTER ANDERSON
171 West 57th Street New York

Joseph Baernstein Regneas
TEACHER OF SINGING
Telephone Schuyler 3786 Studio, 133 W. 80th St., New York
From the first rudiments of tone placing to artistic finishing for Concert, Oratorio and Opera

BARONESS Olga von Türk-Rohn SOPRANO
"Europe's Famous Song Bird"
Season 1914-15 Now Booking
Management
Metropolitan Musical Bureau, New Brunswick, N. J.

CECIL FANNING Baritone
H. B. TURPIN Accompanist
Having returned from a year of concert giving in Germany, Italy and England, are
NOW AVAILABLE FOR RECITALS IN AMERICA
Address: H. B. TURPIN, Dayton, Ohio

Hanna Butler's Greetings.

The accompanying picture forms the opposite side of a postcard received by the Chicago office of the MUSICAL COURIER from Hanna Butler, soprano, of Chicago. The card, dated July 30, in a small town of Switzerland, reached this country nearly a week after Mrs. Butler had returned. Mrs. Butler wrote: "Have been coaching over mountains for three days. We are now at Zermatt, Switzerland, right in the Alps. The streets are so quaint and weather also. Yesterday we were in a regular blizzard."

COACHING IN SWITZERLAND.

Should the Cannon Speak!

This picture was not taken in Europe in spite of the warlike surroundings. It is a snapshot of John C. Thompson, the talented young pianist, and his manager, Robert Patterson Strine, of Philadelphia, and it was taken on board "Old Ironsides," which lies at anchor in the navy yard at Boston. This vessel, the Constitution, would stand very little chance of surviving an ocean voyage, not to speak of a battle, which readily accounts for the nonchalance with which Mr. Thompson and Mr. Strine lean against the cannon. Mr. Thompson is working hard at his pianistic endeavors and at his favorite sport, that of tennis. He played in the semi-finals at the club tournament in his home town in Williamstown, Pa., and is most enthusiastic over that diversion.

JOHN C. THOMPSON AND HIS MANAGER, ROBERT P. STRINE.

George Hamlin in Milan.

George Hamlin, tenor of the Chicago-Philadelphia Grand Opera Company, is passing the summer in Milan, Italy, with his family and reports to his managers, Haensel & Jones, that the only discomfort the European situation has created so far as the Hamlin family is concerned is a total cancellation of a large number of dates in the tenor's opera and concert itinerary on the Continent. Mr. Hamlin states that he will be in America to fill his spring bookings without fail.

THE ownership of a Chickering piano not only indicates an appreciation of musical interpretation at its best, but it means the acquirement of an instrument that has behind it a prestige and a fame.

From the time that Jonas Chickering made his first piano down to the Chickering

Piano

of 1914, the world of music has been lavish in its praise of this piano. Invariably its name has been associated with quality.

When you bring the Chickering into your life and come to know its superiorities of workmanship, of tone, of sympathetic interpretation, there is keenest satisfaction for you in your knowledge that your judgment could not have had a more felicitous vindication.

Chickering & Sons
Boston
Established 1823. Pianos and Players
Division of American Piano Co.

FOUNDED JANUARY, 1880

MUSICAL COURIER
WEEKLY JOURNAL
DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND ALLIED ARTS

ESTABLISHED
BY
MARC A. BLUMENBERG

PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY
BY THE

GRAND PRIX
PARIS EXPOSITION
1900

MUSICAL COURIER COMPANY
(Incorporated under the laws of the State of New York)
LOUIS BLUMENBERG, President
ALVIN L. SCHMOEGER, Sec. and Treas.
437 Fifth Ave., S. E. Cor. 39th St. - - - New York
Cable address: Peguiar, New York
Telephone to all Departments 4292, 4293, 4294, 7357 Murray Hill
LEONARD LIEBLING - - - - - EDITOR
H. I. BENNETT - - - - MANAGING EDITOR

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1914.

No. 1797

OFFICES AND REPRESENTATIVES

MIDDLE WEST DEPARTMENT—
Chicago Offices, 615 to 625 Orchestra Building, Rene Devries, General Representative, in charge.

UNITED STATES AND CANADA

BOSTON—
Blanche Freedman, 108 Hemenway St., Suite 10. 'Phone: B. B. 5554.
SAN FRANCISCO—
Alfred Metzger, Rooms 1009-1010, Kohler & Chase Building, 26 O'Farrell Street.
PHILADELPHIA, PA—
Harold Parry Quicksall, 5719 Windsor Place.
PITTSBURGH, PA.—
Hollis Edison Davenny, 5012 Friendship Ave., E. E.
ST. LOUIS, MO.—
Ernest R. Kroeger, Musical Art Building, St. Louis, Mo.
ST. PAUL, MINN.—
Johnson McClure Bellows, Musical Editor of St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press.
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Miss Ruth Anderson, 49 So. Eighth St.
LOUISVILLE, KY.—Katherine Whipple-Dobbs, 425 Fourth Avenue.
COLUMBUS, OHIO—Miss Emily Church Benham, 1299 Bryden Road.
BUFFALO, N. Y.—Cora Julia Taylor, 819 Richmond Avenue.
NEW ORLEANS—Harry B. Loeb, Box 79.
LOS ANGELES—Mrs. Jane Catherwood, 1110 W. Washington St.
KANSAS CITY—Geneve Lichtenwalter, 600 Studio Bldg.
CINCINNATI—
Mrs. Jessie P. Tyree, 9 The Westmoreland, Mason St., Mt. Auburn.
OMAHA—Jean P. Duffield, 205 Boyds Theatre.
LINCOLN, NEB.—Mrs. E. S. Luce, 1614 O St.
PROVIDENCE, R. I.—William Place, Jr., Jackson Bldg.
DES MOINES—Mrs. Caroline Young Smith, 1082 21st Street.
DENVER—Mrs. Dolores Reedy-Maxwell, 1516 Milwaukee St.
PORTLAND, ORE.—John R. Oatman, 445 Sherlock Bldg.
WICHITA, KANS.—Ralph Brokaw, 109 East 3d St.
VICTORIA, B. C.—Miss May Hamilton, 524 Michigan St.

EUROPEAN

BERLIN, W.—
Arthur M. Abell, Jenaer St. 21.
Cable Address: Abell, Wilmersdorf, Berlin.
PARIS—
H. O Osgood, 43 Boulevard Beausejour.
DRESDEN—
Mrs. E. Potter-Frissell, Elsenstuckstrasse 16.
MUNICH, GERMANY—
Miss Alice L. Bryant, Finken Strasse 2.
VIENNA—
Frank Angold, Florianigasse 60.
MOSCOW, RUSSIA—
Ellen von Tideböhl, Arbatte, 34 Deneschny.
ROME, ITALY—
Mrs. Dolly Pattison, 9 Piazza di Spagna.
BRUSSELS, BELGIUM—
Luella Anderson, 52 rue de l'Ermitage.
STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN—
Louisa Upling, Roslagsgatan 19.
LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND—
W. J. Bowden, 22 Fern Grove.

For the names and addresses of correspondents and representatives not in this list, apply to main office.

SUBSCRIPTIONS: (In Advance)

United States	$5.00	Canada	$6.00
Great Britain	£1 5s.	Austria	30 kr.
France	31.25 fr.	Italy	31.25 fr.
Germany	25 m.	Russia	12 r.

Single Copies, Fifteen Cents, at newsstands.
Back Numbers, Twenty-five Cents.

Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class Matter.

THE MUSICAL COURIER is for sale on the principal newsstands in the United States and in the leading music houses, hotels and kiosques in Belgium, England, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Switzerland and Egypt.

American News Company, New York, General Distributing Agents.
Western News Company, Chicago, Western Distributing Agents.
New England News Company, Eastern Distributing Agents.

ADVERTISING RATES:

On reading page, per inch, per year	$400.00	Front pages, per issue	$500.00
On advertising page, per inch, per year	200.00	Line (agate) rate on reading page, per issue	1.00
Column rate, per issue	150.00	Line (agate) rate on advertising page, per issue	.50
Full pages, per issue	400.00

THE MUSICAL COURIER EXTRA
Published every Saturday by Musical Courier Co.
Devoted to the interests of the Piano Trade.

NO CHICAGO OR BOSTON OPERA

Chicago makes known the unwelcome news that it will have no opera season this winter, owing to the uncertainty of getting its artistic personnel in time. All of them are in Europe and several of the principals are fighting with the armies there. The Board of Directors have cabled Cleofonte Campanini, who is in Italy, to notify the various members of the company that all contracts have been canceled. Of course, the Chicago decision also affects Philadelphia.

Eben D. Jordan, chief financial supporter of the Boston Opera, cables that the organization probably will suspend activities for this winter, owing to the absence of most of its male principals, who are fighting in the various armies of Europe. Henry Russell, managing director of the Boston Opera, is marooned in Italy.

Christine Miller cables from Berlin that she is "well and happy."

War or no war, announces the Century Opera, it will open its New York season September 14.

Toronto, Canada, has canceled indefinitely the big musical festival which it was planning for next October.

Dr. William C. Carl, the distinguished American organist, has arrived safely in London from Switzerland.

Wilhelm Bachaus, the German pianist, has, it is reported, been drafted into service with the troops of his country.

Music has been prohibited in Ghent, Belgium, by the local mayor, "owing to the national calamity," as his announcement explains.

Des Moines, Ia., is raising $15,000 for the formation of a symphony orchestra to give a series of concerts there this winter. Gustave Schoettle, of Kansas City, Mo., is being considered as the conductor.

It has been ruled by the Treasury Department at Washington that opera singers and other artists who come to the United States and later return to their foreign homes hereafter will have to pay an income tax in like manner as American citizens.

Rumors are rife that Paderewski thinks of cancelling his American tour this season. His strong Polish sympathies are a matter of general knowledge and it is likely that he will go to his native country to help with advice and money during the present Russian difficulties.

The spring of 1915 was to have seen the next competition for the Rubinstein Piano Prize and the event was scheduled to take place in Berlin. It is doubtful at this moment whether the contest will take place at all or be postponed until after the termination of hostilities in Europe.

Rehearsals for the forty-second season of the Oratorio Society of New York, Louis Koemmenich, conductor, begin on September 24. The performances, including but one novelty, are as follows: "The Dream of Gerontius," December 9, (soloists, Mildred Potter, contralto; Gervase Elwes, tenor, and Frank Croxton, bass); "The Messiah," (afternoon), December 20 (evening), December 30 (soloists, Florence Hinkle, soprano; Marie Stone Langston, contralto; Reed Miller, tenor, and Frederick Remington, bass); and "Joan of Arc," by Enrico Bossi, March 24 (soloists to be announced later). These concerts will be given in Carnegie Hall as usual, with the assistance of the orchestra of the New York Symphony Society.

Thuel Burnham, the noted pianist, cabled the MUSICAL COURIER from Paris on Monday of this week stating that he will sail for America early in September.

An Evening Sun editorial points out very sensibly that champions of eugenics should pause occasionally in their shoutings and remember Beethoven's father—he was a drunkard.

On the authority of one who knows positively whereof he speaks in the matter, it can be accepted as a fact that Andreas Dippel will not undertake his season of light opera in New York this season.

Reports from Australasia say that Mme. Melba's present tour in that part of the world is a conspicuous success. At one of her recent concerts the encores demanded were so many that finally the diva went to the piano and played "Home, Sweet Home" as a gentle hint to the persistent audience.

Clubs, managers, and orchestras holding contracts for Leonard Borwick appearances in the United States this season need not fear disappointment, as the celebrated English pianist will return from his current Australasian tour via San Francisco and intends to make all his projected appearances in this country before his return to England.

In case Dr. Ernst Kunwald, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, is detained in Europe too long to open the season's concerts with his organization, they will be led by P. A. Tirindelli until the return of the regular conductor. Mr. Tirindelli, a very able musician, is the leader of the orchestra at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music.

Latest advices received by the MUSICAL COURIER tell that the Paris Opera is closed; Ysaye's three sons have gone to the front; Muratore, Andre Caplet, and Vanni Marcoux are fighting for France; Henri Busser, leading conductor of the Paris Opera, has joined his regiment; the brothers Isola, directors of the Opera Comique, also are at the front. Among the composers, the only known combatant so far is Xavier Leroux.

Most reassuring is the latest official report from Symphony Hall, Boston, which says that though the Western trip of the Boston Symphony Orchestra planned for early this fall will have to be abandoned, there is every reason to believe that the regular series of concerts in Boston and elsewhere will be carried out according to schedule. A more complete and definite statement, however, is expected upon the return of C. A. Ellis from Europe this week.

Marcella Sembrich cabled to the Wolfsohn Musical Bureau on Saturday from Lausanne (Switzerland) that she will sing in this country during the months of January and February. The recitals will be limited to New York, Boston and Chicago. Mme. Sembrich declared her intention of sailing from Rotterdam October 3. She has been at the Hotel Beau-Rivage in Chamounix, Switzerland, but when it was found that it might be impossible to return to her villa at Nice, where she makes her winter home, the famous singer decided to come to America. After her arrival here Mme. Sembrich and her husband will be the guests of several prominent families in Lenox, Mass., Bar Harbor, etc.

MUSICAL COURIER HEARS FROM A. M. ABELL.

Berlin's Artistic Ranks Depleted by the Call to Arms—Many Members of Royal Opera at the Front—Probably No Concerts Will Be Given While War Lasts—Musical Courier Representative Gives Graphic Account of Conditions in the Prussian Capital—Kreisler Exchanges Violin Bow for the Sword.

Berlin, August 13, 1914.

The havoc that has been wrought in Europe during the last two weeks is without a parallel in the history of the world. The great Napoleonic upheaval was nothing at all in comparison. Everything is paralyzed, and so interwoven are modern international interests, and so interdependent have the nations become, that it seemed inconceivable that a general European war could be brought about. It will probably be the last one. Here in Berlin everybody expects Germany to be victorious.

ONE OF VIENNA'S PROMINENT CHURCHES.

The artists' ranks have been decimated by the call to arms; more than 140 members of the personnel of the Royal Opera and Royal Play House have been called into service, and conditions are the same with all German stages. It is now a question whether even the court theatres will open at all this season. There will probably be no concerts at all while the war lasts.

Fritz Kreisler has exchanged the bow for the sword and is now at the front with the Austrian army.

Henri Marteau has been called into the French army to fight against his friends and employers, for his interests are all in Germany.

Kirchoff, one of the heroes of this year's Bayreuth Festival, in now at the front on the French border near Metz. Kirchoff, the son-in-law of Etelka Gerster, is one of the leading tenors of the Berlin Royal Opera.

THE HANS SACHS MONUMENT, NUREMBURG.
(From the Theosophical Path.)

Dr. Kunwald, Anton Witek, Andreas Dippel and countless others are now in Berlin, trying, with faint hope of success, to get passage to America.

Dr. Karl Muck is at Bayreuth; he declared he would volunteer his services for the Austrian army, but friends persuaded him that he would do more real good at the head of the Boston Symphony Orchestra than by stopping a Russian bullet. He is fifty-two years old, anyhow, and past the age of active service.

C. A. Ellis was held up on the Austrian border because his automobile was driven by a French chauffeur. He is all right now, but at first the authorities, it is reported, took him for a spy.

The richest Americans are destitute of cash and the arrival of the Tennessee with American gold is looked forward to with an eagerness that no one can appreciate who has not lived through the last few days here.

THE ARTISTIC FRANCONIA FOUNTAIN, WURZBURG.

As all communications are cut off, this will probably be my last word to the MUSICAL COURIER until the war is over.

ARTHUR M. ABELL.

STICKING TO ONE'S LAST.

It is surprising to read in a New York daily usually so keenly alive as the Sun, so platitudinous an article as the one in its issue of August 26, called "War and the Musical Season." The matter reads as follows:

A weekly journal devoted to the interests of musicians rejoices in the belief that the European war will create unusual opportunities for American singers and players. Without doubt some of the famous artists of Europe will not come to this country to play or sing. For example, Fritz Kreisler, the great violinist, is an officer in the Austrian army, and for the time will have to maintain that the sword is mightier than the bow. Numerous other musicians will be drawn into the deplorable struggle, but not all.

The Sun has already published a not inconsiderable list of those who are sure to be heard in this country, and to that list additions will assuredly be made. There is, furthermore, one important aspect of the situation which must not be ignored. The nature of the American public will not be transformed by this war. It will continue to regard dispassionately all aspirants for public honors and to measure them according to its own satisfaction in their achievements.

The public will not go to hear music except when it is presented in a manner combining potency of personal magnetism with excellence of technic. This has been proved over and again. This position of the public will not change because fewer European celebrities come to court favor. The American performer will have to "make good," as the popular expression has it, just as if the customary army of foreign stars was at hand.

But it is within the bounds of possibility that the reduction in the number of artistic invaders may furnish room for the discovery of some new and brilliant talent at home, and that this talent may be brought to notice more speedily than it would in a crowded season. If such shall be the result, American music lovers will perhaps be able to give thanks that some small good has come out of such prodigious evil.

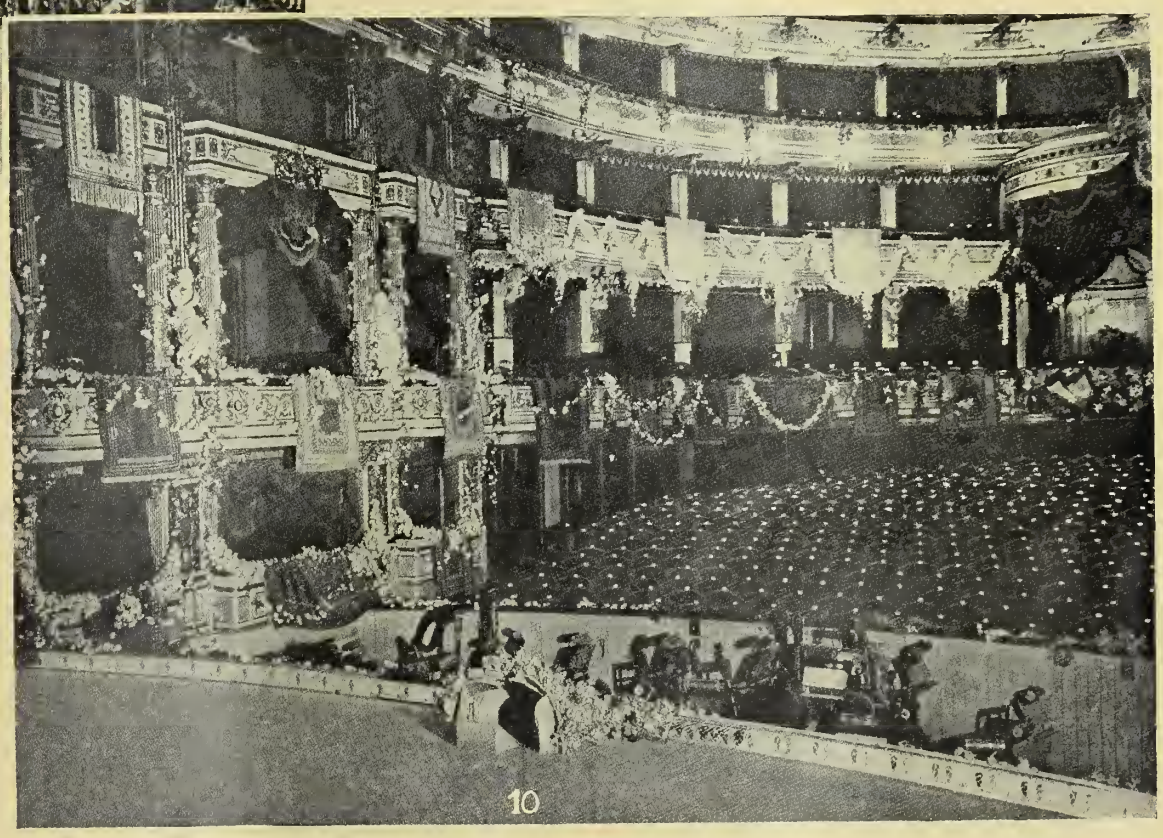
The weekly journal referred to is the MUSICAL COURIER, of course, but nowhere in its columns has any assertion ever been made to the effect that the American public now is ready to accept artists because they are American and not because they are good. The MUSICAL COURIER slogan always has been, is, and always will be, that art has no nationality and no matter where found belongs to all the world. What does the good Sun mean by accusing the American public of going to hear music only "when it is presented in a manner combining potency of personal magnetism with excellence of technique?" How about musicianship, interpretation, and power of emotional expression? Do they not count? It is plain to be seen that Mr. Henderson, the Sun's musical writer, is marooned in Europe, and someone else has assumed his musico-editorial duties during his absence. When unmusical persons write about music the result never fails to be ludicrous and bathotic.

A special hint to the Sun: the spelling "technique" now belongs to the school of "artiste," "honour," "colour," etc.; in modern America the word is known as "technic."

(1) The Emperor and Empress. (2) The Kaiser in civilian dress (which he wears only on very rare occasions). (3) Frederick the Great, as painted by Graff. (The Kaiser's illustrious ancestor who erected the Berlin Royal Opera House.) (4) Kaiser Wilhelm and his six sons. (5) The Wiesbaden Royal Opera (which is subsidized by the Emperor; gala performances are given here for the monarch every spring.) (6) Seven thousand school children serenading the Emperor in the court of the palace at Berlin. (Through the initiative of the monarch the vocal instruction in the public schools has been greatly improved.) (7) The German Crown Prince (who is a talented and accomplished violinist). (8) Four generations of Emperors (photographed in 1888, shortly before the death of both William and Frederick). (9) Kaiser Wilhelm and the Royal Palace at Berlin. (10) Kaiser Wilhelm II at six different periods of his life.

IN VIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

[PORTRAITS AND SCENES DEALING WITH RUSSIA, FRANCE, ENGLAND AND OTH



(1) Count von Hulsen-Haeseler (general intendant of the Berlin Royal Opera and the Emperor's right hand man in all matters musical). (2) The Emperor's Palace at Berlin. (3) The Kaiser (who contributes more to the support of music than any other man in the world). (4) Geheimer Regierungsrat Franz Winter (managing director of the Berlin Royal Opera). (5) The celebrated "Jahrhunderthalle" (Century Hall) at Breslau, which is said to contain the largest organ in the world). (6) The exterior of the Berlin Royal Opera House. (This is the oldest court opera house in Germany, having been erected under Frederick the Great in 1741). (7) The Hofbräuhaus, Munich (where musicians gather). (8) The historic Wartburg (southwest view) at Eisenach, in Thuringia. (9) Magnificent new Royal Opera House at Cassel (which is subsidized by the Kaiser). (10) The interior of the Berlin Royal Opera House (festooned for the jubilee performance of "Lohengrin" on June 16, 1913, commemorating the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Emperor's ascension to the throne).

AND CONTEMPORARY HAPPENINGS

OUNTRIES WILL BE PUBLISHED IN EARLY ISSUES OF THE MUSICAL COURIER.]

AMERICA'S HOST ABROAD.

[The MUSICAL COURIER is endeavoring to keep the subjoined list up to date. As soon as arrivals are reported in this country their names are removed from this roster. Should there be an oversight, or should any of America's musical personages now abroad not be included in the appended table, the MUSICAL COURIER would be grateful to receive such information so as to be able to keep the reference schedule correct.—Editor MUSICAL COURIER.]

A

Arthur M. Abell, Mariska Aldrich, Luella Anderson, Arthur Alexander, J. Allen, Leonora Allen, Paul Althouse, Richard Aldrich, Pasquale Amato, Paolo Ananian, Frances Alda, Richard Arnold.

B

Louis Blumenberg, Alexander Bloch, W. L. Blumenschein, Mrs. Marc A. Blumenberg, Birdice Blye, Alice L. Bryant, Mrs. Norah Brandt, Enid Brandt, Mrs. H. H. A. Beach, Charles Bowes, Eddy Brown, Thuel Burnham, John Braun, Alice Bingham, Mrs. George Beck, Helen Blain, Lillian Blauvelt, Carlo Buonamici, Rudolf Berger, Carl Braun, Alessandro Bonci, Ferruccio Busoni, Willy Burmester, Amadeo Bassi, Lucrezia Bori, George Barrere, Grace Burnap, Mrs. Hope Hopkins Burroughs, Mrs. A. M. Blair, Wilhelm Bachaus.

C

Enrico Caruso, Julia Claussen, Cleofonte Campanini, Anna Case, Dr. William C. Carl, Shanna Cumming, Mr. and Mrs. King Clark, Arthur M. Curry, Claude Cunningham, Augusta Cottlow, Pauline Curley, Lucy Call, Grace Cole, Marian Clark, Kittie Cheatham, California University Glee Club, Gertrude Cleophas, Jane Noria-Centannini, Maria Cavan, Julia Culp, Francis Coppicus, Jacques Coini, Ernesto Consolo, Charles Cooper, Andrea Casertani, Lina Cavalieri.

D

Mildred Dilling, Laurette Duval, Vernon d'Arnalle, Adamo Didur, Charles Dalmores, Norah Drewett, Andreas Dippel, J. F. Delma-Heide, Jenny Dufau, Emmy Destinn, Eleonora de Cisneros, Gaston Duchamel.

E

Annie Ellermann, Albert Elkus, Emma Eames, Edwin Evans, Rudolph Engberg, C. A. Ellis, William Engle.

F

George Fergusson, Truman Fassett, Mrs. E. Potter-Frissell, Benjamin Fabian, Geraldine Farrar, William Förster, Anna Fitzhugh, Carl Flesch, Edoardo Ferrari-Fontana, Flonzaley Quartet, Martha Falk-Mayer, S. M. Fabian, Sam Franko, Rita Fornia.

G

Giulio Gatti-Casazza, Frank Gittelson, Louise Gunning, Leopold Godowsky, Katherine Golcher, Katharine Goodson, Esperanza Garrigue, Hedwig Glomb, Emily Gresser, Mary Garden, Paolo Gruppe, Emilio de Gogorza, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, Clara Clemens-Gabrilowitsch, Aristodemo Giorgini, Heinrich Gebhard, William J. Guard, Paolo Gallico, Albino Gorno, Otto Goritz, Dinh Gilly, Elena Gerhardt, Joseph Gotsch, Mr. and Mrs. Felix Garziglia, Mrs. Warner Gibbs, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Gans.

H

Julia Hostater Kathleen Howard, David Hochstein, Ellis Clark Hammann, Sara Heineman, W. H. Henderson, Sue Harvard, Margaret Huston, George Hamlin, Edwin Hughes, Adâ Soder-Hueck, William Hinshaw, Edward Hargreave, George Nelson Holt, Elmer G. Hoelzle, Allen Hinckley, Genevieve Houghton, Ragnahild Holmquist, Alfred Hertz, Heinrich Hensel, Frieda Hempel, Marie Hertenstein, Josef Hofmann, Hans Himmer, Edna Hoff, Walter Heermann, Carl Hillman, Sigmund Herzog.

J

Sascha Jacobson, Anna Taylor Jones, Carl Jörn, Edward Johnson, Frank Norris Jones.

K

Grace Kerns, Mme. Rider-Kelsey, Marie Kaiser, Earle G. Killeen, Sergei Kotlarsky, Morgan Kingston, Mr. and Mrs. Knupfer, Georgia Kober, Adele Krueger, Fritz Kreisler, Dr. Ernst Kunwald, Leopold Kramer, Louis Koemmenich, Henry Kaspar, Mrs. Joseph Kaspar, Mrs. J. B. Kendall, Josephine Kryl, Walter Kirschbaum.

L

Felice Lyne, Albert Lindquist, Kathleen Lawlor, Leslie Loth, James Liebling, Cordelia Lee, Lucille Laurence, Marie White Longman, Josef Lhevinne, Tina Lerner, Georges Longy, Frank la Forge, Theodor Latterman, Henri Le Roy, Mario Lambardi, Dr. and Mrs. Lovette, Edwin H. Lemare.

M

Charles Henry Meltzer, Alice Garrigue Mott, Florence MacBeth, Zitella Martin, Adolph Mühlmann, Marguerite Melville, Beulah Munson, Alma Moodie, Francis Maclennan, Florence Easton Maclennan, Christine Miller, Ricardo Martin, Harry Munro, Marie Mohler, Francis Macmillen, Isolde Menges, L. H. Mudgett, Dr. Karl Muck, Ottilie Metzger, Lucien Muratore, Vanni Marcoux, Margarete Matzenauer, André Maquarre, Elisabeth Mack, Yolanda Mérö, Hans Merx, John McCormack, Daniel Maquarre, Katharine McNeal, Leopold de Maré, Laya Machat.

N

F. Wight Neumann, Louise Nikita, Emma Nevada, Mignon Nevada, Hildegarde Nash.

O

Hendrikje Ohlsen, H. O. Osgood, W. B. Olds, Professor Otto, Mrs. Charles Orchard, Margarete Ober, Emil Oberhoffer.

P

Paul Petri, Carroll Badham Preyer, Louis Persinger, Mrs. Dolly Pattison, A. Buzzi-Peccia, Henry Perry, Eleanor Pochler, Harry Phillips, May Esther Peterson, Ignace Jan Paderewski, Lucille Peck, Eleanor Peocock, Kathleen Parlow, Giorgio Polacco, F. Parme, S. van Praag, Anna Pavlowa.

Q

Alfred Quinn.

R

Titta Ruffo, Kate Rolla, Claude Reddisch, Meta Reddisch, Leon Rains, Anita Rio, Max Rabinoff, Ettore Ruffo, Otto Roehrborn, Elizabeth Reeside, Léon Rothier, Henry Russell, Marie Rappold, Albert Reiss, Jacques Renard, H. Royer.

S

Helen Stanley, Gaston Sargent, Viola Gramm-Salzedo, Gladys Seward, Arnolde Stephenson, Leon Sametini, Carl Stasny, Wager Swayne, Irma Seydel, Theodore Seydel, Arthur Shattuck, Kurt Schindler, Ernestine Schumann-Heink, Ernest Schelling, Sigismund Stojowski, Philip Spooner, Albert Stoessel, Theodore Spiering, Oscar Saenger, Andrea de Segurola, James Sauvage, C. Wenham Smith, Ethel C. Smith, Pitts Sanborn, Oscar Seagle, Katherine Stevenson, Herman Sandby, Ella Spindler, Alexander Savine, Frank Steen, Loyal Phillips Shaw, Eleanor Spencer, J. D. Sample, Leo Slezak, Mario Sammarco, Jan Sickesz, Arrigo Serato, Sevcik Quartet, Antonio Scotti, Max Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Otto T. Simon, Josef Stransky, Giulio Setti, Leo Schultz, Ann Swinburne, Herbert Foster Sprague, Rudolph E. Schirmer, Arthur P. Schmidt, Bruno Steindel, Umberto Sorrentino, George W. Stewart, May Scheidler.

T

Louis Campbell-Tipton, Louise Gerard-Thiers, Arturo Toscanini, Jacques Thibaud, Luisa Tetrazzini, Otto Tuft, Oswald Thumser, Enrico Tramont, Elizabeth Topping.

U

Otto Urack, Josef Urban, Jacques Urlus.

V

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Volpe, Daniel Visanska, Otto A. Voget, Edna ver Haar, Coenraad von Bos, Luisa Villani.

W

Felix Weingartner, Herbert Witherspoon, Helen Bixby Wetzel, Mrs. Stacey Williams, Edyth Walker, Hermann Hans Wetzler, Clarence Whitehill, Marie Louise Wagner, Nancy White, G. C. Weitzel, Helen Warrum, Coral Wait, Carolina White, Priscilla White, Frank Waller, Beatrice Wheeler, Herman Weil, Anton Witek, Vita Witek, E. Walther, Edith Bower Whiffen, Grace Bonner Williams.

Y

Eugen Ysaye, S. Costantino Yon, Pietro A. Yon.

Z

Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler, Alice Zeppilli, Katherine Ziegler.

Returned and Returning.

Adolf Tandler, conductor of the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra, has returned to that city after an absence of several weeks in Europe.

Paul Steindorff, the well known oratorio and orchestral conductor of San Francisco and vicinity, is back in California from a three months' visit abroad.

Mme. Guercias, the operatic soprano, has returned to New York after an exciting trip through the war afflicted districts.

Della Thal, the Chicago pianist, is back in that city from a sojourn of several months abroad.

Oscar Gordon Erickson has returned to Chicago from Berlin.

Mary G. Wilderman, the pianist, returned from Berlin August 12 on the steamship Philadelphia of the American line.

M. H. Hanson, the New York concert manager, returned to the metropolis last Friday via Montreal on the steamship Andania.

Victor Harris, the New York conductor, composer and vocal instructor, arrived here on Monday of last week on the steamship St. Louis.

Henry Weldon, the American basso, who is to be a member of the Century Opera Company this coming season, arrived in New York on Monday of last week aboard the steamship St. Louis.

Frank Damrosch returned to New York last week on the steamship Noordam.

Ivan Caryll, the light opera composer, has arrived in New York.

Raymond Havens, a pianist of Providence, R. I., came home from London via Montreal.

Mme. Johanna Gadski is en route to this country.

Cecil Ayres, the pianist, arrived in New York last week.

C. A. Ellis, manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is due home this week.

W. E. Walters, press representative of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, returned from Europe last week.

Wilhelm Middelschulte, the well known Chicago organist, arrived in New York August 24 on the steamship Noordam, and proceeded to his home in the Western metropolis.

Alma Gluck, the prima donna soprano, and Efrem Zimbalist, the Russian violinist, reached New York last Sunday, August 30, on the steamship Espagne from Havre.

Edgar Stillman Kelley, the noted composer, arrived in New York on Tuesday morning of this week on the S. S. Rijnbam from Rotterdam.

MME. NORDICA'S WILL.

George W. Young, husband of Mme. Nordica, has been ordered by Surrogate Cohalan to file the original will of the late singer, made in 1910. She executed the later one in 1914 just before her death. It is understood that in the first document the bulk of her property was left to Mr. Young, while in the second he was given nothing, Mme. Nordica setting forth that she had advanced her husband $400,000 in the meantime, an amount equivalent to his rightful share in her estate. The singer's entire fortune is to go to her three sisters, according to her last testament. Mr. Young has filed the original will in Freehold, N. J., as he claims that his wife had established residence in that State. Under the laws of New Jersey, Mr. Young would be entitled to part of his wife's estate, whichever of the two wills might be admitted there. But the last will may have to be probated in New York and in that event a lawsuit is likely to determine the whole question as it relates to the rights of Mr. Young and Mme. Nordica's sisters.

ELKS' MUSIC FESTIVAL.

Asbury Park, N. J., was the scene of a successful music festival offered by the B. P. O. E. 128 on three nights of last week, August 25, 27 and 29. The artists who appeared were of the highest caliber, and the success was, both from a material and an artistic viewpoint, of a superior order. Among those heard were Mabel Garrison, Eva Mylott, Orville Harrold, Emil J. Polak, Alice Nielsen, Rosa Olitzka, Jerome Uhl, George Dostal and Nahan Franko. Florencio Constantino was to have appeared at the final concert, but was unable to do so, his place having been taken by George Dostal.

SAN DIEGO MUSICIANS PROUD.

Says the San Diego, Cal., Union of August 12, 1914: "San Diego musicians are displaying with pride the issue of August 5 of the MUSICAL COURIER, the leading musical publication of America, in which nearly five pages are devoted to a detailed description of the recent meeting of the State Music Teachers' Association in this city. . . . The space and pictures given the article should do much to spread afar the fame of the City of the Sun as a music center."

BOOKS SHOVELED OUT IN FLOOD, MARCH, 1913.

AIRING A GRIEVANCE.

The following is one of several letters received by the MUSICAL COURIER after publication of a recent article:

Springfield, Mass., August 25, 1914.

To the Musical Courier Company:

I was sorry to see in your paper such a poor account of the convention of the National Association of Organists held at Asbury Park recently. The men were very sore at your man (reporter), who took the matter second hand, evidently from "the powers that be" down in Ocean Grove.

This year's convention was far and above the best gathering of representative organists that ever have assembled. Organists from as far west as New Mexico and south as Florida, a few from Canada. The place of meeting was ideal, a quiet lecture room in the First M. E. Church at Asbury Park, the room being filled at the meetings. Some contrast to the Ocean Grove affair, where one would hear revival shouting on all sides. We were driven from building to building, as suited the convenience of the "boss" of Ocean Grove. The North End Hotel was ideal in every way. The banquet was a most brilliant affair, I can assure you. The lawn party at Mrs. Bruce Keator's was the best we ever have had. The treatment we received at every turn was the best at Asbury Park. Your article that was published last week was written by a fellow who never came to one meeting and was primed, as it were, from across Wesley Lake. Why did not the reporter come to headquarters at least and make himself known? Next year there is a strong sentiment in favor of having the convention here in Springfield. You can readily see why I am writing this letter. The article in question gave a black eye to the convention, and to those who might think of attending the coming year; they would be influenced greatly if they received false impressions through your columns. Yours sincerely,

ARTHUR H. TURNER.

The MUSICAL COURIER sees no reason to retract what was said in its original report of the convention of the National Association of Organists, which was correct in every particular. A representative of the MUSICAL COURIER attended nearly all of the meetings of the association during this convention and gained his information on all sides both from interviews and personal observation; and, for the sake of avoiding all misunderstanding, it may be well to add that none of this information came from "the powers that be down in Ocean Grove," nor was the MUSICAL COURIER representative "primed as it were from across Wesley Lake." Also, the reporter did go to headquarters and make himself known. but saw no reason for not telling the truth.

SOUSA OPERA ALMOST COMPLETE.

Sousa has almost completed the composition of his new opera, "The Irish Dragoon." The first act is altogether complete, the second act finished with the exception of one or two numbers, and the final act about ready for the finishing touches. The book has been arranged by Joseph Herbert from Charles Lever's famous novel, "Charles O'Malley, the Irish Dragoon." There will be a broad comedy role in that of the inimitable Mickey Free, whose character and appearance are so well brought out in the illustrations of the standard edition by the renowned caricaturist "Phiz," especially in the frontispiece, "Mr. Free Making Free." The character of O'Malley will be of the heroic and chevalresque order, and should prove exceptionally effective in the hands of a competent artist.

HELP DAYTON.

In the flood disaster of 1913 which engulfed the homes of 85,000 people, the Dayton, Ohio, Public Library lost the greater part of its valuable music collection, comprising both literature and scores. Books, music and musical instruments that can never be replaced were swept out of existence in a few hours. The only hope of hundreds of students and music lovers in Dayton is a general lending collection of music at the Public Library. But the library is limited in funds and must meet largely increased demands in many other directions. Hence, beyond a moderate expenditure for books of general interest in the literature of music, nothing of direct help to students and musicians can be afforded.

The musical interests of the city are evidenced by the fact that twenty-two musical organizations comprising a membership of over 1,500 musicians have combined in a Civic Music League, whose purpose is to give concerts at cost, and also free concerts by local talent in churches, schools and public auditoriums. Aside from the aesthetic and recreational value of this movement, it has greatly stimulated the study of music in the city.

To meet the dearth of musical material due to the flood, the Civic Music League, asks cooperation in soliciting gifts for a general collection of music to be set apart in a special room at the Public Library as a lending library where everyone may avail himself of the works of the great composers, ancient and modern.

Hence composers, musicians, publishers, and conservatories are being addressed by the Dayton library to ask that it receive their consideration in case they may have in hand any surplus music or books, or standard works of the composers, even if slightly used; or libretti of operas and interpretative programs, such as those of the great symphony orchestras, which they could donate.

The accompanying photographs will give but slight notion of the havoc wrought by the flood of 1913 in the Dayton library. For two weeks thirteen men were engaged in shoveling mud from the library building. Fifty thousand books and all interior furnishings were destroyed.

The library has received numbers of gifts in all other departments, both from citizens of Dayton and from outside sources, and we believe that when the situation is known as to music the much needed help will also be extended to this important branch of the service. The matter should be addressed to Electra C. Doren, librarian, Dayton, Ohio, Public Library and Museum.

ST. PAUL-MINNEAPOLIS ENTENTE.

Through unfortunate conditions which resulted in the discontinuance of the St. Paul Symphony Orchestra, that city, one of the most musical of its size in the country and which for eight years has been accustomed to symphony concerts of a high order, bids fair to be deprived of symphony concerts the coming season. Steps were taken, however, to arrange a series of concerts in St. Paul by the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, Emil Oberhoffer, conductor, and these will be given, to the number of eight, in the St. Paul Auditorium, under the auspices of the St. Paul Institute, Charles W. Ames, president. C. O. Kalman, who has been active in the affairs of the St. Paul Orchestra, will be chairman of the special committee on orchestra concerts. Edmund A. Stein, who has been manager of the St. Paul Orchestra, has been retained as local business manager for these concerts.

The soloists thus far engaged are (November 5) Mildred Potter, (December 31) Julia Claussen, (January 14) Alice Verlet.

Manager Wendell Heighton is busily engaged completing arrangements, and the remaining soloists will be announced very soon.

THE RUINED MUSIC ALCOVE, MARCH, 1913.

HOW TO AID THEM.

Many inquiries are coming to the MUSICAL COURIER from the relatives and friends of the persons mentioned in our list called "America's Hosts Abroad," and most of the questions relate to the manner in which money may be sent abroad to those in distress. As a reply to all the anxious ones on this side the MUSICAL COURIER cannot do better than to reprint the attached statement, prepared recently for The Outlook by the Hon. Seth Low, chairman of the New York Relief Committee. It reads as follows:

The committee of New York citizens appointed by Mayor Mitchel for the purpose of co-operating with the Federal authorities in assisting Americans abroad believes that the immediate difficulties which have created so much anxiety have been cleared away.

Direct lines of communication are now open with all European countries, with the exception of Germany and Austria. Payments on travelers' checks and other credit instruments have been resumed in England, France, and, to a large extent, in Switzerland. This is presumably true of Russia.

The reassuring news comes from the War Department that a definite plan has been formulated for facilitating the return of Americans in Russia, Germany and Austria. It is believed that adequate transportation facilities can be provided without the use of American ships and transports.

For the benefit of those who are anxious to communicate with friends abroad the mayor's committee suggests the following methods:

In case the address of the friend is known, the cable companies will accept messages to all European countries with the exception of Germany and Austria. The censorship regulations require plain English or plain French—with the full name and address of both the person addressed and the sender.

In case the address is not known, a message should be sent to the American consular official in the territory where the party has been traveling. A letter should be sent to the State Department calling its attention to the case.

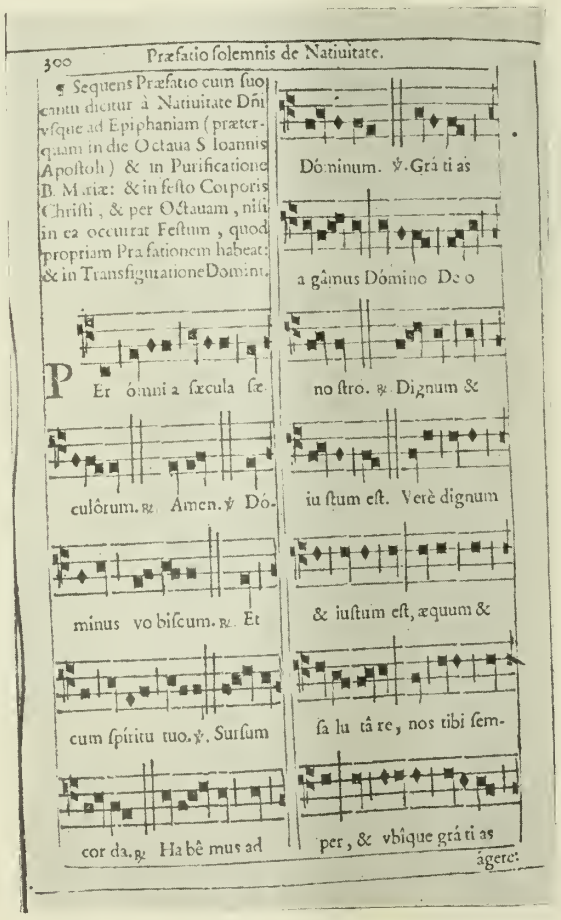
For persons desiring to send funds abroad the United States Treasury is offering its assistance. Funds may be deposited at the various subtreasuries and with the Treasury officials. Payments in Europe will be made through the consular service.

Several New York banks are in a position to accept funds for payments abroad. The mayor's committee, with its headquarters at 65 Liberty street, New York City, will be glad to furnish additional information—if it is necessary.

SETH LOW,
Chairman of the Committee.

ST. PAUL ORCHESTRA'S TROUBLE.

It is distressing to read in the St. Paul Pioneer Press that the symphony orchestra of that city had to disband because of inability to add another $20,000 to the guarantee fund. St. Paul is reputed to be an unusually wealthy community—for one thing it is the home of J. J. Hill—and to the impartial outsider it seems a matter for surprise that Minneapolis' neighbor would acknowledge publicly such a humiliation as is represented by the breaking up of its orchestra because of lack of financial backing. St. Paul has taken a step backward in the eyes of musical and cultural America.



THE PANAMA-PACIFIC EXPOSITION ORGAN.

It is denied in various quarters that Edwin H. Lemare has caused the console of the organ at the Panama-Pacific Exposition to be built in such a manner as to make it difficult for other organists to play upon the instrument. It would seem to us that the Austin Organ Company should clear up this matter and thereby settle a question which is causing many American organists much concern. If the Austin Organ Company will courteously send to the MUSICAL COURIER a plan of the console of the organ which that firm had built for the Exposition, we shall be glad to give it prominent space and to print any comments with which the Austin house may wish to accompany the diagram or diagrams. It appears to us that such a course would be fair, both to Mr. Lemare and to the other organists, who will have to play upon the exposition instrument.

AN EMIGRANT FROM FLANDERS.

About two hundred years ago or so a little Flemish boy in the mediæval city of Antwerp, in Flanders, now part of Belgium, began to study music. Antwerp had long been famous for its commerce and its arts. Rubens and Van Dyck had made the old city renowned throughout the world and the great Plantin printing and bookbinding house had supplied the best libraries with fine editions of the classics. Collectors today are as eager as ever to get books from the Plantin press—ex officinâ Plantiniana, as the Latin title puts it. Near by, the equally famous press of Elzevir in Amsterdam—ex officinâ Elzeviriana—was in friendly rivalry.

The little Flemish boy, then, came into the world of great activity in commerce, learning and art.

300 Præfatio ſolemnis de Natiuitate.

℣ Sequens Præfatio cum ſuo cantu dicitur à Natiuitate Dñi vſque ad Epiphaniam (præterquam in die Octaua S Ioannis Apoſtoli) & in Purificatione B. Mariæ: & in feſto Corporis Chriſti, & per Octauam, niſi in ea occurrat Feſtum, quod propriam Præfationem habeat: & in Transfiguratione Domini.

Dóminum. ℣. Grá ti as a gâmus Dómino De o

P Er ómni a ſæcula ſæ

no ſtro. ℟. Dignum &

culôrum. ℟. Amen. ℣. Dóiu ſtum eſt. Verè dignum minus vo biſcum. ℟. Et & iuſtum eſt, æquum & cum ſpíritu tuo. ℣. Surſum ſa lu tâ re, nos tibi ſemcor da. ℟. Habê mus ad per, & vbîque grá ti as ágere:

He learned all that was to be learned of music and became in time bandmaster and court musician to a German elector. He finally settled down in Bonn, on the banks of the Rhine.

His son became a musician, too, and would have made more of a mark in the world as a tenor if his dissolute habits had not ruined his career. He married the widowed daughter of a cook who was much younger than himself. Of the seven children born of this ill sorted marriage, one became a musician. As a baby he was the pride of his grandfather, the emigrant from Flanders. The old man died when the baby had barely completed his third year, but his memory was cherished by the grandchild to his dying day.

After many hardships, a very irregular education, bitter struggles, and the crowning disaster of deafness, this Flemish emigrant's grandchild managed to carve his name high on the temple of fame—Ludwig van Beethoven.

The glory that this name has brought to the long list of Germany's composers ought to stay the hands of the Kaiser's gunners who are battering at Antwerp, which probably has fallen into his hands by this time.

In the present circumstances it is safe to say that the grandfather of no Beethoven is emigrating from Antwerp to Bonn.

We reproduce herewith page 300 from a Roman Missal of a thousand pages, published by the Plantin press—ex officinâ Plantiniana—in 1682. It is a plain chant of the Roman Catholic service—Gregorian music which the late Pope Pius X re-established by a papal edict.

In the original the capital letters and the lines of the music are printed in turkey red, and the small letters and the notes in black.

SOPHIE TRAUBMANN MARRIED.

Sophie Traubmann, who formerly was a member of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and is now teaching, was among the stranded in London. She managed to get steerage passage for herself and daughter on the steamship Andania, sailing from Liverpool on August 18 for Montreal. After two days or more she became engaged to a Mr. Schroeder, of London, who is a printer of moving picture house placards; her daughter became engaged to a friend of Mr. Schroeder. When the boat reached Quebec the party landed, and the elder couple soon returned to the vessel as Mr. and Mrs. Schroeder.

LETTER FROM MRS. BEACH.

Mrs. Lewis, of the Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, has just received the following letter from Mrs. H. H. A. Beach:

Munich, August 10, 1914.

DEAR MRS. LEWIS.—Just a line to let you know that I am safe here. Conditions are very comfortable so far. Tremendous excitement, of course. We do not know just when we can get to America. All is uncertain. We are doing all we can to help these wonderful people in Red Cross work or any other way. A man going to Switzerland will post this to you. As soon as letters can be sent and our plans can be known, I will let you know.

Sincerely,
(Signed) AMY M. BEACH.
(Mrs. H. H. A. Beach).

ELBING REPORTED CAPTURED.

Elbing, the little German city reported last week to have fallen into the hands of the Russians, is the place where open air opera has been given successfully for several years under the direction of F. Rasenberger. Only two weeks before the war broke out, Elbing was crowding to hear the al fresco representations of Gluck's "Orfeo," staged by Georg Droescher, of the artistic staff of the Berlin Royal Opera.

YSAYE'S SONS KILLED.

In a letter from Louis Blumenberg, which reaches the MUSICAL COURIER from London almost at the moment of going to press (and therefore cannot be printed in full until next week), the information is contained that, according to report, two of Ysaye's three sons have been killed in battle while defending Belgium against the German invasion.

CESAR FRANCK STATUE DELAY.

Poor Cesar Franck, always doomed to wait for recognition, has just had another rebuff in Liège. That city was to erect a statue to the noted composer, but it is safe to assume now that considerable time must elapse before the citizens of Liège even will remember that they ever had such an intention.

NEW ORLEANS UNDECIDED.

New Orleans, which almost exclusively employs French artists for its opera, has not yet decided whether to try to carry out or to abandon its projected season.

H. O. OSGOOD IN LONDON.

H. O. Osgood, Paris representative of the MUSICAL COURIER, is in London, and will take charge of this paper's office there until further notice.

VARIATIONS

Belated Festival Notes.

At the Peterborough MacDowell Festival the program booklet told about Henry F. Gilbert, at first a pupil of MacDowell, who later "went into business and did little or nothing with music for about ten years," but in 1902 he "went to Paris for the purpose of hearing Charpentier's 'Louise,' and the opera made such an impression on him that, returning, he gave up business and devoted himself to music." One is reminded of Rosenthal's bon mot regarding the composer who said, "Hundreds of times I have resolved never to compose again, then suddenly I hear some beautiful melody or suggestive strain and"—a "que-voulez-vous" shrug of Rosenthal's shoulders used to complete the anecdote. One must suppose, then, if the Peterborough booklet is to be believed, that Mr. Gilbert has not heard "Mona," for if he ever had, we feel sure that music would lose him again and business claim him forevermore.

And that brings to mind Mrs. MacDowell's slyly subtle answer when someone asked her why she allows so many unknown works to be produced at the Peterborough festival. "I remember one man," replied Mrs. MacDowell, "whose composition we gave here. He previously had not heard anything of his done in public. After the performance he tore up the manuscript, left Peterborough and never composed again."

Eusebius G. Hood, the conductor, was a hard worked man, and after leading two rehearsals and one concert, copying a number of orchestral parts, listening to interpretative suggestions from composers, looking after the bodily comforts of several hundred choristers and orchestral musicians, answering one million questions on subjects that ranged from what the soloists should wear to the reason why the five o'clock afternoon mail does not arrive in the morning—after doing all that and more, he staggered into the dining hall and was about to sit down for a bite of dinner when a heartless wag inquired earnestly, "Have you fed the horses, Mr. Hood?"

Sara Anderson, of New York; Signor Tirindelli, of Cincinnati; Mrs. Edgar Stillman-Kelley, Arthur Wilson (Boston Globe), Olin Downes (Boston Post), Hallett Gilberté (in his motor car), Laurenza Hood, the comic opera prima donna; Philip G. H. Clapp, Arthur Mees, Professor Spaulding, Frederick W. Wodell, James B. Crowley, Paul Morgan and R. Huntington Woodman were among the visitors noted.

Philip G. H. Clapp is the young Boston composer who "wrote a symphony against the Boston Symphony Orchestra last year," as an amiable festival attendant put it. Another remembered what Philip Hale said of the work: "It isn't what Mr. Clapp says, but it's the nasty way he says it." It is to be concluded, therefore, that Mr. Clapp is an ultramodernite, which to some earnest persons suggests his fitness to be handed over at once to a firing squad.

Mrs. MacDowell does not wish to have her picture published. The one printed by the MUSICAL COURIER last week was obtained under false pretenses by the writer.

There was a good joke on most of the Colony composers and some others—all Americans—who stood on the steps of the Town Hall during one of the rehearsals inside. Suave brass music floated out through the open door of the auditorium. "What's that?" queried one of the group on the steps; "it seems familiar." "Sounds like 'Parsifal,' suggested one of the composers. "No, it's more like Strauss," was the comment of another. "Can it be Bruckner?" hazarded a critic; "he's not on the program." Just then Mrs. MacDowell came out of the hall. "What are they playing?' the critic asked her. "The 'Legend' from MacDowell's 'Indian Suite.'" was the answer.

Reinald Werrenrath is a marvelous teller of funny stories (of which he has a repertoire fully as large as that of the songs he sings) and his reputation as a raconteur is general. On one occasion a society woman informed him that she desired his services for one of her At Homes. "With pleasure," baritoned Werrenrath, "what shall I sing for you?" "Sing?" said the astonished dame, "you don't mean to say you do that, too?"

Victor Kolar, who played viola in the orchestra, is at work on a big symphony in four movements. Two of the Kolar symphonic poems were produced here by the New York Symphony Orchestra.

It will make grim Phil Hale smile to hear that the favorite phrase of one prominent musician at the festival was, "Philip Hale says"—and then would follow the quotation, always remembered literally.

The present members of the MacDowell Colony are E. A. Robinson, poet; Parker Fillmore, writer; Henry F. Gilbert, Arthur Nevin, W. H. Humiston, Edward Ballantine, Mabel Daniels, Lewis M. Isaacs, composers; Edward E. C. Rank, playwright; F. Tolles Chamberlin, painter; Agnes Crimmins, playwright; Katherine B. Stetson, painter; Lillian Link, sculptor; Edith McNee, painter; Mrs. Ritchey, writer; Elizabeth Marsh, playwright; Esther M. Bates, writer; Mrs. Lewis M. Isaacs, writer; George Halprin, pianist.

Josephine Knight's tasteful and spirited singing of the "Il est doux" aria and Arthur Hackett's well delivered and sweet voiced contributions to "The Creation" were inadvertently omitted from last week's MUSICAL COURIER report of the festival. This paragraph is intended as a late but well deserved tribute.

HABITS OF COMPOSERS, IV.

Franz Schubert had the habit of being poor and therefore became a schoolmaster and then a composer of classics. Musical historians still are busy trying to figure out at which pursuit Schubert earned less.

This happened at the pageant stage concert. A man behind the MUSICAL COURIER representative said: "They're not going to do the MacDowell." "What's the MacDowell?" asked his friend.

For the benefit of those who imagine that because MacDowell wrote poetical music he necessarily spent all his spare moments rhapsodizing and moon gazing, it should be mentioned that he was very fond of attending professional baseball games, at which his voice would mingle loudly in the general acclaim when the home team scored a run.

But what the present scribe enjoyed most of all at the festival was an ancient framed portrait which hangs next to the desk at the Peterborough Tavern. It depicts the twin sisters, Elvira and Elmira Fife, in unmodern[illegible] and gowns, "the oldest living twins in the United [illegible] born at Jaffrey, N. H., August 11, 1811." The photo[illegible] was made in 1893, and Elvira and Elmira died [illegible] lowing year. Underneath their likenesses is this [illegible] be forgotten inscription:

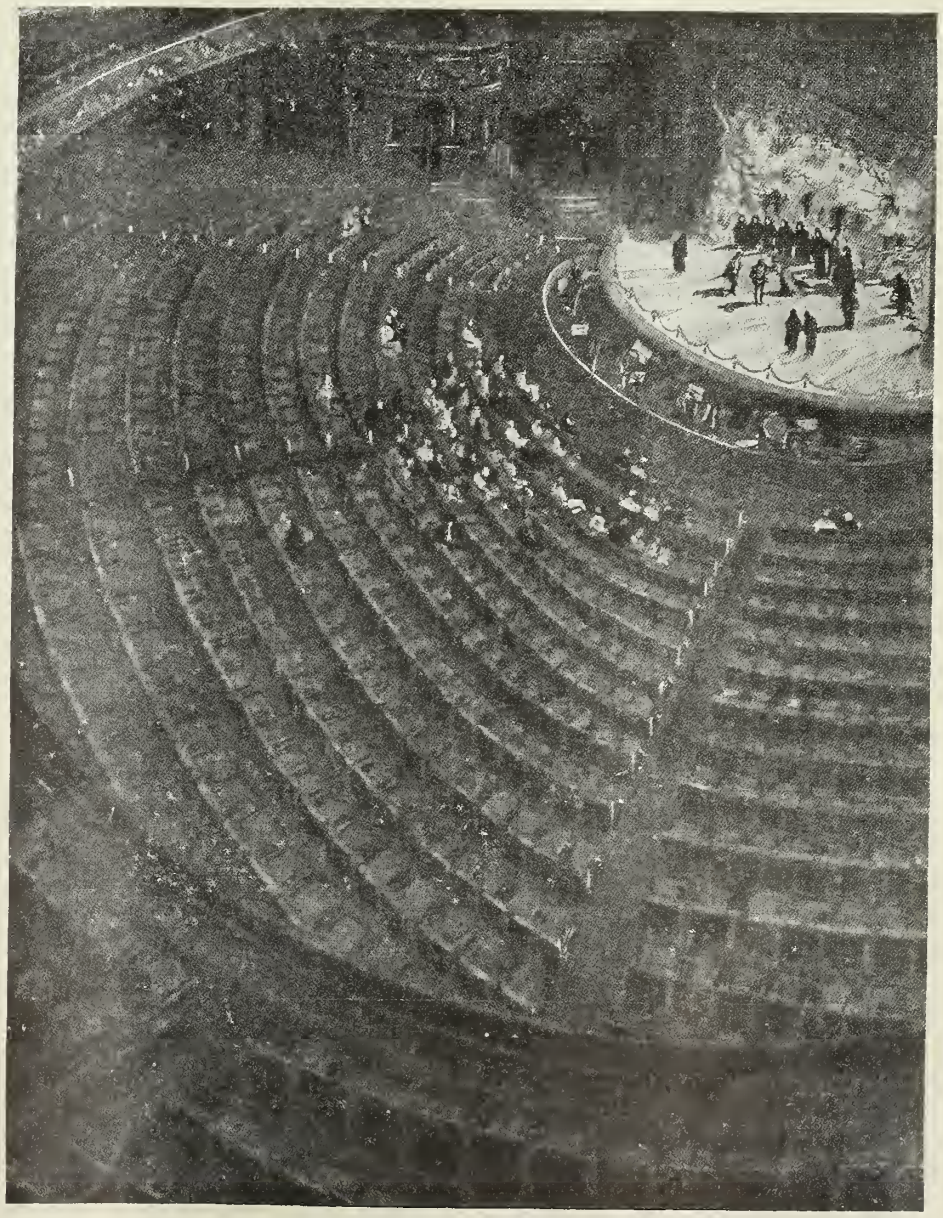
"They were never separated from each other but seventy hours since birth. Neither ever entered a railroad carriage, attended a theatre, or put on a spectacle. For sixty consecutive years their names appear upon the payrolls of the Phoenix Manufacturing Company at Peterborough. Twenty-one cents for three days' labor was the minimum wages received for their services and ninety cents the maximum for one day. In December, 1886, they rested from their labors and have since been supported at the county's expense.

"No better evidence of strict virginity
Was ever known in this vicinity."

Our Repartee.

"Tipster" writes: "For your 'Musical Sporting Notes' I wish to furnish the information that Encore ran fourth the other day in a race at the track in Saratoga, N. Y. So, as you see, not every Encore denotes success." We think the steed did nobly, for as a rule the Encore usually comes last.

Old but New.



When Halévy took Cherubini to hear one of his operas he asked the master at the end of the first act how he liked it. Cherubini made no reply. At the end of the second act Halévy again put the same question. Again there was no reply. "Vous ne me répondez point!" cried Halévy. "Que vous répondre?" answered Cherubini at length. "Voici deux heures que vous ne me dites rien."

Western Modesty.

"Among the nicest words we know," says the Rocky Mountain News, "are juxtaposition, nuance, hegira, and vouchsafe. . . . Nuance is to a musical critic what chiaroscuro (ah, there's some humdinger of a word, too!) is to the critic of pictures. We feel too bashful in the presence of that word nuance to speak of it. It is so very, very highbrow. We know a man who uses it in his musical criticisms and we would ask him what it means, only we know he doesn't know either." And what has our esteemed Rocky Mountain colleague to say about "tone-color"?

Oh, Listen to the Band.

George Fitch contributes to the American Magazine a beautiful piece of comic writing called "The Homeburg Marine

AN ARTISTIC SUCCESS.

Reproduced in MUSICAL COURIER by courtesy of Puck

...d." After lamenting the fact that Homeburg, unlike ... York, has very few opportunities to hear "soul-hoist-... music," George describes what their village band means to him and his fellow citizens. "There are only three names for a country band," says he; "if it isn't the Marine Band, it has to be the Military Band or the Silver Cornet Band." While he was writing his article, George boasts, he could hear the Homeburg Marine Band up over McMuggins' drug store (in the lodge room of the Modern Woodmen) practising Sousa's "Washington Post" march. Boldly George admits that "our band has practised the 'Washington Post' march for over twenty years, but while the band has altered greatly, the grand old piece shows no signs of wear and is as fresh and unconquerable as ever. . . . Usually they begin several times. . . . for a minute it's great . . . but it doesn't last . . . it's too good to be true. Ad Smith strikes a falsetto with his cornet and stops for wind; this rattles his partner, who can't carry the air alone to save him. Dobbs sits down on the wrong key in the bass. The tenors weaken, discouraged by the cornet, and everybody hesitates. A couple of clarionets lose the place and get to wandering around at random, creating terrible havoc. The altos stop, being in doubt. Ad recovers and launches out with terrific vim half a beat behind. There is a rally, but it is too late. You can hear fragments of five different keys, and presently everyone stops except Mahlon Brown, who plays the bass drum and always bangs away through fire or water until someone turns him off. . . . Some time during the evening, as a rule, the various sections get together on some passage and swim grandly through, every horn in perfect time and the parts blending like Mocha and Java. . . . I have an ambition. If ever I could become so famous and successful that when I went back to Homeburg to visit my proud and happy parents and stepped off of the 4:11 train, I should find the Homeburg Marine Band there to meet me, I would know that I had made good and I would be content. The only thing that encourages me in my ambition is that the band didn't come down to play when I went away."

If you like these excerpts, buy the Fitch article and read the rest of it. His account of the jealousies and quarrels among the band members is a true comical classic.

First Aid to Music.

Personally we like the Fitch writing a great deal better than that in Filson Young's new book, "More Mastersingers," wherein he describes Chopin's A flat impromptu as follows:

"A sensitive, impetuous heart goes on its way in lightness and a pretty sadness, a pretty lightness and a pretty sadness, now grave, now gay, but a beautiful singing thing, too full of life and movement to pause for very long or be sad for very long; eager and impetuous, soaring one moment, drooping the next, as though on tired wings, but filling the world about it with melody and sunshine. It opens to no more human power than the ordinary things about it; it is untouched, untroubled—until suddenly its song pauses, it becomes quiet, awed, gradually hushing itself in the presence of some unknown and approaching thing. That eager and unconscious lightness becomes conscious and listens, and waits, and holds its breath. From the surrounding world comes another voice—firm, dominating, troubling, neither gay nor sad, but grave with purpose, full of intention, full of moment and of destiny for the feminine voice that fluttered into silence at its approach. And suddenly the grave voice breaks into song, into melody, and the feminine voice, awakened to something new, answers it, breaks into new melody with it, sings a new and more soaring song, in which its own life and movement is mingled with the graver and stronger melody of the other voice. This double song rises in intensity, rises to fervor, rises to passion, rises to storm. And suddenly it breaks off——."

Which is more than Filson Young does, however, for he goes on and on, following the feminine and grave voice in all their tonal meanderings, singly and jointly. If he is able to find so much in Chopin's little A flat impromptu, we imagine that when Mr. Young gets ready to write about Strauss' "Heldenleben" or Brahms' C minor symphony, he will have to send his manuscript to the publisher in vans.

Reorganization.

Seated one day at the organ
I was weary and ill at ease,
For Lemare had been there before me
And changed all the parts but the keys.

LEONARD LIEBLING.

Arthur Claassen Reported Injured.

Arthur Claassen, the musical director, is reported to have been injured last week in an automobile accident down in Texas.

Mr. Claassen recently assumed the conductorship of both the Texas State Saengerfest and the Beethoven Society, of San Antonio, and has reorganized the San Antonio Symphony Orchestra. In these positions Mr. Claassen succeeds Carl Hahn, the pianist, who is now located in New York City.

The Bergeys at the Lincoln Memorial.

In one of the pictures reproduced herewith Theodore S. Bergey, vocal instructor, of Chicago, is seen looking at

MR. BERGEY, MRS. BERGEY (LEFT) AND A PUPIL AT LINCOLN MEMORIAL BUILDING.

Lincoln's cabin, which is harbored in the Memorial Building in Kentucky. In the other picture Mr. Bergey is seen in the center, Mrs. Bergey on his left and on his right is one of Mr. Bergey's pupils, who escorted the Bergeys on their automobile trip through the South.

THEODORE S. BERGEY AT LINCOLN'S CABIN.

Mr. Bergey has just returned to Chicago and looks forward to a very busy season for his school. Mrs. Bergey has charge of the piano department at the school.

Athletic Training for Singers.

BY GEORGE SWEET.

The greatest boon to the professional vocalist or opera singer, is perfect health, woman or man, especially so to the former, as a woman's extremely high strung and nervous nature suffers more keenly the trials of theatrical life and she should, through the years of preparation, attend to careful and proper physical training, not of course as strenuous as would her male associate, to render her fit for her first bow to a discriminating public.

Tennis and swimming are most beneficial, also a three to five mile walk every day. A woman can well understand that the training of a man is more severe and calculated to develop the muscles of his body for the more heroic requirements of his roles, viz., the neck muscles, shoulder, back and biceps, forearm and triceps. On the other hand, were she to develop the same muscular conditions it would mean the loss of all grace and beautiful lines, which comprehend woman's most wonderful asset, particularly for the stage.

To be sure, fencing and dancing are of great importance as they contribute to make one graceful, a most needed factor for the histrionic requirements. Swimming and tennis aid the wind—and while mentioning this, I would like to offer a suggestion relative to proper breathing for women.

A woman is, naturally, more delicately constructed than a man (except a suffragette, who is a hard-boiled proposition), and should avoid anything liable to strain her internally, and a simple and safe system of breathing can be followed by inhaling through a small medicine dropper; care should be taken to procure a dropper with the smaller end as narrow as possible, to prevent too strong a flow of cold air into the throat. Place the large end between the teeth after exhausting all air from the lungs, and compress the lips around it tightly, that no air can enter through the lips; close the nostrils by holding them between the thumb and forefinger, stand erect with chest depressed; observe the second hand on your watch and from any figure begin to inhale, as slowly as possible for twenty seconds; then exhale gradually for twenty seconds; attention must be given to the sensation of the breath entering the lowest lung cells. Repeat this exercise (at first) three times, allowing one minute between each inhalation, and stand before an open window, or where the air is pure. Continue this exercise three times daily; on rising in the morning or before breakfast, at noon, and before retiring at night, and continue for one month, increasing to twenty-five seconds the second month and five seconds each consecutive month until one can sustain for one minute.

I had one pupil from Kansas City—Miss Bass—who came to me in an extremely broken down physical condition, and who followed this principle faithfully for one year, and could sustain a tone while singing for one minute; she combined walking and medicine ball work in the Y. W. C. A. and reduced in weight from 180 pounds to about 135 pounds; she continued this exercise for several years and is now well and robust.

A man can obtain like results (after exhausting the breath) by placing the thumbs over the hips, the fingers pressing with all his strength on the abdominal muscles, inhaling very slowly, with same sensation of the air entering the lungs from the lower lung cells, repeating same exercise three times, allowing one minute between each inhalation, three times daily. The lips should be closed to a point where a pin's head could scarcely pass them.

To prove breath control in singing: After inhaling deeply, count the numbers on a sustained tone, singing from G to D one to twenty-five; then from one to thirty, so on to fifty; not so easy, but a system most beneficial.

These exercises must be patiently and faithfully performed to obtain satisfactory results, as I have found that most students, after a week or so, tire of the monotony in this most important detail, or continue at desultory periods and usually fail to materialize.

With the foregoing, I am simply leading up to the fact, with which most singers are unacquainted, that during the three, four or more years in physical preparation, as well as the cultivation of their voices for a public career, they have gained in health and strength, their mainstay for the, sometimes, very long seasons of engagements they are obliged to fill, and they should be cautioned that any great athletic exertion is bound to perceptibly affect the voice and consequently injure their condition for public work. I do not mean that they should desist from certain forms of light exercise, such as short walks and calesthenics to keep from becoming stiff, but one of the first rules we are taught is, "Un artista ha bisogno di riposo" (an artist needs rest). Drinking alcohol or wine and smoking should be religiously avoided, and eating heartily after a performance; a bowl of beef or chicken gelatine and a little dry bread are the best nourishment before retiring. Dinner should be eaten between three and four o'clock, and about one hour should be spent at table, eating slowly. A good, thick, rare steak without butter gravy, roast beef or roast or broiled chicken is the best food (preferably the beef), and eat also a little properly cooked boiled rice. Avoid soups and vegetables, which create mucous, don't drink water, coffee, or tea while eating, and don't eat any kind of dessert or sweets. Following this rule the singer will find his voice as clear as a bell during the performance, as the digestive organs have been given sufficient time to fulfil their functions and reinforce his vitality by the nourishment derived from the meat. Fried food, especially fish, should never be eaten. One should sleep one hour every day, about one o'clock in the afternoon. And on the day of the performance talking should be positively not indulged in.

Mme. Patti would receive no visitors or attend a rehearsal, nor would she converse. The great tenor Masini, whom I knew, rarely spoke, and asked the reason, would reply: "La mia voce è la mia capital" (my voice is my capital).

I am offering herewith my own experience while training and trust that it will interest and prove beneficial to

(Continued on page 42.)

EVERY LOVING PARENT WILL HAVE THE VOICE OF HER SON OR DAUGHTER CULTIVATED.

An Interview with Baernstein-Regneas.

"Mothers are realizing the great importance of having their children taught to sing, as the benefits derived from a course of study under a proper master are manifold," said the eminent New York vocal instructor, Joseph Baernstein Regneas, when interviewed by a representative of the MUSICAL COURIER.

"So many young folks nowadays are anemic, many have narrow chests and underdeveloped lungs. Some have formed a bad habit or are not sufficiently strong to walk erect without 'stoop' shoulders. A vast number are excessively nervous. There is nothing like the proper study of singing, which necessitates deep diaphragmatic breathing, to help these conditions.

"No accomplishment is so beautiful as to be able to sing. It is the very flower of all art, and, aside from the great joy it gives to the singer herself, her parents and friends, one receives better health, better appearance, healthier thoughts—one enters into the realm of better things and attracts to oneself persons 'more worth while.' One receives a broader view of things in general, becomes more loving and noble in nature, and the doors of homes and society are opened, which otherwise would have remained closed.

"The study of singing, therefore, if correctly taught, means to the young girl that, if she is weak or anemic, the deep diaphragmatic breathing will develop her lungs, improve her digestion, and necessarily give her a better quality of blood and more of it. It will make her walk straight, instead of stoop shouldered and slovenly, and greatly strengthen the heart and the lungs.

"If timid and backward, she will become more courageous and self assertive without losing in maidenly modesty, and, through a better mental balance, will be curbed any of that excessive precociousness sometimes found in the younger generation of today.

"Through singing does the speaking voice become more beautiful, mellow and agreeable, the articulation more distinct and correct; through a proper thinking will the face become illuminated and more attractive, the carriage of the body more graceful.

"I have heard mothers often remark: 'I would give anything if my Elsa could sing, but she cannot carry a tune.'

"This is a great error on the part of the parent, as in my long experience as singer and teacher I have never met a young person who can hear and speak whom I could not teach to sing.

"In school and at gatherings everybody can sing in the chorus, and if they know the piece they will sing correctly. Just those ingredients in one's makeup which will prevent an individual from doing alone what one can do in company with others are exactly the things which should be strengthened, corrected or eliminated to make the most of in every way.

"There is no question of 'Shall I arrange to have my son or daughter learn to sing,' as it is a duty no mother will overlook, and she has failed in her love and her duty if she does not take up the subject of singing directly the young person has acquired her 'three R's'—'Reading,' 'Riting' and 'Rithmetic.'

"The first question therefore is, 'At what age shall my son or daughter begin?'

"This cannot be answered by the parent, but a specialist should be consulted. The time to begin is not governed by years, but by the development of the child. Some may begin at the age of twelve, others not until fourteen or fifteen years of age, some even later.

"The second question is: 'How shall I select the proper instructor?' An absolute essential for a good singing teacher is that 'he must be a successful singer himself'—one whose own field of usefulness has not been limited, but whose experience has brought him in contact with other lands and differing ideas, and who himself has successfully sung in the home, in the church, in concert, in oratorio, in opera. This will insure the necessary knowledge; but it is not given to every one to impart to others that knowledge which he himself has and uses in his own singing—therefore one must be guided further by the results obtained as a teacher. If the instructor has had the necessary experience as above cited—years of experience as an instructor, and his pupils sing well, the parent may feel safe in placing her son or daughter under his tuition.

"When selecting an instructor, the whole question should be: 'Who is the best vocal instructor I can find?'—and that is the person to work with. If one is limited financially, it should never be 'How much does each lesson cost?' but 'How much do I wish to spend for tuition this year?'—and then take as many lessons from that 'best vocal instructor' as your money will admit. One good lesson is of great value, whereas many poor lessons are of no value.

"While it is at all times of the greatest importance to have the best instruction in 'voice culture,' there is no time so important as at the very beginning. The vocal apparatus is so delicate in its nature and construction that when once abused it can never recover the velvety quality that it perhaps was capable of; like the enamel of the teeth or the bloom on the apple, Nature never replaces some things.

"Yet again, though the vocal cords be delicate in their mechanism, if properly used, and not abused, they will last many years. Like a glass bottle, which, properly handled, will last forever, but given one slight touch against the sharp edge of a stone, and its usefulness is gone.

"One should select a singing master with the same care as a physician. It is far better to pay a specialist $100 for a single consultation and get advice that corrects the trouble, than to pay $1 a visit and have a poor physician call 100 times, and then perhaps be in poorer health than before."

A Cure for Musical Evils.

Chicago, Ill., June 30, 1914.

To the Musical Courier.

With the trumpet call "Help the American musician" sounding from all parts of this country, various means have been suggested not only to help the musician individually, but also to put music on a higher plane than it occupies at the present.

These efforts are not only to be appreciated but strongly to be encouraged by every true and sincere musician, music lover and layman.

These very efforts, however, prove that a great many people have awakened to the fact that there are many individuals and schools teaching music in its various branches which are absolutely unfit to do so either through lack of talent or of training on the part of their teachers.

Sharp criticisms are made recklessly in the stupid part of the music press that our pupils and even our teachers go abroad to study and coach when they could obtain the same training here; also that foreign artists are engaged when Americans could take their places with like satisfaction, and better. Almost in the same breath comes the propaganda for "standardizing" music in this country!

It seems to me that there is only one answer to all these perplexing questions, for we can find a remedy only when we find the root of the evil, and so I will point out the cause of existing conditions and then suggest the remedy.

No one can prevent pupils and teachers from going abroad to study music if they have the feeling that such training could not be secured here; therefore it is necessary for us to dissipate such a feeling.

While there are splendid teachers and musicians in America, it cannot be denied that the system of instruction abroad also is to be commended.

Many teachers in this country, however, are too lax in their methods, are not strict either in discipline or in the selection of the material given the student.

It is also true that the American teacher encounters the greatest impediment in the perpetual demand to "graduate" pupils in the shortest time possible. Hence we have an astounding number of graduates, the majority of whom are not fit to pursue careers either as teachers or as public performers.

When these impediments are eliminated, teachers will be better able to ground the pupil in the fundamentals, and their efforts will be rewarded by better results, which will convince students that study here is possible under the most favorable conditions, and there will be no necessity for going abroad to study.

At the same time, the American people at large will give their own teachers and artists opportunities that they do not enjoy at present, and eventually foreign countries will recognize American artists as unequivocally as America does foreign artists, for music is and should always be universal.

Now, how are these things to be accomplished? Will standardization do it? Yes and no.

The proper kind of standardization will uplift music, so that the best results could be obtained. But some kinds of standardization will not—emphatically not.

That an examination is not a test for actual knowledge obtained in a practical manner has been long ago proved, and in music it would be still more disastrous, for any one with a little knowledge could choose and study up [illegible] of pieces in as many years and pass a supposedly satisfactory examination entitling one to teach [illegible] in public!

And how ludicrous it would be for our most eminent musicians to be examined by like or inferior ones!

Then arises the question: "Who is to do the standardizing, and will such standardization be effective and accepted by the music schools and individual teachers at large, and what will happen if such standards are not accepted by them?"

Can the various methods and principles by which music is being taught at the present time be reconciled to one another?

All people must realize, and musicians do, that, while it is being said that there is "one right method of instruction," nevertheless if a pupil changes teachers, the method is invariably changed likewise. The reason is, that music as yet has not been put on a scientific basis, hence arise all kinds of arguments and differences. Therefore it is wise to think before taking drastic action and creating a condition worse than the existing one.

I humbly suggest to those that unselfishly are trying to raise the musical standard, and to those who desire that American artists gain proper recognition here and elsewhere, as a definite solution of the various problems as heretofore stated, the founding of at least four national schools of music, to be located in the North, South, East and Western parts of this country.

These schools to have complete equipments and first class teachers who are citizens of this country, and they to invite the co-operation of other accepted musicians, all of whom shall form a body known as the "Congress of American Musicians and Teachers." This congress shall devise a uniform system of study in the various branches of musical art and shall by legislation have the sole right to confer diplomas and licenses on any school or individual desiring to teach musical subjects.

Any school or individual teacher that desires to be recognized by this congress, or that possesses such license, shall be required to follow the courses of study as laid out by the national schools and submit their students to tests at certain periods of the school year by an examining committee appointed by the congress.

Thus a standard based on the most sound and advanced principles would control musical education, and not only compel the respect of foreign countries but also obviate the necessity of pupils and teachers going abroad to secure the necessary prestige.

The realization of such a perfect system of study also would tend to eliminate all incompetent individual teachers and schools of music, and leave the field to those who are absolutely fit to pursue the profession of music in its highest meaning!

Very truly yours,

SIMON BUCHHALTER.

England's Marching Song.

[From the New York Times.]

"It's a Long Way to Tipperary" has become the marching song of the British army, according to London dispatches. It is not widely known in this country. The words are:

Up to mighty London came an Irishman one day
As the streets are pav'd with gold, sure ev'ryone was gay;
Singing songs of Piccadilly, Strand, and Leicester Square,
Till Paddy got excited, then he shouted to them there:

CHORUS.

It's a long way to Tipperary,
It's a long way to go;
It's a long way to Tipperary
To the sweetest girl I know.
Good-bye, Piccadilly, Farewell, Leicester Square,
It's a long, long way to Tipperary,
But my heart's right there.

Paddy wrote a letter to his Irish Molly O',
Saying, "Should you not receive it, write and let me know;
If I make mistakes in spelling, Molly dear," said he,
"Remember it's the pen that's bad, don't lay the blame on me."

CHORUS.

Molly wrote a neat reply to Irish Paddy O',
Saying, "Mike Maloney wants to marry me, and so
Leave the Strand and Piccadilly, or you'll be to blame,
For love has fairly drove me silly, hoping you're the same."

Etelka Gerster Gardini in Italy.

Etelka Gerster Gardini, the well known vocal teacher, announces that she will remain in Bologna, Italy, until peace is declared among the clashing nations of Europe.

BOSTON TO HAVE CONCERTS FOR THE PEOPLE.

Series of Sunday Afternoon Entertainments Planned at Popular Prices—Bostonians Return from Europe—Worcester to Have an Orchestra.

Boston, Mass., August 29, 1914.

Amid all this general musical uncertainty this office is especially pleased to make definite announcement of a new course of concerts to be held in this city the coming season. These are a series of Sunday afternoon concerts by artists of international reputation to be given at popular prices and are called "Concerts for the People," making especial appeal to wage earners, music lovers and students.

When one looks at the scale of prices (15 cents, 25 cents, 50 cents, 75 cents) and then at the array of splendid soloists offered, there can be no doubt of the immense success of such a series, provided the people for whom it is intended make use of their exceptional opportunities. With this end in view the Boston Music School Settlement, under whose auspices the series is given, has engaged the Scollay Square Olympia Theatre as the most accessible place to the majority of the people and are giving the affair widespread publicity, both through the distribution of preliminary circulars as well as in the newspaper columns.

In securing the following list of artists the organizers of the concerts were greatly assisted by Gertrude F. Cowen, the New York manager, whose interest and zeal in behalf of the scheme were of great practical value. Appended are the dates of the concerts with the artists engaged for each: October 25, Maud Powell, violinist, and Felix Fox, pianist; November 8, Arrigo Serato, violinist, and George Mitchell, tenor; November 22, Tina Lerner, pianist, and the Swedish Singing Society Harmoni, Gustaf Sundelius, conductor; December 6, Jeanne Gerville-Reache, contralto, and the Hoffmann String Quartet.

HOME AGAIN.

Returning to Boston this week from the scene of conflict were these Europeans wanderers: Daisy Green, well known pianist and accompanist; Richard Czerwonky, former Bostonian and now concertmaster of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, and W. E. Walters, press representative of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

STRUBE TO CONDUCT ORCHESTRA IN WORCESTER.

For a long time it has been the ambition of Paul Hultman, the extremely capable young pianist and pedagogue who established the successful Hultman-McQuaid School of Music in Worcester, Mass., to organize a permanent orchestra in that city. In this connection he has been negotiating with Gustav Strube, the eminent composer and present member of the Peabody Conservatory faculty, for his services as conductor of the organization. Many obstacles, of course, prevented, chief among them being the great expense connected with bringing this noted musician from Baltimore to Worcester for the required number of rehearsals. Thanks to Mr. Hultman's untiring zeal and effort, however, this has finally been accomplished and plans arranged for twenty rehearsals to be held on Saturday mornings from 10 o'clock until noon. At these rehearsals the orchestra, whose membership is open to players of either sex who pass the personal examination of Mr. Strube and Rudolph Nagel, of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will study the great classics with the ultimate object of developing an orchestra capable of giving symphony concerts in their native city.

BLANCHE FREEDMAN.

This Is Djane Lavoie-Herz.

In the snapshots Djane Lavoie-Herz is seen standing under a lemon tree, and beside a picturesque, vine covered wall. The real significance of the pictures is that they were taken in Capri, Italy, last year, and that the brilliant Canadian pianist is glad she is not in Europe just now.

THE WALL. THE LEMON TREE.

As a matter of fact, she may be found at present in Toronto, her Canadian home, where she is preparing diligently for the tour which M. H. Hanson is booking for her in the United States. The series of concerts will open early in the autumn with appearances in Toronto, Montreal, Ottawa, and other Canadian cities.

Katharine Goodson's Triumphs.

Katharine Goodson, the famous pianist, has been called "Paderewski in petticoats." Born in England at Watford, she played in the English provinces as a child. At the age of twelve she went to the Royal Academy of Music in London, where she studied the piano for six years with Oscar Beringer. She played at the public concerts of the Academy and in 1892 went to Vienna, where she studied with Leschetizky for four years.

It was soon after Katharine Goodson left Vienna that she returned to her native country, and at her first appearance in London took the public by storm. Some of the critics exclaimed: "At last, a temperamental pianist of English birth."

Winning success in her own country, Miss Goodson visited the Continent of Europe, where she achieved triumphs in all of the musical strongholds. The Berlin music critics have repeatedly praised her without stinting their words. On one of her visits to that city she played for the Emperor and Empress and made a great impression on their majesties. The Goodson tours have taken the pianist many times through Germany, Austria, France, Belgium, Holland, Italy, Norway, Sweden, Finland, Australia and England. In addition to these countries, Katharine Goodson has made five extensive tours in Canada and the United States, where, in 1907, she made her debut at a pair of the Boston Symphony concerts in Boston under Dr. Karl Muck. She has played under nearly every great musical conductor of the world and in each case the rare poetic gifts of the pianist and her wonderful musicianship made a profound impression.

Throughout Europe, Australia and the New World Katharine Goodson has succeeded in electrifying her audiences. Many men have tried to define the extraordinary gifts of this English pianist, and perhaps one of the briefest and strongest endorsements expressed about her came from Arthur Nikisch, when, after playing with him at one of the Gewandhaus concerts in Leipsic, he is reported to have said: "I have known many musicians in my life, many soloists, but the true artists I can count on the fingers of one hand—Ysaye, Paderewski, d'Albert—and to these names I now add yours, Miss Goodson."

Red Cross Benefit at the Century.

The directors of the Century Opera have voted to donate to the Red Cross the proceeds of all tickets sold at its two opening performances. Accordingly the receipts from the opening performance of "Romeo and Juliet" will go to the benefit of the Red Cross of the Allies—England, France, Russia and Belgium.

The receipts from the opening performance of "Carmen" will go to the Red Cross of Germany and Austria.

The Century Opera opens Monday, September 14, with "Romeo and Juliet" and on the following night, Tuesday, the first performance of "Carmen" will be given.

Everett's Voice Recorded.

George Everett, the baritone, has made a very successful disc for the Victor Talking Machine Company, but will not record any of his songs until a later date.

Some Improvement.

Observer heard one Philadelphia man say to another in the Broad Street Station:

"I hear your wife has been taking singing lessons."

"Yes," was the reply.

"Well, what do you think of her voice since it's been trained?"

"It's no better—but there's a lot more of it."—Houston (Tex.) Chronicle.

HELEN BLAIN CONTRALTO
Address: Usual Agents
Residence: 29 Upper Baker St., Regent's Park, London, N.W.
Telephone 471 Mayfair

YEATMAN GRIFFITH SOLE TEACHER OF FLORENCE MACBETH
PRIMA DONNA COLORATURA OF THE CHICAGO OPERA COMPANY
Studios: Holland House, 143 Maida Vale, London

MURIEL LITTLE (Leipzig Diploma)
Voice Production Taught on Method of ELENA GERHARDT
2 Wellington Road, N. W

The most eminent Composers, best Songs and Song Cycles are to be found in the Catalogue of
BOOSEY & CO. NEW YORK and LONDON
FREE on request. THEMATICS of latest important additions
9 East 17th Street New York

HERMANN KLEIN
Teacher of Some of the Most Successful Singers Now Before the Public
Co-Editor, Garcia's "Hints on Singing"; Author, New English Version of "Carmen"; Translator, Metzler's Mastersongs, "Lieder in English."
BECHSTEIN HALL STUDIOS, LONDON
Private address, 40 Ave. Road, Regent's Park, N.W.

able: Keynote London
CONCERT DIRECTION
DANIEL MAYER
Established 1890
Chatham House
George Street
Hanover Square, W.,
LONDON, ENGLAND
ENGLAND'S PREMIER AGENCY

HEINRICH GEBHARD Pianist
Management: GEORGE WHIPPLE
162 Tremont Street :: :: :: Boston, Mass

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. HUBBARD
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
SYMPHONY CHAMBERS BOSTON.

IRMA SEYDEL
America—Entire Season 1914-1915
Address THEODORE SEYDEL 70 Westland Avenue, Boston

GEORGE EVERETT
BARITONE—Boston and Covent Garden Opera Companies
In London Until July 28,1914
Address Frederick M. Waterman, 177 Huntington Avenue, Boston

FELIX FOX PIANIST
Summer Classes June 8 to July 25
STEINERT HALL ANNEX - - BOSTON, MASS.

WILLARD FLINT BASS
Soloist Nine Times, HANDEL and HAYDEN SOCIETY
246 Huntington Avenue, Boston
Management: Briggs Musical Bureau - Chicago

CLARA TIPPETT
TEACHER OF SINGING
321 Pierce Building - - - Boston, Mass.

Priscilla WHITE Teacher of Singing
602 Pierce Building
BOSTON - MASS.

Sorrentino and the "Bobby."

Umberto Sorrentino, the popular Italian-American tenor, sends the MUSICAL COURIER a snapshot of himself taken "before the war," in England, in front of the police station, opposite Covent Garden Theatre, London, to be explicit. He asked the "bobby," during a royal procession, "Which is the King?" whereupon the policeman pointed to Sorrentino himself, and said "You are the King" (of tenors, of course).

UMBERTO SORRENTINO AND A LONDON "BOBBY."

The tenor has gone to Montecatini foa time, and expects to return to America refreshed, ready for his busy season.

Artha Williston's Rising Success.

Holyoke, Mass., August 29, 1914.

Music lovers of this vicinity have been watching with the keenest interest and pride the steady rise of a young local singer, Mrs. Artha Williston, of Holyoke, who is fast winning an enviable reputation in the highest musical circles of New York and elsewhere. Many local people have seen the remarkable development of a pure, clear, sweet and very high soprano voice, from the days when, hardly more than a girl in her teens, she charmed her audiences. Whether it was the simple ballads that every one knows, or the beautiful "Elsa's Dream," that seems to fit Mrs. Williston's personality so well, or arias of a sacred nature, there was always unfailing delight and inspiration to the listener. Those who attended the concerts where she sang—too numerous to mention—at the Second Congregational Church, Holyoke, at Mt. Holyoke College, in Springfield—always came away with the same pleasure, after hearing the glorious burst of song. But this year Mrs. Williston has attained even more signal success in a wider field; she has sung at several concerts in New York this season, and at each one was received with overwhelming enthusiasm, so that this brilliant young singer is now well on her path to fame. After a recent concert at Carnegie Hall, New York, where Mrs. Williston sang with the Ellery Band, several offers were made her to sing in other cities. One, which she accepted, is the Portland Music Festival, long famous for its fine music. Such singers as Nordica, Melba and Schumann-Heink usually take part in this event. Mrs. Williston is to be the soprano soloist in October, on one of the festival nights, in the oratorio of "Elijah."

Mrs. Williston's home has been in Holyoke, her education was received at Mt. Holyoke College, from which she graduated with B. A. degree. It was there that she specialized in languages—a valuable acquisition now in her rendering of the beautiful French, German and Italian songs that she delights her hearers with.

Mrs. Williston's first teacher of singing was Prof. Thomas Cushman, of this city and Boston. She is at present studying with Francis Stewart, of New York, teacher of the eminent basso of the Metropolitan Opera House, the late Putnam Griswold. Mrs. Williston's concert manager, Antonia Sawyer, is also a New England woman. In the career upon which Mrs. Williston is so happily started she has the best wishes of her hosts of friends, who will follow the ascendency of her star to its rapidly rising heights of brilliancy, where her marvelous voice, of crystal-like purity, her fair type of beauty, and her sweet and gracious personality cannot fail of ultimate success.

A particularly charming evening, when Mrs. Williston's many admirers had another opportunity of hearing her to best advantage, was just last week (Wednesday), on the occasion of Prof. W. C. Hammond's 593rd organ recital, in the Second Congregational Church, Holyoke. Mrs. Williston was accompanied by the magnificent Second Church organ and echo organ, by the piano, played by John Clark, and by cello and violin, the two last mentioned instruments ably played by the Janscrs, of this city. The combination of voice and instruments was of rare beauty and grandeur. Mrs. Williston's first selection, "O Sleep, Why Dost Thou Leave Me?" of Handel's, had all the calm beauty and reflectiveness of the pure classic school, devoid of passion, but of a noble loftiness. The second, "Cara Selve," also of Handel's, sung with the soft Italian words that but bring out the musical thought the better, is an exquisite love song, exceedingly difficult to sing, with its high sustained notes, and gradual passing from one to the other of purest tones, but sung by Mrs. Williston most charmingly. Quite different was the Bizet "Agnus Dei," from an old Provencal theme, full of the warm passion and arduous temperament of the southern French. The words of the Agnus Dei," with their earnest supplication for mercy, fit well into the intensity of the musical theme. Mrs. Williston excelled no less in the "Ave Maria" of Bach-Gounod, the noblest prayer that was ever written, rising to heights of sublimity in its cry, "Mortis nostræ," and falling back to the pleading final "Amen." All hearers were thrilled by this last selection; one thought of the genius of Bach, who could conceive of such a wonderful accompaniment, and of the genius of Gounod, who conceived such a beautiful melody to fit the accompaniment, and one felt grateful that a young local singer had arisen to make these live again.

Music of the Chinese.

Chinese music does not entirely lack admirers among occidentals. There are, it appears, trained musicians of our own kind who seriously profess uncertainty whether the Chinese have not really advanced beyond us in music.

One authority has pointed out that the Chinese were the first in the history of music to develop a system of octaves, a circle of fifths and various other harmonical technics, and these in the days when our ancestors had not even evolved the simplest forms of melody. While no one has, apparently, contended that we shall finally arrive at an understanding of and a liking for something that shall approach the Chinese "harmonious discords," there are not wanting those who claim to have discovered among the musicians and lovers of music a steadily increasing sensitiveness to harmonies, the existence of which was formerly unknown.—Holyoke, Mass., Telegram.

European Study in America

A Faculty which includes artists and teachers of international fame.

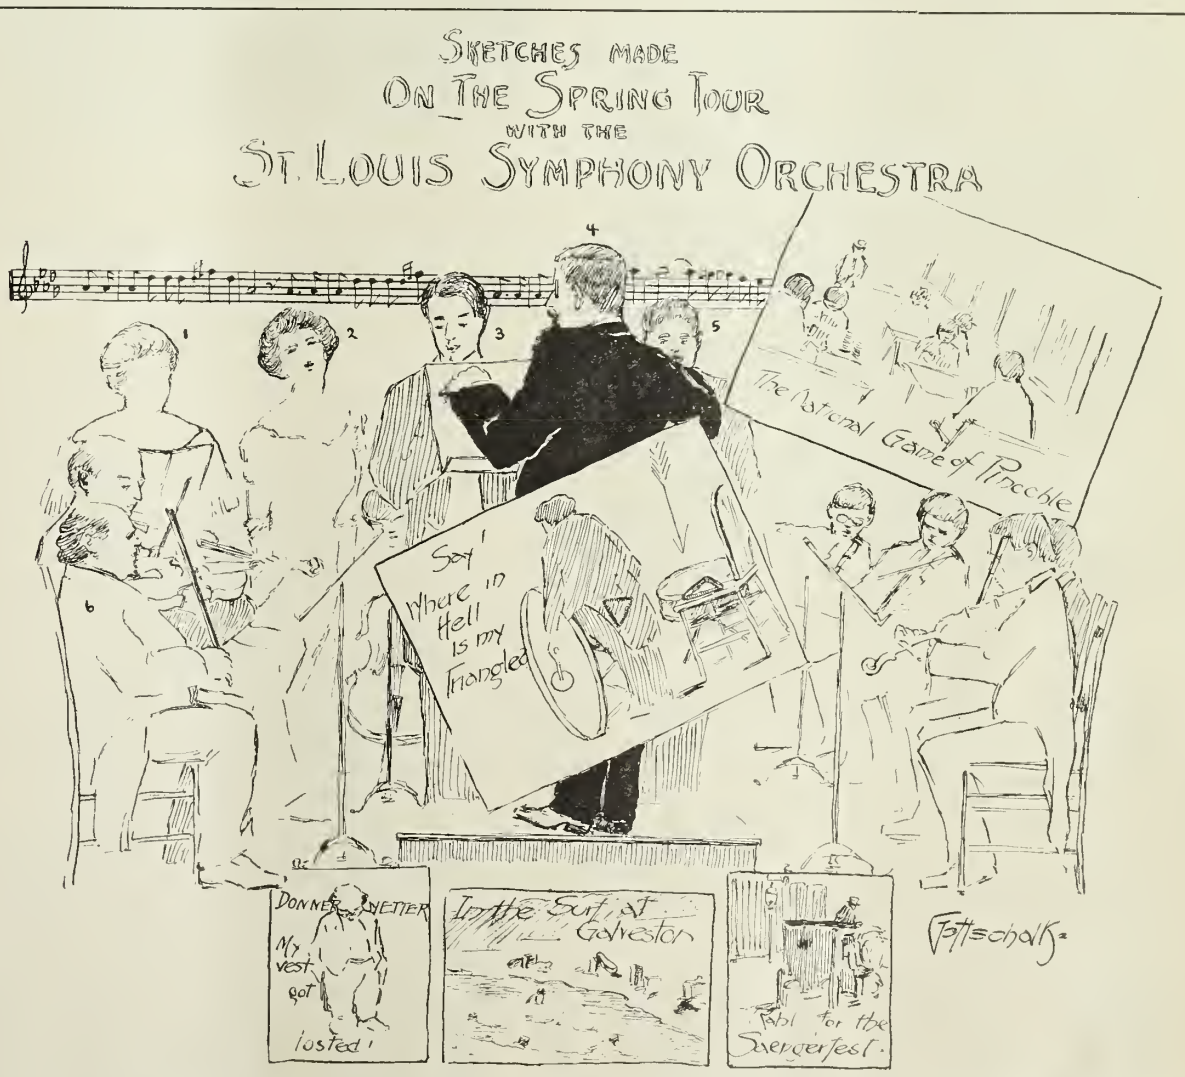
A Course of Study inaugurating an unusually high standard of musical education.

AN Environment making for individual inspiration and a broad esthetic culture

For Catalogue and Dormitory Reservations, Address the Secretary, Box 7

The von Ende School of Music
44 West 85th Street, New York

FALL TERM OPENS SEPTEMBER 14th



The Magic Fire.

Mme. Gadski was standing in the wings during "Die Walküre," waiting for her last entrance. It will be remembered that her father, Wotan, puts a spell of sleep upon her and calls on the fire god, Loki, to surround her with the protective fires.

One of the bystanders puts a humorous question to Mme. Gadski, who was leaning on her shield: "What do you think about," said he, "as you lie there—what you are going to have for supper?"

Mme. Gadski's face became very grave. "No," she said, "I can only think of one thing, and the thought always recurs to me. Let me tell you. I was singing this part in Baltimore some years ago. My daughter, Charlotte, was then very young, almost a baby. As I lay down and the flames began to surround me, a child's voice, agonized, bewildered, tortured, rang through the house. 'They are burning up my mother. They——' Then the child stopped suddenly, as if a hand had been clapped over its mouth. It was Lotte, who had been taken to the theatre without my knowledge."

Mme. Gadski paused a while and then proceeded: "And to this day I never act that last scene in 'Die Walküre' without hearing Lotte's passionate outcry."—New York Telegraph.

The accompanying clever cartoon shows: No. 1, Mrs. Franklyn Knight, soprano; 2, Marie Sundelius, contralto; 3, Arthur Hackett, tenor; 4, Max Zach, conductor; 5, Marion Green, basso, and 6, Hugo Ulk, concertmaster. The cartoons were drawn by Max Gottschalk, violinist.

HOWARD WELLS
PIANIST AND TEACHER
Authorized representative of
LESCHETIZKY
KUFSTEINER, ST. 6 BERLIN W., GERMANY

ELEANOR HAZZARD
PEOCOCK
(SOPRANO)
Exclusive Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON
437 FIFTH AVENUE - - - NEW YORK CITY

OLGA AND HELENE CASSIUS
Vocal Instruction
Pupils prepared for the operatic and concert stage. Specialties: Placing of ruined voices, rectifying of wrong methods of breathing by articulation of consonants and voice inflection, and fundamental building of speaking voice. Send for Olga Cassius' "Die Erzieuhung der Stimme und Atmung."
Studio: Prager Str. 35, Berlin, W.

MAURICE VERA KAPLUN
ARONSON
PIANIST-PEDAGOG CONCERT-PIANISTE
BERLIN, W. BOZENER ST. 8

VICTOR HEINZE
Send for free booklet "Studying Music Abroad"
Pianist and Teacher Most modern principles. Thorough artistic education. Eminently successful.
PETER VISCHER STR. 19 BERLIN-FRIEDENAU

VITTORIO MORATTI
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
For four years the only assistant of the late G. B. LAMPERTI
Authorized representative of his method
BERLIN W., MOTZ ST. 53

GEORGE FERGUSSON
BARITONE
VOCAL INSTRUCTOR
Augsburger St., 64 Berlin W., Germany

SUMMER CLASS FOR THE
LESCHETIZKY METHOD
UNDER INSTRUCTION OF
MRS. POTTER-FRISSELL
IN NEW SCHANDAU-OSTRAU, SAXON SWITZERLAND, GERMANY
Address Villa 6, as above.
Class continues until October 15, 1914

King Clark Studios
Kurfürstendamm 63, Berlin, W.
Cable Address: KINGARK, BERLIN

Cadman in Colorado.

Charles Wakefield Cadman has been entertaining guests at his cabin near Estes Park, Col., where the composer is spending the summer. The persons in the group snapshot are, reading from left to right: Mrs. Cadman, Charles' mother; Charles, his cousin, and Tsianina Redfeather, Indian mezzo-soprano, with whom he has been giving recitals. They will open their season late in October, at Kalamazoo, Mich., with three engagements before the State Teachers' Association. The other picture shows the picturesque interior of the Cadman cabin.

CADMAN'S CABIN.

CHARLES WAKEFIELD CADMAN AND PRINCESS TSIANINA REDFEATHER.

How We Speak.

Omaha, Neb., August 20, 1914.

To the Musical Courier:

The lesson we learn from foreign intercourse is the continual reminder of the necessity of pronouncing the vowel of the word or syllable. We call it prolonging the vowel, but that is because of our narrow way of looking at the matter. We say, 'The foreigners prolong the vowel,' but that is, strictly speaking, not true. They do not prolong it, they utter it, they sound it, they pronounce it.

We neglect it, we slight it, we ignore it, and so, when we hear persons speak who do not sin as we do in the matter, we say or we assume that they are at fault, that they exaggerate, whereas they are normal and we are abnormal. To illustrate: A man who has been working in a cellar when he emerges into daylight thinks that the light is very strong, is unbearable and unnatural, while the truth is that the light is normal and he has been in an abnormal condition.

So with pronunciation; those who do not see the beauty of a language think that those who pronounce well are exaggerating, are abnormal, and that they themselves are normal.

To those who live in a community in the West it may seem useless to try to do anything along the line of preserving the purity of the language, but they who work along that line must remember that every effort is successful. They will meet with discouragement, but never with defeat; they will be opposed, but never deposed; and they must never forget that there is always a strong coterie of people who believe in and agree with them, who are supporting them and fighting for them, even though they are not known and their efforts are unperceived. There always has been, and there always will be, this unknown band of supporters for any good idea; it never fails. There are always the "seven thousand who have never bowed the knee to Baal."

Let the man who is working for the future, for the truth, in any line be careful that he does not insist on his own personality being recognized. There the mistake lies. No great personality has ever lived who did not drown himself in his devotion to his ideal. Hence and thus he has arrived at the fruition of his idea, and hence and thus only. And the ripening of his idea has been his own recompense, while the world has later on crowned him, proving again the truth of the ancient saying, "He that loseth his life shall find it." THOS. J. KELLEY.

Praise for Rebecca Davidson.

Rebecca Davidson, young American pianist, has been the recipient of many endorsements, a few of which follow:

AS SOLOIST WITH NEW YORK SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.
October 18, 1913.

Miss Davidson gave a remarkable performance of the Saint-Saëns G minor concerto. (Signed) WALTER DAMROSCH.

February 5, 1914.

I do not remember of anyone of her age doing such finished work. Many who listened to her performance think her the greatest pianist I have ever introduced in Paterson.

(Signed) C. M. WISKE,
Dir. Paterson Festival, etc.

April 23, 1914.

There was in her playing a youthful dash and vigor, coupled with a clearness and technic that was most refreshing. Rarely have I seen our audience of over 1,500 so enthusiastic.

(Signed) WALTER L. BOGERT,
Mus. Dir., People's Institute, New York.

Carl Flesch Coming in October.

Carl Flesch, the eminent Hungarian violinist, who has been passing the summer with his family at Zandvoort, Holland, arrives in New York early in October for a concert tour lasting the entire season. It was the original intention of Flesch to appear in America only during the months of January and February. War conditions in Europe have changed his plans, and when the early arrival of the violinist was hinted at, immediate bookings appeared. Inasmuch as several of the great violinists are at the front with their regiments, Carl Flesch may be one of the few foreign violinists who will concertize in America this coming season.

Arthur Shattuck Is Safe in Paris.

Arthur Shattuck, the American pianist, has cabled his managers, Haensel & Jones, that the war has not yet disturbed his Parisian home, and further declares that he has read more war news via cablegrams from America than printed in the daily newspapers of Paris. Mr. Shattuck will arrive in New York in December and his concert tour will begin the first week of January.

Mme. Matzenauer Will Come in October.

Margarete Matzenauer, the noted contralto of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will arrive in New York, October 20. Prior to her concert tour Mme. Matzenauer will make a series of talking machine records. Her first concert appearance this coming season will be in Houston, Tex., October 27.

Steinway Studios, Berlin
Berlin, S. W. Bergmann St. 102
Very accessible, modern, sound-proof studios with Steinway Grands for rent. For terms apply to warerooms
STEINWAY & SONS
Koniggratzer St. 6, :: :: :: :: Berlin, W., 9

RUDOLF BERGER
FAMOUS TENOR of the Metropolitan Opera Company
Available for Concerts
May and June, 1915
Management: R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway - - New York

Mme. Valeri at Neponsit.

Delia M. Valeri, the well known New York vocal teacher, is spending a part of each week at Neponsit, L. I., where she has a summer home. With her are a number of her pupils, who are continuing their studies throughout the summer and at the same time enjoying the company of Mme. Valeri at this pleasant place.

MME. VALERI AND SEVERAL OF HER PUPILS AT NEPONSIT, L. I.
Top row, left to right: Ethelyn White, Delia M. Valeri, teacher; Jole Pastori. Lower row, left to right: Lola Jenkins and Lucy O. Bash.

The accompanying picture shows Mme. Valeri with four of her pupils. One of these pupils, Jole Pastori, a San Francisco girl, will soon leave for Italy to make her debut.

Rudolph Ganz Says He's Coming.

This picture of Rudolph Ganz was taken on August 1. He writes that he is coming to America to fill his contract f he can possibly get a sailing, even if he has to go by way of Panama or Iceland.

RUDOLPH GANS AND HIS FAMILY AT CLASENS, AUGUST 1.

Immediately on the call of the army in Switzerland, Mr. Ganz went to Zurich and presented himself. He had not been in active service for seventeen years so they did not accept him, but he has left himself at their disposal. He has two brothers who are on the border now, and all his other relatives are wearing the uniform.

At a sale of manuscripts and various curiosities in Germany, a number of interesting autographs of Liszt, including the ballad of "Loreley," sold for £100. On the other hand, a Wagner autograph of "The Death of Isolde," went for £20, a low price explained by the poor state of the MS. and the lack of publicity. The end of a cigar, the last smoked by Liszt, brought sixpence!—London Musical News.

CARLOTTA PATTI.

A Carlotta Patti Memory.

An interesting old photograph (date unascertainable) of Carlotta Patti is shown herewith, taken from an old copy of Le Monde Musical (Paris) and long in the possession of Alexander Nakutin, who very kindly has loaned the picture to the MUSICAL COURIER. Carlotta Patti, sister of Adelina, was born in Florence, 1840, and died in Paris, 1889. Her early youth was spent in New York. At first a pianist, she later showed remarkable vocal talent and became a concert singer, as lameness prevented her from following the operatic career. Her debut was made in New York in 1861, where her coloratura art won especial praise. Later she married the cellist De Munck and made concert tours with him.

VIDA
LLEWELLYN
PIANIST
In America 1914-1915

. . . "The pianist has at her command a sonorous and refined tone and a very remarkable technic."
—Berliner Borsen Courier.

New York Recital, November 14th
Aeolian Hall

CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue New York City

News from Paris.

Miss Deverell, proprietress and directress of the Deverell School, which is located at 9 Rue Chaillot, Paris, writes that she has just received a letter from her attorney in Paris saying that her house, since it is next door to the American Embassy, may be requisitioned for government purposes. Miss Deverell wrote at once to place at the disposal anything she had which might aid stranded Americans in Paris. Photographs of the school are here shown.

HOME OF THE DEVERELL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS,
Next to the American Embassy, Paris.

AN INTERIOR VIEW OF DEVERELL SCHOOL.

Sara Heineman Marooned in London.

Sara Heineman, the mezzo soprano, is one of the American singers now marooned in London. Mme. Heineman was booked to return to this country on the steamship Olympic, August 19, but the sailing of that boat was cancelled. She will come as soon as she can secure steamship accommodations.

SARA HEINEMAN.

Alice Nielsen?

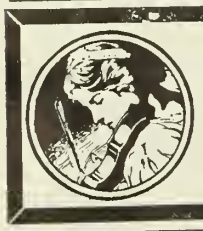
Certainly this is Alice Nielsen, of the Boston Opera Company. Manager Charles L. Wagner took the photograph while the prima donna soprano was "taking a few runs" preparatory to her fall concert season. The picture was taken on Ben Hampton's farm, at Pawling, N. Y. He and Mr. Wagner are neighbors.

ALICE NIELSEN TAKING A FEW RUNS PREPARATORY TO HER FALL CONCERT SEASON.

Down in the Mouth.

"What the matter?" a colleague asked of the advertising manager, says the Topeka Journal.

"Matter enough! The fools have placed Mme. Soprano's testimonial for a cold cure on the same page with the announcement that she had a sore throat and couldn't sing."
—Houston (Tex.) Journal.



D. W. Rootham will have been conductor of the Bristol (England) Madrigal Society for fifty seasons, this autumn, his first appearance in that capacity dating from 1864. It is proposed to present him with a suitable memorial.—Exchange.

ADA SODER-HUECK
THE EMINENT GERMAN CONTRALTO,
famous for her correct Voice Placement and Tone Development, is open for a limited number of engagements. Singers prepared for Church, Concert, Opera. Celebrated Garcia Method taught.
Metropolitan Opera House, 1425 Broadway, New York Phone 6221 Bryant

Charles BOWES Vocal Instruction
Returning to New York in October
Address: Care of Musical Courier

MARGARET SHIRLEY
Soprano
Available for Concerts: Recitals, Musicales
IRISH BALLADS A SPECIALTY
Exclusive Management: ANNIE FRIEOBERG, Metropolitan Opera House Bldg., New York

TINA LERNER
Distinguished Russian Pianist
FOURTH AMERICAN TOUR 1914-15 NOW BOOKING
Management, Loudon Charlton, Carnegie Hall, New York. MASON & HAMLIN PIANO

HELEN WARE
Exclusive Manager, Laszlo Schwartz

MADAME ANITA RIO
CELEBRATED AMERICAN PRIMA DONNA SOPRANO
after six years of operatic successes in Europe, will return to this country in September for Concert and Oratorio Engagements. :: :: :: :: ::
Management - - MUSIC LEAGUE OF AMERICA,
HOWARD E. POTTER, Business Manager
AEOLIAN HALL - - - NEW YORK

MME. MARIE
RAPPOLD
Celebrated Prima Donna Soprano
of the Metropolitan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts — January to June, 1915
Exclusive Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY

Zoellner Quartet
Coast to Coast
Tour 1914-15
H. Culbertson, Fine Arts Bldg, Chicago

Heinrich Hensel
ROYAL COURT SINGER
THE FAMOUS WAGNER TENOR
Covent Garden Opera - London
Wagner Festivals - - Bayreuth
Opera House - - - Hamburg
Theatre de la Monnaie - Brussels
Metropolitan Opera House, New York
SEASON 1914-15
Grand Opera, Chicago
ADDRESS, CARE MUSICAL COURIER

Vida Llewellyn's Kodak Destroyed.

Vida Llewellyn, the American pianist, who reached home recently, came through the war afflicted section with only the loss of part of her music and a much prized kodak, the treasured companion of many a happy jaunt during the past few years spent in Europe. This was seized by a guard and destroyed before her eyes.

ORATORIO SOCIETY CONCERTS OF THE FORTY-SECOND SEASON.

Famous New York Organization Announces Plans for Performances in Carnegie Hall Under the Direction of Louis Koemmenich—Bossi's "Joan of Arc" to Be Novelty of Coming Season.

The publicity committee of the Oratorio Society of New York has issued the following interesting announcement:

"Rehearsals for the forty-second season of the Oratorio Society of New York, Louis Koemmenich, conductor, begin on September 24. The program, including but one novelty, is as follows:

LOUIS KOEMMENICH,
Conductor, Oratorio Society of New York.

"The Dream of Gerontius," Elgar.....December 9
Soloists: Mildred Potter, contralto; Gervase Elwes, tenor; Frank Croxton, bass.
"The Messiah," Handel.....(Afternoon) December 29
"The Messiah," Handel.....(Evening) December 30
Soloists: Florence Hinkle, soprano; Marie Stone Langston, contralto; Reed Miller, tenor; Frederick Remington, bass.

M. E. BOSSI.

"Joan of Arc," Enrico Bossi.....March 24
(Soloists to be announced later.)

"These will be given in Carnegie Hall, as usual, with the assistance of the orchestra of the Symphony Society.

"'The Dream of Gerontius,' already sung five times by this society, was produced first in England in 1900. Its initial New York performance was in March, 1903, when it was sung twice by the society. In November of the same year it had two more performances. The fifth production, March, 1909, enlisted the services of the eminent English tenor, Gervase Elwes, who will be heard again in the work this season.

"The society's annual 'Messiah' concerts have long been one of the most notable features of the metropolitan music season. The forthcoming repetitions will be their eighty-sixth and eighty-seventh.

"Enrico Bossi, who has achieved a wide and enviable fame in his own country through his energetic devotion to music of a lofty, diversified, but conservative type, was born in Italy in 1861. His best known work here thus far is the 'Intermezzi Goldoniani,' played in 1906 and 1907 by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. His principal effort in choral music hitherto was 'Paradise Lost' (1903), based on Milton's poem. 'Joan of Arc,' designated 'Ein Mysterium,' had its first hearing in Cologne last January, and at once aroused intense enthusiasm among French, German and Italian musicians and critics."

Fanning's Programs at Mont Eagle Assembly.

Cecil Fanning's appearance at the Mont Eagle Assembly (Tenn.) on August 11, 12, 13 and 14, as soloist in the four recital programs, brought him immediate success and many new admirers. With a careful study of the four programs herewith reproduced and performed on four consecutive evenings, together with innumerable encore numbers, no one could doubt for an instant that this was indeed a remarkable accomplishment.

In the order in which they were sung on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings, Mr. Fanning's programs were as follows:

Der Wanderer Wohin? (Schmidt).....Schubert
Der Neugierige (Die Schone Mullerin).....Schubert
Der Erlkönig (Goethe).....Loewe
Henry the Fowler.....Loewe
Edward (Percy's Reliques).....Loewe
Folksongs—
Le Petit Bois d'Amour (Old French).....Arr. G. Ferrari
Le Cycle du Vin (O'd French).....Arr. G. Ferrari
Dame Durden (Old English).....Arr. G. Ferrari
No, John, no! (Old English).....Arr. Cecil Sharp
The Last Leaf (Oliver Wendell Holmes).....Sidney Homer
Boat Song (Montrose Moses).....Harriet Ware
Smuggler's Song (Rudyard Kipling).....Marshall Kernochan
The Kerry Dance.....Molloy
The Mad Dog (Vicar of Wakefield).....Liza Lehmann
Ballads—
May Day (Bloor).....R. H. Walthew
I'll Sing Thee Songs of Araby (Lalla Rookh).....Frederic Clay
The Sands o' Dee (Kingsley).....Frederic Clay
Little Boy Blue (Eugene Fields).....Ethelbert Nevin
A Fairy Love Song (Ella Higginson).....Charles Willeby
Smiles.....E. L. Ashford
Essay on the Camel (Carolyn Wells).
I Have the Sorrows (Josephine Preston Peabody).
The Thirsty Child (Constance Johnson).
De Bec an' de Butterfly (Philander Johnson).
Children's songs—
The Pinching Bug (translated by Mr. Fanning).....Taubert
The Little Drummer (translated by Mr. Fanning).....Tauhert
Plantation songs—
Mammy's Song (written for Mr. Fanning).....Harriet Ware
Ma Rose (Ruth McEnery Stuart).....Caleb Lacy
Ma Curly Headed Baby.....Clutsam
Little Yaller Boy.....Kerker
Cautionary songs—
Henry King (H. Belloc).....Liza Lehmann
Matilda (H. Belloc).....Liza Lehmann
Prologue, I Pagliacci.....Leoncavallo
Four epoch making periods of opera—
Air from Orfeo (1637).....Monteverde
Air from Richard Cœur de Lion (1784).....Gretry
Air from Tannhäuser (1845).....Wagner
Air from Ernani (1844).....Verdi
English opera—
In Happy Moments (Maritana).....Wallace
The Heart Bowed Down (Bohemian Girl).....Balfe
Woo Thou Thy Snowflake (Ivanhoe).....Arthur Sullivan
French opera—
Ballade, L'Africaine (1860).....Meyerbeer
Cavatina, Faust (1859).....Gounod
Vision Fugitive (1881).....Massenet
Light opera—
Romance (Paul Jones).....Planquette
I Envy the Bird (Serenade).....Victor Herbert
Cooper's Song (Boccaccio).....Von Suppe
Shakespearean songs—
If Music Be the Food of Love (Twelfth Night) (1781), John Clifton
I Know a Bank (Midsummer Night's Dream)...Henry Parker
Cuckoo Song (Love's Labor's Lost) (1710).....Dr. Arne
Over Hill, Over Dale (Midsummer Night's Dream) (1784), Thomas Cooke
Russian songs—
A Song to India.....Rimsky-Korsakoff
O Thou Billowy Harvest Field! (Tolstoi).....Rachmaninoff
Folksongs—
Turn Ye to Me.....Old Highland
Caller Herrin'.....Old Scotch
Meet Me By Moonlight Alone.....Old English
The Keys of Heaven (dance song).....Old English
Air from the cantata, Sir Olaf (libretto by Cecil Fanning), Harriet Ware
I Had a Dove (adapted from Keats).....Carl Busch
The Fool of Thule (Bowles).....Pietro Yon
I Mind the Day (Moira O'Neill).....Charles Willeby
Someday, Sometime (Clark).....Palmer John Clark
The Charge of the Light Brigade (Tennyson)..Alfred Hiles Berger

At the Weimar Ducal Music School, 161 pupils were in attendance last season.

FESTIVAL ORCHESTRA, BAD NAUHEIM, HESSEN, GERMANY, WITH ELIZABETH ROTHWELL-WOLFF AS SOLOIST.

Prima Donna Wins European Laurels.

The pretty little prima donna soprano, Elizabeth Rothwell-Wolff, who will be remembered as the creator in English of the title role in "Madame Butterfly" for the special Savage production of that opera in this country seven years ago, is portrayed above with the Festival Orchestra of Bad Nauheim Hessen, Germany, with royal professor Hans Winderstein as conductor. Mme. Rothwell-Wolff was the soloist by special wish of the Grand Duchess of Hessen for this concert, which was given for the benefit of the Red Cross Society. The Grand Duchess was delighted with the success of little Mme. Wolff, and said she was proud of her being a native of Hessen, but regretted that she thought Mme. Wolff looked rather Americanized after her seven years' residence in St. Paul, where her husband, has been the conductor of the St. Paul Orchestra. The people and press of Bad Nauheim were unanimous in saying that Mme. Wolff was the biggest success of any artists who has sung there in years, and the members of the American colony were so delighted that they engaged her for their Fourth of July celebration a few days after the above mentioned concert.

Mme. Wolff was showered with flowers on both of the above occasions. Immediately after July 4 Mme. Wolff and her distinguished husband left for Carlsbad. They had hardly reached there when a letter was forwarded to Mme. Wolff from the Princess of Salms, in which she begged her to sing at a concert to be given in Bad Nauheim on July 15, but as Mme. Wolff had made arrangements to be in Vienna at that time, she was unable to accept. This shows, however, what a complete success Mme. Wolff was, that she could fill two engagements and reject an offer to fill a third within period of ten days in the same city.

Immediately upon reaching Europe in May, Mme. Rothwell-Wolff went to coach with Jean de Reszke for three weeks. The great master's first words when she came into the room were: "Haven't you, with your great talent and temperament made up your mind yet to follow my advice and return to the opera stage?"

Mme Wolff will open her American concert season in Denver, Col., on October 16.

Following are some European press notices of recent date:

FESTIVAL CONCERT FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE RED CROSS SOCIETY.

With special interest we were looking forward to Mme. Rothwell-Wolff's appearance, as she has not sung here for the last five years. In these five years the young artist has developed immensely. Her large and dramatic voice has a sweet and warm tone quality and is of ravishing beauty and youth.

In addition the young artist has a lovely appearance; she was indeed a beautiful picture to look at and we do not wonder that the American public is most enthusiastic over our young native. Mme. Rothwell-Wolff was born in Hessen.

The artist's first number was Salome's aria from "Herodiade," by Massenet, which she sang in French. Her dark colored soprano dominated with great ease over the orchestra and took the public by storm. In the second part of the concert our guest sang three songs by Brahms, Goldmark and Richard Strauss, after which she was showered with flowers and encored again and again.—Bad Manheimer Zeitung, June 26, 1914.

Her Royal Highness the Grand Duchess of Hessen arranged a benefit concert for the Red Cross Society with our orchestra under the leadership of Prof. Hans Winderstein, with Elizabeth Rothwell-Wolff, from St. Paul, Minn., and Prof. H. Kiefer, Berlin, as soloists.

Mme. Rothwell-Wolff proved to be an artist of the first rank. Her voice, a dramatic soprano, is of great beauty and wide range, and her first aria from "Herodiade" met with immediate great success. With deep and sincere sentiment the artist sang three German songs in the second part of the concert. The public cheered her most heartily and demanded several encores.—Manheimer General Anzeiger, June 26, 1914. (Advertisement.)

Alma Voedisch in Everett, Wash.

This is a picture of Alma Voedisch, the Chicago manager, and Anna Rollins-Johnson, president of the Musical Club of Everett, Wash., with whom Miss Voedisch booked

ALMA VOEDISCH AND ANNA ROLLINS-JOHNSON IN THE LATTER'S AUTO AT EVERETT, WASH.

Julia Claussen and the MacDermids, and later in the spring this club will take the Oberndorfers.

Miss Voedisch reports a nice tour for Mme. Claussen and also for the MacDermids. Mme. Claussen will be in the West during October and the first week in November, and Sibyl Sammis MacDermid during the last two weeks in January and the first two in February.

Antipodean Appreciation.

2 Princes Avenue,
East Caulfield, Victoria,
Australia, July 9, 1914.

To The Musical Courier:

By this mail I am sending you two newspapers (the Melbourne Punch and Saturday Evening Journal), in which there are quotations from the Musical Courier. Your finely gotten up paper (it is a delight to slip one's fingers between its satin faced leaves and enjoy the first class reproductions on each page), so splendidly edited, is a source of the greatest pleasure to me; it is indeed the musical paper de luxe, and from no other source do I get such masterly criticisms, or accurate information of the progress of music and musical artists in all the great centres of the world. Continued prosperity be yours.

And the grateful thanks of yours very truly,

K. Ogilvie McKain.

We offer for the Season 1914-15, a most carefully selected list of artists and virtuosi, all of whom in their own particular line of art stand in the very front rank.

The list includes, among others, the following:

PIANISTS

FERRUCCIO BUSONI, third tour under our management. From October 1st, 1914, to February 10th, 1915. (Chickering Piano.)

New—MRS. H. H. A. BEACH, the Boston composer, in Orchestral Concerts and Recitals of her own works. Special engagement for 30 dates.

New—NORA DREWETT, of Berlin, native of Ireland. (Steinway Piano.)

New—VIDA LLEWELLYN, of Berlin, native of Chicago.

VIOLINISTS

New—WILLY BURMESTER, first visit since 1898. (Steinway Piano.)

VERA BARSTOW, the American violinist. Second season under our management. (Knabe Piano.)

HARPIST

New—WINIFRED BAMBRICK, the young Canadian harpist.

VOICE

New—EDYTH WALKER, Prima Donna Soprano Hamburg Opera, Chicago Opera, one of the greatest of international singers of Old and New World fame.

HELEN STANLEY, the delight of her American audiences. Prima Donna, Wurzburg, Chicago, Montreal Operas. Second season under our management.

New—MARIO SAMMARCO, the distinguished baritone of the Chicago and Covent Garden Opera Companies.

New—MARCELLA CRAFT, the young California soprano who has been prima donna at the Royal Opera, Munich, for the past four years.

New—ALICE VERLET, French Colorature and Dramatic Soprano. Prima Donna Paris Grand Opera, Paris. Opéra Comique. Monte Carlo, Brussels, etc. Recitals and Concerts.

BARONESS SIGNE VON RAPPE, Swedish Soprano, Prima Donna Covent Garden, Stockholm and Vienna Operas.

New—MRS. KING CLARK, née Maude Oakley, of Berlin, native of Lincoln, Neb. Mezzo-Soprano, who has become famous in Europe.

New—LUCY MARSH, the favorite soprano whose Victor records are so popular.

LUELLA OHRMAN, leading Chicago Soprano. Second season under our management.

FLORENCE BLUMENSCHEIN-ROWE, the young Lyric Soprano.

THEODORE HARRISON, American Baritone, who has achieved distinction in Europe.

New—ARTHUR ALEXANDER, the celebrated Paris tenor, a Californian, who sings to his own accompaniment; ranks very high.

New—ELEANOR HAZZARD PEOCOCK, the brilliant American lieder singer.

MYRNA SHARLOW, the young American Prima Donna of the Boston Opera in Boston and Paris and member of the opera at Covent Garden, London.

GEORGE SHEFFIELD, the American tenor, with an exceptionally pure and beautiful voice and splendid equipment for concert and oratorio.

ALBERT SCHOTT, Operatic Tenor, who has been scoring significant successes in Europe.

Concert Direction, M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue - - N. Y.

WILFRIED KLAMROTH

TEACHER OF SINGING

Resumes teaching in New York, October 1, at his new studio,

124 EAST 39th STREET

Until October 1, address at

HILLBOURNE FARM
Vail's Gate, New York

THE WEEK IN CHICAGO.

Breezy Paragraphs of Current Interest—Erickson Returns from Europe—An American Sonata Praised.

Chicago, Ill., August 29, 1914.

Oscar Gordon Erickson, who has recently been elected supervisor of music at Oak Park, Ill., and who is at the head of the Sunday Evening Club, has just returned from Berlin. Mr. Erickson was among the visitors at this office during the past week and gave a vivid description of the hardships and inconveniences that most of the American refugees had to endure when coming home after the outbreak of the war. Mr. Erickson, who had gone to Europe not only for pleasure, but also to look for new material, had ordered from publishers many new numbers, which, however, he is afraid will not be given this year in Chicago, as he does not expect the orders to be filled. However, he brought back with him sufficient new material to make his season most interesting.

ROSE LUTIGER GANNON GOES EAST.

After a successful week as soloist at the Midway Gardens, Rose Lutiger Gannon, contralto, has gone with her husband to New York City, where they will enjoy a two weeks' vacation. Mrs. Gannon will be back in Chicago the second week in September.

ETTA EDWARDS PASSES THROUGH CHICAGO.

Etta Edwards, the well known vocal teacher of St. Louis, who formerly made her home in New York, Boston and Chicago, passed through this city last week en route home after an extensive trip through Colorado. Mrs. Edwards visited the Chicago office of the MUSICAL COURIER and was accompanied by May Pero, one of her pupils, who, the writer has been told, has a remarkable soprano voice that will surely bring glory and substantial returns to her credit, according to Mrs. Edwards' prediction. The popular teacher looked the picture of health and was induced by the writer to come back to Chicago, where her art has always been well appreciated, yet she thinks it best to remain in St. Louis at least for another year, where a large class is awaiting her return.

AMERICAN CONSERVATORY TEACHERS.

John J. Hattstaedt, president of the American Conservatory, who returned from the East recently, has gone to Charlevoix, Mich., for a short vacation.

Karleton Hackett is giving a graphic account of his dash from Munich to London in letters to the Evening Post.

Ragna Linne is at Christiania, Norway, and is expected home the early part of September.

Walton Pyre, the new director of the school of expression and dramatic art at the American Conservatory, has arrived in this city and is busy teaching and arranging his department for the coming season.

ROBINSON GRADUATE CHOSEN FOR MOLINE.

Elizabeth Peterson, of Kankakee, Ill., graduate of the department of public school music of the class of 1914, American Conservatory, of which O. E. Robinson is director, has been elected supervisor of music in the public schools of Moline, Ill. Earl L. Baker, who preceded Miss Peterson at Moline, and who has just been chosen as teacher of music in the Minneapolis public schools, is also a former graduate of the department of public school music of the American Conservatory.

That graduates of the same school should be selected in quick succession for such important places as Minneapolis and Moline speaks volumes for the work done by Mr. Robinson's graduates of the American Conservatory.

FREDERICK AYRES' NEW SONATA PRAISED.

Following is a translation of a letter from Prof. Arthur de Greef, of the Royal Conservatory of Brussels, to Frederick Ayres, an American composer of growing distinction. Mr. Ayres' sonata was scheduled to be bought out by Louis Persinger and Ernest Hutcheson in Berlin this fall and Saslavsky, the New York concertmaster, has just given it a most successful performance in the West. It will also be given an advantageous hearing in Chicago this season.

This was probably one of the last letters to get out of Brussels:

Bruxelles, August 2, 1914.

SIR AND DEAR CONFRERE: I have just read your sonata for piano and violin and do not wish to delay expressing the profound effect it made upon me. The instruments are treated with perfect knowledge; the structure clear, logical, balanced in perfect equilibrium of its thematic elements; and in the development of all these in their divers tonalities they combine in most beautiful harmonies.

I congratulate you on having been able to join to all these beautiful qualities the most precious quality of all—inspiration—and I wish with all my heart that your work may disseminate itself rapidly and that it will find everywhere the success it merits.

Please believe, sir and dear confrere, my very best sentiments.

ARTHUR DE GREEF,
Professeur du Conservatoire Royale.

Leonard Borwick's Praises.

Pithy critical comments on the piano performances of that great keyboard artist, Leonard Borwick, are as follows:

He is one of those pianists who not only have full justification for giving piano recitals, but who have it laid upon them as a positive artistic duty toward the public to do so. He is an artist of the very highest rank.—Deutsche Nacht, Dresden.

Without any doubt he is an artist by nature—delicately strong, and of quite exceptional refinement of feeling.—Munich Neueste Nachrichten.

Leonard Borwick plays Chopin with a spirit and verve, and a degree of lightness and delicacy, which is not only enchanting in itself, but, coming from an Englishman, is something positively phenomenal.—Munich Allgemeine Zeitung.

Borwick showed himself a specialist in reproducing the spirit and feeling of old world music, even down to the very quality of sound of the old instruments.—Breslau Zeitung.

For piano playing of this description two hours is all too short a space. He is in all respects a player of the first rank.—Breslau Schlesische Zeitung.

He is an artist gifted not only with refined taste and deep musical feeling, but with the technic of a master.—Berlin Börsen Courier.

A musician of striking character and earnestness of purpose.—Leipsic Musikalisches Wochenblatt.

His playing has in it nothing labored, but is rather the free outcome of an artist spirit; not a product of finger work so much as an expression of soul.—Leipsic Tageblatt.

Borwick must be reckoned among the greatest of his calling.—Leipsic Signale.

Borwick at his concert, exerted a spell of artistry so great, so glorious, so utterly without fleck or flaw, that one felt oneself drawn resistlessly captive under the enchantment.—Hanover Tageblatt.

(In ensemble playing with Joseph Joachim.) The exquisite phrasing of Mr. Borwick and his deep insight into the works played attracted more attention and certainly caused more surprise than the familiar glories of Dr. Joachim's art.—London Times.

He possesses the wonderful touch and the extraordinarily beautiful inter-communication between the piano and himself, which show how refined an artist he is. That he is a pianist of the first class we have recognized now for a long time.—London Fall Mall Gazette.

Borwick is one of the first of living pianists.—London Westminster Gazette.

"Perfection—thy name is Borwick!"—London World.

To his finely tempered touch the Steinway piano he used responded with nothing but beauty, both in the pearly rill of the treble and the ringing volume of its full sonorous compass.—Brighton Standard.

At times the instrument seems to sing, so lifelike is the quality Borwick plucks from its notes. He is indeed a superb artist.—Aberdeen Free Press. (Advertisement.)

May Beegle Visits New York.

May Beegle, the well known manager of musical events in Pittsburgh, Pa., stopped off in New York for a few days on her return from a vacation spent in Newport, Narragansett Pier and several Maine coast resorts.

Reports that music drowned the militant screams at the British court show that the Scottish bagpipes are still in favor.—Washington Post.

FRANCES INGRAM
Management: SHAW & TUCKER Orchestra Building, Chicago

GEORGE SHEFFIELD, Tenor
Management Concert Direction M. H. HANSON,
437 Fifth Ave., New York.
Private address: 4654 Beacon St., Chicago, Ill.

GLENN DILLARD GUNN
PIANIST
421-424 Fine Arts Building - - Chicago, Ill.

LEON SAMETINI
Holland's Greatest VIOLINIST
Management ALMA VOEDISCH
3941 Rokaby Street, Chicago

Mrs. STACY WILLIAMS Voice Production :: Repertoire ::
In Europe June 15 to September 15
For information, prospectus, etc., address
Mrs. Williams, 405-406 Kimball Hall - Chicago, Ill.

Lucille STEVENSON SOPRANO
Address:
4438 Base Line Avenue, Chicago
Telephone, Oakland 1570

LECTURES, OPERA TALKS, AND PIANO LECTURE RECITALS
By
HENRIETTE WEBER
Also the Larkin-Weber Recitals
Consisting of
OPERA, LECTURE RECITALS AND MELODRAMES and
THE CHICAGO PIANO QUARTETTE
Henriette Weber, piano; Fritz Itte, violin;
Carl Klammsteiner, cello; A. Van Der Voort, viola.
Specializing in Opera Programs.
Arrangements with Distinguished American Singers as Soloists
FOR TERMS AND DATES ADDRESS MISS H. WEBER
Auditorium Building, Chicago, Ill., Phone Harrison 4868-4869

MARION GREEN BASSO CANTANTE
Auditorium Building, Chicago
Home Phone: Ravenswood 5774 Studio Phone: Harrison 4868

THOMAS N. MAC BURNEY BARITONE
Voice Production Song Recitals
Three years assistant to Frank King Clark
Suite 609 Fine Arts Building, Chicago, Ill.
Phone Harrison 6889

HERMAN DEVRIES
Formerly Baritone with the Metropolitan Opera House, New York; Covent Garden, London; Grand Opera and Opera Comique, Paris; Theatre Royal de la Monnare, Brussels, Etc.
VOCAL TEACHER
MRS. HERMAN DEVRIES
ASSOCIATE VOCAL INSTRUCTOR
Studios: 518-528 Fine Arts Building - - - Chicago, Ill.

BUSH TEMPLE CONSERVATORY
N. Clark St. and Chicago Avenue, Chicago
Kenneth M. Bradley, President

SUMMER SESSION
BEGINNING JUNE 22
Special Courses in MUSIC, Expression, Languages, Public School Music, Dramatic Art
Conducted by an unsurpassed faculty, including:
Mme. Julie Rive-King, Guy Herbert Woodard, Greca Stewart Potter, Mae Julia Riley, Harold von Mickwitz, Frank B. Webster, Eleanor Smith, Ernest D. Todd, Mme. Justine Wegener, Edgar A. Nelson, Edward Dvorak, Adelaide G. Lewis
The management announces the exclusive teaching engagement of the world's most famous baritone: CHARLES W. CLARK
Students wishing private lessons with any of the above named Artists should make application in advance.
The Bush Temple Conservatory is the only music school in Chicago which has its own Dormitory.
Reservation of rooms must be made in advance.
For Catalog and Special Literature Address: Edward H. Schwenker, Sec'y

Victor Benham Abandons European Engagements

Owing to the war conditions in Europe, Victor Benham has been obliged to abandon his concert engagements abroad and intends to pass the season in New York. Besides appearing in a number of concerts, recitals, lectures, etc., he will accept pupils during his sojourn here. This should be a fine opportunity for students who had expected to go abroad, to study here instead, with a master reputed by the entire press of Europe to be one of the leading living artists.

Not only is Mr. Benham regarded as one of the foremost pianists, but his compositions have been accepted in an equal light. His pupils include names of pianists well established in Europe and America. Recently he was at the head of the Metropolitan Academy, the largest in England, and he has lectured in the prominent universities of Great Britain.

A few extracts from the foreign press are appended:

One of the greatest of all Chopin exponents and by all means one of the greatest of living pianists.—Paris Figaro, January 6, 1914.

Victor Benham can be placed among the greatest, technically, interpretatively and intellectually.—Berlin Tageblatt, November 16, 1913.

Benham is not only a great pianist, but he re-creates the thoughts of the masters whose works he plays.—Vienna Frie Presse, November 11, 1913.

VICTOR BENHAM.

Mr. Benham is a true artist and musician and reveals the spirit of the composer to perfection.—London Morning Post, January 31, 1914.

Lost Manuscripts.

The very excess of precaution which caused her to withhold a number of manuscripts from the mail because of the disrupting influence of the war on postal service in Germany, has resulted most unfortunately for Mrs. H. H. A. Beach, the noted American composer, and has incidentally incommoded her friend, Marcella Craft, the soprano. The latter, on her departure from Munich, after her farewell at the Royal Opera last June, relinquished her apartments to the composer, who purposed to spend the summer there, preparing her programs for her American tour and likewise completing a number of compositions, including songs, scheduled to figure on the list of Miss Craft's recital offerings. Several of these songs were finished in time for the soprano to take with her, but when the remaining works were ready for Mrs. Beach's American publisher, the state of affairs in Europe had assumed so sinister an aspect that the composer shrank from the hazard of trusting them to the mail.

An American acquaintance, who, warned by Mrs. Beach, determined to flee the country at once, offered to take the music in her trunk. Before reaching the Belgian frontier, however, the train on which she was traveling was stopped, the passengers unceremoniously ordered out by the German soldiers and literally driven across the border, while their luggage was abandoned. The trunk containing Mrs. Beach's manuscripts shared the fate of the other possessions of the hapless voyagers and was not recovered. Although Miss Craft reached America safely with those songs that the composer had already given her, it is to be feared that the other works of Mrs. Beach have been irretrievably lost.

Famous Organist Visits His Home.

Clarence Eddy, the famous organist, is in town with Mrs. Eddy, visiting the scenes of his boyhood. They are staying at Miss Leonard's. Mr. Eddy looks forward to an exceedingly busy season of organ work. He begins work early next month at Syracuse, where he opens a new organ. He has later a three weeks' engagement of concerts with Mrs. Eddy in Florida. In February he goes to the Pacific Coast. He has been invited to open the official organ of the Panama Exposition with five concerts, also the official organ at the San Diego Exposition with thirty concerts. He will open a very large organ at Los Angeles. Mr. Eddy finds that there is great interest in organ music about the country, and the war does not seem to affect his work at all.—Greenfield (Mass.) Gazette and Courier.

Mme. Rosa Olitzka
Celebrated Russian Contralto
ASSISTED BY
Kathleen Hart, Soprano
Exclusive Management West of Cleveland
By special arrangement R. E. Johnston
Elizabeth Rothwell Wolff, Soprano
From Royal Court Theatre Darmstadt.
Walter Henry Rothwell at the piano, condr.
St. Paul Symphony Orchestra
AND
Miss Edna Gunnar Peterson, Pianist
Mr. Albert Borroff, Basso-Cantante
Lecture Recitals, Oratorio
Mme. Cora Kempre, Soprano
Fresh from European Operatic Triumphs
Miss Esther May Plumb, Contralto
Recitals, Oratorio
Mr. Ridgley Hudson, Tenor
Recitals, Oratorio
Miss Clara Williams, Soprano
Oratorio
Miss Celéne Loveland
Piano Lecture Recitals
AND
Metropolitan Grand Opera Quartette
Exclusive management:
GERTRUDE V. O'HANLON
Cable Building Chicago, Ill.

One Real Musician.

It was a soiree musicale, described in Sharps and Flats. A singer had just finished "My Old Kentucky Home."

The hostess, seeing one of her guests weeping in a remote corner, went to him and inquired in a sympathetic voice:

"Are you a Kentuckian?"

And the answer quickly came: "No, madame; I am a musician."—Houston (Tex.) Chronicle.

Two hundred and forty-nine towns have complied with the request made in June of last year to collect the local tunes in German towns from the records of their old town bands, and to send them to the Royal Library at Berlin.—Exchange.

Wilfried Klamroth, Teacher and Farmer

Wilfried Klamroth, the well known vocal [illegible] has for many years been a great believer in summer [illegible] for the singer, especially under such ideal conditions as obtain on a farm, far removed from the allurements and time absorbers of the average summer resort. His farm is one of some sixty-three acres, in a purely farming section of New York State.

WILFRIED KLAMROTH RURALIZING.

Mr. Klamroth is a firm believer in outdoor exercise for the singer, the accompanying snapshot showing him at his favorite form of exercise, accompanied by his six year old son on his pony. In the background is seen a part of his farmhouse, which is of stone, and some eighty-six years old. During the month of July Mr. Klamroth gave daily lessons to a large class of teachers and professionals. He believes in daily lessons for a short period. The pupil cannot get away from the great underlying principles of singing if given correct instruction every day for a month; the bad habit must be overcome and the good habit substituted. The pupils were well taken care of at a neighboring farm house.

Mr. Klamroth reopens his fall season at the new studio, 124 East Thirty-ninth street, October 1.

Christine Miller Pleases Her Audience.

The following interesting criticism has just been received:

The concert given last night by Christine Miller, contralto, at the Congregational Church was, as anticipated, very delightful. This musical event was one of the numbers on the Lawrence Conservatory course. Miss Miller has appeared here for six consecutive seasons and is a great favorite in Appleton musical circles. Her charm of manner, depth of expression, artistic comprehension, clear enunciation are equipments that go to make her recitals perfection itself. Miss Miller was in fine voice last night and the pleasure she gave her auditors was entrancing. The first two selections by Bach and Handel were well adapted to her contralto voice. The "Green Bushes" and "Come All Ye" was a mighty contrast to the stately Bach, and was exceedingly well done. The Brahms and Mahler cycle, new here, was explained by Miss Miller and this added to the audience's appreciation. The Massenet number was given with dramatic emphasis and fervor. The Chippewa Indian cycle of songs was clearly outlined by Miss Miller in a little talk on Indian music, which made the songs far more interesting.—Appleton (Wis.) Evening Crescent, April 8, 1914. (Advertisement.)

What Is a Musical Enthusiast?

"A musical enthusiast is one who will pass up a ball game to attend a matinee performance of 'Rigoletto.'"—Owen Hatteras, in Smart Set.

Or, perhaps, "one who goes out in the opera house lobby when the orchestra plays the 'Cavalleria' intermezzo, and yet revels in a Bach fugue."—Houston (Tex.) Chronicle.

Würzburg's Royal Conservatory had 331 students in 1913-14.

Myrtle ELVYN
RENOWNED AMERICAN PIANISTE
Now Booking For American Tour 1914-1915
Concert Direction, HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Bldg., Chicago
KIMBALL PIANO USED

IN ALL THE KEYS.

Dr. A. Madeley Richardson's well known and popular lecture, "A Visit to the Choir Room of Southwark Cathedral in the Year 1908," met with a most enthusiastic reception at the National Association of Organists' convention, held recently at Ocean Grove, N. J. There was a full attendance and many organists had come long distances especially to hear it. The detailed description of Dr. Richardson's Southwark work was followed with close attention, and the vocal illustrations, sung by Mary Hester and Elfrida Richardson, were all received with loud and prolonged applause, especial interest being aroused by the prize competition, the scale game and the three part chromatic scales. Several requests were made for a repetition of the lecture at other centers.

Emma A. Dambmann, contralto and teacher, appeared as vocal soloist at the Watch Hill House, R. I., at the Sunday evening concert, August 9. The Watch Hill Life of August 12 says of her appearance that it created unusual interest, and continues as follows: "Mme. Dambman (Mrs. Friedman) rendered the aria, 'Oh! Love Thy Help,' from 'Samson and Delila,' with marked interpretation, and in the 'O du Liebster Mine' and 'Lullaby' by Kate Vannah, her voice appealed to all, with deep pathos and feeling. She is ever a welcome guest. Her voice is of purity of tone, powerful yet sympathetic, and of which she has perfect mastery."

Edward Barrow, tenor, now located in Utica, N. Y., has a fine class of vocal pupils in Oxford, N. Y., also a choral class there which gives excellent concerts during the winter. He, together with Harriet Barkley Riesberg, soprano; Bessie Riesberg, violinist, and F. W. Riesberg, pianist, united in a musicale at the home of Rev. Inman Willcox, D.D., in Oxford, on August 17, which was attended by the elite of the town. All the music gave much pleasure. Next day the artists (excepting Mr. Barrow) appeared at a concert at Leonardsville, N. Y., near Utica, where a miscellaneous program was given, with Mrs. Alan Babcock, reader. Mrs. Riesberg's beautiful, clear soprano voice was heard in the "Melba Waltz" and a ballad. "Supposing"; Bessie Riesberg played pieces by Beethoven, Macmillen, Kreisler and Bohm so effectively that afterward some of her "tunes" were whistled on the street. Mrs. Babcock read poetic and humorous selections with fine effect, and Mr. Riesberg had to play encores.

Henry Boley, Virginia representative for the T. W. Allen Publishing Company, music publishers of New York, is in the metropolis prior to resuming his duties in Lexington, Va., where he conducts a large book and music business.

Alexander Berne, the well known pianist and teacher, of Newark, N. J., is making final preparations before opening his new studio on Broad street (opposite Central Railroad depot), Newark, N. J.; he was formerly located at 19 West Park street. The new studio promises to be one of the largest and most attractive in Newark.

Edwin Wickenhoefer has returned from a short vacation and has resumed his teaching, both at the von Ende School of Music, New York, and at his Newark, N. J., studio, located at 19 West Park street.

The executive committee of the Newark (N. J.) Musicians' Club met on August 25 at 41 Spruce street, that city, and discussed plans for the fall season. Another meeting is to be held early in September. The first meeting of the club will be held on September 9. Thirty new names are on the list for membership. All applications should be sent to T. W. Allen, chairman of the membership committee, 41 Spruce street, Newark, N. J.

With Civil War musicians numbering 200 men, a colossal band of 250 pieces, made up by fifteen of the local bands, and many military bands and drum corps from out of town, the G. A. R. encampment at Detroit, Mich., will be well provided with martial music. A contract with the local Musicians' Union, closed by the committee on music recently, provides for the services of the fifteen city bands, one of thirty-two pieces, and the rest of smaller number. Following the parade of September 2, the local bands combined into one huge orchestra in Grand Circus Park, will render a program of patriotic airs.

East London, says the Toronto (Canada) Globe, possesses a remarkable Jewish child contralto in Jennie Hylton, a golden haired girl of fifteen, whose full, rich voice has caught the ear of high musical authorities, one of whom is giving her lessons in elocution and singing. The range of her voice—two and a quarter octaves—must be nearly a record for a girl of fifteen. Her debut before London audiences will be made at the coming Sunday League concert season.

It is related by a local singer of prominence in Providence, R. I., who was a fellow student with the late Mme. Nordica at the New England Conservatory of Music in 1876 or '77, under John O'Neil, that the famous diva never forgot her debt to her first teacher, and that whenever she was in Boston, Mme. Nordica always entertained Mr. O'Neil at dinner, paying him the tribute due to his instruction that set her on the right path in her subsequent brilliant career.

Mrs. Davis J. Allen, who was formerly Clara Schmidt, of Providence, R. I., now living in Seattle, has been highly commended for the piano accompaniments which she played at several concerts at the University of Washington last season.

Heloise Coutoleno, of Los Angeles, Cal., who was obliged to give up her professional work as a violinist owing to her mother's long illness, has again resumed her connection with the Westlake Presbyterian Church and other musical organizations in that city.

Late reports from the officials of the Los Angeles National Grand Opera Company, who are now in Rome, give the complete repertoire for the season of 1915, which will begin at the Auditorium, Clune's Theatre Beautiful, January 11. The addition of two new members of the company is also reported, one being a young American basso, John Hendricks, whose New York confreres declare him to be one of the most promising; Impresario Mario Lambardi, who heard him in New York City before sailing for Europe, it is said declares that he has heard none better in Europe. Another fine Lambardi find is Paola Botoluzzi, an unusual contralto, beautiful, young, with a pleasing, well trained voice and a fine stage presence.

Two interesting features marked the regular free city band concert in Schenley Park, Pittsburgh, Pa., recently. Under the direction of George W. Burke, superintendent of the bureau of parks, M. S. Rocereto arranged for a "Pittsburgh night." A reference to the program will show that Pittsburgh composers were given the preference. Selections from the works of Herbert, Nevin, Stephen Foster and others were played. In addition to this, Director Rocereto introduced a novelty in the shape of a big reed organ, which played the accompaniment to several of the selections by the band. The reed organ, playing with the band, is proving very popular in some of the parks in the Eastern cities.

The declarations of war between the European powers has caused Paul Krueger, a talented young organist, son of Professor Krueger, of Atchison, Kan., to abandon his musical studies in France and Germany. He was due to sail the day Germany declared war on Russia, but his father wired him to remain in America for the present and to return home.

Martial Music.

A very powerful drawing is this one, reproduced from the New York Sun, and called "The Requiem of the Guns." The artist is named Carter and he has done a striking piece of work, biting in satire and awful in eloquent grimness.

THE REQUIEM OF THE GUNS.
(From the New York Sun.)

Doubling Up.

"That pianist has wonderful hair."

"Yes," replied the theatrical manager in the Washington Star, "he is one of the most compact propositions I know of. Not only does he provide his own music, but he carries his own scenery."—Houston (Tex.) Chronicle.

Music.

By Irene Angela Miersch.

A mortal, burdened by his earthly trials,
And weary of the world's vain passing show,
Within the temple knelt and prayed for death,
Because he sought for—what, he did not know.
His palace seemed too small to hold his wants,
Consumed by restlessness, for peace he strove,
And e'er pursuing phantoms in his soul,
Upon the sea, for countless nights, he'd rove.
But ever he returned, and in his heart
Remained the longing like a lasting fire;
All treasures of the world he sought, in vain—
E'en gold, e'en love proved not his one desire.
For gold was cold and could not buy his peace,
When wild storms raged on dreadful nights at sea,
And though love filled his life with hours of bliss,
It lacked the inspiration that should be.
At last he prayed unto the gods above
To give him one kind friend so that he ne'er
Would be alone, and that, in grief or joy,
That friend would understand and ne'er despair.
The gods held council and the years winged by.
"What can we give?" they gravely said at last;
"What can we give the mortal that will be
His dear companion of the mem'ries past,
A friend who shares with him his present woe,
And holds his hopes of happiness in trust?
Rich gifts we've given, but he cares for none.
'Tis time we aid his craving strange. We must!"
'Twas Vulcan rose. "Again I'll give more gold!
'Twill make him happy and increase his worth."
The mortal hung his head with sorrowing look,
And all the gods grew merry, then, with mirth.
"What! Give him gold?" they cried. "Thou art a fool!
An outlet for emotion he doth crave,
And he has known that it can not be bought."
Then Mars arose and said, "I'll make him brave,
For bravery gives an outlet to those things
That e'er will make of him his own best friend."
Experience bowed the mortal's head, and so
Each offered dross, from row of end to end.
Fair Venus sighed and curled her lip in scorn.
"Love will not do. It does not linger long."
A clear voice rang throughout the council hall—
It was Apollo's voice in wondrous song.
The mortal's face grew raptured as he heard;
He smiled, he wept, and then he raised his head.
Before the throne of Jupiter he knelt—
"That is my friend! Oh, give me that," he said.
That gift the mortal kept fore'er, and when
The poor and weary flocked unto his door
They heard the magic, wondrous healing sounds
That made their ills seem less than e'er before.
And when the feast in glittering splendor lay
Before the guests arrayed in silk and gold,
It was the harp that gave the dance its lure,
And made its pleasures more than could be told.
Amid the terrors of the battlefield,
When sabers flashed and all were filled with fear,
It was the song of war, with music bold,
That made of cowards heroes to death's bier.
'Twas on the wild and stormy nights at sea,
When Neptune, in his wrath, beat down the sail,
That music soothed the terror stricken mate.
Inspiring him to stay by mast and rail.
It was when Death, the silent, mighty one,
Struck down the dearest friends that he had known.
That music made the nights so full of calm,
Of cheerful rest for those so gently flown.
And when the mortal's heart was glad with peace,
When love and beauty smiled upon his youth,
'Twas music that did ope the portals wide,
To teach him all of life and mystic truth!
Thus, all the wonders of the earth he knew,
Within his soul, he held a thousand themes,
And music led him on, in silence blind,
Into that soul of sympathy and dreams!
She guided him throughout the long, dull years;
She made each sorrow small, each shadow late,
And, by her inspiration, led him on
Unto a kinder and a nobler fate.

Musical Provender.

"Shakespeare says that music is the food of love," remarked Mr. Wombat as he closed the pianola.

"That reminds me, John. Perhaps you had better bring home a few rolls."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Conductor of Village Band—What's wrong, Duncan?

Duncan (cellist)—The drum's been playin' ma music and I've been playin' his.

Conductor—I thocht there was something no just quite richt.—Punch.

Thuel Burnham Remains in Paris.

A letter from Thuel Burnham has come through, and afely reached the MUSICAL COURIER, in which this briliant artist says that he intends remaining in his Paris

THUEL BURNHAM IN PARIS.

home until it is time to come to America for the extended tour which is being booked by his manager, Harry Culbertson.

"Community Sing" at Portland.

445 Sherlock Building,
Portland, Ore., August 24, 1914.

Last Tuesday evening the Monday Musical Club gave a "community sing," a new experiment, on the grandstand of the Multnomah Club. Three thousand persons paid 10 cents apiece for the privilege of singing in unison such songs as "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean," "My Old Kentucky Home," "Annie Laurie," "Silver Threads Among the Gold," "In the Sweet Bye and Bye," "Auld Lang Syne," "Old Folks at Home," "Star Spangled Banner" and other popular numbers. William H. Boyer, who wielded the baton, addressed the singers and, among other things, said: "There is just as much fun in music as baseball and I hope you will sing with me occasionally."

The "sing," which was a big success, received the support of the leading musicians, clubs and business men. A band, donated by the Musicians' Mutual Association, A. F. of M., assisted. Florence Jackson was piano accompanist.

PORTLAND SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

The Portland Symphony Orchestra will resume rehearsals on October 9. Harold Bayley has been chosen to conduct the first concert, which has been set for November 1. The musical directors in addition to Mr. Bayley will be Carl Denton and George E. Jeffery.

JOHN R. OATMAN.

Highbrow Music.

To the Editor of the St. Paul (Minn.) Pioneer Press:

Referring to the articles published in this paper in regard to the music at Como, would say that I agree with the Canoeist. According to my judgment his idea of popular music is the so called ragtime, of which there is very little played at Como. As he stated in his article, the majority of St. Paul people go to church on Sunday morning, and when they go to some park in the afternoon to seek recreation they don't want to hear any of that rich stuff, "especially the younger class." What they want is real live up to date music—ragtime. Referring to the article of F. J. K. in regard to the program of last Thursday night, the 23rd, would say that it was nothing extra, and as far as attendance was concerned there was no record breaking crowd there, as it was a cloudy evening and started to rain about 10 o'clock. The Canoeist, whoever he is, deserves credit for criticizing the music, and there are many more who are doing the same. A READER.

Alice Verlet Sings Patriotic Songs.

Alice Verlet, the eminent French coloratura soprano, is reported of late to have utilized her art to patriotic ends. Visiting the army post where her brother, Lucien, who is a lieutenant in the French artillery, is quartered, in order to bid farewell to him prior to his departure to the front, she was implored by him to sing something for his comrades. No piano was at hand, but an impromptu concert was arranged, the regimental band affording the necessary instrumental support in the emergency. Mlle. Verlet sang the "Marseillaise" and other French patriotic songs in a manner that deeply stirred and inspired all the soldiers present. This particular regiment fought recently in the great battle waged near Charleroi.

A PIANO MAN TALKS.

Knabe Manager Discusses the European Happenings and Their Effect in America—Is Optimistic and Prophesies a Busy and Profitable Season.

Berthold Neuer, manager of the Knabe piano warerooms in New York, was called upon recently by a representative of the MUSICAL COURIER for the purpose of an interview.

"There are evidences that this is going to be a big season," said Mr. Neuer. "Of course," he continued, "the effect of the disturbed conditions abroad on the music business, especially in the concert field, will be very marked. Many artists who were booked for appearances in this country during the coming season will be unable to come, while the opera, and even one orchestra, will be affected by this, though to what extent it is impossible to foresee at this time.

"Then, too, the European concert field, and many of the operas will be practically closed, and this will unload upon America a host of artists both good and bad.

"But the American concert business is a vast organization and a large number of these artists can be taken care of. The growth of American taste, and of the size and intelligence of our concert audiences, has developed enormously within the last ten years. Only a very few years ago it was impossible to draw out more than a handful of people for any artists except those who were creating a great sensation. Conditions have changed, however, and there are now many excellent artists, entirely worthy of support, who are receiving that support in a generous degree from an appreciative and discriminating public.

"For these improved conditions a large amount of the credit must be given to the splendid work of the music teachers. The concert audiences of today may be divided into three classes: 1. Those who are attracted by the sensational; 2, those who go for the pleasure of hearing good music well played; 3, those who are themselves players or students—and these last constitute the vast majority.

"Thanks to the serious efforts of the music teachers' American taste is today on a very high plane. In a country like this, where nearly every home has a piano, and where nearly every child receives some musical instruction, it is natural that a genuine love of music should be widespread. Of course, few of these students [illegible] to any great degree of proficiency, but what they do [illegible] they learn correctly, and they gain thereby the [illegible] appreciate and enjoy the work of the artist.

"The widespread distribution of piano player mechanisms and of talking machines has also had an enormous influence upon musical taste in this country. These mechanical devices have made it possible for people to have in their own homes a class of music which was formerly impossible owing to the restricted technical facility of those members of the family who were musical. This restriction, arising from deficient technical facility, has been entirely removed. Any one may now enjoy whatever kind of music his individual taste demands, from the very easiest to the most difficult, from the lightest popular melody to the most serious of classical compositions.

"The effect of all this upon the concert giver cannot be exaggerated. No artist need be a sensationalist today to win popular favor, and the public will accept and acclaim the very best. Among these is certainly Godowsky, who will play the Knabe piano in America this season. Godowsky is now in London and is preparing to leave for this country at an early date. Katharine Goodson will also be heard in America this season, playing the Knabe piano. She, too, is now in England.

"Among those who are at present in America who will play the Knabe during the coming season is Max Lankow, recently appointed head of the piano department of the Peabody Institute in Baltimore. A pupil of Klindworth, Lankow was for some time professor at the Stern Conservatory, Berlin, and has latterly resided in Omaha. He is a pianist of brilliant attainments and will be heard in concert and recital in Boston, New York, Baltimore, etc., during the coming season. Victor Wittgenstein, who made so strong an impression here last winter, will make a tour of America. Then there is John Thompson, of Williamstown, Pa., an artist with a brilliant future assured, and Schneer, a young Russian of unusual ability.

"All of these will play the Knabe piano this season, and next year, as you already know, Moriz Rosenthal will be over. This will be an epoch making tour, for he is one of the greatest pianists of his day."

Loretta del Vallé Coming to America.

Owing to the war in Europe the American public will have an opportunity of hearing a new coloratura soprano this coming season who has created enthusiasm on the European Continent and whose engagements abroad are interrupted. This soprano is Loretta del Vallé, who will be in the United States early in the season.

Mme. del Vallé made a remarkable impression in Prague, where she sang, in the original key, the role of Queen of the Night in "The Magic Flute." Besides possessing a beautiful voice, Mme. del Vallé has a very attractive presence.

LORETTA DEL VALLÉ,
Colorature soprano.

MINNEAPOLIS ORCHESTRA SEASON.

PLANS FOR 1914-15.

"The directors of the Orchestral Association of Minneapolis take pleasure in announcing the opening of the twelfth season of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, Emil Oberhoffer, conductor, on the evening of Friday, October 23, 1914," says the prospectus of that organization.

The twelfth season is notable in that it marks the beginning of another five year guaranteed period. The appeal of the directors of the association for another guarantee fund has met with generous response on the part of the public and therefore the orchestra is financed adequately for another period of five years.

The home season will comprise the usual twelve Friday evening concerts, also twenty-one popular Sunday afternoon concerts divided into three series of seven concerts each, and, in addition, a series of six afternoon concerts to be devoted entirely to the works of Beethoven. This latter series of concerts marks an advance that Mr. Oberhoffer and directors of the association have long had under consideration, only awaiting the time when the Minneapolis public and the growing patronage from the surrounding territory were ready for additional concerts.

These Beethoven concerts will be given at 4 o'clock on Tuesday afternoons and will enable music lovers within a radius of one hundred miles to spend the day in the city, hear the concert, and return to their homes on the evening trains. It will also afford the first opportunity ever offered in the Northwest to hear in one season the complete symphony works of the great master.

Engagements of soloists for all concerts have been completed and the names and dates are given below. It is very probable, however, that the war in Europe will necessitate some changes. Where substitutions are unavoidable "every effort will be made to secure talent equivalent to that originally engaged," promises the association.

EMIL OBERHOFFER,
Conductor, Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra.

To raise a guarantee fund large enough to provide for all reasonable contingencies in carrying the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra forward for five years has required earnest work on the part of the directors of the association and increased liberality on the part of its financial supporters. Both have responded in full measure to the necessities of the situation and the directors of the association feel that equal support is due from the great public which the orchestra serves. Following are the details of the series:

DATES OF REGULAR SYMPHONY CONCERTS AND SOLOISTS.

October 23—Louise Homer.
November 6—Willy Burmester.
November 20—Feruccio Busoni.
December 4—Helen Stanley.
December 18—Cornelius van Vliet.
January 1—Jacques Thibaud.
January 15—Alice Verlet.
January 29—Josef Lhevinne.
February 5—Richard Czerwonky.
March 5—Arthur Shattuck.
March 19—Fritz Krcisler.

LEONARD BORWICK,
One of the soloists with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra.

April 1—Ninth symphony (Beethoven), with Lucille Stevenson, Genevieve Wheat, Reed Miller and Theodore Harrison.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONCERTS.

Six Young People's Concerts will be given on October 30, November 13, November 27, January 8, 8, January 22 and March 12.

SUNDAY POPULAR CONCERTS.

There will be twenty-one Sunday afternoon popular concerts in three series of seven concerts each. The soloists announced for the first series are as follows: October 25, Irene Jovani, soprano, of the Chicago Opera Company; November 1, Paulo Gruppe, second cellist of the orchestra; November 8, Sarah Suttel, pianist; November 15, Frances Ingram, contralto; November 22, Carl Uterhart, second concertmaster of the orchestra; November 29, Edna Gunnar Peterson, pianist; December 6, Andrea Sarto, baritone.

BEETHOVEN CYCLE.

November 24—Soloist to be announced.
December 7—Marion Green.
January 5—Leonard Borwick.
January 19—Maud Powell.
March 16—Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler.
March 31—Beethoven's ninth symphony, with Lucille Stevenson, Genevieve Wheat, Reed Miller and Theodore Harrison.

How to Be an Authority.

That well known contributor to an evening journal who styles himself "Londoner" has some amusing remarks to make about authorities upon abtruse musical subjects and such like matters, which are very much to the point, says

WENDELL HEIGHTON,
Manager, Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra.

London Musical News. His recipe is a familiar one: You wish, let us say, to be known as the Well Known Authority on Jews' Harps. Your path lies straight before you. A book must come first, such a book as an industrious compiler will put together in three weeks. Dilute the Encyclopædia Britannica's article on "Jews' Harps" with about twenty thousand additional words. Stir into the mass some popular archæology from the "History of the Worshipful Company of Jewsharpmakers." Add illustrations, an appendix on the Shawm, and another on the Psaltery. Your publisher will choose the title—"Chit-Chat about Jews' Harps" is in the modern manner. So soon as his circular of Christmas Books comes out you are a Well-known Authority, although it were better to clench the matter by reading to some patient archæological society a paper "On a Curious Form of the Jews' Harp discovered at Bromley-by-Bow," or "On the ritual use of the Jews' Harp among the Rosicrucians of Patmos."

Musical Note.

Why is the scholarly looking man slamming down his windows so hard?

I will tell you why the scholarly looking man is slamming down his windows so hard.

The scholarly looking man is slamming down his windows so hard because the hurdygurdy out in front is playing the same tunes that he paid $5 to hear last night at grand opera.—Jacksonville (Fla.) Metropolis.

SCHUMANN-HEINK
TOUR--SEASON 1914-15--NOW BOOKING
Direction: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 134th Street, New York
STEINWAY PIANO USED

KATHARINE COODSON
Management: Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York.
"A POETESS OF THE PIANO"
In America January to April 1915
TOUR NOW BOOKING
KNABE PIANO

M. H. HANSON RELATES EXPERIENCES ON HIS RETURN FROM EUROPE.

Well Known New York Concert Manager Reaches Home After an Eventful Voyage—Interesting Stories Told About Americans Now Abroad.

When Manager M. H. Hanson arrived in New York last Friday morning, August 28, after a ten-day trip filled with events long to be remembered, he was a happy man. Friends galore greeted the genial impresario, expressing their delight that he had succeeded in safely reaching this country, and he could not help but express himself as "glad to be back." A talk with Mr. Hanson soon convinced one as to the truth of this statement. The homeward trip was one of those mysterious voyages, with lights all out or dimmed, music of all kinds hushed, and numerous other strange and almost alarming features that have been described many times since refugees began to seek shelter on this side of the Atlantic. One of four men in a room just a little large for one, Mr. Hanson nevertheless enjoyed a novel trip. The stories he tells are unique and interesting.

Many persons, however, have gone through experiences somewhat similar, and current news stories are much the same. For this reason the following interview which Mr. Hanson gave to a representative of the MUSICAL COURIER upon his arrival in New York will prove of interest particularly to those who are anxious to learn any news about musicians still in the war territory.

"I left on the steamship Andania," said Mr. Hanson, "which sailed from Liverpool for Montreal on August 18, and it was through the courtesy of a very good friend of mine that I was able to secure my passage. From the time the vessel pulled out until I arrived in New York ten days later, incident after incident made the trip a series of interesting events, to say nothing of the awkward situations and unusual happenings that accompanied the latter part of my European visit. I was among musicians, however, so that my voyage across was by no means an unpleasant one.

"Although I spent ten days in London, I had been there but one or two days before a host of friends learned of my arrival and called on me at the Savoy Hotel. It was remarkable how many artists came to see me with a view to negotiating with me for concerts in America. I discouraged them as much as possible and tried to persuade them not to cross the Atlantic, for I believe that the average American artists are at least the equals of, and in some cases, superior to their English confreres, be they violinists, pianists or singers, and in some instances even superior. I may be wrong, but it is my personal opinion that any engagements canceled because of inability of artists to reach America should go to American artists.

"It was my good fortune to see three of my American artists sail from Europe before the great rush set in. There was Marcella Craft, the prima donna of the Munich Opera House; Myrna Sharlow, the beautiful young soprano of the Boston Opera Company who, as late as July 17, sang at Covent Garden, and Vida Llewellyn, the pianist, who comes from Chicago. All three of these artists achieved a brilliant European success with an American training.

"Many of our American artists are now stranded in Europe. I have tried in vain to get in touch with Helen Stanley, who, I believe, went with the King Clarks to the north of Sweden to do some salmon fishing. In vain I tried to locate the Busonis, Burmesters, Edyth Walker, Arthur Alexander and others, but even if I was unsuccessful, it is my belief that all will be here in time to fill the large list of engagements which I have booked for them. They will all get here somehow.

"On the last day of July when I found that it was impossible to get a boat from Boulogne, I went to Ostend. While Paris was in a fever heat of excitement, Ostend enjoyed a concert by John McCormack at the Kursaal, over three thousand attending. On the afternoon of that same day I saw on the Promenade a group of persons prominent in musical life. Of course all were discussing the war. In one group that I noticed in front of us were Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Nikisch, Director Gregor, of the Vienna Opera House, and Mrs. Gregor; Heinrich Haensel and Mrs. Haensel, Louis Blumenberg, the Misses Blumenberg, Daniel Mayer and his son and daughter, who had come over with John McCormack. Other groups of minor celebrities also were noted.

"Twenty-four hours later the only musical persons left in Ostend were the Godowskys, the Blumenbergs and myself. Leopold Godowsky had a pocket full of Austrian money; Mr. Blumenberg had a large draft on Paris and a good many English bank notes, and I had a French bank note for a thousand francs. We all had great difficulty in raising sufficient Belgian money to get us over to England.

"As stated, on that Sunday night John McCormack sang before three thousand persons. On the next night, Monday, there were not three hundred in the Kursaal, and on Tuesday night there was not thirty.

"On the pier at Ostend I met Richard Czerwonky, concertmaster of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, who, with some thousand or so others, had just arrived from Vienna. All Mr. Czerwonky carried was his fiddle; he had not even a spare shirt. He was glad enough to get to Ostend.

"Leo Schultz I met in London. He and his wife had arrived from Carlsbad, their belongings consisting of a cello. He was without a penny and had to accept the hospitality of a friend. But he carried a large sum in Hamburg-American checks, and as soon as the banks opened the American Citizens' Committee in London advanced him fifty per cent. of the face value. This brings me to speak in highest terms of praise of this wonderful organization.

"Some of our most prominent citizens in London at this time banded together and formed this committee, electing as chairman Theodore Hetzler, vice-president of the Fifth Avenue Bank, New York, and marvelous indeed was that man's organization. The rooms of the committee occupied all the banquet halls and ball rooms of the Savoy Hotel. The rooms were crowded with thousands of Americans from morning until night. Everything was so splendidly organized that there was no confusion and no mixup. Every day thousands entered the committee's rooms looking gloomy and forlorn; they emerged, however, full of good cheer and assured that they would reach America even if some delay had to be endured.

"Theodore Hetzler and Oscar Straus had a good word for everybody. The whole committee worked from nine o'clock in the morning until late at night.

"Extraordinary also was the courtesy shown American citizens by the Secretary of the American Embassy, who opened special offices in connection with the committee's headquarters at the Savoy Hotel, and where the work of obtaining passports was made much easier."

Boston Pianist in Munich.

A much belated letter dated Munich, July 29, was received this week from Heinrich Gebhard by the Boston representative of the MUSICAL COURIER. In it Mr. Gebhard enclosed the accompanying snapshot taken on board the steamship Amerika on the way over and tells also of his delightful crossing and his anticipatory enjoyment of the "Ring" performances which he intended to attend in toto.

He also mentioned a prospective visit to Bayreuth to see his friend Dr. Carl Muck and hear him conduct "Parsifal."

When one considers how soon after the date of this letter Germany declared war, it seems rather strange that not a passing hint had seemingly reached Mr. Gebhard; this fact is quite in accordance with the tales of [illegible] travelers, who all speak of the extraordinary [illegible] the German press until practically the last moment.

Van Yorx Studios Open September 14.

Theodore van Yorx, tenor, announces the opening of his vocal studios September 14. His association for more than fifteen years in professional work with all the great oratorio societies and orchestras of the country, and his broad experience in concert and recital work, eminently fit him to be of aid to singers and teachers in all branches of the vocal art.

THEODORE VAN YORX.

A specialty is made of the requirements of church work, in which Mr. van Yorx has had over twenty years' experience.

Ragtime All Over Again.

Last week we heard of a dairyman using music to stimulate the milk giving properties of his cows, and now comes this news dispatch from Cincinnati:

"Bill Perkins, noted horse trainer, is a believer in music to soothe nervous racers. Perkins is at the Latonia race course and has installed a phonograph in his stable. The trainer says there is nothing like music to quiet a nervous horse just before it goes to the post or returns from a race. He says the animals prefer ragtime."

Ragtime? That's discouraging. As soon as humanity has been uplifted musically the uplifters will have to start the process all over again with the dumb animals.—Houston (Tex.) Chronicle.

During the 1913-14 season, 418 concerts were given at Munich, a decrease of twelve, as compared with the previous year. At Berlin there have been 1,262 concerts, at Vienna 603, at Hamburg 351, at Dresden 309, at Leipsic 295, and at Frankfurt 212.—Exchange.

A QUARTET CROSSING THE ATLANTIC.
Standing: Heinrich Gebhard, the Boston pianist, and Marcian Thalberg, the Paris pianist. Seated; Max Zach, conductor of St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, and Carl Stasny, of Boston.

Articles of general musical interest, with or without pictures, will be examined by the Musical Courier if sent on approval, accompanied by stamped envelope for the return of the manuscript. In the event of its acceptance, such matter will be paid for at space rates. Address all manuscripts to The Musical Courier Company, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York, Southeast corner of Thirty-ninth Street.

ATHLETIC TRAINING FOR SINGERS.

(Continued from page 28.)

many young students. In the sixties I was somewhat interested in certain branches of athletics: rowing, running and baseball, although I never had any competitive ambitions, but followed the sport purely for the enjoyment it brought, and the exercise certainly proved of invaluable aid to me when I began my studies for the operatic life in which I was successful.

For two years during the seasons of 1873-1874 I rowed on the Harlem River in a shell almost every afternoon from the Viaduct Bridge to and above High Bridge, and it is something of a pull when you have the tide against you from either direction. Also I did club swinging and practised with the medicine ball, which developed my biceps and forearm wonderfully. At the present time I can show biceps measurements of fourteen inches and forearm eleven inches. My abdominal muscles also became firm and pronounced, mostly derived from rowing (this exercise brings into action every muscle in one's body).

The opportunity came for me to go abroad for study in Italy, and after my arrival in Florence, where I remained two years, I began a systematic course of physical training for my career.

Every morning I was out at five o'clock, rain or shine, and after a light refreshment, consisting of two raw eggs stirred in a large glass of fresh milk, and a couple of crisp biscuits, started from my pension at the end of the Ponte Alle Grazie, along the Leurng 'Arno Serristori, through the Porta San Niccolo, following the Viale dei Colli, by the Piazza Michel Angelo to and through Porta Romana and Corso of the same name to Ponte Vecchio, returning to the starting point, a distance of five miles, then about half a mile to Via Fiesolana, where I had a fencing bout with the well known master, Romanellé, for thirty minutes, returning to the pension between half past seven and eight. Then a cold sponge bath, breakfast, writing in a book the thirty words of the Italian language memorized while walking (as I always studied when at this exercise). At ten-thirty my French lesson with Renault and at eleven-thirty my accompanist, Brizzi, with whom I reviewed my vocal work. Thereafter luncheon and at one o'clock in bed for one hour, and that nap was the saving of my health for many years, even up to the present time.

I then visited the galleries of the Uffizzi and Palazzo Pitté to study the great painters and sculptors for one hour. Between four and five o'clock a couple of party calls or else I attended to purchases for personal needs. At five o'clock every afternoon Signor Vannuccini was with me for my important work in vocalizing for one hour. Dinner at six-thirty and in the evening, possibly, the opera or some social engagement. As a rule, two or three nights I was in my room retiring quite early to be prepared for the usual grind on the following day.

A great many students lack judgment and overdo the physical work while others neglect it altogether. Both consequently fail to materialize.

Mehan's Summer Term.

John Dennis Mehan and Mrs. Mehan, of Carnegie Hall, New York, have had a most successful summer school of vocal music. It began July 7 and closed August 15, during which several scores of singers and teachers availed themselves of the opportunity to study. Among the most prominent and talented students this summer were: De Loss Smith, Director Missoula State University, Voice Department, Montana; Louis Mohler, Director School Music, Van Wert, Ohio; Maud Shamel, Director School Music, Macomb, Ill.; Edith Helgeson, Director School Music, Saskatoon, Canada; E. Rosenthal, concert and church singer, Kentucky; Simmons, concert and church singer, Memphis, Tenn.; Gordon Reed, concert and church singer, Memphis, Tenn.; Ruth Rusby, concert and church singer, Newark, N. J.; Grace Kellar, concert and church singer, Los Angeles, Cal.; Caroline Coxe, concert and church singer, New York City; Dan Brown, concert and church singer, Ft. Worth, Texas; Marion Easton, concert and church singer, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Howard Wheat, concert and church singer, Passaic, N. J.; Fanny Forward, concert and church singer, Denver, Col.; Aura Chessington, Director Voice, Mayaguez University, Porto Rico; Alvin Gretell, church and concert artist, New York; Orla Bangs, church and concert artist, New York; Samuel McConnell, New York, and Mary Jordan, concert, church, oratorio and opera contralto, and others.

The autumn and winter season begins September 19, when these prominent vocal instructors will, of course, be as busy as usual. This means over a hundred lessons weekly.

Frances Ingram on Motor Trip.

Frances Ingram, the American contralto, whose season opens with a Southern tour as soloist with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, passed through New York last week on an extended motor trip. Miss Ingram is congratulating herself on having spent her vacation in America instead of going abroad.

The doors of the San Carlo Theatre of Lisbon still remain closed. The upper middle class of Lisbon has deserted the theatre since the advent of the republic, protesting in this way against a rule with which they are out of sympathy.—Exchange.

WANTED

WANTED—Piano studio with established clientele. Prominent pianist-teacher would buy or invest in conservatory. Manhattan only. Address "Artist," care Musical Courier, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.

WANTED—A good teacher of piano, whose studio is in New York, and who has studied with Monsieur Isidore Philipp in Paris; a teacher who not only uses the French method, but prepares pupils for study with M. Philipp and one thoroughly prepared to teach, wanted by a young pupil who studied in Paris with this teacher. Address "R. H. A.," care Musical Courier, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.

WANTED.—A position by a female violinist in an educational institution in the United States. Has a European education, training and experience. Credentials and references furnished. Address "S. A. M.," care Musical Courier.

WANTED—There is a splendid opportunity for a good piano, violin or singing teacher to connect with a musical institution of the highest standing in one of the leading cities of the United States by investing moderate sum in the institution. Only men or women of superior ability culture and refinement considered. Steady income assured to the proper persons. All communications confidential. Send photo, credentials, telephone number and complete particulars to "Cooperative Opportunity," care of Musical Courier, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York.

S. Costantino
Italian Vocal Instructor
Pietro A. YON
Concert Organist and Composer
STUDIO 853 AND 836 CARNEGIE HALL, NEW YORK

EDWARD FREEMAN
SOLO PIANIST
Majestic Theatre, Erie, Pa.
(Limited number of Pupils accepted)

CARL BERNTHALER

CONDUCTOR
PITTSBURGH FESTIVAL ORCHESTRA

TEACHERS' LOOSE LEAF JOURNAL-LEDGER
A handy Account Book (pocket size) for teachers. The plan provides for the entry of a lesson any day of any month of any year. It provides for the posting of lesson terms; the entry of term payments for either private or class lessons; the charging of music or books and credits for payments. A complete journal and ledger all on one leaf. Packages of 50 sheets, 20c.; 100 sheets, 40c. The Binders are furnished in full morocco or imitation leather, and are equipped with six rings.
Price in full morocco, $1.10 Price in imitation leather (Texoderm) .85
CLAYTON F. SUMMY COMPANY, Publishers 64 E. Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill.

GAMBLE CONCERT PARTY BOOKING EVERYWHERE
CHARLES WILSON GAMBLE, Pilot - - East End, Pittsburg, Pa.

ROYAL CONSERVATORIUM of MUSIC in LEIPSIC
Own building with one large concert hall and two small halls, also fifty teaching rooms. Founded by F. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy in 1843. Yearly attendance, 950 students of all countries. Students received at Easter and Michaelmas each year, but foreigners received at any time, in accordance with page 9 of the regulations.
The course of tuition includes every branch of musical instruction, namely: Piano, all stringed and wind instruments, organ, solo singing and thorough training for the opera, chamber music, orchestra, and sacred music, theory, composition, history of music, literature and æsthetics.
Prospectus in English or German sent gratis on application.
Director of THE ROYAL CONSERVATORIUM of MUSIC DR. ROENTSCH

"You'll Like Gambleized Music"
IT'S "BOUND" TO GIVE SATISFACTION -— IT "COSTS" NO MORE

We supply Hinged, any octavo or sheet music published
Music sent on selection without any guarantee as to the amount to be kept.
Write for our liberal On Sale plan.
GAMBLE HINGED MUSIC CO.,
General Music Dealers. 65-67 E. Van Buren St., Chicago.

W. R. GARDNER, VOICE CULTUR
BUHL BUILDING
Residence Studio: 4605 Fifth Ave.
Phone, 3130 Schenley Pittsburgh, Pa.

ZOE FULTON
PRIMA DONNA CONTRALTO
Direction: Marc Lagen, 500 5th Ave., New York
Per. Add.: Pennsylvania College for Women, Pittsburg, P

WALTER SPRY
Piano Lecture-Recitals
Address Fine Arts Bldg. Chicag

CELÉNE LOVELAND
Pianist
4620 Lake Park Ave., Chicag
Phone, Kenwood 5871

HOTEL
POWHATAN
WASHINGTON
D.C.
HOTEL OF AMERICAN IDEALS
The Hotel Powhatan is the best, at the same time the newest, hotel in Washington.
Famous Pennsylvania Avenue, at the junction of 18th and H Streets, affords the site for this most luxurious and modern hotel.
Write for booklet with map.
CLIFFORD M. LEWIS, Manager

MUSICAL CO

A WEEKLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO MUSIC AN

Thirty-fifth Year | Price 15 Cents | Subscription $5.00 | Foreign, $6.25 Annually

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 10 | NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1914 | WHOLE NO. 1798

THE UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS
12 SEP 1914

YVONNE DE TRÉVILLE

COLORATURA SOPRANO

"Three Centuries of

A UNIQUE COSTUME-SC

...R OF SINGING.
...ll, 33 West 42nd St.
...yant. New York.
...cial Summer Course.

CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC,
...West 128th St., New York. Tel. 4152 Schuyler.
...ial course for teachers and professionals.
...s granted. Thorough course for beginners.
...Eberhard, Pres. (Thirty-ninth year.)

...URT SCHOOL
...Singing. Ear-Training. Musical Stenography. Normal courses in Public and Private School Music. Special coaching for church trials.
New York School, 1202 Carnegie Hall.
Address Brooklyn School, 1202 Lefferts Place.

PAUL SAVAGE,
VOICE CULTURE.
803 Carnegie Hall,
New York.

H. RAWLINS BAKER,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Studio, 622 Aeolian Hall.
Tel. 8296 Bryant.

MAX KNITEL-TREUMANN,
BARITONE.
Voice Culture—Art of Singing.
Studio, Carnegie Hall.
...ddress: Fifth Ave., New Rochelle, N. Y.

MRS. ... SMOCK MISS SUSAN S.
BOICE.
VOCAL STUDIOS.
43 E. 2... St., N. Y., Tel. 1977 Mad. Sq.

EUGENIE PA...ENHEIM,
THE CELEB... PRIMA DONNA.
Voice Cult... All Its Branches.
The Evelyn, 101... W. 78th St., New York City.
Tele...one: 7048 Schuyler.

MARY ...ISSEM DE MOSS,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
106 W. ...90th St. Phone, 3552 River.
Exclusive m'g't of Haensel & Jones, Aeolian Hall.

M... MINNA SCHLOEMANN,
...CAL INSTRUCTION—Serious Pupils Only.
... Manhattan Ave., N. Y. Phone, 4845 Riverside.

HENRY T. FLECK,
...Musical Department,
Normal ... New York.
69th St. and Park Ave. ... Tel. ...443 Plaza.

...ORENCE E. GALE,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals and Concerts.
...ruction, Leschetizky Method.
... St. Telephone, 5331 Columbus.

...ER MORRIS,
... BRANCHES.

ELIZABETH TOPPING
PIANO INSTRUCTION.
...54 W. ...04th St. ... New York.

ELIZABE... K. PATTERSON,
SOPRANO. TEACHER OF SINGING.
Studio ... West 104th Street.
'Phone, 8101 Riverside.

JANE... BULLOCK WILLIAMS,
...HER OF SINGING.
... Carnegie Hall.

JAMES P. DUNN,
Composer and Organist St. Patrick's Church, Jersey City. Instruction, Piano, Organ. Theory and Sight Singing. (Specialty Gregorian Chant and Catholic Church Music.) Phone, 782-R Bergen.

SIGNOR FILOTEO GRECO,
THE ART OF SINGING.
Studio: 62 East Thirty-fourth Street, New York.
Telephone: 4879 Murray Hill.

LOUISE KELLOGG,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
1211 Carnegie Hall. Tel. 1350 Columbus.

MORITZ E. SCHWARZ,
Ass't Organist, Trinity Church, New York.
RECITALS AND INSTRUCTION.
Address Trinity Church, New York.

ADOLF GLOSE,
Concert Pianist, Piano Instruction. Coach for professional and advanced singers.
Residence studio: 81 Morningside Ave., City.
'Phone, 2193-J Morningside.

LISBET HOFFMANN,
PIANIST.
12 Pierce Street, Stapleton (Staten Island).

WILBUR A. LUYSTER,
SIGHT SINGING SPECIALIST.
(Galin-Paris-Chevé Method).
Instructor 8 years at Metropolitan Opera Co. All Singers taught to read (church or otherwise). Rhythm, Ear Training. Supervisors' Course.
Tuesday and Friday Classes. 64 E. 34th St. N. Y.
Tel. 5469-J Bedford. 127 Quincy St.

Miss EMMA T...
...pils.
...ork City.
...ETC., TO

DR. A. MADELEY RICHARDSON
Member of the Faculty of Institute of Musical Art.
VOICE PRODUCTION AND TONE-PLACING.
Teacher of singing, from the earliest stages to Opera, Oratorio and Recital work.
Tel. Morningside 7587. Studio, 490 Riverside Drive.

JOHN W. NICHOLS,
TENOR.
330 W. 58th St., N. Y. C. Phone, 1434 Columbus.
Management: A. Friedberg, 1425 Broadway.

CLAUDE WARFORD,
TENOR.
Metropolitan Opera House.
1425 Broadway, New York.

CARL M. ROEDER,
PIANIST. INSTRUCTION.
607 Carnegie Hall and 423 East 140th St.

FREDERICK E. BRISTOL,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
No. 143 West 42d St., New York.

MR. CHARLES LEE TRACY,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Certified Teacher of the LESCHETIZKY METHOD.
Studio: Carnegie Hall, ... New York City.

JOSEPH PIZZARELLO,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Voice Developed—Style, Opera.
851-852 Carnegie Hall, New York.

WILLIAM NELSON BURRITT,
VOICE SPECIALIST
AND REPERTOIRE BUILDER.
128A East 10th Street.
Tel. Gramercy 3848.

WALTER L. BOGERT,
Ex-President of N. Y. State Music Teachers' Ass'n.
TEACHER OF SINGING.
Baritone. Lectures and Recitals.
130 Claremont Ave., New York. Tel. 291 Morn'side.
Tuesday and Friday Aeolian Hall.

Piano Instruction
Theory of Music
Telephone
7280 Schuyler
CARL HAHN,
Studio: 172 West 79th St. (The Avonel).

F. W. RIESBERG,
INSTRUCTION—PIANO, ORGAN, HARMONY.
With the "Musical Courier"; Sec'y Manuscript Society; Organist Central Baptist Church, New York. 439 Fifth Ave.; Tel. 4292 Murray Hill.
Residence, Park Hill, Yonkers, N. Y.

JESSIE DAVIS,
PIANIST.
Concerts—Recitals—Lessons.
Studio: 701 Pierce Bldg., Boston.

CARL FIQUÉ, PIANO
KATHERINE NOAK-FIQUE,
Dramatic Soprano
FIQUE MUSICAL INSTITUTE,
128 DeKalb Avenue, Brooklyn.

Miss GENEVIEVE BISBEE,
—Leschetizky Method—
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
Also limited number of resident pupils received.
38 East 60th St. 'Phone, 6109 Plaza.

WARD LEWIS,
ACCOMPANIST—With Mr. ... son 1914. With Riheldaffer-Gailey
Summer ...
... Riverside Drive, N...
Phone, ... Morningside.

ALICE GARRIGUE ...
ART OF SING...
172 West 70th St., N...

ESPERANZA GARR...UE,
ART OF SINGING.
Heathcote Hall, 600 West 114th St., New York.
Tel. 7814 Morningside.
(Bet. Broadway and Riverside Drive.)

MRS. WILLIS F. BACHELLER
TEACHER OF SINGING.
22 East 33d St. New York City.

MME. EMMA A. DAMBMANN,
(MRS. H...ANN G. FRIEDMANN.)
CONTRALTO.
Vocal Instruction, Concerts.
Residence Studio, Hotel Calumet
Phone: Columbus 1628. 340 West 57th St.

THE NEW YORK INSTITUTE FOR VIOLIN PLAYING, PIANO AND VOCAL CULTURE, 230 East 62d Street.
Complete musical education given to students from the begining to the highest perfection.
F. & H. CARRI, Directors.

MARY T. WILLIAMSON,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals, Concerts, Instruction.
Leschetizky Method. 21 East 75th St.
'Phone, 1302 Lenox.

MR. AND MRS. THEO. J. TOEDT,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Home Studio: 163 East 62d St., New York.

T. TERTIUS NOBLE,
ORGANIST AND MASTER OF THE CHOIR
Lessons in Organ, Theory and Composition.
St. Thomas' Church, Fifth Ave. and 53d St.

VON DOENHOFF,
VOICE—HELEN. PIANO—ALBERT.
1186 Madison Ave.
'Phone: 1332 Lenox.

DANIEL VISANSKA, VIOLINIST.
Nine years of successful teaching and concertizing in Berlin. Will accept engagements and a limited number of pupils.
Address: 25 West 126th St., New York.
Phone, Harlem 3427.
[In Philadelphia Mondays. Address 1821 Diamond St.]

ELENA DE OLLOQUI,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
111 East 62d St., New York. Tel., 2285 Plaza.

MME. LISETTE JOSTY-HAMMOND,
"Voice-placing and Singing" through "Correct Italian Enunciation."
Metropolitan Opera House Bldg.,
1425 Broadway, New York.

HERBERT WILBER GREENE,
SCHOOL OF SINGING.
Director of the Brookfield Summer School of Singing
701 Carnegie Hall, N. Y. City.

MUSICAL COURIER

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 10. NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1914. WHOLE NO. 1708

PARIS WARTIME HAPPENINGS.

H. O. Osgood, Now in London, Sends Latest Reports About Paris Musical Personages—Where They Are and What They Are Doing—The De Reszkes in Poland—French Artists at the Front.

16 Adamson Road, Swiss Cottage,
London, N. W., August 21, 1914.

Just a year ago this time I remember writing a Paris letter from London, where I happened to be for a few days on a business trip. Well, "here we are again," as the good clown of boyhood memories used to say, but under what different circumstances!

Though, to tell the truth, except for the troops occasionally marching by and the recruits drilling in all the parks and squares, up to the present life is absolutely normal. There is no outward suggestion of war, though every one is intensely conscious of it.

Paris Happenings.

Of Paris I must write mostly from hearsay, not having been there for over three weeks. Vacation had just begun for us at a little seaside place on the Picardy coast, only a few miles from Boulogne, so, war being declared, it was a very simple matter to hire a farm wagon, drive to that port, cross the Channel on a beautiful evening, altering the course twice to avoid French and English squadrons on patrol, and to come to London, all between midday and midnight.

And nearly everybody in the world musical, except those belonging to belligerent nations, who have had to join the armies, came to London as well. Louis Blumenberg, president of the Musical Courier Company, who came in from Ostend, has already written a letter giving information about those here, so I will jot down what little I know about Paris.

The daily papers have, of course, told all about what is going on there in daily life—or, rather, of what is not going on there, for, according to description, Paris is quiet beyond belief. Music, as music, has naturally ceased to exist. Military music has the call and it will not be the fault of the bands if the French are not victorious.

Military Music.

The French military music averages better than that of any other nation that I know of. The bands are made up of about sixty men, more than twenty of whom play reed instruments, giving a splendid body to the tone. Then there is a drum and bugle corps with each band, consisting of some twenty men.

All the military marches are so arranged that the band and the drum and bugle corps supplement each other throughout. Sometimes the band accompanies a stirring theme blown on the bugles; sometimes the band has the theme and the bugles an obligato. The contrapuntal effects are often very ingenious and effective and it is the most inspiring martial music imaginable.

Personal Mention.

Now as to persons. Jean de Reszke and his brother, Edouard, who were at Deauville, had gone, I am informed, to their estate in Poland before the war broke out. I do not remember just where it is situated, but it is to be hoped, for their sake, not too close to the German boundary.

Edward Lowry, press agent of the Boston Opera, came in from Paris three days ago with latest news. Among PARIS GRAND OPERA.

MARQUIS de TRABADELO
4, rue Marbeuf, Paris

Frederic Ponsot Soul professor de chent diplome par Mme. Mathilde Marchesi 151 Rue de Rome

Jean Verd PIANIST
35 Rue Vineuse · Paris

CAMILLE DECREUS
47 rue de la Tour :: :: :: PARIS

THUEL BURNHAM
PIANIST
IN PARIS ENTIRE SUMMER
119 Rue de la Tour (XVI) Paris

REGINA DE SALES TEACHER OF SINGING
Pupils Prepared for Opera, Oratorio, Concert
40 Rue de Villejust (Ave. du Bois de Boulogne), Paris.

VON STEEGE VOICE PLACEMENT
6, Chaussée de la Muette Opera, Repertoire
Director, Compagnie Internationale Lyrique

E. BERTRAN 28, RUE COPERNIC PARIS
Specialist In Volce Placement
Opera Concert

ELISABETH MACK Gesture Dramatic Action
LECTURE—RECITALS
French and English Readings
America—October to April
Address, care Musical Courier
(Especially for opera students)
Courses Begin April 1, 1914
Paris, 43, rue Michel Ange

Wager SWAYNE Planists Prepared for Public Appearances
39 Rue de Prony (Parc Monceau) - - PARIS

DELMA-HEIDE
30 Rue Marbeul (Champs-Elysées,) Paris
Maestro di Bel Canto Italiano
Prepares Singers lor Opera and Concert in Italian, French, German and English

Jean de Reszke
53 Rue de la Faisanderie
Paris

L. d'AUBIGNÉ
Teacher of Singing
30, AVENUE KLEBER :: :: PARIS

LAMPERTI-VALDA
SCHOOL OF SINGING
61 Avenue Niel - - - Paris, France
All Communications to Be Addressed to
MME. GIULIA VALDA

ARTHUR
ALEXANDER
TENOR
Teacher of Singing
14, rue Raynouard, Paris

American Tour Beginning
February 1915
Management M. H. HANSON

the Boston Opera artists at the front in France are Vanni Marcoux—born in Italy, by the way, but a naturalized Frenchman—and the tenor Muratore, who is a captain.

From an indirect but very probably an entirely reliable source, it was reported that Jacques Thibaud, the eminent violinist, was in Paris over ten days ago taking leave of his friends, as he was obliged to go in the very first days of the mobilization.

Of those whose names appear each week on the Paris page of the MUSICAL COURIER, I presume that Gabriel Lapierre, vocal teacher and coach, who was in America last season with Melba and Kubelik; Camille Decreus, pianist, well known in America from his tours with Ysaye and Frederic Ponsot, the sole Paris representative of Mme. Marchesi's vocal method, are all in service somewhere, as the first call in France brought out all men up to forty-nine years of age, the older men being employed in guarding the railroads, garrison duty, etc. I am not absolutely sure as to these gentlemen, for one of them may have been exempt from military service; as is Jean Verd, pianist, who is still in England with Oscar Seagle.

Martinus Sieveking, the eminent pianist, is a Dutchman by birth, and, if I am not mistaken, still retains that nationality, though whether he has remained at his summer

HENRY WELDON,
Bass of the Century Opera Company, New York.

home at Vaucresses-sur-Mer or returned to Paris, I do not know. Probably the former.

MAROONED AMERICANS.

Of the Americans, I know that the vocal teachers Arthur Alexander, Charles Bowes and Giula Valda are still in Paris. I presume there are even occasional lessons for left over pupils, though I heard of one teacher, whose studio was on the ground floor, and who was requested to give up lessons for the present, as the singing of anything except patriotic songs was not in accord with the earnest and serious feelings of the people.

Another teacher who was still in Paris a few days ago is Enrico Bertran. I presume Mme. de Sales is still there as well. Arthur Shattuck, the pianist, was here a few weeks ago, but returned to the Continent, and I do not know his whereabouts. Probably Thuel Burnham is there as well, as he had planned to remain in the city all summer.

Lloyd d'Aubigné was still there at last accounts, but was hoping to get to Italy, to establish himself there temporarily. Some of his English pupils have gone home. Felice Lyne, the American prima donna, who has been working this summer with Mr. d'Aubigné, came here to London with her mother. They were among those so fortunate as to get away with all their luggage, coming down the Seine all the way to Havre on a specially chartered steamer with a party of English and Americans, and sailed from that port to Southampton.

Henry Weldon, first bass of the Century Opera, was here for a day or two last week, accompanied by his wife, on the way from Paris to New York, for which port he sailed last Saturday. He, too, was so fortunate as to be able to bring all his baggage, including costumes, having transported it from Paris to Boulogne in an automobile.

Arnolde Stephenson, the soprano, is held up at Lucerne for the present, though I understand that she is likely to get through to America later for some concert work in the fall and winter.

To mention other Paris teachers, the Marquis de Trabadelo is probably at San Sebastian, Spain, as he had planned to leave for that place before the war. Of Wager Swayne, teacher of piano, and Elisabeth Mack, dramatic coach, I have no news. Probably Miss Mack, at least, is still in Paris.

HUMORS OF WAR.

There is a humorous side to things as well. For instance, on the very Saturday on which the general mobilization was ordered, the new offices of the musical agency Marco were finished after long delay; and on the same day the partners scattered to the four corners of the earth—more or less—M. de Paty remaining for duty in France; M. de Potter, a lieutenant in the Belgian army, leaving at once for the fighting line at Liège, and Alexander Kahn coming to London.

H. O. OSGOOD.

Prof. Franz Ries, chief conductor of the Cassel Opera, died in that city a few weeks ago.

JOHN HEATH PIANIST AND TEACHER
(Care Paris Office, Musical Courier)

ARNOLDE STEPHENSON SOPRANO
Management: Daniel Mayer, London A. Dandelot, Paris

MARTINUS SIEVEKING Planist
INSTRUCTION BY A NEW METHOD.
Pupils limited. Results guaranteed.
36, rue Theophile Gautier, Paris, XVI.

WILLY von SADLER
TEACHER OF SINGING (Italian Method)
STUDIO 23, rue de l'Universite - - - PARIS

THE FRANCES E. DEVERELL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS
9 rue de Chaillot, Paris, France (Champs-Elysées). Exclusive residence district. Thorough French Course. Art lectures in great galleries. Season box at Opera. Travel classes. Address Mrs. G. J. Deverell, 100 Cedar St., Lapeer, Michigan, or Mlle. Deville Chabrol 82 rue Vaneau, Paris.

GABRIEL LAPIERRE
(With Melba and Kubelik in America, Winter 1913-14)
Teacher of Singing
15 bis Boul. Jules Sandeau - - PARIS

Mme. KATE ROLLA
Former Prima-Donna, Covent Garden, London; Imperial Opera House, Moscow and St. Petersburg; San Carlo, Naples; Metropolitan, New York, etc.
PUPIL OF MARCHESI
Voice Culture, Opera or Concert, Repertoire, Diction.
Paris Studio
Pupils taken En Pension. Address, 11 rue Scribe

OSCAR SEAGLE
"New House," Bramber, Sussex, England, from June to September, 1914
IN AMERICA OCTOBER TO MAY, 1914-1915
Management: Loudon Charlton, Carnegie Hall, New York

SHEET MUSIC IN PARIS
The only store carrying a large stock of German, Russian, English and American music as well as French music.
MAX ESCHIG
TWO STORES—
72 Rue Lafitte (Near Boulevard des Italiens)
48 Rue de Rome (Near the Conservatory)

CHARLES W. CLARK
AMERICAN TOUR SEASON 1914-15
BARITONE 12 Rue Leonard de Vinci, :: PARIS

CONSERVATORY CHANGES ARE MADE IN DETROIT.

Detroit Institute of Musical Art Enters the Field—Michigan Conservatory Is No More—Philharmonic Course—Current Notes.

Detroit, Mich., August 31, 1914.

The lethargy which has characterized musical Detroit during the summer months is rapidly giving place to signs of renewed activity. The concert season will not open until October, but the schools and private teachers begin in September. There will be several changes in the local musical field. The Michigan Conservatory, established by Alberto Jonas, and for many years most influential in the musical life of the city, and in fact, of the entire State, went into bankruptcy in June and its teachers have established themselves elsewhere. Guy Bevier Williams, head of the piano department; Charles Frederic Morse, head of the organ department, and E. Britton Manville, of the theory department, will head similar departments in the new Detroit Institute of Musical Art, whose vocal department is headed by William Howland, for many years at the University School of Music at Ann Arbor. Mrs. M. D. Bentley and Margaret Mannebach, two successful piano teachers of the Michigan Conservatory, have also cast their fortunes with the new school.

May Leggett-Abel, head of the violin department of the Michigan Conservatory, together with her husband, Frederic L. Abel, former director and secretary, will open a school devoted to the teaching of the violin, cello, viola, harmony, theory of music, etc. With them will be associated Ola Dafoe-Eustace, Lillian Lachman Silver and Clara Koehler Heberlein, pianists.

The Ganapol School announce the acquisition of Hildegarde Brandgee, violinist, and Vera Poppe, cellist.

The Detroit Conservatory, now entering its forty-first year, and the MacDonald School announce no important changes.

PHILHARMONIC COURSE.

Manager James E. DeVoe's brilliant Philharmonic Course will begin in October. It includes many favorites and many who will be heard for the first time in Detroit.

NOTES.

Victor Benham, the well known pianist, at one time connected with the Michigan Conservatory, announces that on account of the war he is forced to abandon his European engagements and will remain in Detroit, teaching and concertizing.

Louie Davison, one of Detroit's best women violinists, goes to Los Angeles for the season, where she will teach and concertize.

Louise Lyon, soprano; Harriet Story Macfarlane, contralto; Charles Hargreaves, tenor, and Archibald Jackson, baritone, will furnish the music for the camp fire entertainments during the G. A. R. encampment, now in session.

JENNIE M. STODDARD.

STAIRCASE, PARIS GRAND OPERA.

Max Deuk, the young Munich composer and critic, was killed recently by falling into an abyss in the Tyrolean mountains.

PIANOS IN PARIS

Weber & Steck Pianos. Pianolas. Pianola-Pianos

We invite comparison with any and all French makes both as regards quality and price.

Renting for Music Students a Specialty

THE AEOLIAN CO., 32, AVENUE DE L'OPERA

Where the Russians Fail.

Again and again I have insisted that a truer analogy than painting to music is architecture, and of true building there is little to be found in the work of any Russian, excepting Borodin. Even his architecture is not of the German sort; there is no solidly lain foundation on which a stately edifice is raised with crowning spires and pinnacles; rather we have cartloads of gorgeous material piled up with an extravagant hand, the different brilliantly colored pieces placed in an order which is right enough, but not mortised or cemented firmly together in the approved Beethoven fashion. This is a very real defect; the intellect demands a satisfaction before we can consider a composition to be of the finest kind; an appeal only to the emotions and to our sensuous nature leaves us dissatisfied; we want the full meal and not merely ices and fruit. To get rid of mixed metaphors, the music of Borodin and Mussorgsky is not architectural, but a wild, luxuriant tropical growth. They could not build; their natures forbade the endeavor; if they had tried we should have had some tame and colorless imitations of the classical models which no one would have hearkened to. Happily they did not, could not, try, but let their imaginations be master and run off with them, and we have such a splendid masterpiece as "Prince Igor"—a masterpiece, but not the very tiptop sort of masterpiece.—J. F. Runciman in London Saturday Review.

Another Tender Heart.

Clara—Going in for charity again, are you? What is the charity this time?

Dora—We are going to distribute cheap copies of Beethoven's symphonies among the poor. Music is such an aid to digestion, you know.—New York Weekly.

Mme. OLIVE FREMSTAD

Exclusive Management FOSTER & DAVID, 500 Fifth Avenue, New York

NOW IN AMERICA—DATES BOOKING SEASON 1914-1915

STEINWAY PIANO USED

Alberto JONAS
Jenaer St. 29, Berlin, W.

HOWARD WELLS
PIANIST AND TEACHER
Authorized representative of
LESCHETIZKY
KUFSTEINER, ST. 6 BERLIN W., GERMANY

ELEANOR HAZZARD
PEOCOCK
(SOPRANO)
Exclusive Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON
437 FIFTH AVENUE - - - NEW YORK CITY

OLGA AND HELENE CASSIUS
Vocal Instruction
Pupils prepared for the operatic and concert stage. Specialties: Placing of ruined voices, rectifying of wrong methods of breathing by articulation of consonants and voice inflection, and fundamental building of speaking voice. Send for Olga Cassius' "Die Erzieuhung der Stimme und Atmung."
Studio: Prager Str. 35, Berlin, W.

MAURICE VERA KAPLUN
ARONSON
PIANIST-PEDAGOG CONCERT-PIANISTE
BERLIN, W. BOZENER ST. 18

VICTOR HEINZE
Send for free booklet "Studying Music Abroad"
Pianist and Teacher Most modern principles. Thorough artistic education. Eminently successful.
PETER VISCHER STR. 19 BERLIN-FRIEDENAU

VITTORIO MORATTI
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
For four years the only assistant of the late G. B. LAMPERTI
Authorized representative of his method
BERLIN W., MOTZ ST. 53

GEORGE
FERGUSSON
BARITONE
VOCAL INSTRUCTOR
Augsburger St., 64 Berlin W., Germany

SUMMER CLASS FOR THE
LESCHETIZKY METHOD
UNDER INSTRUCTION OF
MRS. POTTER-FRISSELL
IN NEW SCHANDAU-OSTRAU, SAXON SWITZERLAND, GERMANY
Address Villa 6, as above.
Class continues until October 15, 1914

King Clark Studios
Kurfürstendamm 63, Berlin, W.
Cable Address: KINGARK, BERLIN

MME. VALERI'S ACTIVITIES.

New Successes in the Correction of Voices Inpaired by Poor Training—A Well Known and Successful Developer of Singers.

The truth of the statement made on many occasions by Alessandro Bonci, the tenor, that Mme. Valeri is a born vocal teacher endowed with an unsurpassed sensitive ear and wonderful discriminating power, has received new proof through some of the recent developments on the part of pupils working with her.

Diamond Donner has a light soprano voice of unusual beauty. By her talent and will power she found her way to the stage of the Boston Opera Company, where she made several successful appearances in "La Boheme" and the "Barber of Seville." The press of Boston accorded her encouraging words of praise, though acknowledging the necessity for her to perfect her voice, especially in the upper register. After studying one year with Mme. Valeri her high C sharp, which at first seemed to constitute for her an almost insurmountable difficulty, is now a beautiful note, rich and ringing. Miss Donner says: "I can now cope with the hardest situations in my repertoire. I can sing E flat, E natural and F above high C with an amazing ease, which seems to me like a dream. I owe this wonderful result exclusively to Mme. Valeri. It is too bad that every one does not know what this wonderful teacher is capable of accomplishing for young singers who have to contend with these difficulties."

(TOP PICTURE) DIAMOND DONNE. (CENTRE) GRACE BREEN AND MME. VALERI ON THE BEACH AT NEPONSIT, L. I. (LOWER) JOLE PASTORI.

Miss Donner has received many tempting offers to appear in comic opera, but her desire is to reach the grand opera stage. She will sing again at the Boston Opera in a few subscription performances the coming season—provided opera is given by this company.

Jole Pastori, a San Francisco girl, who came all the way to New York to study with Mme. Valeri, on the advice of Signor Bonci, had planned to leave for Italy on October 1 to make her debut in opera there. On account of conditions at present in Europe her departure will be postponed until a later date, to be announced soon. Her beautiful lyric soprano voice has succeeded in attracting the attention of many people prominent in operatic circles, who have had the good fortune to hear her talking machine record of "Caro nome." One of the great artists, a singer of renown, after hearing this record, became greatly interested in this young girl, to whom a brilliant career is practically assured. Miss Pastori has just left for San Francisco, where she is to sing in concert the middle of September. She will return to New York to resume studying with Mme. Valeri about October 1.

An unusual opportunity to prove her ability as a vocal teacher was given Mme. Valeri by a new pupil, Grace Breen, a young soprano, daughter of Judge Matthew Breen, of New York. Miss Breen attracted a great deal of interest when she appeared in her recital at Carnegie Hall last October, and although she fully deserved the applause of the audience, which filled this great hall, and the praises bestowed upon her by the New York critics, it was quite apparent at the time that her sweet and unusual voice needed further training to secure the development of all its promising possibilities. Mme. Valeri has been successful in bringing about this development. Those who have heard Miss Breen recently, after having studied but eight months with Mme. Valeri, have expressed great surprise at the change and improvement. This improvement is clearly shown in range, volume, steadiness, flexibility, and, above all, in beauty and purity of color. It is really an entirely different voice. Miss Breen has had several offers to sing in light opera, but with great determination she is directing her efforts to a higher plane of musical activities, and it is likely that New York will soon hear this young American singer in opera. Miss Breen will appear in a concert November 15 at the Brooklyn Academy of Music, which will precede her appearance in opera.

Siegel in London.

R. E. Johnston is in receipt of an interesting European letter from Louis Siegel, the violinist, which he very kindly places at the disposal of the MUSICAL COURIER:

London, August 11, 1914.

DEAR MR. JOHNSTON: Arrived in London a couple of days ago with Mr. Godowsky and family after having quite a narrow escape and almost missing the last boat and almost having my violins run off with. I have been recovering the last few days.

We were all ready to leave and my violins were in the auto covered by a rug, and I went into the house to get the folks. On coming out, imagine my horror in finding no automobile and, naturally, no violins either. I was for a second almost crazy, as there was no way of reaching any one or anything; no telephone or telegraph; no auto taxis for love of money, and I was absolutely penniless.

Not knowing what I was doing, I jumped on a bicycle and rode like the devil in the direction of Ostend; saw the automobile in front of the telegraph station filled with officers. The head one was an old friend of mine from Liège, where I studied, and he drove back and took all of us to the boat, which we reached just in time. They had not even seen my violins, as they were covered up.

The Godowskys barely escaped and we got away with nothing but a couple of valises.

I am trying to get to the United States as soon as possible. Will let you know from time to time how everything is.

A friend of mine is taking this letter over, as the post is unreliable at present. My address is the Hotel Grafton, London, for the present. May see you sooner than you think.

Yours sincerely,
(Signed) LOUIS SIEGEL.

Reuben Davies' Concert Engagements.

Reuben Davies, the young American concert pianist, has been engaged to appear at Mound City, Mo., on October 23, and at Hiawatha, Kan., about one week later.

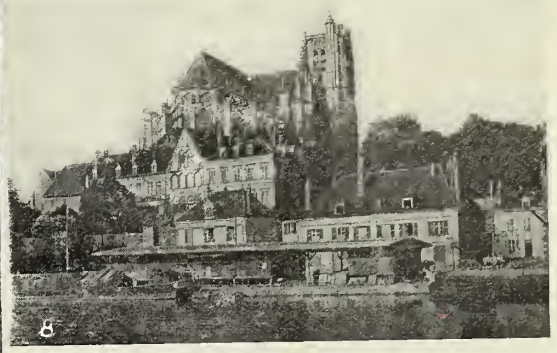
The following clipping is from the Hiawatha (Kan.) Democrat, of August 20, 1914:

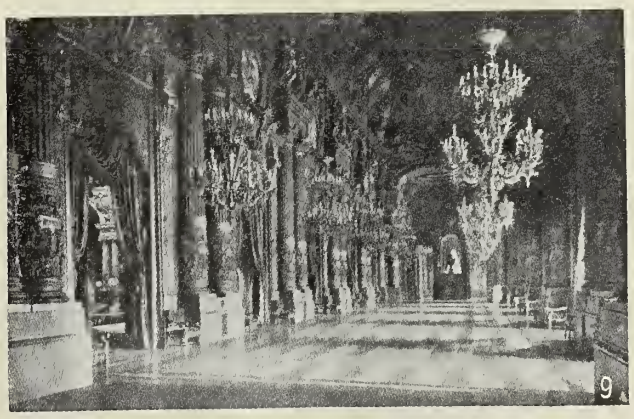
This winter Hiawatha is to listen to real artists of real worth, a pleasure that it has not always enjoyed. The opening recital will be in October, followed by a holiday number and a spring matinee. The artists secured for these recitals are Reuben Davies, Herman Springer and Miss Yarger. These artists will give piano, oratorio, reading and vocal recitals.

All are beginning to know something of Reuben Davies and his artistic value. We are pleased to announce that Hiawatha will be able to while away a few moments in musical thought with him.

(Advertisement.)

Steinway Studios, Berlin
Berlin, S. W. Bergmann St. 102
Very accessible, modern, sound-proof studios with Steinway Grands for rent.
For terms apply to warerooms
STEINWAY & SONS
Koniggratzer St. 6, :: :: :: :: Berlin, W., 9





(1) Opera House, Rheims, France. (2) Raymond Poincaré, President of France. (3) Opera House, Verdun, France. (4) Latona's Basin at Versailles (from the Theosophical Path). (5) Illustrated facade of the Théatre des Champs-Elysées, Paris, where the Boston-Covent Garden Opera Companies were heard during the summer. (6) The Palace of Fontainbleau: View from the park (from the Theosophical Path). (7) The top of the tower of the Palace of the Popes, at Avignon, France, and a view of a part of the city. It was on the second story of the Tour des Anges that Clement VI (1342-1352) had his apartments. (8) The wonderful old cathedral at Auxere, erected between the years 1200 and 1500 in the form of a beautifully proportioned Latin cross. (9) Wonderful foyer of the Paris Grand Opera. (10) Statue of Rabelais, Chinon, France (from the Theosophical Path). (11) Théatre des Champs-Elysées, where the Boston Opera Company performed (photo by Boston News Company, Boston, Mass.).

IN VIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

[PORTRAITS AND SCENES DEALING WITH RUSSIA, ENGLAND AND OTHER COUNTRIES WILL BE PUBLISHED IN EARLY ISSUES OF THE MUSICAL COURIER.]

EMIL J. POLAK
ACCOMPANIST AND COACH
Address: 217 E. 71st St., New York City Telephone 923 Leno[x]

HARRISON WALL JOHNSON
CONCERT PIANIST
Minneapolis

MARGARET KEYES CONTRALTO
WITH CHICAGO GRAND OPERA CO.
Management, THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU, 1 W. 34th St. New York
Personal Address, 600 West 138th St. Phone 1810 Audubon

Walter Henry Hall
Professor of Choral Music
Columbia University
Address, 49 Claremont Avenue

Angelo CORTESE
America's Distinguished
HARPIST
Management, Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, N. Y.

CORNELIUS VAN VLIET
Dutch Cellist
2514 Emerson Ave., S., Minneapolis, Minn.

Carl Pohlig
CONDUCTOR
Address: VILLA POHLIG, PLANEGG
near Munich, GERMANY

MARGARET HUSTON
SOPRANO
In Europe Season 1914-15

Nana
GENOVESE
MEZZO SOPRANO. Formerly Manhattan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts, Recitals and Musicales
EXCLUSIVE MANAGEMENT, ANNIE FRIEDBERG, 1425 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

J. FRED WOLLE
ORGANIST
Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau
1 West 34th Street, New York

GIORGIO M. SULLI
Teacher of Carmen Melis, Clara Clemens, Mme. Martha de Lachmann, Reinhold von Warlich, Mario Sammarco, Lena Mason, Tarquinia Tarquini and other well-known singers of Grand Opera or Concerts. Musical Director of the Labor Temple Choir, New York. Teaching during summer, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday only. Special terms.
VOCAL STUDIO. 1425 Broadway
Metropolitan Opera House Building, New York
(Phone, 2762 Bryant)
Public Recitals throughout season for advanced pupils. Write for Circulars.

JAN SICKESZ
DUTCH PIANIST
American Tour Begins October, 1914
Management ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, New York
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

Edgar Stillman Kelley Returns from Europe.

Edgar Stillman Kelley, the noted American composer and member of the MUSICAL COURIER staff, who sailed for Europe on April 9 in order to conduct his "New England" symphony at Altenburg, near Leipsic, by special invitation of the Liszt Verein, returned to America on the steamship Ryndam, of the Holland-American Line, which sailed from Rotterdam on August 22, arriving in New York September 2.

Mr. Kelley's sojourn in Germany was necessarily somewhat curtailed and his original plans greatly interfered with. After the performance of his symphony in Altenburg, he visited Munich and other cities of south Germany, returning to the north to attend a performance of his string quartet, op. 25, by the Waldemar Meyer Quartet at the famous Bertrand Rose Salon at Dresden. This work was again played by the same organization at a reception tendered Mr. Kelley by the American Women's Club in Berlin, end of May.

EDGAR STILLMAN KELLEY.

From Berlin Mr. Kelley went to Leipsic and thence to Ostend, where he met Nikisch and other notable personalities of the world of music. He was just about to visit Brussels when the war broke out, and he retired to London.

While in England Mr. Kelley attended the Shakespeare Festival in Stratford and saw fine productions of "Romeo and Juliet," "Henry V," "The Merry Wives of Windsor," etc., and had an interesting interview with the principal actor and director, F. R. Benson.

During his stay abroad Mr. Kelley everywhere received the distinction and consideration due to a composer of note. On his return home he found a large amount of work awaiting him in connection with the preparation of his scores for publication, the correcting of proofs, etc.

Chicago's Consolation.

Chicago complains that the war has robbed her of the splendid season of grand opera that had been planned. Chicago should not repine. She still has the large and justly famous stockyards, which have long been her pride and joy and should now furnish her solid consolation; for she may exist without opera, but without pork—no, she could not. It is unthinkable.—New York Morning Telegraph.

The Late Frank Lynes and His Work.

Arthur P. Schmidt, the Boston publisher, sends the MUSICAL COURIER a neatly prepared and carefully compiled booklet concerning the late Frank Lynes and his work. This booklet, copies of which may be obtained from the publishers free of charge, contains a biographical sketch with photograph and a comprehensive classified list of this talented musician's compositions.

Mrs. Lewis Enjoying a Rest.

Mrs. E. H. Lewis, of the Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, New York, after continuous attention to duties during Mr. Hanson's long absence in Europe, has left for a well earned holiday, to be spent at her Western home. She will remain in the West for some time.

Spiering to Come.

Theodore Spiering and his family, now in Berlin, will leave that city as soon as a sailing can be secured by them from Holland or Denmark. The noted violinist and conductor is arranging to come to New York and will perfect his later plans after arriving here.

WHITEHILL BASS-BARITONE
Formerly Metropolitan Opera
Management: The Wolfsohn
Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th Street, New York.

SLEZAK
The Great Czech Tenor
In America January, February, March and April, 1915
Exclusive Management:
HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York City
Hardman Piano Used

HENRIETTE BACH
VIOLINIST. Management, Wolfsohn Bureau, 1 W. 34 St., N. Y.

The HAMBOURG CONSERVATORY of MUSIC
PROFESSOR MICHAEL HAMBOURG, JAN and BORIS HAMBOURG, Directors
Unsurpassed faculty of over sixty teachers. Re-opens September 1st
TORONTO, CANADA

GIUSEPPE FABBRINI DISTINGUISHED ITALIAN PIANIST
Minneapolis

LIMA O'BRIEN
ACCOMPANIST
21 West 30th St. :: :: :: :: New York City

FREDERIC C. FREEMANTEL Teacher of Singing
89 South Tenth Street Minneapolis, Minn.

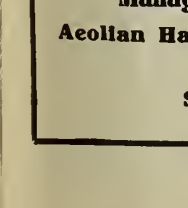
Mr. and Mrs. JOHN DENNIS MEHAN Season 1914-15 Begins Sept. 21, 1914. Until Sept. 19, Tel. Coney Island 2267
STUDIO: 70 CARNEGIE HALL
Telephone Columbus 5946

GAREISSEN STUDIO HALL: 64 East 34th St. NEW YORK CITY.

MABEL
GARRISON
SOPRANO
Metropolitan Opera Company
Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway : : New York City

JANE OSBORN-HANNAH
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Song Recitals Concert and Orchestral Appearances
AVAILABLE ENTIRE SEASON
Personal Management Chas. L. Wagner, 1451 Broadway, New York

JOHN McCORMACK
CELEBRATED IRISH TENOR
In America Entire Season 1914-15
Always and only under personal management of Chas. L. Wagner 1451 Broadway New York
Steinway Piano Used



RUDOLPH GANZ
"THE PIANIST WITH A MESSAGE"
Returns to America for
Season of 1914-1915
Exclusive Management, CHARLES L. WAGNER
1451 Broadway, New York
Steinway Piano Used

ALICE NIELSEN
Prima Donna Soprano
SEASON 1914-15 AMERICAN CONCERT TOUR
Personal Management, CHAS. L. WAGNER
1451 BROADWAY - - NEW YORK

LORETTA del VALLÉ
SOPRANO COLORATURA
First Time in America
Season 1914-15
OPERA—PRAGUE
OPERA—DRESDEN
OPERA—CASSEL
OPERA—MANHEIM

Mme. DE VERE-SAPIO
Prima Donna Soprano from Paris Grand Opera; La Scala, Milan; Covent Garden, London; Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., etc., etc., in America Season 1914-15. For terms and dates address:
65 Central Park West, New York.

ROMUALDO SAPIO
Formerly Conductor Metropolitan Opera, New York, and having coached the majority of great operatic artists, among whom: Adelina Patti, Nordica, Tamagno, Etc.
VOCAL STUDIO, 65 CENTRAL PARK WEST, N. Y.

Ellen Keller
VIOLINIST
In America Season 1914-15. NOW BOOKING
Exclusive Management;
Gertrude F. Cowen, 1451 Broadway, New York City

MME. MARIE RAPPOLD
Celebrated Prima Donna Soprano
of the Metropolitan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts —— January to June, 1915
Exclusive Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY

NEW YORK COLLEGE OF MUSIC
128-130 East 58th Street
CARL HEIN Directors AUGUST FRAEMCKE
The college has for its object the universal higher education in all branches of music—Department for those who desire to teach music—Course for Supervisors of Music in Public Schools—Opportunities and training for public appearance—40 Instructors of highest reputation—Newly engaged, Rubin Goldmark, Composition; Michel Sciapiro, violin.
CATALOG ON APPLICATION

ARTHUR SHATTUCK
The Distinguished American
PIANIST
In America Season 1914-15
Management, HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York
Steinway Piano Used

Josephine Kryl Coming Back to America.

Josephine Kryl, the young violinist from Chicago, who left only a few months ago to study under Eugen Ysaye in Europe, has just escaped from Belgium alone and unaided. She reached London without money, yet unharmed. During her stay in Europe Miss Kryl remained at the house of her instructor, Ysaye, whose home is only a few miles from Brussels. When war started Ysaye sent his three sons to join the army and they are believed to be still in the Liege forts.

When the Germans began moving on Brussels Miss Kryl started for Ostend alone and got through safely after many delays. At Ostend Miss Kryl was compelled to wait so long for a boat that her money gave out, but she found an elderly American refugee with enough English money to pay her way. On her arrival in London the women promptly took care of the courageous child and bought her a ticket through to Chicago by a steamer sailing in a few days.

JOSEPHINE KRYL.

Miss Kryl will tour this year with her sister, Marie Kryl, pianist, and her father, the well known bandmaster. The tour is now being booked by the Redpath Musical Bureau of Chicago.

Angelo Cortese and His Teacher.

The accompanying photograph shows Angelo Cortese, the brilliant young harpist (who is to be heard here this season under the management of Antonia Sawyer), with his famous teacher, the late Alphonse Hasselmans, who was recognized as the greatest of French harpists. Louis Hasselmans, son of Alphonse, and himself a musician, composer and conductor of note, and his wife and children, are also shown.

LEFT TO RIGHT: MRS. LOUIS HASSELMANS AND HER THREE CHILDREN, ALPHONSE HASSELMANS, ANGELO CORTESE AND LOUIS HASSELMANS.

The Hasselmans are from Liege, Belgium, the birthplace of many great artists, but are now residents of Asnieres, a portion of Paris lying just beyond the fortifications and across the Seine, where, presumably, this snapshot was taken.

Alice Garrigue Mott Writes from Munich.

Alice Garrigue Mott sends the following word in German from Munich on a post card dated August 10:

"Please greet all of my pupils for me and tell them that I am in Munich and must remain here, but will leave for America as soon as possible. I will resume my lessons as soon as I return. Italian, French and English are strictly forbidden, so I write German."

HELEN WARE
Exclusive Manager, Laszlo Schwartz

EDYTH WALKER
(Imperial Royal Chambersinger, Court of Austria--Hungary)
Dramatic Soprano
Metropolitan, New York.
Covent Garden, London.
Imperial Royal Opera, Vienna.
Royal Opera, Berlin.
Festspielhaus, Bayreuth.
Royal Opera and Wagner Festivals, Munich, etc., etc., etc.
Season 1914-1915 with the
Chicago Opera Company

The Sensation of the Year
CARL FLESCH
The Great Hungarian Violinist
Second American Tour
ENTIRE SEASON 1914-1915
Management HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, Nkw York
KNABE PIANO

BARONESS SIGNE VON RAPPE
SOPRANO
Prima Donna, Vienna and Stockholm Operas. Principal Soloist 6th QUADRENNIAL MUSIC FESTIVAL OF THE AMERICAN UNION OF SWEDISH SINGERS, MINNEAPOLIS, JUNE 8-9, 1914.
"A voice of great range and brilliance."
—Minneapolis Tribune, June 9, 1914
American Tour, March-May, 1915
OPERA :: LIEDER :: ORATORIO
in Swedish, Italian, German, French and English
Sole Management:
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

YVONNE DE TRÉVILLE
Coloratura Soprano
Grand Opera Prima Donna
NOW IN AMERICA
SEASON 1914-15 BOOKING
Available for Concerts, Musicales, Recitals and Festivals.
European Address: 68 rue de l'Aurora, Bruxelles, Belgium
American Address: - 62 De Hart Place, Elizabeth, N. J.
Cable Address: Detreville-Bruxelles

Baroness Von Turk-Rohn's Success.

Baroness Olga von Turk-Rohn, the Viennese soprano, late of the Vienna Royal Opera, already has assumed her concert activities for the 1914-15 season under the management of the Metropolitan Musical Bureau. At the special week-end concerts given in the Arcade at Asbury Park, N. J., on Saturday and Sunday evenings, August 22 and 23, the Baroness appeared as principal soloist and had the honor of attracting one of the largest audiences that has gathered in the Arcade for the past ten years. In mentioning the concerts, the Asbury Park papers were warm in their praise of the remarkable voice and versatility of the artist. She possesses everything that goes to make a satisfying singer, sincerity, temperament, a voice of splendid range and a freshness of quality that is altogether fascinating.

Among other numbers and many extra encores, Baroness von Turk-Rohn sang an aria from Verdi's "Ernani," "Come with Me," by Von der Stucken; aria from "Madame Butterfly," Gounod's "Ava Maria" and Bartlett's "Dreams."

Maud Klotz and Jacques Kasner in Concert.

A rare musical treat was afforded to cottagers and summer visitors at Belmar, N. J., Monday evening, August 24, when G. Dexter Richardson presented Maude Klotz, soprano, and Jacques Kasner, violinist, in a concert at the Hotel Columbia for the benefit of the Belmar Life Guards.

Mr. Kasner opened the program with Hubay's "Hejre Kati," and later played the "Prize Song" from the "Meistersinger," the "Andantino" of Martin C. Kreisler, "Tambourin Chinois" and "Liebesfreud," by Fritz Kreisler.

In all of these Mr. Kasner showed splendid tone and admirable technic, delighting his audience, who enthusiastically applauded him.

Miss Klotz's numbers were Arditi's "Il Bacio," a group of English songs, "My Laddie" by Thayer, Reichardt's "When the Roses Bloom" and Saar's "Little Gray Dove." This she followed with the aria "Un Bel Di" from "Madame Butterfly," and another song group, "Bergere Legere" by Wekerlin, "Chanson Indoue" by Rimsky-Korsakoff and Eden's brilliant lyric "What's In the Air Today?"

The great young songstress was in splendid voice, and at the close of her program received a veritable ovation, to which she responded with a charming rendition of "To You" by Oley Speaks.

A. CARBONE

MASTER IN THE ART OF SINGING

(Late Leading Singer (for twelve seasons) with the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company)
RESUMES DAILY TEACHING SEPT. 14th

Art of Singing from the first rudiments to the classic "Bel Canto"

School of Opera, with Acting and Modern Languages. Carbone's Breath Controller recommended by famous singers, teachers and physicians as unique apparatus for breathing exercises. Circular sent on application

Thirty Years' Experience. Highest References.

AEOLIAN HALL, WEST 42nd STREET, NEW YORK CITY

Madame OTTILIE METZGER

THE GREAT GERMAN CONTRALTO (Second American Tour)

and

THEODOR LATTERMANN

THE FAMOUS BASS-BARITONE (First Appearance in America)

Who are now singing in the Hamburg Opera will arrive in America early in February

Opera :: Concert :: Oratorio

Management: Music League of America, Howard E. Potter, Business Manager
Aeolian Hall, New York

Announcement Extraordinary

VICTOR BENHAM

Pronounced by the European Press as "America's Greatest Pianist"

Owing to the war conditions in Europe, will remain in New York during this season and will accept a limited number of pupils. Mr. Benham's pupils are accepted by the world's famous pedagogues, including Leschetizky, Phillip, Godowsky, etc.

For terms etc., address Victor Benham, Steinway Hall, East 14th Street, New York.

One Summer's Tour.

An object lesson that commands interest and attention is drawn from the remarkable schedule of appearances made this summer by the Ernest Gamble Concert Party, which comprises Ernest Gamble, the distinguished basso cantante; Aline Kuhn, the gifted young pianist, aptly styled "the youthful Carreño," and Verna Leone Page, a violinist of splendid attainments and charming personality.

The immense popularity of this trio of worthy artists has been indicated with such frequency that it has long since become a matter of regular record to publish lists of the big tours of the Ernest Gamble Concert Party, and just to give an idea of their activities during this present summer of 1914 the appended list of sixty-one dates is herewith appended, and which speaks in eloquent terms of the success of this fine combination of artists:

Battle Creek, Mich.	May 2	Thomaston, Ga.	July 4
Somerset, Ky.	May 4	Griffin, Ga.	July 6
Raleigh, N. C.	May 15	Sparta, Ga.	July 7
Polk, Pa.	May 25	Madison, Ga.	July 8
Ashtabula, Ohio	May 26	Covington, Ga.	July 9
Shelbyville, Tenn.	June 5	Johnston, S. C.	July 10
Winchester, Tenn.	June 6	Batesburg, S. C.	July 11
Dalton, Ga.	June 8	Union, S. C.	July 12
Cedartown, Ga.	June 9	Shelby, N. C.	July 13
Carrollton, Ga.	June 10	Hickory, N. C.	July 14
West Point, Ga.	June 11	Asheville, N. C.	July 15
La Fayette, Ala.	June 12	Tuscaloosa, Ala.	July 16
Dawson, Ga.	June 13	Hattiesburg, Miss.	July 18
Troy, Ala.	June 15	Crystal Springs, Miss.	July 20
Luverne, Ala.	June 16	Covington, Tenn.	July 22
Greenville, Ala.	June 17	Fulton, Ky.	July 23
Andalusia, Ala.	June 18	Waynesville, N. C.	July 25
Florala, Ala.	June 19	University of Virginia	July 28
Ozark, Ala.	June 20	Somerset, Pa.	July 30
Enterprise, Ala.	June 22	Columbus, Ind.	Aug. 2, 3
Dothan, Ala.	June 23	Carroll, Ia.	Aug. 6
Valdosta, Ga.	June 25	York, Neb.	Aug. 9
Moultrie, Ga.	June 26	Rockville, Ind.	Aug. 12
Douglas, Ga.	June 27	Culver, Ind.	Aug. 14
Cordele, Ga.	June 29	McConnelsville, Ohio,	Aug. 16, 17
Dublin, Ga.	June 30	Terra Alta, W. Va.	Aug. 18
Sylvania, Ga.	July 1	Aledo, Ill.	Aug. 20
Millen, Ga.	July 2	Battle Creek, Mich.	Aug. 24
Macon, Ga.	July 3	King City, Mo.	Aug. 27, 28

Kathleen Hart and Rosa Olitzka Touring.

Kathleen Hart, the American soprano, is touring with Mme. Rosa Olitzka, the Russian contralto.

The accompanying picture of Kathleen Hart was taken on the island of Marken-Holland, where she is surrounded by native children.

KATHLEEN HART ON THE ISLAND OF MARKEN, HOLLAND, SURROUNDED BY NATIVE CHILDREN.

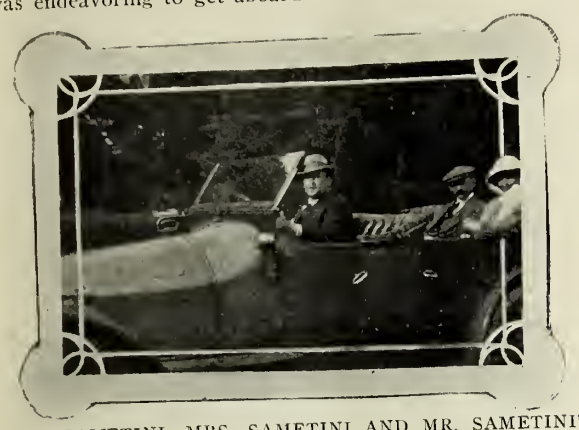
RUDOLF BERGER

FAMOUS TENOR of the Metropolitan Opera Company



Available for Concerts
May and June, 1915

Management: R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway - - New York

Leon Sametini's Narrow Escape.

Leon Sametini is shown in the accompanying snapshot with Mrs. Sametini and his cousin motoring in the south of England. Mr. Sametini says they are enjoying themselves despite the war.

When escaping from Ostend Mr. Sametini nearly broke his neck. When taking the boat, Mrs. Sametini had gone on before her husband, and when he wished to go aboard the captain ordered from the bridge that no more passengers be allowed on the boat, as it was already too crowded. Mr. Sametini quickly made his way out of the crowd that was endeavoring to get aboard and managed to reach the top of the landing stage, from which he took a jump of about twelve feet and landed on the deck.

LEON SAMETINI, MRS. SAMETINI AND MR. SAMETINI'S COUSIN MOTORING IN THE SOUTH OF ENGLAND.

Mr. and Mrs. Sametini sailed from Liverpool on the steamship Tunisia, of the Allan Line, and will be back in Chicago again on September 11 if all goes well.

Musical Prospects in London.

[From London Musical News.]

There is, however, one ray of light. Foreign musicians in this country are liable to be recalled for active service, whether they wish it or no. We are not, and, though we would not say one word in this time of anxiety to damp the patriotic spirit which may impel many British musicians to take up arms in defense of their country's honor, it is certain that there will be many left who cannot do so. They will step into the foreigners' shoes, and, under the circumstances, one cannot be sorry.

That the musical profession generally, however, will be bound to suffer directly or indirectly in these troublous times is quite obvious. There will be great depression in the manufacturing and music publishing trades, and it will be found that publishers will rely largely on their last year's list. This will mean stagnation in the music printing trade and the throwing out of work of immense numbers of members of engraving, printing and allied trades. Already we hear some talk of some of these firms closing down for a time.

Composers will find even less openings for their mental wares than formerly, though, if there is any business done at all, it will be in the exploiting of patriotic songs and the like.

Altogether the immediate prospect is gloomy, though not more so, of course, than in the case of many other professions and trades. But we must take heart of cheer, knowing that this land is passing through a crisis from which she will eventually emerge triumphantly, as she has done before. We believe that the hearts of musicians are as soundly patriotic as the rest of the community, and that all who cherish their country's prestige will be patient in tribulation. It is certain that self sacrifice must be practised by all. Let the members of our honorable profession see to it that they are not lacking in cheerful endurance.

Organists are not likely to be deprived of their organistships, for the worship of the churches will go on—indeed, probably with increased attendance. Neither, strange as it may seem, will concert artists suffer to a very appreciable extent. History has proved that in times of stress and anxiety the public turn to amusement, if only as a slight period of forgetfulness of sterner things. Lest this be thought to be an incorrect view, one has but to point out that during the worst part of the French Revolution, when sixty or seventy persons were guillotined per day, no fewer than twenty-three theatres were open every night in Paris. We shall be surprised, therefore, if even the nightly attendance at the Promenade Concerts will be appreciably affected. It does no good for people to sit at home and read horrors, and we believe that the London public will be of the same opinion. Unless there is a serious period of "harduppishness" among the comparatively well to do, we imagine that the attendance at concerts and other places of diversion will not be greatly diminished.

But in the matter of teaching, there is reason to believe that those who live principally by this means will find an appreciable slump in pupils.

CLARENCE EDDY
AVAILABLE FOR ORGAN DEDICATIONS AND RECITALS
Address: 510 OAKWOOD BOULEVARD CHICAGO
Season 1914-15

SEASON 1914-1915 MRS. H. H. A. BEACH
M. H. HANSON 437 Fifth Avenue New York

SEASON 1914-1915 MAUD POWELL
H. Godfrey Turner 1400 B'way, New York

JEZZY DUFAU
COLORATURA SOPRANO
Concert Recital
Chicago-Philadelphia Grand Opera Company
Under Management of HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Building, Chicago

VAN YORX
THEO. ——— Tenor
Studios: 21 West 38th Street, - New York
3701 Murray Hill

GABRILÓWITSCH
THE EMINENT RUSSIAN PIANIST
AMERICAN TOUR JANUARY-APRIL, 1915
Management, LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, N. Y.
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

GIUSEPPE CREATORE AND HIS BAND
NOW BOOKING FOR 1914-1915
OFFICE: 1512 TRIBUNE BUILDING, - - - CHICAGO, ILL.

A NAME TO CONJURE WITH!
THIBAUD
For Terms and Dates Address
A Violinist Whom France Declares to Be Without an Equal
Thibaud's American visit last winter was the violinistic sensation of the season. His return in the Fall will be an event of first importance.
LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, New York

U. S. KERR
BASSO CANTANTE--Song Recitals and Oratorio a Specialty
For Bookings Address 538 West 143d Street, New York City
'Phone 3313 Audubon

JULES FALK VIOLINIST
NOW IN AMERICA
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th Street, New York

The Guilmant Organ School
DR. WILLIAM C. CARL, Director
A School for Students with serious aims, who desire to become expert Organists. REOPENS OCT. 6th.
Send For New Catalogue. 44 West 12th St., N. Y.

LEONARD BORWICK PIANIST
WILL TOUR AMERICA SEASON 1914-15
"The concert revealed a star of the first magnitude, Leonard Borwick,—a poet pianist to whom we listened with ever-increasing amazement."—Dresden Nachrichten.
Management—WOLFSOHN BUREAU, 1 West 34th St., New York. Steinway Piano Used

Carl Friedberg

THE POET AT THE PIANO

FIRST AMERICAN CONCERT TOUR 1914-15

Available All Season

New York Debut
Carnegie Hall
November 2nd
1 9 1 4

For remaining dates address

Exclusive Management:
MISS ANNIE FRIEDBERG,
Metropolitan Opera House,
Building, 1425 Broadway,
New York.

BALDWIN PIANO USED

Larkin-Weber Recitals.

That the Larkin-Weber recitals are creating a sensation is shown by the fact that the recent engagement at Lake Chautauqua, New York, resulted in the Misses Larkin and Weber being engaged in twenty-five of the leading cities of the East. During the week at Chautauqua the reader and pianist gave six of their unique opera lecture-recitals and one popular program of short melodrames. The audiences were large and enthusiastic, and the climax of their interest was shown at the end of the popular evening program, when at least five hundred people crowded upon the stage to congratulate the artists and express their admiration personally.

The Larkin-Weber repertoire contains the older and modern operas, that lend themselves readily to this mode of presentation, while the shorter melodrames include many interesting novelties. The work of these two artists and the fine ensemble is so unique and unusual that it is not surprising to find that their programs are creating a great demand.

Mayor Mayer.

The accompanying photograph shows Daniel Mayer, the London manager, in his official robes of office as the

DANIEL MAYER,
Mayor of Bexhill, England.

Mayor of Bexhill, one of the fashionable seaside resorts in England.

Katharine Goodson on Holiday.

Katharine Goodson is spending a part of her vacation with Sir Martin and Lady Conway at their country home, Allington Castle, a beautiful old thirteenth century building which they have lately so wonderfully restored. This castle is one of the most historical residences in Great Britain, and is open to the public one day in the week.

KATHARINE GOODSON IN THE GROUNDS AT ALLINGTON CASTLE.

Arrigo Serato

Italy's Greatest VIOLINIST

First American Concert Tour 1914-15

Booked already over forty Concerts as far as the Pacific Coast.

FOR AVAILABLE DATES, ADDRESS EXCLUSIVE MANAGEMENT:

Miss Annie Friedberg, Metropolitan Opera House Building, 1425 Broadway, New York.

KNABE PIANO USED

DJANE LAVOIE-HERZ
CONCERT PIANIST
Touring Canada and United States Season 1914-1915
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.
Steinway Piano used.

WILLIAM WHEELER TENOR
Soloist Worcester Festival
O. J. EHRGOTT
156 Fifth Ave.
Personal Representative
Personal Address: 61 Hamilton Place, New York

FRANCIS ROGERS BARITONE
Recital, Oratorio, Concert
Also a few Pupils
563 Park Ave., New York
Management: LOUDON CHARLTON
Carnegie Hall

LOUISE JANSEN WYLIE Soprano
Management, Iris Pendleton, Philharmony Hall, Wichita - Kansas
New York Address, 736 W. 181st Street

LILLIAN SHERWOOD NEWKIRK
VOICE CULTURE, ITALIAN METHOD.
Special attention to tone production.
1425 Broadway, Metropolitan Opera House Bldg., New York.
Mail address, 11 Morgan Ave., Norwalk, Conn.

Adele Krueger
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Concert, Oratorio, Recital
Management of Miss Annie Friedberg, 1425 Broadway, New York

LEO BRAUN
Voice Culture : Repertoire
Opera Concert Oratorio
Studio: 446 CENTRAL PARK WEST

GEORGE HAMLIN
Will, without fail, fill his engagements in America next February, March and April.
HAENSEL & JONES. AEOLIAN HALL, NEW YORK

ALBERT SCHOTT
DRAMATIC TENOR
In America Season 1914-1915. Available for Recitals, etc.
Exclusive Management Concert Direction, M. H. HANSON.
437 Fifth Ave., New York

R. E. Johnston Presents by Courtesy of Senator and Mrs. W. A. Clark
ANDRE TOURRET
French Violinist and
CAMILLE DECREUS
French Pianist (Ysaye's pianist for past two seasons)
IN JOINT RECITALS—SEASON 1914-15
All business communications should be sent to R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway - New York
CHICKERING PIANO USED

MANUEL
QUIROGO
THE WONDERFUL SPANISH
VIOLINIST
American Tour Opens Carnegie Hall, October 17th
Direction Sam S. and Lee Shubert
MANAGEMENT, R. E. JOHNSTON,
1451 BROADWAY - - NEW YORK CITY

OVIDE MUSIN'S Virtuoso School of Violin
Recognized as the HIGHEST SCHOOL of violin playing in the United States

Instruction given by this world renowned Virtuoso in person, in the Authentic tempos, style, fingering and bowing of the classical repertory, ancient and modern. Musin's SPECIAL SYSTEM greatly LESSENS the time ordinarily spent in acquiring technic and how control. Piano, Harmony, with eminent teachers. Singing with Mme. Ovide Musin, Coloratura Soprano. Write for outline of Course by CORRESPONDENCE, and THEMATIC CATALOGUE of compositions and editions by OVIDE MUSIN. Dormitories for limited number of students in School. Practice Unrestricted. CHAPERONAGE. Address the REGISTRAR,
51 West 76th St., New York.

Alf Klingenberg Returns from Norway.

Alf Klingenberg, the well known Norwegian-American pianist, who makes his home in Rochester, N. Y., has just returned from Norway where he was a guest of honor at the Norwegian Centennial Exposition. He was especially invited by the Norwegian Government to play the Sinding concerto at the music festival of the Centennial Exposition on June 9.

The foreign critics speak in the most laudatory terms of his masterly breadth of tone, his clear and masculine conception, and of his sensitive contact with the spirit of Sinding who himself conducted the concerto.

ALF KLINGENBERG,
Norwegian-American pianist.

Mr. Klingenberg returned September 1 to continue his activities in the conservatory at Rochester known as the Rosenbach-Klingenberg School of Music.

Louis Kreidler Again with Century Opera.

Louis Kreidler, the American artist, who, as the principal baritone at the Century Opera House last season brought himself into wide prominence as an exponent of opera in English, has returned to New York again to assume his duties with the Century Opera Company in similar roles. His first appearance will be on Tuesday evening, September 15, as Escamillo in Bizet's "Carmen." This is one of his most successful roles and his many friends and admirers here anticipate with delightful expectancy the triumphant entrance of the Toreador in the second act on that evening.

LOUIS KREIDLER,
Principal baritone of the Century Opera Company.

The

Knabe

Is

The World's Best

Piano

because of the fact that it is a practical piano from its castors up. The best materials that money can buy are put into it and they are built by men who have spent a lifetime at the work and who take their time. There is no rush or hurry to see how many pianos can be turned out in a given time. On the contrary, each individual workman, whether he is a case builder, a sounding board maker, a varnisher or a polisher, takes his time and does his best. The net result is—it takes 6 months longer to build a KNABE than it does an average piano, but it is so thoroughly built that when once completed it will last a lifetime.

KNABE PLAYER-PIANOS

contain every worthy type of player mechanism—every form of expression control. In a word, they leave nothing to be desired.

Representatives throughout the world. Catalogs and information forwarded upon request. New York prices universal with freight and expenses added to outside points.

THE KNABE
The World's Best Piano

Accompanist

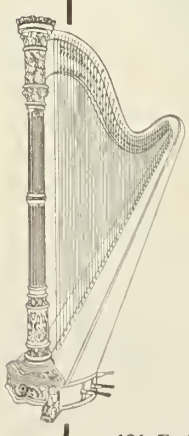
CECIL TEAGUE

ADDRESS, 131 WEST 42nd STREET, NEW YORK CITY
Telephone, Bryant 4657

NIKOLAI SOKOLOFF
The Russian Violinist
In America 1914-15
Management
JOHANNA SHERRICK
Room 1007 200 Fifth Ave., N. Y.
DANIEL MAYER, London

GEORGE
DOSTAL
DISTINGUISHED BOHEMIAN TENOR
First American Concert Tour Season 1914-1915
Exclusive Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, NEW YORK

MADAME
Artha Williston
Dramatic Soprano



First appearance this season at the Maine Music Festivals in October, singing Elijah

Management:
Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York

—"Such purity of tone has never before been attained."

So writes Zamara, acknowledged Greatest Living Harpist—of the WURLITZER

HARP

"Marvelous in Tone, Majestic in Appearance," says Marthage, Harpist of Sousa's Band.

The Wurlitzer Harp has the only spruce veneered Sounding Board, which gives it a pure, liquid, velvety tone all its own. Write for beautiful booklet.

THE RUDOLPH WURLITZER COMPANY
121 E. FOURTH STREET, CINCINNATI, OHIO
Chicago - - 329-331 S. Wabash Street
New York - - 113-119 W. 40th Street

Louise St. John Westervelt Returns to America.

Louise St. John Westervelt, vocal instructor of Chicago and Davenport, and conductor of several ladies' choral societies, called at the MUSICAL COURIER Chicago office Thursday afternoon, August 27, upon her arrival in that city. Miss Westervelt, who had gone to England with her mother and aunt last June, and who coached with Oscar Seagle at his new residence at Bramber, Sussex, England, returned safely to America on the White Star line steamship Megantic, which reached Montreal the early part of the week. Metta Lerch, Miss Westervelt's assistant in Davenport, and the possessor of a beautiful low mezzo, and who for several years past has been her pupil, returned on the same boat.

Miss Westervelt gave a very interesting interview to the representative of the MUSICAL COURIER, stating: "We had no idea that a war would take place, and the first intimation I had that something was wrong was when I received a telegram from my sister-in-law, who was in Germany and was to sail on the steamer Imperator, informing us that that boat was not sailing. I knew then that something was wrong and quickly made up our trunks and departed for London. Reaching there I found everything calm, even though war between Germany and Russia had just been declared. I had reserved my stateroom on another boat, but was advised on account of my mother's and aunt's ages to go back as soon as possible and made reservations on the steamer Megantic. It is true that all our party was in a first class cabin, and though four people in one stateroom are crowded, we were very thankful indeed to be able to get that accommodation. We could have left London on the boat train to Liverpool, but we thought best to go to Chester. From there we journeyed by automobile. We took a machine for ourselves and in another one we placed our trunks. On the way we saw some very sad sights, such as horses being taken away from farm houses, other farm houses being requisitioned for future hospitals, and we saw also the first soldiers going into camp. We came back without losing any baggage, and in that respect were very lucky. Our boat was manned by marines to leave the harbor, which had been mined, and we were told that the mines were removed each night to other locations, so that only the marines who were given the chart knew exactly how to pilot the boat out of port. Just as we were leaving, the steamer St. Louis pulled out and we noticed many American friends in the steerage waving their handkerchiefs, shouting and already glad to be on American 'soil.'"

As soon as war was declared gold was called in and paper money took its place. Miss Westervelt showed the writer a one pound paper note, which she said was one of the first to be given out in London. It was paid to her at the London and Midland Bank. All the paper money was printed and was out in four days.

Miss Westervelt stated that Jean Verd, the pianist, was also in England, but he had made himself ready to join the French colors and had written to the ambassador that he was ready to go to the front. Up to the time of leaving for America Miss Westervelt had not heard whether Mr. Verd had left or not.

The interview was concluded with Miss Westervelt saying that she was very glad to be back in America, and that the season would be very good, but might be late in opening for vocal teachers. The writer may add that her trip to Europe certainly was beneficial, as Miss Westervelt returned to Chicago looking the picture of health.

Rudolph Reuter Resting.

The Chicago pianist, Rudolph Reuter, is resting in the White Mountains of New Hampshire, preparing himself for the coming year of teaching and concert work. He reached the White Mountains by a circuitous route in his motor car. Mr. Reuter started out from Chicago the end of July and going cross-country via the new Lincoln Highway and stopping at Pittsburgh and Philadelphia en route, finally reached Atlantic City, where he spent a week. From there he motored in a northwesterly direction, visiting friends in New York, Boston and York, Maine. He camped at Lake Sunapee for a few days, also at Lake Winnepesaukee.

RUDOLPH REUTER AT LAKE SUNNAPEE, N. H., Where he stopped for a few days during his motor tour of the East.

Mr. Reuter has planned to climb Mt. Washington, the highest mountain in the East, in his machine. Returning to Chicago he will follow the Lake Shore route through Vermont and New York State to Buffalo, and thence via Cleveland and Toledo.

One on Frohman.

An orchestra leader was working over a new musical play at rehearsal with Charles Frohman, the theatrical manager.

"That's too loud," interrupted Mr. Frohman.

"I can't help it, Mr. Frohman," returned the leader; "it calls for forte."

"All the same," answered the manager, "make it thirty-five."—Sphere.

ADA SODER-HUECK
THE EMINENT GERMAN CONTRALTO,
famous for her correct Voice Placement and Tone Development is open for a limited number of engagements. Singers prepared for Church, Concert, Opera. Celebrated Garcia Method taught.
Metropolitan Opera House, 1425 Broadway, New York Phone 6221 Bryan

Charles BOWES Vocal Instruction
Returning to New York in October
Address: Care of Musical Courier

HERBERT FRYER
The Distinguished English Concert Pianist
In America the Whole Season 1914-1915
For Engagements, Etc., Address
WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU, 1 West 34th Street, New York

TINA LERNER
Distinguished Russian Pianist
FOURTH AMERICAN TOUR 1914-15 NOW BOOKING
Management, Loudon Charlton, Carnegie Hall, New York. MASON & HAMLIN PIANO

MADAME ANITA RIO
CELEBRATED AMERICAN PRIMA DONNA SOPRANO
after six years of operatic successes in Europe, will return to this country in September for Concert and Oratorio Engagements.
Management - - MUSIC LEAGUE OF AMERICA.
HOWARD E. POTTER, Business Manager
AEOLIAN HALL - - - NEW YORK

ALF KLINGENBERG
Pianist
Rosenbach-Klingenberg School of Music

Mabel McKinley
SOPRANO

Pupil of
ISADORE LUCKSTONE
Concert Recital
Oratorio
For open dates and other information, address
The Musical Courier, 437 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

YVONNE DE TRÉVILLE TO GIVE NEW YORK RECITAL.

"Three Centuries of Prime Donne," a Unique Costume-Song-Recital to Be Heard in Manhattan and Brooklyn During Early November—Coloratura Soprano's Brilliant Western and Pacific Coast Tour.

Yvonne de Tréville, the coloratura soprano, is to give her unique costume-song-recital, "Three Centuries of Prime Donne," in New York early in November. Because of the tremendous success which was attained by this charming artist on her 1914 Western tour, during which she was heard as far West as the Pacific Coast, Mlle. de Tréville has been persuaded to give the same program in New York at Aeolian Hall following her recital at the Brooklyn Academy on November 4, under the auspices of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences.

"Three Centuries of Prime Donne" the recital is called, and it is probably the most unique and attractive performance of its kind given in this country in recent years. The program is divided into three parts. In the first, which represents the Eighteenth Century, Mlle. de Tréville impersonates Mlle. de Maupin (period, Louis XIV); in the second, the Nineteenth Century, she resembles Jenny Lind (period, 1850); in the third part, the Twentieth Century, she is her own self, Yvonne de Tréville. In each part of the delightful program one is taken back to that particular period and treated to a rare entertainment that holds the close attention of the audience from start to finish. Wherever Mlle. de Tréville has been heard she has aroused great enthusiasm, and the merited praise bestowed upon her by the press has been remarkable, indeed.

It was only after months of preparation, reading the eighteenth and nineteenth century literature, as well as making innumerable sketches for the beautiful costumes worn by herself and her pianist, that Mlle. de Tréville finally evolved this unique costume-recital, "The Three Centuries of Prime Donne," which, historically correct in its minutest detail, as the Evanston, Ill., News said after the first performance, "constitutes the most novel and delightful vocal offering of recent years."

After the "premiere," Mlle. de Tréville made a detour from her Western tour, to appear in New Orleans, where the Times-Democrat said "her program, which had been selected with great judgment, revealed the fact that she is possessed of a singularly charming voice of delightful clarity and flexibility. Whenever her upper notes were brought into play, the audience enjoyed a series of sweet thrilling tone effects and coloratura flights."

YVONNE DE TREVILLE AS JENNY LIND, WITH A LOCAL MANAGER.

The Daily Picayune found that "A costume-recital was billed and proved to be a most interesting event. Mlle. de Tréville, who, by the way, is a very pretty and vivacious woman, is gifted with a voice of great range and flexibility and wonderfully cultured. She is a most artistic singer and absolute mistress of all the technical details that go to make a perfect coloratura."

In Los Angeles the Daily Times said that the program was "diversified, attractive and well executed by a young woman of fine understanding, superior training and charming personality. She, to a technic of remarkable finish, and enunciation always clear in English, French or German, adds a convincing expression and action quite novel on the concert stage."

The critic of the Los Angeles Express found Mlle. de Tréville's recital "highly interesting from the standpoint of delightful program-making as well as because of its charmingly artistic interpretation. The most exacting vocal composition extant was handled with a poise, surety, ease and finish that not only enthused the audience, but which proved the singer among the foremost concert artists ever heard here. The singer herself possesses a charm of personality that adds immensely to her work."

San Francisco added its commendations to those of Southern California, and the Examiner, in one article, said "her voice is a coloratura soprano of unusual quality whose middle register and lower tones have the richness of a contralto," and later on said that the famous coloratura soprano "delights by selections that show her at her best, in one of the most delightful musical treats ever enjoyed in this vicinity. Mlle. de Tréville's voice aroused enthusiasm among her hearers."

With many appearances in the smaller Western cities de Tréville's party continued its successful tour to Portland, Ore., where The Oregonian pronounced her concert a "triumph of artistry, exquisite grace and voice." In this critic's opinion "Mlle. de Tréville is splendidly equipped vocally, temperamentally and intellectually." He says "her voice is a lyric soprano of fine sparkling quality and it has been trained to the edge of surpassing excellence. She sang up to F in altissimo with glorious effect, in six languages, and won out in all interpretations."

In Seattle, where a most enthusiastic audience greeted her, the critic of the Times voiced the consensus of opinion when he wrote that "It has been many a day since a Seattle audience of concert goers was privileged to hear the art of coloratura singing in all its perfection, such as was exemplified last night at the costume-song-recital of Yvonne de Treville."

The Seattle Town Crier said "Yvonne de Tréville came, sang and conquered! She proved herself an artist of the first rank and a triumphant rival of all the great coloraturas who have been heard here. Of no less appeal was the gracious personality and beauty of Tréville. A great artist endowed with all of nature's gifts."

On a flying trip from the mainland to Honolulu the prima donna sought and found new kingdoms to conquer, and the headlines of the Star-Bulletin, after her first appearance, were: "Coloratura at Its Best Shown by de Tréville." "Gifted Soprano Has Golden Voice!"

"Her costume effects proved immediately popular."

The trans-Pacific critics found that "her voice is finely trained, marvelously flexible and its tones agreeably musical, of remarkably pure beauty, and through all are the joy of youth and healthful vigor. An exquisite voice united with charming manner and both dramatic and mimetic ability."

The whole winter's tour was one of triumphant success!

Contrary to the ideas of many persons, viz., that modern composers seldom write for the coloratura soprano, Mlle. de Tréville closes her program with Richard Strauss' aria from "Ariane Auf Naxos," which has never been given in America before.

The program of Mlle. de Tréville's unique costume-song-recital, "Three Centuries of Prime Donne," follows in its entirety:

PART FIRST—EIGHTEENTH CENTURY.

Mlle. de Maupin (Period, Louix XIV).

Menuet Chanté ..... Lulli (1633-1687)
L'Amour Est Un Enfant Trompeur ..... Martini

YVONNE DE TREVILLE AND HER ACCOMPANIST, EDITH BOWYER WHIFFEN, ARE AS GOOD FRIENDS AS ARTISTIC COMPANIONS. MLLE. DE TREVILLE IS SEATED AT THE HARP.

Phillis ..... Anthony Young
Pastorale ..... Henry Carey (1690-1743)

PART SECOND—NINETEENTH CENTURY.

Jenny Lind (Period, 1850).

Thema e Variazioni ..... Proch (1809-1874)
Scandinavian Folksong No. 1.
Scandinavian Folksong No. 2.
Scandinavian Folksong No. 3.
Mad Scene from Camp of Silesia ..... Meyerbeer (1791-1861)
(Composed for Jenny Lind.)

PART THIRD—TWENTIETH CENTURY.

Yvonne de Tréville.

Air from Louise ..... Charpentier
Chanson Provencale ..... Dell' Acqua
(Arranged for Mlle. de Tréville by the composer.)
My Garden ..... Mary Carr Moore
(Composed for and dedicated to Mlle. de Tréville.)
Thistledown ..... Charles Wakefield Cadman
(Composed for and dedicated to Mlle. de Tréville.)
Auf der Bleiche ..... Bungert-Carmen Sylva
(Arranged for Mlle. de Tréville by Her Majesty, the Queen of Roumania, Carmen Sylva.)
Aria from Ariane Auf Naxos ..... Richard Strauss

Marion Green on St. Louis Orchestra Tour.

Appended are some press enconiums paid Marion Green during his tour with the St. Louis Orchestra last spring:

Marion Green, baritone, made a splendid impression; he is one of the greatest artists who has ever appeared in Birmingham.—Birmingham (Ala.) Age-Herald, May 7, 1914.

In Marion Green's singing of the crystalline aria from Haydn's "Seasons" one is reminded of Bispham in his breadth of conception, ease of tonal diction and wonderful breath control and phrasing. In his encore he was inimitable in a dialect song of Carpenter, "Don't Ceare." Meridian has added a new name to her list of musical favorites, and in Marion Green's singing has had a new and great pleasure.—Meridian (Miss.) Dispatch, May 8, 1914.

Marion Green was the vocal soloist and was successful in his aria from Haydn's "Seasons." He possesses a good vibrant baritone. He was forced to grant an encore.—New Orleans Item, May 9, 1914. (Advertisement.)

Botho Sigwart's opera, "Sons of Euripides," will not be performed in Stuttgart this month, as had been planned.

Myrtle ELVYN

RENOWNED AMERICAN PIANISTE

Now Booking For American Tour 1914-1915
Concert Direction, HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Bldg., Chicago
KIMBALL PIANO USED

HINSHAW

Metropolitan Opera
BARITONE

Berlin Wagner Ring Festival,
June 23rd to Aug. 21st

American Tour
DECEMBER TO JUNE

Management R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway, N. Y.

MARGARET HARRISON SOPRANO
68 West 56th Street New York

DONALD CHALMERS BASSO
Address for the Summer
29 Ocean Pathway, Ocean Grove, N. J.
RECITALS :: ORATORIO :: OPERA

EVAN WILLIAMS
TENOR
Akron - - Ohio
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU

Horatio Connell
BASS BARITONE
Management HAENSEL & JONES, AEOLIAN HALL, NEW YORK

PHILIP SPOONER TENOR
205 West 57th St., New York City
'Phone, 6510 Columbus

GENEVIEVE FINLAY-STEWART
DRAMATIC CONTRALTO
HAENSEL & JONES Aeolian Hall, New York

THOMAS FARMER Baritone
Engaged for St. Paul by Handel Society, London, May 12th
Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON, 437 Fifth Avenue New York

PAUL DUFAULT
TENOR
Address 339 West 23rd Street Tel. 7731 Chelsea

CAROLL BADHAM PREYER
TEACHER OF SINGING—Italian Method (Lamperti diploma)
Studio: 27 West 67th Street Tel. Columbus 1123

George CARRÉ
TENOR
15 East 10th St. Tel. 2927 Stuyvesant New York

Christine MILLER Contralto
Personal address: 1003 Heberton Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.
Management: HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York

REINALD WERRENRATH
BARYTONE
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th Street, - - New York

EDGAR
STILLMAN-KELLEY
STEINWAY HALL, NEW YORK, N. Y.

REBECCA DAVIDSON PIANISTE
Management: WALTER ANDERSON
171 West 57th Street New York

Joseph Baernstein Regneas
TEACHER OF SINGING
Telephone Schuyler 3786 Studio, 133 W. 80th St., New York
From the first rudiments of tone placing to artistic finishing for Concert, Oratorio and Opera

BARONESS Olga von Türk-Rohn SOPRANO
"Europe's Famous Song Bird"
Season 1914-15 Now Booking
Management
Metropolitan Musical Bureau, New Brunswick, N. J.

CECIL FANNING Baritone
H. B. TURPIN Accompanist
Having returned from a year of concert giving in Germany, Italy and England, are
NOW AVAILABLE FOR RECITALS IN AMERICA
Address: H. B. TURPIN, Dayton, Ohio

Simons' Copenhagen Visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto T. Simon, when they were in Copenhagen, on July 31, sent to the MUSICAL COURIER a postcard which reached these offices on September 3, 1914, after being en route one month and five days owing to war conditions. At the present time Mr. and Mrs. Simon are in America, having arrived here about a fortnight ago.

The Simons, while in Copenhagen, paid a ten day visit to Asger Hamerik, the Danish composer. He lives in a beautiful villa just outside of Copenhagen. Mr. Hamerik should be known to Americans, for he gave the best years of his life to the awakening and stimulating of musical art in America. He is an interesting figure as a link between the new and the old. He was for a number of years the pupil of Hector Berlioz, and also studied the piano with Hans von Bülow. He has composed a number of interesting suites and symphonies and has personally directed concerts of his own composition in Vienna, Berlin, Leipsic, Milan and other musical centers.

His choral works display unusual gifts and his "Requiem Mass" for six part chorus throughout and contralto soloist is a composition impressive in its effect and spirituality. The wonder is that it is not more often heard in America, where Otto T. Simon assisted in its first rendition some years ago.

Asger Hamerik has an imposing position in Scandinavia, and is known there in music as one of the nestors of its art. He received the Order of the Dannebrog last year in honor of his accomplishments and of his seventieth birthday.

ANDERSEN MONUMENT AT COPENHAGEN.

The photograph herewith shown is that of the statue of Hans Christian Andersen, to whom all musicians should be grateful as one of the most unique influences on the imagination of childhood.

Mrs. A. M. Virgil Makes Another Tour.

Mrs. A. M. Virgil is again touring New York, Pennsylvania and Indiana, adding a few cities in Kentucky to her former itinerary. She is accompanied by Marion Blair, who went part of the way with her on the first trip. Since the summer session at the Virgil Piano Conservatory closed Mrs. Virgil has been enjoying a pleasant vacation at Bronte, in the vicinity of Toronto, Can. She described vividly the quaint old village of Bronte and its naphtha launch fisherman.

But with her characteristic energy she felt impelled to start out again in the interest of music and a higher grade of teaching. She writes that she is highly pleased by the cordial receptions she meets with wherever she stops. Those who are unacquainted with Mrs. Virgil's work found Miss Blair's playing a revelation; those who heard Misses Scovill and Lipp during the other tour were pleased to note that she did not exploit merely one prodigy, but had other players who were doing equally well.

Mrs. Virgil is expected back to New York shortly to open the fall term, which begins September 28.

SOUSA AND HIS BAND
"HEARD THE WORLD AROUND"
Office: 1 West 34th Street
Telephone 6128 Greeley

Alexander BLOCH
CONCERT VIOLINIST
Management, Foster & David, 500 Fifth Avenue, - New York

KIDD KEY CONSERVATORY SHERMAN TEXAS
Hans Richard has been made Director in the Conservatory and is assisted by an able corps of teachers. Bendetson Netzorg has also been added to the Conservatory faculty. For catalog address
MRS. L. A. KIDD KEY

INEZ BARBOUR SOPRANO
Concert-Recital-Oratorio
Management: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau. 1 West 34th St., New York

FLORENCE AUSTIN
America's Violinist
Season 1914-1915 Now Booking
Address:
THOMAS McGRATH, 133 East 34th St., New York
Phone Murray Hill, 2239

JANE CATHERWOOD SOPRANO and TEACHER
Fowler Apartments, 1110 W. Washington Street
Los Angeles, Cal. Phone 20584

MARIE KAISER
SOPRANO
Management: WALTER ANDERSON, 171 West 57th St., New York

MARGARET SHIRLEY
Soprano
Available for Concerts: Recitals, Musicales
IRISH BALLADS A SPECIALTY
Exclusive Management: ANNIE FRIEDBERG, Metropolitan Opera House Bldg., New York

FRANCES ALDA SOPRANO OF THE METROPOLITAN OPERA CO.
Assisted by Gutia Cassini, Cellist, and Frank La Forge, Pianist
SEASON 1914-15 NOW BOOKING
Exclusive Management for Concerts: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York City
Baldwin Piano Used

Dramatic Mezzo Soprano
SARA HEINEMAN
Concerts and Recitals also Southern Folk Songs in Costume
In Europe During Summer
Mail to Musical Courier - - - 437 Fifth Avenue

Baroness Evans
Von KLENNER
America's Representative of the
GREAT GARCIA VOCAL METHOD
Grand Prix—Paris Exposition, 1900. Summer School—Point Chautauqua, Chautauqua Lake. N. Y. June 25th to Aug. 27th, 1914.
Tradition Languages Repertoire Diction Special Courses for Teachers. Address, New York Studio, 952 Eighth Avenue

THE PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY
of NEW YORK
1914 Seventy-Third Season 1915
JOSEF STRANSKY, Conductor
SUBSCRIPTION SERIES:
New York, Brooklyn, Baltimore and Washington.
TOURS;
New England, New York State, Canada, Middle West, South
Prospectus on application to
FELIX F. LEIFELS, Manager Carnegie Hall, NEW YORK

MARIE SUNDELIUS Soprano
Exclusive Management
ERTRUDE F. COWEN, 1425 Broadway, New York

IME. GRACE HALL RIHELDAFFER
SOPRANO
4 9th AVE., MUNHALL, PITTSBURGH, PA.

Florence Hinkle
....SOPRANO....
nagement, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th St., New York

BYFORD RYAN
Three Years Leading Tenor, Opera Comique, Berlin
ocal Studio: 28 West 63rd Street - - New York

Lionel Robsarte
Opera Tenor
Instructor to the Profession. Hotel Woodward, N. Y.

DELAIDE GESCHEIDT
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
structor of the Miller Vocal Art Science and The Art of Singing
817 Carnegie Hall Tel. 1350 Columbus

JOHN THOMPSON AMERICAN PIANIST
IN AMERICA SEASON 1914-1915
Management. ROBERT P. STRINE, Estey Hall, Philadelphia

Miss LEGINSKA
Hotel Grenoble, Seventh Ave. and 56th St., New York, Tel. 909 Columbus
"One of the most remarkable women pianists now before the pub-
"—N. Y. Tribune, April 22, 1914.

HELEN BIXBY WETZEL
Coloratura Soprano
Now appearing with several Italian Grand Opera Companies. MILAN, ITALY

ERMAINE SCHNITZER
THE FAMOUS AUSTRIAN PIANIST
In America Season 1914-1915
ection: R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, New York City
BALDWIN PIANO

LESLEY MARTIN, Bel Canto
STUDIO: 1425 Broadway, New York
SINGERS — Susanne Baker Watson, Cora Cross, Pauline Fredericks, Andrew Mack, Nellie Hart, Marion Stanley, Estelle Ward, Gertrude Hutcheson, George Bemus, George Gillet, John Hendricks, Dr. Eugene Walton Marshall, Fiske O'Hara, Horace Wright, Mabel Wilbur, John H. Stubbs, Edward Foley, Albert Wallerstedt, Umberto Sacchetti and many other singers now before the public in opera and church work.

Season 1914-15
LOUIS SIEGEL
Violin Virtuoso
FIRST AMERICAN TOUR
Management: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York

1914-15 SEASON 1914-15
GRACE POTTER
PIANIST
MARIE HERTENSTEIN
PIANIST
FRANCIS MACMILLEN
VIOLINIST
Exclusive Management S. E. MACMILLEN, 618 Candler Bldg., 220 West 42nd St., New York. Phone Bryant 8520

Oscar Saenger
TEACHER OF SINGING
om the rudiments of tone placing to artistic finishing f concert, oratorio, recital and opera. Teacher of nous Opera and Concert singers, among whom are:
Me. Marie Rappold, soprano; Miss Florence Hinkle, soprano; Miss Mabel Garrison, soprano; Miss Helen Warrum, soprano; Mme. Bernice de Pasquali, soprano; Mr. Rudolf Berger, tenor; Mr. Heinrich Hensel, tenor; Mr. Orville Harold, tenor; Mr. Paul Althouse, tenor; Mr. John Young, tenor; Miss La Robeson, contralto; Miss Mildred Potter, contralto; Miss Kathleen Howard, contralto; Mme. Josephine Jacoby, contralto; Miss Sibyl Conklin, contralto; Mr. Henri Scott, basso; Mr. Allen Hinckley, basso; Mr. Louis Kreidler, baritone; Mr. Albert Wiederhold, bass-baritone; Mr. Leon Rains, basso.
TEL. 687 LENOX STUDIO: 6 EAST 81st St., NEW YORK
Resume Teaching October 1st.

Seagle Sails September 10.

Word has just been received from Oscar Seagle that he plans to sail for New York on September 10. His representative writes that some of the Bramber colony have departed, but there are many left yet who will sail some time

Copyright, 1914, by Victor Georg.
OSCAR SEAGLE.

in September, and adds: "We are not rushing things because of the war."

Seagle is booked for an extended American tour, which will begin early in the fall and continue throughout the entire season.

Adele Bowne at Home.

Adele Bowne-Kirby, the young lyric soprano, and her husband, the noted architect, Henry Philip Kirby, are pictured herewith on their lawn, at their beautiful home in South Orange, N. J. They were booked to sail on the steamer Hamburg for Naples, September 12, planning to remain two months at their villa at Capri, Italy; then they planned to go to Paris, and Mme. Bowne expected to coach again with Trabadello, but as she says, "This fiendish war makes it look as if we shall have to abandon our plans."

ADELE BOWNE-KIRBY AT HOME.

Real Melody.

"A cross between a hymn and a comic song," was a policeman's description of a toper's melody in Chesterfield (England) marketplace.—Fort Madison (Ia.) Evening Democrat.

Steinway Fame Has Encircled the World

Wherever love of music prevails—in the palace of Old World royalty, in the mansion of aristocracy, in the home of the true music lover everywhere—the

Steinway

is known and preferred above all other pianos. Supremacy of tone and workmanship has achieved this international renown, and four succeeding generations have faithfully upheld the art ideal which produced the first Steinway.

When you buy a Steinway you buy the Standard Piano of the World.

STEINWAY & SONS
Steinway Hall
107-109 East 14th St., New York
SUBWAY EXPRESS STATION AT THE DOOR

Represented by the Foremost Dealers Everywhere

FOUNDED JANUARY, 1880

MUSICAL COURIER
A WEEKLY JOURNAL
DEVOTED TO MUSIC, DRAMA AND ALLIED ARTS

GRAND PRIX
PARIS EXPOSITION
1900

ESTABLISHED
BY
MARC A. BLUMENBERG

PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY
BY THE

MUSICAL COURIER COMPANY
(Incorporated under the laws of the State of New York)
LOUIS BLUMENBERG, President
ALVIN L. SCHMOEGER, Sec. and Treas.
437 Fifth Ave., S. E. Cor. 39th St. - - - New York
Cable address: Peguiar, New York
Telephone to all Departments 4292, 4293, 4294, 7357 Murray Hill
LEONARD LIEBLING - - - - - EDITOR
H. I. BENNETT - - - - MANAGING EDITOR

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1914.
No. 1798

OFFICES AND REPRESENTATIVES

MIDDLE WEST DEPARTMENT—
Chicago Offices, 615 to 625 Orchestra Building, Rene Devries, General Representative, in charge.

UNITED STATES AND CANADA

BOSTON—
Blanche Freedman, 108 Hemenway St., Suite 10. 'Phone: B. B. 5554.
SAN FRANCISCO—
Alfred Metzger, Rooms 1009-1010, Kohler & Chase Building, 26 O'Farrell Street.
PHILADELPHIA, PA—
Harold Parry Quicksall, 5719 Windsor Place.
PITTSBURGH, PA.—
Hollis Edison Davenny, 5012 Friendship Ave., E. E.
ST. LOUIS, MO.—
Ernest R. Kroeger, Musical Art Building, St. Louis, Mo.
ST. PAUL, MINN.—
Johnson McClure Bellows, Musical Editor of St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press.
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Miss Ruth Anderson, 49 So. Eighth St.
LOUISVILLE, KY.—Katherine Whipple-Dohlis, 425 Fourth Avenue.
COLUMBUS, OHIO—Miss Emily Church Benham, 1299 Bryden Road.
BUFFALO, N. Y.—Cora Julia Taylor, 819 Richmond Avenue.
NEW ORLEANS—Harry B. Loeh, Box 79.
LOS ANGELES—Mrs. Jane Catherwood, 1110 W. Washington St.
KANSAS CITY—Geneve Lichtenwalter, 600 Studio Bldg.
CINCINNATI—
Mrs. Jessie P. Tyree, 9 The Westmoreland, Mason St., Mt. Auburn.
OMAHA—Jean P. Duffield, 205 Boyds Theatre.
LINCOLN, NEB.—Mrs. E. S. Luce, 1614 O St.
PROVIDENCE, R. I.—William Place, Jr., Jackson Bldg.
DES MOINES—Mrs. Caroline Young Smith, 1082 21st Street.
DENVER—Mrs. Dolores Reedy-Maxwell, 1516 Milwaukee St.
PORTLAND, ORE.—John R. Oatman, 445 Sherlock Bldg.
WICHITA, KANS.—Ralph Brokaw, 109 East 3d St.
VICTORIA, B. C.—Miss May Hamilton, 524 Michigan St.

EUROPEAN

BERLIN, W.—
Arthur M. Abell, Jenaer St. 21.
Cable Address: Abell, Wilmersdorf, Berlin.
PARIS—
H. O Osgood, 43 Boulevard Beausejour.
LONDON—
H. O. Osgood, Swiss Cottage, 16 Adamson Road, N. W. in charge. Telephone: 5379 Hampstead "In Charge."
DRESDEN—
Mrs. E. Potter-Frissell, Elsenstuckstrasse 16.
MUNICH, GERMANY—
Miss Alice L. Bryant, Finken Strasse 2.
VIENNA—
Frank Angold, Florianigasse 60.
MOSCOW, RUSSIA—
Ellen von Tideböhl, Arbatte, 34 Deneschny.
ROME, ITALY—
Mrs. Dolly Pattison, 9 Piazza di Spagna.
STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN—
Louisa Upling, Roslagsgatan 19.
LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND—
W. J. Bowden, 22 Fern Grove.

For the names and addresses of correspondents and representatives not in this list, apply to main office.

SUBSCRIPTIONS: (In Advance)

United States	$5.00	Canada	$6.00
Great Britain	£1 5s.	Austria	30 kr.
France	31.25 fr.	Italy	31.25 fr.
Germany	25 m.	Russia	12 r.

Single Copies, Fifteen Cents, at newsstands.
Back Numbers, Twenty-five Cents.

Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class Matter.

THE MUSICAL COURIER is for sale on the principal newsstands in the United States and in the leading music houses, hotels and kiosques in Belgium, England, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Switzerland and Egypt.

American News Company, New York, General Distributing Agents.
Western News Company, Chicago, Western Distributing Agents.
New England News Company, Eastern Distributing Agents.

ADVERTISING RATES:

On reading page, per inch, per year	$400.00	Front pages, per issue	$500.00
On advertising page, per inch, per year	200.00	Line (agate) rate on reading page, per issue	1.00
Column rate, per issue	150.00	Line (agate) rate on advertising page, per issue	.50
Full pages, per issue	400.00

THE MUSICAL COURIER EXTRA
Published every Saturday by Musical Courier Co.
Devoted to the interests of the Piano Trade.

The Paris Opera Comique has been turned into a hospital, with a bed in each loge.

Wagner opera has been banished from Russia. It is no new thing for Wagner to be banished, but somehow he always seems to come back.

Caruso denies in a Milan newspaper that he is the author of any book on singing or that he has any connection whatsoever with such a publication.

About $12,500 has been raised for the Wagner monument in Dresden, but no further steps are to be taken toward its completion until after the war.

The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau has received a cablegram from Pasquale Amato, baritone of the Metropolitan Opera Company, stating that he will sail from Genoa, September 26.

Gabriel Dupont, the composer, is reported to be dead. He was thirty-six years old and began his career by winning the Sonzogno prize with his opera, "La Cabrera." He also wrote "La Glu," produced at Nice, Brussels, etc.

A cable received by Mason & Hamlin informs them that Harold Bauer, concluding his brilliant Australian season, was on his way to Honolulu, where he was to play on September 6, thereafter going to San Francisco and thence to New York.

According to all appearances there will be only one grand opera company west of New York this season, and that is the San Carlo organization, which will open its season, October 5, in St. Louis and thereafter visit the larger cities all over the country.

Next Monday evening the first gun in the local musical campaign—a peaceful one, let us hope—will be fired when the Century Opera opens its doors with a performance of "Romeo and Juliette." The proceeds are to be devoted to the benefit of the Red Cross Society.

Although the cable is not signed, which is somewhat strange owing to the very stringent censorial restraint, a message just received by the Concert Direction M. H. Hanson from Bologna, Italy, is almost certain to emanate from Ferruccio Busoni, as Busoni has a residence in Bologna, the home of his orchestra. The cable says: "Myself and family safe here. Arranging now to sail for America by early boat. Trust there is no war in America: it is terrible over here."

It is more than likely that there will be no MacDowell Festival at Peterborough, N. H., next summer. To a representative of the MUSICAL COURIER Mrs. MacDowell said last week: "These festivals have grown so important that after each one we need time for readjustment. The practical problem of financial support, the housing and caring for our visitors, the possibility of a more adequate hall—all this needs time and thought. Under the conditions, I feel that we should allow an interim of one summer before giving another festival."

Last week the MUSICAL COURIER printed a statement to the effect that Mr. Tirindelli would conduct the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra concerts until the return of Dr. Kunwald from Europe. It appears, however, that while such a rumor was current in Cincinnati, it was not founded on fact, and a letter received by the MUSICAL COURIER from the office of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra Association says that no steps have been taken to secure a substitute for Dr. Kunwald, "for in the latest advices received from him we were assured that Dr. Kunwald would be in Cincinnati on schedule time, therefore there has been no occasion for making the arrangement spoken of as a fact in your columns." The MUSICAL COURIER is glad to be able to set this matter right.

A. L. Guille, the tenor, and formerly a member of Mme. Patti's concert company, is reported to have died in want at a county hospital in California.

A letter received in New York by way of Copenhagen, from Rachmaninoff, tells that the young composer has been called to the front to serve under his country's colors.

Among the soloists engaged for the St. Paul series of concerts by the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra are McCormack, Busoni, Schumann-Heink, Rudolf Ganz, Mildred Potter, Helen Stanley and Julia Claussen.

Published exclusively in the Morning Telegraph was the news last Tuesday that the Metropolitan Opera is to open its season here, November 16, with "Carmen," sung by Farrar, Caruso, Bori and Amato, and conducted by Toscanini.

Boston is to have an opera season, after all, but a minor one, beginning October 5 in the Boston Theatre. The promoters are W. H. Leahy and Alexander Bevani, and the singers will include Blanche Hamilton Fox, Alice Gentle and Miriam Ardini. Arturo Bovi, formerly of the Metropolitan Opera House, has been engaged as the leader.

Philadelphia makes known that it does not purpose to be without grand opera this winter, even though the regular Chicago-Philadelphia Opera is in a state of suspension, owing to the war. Rumor says that an independent organization may be formed," made up of soloists and choristers now available in this country and of foreign women artists whom war has left without occupation."

Reports that the London Promenade Concerts intended to boycott German music (see letter of Louis Blumenberg on another page) now are found to have been based on a misconception, as the changes made in the opening programs were merely matters of chance. The management of the Promenade series announces officially that there will be no discrimination shown against the German, Austrian and Hungarian composers. This move is in good taste and quite in keeping with the sensible and fair-minded spirit of the English nation.

The long lost manuscript score of "Rheingold," which has just been found in the Wahnfried Archives at Bayreuth, now is demanded by the administrative department of the royal house of Bavaria as the valuable document belonged to King Ludwig and had been borrowed by Wagner from the Royal Library and never returned by him. Some years ago the Munich Royal Opera began an investigation regarding the whereabouts of the missing score but did not press the matter very energetically at the time. The government's direct representations, however, seem to have been more urgent, and doubtless they will recover the manuscript.

As already mentioned in the MUSICAL COURIER the Chicago Opera will not resume its performances this season. The following announcement was given to the press and subscribers by Bernhard Ulrich, business manager of the company: "Owing to the state of war now existing in Europe and the inability by reason thereof to secure the artists and organization necessary and proper to present and give grand opera as contemplated and announced the board of directors have determined to refund all subscriptions for season seats made for the season 1914-15, with the understanding, however, that all subscribers have the right of preference in the seats now subscribed for upon resumption of grand opera by the company."

LOUIS BLUMENBERG WRITES.

Belated Letter from President of Musical Courier Company Tells of Musical Conditions in London During War Times—He Meets Many American Artists—Works by German Composers Barred at Queen's Hall Concerts—Wagner Is Taboo.

London, August 18, 1914.

The war in Europe will have a very disastrous effect on all musical enterprises here. It is almost certain that most of the opera houses will be closed, and concerts will be abandoned.

In Germany and Austria there will be no one to handle the stage or scenery. Every able bodied man is serving in the army. Thousands of singers will be without engagements. Instrumental soloists are in the same dilemna. No one who has not been on the spot during the first days of the announcement of hostilities can conceive what dismay the news brought to the people in the musical profession. Several instances came to my immediate attention. Heinrich Hensel, the great Wagner tenor, who was to open his season at Hamburg during August, was in Belgium at the outbreak of the conflict and could not hear from Hamburg. He was touring with his wife in his motor and fearing that the machine would be confiscated he managed to store it away and proceeded to Antwerp in the hope of being helped across the border to Germany through the intercession of government officials. This was a week ago. Where Hensel is at present no one knows.

Godowsky and his family were at Middelkerke, a small Belgian town, intending to remain all summer. It became dangerous for him to stay there as he occupies an Austrian government position, being head of the Meisterschule at Vienna. He and his family fled to London, where they may have to remain until the war is over. The Meisterschule consequently will not be able to have his services and may possibly not open.

As there are no authentic reports I cannot give the details of what happened at Bayreuth. However, the festival closed suddenly and the Salzburg Festival did not open and all the artists were fortunate in not going there.

John McCormack, who made a tremendous hit at the Kursaal in Ostende recently, was about to leave for Salzburg when he received a wire from Lili Lehmann which simply said, "Do not come."

The remarkable young pianist, Irene Eneri Garaioff, who was at Godowsky's in Belgium, fled to Norway. She is a Russian and that was cause sufficient for her disappearing. Thousands of orchestra players are off to the war, so that alone will prevent opera giving.

I am not informed as to the whereabouts of Kreisler and Thibaud, but it is reported that these artists are with their regiments. If that be so it will affect the musical season in the United States as these virtuosi are booked for many concerts. Burmester may be among the soldiers.

Our American managers, Haensel and Jones, Loudon Charlton, M. H. Hanson and C. A. Ellis must be doing some worrying just now. I have been trying to get into touch with these artists and will be glad to inform their managers should I have any definite information.

As I am writing this the report reaches me that two of Ysaye's sons have been killed. It is to be hoped that such is not the case. Ysaye has three sons in the army.

As it is impossible here to get news from Germany, I cannot state the whereabouts of Dr. Karl Muck or Josef Stransky. Dr. Kunwald was in Vienna just before the outbreak of the war.

Many of our American musicians are here trying to find accommodations for sailing to the United States. Leo Schulz succeeded in getting here out of Germany, and his having his cello with him saved him. Sigmund Herzog, the New York pianist, is here; so is Ferdinand von Inten. Others are Sara Hayman, the soprano; Leon Rice, the tenor; Archer Gibson, the organist; Harry Rowe Shelley, Victor Maurel, Elizabeth Leonardo, Mme. Jomelli.

All the New York managers managed to get back to their home headquarters, but whether they will succeed in bringing their artists over there remains to be seen. Among those who will go to the United States owing to the impossibility of filling engagements here is Loretta del Vallé, with the high colorature voice. She is at present working strenuously on the American Committee (at the Savoy Hotel) for the relief of stranded Americans, where there are hundreds of our fellow citizens to be seen daily.

The daily papers in the United States have given the news about the wonderful work done by the American Citizen's Committee, so it is superfluous to go into details. Nevertheless, I cannot refrain from calling attention to the indefatigable activity of Theodore Hetzler, vice-president of the Fifth Avenue Bank in New York, who is chairman of the American Citizens' Committee. The wonderful manner in which Mr. Hetzler has handled the difficult problem is truly commendable. Disraeli once said there is nothing like being on the spot, or words to that effect. Certainly Mr. Hetzler was the right man and on the spot.

The Promenade Concerts at Queen's Hall opened for the season on August 15; however, the program which was announced in advance was altered at the last moment, and compositions by German composers were eliminated. The Wagner program for the following evening was abandoned and some Russian composers substituted. The musical conditions in England will be as deplorable as on the Continent. All of the proposed festivals have been canceled, and this will naturally be a great financial loss to many singers.

The Concert Direction Daniel Mayer has had a number of cancelations from places where their artists were to have appeared. A number of bookings at Steinway Hall here are being countermanded. Altogether, the European musical season of 1914-15 seems hopeless.

As to the opera season in London, it is impossible at present to state what will take place.

Katharine Goodson, who will make another tour in America, is booked to sail in December. Her European tour, which was to have taken place in the autumn, cannot be made. Altogether, Katharine Goodson has to forego twenty-nine concerts on the Continent.

It is fortunate for England that hostilities did not begin later in the year, as many families send their children to the Continent to schools and conservatories which open in the autumn. As to American students, they will not be able to go to Europe at present, and consequently our teachers and conservatories in the United States will have a very busy season.

LOUIS BLUMENBERG.

OUR NATIONAL ANTHEM.

"The Star Spangled Banner," revised and enlarged from the Report on the above and other airs issued in 1909, by Oscar George Theodore Sonneck, chief of the division of music of the Library of Congress. Published by the Government Printing Office, Washington.

In this volume of 115 pages and twenty-five double-page plates, Mr. Sonneck goes exhaustively into the history and the origin of the tune that now is considered to be the national anthem of the United States.

He shows that the song has had a long and steady growth in popular favor and that it did not leap into instant popularity, as is so often stated by enthusiastic journalists.

He says: "One of the popular legends is that Key's poem with its music spread like wildfire beyond Baltimore, and in a short time became a national song. The popular mind seems to consider it a blemish, a reflection on the intrinsic merits of a song or any other work of art if it does not obtain immediate popularity, and writers who cater to the tastes and prejudices of the multitude do not hesitate to amputate the facts accordingly. 'The Star Spangled Banner' rather gains than loses in merit if the silly anecdotes of its wildfire progress are not heeded, and if we adhere to what is still common knowledge among the older generations, namely, that 'The Star Spangled Banner' was not rushed to the front of our national songs until the Civil War. Before that time its progress as a national song had been steady but comparatively slow, as anybody may see who follows its career through the American song collections. . . . The plain truth of the matter is that 'The Star Spangled Banner' was slow in gaining popular consideration equal to that accorded to 'Hail, Columbia' and 'America.' It took two wars, first the Civil War and, some thirty years later, the Spanish War, to crowd other national songs into the background in favor of 'The Star Spangled Banner.'"

Mr. Sonneck says in his Introduction that "research in musical history, in common with every other kind of historical research, aims solely at the orderly establishment of facts and the logical interpretation of available facts. Such facts or the conclusions from such facts may not always be welcome, but the historian is or should be a seeker after historical truth, often enough stranger and more romantic than fiction. He should never allow possible preferences of his compatriots or his personal idiosyncrasies to obscure his historical vision. For instance, every patriotic American would rejoice, with the author of this Report, if it could be shown by documentary or other unimpeachable evidence that 'The Star Spangled Banner,' both in words and music, was of American origin. If that cannot be shown, then every patriotic American will be sensible enough not to betray irritation of his patriotic pride because the music of our "Star Spangled Banner" had its origin in some 'monarchical' country of Europe, whether that be Turkey, Russia, Germany, France, England, or Ireland. Nor is there any patriotic reason, so far as I can see, why the citizens of the republican United States of America, founded by men of English, German, Irish or other descent, and fought for by Irishman against Irishman, Englishman against Englishman, Germans against Germans, should be expected to smart under the theory that 'To Anacreon in Heaven' was of English, not of Irish, French, or German, origin, and to prefer, for instance, an Irish to an English composer. We took the air and we kept it. Transplanted on American soil it thrived. As 'To Anacreon in Heaven,' of European origin, the air is obsolete and extinct; as the air of 'The Star Spangled Banner' it stirs the blood of every American, regardless of his origin or the origin of the air."

These words of Mr. Sonneck's are to the point. He might have added, however, that the thrill which every patriotic American is officially credited with feeling when he hears the "Star Spangled Banner" is not due to the witchery and subtle charm of the tune itself, but to the sentiments and associations which cling to it like moss and ivy on a rough hewn wall. It matters not, therefore, who composed the tune; for the sentiments which give the tune life everlasting are of purely American origin.

Mr. Sonneck's conclusions are that Francis Scott Key, the author of the words, could not have written by chance a poem of such complicated meter, and that he had in mind as a model either Thomas Paine's "Adams and Liberty" or the older "Anacreontic Song."

Paine was an Englishman who presumably was familiar with the popular English song, "To Anacreon in Heaven," for he made the words of "Adams and Liberty" fit the music of the older song.

It is of no importance whether Key wrote his words to fit the old melody or merely modeled them on the meter of Paine's verses. The fact remains that the complicated meter of Key's "The Star Spangled Banner" fits the peculiar meters and phrases of "To Anacreon in Heaven" with no more likelihood of chance than that an irregular piece of metal would serve as a key to a Yale lock.

Mr. Sonneck disposes of Blake's claim for an Irish origin or a mysterious origin of the tune, and asserts that John Stafford Smith, Gentleman of His Majesty's Chapel Royal, was the composer of the tune for the words of "To Anacreon in Heaven," which tune was afterward used for Paine's "Adams and Liberty," and finally for Key's "The Star Spangled Banner."

This newly published volume of Mr. Sonneck's is to be had for eighty-five cents by applying to the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington.

It is sincerely to be hoped that this exhaustive and authoritative work will forever lay the ghost of controversy over the composer of the unofficial national anthem of the United States.

Mr. Sonneck says that the tune has not been officially recognized by the Government, though the navy has been instructed to use "The Star Spangled Banner" as the national air of the land.

The glory that belongs to John Stafford Smith is but a reflected one. If Key had not made his words fit this peculiar rhythm, the tune would have long been forgotten. It is perhaps a pity that so unvocal a tune should have been selected. But it was selected, and there the matter ends. John Stafford Smith's old tune by the merest chance became a national air. But in reality the composer is deserving of no more credit for writing such a tune than that the humble builder of an inn should be exalted to the rank of a great architect because Washington happened to make the otherwise obscure building his army headquarters.

Moreover, it is the sentiment alone of Key's poem that is American. The language is that of England. If it is unpatriotic to acknowledge the English origin of the mere notes, how can those same ultra-patriots use the language of England? And for that matter, is not the language of England a hybrid mixture of the tongues of the Teutonic settlers and the Norman conquerors of England? This patriotic business can be carried to an absurd extreme.

Some of the French purists of the period may have thought it very unpatriotic for Napoleon's soldiers to wear shirts and shoes made in England and at the same time to be fighting English soldiers.

It may not be out of place here to point out that the British national anthem, "God Save the King," has had as great a struggle for recognition as "The Star Spangled Banner." It is also without official recognition. A thousand and one different sources have been ascribed to it. In the year 1822 W. Wright, of Fleet street, London, published a volume of 208 pages, called, "An Account of the National Anthem Entitled 'God Save the King,' with Authorities Taken from Sion College Library, The Ancient Records of the Merchant Tailors' Company, The Old Checque-Book of His Majesty's Chapel, Selected, Edited, and Arranged by Richard Clark, Gentleman of St. His Majesty's Chapels Royal, Deputy Vicar Choral of St. Paul's Cathedral, and of Westminster Abbey, and Secretary to the Glee Club."

Notwithstanding this volume published in 1822 to prove that Dr. John Bull wrote "John Bull's" national anthem, a writer in the New York Times of August 21, 1905, asserts that the tune is of French origin and was taken into England by Handel.

Mr. Sonneck need not be surprised, therefore, if his sane and scientific reasons are pooh-poohed by fantastic theorists in the near and distant future, and the paternity of "To Anacreon in Heaven" is blamed on another unfortunate than the long defunct John Stafford Smith.

A TALK WITH THEODORE HETZLER.

Chairman of the American Citizens' (Relief) Committee of London.

When war clouds gathered over Europe toward the end of last July at the very height of the tourist season there was an immense influx of Americans into London. So sudden was the gathering of these war clouds that very few foreigners who were on the continent or in England had time to make any

Photo by Pach Bros., New York.
THEODORE HETZLER,
Vice-president of the Fifth Avenue Bank of New York.

preparations for their protection or to assure their own comfort and safety.

In this sudden emergency Theodore Hetzler, vice-president of the Fifth Avenue Bank, of New York, came to the fore and, with his splendid American energy and enterprise, and his masterly knowledge of organization, saved the situation from its worst features of suffering and privation.

And it must be added in all fairness that it was the Fifth Avenue Bank which, by its efficient support of Mr. Hetzler's efforts, its high standing and its many friends at home and abroad, made possible the speed, perfection and effectiveness of these measures of relief. It so happens that this Fifth Avenue Bank is one of those most patronized by musical artists both native and foreign, and that many musicians were aided by these measures of relief. This is therefore a matter of interest to readers of the MUSICAL COURIER, especially so as there still are a large number of musicians in Europe.

Mr. Hetzler was seen soon after his return to New York by a representative of the MUSICAL COURIER, and gave a clear statement of the proceedings of the American Committee and the measures taken for the relief of stranded Americans in London and elsewhere.

"The first Monday in August," said Mr. Hetzler, "is regularly set aside in England as a national holiday, and this period of rest includes the Saturday before, so that for three days—Saturday, Sunday and Monday—the banks are closed. This is so every year, but it does not generally involve such consequences as it did this year. This year the bank holiday was on Monday, August 3, and the banks were closed on the Saturday preceding, August 1 the very day upon which war became a certainty.

"The seriousness of the matter for the individua American began to become evident when on the following day, Sunday, August 2, a moratorium was declared. Following that declaration it became impossible to purchase anything except with gold Paper was refused. Change would not be given for five pound notes. Restaurant keepers demanded advance payment on all orders, and hotels would not advance any money or pay out any cash on goods delivered in their care.

"Things began to look serious, but even then the average American did not realize the entire import of the situation. They all confidently relied upon being able to draw on their credits for any amount of gold they might need when the banks opened on the Tuesday following bank holiday. But before that day the announcement was made public that the bank holiday would be extended until Friday.

"This announcement was the signal for a panic among Americans stranded without funds so far from home. And it was at this juncture that I saw the necessity of doing something. I managed to collect about one hundred and fifty pounds among my friends and was able with this sum to relieve some of the gravest distress by paying it out in amounts of one or two pounds at a time to persons who were personally known to me as depositors with the Fifth Avenue Bank, or could give satisfactory credentials.

"These measures very quickly proved sufficient and the panic increased, especially as it was discovered that German letters of credit were useless and even German gold would not be accepted. It was then decided to call a meeting of Americans to formulate some definite measures of relief. This meeting, which was held at the Hotel Waldorf, was attended by about four thousand angry, excited and panic stricken Americans.

"Propositions and suggestions of all sorts were made. The free American spirit asserted itself and some people wanted to know what the American Ambassador was doing and why he did not provide them with funds and transportation, forgetting entirely that he was working night and day to make order out of this chaos. Others wanted to know what business Europe had to interfere with independent Americans by going to war, and demanded that the United States force a cessation of hostilities until all of the Americans were out and on their way home.

"Finally an American Citizens' Committee was formed, of which I was appointed chairman, W. North Duane, of New York, secretary, and William C. Breed, of New York, treasurer. The following sub-committees were also appointed: Diplomatic Committee, Finance Committee, Transportation Committee, Hotel Committee, Men's Relief Committee, Women's Relief Committee, Registration Committee, Reference Index Committee, Post Office Committee, Committee for Exchange on Steamship Tickets, Bulletin Committee, Auditing Committee, Committee on Americans Stranded on Continent, Resident American Women's Relief Committee.

"As for the stranded musicians, their interests were placed in the hands of Louis Blumenberg and M. H. Hanson, and I want to say that both of these men rendered me invaluable assistance both in this and in many other ways.

"Headquarters were fixed in a room at the Savoy Hotel. This immediately proved too small and the ballroom was taken and finally the work grew so vast that three floors of the hotel were needed for it.

"One hundred thousand dollars was sent via Montreal and was paid to holders of American Bankers' Association Travelers' Checks, and in some cases on personal checks. We were also permitted to issue passports from the committees' headquarters, which saved an immense amount of trouble.

"The committee also issued its own paper, the 'American Bulletin,' a daily devoted to the publication of information likely to be useful to our stranded countrymen, of which Vol. I, No. 1, apeared on August 12.

"Matters soon began to adjust themselves. Earl Grey, the Foreign Minister, of whose efforts in our behalf it is impossible to speak too highly, had the war risk on British vessels reduced, thus making it possible for Americans to get transportation home.

"As a token of appreciation it was planned to give a gigantic concert at Albert Memorial for the benefit of the Prince of Wales Fund to relieve the widows and orphans of soldiers. M. H. Hanson was put in charge of this and arrangements were quite complete when it was decided that it must be abandoned.

The following is quoted from the American Bulletin, issue of August 22:

At a meeting of the general committee, held on August 21, the following resolution, proposed by J. G. Cannon, was passed by acclamation:

Whereas, Theodore Hetzler, the chairman of the committee, is about to return to America, and the members of the American Citizens' Committee desire to express to him their grateful appreciation of the able manner in which he has conducted its affairs since its organization, therefore be it

Resolved, that the American Citizens' Committee of London desire to place upon its permanent records not only the sincere thanks of the committee for the splendid and gratuitous services which Theodore Hetzler has performed, but also to express to him the great obligation which all Americans who have received assistance by the committee are under to him for the splendid executive ability shown in perfecting its organization and in carrying out the many details of its work. And we all wish him a safe and prosperous journey to his native land. Be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be furnished the press and printed in the daily Bulletin, and a engrossed copy, duly attested by the secretary, be sent to Mr. Hetzler.

AMERICA'S HOST ABROAD.

[The MUSICAL COURIER is endeavoring to keep the subjoined list up to date. As soon as arrivals are reported in this country their names are removed from this roster. Should there be an oversight, or should any of America's musical personages now abroad not be included in the appended table, the MUSICAL COURIER would be grateful to receive such information so as to be able to keep the reference schedule correct. This list is not confined to Americans exclusively but embraces also all foreign artists resident in this country or who were expected to come here for participation in the musical season of 1914-15.—Editor MUSICAL COURIER.]

A

Arthur M. Abell, J. Allen, Leonora Allen, Richard Aldrich, Pasquale Amato, Paolo Ananian, Frances Alda, Richard Arnold.

B

Louis Blumenberg, W. L. Blumenschein, Mrs. Marc A. Blumenberg, Birdice Blye, Alice L. Bryant, Mrs. Norah Brandt, Enid Brandt, Mrs. H. H. A. Beach, Charles Bowes, Eddy Brown, Thuel Burnham, John Braun, Alice Bingham, Mrs. George Beck, Helen Blain, Lillian Blauvelt, Carlo Buonamici, Rudolf Berger, Carl Braun, Alessandro Bonci, Ferruccio Busoni, Willy Burmester, Amadeo Bassi, Lucrezia Bori, George Barrere, Grace Burnap, Mrs. Hope Hopkins Burroughs, Mrs. A. M. Blair, Wilhelm Bachaus.

C

Enrico Caruso, Julia Claussen, Cleofonte Campanini, Anna Case, Dr. William C. Carl, Shanna Cumming, Lina Cavalieri, Arthur M. Curry, Claude Cunningham, Augusta Cottlow, Pauline Curley, Lucy Call, Grace Cole, Marian Clark, Kittie Cheatham, California University Glee Club, Gertrude Cleophas, Jane Noria-Centannini, Maria Cavan, Julia Culp, Francis Coppicus, Jacques Coini, Ernesto Consolo, Charles Cooper, Andrea Casertani.

D

Mildred Dilling, Laurette Duval, Vernon d'Arnalle, Adamo Didur, Charles Dalmores, Norah Drewett, Andreas Dippel, J. F. Delma-Heide, Jenny Dufau, Emmy Destinn, Eleonora de Cisneros, Gaston Duchamel, Loretta del Valle, Marie Dentscher.

E

Annie Ellermann, Albert Elkus, Emma Eames, Edwin Evans, Rudolph Engberg, C. A. Ellis, William Engle.

F

George Fergusson, Truman Fassett, Mrs. E. Potter-Frissell, Benjamin Fabian, Geraldine Farrar, William Förster, Anna Fitzhugh, Carl Flesch, Edoardo Ferrari-Fontana, Flonzaley Quartet, Martha Falk-Mayer, Sam Franko, Rita Fornia.

G

Giulio Gatti-Casazza, Frank Gittelson, Louise Gunning, Leopold Godowsky, Katherine Golcher, Katharine Goodson, Esperanza Garrigue, Hedwig Glomb, Emily Gresser, Mary Garden, Paolo Gruppe, Emilio de Gogorza, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, Clara Clemens-Gabrilowitsch, Aristodemo Giorgini, Heinrich Gebhard, William J. Guard, Paolo Gallico, Albino Gorno, Otto Goritz, Dinh Gilly, Elena Gerhardt, Joseph Gotsch, Mr. and Mrs. Felix Garziglia, Mrs. Warner Gibbs, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Gans, Archer Gibson.

H

Julia Hostater, Sara Hayman, David Hochstein, Ellis Clark Hammann, Sara Heineman, W. H. Henderson, Sue Harvard, Margaret Huston, George Hamlin, Edwin Hughes, Ada Soder-Hueck, William Hinshaw, Edward Hargreave, George Nelson Holt, Elmer G. Hoelzle, Allen Hinckley, Genevieve Houghton, Ragnahild Holmquist, Alfred Hertz, Heinrich Hensel, Frieda Hempel, Marie Hertenstein, Josef Hofmann, Hans Himmer, Edna Hoff, Walter Heermann, Carl Hillman.

J

Sascha Jacobson, Anna Taylor Jones, Carl Jörn, Edward Johnson, Jeanne Jomelli.

K

Grace Kerns, Mme. Rider-Kelsey, Marie Kaiser, Earle G. Killeen, Sergei Kotlarsky, Mr. and Mrs. Knupfer, Georgia Kober, Adele Krueger, Fritz Kreisler, Dr. Ernst Kunwald, Leopold Kramer, Louis Koemmenich, Josephine Kryl, Walter Kirschbaum.

L

Felice Lyne, Albert Lindquist, Kathleen Lawlor, Leslie Loth, James Liebling, Cordelia Lee, Lucille Laurence, Marie White Longman, Josef Lhevinne, Georges Longy, Frank la Forge, Theodor Latterman, Henri Le Roy, Mario Lambardi, Dr. and Mrs. Lovette, Edwin H. Lemare, Elizabeth Leonard, Louis Lombard.

M

Charles Henry Meltzer, Alice Garrigue Mott, Florence MacBeth, Zitella Martin, Adolph Mühlmann, Marguerite Melville, Beulah Munson, Alma Moodie, Francis Maclennan, Florence Easton Maclennan, Christine Miller, Riccardo Martin, Harry Munro, Marie Mohler, Francis Macmillen, Isolde Menges, Dr. Karl Muck, Ottilie Metzger, Lucien Muratore, Vanni Marcoux, Margarete Matzenauer, André Maquarre, Elisabeth, Mack, Hans Merx, John McCormack, Daniel Maquarre, Katharine McNeal, Leopold de Maré, Laya Machat, Mrs. Daisy McKay, Victor Maurel.

N

F. Wight Neumann, Louise Nikita, Emma Nevada, Mignon Nevada, Hildegarde Nash.

O

Hendrikje Ohlsen, H. O. Osgood, W. B. Olds, Professor Otto, Mrs. Charles Orchard, Margarete Ober, Emil Oberhoffer.

P

Paul Petri, Carroll Badham Preyer, Louis Persinger, Mrs. Dolly Pattison, A. Buzzi-Peccia, Henry Perry, Eleanor Pochler, Harry Phillips, May Esther Peterson, Ignace Jan Paderewski, Lucille Peck, Eleanor Peocock, Kathleen Parlow, Giorgio Polacco, F. Parme, S. van Praag, Anna Pavlowa.

Q

Alfred Quinn.

R

Titta Ruffo, Kate Rolla, Claude Reddisch, Meta Reddisch, Leon Rains, Anita Rio, Max Rabinoff, Ettore Ruffo, Otto Roehrborn, Elizabeth Reeside, Léon Rothier, Henry Russell, Marie Rappold, Albert Reiss, Jacques Renard, H. Royer, Leon Rice.

S

May Scheidler, Gaston Sargent, Viola Gramm-Salzedo, Gladys Seward, Arnolde Stephenson, Carl Stasny, Wager Swayne, Irma Seydel, Theodore Seydel, Arthur Shattuck, Kurt Schindler, Ernest Schelling, Sigismund Stojowski, Philip Spooner, Albert Stoessel, Theodore Spiering, Oscar Saenger, Andrea de Segurola, James Sauvage, C. Wenham Smith, Ethel C. Smith, Pitts Sanborn, Oscar Seagle, Katherine Stevenson, Herman Sandby, Ella Spindler, Alexander Savine, Frank Steen, Loyal Phillips Shaw, Eleanor Spencer, J. D. Sample, Leo Slezak, Maria Sammarco, Arrigo Serato, Sevcik Quartet, Antonio Scotti, Max Smith, Josef Stransky, Giulio Setti, Leo Schultz, Ann Swinburne, Herbert Foster Sprague, Rudolph E. Schirmer, Arthur P. Schmidt, Bruno Steindel, Umberto Sorrentino, George W. Stewart, Harry Rowe Shelley.

T

Louis Campbell-Tipton, Louise Gerard-Thiers, Arturo Toscanini, Jacques Thibaud, Luisa Tetrazzini, Otto Tuft, Oswald Thumser, Enrico Tramont, Elizabeth Topping.

U

Otto Urack, Josef Urban, Jacques Urlus.

V

Daniel Visanska, Otto A. Voget, Edna ver Haar, Coenraad von Bos, Luisa Villani, Ferdinand von Inten.

W

Felix Weingartner, Herbert Witherspoon, Helen Bixby Wetzel, Mrs. Stacey Williams, Edyth Walker, Hermann Hans Wetzler, Clarence Whitehill, Marie Louise Wagner, Nancy White, G. C. Weitzel, Helen Warrum, Coral Wait, Carolina White, Priscilla White, Frank Waller, Beatrice Wheeler, Herman Weil, Anton Witek, Vita Witek, E. Walther, Edith Bower Whiffen, Grace Bonner Williams.

Y

Eugen Ysaye, S. Costantino Yon, Pietro A. Yon.

Z

Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler, Alice Zeppilli, Katherine Ziegler.

Returned and Returning.

Tina Lerner, the Russian pianist, arrived in New York on Tuesday, September 1, aboard the steamship Ryndham, sailing from Rotterdam August 22.

Another passenger on the Ryndham was Oscar George

Theodore Sonneck, chief of the division of music of the Library of Congress at Washington, D. C.

Alf Klingenberg, the Norwegian-American pianist, whose home is in Rochester, N. Y., returned to this country September 1.

S. M. Fabian, president of the Washington College of Music, Inc., has returned to his home from Europe.

F. N. Jones, vice-president of the Washington College of Music, Inc., is back from a trip abroad.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Torney Simons, of Washington, D. C., have returned from the war troubled countries.

Hannah G. Sullivan, a Berlin vocal teacher, returned to this country last week on the steamship Ryndam, and will establish a studio in Boston, Mass.

Leon Sametini, the Chicago violinist, is returning home on the Allen Line steamer Tunisia and is due in the Western metropolis September 11.

Morgan Kingston, tenor of the Century Opera Company, New York, returned on Saturday, August 29, from Liverpool.

Kathleen Howard, contralto of the Century Opera Company, has returned to New York from Paris.

L. H. Mudgett, manager of Symphony Hall, Boston, Mass., returned last week from Italy via New York.

Luella Anderson, violinist and MUSICAL COURIER correspondent at Brussels, has returned to her home in Omaha, Neb.

Mary Münchhoff, an Omaha, Neb., musician, has returned to that city.

Arthur Alexander, the tenor, whose home is in Paris, sailed from Marseilles, September 3 on the steamship Patria, due in New York about September 12.

Helen Stanley, the soprano, who will appear both in concert and with the Century Opera Company of New York this season, is now en route here from Europe.

Paul Althouse, tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, is en route to New York.

R. Franz Otto, vocal instructor, of Dubuque, Ia., has returned to his home from Italy.

Jan Sickesz, the Dutch pianist, has arrived in New York.

Johanna Gadski, the soprano, arrived in New York, Monday morning, September 7, on the steamship Rotterdam from Rotterdam.

Eleanor Spencer, the pianist, arrived in New York on Monday morning of this week on the steamship Rotterdam.

Alexander Bloch, the violinist, also was a passenger on the Rotterdam.

Ernestine Schumann-Heink came back to America on the steamship Rotterdam, arriving here on Labor Day. The contralto has been summering in Germany, where she was to have sung at the Bayreuth performances. During the approaching season Mme. Schumann-Heink will fill a long list of engagements extending as far south as Florida.

Lura M. Abell, assistant in the Berlin office of the MUSICAL COURIER, arrived Monday on the Rotterdam.

Eleanor Painter, of the Dippel Opera Comique forces, was also a Rotterdam passenger.

Max Zach, conductor of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, returned Labor Day on the steamship Rotterdam.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Volpe reached New York September 3 from London.

Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler, the pianist, arrived in New York on Monday morning aboard the steamship Rotterdam.

THE PROOF OF THE PUDDING.

As an echo of the imagined grievance of certain members of the National Association of Organists against the MUSICAL COURIER for its truthful, unbiased (and uncensored) report of the recent convention at Asbury Park, N. J., it will certainly not be without interest to mention the fact that the annual convention banquet of the organists was this year attended by only 123 persons, while last year the number was 240, or almost twice as many. In the words of one who was present at both, "it was a catastrophe this year!" It certainly was.

Information is also volunteered over the telephone by a voice purporting to be that of a member of the organists' association that "the recitals were this year given in the Methodist Church because the organists did not care to take the time necessary to familiarize themselves with the big Ocean Grove Auditorium organ."

Finally, if the organists wish to "put themselves right" in this matter, let them publish the complete and unabridged minutes, if any were kept, of the business meeting. Those minutes would make interesting reading.

AN OLD MEMORY REVIVED.

This is Daleyrac, a great man in his day, and one of whom the French were so proud that they put his picture in the "Galerie Historique des Hommes les plus célèbres." It is from this Historical Gallery of the most celebrated men that this portrait of Daleyrac is copied. It was published in Paris in 1811, two years after the composer's death, and while his operas still held the stage.

He was born in 1753 and educated for the law. But he so thoroughly disliked his legal studies that his father reluctantly permitted him to study music. "He was modest in his clothes, frugal in eating, simple in his tastes and habits, and he denied himself in every way that he might cause his father as little expense as possible," says the book. He took the famous Belgian composer, Grétry, as his model and worked very hard with a teacher named Langlé. The success of some violin duets that he had composed secured for him the chance to write for a stage production. He soon became one of the most esteemed of French operatic composers.

Notwithstanding all the excitement, tension, and horrors of the French Revolution of 1789 to 1793 Daleyrac supplied the public with a continuous output of operas. This list will show how persistently he worked: "L'Actrice Chez elle," "Adèle et Dorsan," "Adolphe et Clara," "Agnès et Oliver," "Alexis," "L'Amant Statue," "Ambroise," "L'Antichambre," "La boucle de cheveux," "Les Brigands," "Camile," "Cange," "Catinat," "Le Château de Monténéro," "La Chêne patriotique," "Le Chevalier â la mode," "Le Corsaire," "Deux mots," "La-dot," "L'eclipse totale," "Elise-Hortense," "La famille Americaine," "Fanchette," "La pauvre femme," "Gulistan," "Gulnare," "Koulouf," "La leçon," "Léhémann," "Lina," "Maison à vendre," "La maison isolée," "Une heure de mariage," "Marianne," "Le petit matelot," "Une matinée de Catinat," "Mombreuil et Merville," "Nina," "Le pavilon du calife," "Philippe et Georgette," "Picaros et Diego," "La poète et le musician," "Primrose," "La prise de Toulon," "La jeune prude," "Raoul, sire de Créque," "Renaud d'Ast," "Le nouveau Robinson," "Le rocher de Leucade," "Roméo et Juliette," "J. J. Rousseau," "Sargines," "Les deux petits Savoyards," "Les deux sérénades," "La soirée orageuse," "Le petit souper," "Les deux tuteurs," "Urgande et Merlin," "Vert-vert."

Not one of these many successful operas has survived the storm and stress or slow decay of time. Daleyrac has had his day. His sun has set to rise no more. The French Revolution, the rise and fall of Napoleon, a new monarchy, and a new republic a Franco-Prussian war, the commune, and all th restorations, revolutions, proclamations, and socia upheavals have very much altered the musical taste of the French. And it is hardly likely that th present cataclysm of race hatred and revenge wi restore the gentle melodies and simple harmonies o Daleyrac to popular favor.

Nevertheless it is not unbecoming of us to thin kindly for a few moments of a hard working, fru gal, high minded man, whose music gave delight t thousands a hundred years ago.

THE WORLD DO MOVE.

In an essay of "The Science of History," b James Anthony Froude, there occurs this sentence "As the planet varies with the atmosphere whic surrounds it, so each new generation varies from th last, because it inhales as its atmosphere the ac cumulated experience and knowledge of the whol past of the world. These things form the spiritua air which we breathe as we grow; and in the in finite multiplicity of elements of which that air i now composed, it is forever a matter of conjectur what the minds will be like which expand under it influence."

No stronger proof of the influence of atmospher on our own planet need be sought than that fu nished by the coal beds. When coal was forme on our earth's surface many thousand years ag the carbonic acid gas in the atmosphere was s dense that no human lungs, such as we now hav could have survived an hour in it. The sun wa more fiercely bright and the surface of the eart much hotter. In such an atmosphere and heat th early vegetation flourished amazingly and the fer shaped plants grew to the height of several mile Gradually the poisonous gas grew less, the su lost a little of its power, the earth cooled dow and the prehistoric ancestors of the human race be gan their slow but continuous march and evolutio to become in time the men and women of ou habitable world. The coal which we so heedlessl burn in our furnaces is but the living record of a earlier world, and the heat that warms us on winter's night is only the liberated sunbeams lon imprisoned in the giant ferns which flourished s abundantly in the suffocating air unnumbered age ago. In this vast interval of time the entire su face of the world was changed.

It requires a very much shorter interval to chang the temper and characteristics of a nation. Eac new generation is surprised at the ideas of th generations that preceded it.

Our failure to understand the actions of our an cestors is not due to a lack of intelligence in us o in them, but to our inability to grasp the funda mental fact that conditions are different.

If our atmosphere should become surcharge with carbonic acid gas again our trees and shrub would begin to grow at an incredible rate. If w were surrounded with the same conditions that ou forefathers had, we should do as they did and thin as they thought.

Surely if any man was entitled to respect as forecaster of political events, that man was Edwar Gibbon, whose capacious brain had systematize the million facts and unparalleled complexities c Roman history. Yet Gibbon said that the era c great conquerors was at an end. Unfortunately fo Gibbon, however, his prophetic vision did not fore see that a certain boy of about nine years of ag was to grow into the conquering Napoleon.

Froude says that the Crystal Palace in Londo was intended to be the inauguration of a new era when the sword was to be changed to a useful farm implement, and when commercial prosperity was t banish forever the horrors of war. But even whil Froude was writing his essay he tells us that th

American Civil War was teaching the world that "the arts which have made greatest progress are the arts of destruction."

When that four year turmoil was ended the cheerful optimists at once began to preach: "There will be no more war; the world has grown too civilized for that!" In spite of the Anglo-African war, the Spanish-American war, the Russo-Japanese war, the Balkan war, the so-called war in Mexico, there were thousands of persons who professed open-eyed surprise that this present European conflict should have happened. "We thought the world was too civilized for that," they exclaimed when the news came over the cables.

Plainly, these persons do not feel and understand the conditions of Europe. Perhaps they may be pained to learn that we believe the United States—which at present is patting itself on the back and congratulating itself on its superior civilization—will yet throw down the gauntlet and proceed to thrash some nation with which it today has not the suspicion of a grievance.

At any rate, this is the lesson that history teaches. And perhaps at that time one of the present warring nations of Europe will wonder that the world is not yet civilized enough to put down war. At least it is to be hoped that the manhood of the nation will be in evidence when the right time comes.

It is hardly necessary to lengthen this article with remarks on the constant changes in musical taste.

If we keep Froude's simile in mind and remember that even the earth is altogether altered with a change in its invisible gas, we may more clearly understand how different conditions and ideals and experience can change a national taste in matters of art, literature, and music.

FROM BEAU BROADWAY.

A timely arraignment is this one published by Beau Broadway in his New York Morning Telegraph column:

DEAR BEAU BROADWAY—I am so glad that you are devoting so little space to the pathetic stories of war "refugees." All of us are tired of these heroes. We do not care to suffer the sad story of some fate driven, Europe trotting soul who for war reasons was compelled to go three hours without caviar when we are reading of poor wretches in the trenches who have to go three hours without water, but not three minutes without bullets.

And oh! my dear Beau, what an awful prospect faces us. For many years to come we shall have to listen to some rich man, whom we dare not interrupt, telling us how he just managed to escape from Algiers in a suite de luxe just before the war broke out, and of the questionable food on the doppelschraubschnellpostdampfer Spitzenhauser II. . . . There is, for instance, my uncle Paul, who was a refugee in the corridors and dining rooms of the Hotel Saveloy, London, for six weeks.

The MUSICAL COURIER echoes the foregoing sentiments most heartily. This paper will publish no more "refugee" stories of the kind mentioned by the Telegraph.

THE TORONTO MENDELSSOHN CHOIR.

One of the things which Germany will regret having deprived herself of is the singing of the Toronto Mendelssohn Choir. The organization was to have visited Berlin and other cities in the Fatherland next spring, but, of course, the course of events has changed all that.

CARLSRUHE'S MUSIC FESTIVAL.

Carlsruhe was to have undertaken a music festival next year in order to celebrate the 200th anniversary of the founding of the city. The music projected for performance was to have been—German and French!

TWENTY-FIVE CITIES TO COMPETE AT THE INTERNATIONAL EISTEDDFOD AT THE PANAMA-PACIFIC EXPOSITION, SAN FRANCISCO.

[From the Editorial Bureau, Panama-Pacific International Exposition, San Francisco.]

The fact that fully two dozen cities will be represented by great choral or other musical organizations in the world Eisteddfod contests at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition in San Francisco during the last week in July next year is but one of the many evidences that San Francisco will be the Mecca for music lovers in 1915. In this series of musical events, as reported by W. Solomon Jones, general secretary of the 1915 International Eisteddfod, all competitions are open to the world, and $25,000 will be distributed in prizes.

Of these contests the most important will be the chief choral competition for mixed choirs numbering not less than 125 nor more than 150 voices, the three prizes offered being, respectively, $10,000, $2,000 and $500. For the mixed choir work, fifty to sixty voices, the prizes are $1,000 and $250; prizes offered in the ladies' choral competitions, fifty to sixty voices, are $1,000 and $500; in the male choral contests with the same numbers, $3,000 and $750, and for children under sixteen, numbering forty to fifty voices, the prizes are $250, $150 and $100.

Other numbers on the program include double male quartet, ladies' double quartet, soprano, contralto, tenor and baritone solos, soprano and alto duet, tenor and bass duet, with prizes ranging from $50 to $100. Military bands of thirty to forty pieces will compete for prizes of $2,000 and $500, and boys' bands (not over eighteen years of age), twenty-five to thirty pieces, for prizes aggregating $500.

In addition to the fifteen musical numbers there will be six prize competitions for original poems, five of them being in the Welsh language, the sixth in English, to treat the theme, "Meeting of the East and West," through the Panama Canal. In the five prose competitions, either Welsh or English, prizes are offered ranging from $200 to $250. The adjudicators or judges of the literary competitions include leading professors of the two California universities, beside Messrs. W. Apmadoc, Dyfed Alavon and Silyn Roberts, M. A., of Wales (in poetry), and in prose competitions Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones, Ph. D., Gwen Edwards, M. A., Oxford, Ernest Rhys, Hon. T. C. Edwards ("Cynonfardd"), H. O. Rowlands, D. D., and Hon. A. L. Thomas, ex-Governor of Utah. Delay in issuing the full program, which was promised some months ago, is due to the distances and time required for correspondence with the proposed European adjudicants. The judges for the musical events are now in process of selection, and will be announced later.

At the latest Eisteddfod, held last year in Pittsburgh, Pa., where there were over 40,000 paid admissions, the first prize for the chief choral event was awarded to the Choral Union of Scranton, Pa., the second went to Chicago, and the third to Cleveland, Ohio. These three organizations, among which the keenest rivalry exists, have signified their intention of competing again at San Francisco during Eisteddfod week, beginning July 27, 1915. Other organizations of choristers have been promised by their conductors representing Victoria (B. C.); Denver; Des Moines, Ia.; Chicago; Boston; Philadelphia; Johnstown, Pa.; Granite City, Ill.; Canton, Ohio; St. Louis, Mo.; Butte, Mon.; Seattle, Tacoma and Spokane, Wash.; Portland, Ore.; Vancouver, B. C. (two); Saskatoon, Can.; Los Angeles, Oakland, Berkeley, Sacramento and San Diego, Cal., and the Mormon Tabernacle Choir, Salt Lake City, Utah. The last named is conducted by Evan Stephens, who, like many of the others, is an enthusiastic Welsh musician.

The list of honorary members of the 1915 International Eisteddfod Association now numbers over 300 names of eminent musicians, university professors, jurists and patrons of the art generally. These represent about 100 different cities. The Eisteddfod gatherings are not intended to be money making events, all receipts being turned back into the prize fund, even the organizers working without pay. At the exposition it is planned to hold the greatest choral prize events during the day for eight days, the literary and band contests being given during the evenings.

Among the well known musicians and conductors who have expressed their determination of bringing large organizations to San Francisco in July, 1915, are: O. Gordon Ericson, conductor Sunday Evening Club Choir, Chicago; Dr. John T. Watkins, director Choral Union, Scranton, Pa.; J. D. Owens, Canton, Ohio; Sam. H. Trelor, Butte, Mon., who will bring a chorus of 150 voices and the Anaconda Band; W. D. Donley, conductor People's Choral Society, Seattle, who will bring three organizations; W. D. Kent, president Arion Club, Victoria, B. C.; Claude Madden, leader Amphion Male Chorus, Vancouver, B. C.; George Taggart, director Scottish Philharmonic Society, Vancouver, B. C., who will bring 150 singers to compete in three events. Similar arrangements have been made by Walter Bordwell, president Ellis Club, Los Angeles, Cal.; Charles Galloway, director Apollo Club, St. Louis; E. D. Crandall, director combined associations of Oakland, Berkeley, Alameda, Cal.; Prof. Iowerth W. Pressor, Johnstown, Pa,; Jos. A. Jenkins, Pittsburgh, Pa.; F. W. Wodel, conductor People's Choral Union, Boston; H. W. Owens, conductor Haydn Choral Society, Chicago; Prof. Robert J. Jones, Des Moines, Ia.; E. S. Griffith, Cleveland, Ohio, and many others equally distinguished. Most of these organizations will compete in three or four events for the prizes of $10,000, $3,000 and $1,000.

The Panama-Pacific International Exposition has broken all records in comprehensiveness of plan, beauty of location and of its structures and in the rapidity of construction, the entire exposition being now, six months from the opening day, over ninety per cent. completed. It is authoritatively announced by the president and the directors that, regardless of the turmoil in Europe, this great $50,000,000 event will begin promptly on February 20, and it will be ready in every department, with some 60,000 exhibits in place, and with more special events and international congresses and conventions than were ever scheduled to meet in connection with any exposition.

Of the two hundred and seventy-five congresses which already have voted to meet at the exposition most are along the lines of the great Welsh Eisteddfod—that is, they have human service and the promotion of the welfare of the race generally as their basic motive. Many of these congresses are international in character, each being made up of scores and in some cases of hundreds of subsidiary organizations. They are expected to bring to San Francisco a million delegates and their families—mostly thinking people with ideas to exchange. Among these conventions will be that of the American Federation of Musicians, over two dozen educational congresses, and many sociological, artistic, scientific and economical conventions.

For housing these great gatherings the exposition has erected two beautiful buildings—Festival Hall and the Memorial Auditorium, the last named built at a cost of $1,300,000, the lot on which it stands costing an additional $701,000. It is a permanent structure of steel and concrete, located in the civic center of San Francisco, and at the close of the exposition it will be presented to the city. It contains eleven main halls, the largest with a seating capacity of 10,000 persons, beside nineteen rooms suitable for smaller conventions and committee meetings. The Eisteddfod concerts will be given in this great auditorium.

Festival Hall, on the exposition grounds, a beautiful building modeled on the lines of the Palais des Beaux Arts in Paris, with a seating capacity of 3,000, will be devoted wholly to music. Large conventions of musicians will be held here, and daily recitals and concerts will be given. Edwin H. Lemare is under contract to preside at the huge instrument—one of the largest organs ever built—and he will give a series of 100 organ recitals. San Francisco for years has been noted as a music center second in importance only to New York, and there is every reason to believe that the avowed general purpose of this wonderful exposition—to be a universal university—will be carried out in every realm of vocal and instrumental harmony.

The Eisteddfod (pronounced ais-teth-vode) is the oldest national festival in the world, dating back to 1000 B. C. It was mentioned by Cæsar in his Commentaries. Its motto, "Gwiryn erbyn y byd," means "Truth Against the World," and it stands for individual liberty and progress in the arts.

CHICAGO ORCHESTRA FORTUNATE.

The Chicago Symphony Orchestra is fortunate in having only two of its members in the war territory. Bruno Steindel, the principal cellist, and Leopold de Mare, first horn, are the absentees among Mr. Stock's players. The seats for the Friday afternoon concerts are all sold and the total subscription for the Saturday evening performances is larger than it was at this time last year. The popular concerts will be resumed and probably increased in number. The first will be given early in November. Glenn Dillard Gunn will conduct two American concerts again this season. Therefore it looks as though the war will not make much difference with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra.

SYMPHONIC DETROIT.

Detroit's Orchestral Association will give a series of six concerts in the Light Guard Armory, by visiting orchestras. The Boston, Chicago, New York, Philadelphia, Cincinnati and New York Philharmonic orchestras will be heard. The new Detroit Symphony Orchestra, Weston Gales, conductor, is to hold a series of afternoon concerts for its first season, the concerts to be given in the Detroit Opera House the third Thursday of each month.

A CLEVELAND CHANGE.

Archie Bell, for four years past theatrical and music critic for the Cleveland (Ohio) Plain Dealer, and for ten years prior to that time connected with other Cleveland newspapers in similar capacities, now has connected himself with the Cleveland Leader, and will begin his work on that paper at once.

IF.

If Richard Strauss goes to war we have an idea that upon his return he will wish to undertake a thorough revision of his "Heldenleben."

TENOR AND MANAGER.

Constantino, the tenor, and Oscar Hammerstein, the impresario, are having a pretty game of tag and hide-and-seek over various sections of the country. According to report, the Hammerstein has some sort of bill against the Constantino and is trying to collect it, much to the distaste of the latter. Quite recently the Elks had a musical festival at Asbury Park, N. J., and Constantino was to be one of the singers. Whether or not his playmate Hammerstein heard of Constantino's engagement and prospective profit, and turned up at Asbury Park with a brass-buttoned gentleman or two to help the artist collect his fee—whether such was the case remains an open question; but suffice it to say that when the time was almost at hand for Constantino to begin to warble, that gentleman was discovered to be absent and no trace of him could be obtained. The audience wondered a bit, but everything was forgotten and forgiven when George Dostal was secured quickly as a substitute and delighted the audience with his vocal ministrations, delivered musically and with abundant taste and temperament. At last accounts several other persons who hold contracts for Constantino appearances were making a note of the Dostal address in case Oscar Hammerstein resolves to become playful again with his tenor friend.

MUSICAL ARRIVALS FROM EUROPE.

Edgar Stillman Kelley, the American composer; Tina Lerner, the Russian pianist; Mariska Aldrich and Oscar George Theodore Sonneck, chief of the division of music of the Library of Congress, were passengers on the steamship Ryndam, arriving in New York, Tuesday, September 1, from Rotterdam. Among those arriving here on Monday morning, September 7, from the same port aboard the steamship Rotterdam were Ernestine Schumann-Heink, the contralto; Eleanor Spencer, the pianist; Johanna Gadski, the soprano; Alexander Bloch, the violinist; Lura M. Abell, assistant to her brother, Arthur M. Abell, Berlin representative of the MUSICAL COURIER; Max Zach, conductor of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, and Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler, the pianist.

A PLEASANT MEMORY.

One of the most pleasant memories of last year's musical season is that of Fritz Kreisler leading the applause at Carnegie Hall, New York, at the close of a violin recital by Eugen Ysaye. The veteran Belgian artist had a no more sincere admirer than his younger Austrian rival. Today these musical friends might be fighting each other as political enemies on the battlefields of Europe, happily through no fault of their own. What would happen if the two artists met face to face with rifle and bayonet instead of with a Stradivarius and a Guarnerius?

SCHUMANN-HEINK'S EXCITING STORY.

Mme. Schumann-Heink, safely returned from Europe, tells an interesting story of how German army officials came onto the stage at Bayreuth (where she was singing at the festival) during a performance of "Parsifal," and notified those principals, orchestral players and choristers, who were eligible for war service, that they had to start for the front immediately. On the same steamer with Mme. Schumann-Heink was Johanna Gadski, and both singers appeared at a concert on board for the benefit of the Red Cross.

HERE IS A CHANCE.

With the changing of the name St. Petersburg to Petrograd, the resignation of King George from his German commands and Kaiser Wilhelm's tearing off of his English orders and decorations, it appears that even away from the battlefield feeling is running high between the fighting nations. We wonder, therefore, that neither Germany nor England has changed the tune of its national anthem. The two songs are identical. This would be the time for some of the contemporary composers of those countries to do the popular and patriotic thing. Somehow the thought suggests itself that Reger or Humperdinck could write the best martial strain for Germany, and Elgar or Mackenzie for England. Long ago, Haydn did the job for Austria, Lzoff for Russia and de Lisle for France, and all three did it well. By the way, Sir Henry Wood, the London conductor, is engaged in arranging for full orchestra the national anthems of Russia and Belgium.

ARTHUR ALEXANDER'S ART.

Arthur Alexander's early arrival and long season in America is one of the fortunate results of the European war. "No singer of today possesses finer concert qualifications than Alexander," says one competent critic, "nor has, certainly, any singer a greater talent. This inspiring young tenor holds his audiences not alone by the beauty of his singing, but by sheer weight of his musical personality. His performance has been termed extraordinary, and extraordinary it is. In the whole history of vocal music there have been few musicians who have possessed Alexander's wonderful mastery of the dual arts of singing and accompanying. It is this wonderful mastery of both arts, combined with a no less wonderful instinct for interpretation, that renders so compelling and so inspiring every manifestation of his art. It is this that carries with it the immense educational value that this art holds for all who are fortunate enough to come under its influence."

BOSTON SYMPHONY PLANS.

The following statement has been made by Major Henry Lee Higginson in regard to the Boston Symphony plans: "Owing to the war, it is impossible to learn the situation and wishes of Dr. Muck and the members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. This doubt will hardly pass for some weeks; therefore the management cannot announce the concerts in Boston and other cities probably until the 1st of October. Meanwhile, I thank the audiences of all the cities which have listened to and supported the orchestra so courteously in the past thirty-three years."

WORDS OF WISDOM.

It is pointed out very kindly by the New York Sun "that the possession of an orchestra which should give concerts of high class music is an evidence of the culture of a community and an agency for good is never denied." For whose benefit then is the mention, oh shining Sun?

MARK HAMBOURG MAY COME HERE.

Mark Hambourg has lost all his European engagements for this season and a rumor which reaches the MUSICAL COURIER at the moment of going to press is to the effect that the gifted pianist may come to the United States very shortly for a tour in this country.

DEATH OF VAN GHELUWE.

Leo van Gheluwe, the aged Belgian composer, died in Ghent a few days ago, "in consequence of the excitement brought on by the present disturbed conditions in his native country," as a report says.

MAX SMITH IN MUNICH.

Max Smith, music critic of the New York Press, is in Munich and writes to his paper that he and several thousand other Americans are unable to leave that city.

ARE SAID TO BE FIGHTING.

Franz Lehar, Leo Fall, Oscar Strauss and Jean Gilbert are all said to be fighting, and the world of comic opera holds its breath in consequence.

The PROGRESS of AMERICAN MUSIC

[This department is designed by the MUSICAL COURIER to be as complete a record as possible of the public performance all over the world of the works of composers born in the United States. The department will be published weekly and contributions are solicited from any source whatsoever to help make the record all-encompassing. The clippings and programs sent must report concerts which have actually taken place and must be of recent date. However, advance notices and advance programs will not be considered. The data submitted must also include the place and date of performance and the names of the performers, and, before all things, it should be remembered that composers not born in the United States are ineligible for the MUSICAL COURIER list. All communications referring to this department must be addressed:—"American Composition Editor," MUSICAL COURIER, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.]

Bauer, Marion—"Light" (song), sung by Mrs. A. Marcfield, Wanamaker Auditorium, New York, February 7, 1914.

Beach, Mrs H. H. A.—"Ah, Love but a Day," "June" (songs), sung by Elizabeth Newton MacCallin, the Sioux City Woman's Club, Sioux City, Ia., March 18, 1914.
—"Sonata in A Minor," op. 34 (piano and violin), played by Opal Bullard and Frederick Heizer, Sioux City Woman's Club, Sioux City, Ia., March 18, 1914.
—"The Year's at the Spring" (song), sung by Jean Vincent Cooper, Wanamaker Auditorium, New York, February 7, 1914.

Bliss, Paul—"Rosary of Spring" (song), sung by Marie Louise Wagner, Wanamaker Auditorium, New York, February 7, 1914;—sung by Mary Green Peyton, Cincinnati, Ohio, February 7, 1914.
—"Was There a Moon in the Sky?" "Perfect Nights and Days" (songs), sung by Mary Green Peyton, Cincinnati, Ohio, February 7, 1914.

Brown, Mary Helen—"Rose Dreamed She Was a Lily" (song), sung by Lalla B. Cannon, Wanamaker Auditorium, New York, February 7, 1914.

Bullard, Frederick Field—"Vagabondia" (choral), sung by the Apollo Club, Portland, Ore., February 17, 1914.

Cadman, Charles Wakefield—"Thistledown" (song), sung by Yvonne de Treville, Hawaiian Opera House, Honolulu, February 5, 1914.
—"From the Land of the Sky Blue Water" (organ adaptation by Clarence Eddy), played by Arthur Davis, Christ Church Cathedral, St. Louis, February 16, 1914; —"From the Land of the Sky Blue Water" (song), sung by Jean Vincent Cooper, Wanamaker Auditorium, New York, February 7, 1914.

Campbell-Tipton—"A Spirit Flower" (song), sung by Mary Green Peyton, Glendale College Club, Hotel Gibson, Cincinnati, Ohio, February 7, 1914.

Carpenter, John Alden—"Don't Ceare" (song), sung by Christine Miller, Apollo Club of St. Louis, Odeon, St. Louis, Mo., February 3, 1914;—sung by Christine Miller, Bethany College of Music and Fine Arts, Lindsborg, Kan., January 31, 1914;—sung by Christine Miller, Waterloo, Ia., February 6, 1914;—sung by Christine Miller, Topeka, Kan., January 29, 1914.

Clough-Leighter, H.—"Who Knows?" (song), sung by Lalla B. Cannon, Wanamaker Auditorium, New York, February 7, 1914.

Federlein, Gottfried H.—"Legend" (organ), played by J. A. Meale, Central Hall, Princess street, London, S. W., January 28, 1914.
—"Scherzo," "Pastorale" (organ), played by Arthur Davis, Christ Church Cathedral, St. Louis, Mo., February 16, 1914;—played by Roland Diggle, the Cathedral of St. John, Quincy, Ill., February 8, 1914.
—"Legende," "Scherzo" (organ), played by T. Tertius Noble, St. Thomas' Church, New York, February 22, 1914.
—"Scherzo" (organ), played by Sumner Salter, Grace Hall, Williams College, Williamstown, Mass., January 14, 1914.

Foote, Arthur—"Oriental Sketch" (organ), played by Sumner Salter, Grace Hall, Williams College, Williamstown, Mass., January 14, 1914.

Gilberté, Hallet—"Minuet la Phyllis" (song), sung by Edna Wolverton, Warford School of Music, Morristown, N. J., November 14, 1914;—sung by Vernon Archibald, Carnegie Hall studio, New York, January 22, 1914;—sung by Charlotte Lund, the Assembly Salon, Plaza Hotel, New York, February 19, 1914.
—"Ah, Love but a Day" (song), sung by Edna Wolverton, Warford School of Music, Morristown, N. J., November 14, 1914;—sung by Ellison van Hoose, the Assembly Salon, Plaza Hotel, New York, January 8, 1914;—sung by Ellison van Hoose, Waldorf-Astoria, New York, February 23, 1914;—sung by Charlotte Lund, studio recital, New York, January 22, 1914;—
—"Idyls of the South Sea" (song), sung by Christine Miller, Bethany College of Music and Fine Arts, Lindsborg, Kan., January 31, 1914;—sung by Christine Miller, Topeka, Kan., January 29, 1914.
—"Indian Mountain Song" (chorus), sung by ladies' chorus, Tuesday Musical Club, Woman's Club Auditorium, Riverside, Cal., February 10, 1914.
—"The Thunderbirds Come From the Cedars," from "Wigwam and Tepee" (song), sung by Mrs. H. Talbot Peterson, Tuesday Musical Club, Pittsburgh, Pa., February 17, 1914.
—"The Rain Drop" (song), sung by Carl H. Ruprecht, First Presbyterian Church, Springfield, N. J., November 25, 1913;—sung by Lina M. Hauth, the Fabri studios, New York, January 21, 1914.
—"A Rose and a Dream" (song), sung by Ellison van Hoose, Trenton Monday Musical Club, Association Hall, Trenton, N. J., December 11, 1913;—sung by Ellison van Hoose, the Assembly Salon, Plaza Hotel, New York, January 8, 1914;—sung by Ellison van Hoose, First Presbyterian Church, Bloomfield, N. J., January 19, 1914;—sung by Lina M. Hauth, the Fabri studios, New York, January 21, 1914;—sung by Emma Howe Fabri, Estey Hall, Philadelphia, February 26, 1914.
—"Youth," "Land of Nod," "There, Little Girl, Don't Cry," "Tell Tale," "Scandal," "A Plea," "The Absent Minded Beggar" (songs), sung by the composer in Philadelphia, February 25, 1914.

Gilmour, Howard C.—"A Slumber Song" (song), sung by Lalla B. Cannon, Wanamaker Auditorium, New York, February 7, 1914.
—"Hame to the Hielands" (song), sung by Norma Weber, Wanamaker Auditorium, New York, February 7, 1914.

Goldblatt, Maurice—"Dance of the Sylphs" (violin), played by Alvin Steindel, Chicago, December 2, 1913;—played by Robert L. Barrow, Salt Lake City, Utah, January 11, 1914;—played by Robert L. Barrow, Hinckley, Minn., January 15, 1914.
—"Reverie Poetique" (violin), played by Isidore Berger, St. Mary's School, Knoxville, Ill., January 10, 1914.
—"Mediation," "Dance of the Sylphs" (violin), played by the composer, Glencoe Union Church, Glencoe, Ill., January 18, 1914.

Grant-Schaefer, G. A.—"The Eagle" (song), sung by Christine Miller, Apollo Club, Odeon, St. Louis, Mo., February 3, 1914;—sung by Christine Miller, Topeka, Kan., January 29, 1914.
—"The Sea" (song), sung by Christine Miller, Bethany College of Music and Fine Arts, Lindsborg, Kan., January 31, 1914;—sung by Christine Miller, Waterloo, Iowa, February 6, 1914.

Hadley, Henry K.—"Butterflies" (song), sung by Yvonne de Treville, The Auditorium, Los Angeles, Cal., February 19, 1914.

Homer, Sidney—"Banjo Song" (song), sung by Paul Frederic Eichhorn, Wanamaker Auditorium, New York, February 7, 1914.

Kroeger, Ernest R.—"In Slumberland" (song), sung by Christine Miller, Bethany College of Music and Fine Arts, Lindsborg, Kan., January 31, 1914.

La Forge, Frank—"Expectancy" (song), sung by Jean Vincent Cooper, Wanamaker Auditorium, New York, February 7, 1914.

MacDowell, Edward A.—"To a Water Lily" (organ) played by Sumner Salter, Grace Hall, Williams College, Williamstown, Mass., January 14, 1914.
"The Blue Bell" (song), sung by Jean Vincent Cooper, Wanamaker Auditorium, New York, February 7, 1914;—sung by Yvonne de Treville, Hawaiian Opera House, Honolulu, February 5, 1914.
—"Etude," op. 46, No. 2 (piano), played by Winona Hill, Tuesday Musical Club, Pittsburgh, Pa., February 17, 1914.

McMillan, Malcolm Dana—"A Valentine" (song), sung by Christine Miller, Bethany College of Music and Fine Arts, Lindsborg, Kan., January 31, 1914;—sung by Christine Miller, Topeka, Kan., January 29, 1914.
—"The Heart of Farazda" (song cycle), sung by Christine Miller, Waterloo, Iowa, February 6, 1914.

Moore, Mary Carr—"My Garden" (song), sung by Yvonne de Treville, Hawaiian Opera House, Honolulu, January 31, 1914.

Nevin, Ethelbert—"The Nightingale's Song," sung by Christine Miller, Bethany College of Music and Fine Arts, Lindsborg, Kan., January 31, 1914.

Parker, Horatio—"Love Is a Sickness Full of Woes" (song), sung by Mrs. Charles E. Mayhew, Tuesday Musical Club, Pittsburgh, Pa., February 17, 1914.

Russell, Alexander—"A Gypsy Song" (song), sung by Norma Weber, Wanamaker Auditorium, New York, February 7, 1914.

Salter, Mary Turner—"Come Into the Garden" (song), sung by Mrs. A. Marcfield, Wanamaker Auditorium, New York, February 7, 1914.

Scott, John Prindle—"I Know in Whom I Have Believed" (song), sung by Henry J. Schlegel, Rochester, N. Y., February 8, 1914;—sung by J. A. McMahon, Cleveland, Ohio, February 15, 1914;—sung by William Simmons, Manuscript Society Concert, National Art Club, New York, February 27, 1914.
—"John o' Dreams" (song), sung by William Simmons, Manuscript Society Concert, National Arts Club, New York, February 27, 1914.
—"Death Triumphant" (song), sung by L. R. Boals. New York, March 28, 1914.

Frank Gittelson to Return.

All uncertainty regarding the homecoming of Frank Gittelson, the young American violinist, has been settled by a cablegram, received by his father, Dr. Samuel Gittelson, of Philadelphia, and it is now known that the young artist will sail from Rotterdam aboard the steamship New Amsterdam, September 12. Over a week ago Dr. Gittelson was notified by the steamship company that upon receipt of funds for the passage, Gittelson would be assigned to a stateroom on the first available boat, and now, arrangements are complete.

Gittelson will make his American premier as soloist with the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra in Philadelphia on October 30.

Helen Ware Is the Author.

The article appearing in last week's issue of the MUSICAL COURIER entitled "The Renaissance of Improvising" was written by Helen Ware, the violinist and accomplished interpreter of Hungarian music. Through an inadvertence, Harriet, instead of Helen Ware, appeared as the name of the author of this interesting article.

Carl M. Roeder in the White Mountains.

Carl M. Roeder has been spending the summer in the White Mountains at North Conway, N. H. He will return to New York about September 15, ready to resume his teaching. His customary large class will keep him busily employed after September 21, when his season opens.

Kirschbaum in Army.

Walter Kirschbaum, pianist and pedagogue at the Toronto Canadian Musical Academy, is in the Austrian army, and consequently cannot return to Toronto in time to take his regular position when the academy opens. His substitute has not yet been determined upon.

Missing No Chances.

"Our Congressman offers to send some garden seed."
"Tell him we have no garden. We can use some canary seed, though."—Kansas City Journal.

The premiere of Dr. Otto Neitzel's new opera "The Judge of Kaschau," which was to have taken place this month at the Crefeld Opera, has been indefinitely postponed.

A Bauer Letter.

Some passages of a letter recently received from Harold Bauer, and written at Melbourne under date of July 30, are as follows: "The ubiquitous MUSICAL COURIER is the chief cause of this communication to you. I have just seen a recent number of the paper containing a report of my visit to Honolulu and quoting a statement of mine to the effect that there were many interesting reminiscences of Stevenson in that part of the world. It so happens that an old friend of mine has acquired the estate where Stevenson used to live, and the accompanying photograph is taken in the garden of his house, 'Sans Souci,' the occasion being a farewell dinner given to Mrs. Bauer and myself in true Hawaiian style. Note the roast pig in the center of the picture (the Hawaiian, when he celebrates, asks his friend to 'eat pig' with him), the cocoanuts used as drinking vessels, the 'lei,' or festive wreaths, and . . . the total absence of knives and forks!

"The photo is of particular interest, I think, if only for the fact that there is only one artist in it! The others are mostly sugar planters.

"I am in the midst of a strenuous Australian season and am just completing a series of thirteen recitals in Melbourne, having given a similar series in Sydney. It is quite an original experience to give so many recitals in the same city within a few weeks and you can imagine that the preparation of so many programs is no light task. I am sending you the complete set, interesting, I think, for the reason that they are so varied and represent practically the entire classical repertory of the piano.

"My season lasts until September; we then leave for America for a short season until January, after which we return to Europe.

With kind regards, I remain,

"Yours very truly, HAROLD BAUER."

Bauer's Programs.

The first of the Bauer programs included Schumann's C major fantasie, Chopin's B minor sonata, and shorter compositions by Mendelssohn, Beethoven (minuet), Daquin, Gluck-Brahms, Alkan, Schubert (impromptu), Saint-Saens; the second concert presented Bach's "Italian" concerto, Beethoven's "Les Adieux" sonata, Schumann's "Etudes Symphoniques," Chopin's F major ballade and C sharp minor scherzo, Liszt's D flat etude, and an arrangement of Wagner's "Ride of the Valkyries"; the third program was made up of Beethoven's "Appassionata" sonata, Schumann's "Carneval," Chopin's G minor ballade, E major nocturne and A flat polonaise, Mendelssohn's "Rondo Capriccioso," and Liszt's "Waldesrauschen" and thirteenth Hungarian rhapsody; the fourth program embraced Mozart's C minor fantasia, Schumann's "Papillons," Beethoven's op. 3 sonata, Debussy's "Children's Corner," Brahms' D minor ballade and B minor capriccio, Schubert's G flat impromptu, and Liszt's "St. Francis Legend"; the fifth concert had Brahms' waltzes, Beethoven's "Moonlight" sonata, Schumann's "Fantasiestücke," Chopin's berceuse and B flat minor scherzo, Gluck-Saint-Saëns "Alceste air de ballet," and Liszt's "Mephisto" waltz; a Chopin program consisted of the etude in C minor, prelude, A flat, fantasia, B minor sonata, F sharp impromptu, tarantelle, F sharp minor polonaise, barcarolle, C minor nocturne, and B minor scherzo; Bach headed the seventh program with his "English" suite in G minor, and then followed Beethoven's F sharp sonata, Franck's prelude, choral and fugue, Chopin's C sharp minor nocturne, E flat minor polonaise and A flat ballade, Schubert's "Ländler," and Brahms' Hungarian dances; the eighth recital brought forward Bach's "Chromatic" fantasia and fugue, Mozart's F major sonata, Chopin's B flat minor sonata, Schumann's Faschingsschwank, Alkan's "The Wind," Gluck-Sgambati's "Melody," and Wagner's "Ride of the Valkyries"; Beethoven's A flat sonata, Schumann's "Kinderscenen" and toccata formed the big numbers of the ninth program, while the shorter ones were a Chopin prelude, two etudes, mazurka and polonaise, Rachmaninoff's C sharp minor prelude, Weber's "Rondo brillant" and Liszt's "Au bord d'un Source" and a Hungarian rhapsody; a tenth recital opened with Schumann's "Kreisleriana," and then came Liszt's B minor sonata and shorter pieces by Beethoven (minuet), Bach, Levy ("Tango"), Ravel, Chopin (tarantelle, waltz and A flat polonaise), Schubert-Liszt ("Erlking"), Schubert (A flat impromptu) and Saint-Saëns; the eleventh program had a worthy beginning with Beethoven's "Waldstein" sonata and three short numbers by Schumann, and the balance of the concert was constituted by Chopin, Debussy, Grieg, Rubinstein and Wagner-Brassin; Bach led off the twelfth recital with his D major toccata, while Schumann was represented by his G minor sonata, Brahms by his G minor rhapsody, Chopin by a nocturne, ballade and polonaise, Mendelssohn by an etude in B flat minor and the "Spinning Song," Cesar Franck-Bauer by the prelude, fugue and variations, Scarlatti by his A major sonata, Liszt by his minor study, and Gluck-Saint-Saëns by the "Air de Ballet" from "Alceste." For a final program, the thirteenth, Bauer played Beethoven's D major sonata, Brahms' variations on a Paganini theme, Schumann's "Papillons," Chopin's B flat minor scherzo, Schubert's andante from the B flat sonata, Albeniz's "El Puerto," Grieg's "Cradle Song" and "Butterflies," and Liszt's "St. Francis Legend."

HAROLD BAUER (EXTREME RIGHT) IN HONOLULU.

Tempo Presto.

Prof. Edgar Stillman Kelley tells this department that he had troublous times in getting from Rotterdam to London. "In fact," says Prof. E. S. K.," the place almost proved to be my 'Rotterdämmerung.'"

Human Degeneration.

In the latest Review of Reviews there is an article on "The Vocal Music of Monkeys," and four scientists, Mahoudeau, Margraff, Veth and Waterhouse, are quoted in it as having observed that certain members of the Howlers (Stentors) and Gibbons tribes make rhythmic sounds in scale successions while the rest of the species sit by and listen in silent admiration to the very last note of the queer concert. We are glad to hear, at any rate, that the auditors do not get up before the finale and spoil it by putting on their wraps and slamming seats and exit doors. When man descended from the monkey he well might have brought with him simian concert manners.

The Children's Hour.

"Why Children Lie" is the title of an article in the Pictorial Review. One reason is that parents trust to the honor of the youngsters when they ask them how long they have been practising.

Auld Lang Syne.

Moritz Moskowski has just written another concert valse. O tempora, O Moritz.

Trying to Disown It?

"At the convention of dancing teachers held in New York last week, the light footed professors almost came to blows over the question as to who invented the American tango."—Exchange.

The Hesitation of Rossini.

Apropos of the foregoing, Henry T. Finck tells the world that in a Rossini manuscript discovered recently there is a composition called "Halting Waltz."

Futility.

From London Truth comes the attached lament which struck us as as being particularly eloquent and heartfelt: "War—bloody, bestial war! Olympic festivals, harbingers of peace! A. D. 1916: Olympic festival at Berlin. The youth of Europe to meet in athletic festival. The young men of the nations of the world to forgather and struggle for the laurel wreaths of peaceful victory. Barely a twelvemonth ago there was an appeal for funds for this meeting that these islands might not be ill represented. And now the war cloud hangs over all. A. D. 1916. A Christian calendar! Two thousand years of men fighting like devils for conciliation and hating one another for the love of God. Do you recall how even those who had no dear ones in South Africa had war brought home to them when Freddie Tait, golfer and officer, fell in the trenches at Magersfontein? How many of those that raced at Sweden or were preparing for Berlin will be there? The iron hand of conscription lays them by the heels and bids them fight? What for? They do not know. They do not care. They are the pawns of people who think they control this planet. Not for them in the full strength of youthful manhood to row and run, to jump or swim. Let them face the bullet like men, and writhe in death on the battlefield that the historian of the future may chronicle the effects of war and the Christian religion on the development of national prowess. Let us not forget Lord Lansdowne. Old age pensions were enervating. A great war invigorating. Man does not send racchorses to be cavalry chargers or his prize breeding cattle to be fodder. But he sends the best of his athletic manhood to shoot each other and keeps the weakling at home. Olympic festivals and all their talk of peace. How fatuous. And yet I have read that England was cheered by the Berlin crowd outside the British Embassy. Perhaps I am wrong, but I will warrant the crowd was not an old crowd. Not merely has the young Berliner met the British youth in divers sports. He has got to know him in that way. Not in vain did British and German oarsmen work to common purpose at Stockholm. Go to Hamburg and Berlin, and you shall see that the young folk know that from here have come the sports that make them happy. Less than a month ago Froitzheim, the German lawn tennis player, was cheered to the echo at Wimbledon. Barely a twelvemonth ago a nephew of the Kaiser was competing in the lawn tennis championship there. Olympic festivals, cardinals and bishops are very civilizing influences. The medical man struggles to preserve the most decrepit of humanity. The Olympic enthusiast preaches physical culture and humanity. But the highest form of art and science is reserved to kill the fittest, and the perfervid religionist thanks the Deity for successful gun running."

Song of the Bullets.

DEAR VARIATIONS—I hear from Ernest Voigt, manager of G. Schirmer, Ltd., London, that the big German publishing houses like Peters, Schott, Simrock and Bote & Boek, who have tons of lead music plates in their vaults, are fearful that these will be confiscated by the government to be melted into bullets.

The thought inevitably suggests itself that even the youngest drummer boy would not mind being winged with a roulade or two out of, say, "The Barber of Seville," though the stoutest heart must quail before a chunk of "Elektra," however small the calibre.

Faithfully yours,
H. O. OSGOOD.

London, August 21.

Feminine Intuition.

Readers of novels may remember a book by Gertrude Atherton called "Rulers of Kings." It was written about ten years ago. In it the author predicted not only the Russo-Japanese and Balkan wars, but also the present European conflict with the alignment of the fighting countries exactly as they are arrayed. LEONARD LIEBLING.

Ye Music Editor.

The reason for his happy smile
Is that the phone rings all the while—
And breaking up his perfect ease
Come earnest questions such as these:
"How old is Nellie Melba now?"
"Did Eames and Patti ever row?"
"Who wrote 'The Battered Bride,' I pray?"
"How much must a contralto weigh?"
"In what key is the A flat march?"
"Should singers eat more fat than starch?"
"Do concerts pay in Arostook?"
"What was the middle name of Gluck?"
"I beg, when did Debussy die?"
"Should pianists say 'tech*nique*,' and why?"
"What was the first tune ever heard?"
"How can I tell a major third?"
"Don't you admire Richard Strauss?"
"They tell me Chopin was a souse."
"Are tunics worn at concerts much?"
"What pianist has the sweetest touch?"
"Does Bori own a private yacht?"
"Amato's coming, is he not?"
"The cello's like the human voice."
"Of operas, what's your private choice?"
"Caruso must have millions now."
"I don't like Paderewski's bow."
"Godowsky's in an awful fix."
"Who sang 'Il Re' in '96?"
"How can I get to concerts free?"
"I guess you don't remember me."
"The moths are in the piano case."
"Is Bonci tenor or a bass?"
"How do you spell Rachmaninoff?"
"Is hot milk good for quinsy cough?"
"How much do fiddles bring today?"
"Does Zimbalist wear a toupée?"
"Gabrilowitsch for me, you bet."
"Is Mozart writing music yet?"
"What's in the cup that Tristan drains?"
"What gives Amfortas those queer pains?"
"Please make my sub. three dollars net,
"Because Pa plays the clarinet."

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Volpe Return from Europe.

Arnold Volpe, Mrs. Volpe and their two children are back in New York, after an interesting visit in Europe.

It was soon after their arrival here that they called at the office of the MUSICAL COURIER and told an exciting story of their stay abroad just prior to the outbreak of the war and up to their safe arrival in America.

"It was early in the summer that I left New York to join my family in Paris," said Mr. Volpe. "I then went to Professor Bouhy's villa in Belgium, at Pepinster, which is between Liege and Verviers, where I left the children.

"We then went to Berlin and had a delightful visit with Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Abell, Josef Lhevinne, Coenraad Bos, and other musical people. From there we went to Dresden and visited Professor Auer, my teacher.

"Then we went to Carlsbad, Austria, and we were there but one day when war was declared. We saw the first mobilization of troops. Our first impulse was to rush to Belgium, as we were told that Belgium was the safest place to be.

"We went to Marienbad, where we had tea with Josef Stransky. Mrs. Volpe suggested he rush back to America, but he did not seem the least bit worried. We left Marienbad on the last train before the cars were seized for the transporting of soldiers. We haven't seen or heard a word from Mr. Stransky since.

"From there we went to Wiesbaden, where we visited the family of Ossip Gabrilowitsch, the Russian pianist. We left at 3.30 and everything was peaceful; at 8 o'clock things were in a pitiable condition. We had to implore the conductor of our train to stop at Herbesthal, for at first he would not. Had we not stopped there we could never have reached our children until after the war. We were both so nervous and excited that at Pepinster I was robbed. The train was overcrowded and we had to sit on our baggage in the aisles.

"We reached there at 10.30 while the Belgians were marching toward Liege. We packed our trunks and went to Ostend.

"The sights we witnessed while trying to get on board our steamer at London were too horrible ever to tell in words. Everybody, it seemed, rushed to London. There must have been about 10,000 persons trying to get on our boat. Wives and husbands were separated, baggage lost, and there were many calamities all happening at once.

"We were very fortunate in securing passage in the steerage. However, later I obtained a place in the second class cabin for Mrs. Volpe and the children. I slept out on deck all week. The conditions on the boat were horrible.

"Luck, indeed, seemed to favor us both from the outset. That we arrived in New York with all our baggage seems almost miraculous, when nearly every one seems to have lost baggage in various parts of Europe.

"Mrs. Volpe had expected to remain abroad for three years continuing her study of music. The war, however, put an end to all of her plans."

Like all those who seek shelter on this side of the Atlantic, both Mr. and Mrs. Volpe are glad to be back and expressed deep sorrow that there should exist such a deplorable conditions of affairs in Europe.

C. Mortimer Wiske Back.

After a vacation of several months at his camp in Maine, C. Mortimer Wiske has returned to Paterson, N. J., to begin preparations for the coming Paterson and Newark music festivals.

Mr. Wiske will open an office in Newark this week, from where he will manage the Newark rehearsals.

As announced in the MUSICAL COURIER last spring this is to be the first music festival of its kind that Newark has ever had. Preparations are being made with marked rapidity, and in a few days, it is expected, the organization of the great chorus of one thousand voices will be under way.

In the next issue of the MUSICAL COURIER the weekly Newark letter will be resumed, when it is expected some interesting facts regarding the festivals will be ready for publication.

King Clark Plans.

M. H. Hanson has received quite a number of letters from all parts of the country inquiring whether Mr. King Clark will teach in America this year, and he wishes to state that it is impossible for him to answer these numerous letters individually, for he is not in a position to give a definite reply, as he does not know Mr. Clark's plans. That singer now is on his way to this country.

PUBLICATIONS AND REVIEWS

NOTICE TO PUBLISHERS.

This department is devoted to a review of old and new music publications, musical works, musical literary works and anything pertaining to the publishing of matters in music.

Only such publications and compositions will be reviewed as are deemed worthy of notice, and the Musical Courier reserves to itself the privilege of rejection. It is also understood that any work or composition or book reviewed in this column relinquishes its copyright to any part or all of its parts so far as a review of the same can be applied. This does not mean that the Musical Courier assumes or claims any interest in the copyrights; it merely means that we are not to be held for any infringement of copyright by handling copyright publications or works in this department.

Particular attention given to works of American composers and their products.

John Church Company.

"Quatrième Gavotte" (Fourth Gavotte). For piano solo. By Cécile Chaminade.

This moderately difficult and brilliant gavotte is a concert solo, not a dance. No woman composer of our day is more widely known or more highly esteemed than Cécile Chaminade, whose work, both in volume and in quality, adds a lustre to the musical reputation of her native France. In this new gavotte we find the characteristic French sprightliness and the personal note of the composer happily blended with a certain amount of classical austerity required by the old style of the gavotte. Cécile Chaminade always writes well for the piano. All her passages are playable and effective.

"Air Espagnol" (Spanish air). A piano duet, four hands. By Cécile Chaminade.

Good duet music is all too rare. We heartily recommend this gay and vivacious Spanish air to pianists. It is well within the powers of the average good amateur player, and its musical contents are not difficult to find.

Choice Sacred Songs. By various composers.

"Still, Still with Thee," and "The King of Love My Shepherd Is," by Oley Speaks; "The Day Is Gently Sinking to a Close," by R. H. Woodman; "O Eyes that are Weary," "Through Peace to Light," by William G. Hammond; "Redeeming Love," "O Paradise," "Breathe Your Soft Prayer to Christ, the Child," "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say," "Light at Evening Time," "Oh, for a Closer Walk with God," by C. B. Hawley; "O Lord, Rebuke Me Not," "I Will Lift Up Mine Eyes," by Eduardo Marzo; "Lord Jesus, In Thy Mercy," "Sunrise and Sunset," "Nearer My Home," "I Praise the Lord," by Charles Gilbert Spross; "O Lord, Most Holy," by Pietro Vallini; "A Song of Victory," "The Ninety and Nine," by Frederick Stevenson; "Rock of Ages," by Oscar J. Fox; "Bow Down Thine Ear, O Lord," by Alexander MacFayden; "Bow Down Thine Ear," by C. Hugo Grimm; "Jesus, In Thy Dying Woes," by Will C. Macfarlane; "Light of Light," by Alfred Wooler.

"Dream Life," a song, with words by W. H. Bugbee and music by G. Warring Stebbins, is a simple melody with an unaffected accompaniment. It is just the kind of song that teachers can use and amateurs can sing effectively. It is musically attractive both in melody and rhythm.

"Red Roses," a song, with words by Jessie Wade Manning and music by Lawrence H. Montague, is graceful and natural in its flow and altogether without pretensions or striving after novel effects. It is the kind of song that does not become wearisome with repetition. The words are wholesome in sentiment and are suitable for song purposes by young persons.

"The Lambs March," a piano solo by John Philip Sousa, is a composition that hardly requires eulogy or criticism. It is a Sousa march. If there are any persons in Europe or America who do not know what a Sousa march is by this time we fear that no words of ours can enlighten them.

The Boston Music Company.

An Album of Five Pieces for the Piano. Composed by Claude Debussy.

These five short compositions, which are of medium difficulty, are called "Mazurka," "Ballade," "Danse," "Rêverie," "Valse romantique." In spite of their names, however, they are all characteristic of the selfsame composer. It is, of course, this personal note which gives Claude Debussy his fame throughout the musical world. Apart from this particular something which belongs to Debussy alone, there is nothing unusual in these five pieces. We are tempted to quote what Lamb said about the poetry of Shelley: "Thinspun." But the thinspun poetry of Shelley endures. Likewise the thinspun music of Debussy has vitality and individuality.

"Trio Album." For violin, cello and piano. In seven volumes.

Volume V contains "Andante Sostenuto," by Waldemar Bargiel; "Lento," by Cécile Chaminade; "The Bells," by Claude Debussy; "Romance sans paroles," by Daniel Van Goens; "Epithalame," by Eduard Lassen; "Bolero," by Maurice Moszkowski; "Barcarolle," by Jacques Offenbach; "Serenade," by Gabriel Pierné; "Waltz-Scherzo," by Oscar Straus; "Canzonetta," by P. Tschaikowsky.

The engraving and printing of these albums are perfection itself, and the compositions are all melodious and within the technical powers of most amateur string players. They are in every way commendable, for they encourage the performance of good music, and they satisfy the tastes of those who have already learned to appreciate good music.

White-Smith Music Publishing Company.

"Trio in D Major." Op. 56. For violin, cello and piano. Composed by Charles Wakefield Cadman.

This important and solidly constructed work is written in the usual three movement form. The first movement, allegro maestoso, is powerful, broad and imposing. The second movement, andante cantabile, is rich in harmonic changes and full of expressive melody. In the last movement, vivace energico, the composer has given free rein to his impetuous flow of themes and phases, and has written a brilliant and convincing movement which worthily concludes the trio. This music is, perhaps, a little beyond the technical skill of amateurs, yet it is brilliant and effective without in the least taxing the powers of any good trio of professional players. It is to be hoped that this excellent work from the pen of one of the most successful of the younger school of American composers, will meet with the approval it so well merits.

Polak's Fine Work at Asbury Park.

Among the many brilliant features in connection with the Elks Music Festival, held at Asbury Park, N. J., on August 25, 27, 29, was the fine work of the young American pianist, Emil Polak, who appeared not only as a soloist on each of the programs, but also was the official accompanist of the occasion. During the course of the three big entertainments the versatile pianist played for the tenors, George Dostal and Orville Harrold, the baritone, Jerome Uhl, and also for Alice Nielsen, soprano; Rosa Olitzka, contralto; Miss Mylott, contralto; Mabel Garrison, soprano, and Nahan Franko, the New York violinist and conductor.

In every detail of his part in the programs, Mr. Polak's splendid muscianship and reliability were always at the front. His equipment as a pianist should make him a valuable member of the American musical fraternity, for his playing is an inspiration to all who hear him. As the first soloist appearing on each of the Asbury Park programs in question he never failed to make a deep impression on his audiences. His playing of the Leschetizky arrangement for left hand alone of the sextet from "Lucia" and of Liszt's "Rigoletto Fantasie," together with a Chopin nocturne and a Friml etude, evoked rounds of applause, demanding encores which, in their turn, were forthcoming.

Helen Stanley's Program.

Helen Stanley, the young American prima donna of the Chicago Opera Company, Montreal Opera Company, and the Century Opera Company, includes at times in her recital programs two or three operatic arias. While freely acknowledging the futility of presenting such numbers in cities which, like New York, Boston, Chicago and Philadelphia, are enabled to hear them under the best conditions of actual operatic representation, yet communities not blessed with opera companies should, Miss Stanley maintains, be accorded the opportunity of hearing at least fragments of the operas whenever possible. So that the concert giver fulfils, as it were, a twofold duty in such localities and heightens the artistic significance of his or her activity in those particular centers. On her recital programs for the coming season Miss Stanley has placed the arias from "Madama Butterfly," "Tosca," "La Boheme" and "Salome."

Meta Reddisch for Naples.

Meta Reddisch, the American coloratura soprano, has accepted a return engagement at the San Carlo, Naples, for this winter. It is the theatre where she made her debut three years ago. She will appear in "Traviata" and "Rigoletto." Early in July, Miss Reddisch scored a distinct success at the Grand Theatre, Lyons, France.

OBITUARY.

Francis T. Sully Darley.

Francis T. Sully Darley, a prominent musician and art critic, of Philadelphia, Pa., died at the Hotel Dennis, Atlantic City, N. J., where he had been spending the summer. Apoplexy caused his death; he was eighty-one years old.

Mr. Darley lived at 510 South Broad street, Philadelphia. Since the death of his wife, who was Cecelia Baldwin, daughter of Matthias Baldwin, founder of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, Mr. Darley had lived in seclusion at the Broad street address.

He was born November 10, 1833, the son of William H. W. Darley, organist in St. Luke's Church, at Thirteenth and Spruce streets, for thirty-four years. Mr. Darley began his musical education under J. C. Strandbridge, organist in Christ Church for many years. Later he studied with John Welsh, organist of St. Mary's Church, and then took up the science and orchestration of music under Leopold Meighen, conductor of the Musical Fund Society.

When twenty years of age, Mr. Darley became organist at Christ Church, Second street, above Market. He held that position for four years and then went to Calvary Presbyterian Church, Locust street, above Fifteenth, where he remained for several years.

Subsequently he became organist of St. Clement's Church, which position he held until his marriage, April 16, 1868. He resigned and devoted his time to the study of art and music.

Emil Fischer.

Emil Fischer, the retired Wagnerian basso, died in Hamburg, Germany, on August 11, according to advices received in New York last week. He had been suffering from stomach trouble.

His reputation in America was due altogether to his connection with the Metropolitan Opera House, where he first appeared in 1885 under Anton Seidl. Just previously he had been connected with the Dresden Royal Opera. Emil Fischer at once established himself in New York as a Wagner singer of unusual force and intelligence. His Hans Sachs long has been regarded in this city as the ideal representation of the role. In 1891 the popular basso returned to Europe for some years, reappearing at the Metropolitan in 1904. In 1907 a farewell benefit performance was given him there in honor of the fiftieth anniversary of the beginning of his vocal career.

Emil Fischer is credited with having discovered Lilli Lehmann and introducing her to the world of music. His voice was a basso of unusual range, resonance and mellowness, and he infused his interpretations with a rare degree of sympathy and intellectual insight. The late singer made his residence in New York for many years after his retirement, and was married here to Camille Seygard, the soprano. At the time of his death, Emil Fischer was eighty-three years old.

Ada Bird.

Ada Bird, a noted musician and director of the Wisconsin School of Music, Madison, Wis., passed away suddenly from heart failure at her summer home on Plum Lake in northern Wisconsin, August 25.

Only recently the Musical Courier announced that the French Government had honored Miss Bird in recognition of her great work in the field of music to which she had devoted her whole life by awarding to her the decoration of Les Palmes Academique.

Miss Bird's school has been one of the most successful in the State and she has done so much for music that her death is felt as a great loss, not only by the whole city, but by the surrounding country. She has been a vital influence not only in the musical life of the community in which she lived, but through the teachers she has trained and the successful public pianists she has produced her influence has been extended throughout the whole State.

Georgine von Januschowsky.

Georgine von Januschowsky-Neuendorff, forerly a well known opera singer and once a member of the Metropolitan cast (under Abbey and Grau), died at Bellevue Hospital last week, aged sixty-four. For the past dozen years or so Mme. Januschowsky had been one of the dramatic company at the Irving Place Theatre. Her husband, who died some years ago, was Adolph Neuendorff, a conductor.

James Irvin Griffin.

James Irvin Griffin, twenty years old, a member of the Paulist choir, Topeka, Kan., died on August 14 of appendicitis. He was taken ill on August 7 and an operation was unsuccessful.

OMAHA HAS A NEW SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

The Omaha Conservatory of Music and Art Is the Name of the Institution—Will Open September 14 with Complete Faculty—Subscription Series Contracts with Artists Canceled Owing to Present Conditions—Local Musical People Back from Europe.

Omaha, Neb., September 1, 1914.

Very interesting locally, and doubtless in a mueh wider circle, will prove the announcement of the establishment of a new school of musie in this city. The name of the institution is the Omaha Conservatory of Music and Art, and the title conveys a very fair idea of the work to be done and the courses to be offered. The school has been incorporated under the laws of the State of Nebraska, and is said to have an adequate financial backing. It will be housed in the building known locally as the Metropolitan Building, which insures for it commodious, pleasant and aeeessible quarters, containing not only well arranged suites of rooms for studio purposes, but a spacious reeital hall as well. A pipe organ has been ordered by the school management, and will be installed in the reeital hall as soon as it arrives.

The school will open September 14 with a faculty of over twenty instruetors. Some of the more prominent names are as follows: Alexander Emslie, Henry Cox, Ben Stanley, Edith L. Wagoner, Nathaniel Rieed, Edward Puls, Albin Huster, and J. Laurie Wallaee.

The eourses will eover all theoretical and technieal phases of music, dramatie art, painting, aesthetie dancing, and publie school musie. German and French will also be taught. The president of the board of directors is E. A. Gallup, in whose hands the business management of the school will be Miss Hopper Cancels Contracts.

A reeent note from Evelyn Hopper, the Omaha concert manager, brings the unwelcome news that in view of unfavorable conditions, financial and otherwise, she has found it wise to cancel all the eontracts with artists engaged for her subscription series. One of the attractions booked for this series was Fritz Kreisler, who is reported to be at the war front.

Miss Hopper does not wish this report to be construed as meaning that she will offer the local publie no artists whatever. On the contrary, she has arranged for an appearance of Schumann-Heink, and hopes to present as many more attractions as the times will justify. She also ealls attention to the faet that after five seasons' work, this is the first instanee of the voluntary eancellation on her part of a contraet.

Miss Hopper has but reeently returned from Chicago, where she enjoyed a six week's period of study with Maestro Saeerdote, of Milan.

Louise Jansen-Wylie Returns.

After a pleasant and profitable year spent in study and professional work in the East, Louise Jansen-Wylie has returned to this city, and expeets to open a studio within the next week.

Luella Anderson in Omaha.

Much against her will, Luella Anderson is obliged to forego the benefit and pleasure of a season in Brussels, where she has studied violin the past three years. During her residenee in Brussels, Miss Anderson acted as the correspondent of the Musical Courier. Her present plans are still indefinite.

Mary Münchhoff Returns.

Mary Münchhoff reaehed Omaha last week after a stormy vaeation spent near the European war zone. Her experiences, like those of many other Americans in similar eireumstances, were of a very unenviable variety.

Rev. Tallmadge Transferred.

Rev. Father A. J. Tallmadge, formerly of Creighton University, has been transferred to a Jesuit college in Detroit. Father Tallmadge, as organizer of the Creighton Glee Club, and general musieal enthusiast, was an important factor in the musieal life of the community, and his loss will be keenly felt.

Henry Cox Resumes Activities.

Henry Cox, the violinist, has reopened his school of orehestral instruments. Mr. and Mrs. Cox spent the summer months at one of the Iowa lakes.

Jean P. Duffield.

Hard Times Ahead.

By George Hamlin.

I am fearful for the sueeess of opera in Ameriea next fall and winter, for I see that the priee of garlie is going skyward by leaps and bounds. Never in the history of the world has this odorous edible aeroplaned in price as it is doing in these exciting days.

A worldwide shortage is reported in garlie. The Mexiean erop is an absolute failure, and the Italian crop, aeeording to the market reports, will not be enough for the loeal supply. This may sound like a strong statement, but it is true. And what, I ask, are the opera impresarios

GEORGE HAMLIN AND ONE OF THE CORTINA DAMSELS, WHO IS GATHERING HAY WHILE THE SUN SHINES.
This snapshot was taken at Cortina, Tyrol, during July, 1914.

to do, to say nothing of the opera singers? It may be that opera will have to be given up entirely for the time being.

As is strongly evident on the street cars and elevated trains morning and evening, the garlie consumption in Ameriea has inereased within the past few years. Some of this increase may be laid to the vast immigration from Southern Europe, but it is a known fact that all of our very best lobster palaees have quadrupled the garlie supply in the last year or so.

Garlie is not a thing to abuse. For the delicate palate what chemists eall a "traee" will suffiee, and many people to whom the flavor is a thing of seorn do not realize that dishes they most enjoy at famous restaurants owe their quality to this humble ingredient.

Working people and others with stout stomaehs may take garlie raw with bread as some folks take onions. To the fastidious, either may seem a barbarous eustom, although both onions and garlie have been extolled of late as a reeipe for longevity. Still, I suppose there are some who would not care for a long life on onion and garlic terms.

In the meantime, I am investing all my spare ehange in the garlie eorner and expeet to reap vast profits on aecount of my commereial aeumen.

Reinald Werrenrath's Busy Summer.

Reinald Werrenrath, the baritone, has eertainly had a summer without monotony. His professional engagements kept him busy even into the warm season, an exeeedingly pleasant one being a song recital for the summer school at Dartmouth College. From his house at University Heights, New York City, where he has enjoyed some delights of farm-gardening, he has been able to take short journeys to plaees near town and indulge in his favorite amusements, sailing and swimming.

While his engagements became farther apart later in the summer he, with three college friends, equally enthusiastic lovers of the ocean, went on a motor boat trip of three weeks along the New England eoast, the boat (the Delta) being one of the first to go through the new canal at Cape Cod. The four comrades took turns as helmsman, cook, ete., and the life on board was absolutely unconventional—consequently very restful even with necessary work.

On returning from this voyage, Mr. Werrenrath went to Peterborough, N. H., where, as already stated in this paper, his singing was a distinctive feature during the six days of the MacDowell Festival. After being in town only two days, he went to Delhi, N. Y., where he gave a song recital to a very large audienee.

SCHUMANN-HEINK
TOUR—SEASON 1914-15—NOW BOOKING
Direction: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th Street, New York
STEINWAY PIANO USED

KATHARINE GOODSON
Management: Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York.
"A POETESS OF THE PIANO"
In America January to April 1915
TOUR NOW BOOKING
KNABE PIANO

Teague on Accompanying.

"Good accompanists are born and not made," is a common saying, which is fully appreciated by artists who are often obliged to seek far for suitable and efficient associates of this nature.

Quite prominent in this important branch of musical activities, aside from his splendid abilities as an organist and composer, and one who might easily be acclaimed as one of the chosen few, is the New York pianist, Cecil Teague. During a short conversation with him recently he said to a MUSICAL COURIER reporter: "To me, without a doubt, accompanying the voice or another instrument is the most interesting and fascinating profession in the world. For me to remember the time when I first took up the study of it, is impossible, for while still a very young boy as organist in an old English cathedral in my home town, I always derived greatest pleasure from the work with my choir and various soloists. Yes, I am exceedingly fond of solo playing also, but accompanying is a veritable obsession. The real pleasure of accompanying is derived from the blending, as nearly as possible, of one's own temperament to that of the solo performer's and thereby creating of the whole, a near perfect ensemble. Instinct plays one of the most important parts in the practice of this art. For an accompanist to imagine that his playing should be void of originality and that his main efforts are to be devoted to a mere following of the solo part is a grave mistake. The accompanist should, and does in successful instances, play nearly as important a part as the soloist, for only upon the strength of the background does the effectiveness of the soloist's prime efforts depend."

Among the many artists with whom Mr. Teague has been associated are Dan Beddoe, Victor Maurel and Léon Rothier.

CECIL TEAGUE.
Prominent New York accompanist.

Century Opera House

Central Park West at 62nd and 63rd Sts., New York City
Milton and Sargent Aborn, General Managers

Second Season—20 Weeks, SEPT. 14
Beginning Monday

Lois Ewell
Bettina Freeman
Muriel Gough
Erzsi Guti
Florence Macbeth
Sylvia Nilis
Helen Stanley
Elizabeth Campbell
Kathleen Howard
Augusta Lenska
Maude Santley
Albertina Rasch
Marcella Craft
Alice Eversman
Gustaf Bergman
Orville Harrold
Morgan Kingston
Charles Febre
Hardy Williamson
Thomas Chalmers
Louis D'Angelo
George Everett
Louis Kreidler
Graham Marr
Alfred Kaufman
Henry Weldon
Frank Phillips
Edmund Makalif

CONDUCTORS:
Agide Jacchia
Ernst Knoch
Josef Pasternack
Josiah Zuro

ARTISTIC DIRECTOR:
Jacques Coini

BALLET DIRECTOR:
Luigi Albertieri

Operas of the First Ten Weeks:
ROMEO AND JULIET
CARMEN
WILLIAM TELL TRAVIATA
LOHENGRIN
IL TROVATORE
JEWELS OF THE MADONNA
FAUST PAGLIACCI
CAVALLERIA RUSTICANA
TANNHÄUSER
LUCIA DI LAMMERMOOR

POPULAR SUNDAY NIGHT CONCERT
Every Week Beginning SEPT. 27

HUBBARD OPERA TALKS
Free to SUBSCRIBERS and REGULAR PATRONS, Six Sunday Afternoons at 4 o'clock, beginning OCT. 4.
By Mr. Havrah Hubbard, of the Boston Opera House.

Performances in ITALIAN: Oct. 5, 7, 19, 21, 26, 28; Nov. 9, 11, 23, 25.
Performances in GERMAN: Oct. 12, 14; Nov. 16, 18.

ALL OTHER PERFORMANCES IN ENGLISH

PRICES:

NIGHTS & SATURDAY MATS. AND HOLIDAY MATS
25c. to $2.00.

THURSDAY MATS. & SUNDAY NIGHT CONCERTS
25c. to $1.00

CENTURY LYCEUM and CONCERT HALL

(In the Century Opera House.)

Seating capacity 780. Fully equipped stage and dressing rooms. Tea Room, Restaurant and cafe service in the building. Four fast elevators of 25 capacity each.

RENTALS for concerts, recitals, theatricals, etc., now being booked for the season of 1914-15.

Address
LYCEUM DEPT, Century Opera House.

Arthur Alexander on the Water.

Arthur Alexander's manager, M. H. Hanson, has received the following letter:

La Roseraie,
Parc de la Malmaison,
Rueil (S. & O.), August 24, 1914.

MY DEAR HANSON: We are sailing on the Patria, of the Fabre Line, from Marseilles, September 3, and expect to reach New York about September 12 or 13. This dreadful war is changing a great many things and it is impossible to look very far ahead. I hope you got out of Belgium all right, and have had a safe and pleasant trip to America. Address me care of Thomas Leeming, 99 Chambers street, New York. At present I am driving an ambulance for the American Red Cross and have not much time to think of next season's programs!

ARTHUR ALEXANDER.

Yours sincerely,
(Signed) ARTHUR ALEXANDER.

Mr. Hanson states that nothing has been booked for Mr. Alexander before February, but he hopes that as soon as it becomes known that the famous tenor has been compelled to come to this country earlier than expected, owing to the state of affairs in Europe, those who wished to have his services, but who had to be refused on account of the very short time during which Mr. Alexander decided to come to America on this, his first visit, will communicate with Mr. Alexander's managers.

Alexander's sublime singing, the greatness of his art, which is enhanced by his most remarkable accompanying—for he sits at the piano and sings to his own accompaniments—is sure to secure for him, as soon as he has been heard, a high position in this country.

It is not to the artist's discredit that, besides being a most serious devotee to his art, and a charming gentleman, beloved by all those who meet him, that he is a thorough sportsman, who refuses to teach on Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays of each week, in spite of the temptation of making as much money as possible, so that he can devote Thursdays to golf at the Paris Golf Course, near Versailles, and Fridays and Saturdays to shooting or fishing, according to the season, and all the time his American racing car is seen in all parts of the country surrounding Paris. It is doubtless that this car is the one he is using in the services of the Red Cross.

The Farmer-Manager.

A farmer! That is exactly what Manager Charles L. Wagner is. At Pawling, N. Y., spread out over a wide area of beautiful country, lies one of the prettiest farms in that section. Its owner has devoted a great amount of time, energy and money to the improvement and development of this tract of land along scientific lines. A scientific farmer in these days is usually the prosperous citizen.

In a recent letter to the MUSICAL COURIER Mr. Wagner refers to his "hobby" as follows:

I have gone at the business the same as I have gone at my managerial work, learning it from the bottom up. I had the orchard made over this spring by tree surgeons, all the cavities cleaned and filled, bark scraped from the trees, had it sprayed four times, which put the trees in fine shape—result is good apples.

You see I manage the best artists in the world, and I am the best manager. (I don't claim it, but I admit it.) So naturally I must have the best farm and raise the best apples.

If Mr. Wagner manages his farm as he has John McCormack nothing more need be said about his success—that must necessarily be taken for granted.

Willy Burmester Expected.

Manager M. H. Hanson is very much concerned at not being able to hear from Willy Burmester. The violinist is to open his season as soloist with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra on November 6, and many recitals and orchestral appearances are booked for him.

It will be a great disappointment to Mr. Hanson if by chance Mr. Burmester should not be able to come to America, but knowing him as he does, he has no doubt that the next day or two will bring news from the violinist saying that his original plan to come over with his entire family will be carried out to the letter. Mr. Hanson states that Mr. Burmester's will is indomitable.

A large apartment on Madison avenue, New York, is now being furnished for the use of the Burmester family during the coming winter, and Mr. Hanson has not seen fit to change the order.

Helen Stanley in Opera and Concert.

Helen Stanley, who is now on the Atlantic Ocean en route to New York, will open her season with the Century Opera Company, singing for the first time in English Micaela in "Carmen." This opera will be produced on the second evening of this season, and the proceeds of the performance will be donated by the Messrs. Aborn to the American Red Cross fund.

Miss Stanley will appear almost continuously in leading roles with the Century Opera Company in New York.

Her operatic appearances will be interrupted so as to enable her to fill some concert dates arranged for her, the entire months of January, February and March being booked solid for concert work.

Marcella Craft in New York.

Marcella Craft has left her parents' home in Chicago, where she has been visiting, and will reside in New York, where she will work hard to make herself letter perfect in the original languages of the big roles, with which her name has become identified and famous in Germany, where, of course, she sang them in the German language.

Miss Craft will remain in the metropolis until she goes to the Pacific Coast for the fall concert tour now being arranged by M. H. Hanson's representative, Frank W. Healy, who in his booking is being aided by L. E. Behymer.

John Rebarer Expects a Busy Season.

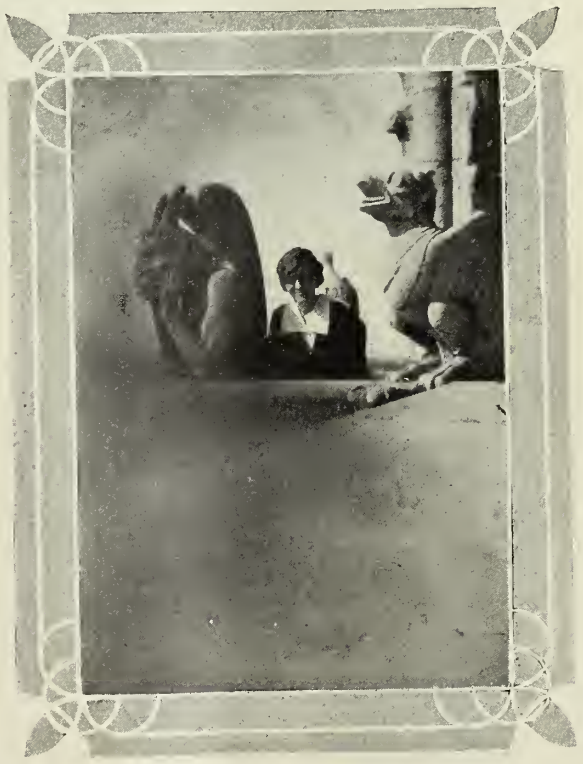
Owing to the large number of applications for lessons, John Rebarer, the concert pianist, opened his studio, 420 Madison avenue, New York City, on September 1. Mr. Rebarer also has signed for several concert engagements to be filled in the near future.

Mr. Rebarer was about to leave for Germany to give a recital in Berlin in August when war was declared and the steamship sailing canceled.

TO THE STUDENT OF SINGING.

BY ANNA E. ZIEGLER, NEW YORK.

DEAR STUDENT—When I use the word "student" to address you, please ask yourself at once whether or not you are the one I mean. Look up the word and you will find that it means infinitely more than the word "pupil." When you are a real student, you have a definite goal in your mind and every step you take is toward that goal. If you are merely a pupil of some one, you follow instructions more or less blindly and you would have to be the lucky one in a thousand to find the teacher who will not pull you away from a practical course toward a singer's career. Why is this? It is because, when all is told, the average teacher really is not interested in opening your eyes to facts which work out your problems quickly and effectively, the selfish ones (averaging not more nor less than in other vocations), even when possessing real knowledge of practical requirements, hopes always to retain the pupil as many years as possible for financial reasons; the unselfish teacher who, of course, is an idealist, hopes always to realize perfection of tone production and emission, perfect phrasing, musicianship, etc., and as it is not given to human beings to be infallibly perfect in anything—it keeps the sentimental teacher and pupil working endlessly for perfection—in most cases the awakening of the student comes too late to make the renderings of the singers marketable at all. I know real students who have studied from five to ten years in this impractical way and who never even earn a dollar with their singing; most of those have been abroad to study and thousands of dollars have been spent in good faith. Alas! in vain, the connection with what is practicable is lost and the subconscious feeling with the listener is lost. In order to become at all possible for active art, the student would have to be remodeled in thought and habits of work.



Now then, I say to the singing aspirant: After asking yourself whether you are a real student with a goal, in contrast to the leaf in the wind pupil, next investigate what that goal consists of and whether it is worthy of the struggle and expense. Among the American students I find generally that to earn money is uppermost in the minds. This as an ultimate outcome of the real goal of being a worthy professional singer is not at all reprehensible; as the goal itself, however, it leads directly away from music as an art, for it immediately leads to a craftsmanship in practising and in choice of educational material. It involves much more repertoire than the voice is ready for, involves tricks to amuse or astonish the listeners rather than honesty with art and the composer, leads to catering to the majority of the public ignorant of good singing in place of the knowing minority, and is altogether on the down track, no matter how beautiful the voice, how good the teacher or how talented the student.

It is here where you must begin to connect the thought in order to become scholarly singers, and acquire good taste in choosing compositions and style of rendering. Take my word as a reliable guide, the career will take care of itself when you can really give the equivalent for the money you earn. The great heartrending struggles of the singers are due only and alone to the inadequacy of their renderings. The managers are looking for singers who are deserving of $100 a performance and upward—even from $100 to $500 per evening there is a dearth—the only level which is overfilled is where the singing is really worth nothing and the money is reluctantly paid in order to fill the programs and the soloists positions.

Make a strict dividing line between singing as an amusement to yourself and to the public and singing as a self supporting art. Remember, however, that in following the latter idea, you need not shut out the lighter character of singing; you notice that the grand opera singers receive the highest prices in vaudeville; you may think you can rise through singing at first in vaudeville or musical comedy. Disillusion yourself, you cannot; the very mannerisms and effect-seeking tricks you have to acquire in order to be successful in vaudeville, etc., are against you. After a year or two of such work these tricks are in your subconsciousness and therefore second nature; only a marvel could change you, meanwhile you have lost time and gained no money. You have returned from the road exhausted, you have had to shout instead of sing, hustle endlessly for trains, have had poor food, your money for further study has proved treacherous, as all you earned had to be spent on daily necessities. This is the testimony of all young singers who thought to start a career that way. I beg of you, therefore, do not fall in the trap of your own wrong thinking. Keep your ideals high and ever higher; let your aim be for truly artistic singing, do not corrupt your tone production, but be sure at the same time to keep alive a sense for what is required in the profession and make these requirements a study in itself. Never stop being a real student. Sembrich, Schumann-Heink, Lilli Lehmann, Caruso, Amato—in short, all who have arrived at the top are the most diligent, painstaking students to this day—never let a day go by without practising tones, scales, arpeggios, etc. I have this from personal testimony. If you do not love the fine art of singing do not take up the struggle of learning; your natural voice is good enough for the low requirements. If you do love it, sacrifice your ideas, your money, your time, and your amusements; in short, your very self, and you will, without any doubt, arrive at the top. There are no disappointments possible to such a student.

Mildred Dilling to Return in November.

Mildred Dilling, the harpist, who is still in Europe, expects to return to New York in November. From May

MILDRED DILLING AND HER PET GARGOYLES ON THE TOP OF NOTRE DAME.

12 until July 25 the young artist spent most of her time in Paris studying with Henriette Renie, who later took her to Etretat, where she will continue her studies until her return to America.

Rudolph Ganz Coming This Month.

Rudolph Ganz, the Swiss pianist, is expected to arrive in New York September 18 on the steamer Antilles.

Singing Department

Alfred Ilma
THE OPERATIC BARITONE

Henri La Bonte
THE EMINENT TENOR

Beatrice McCue
THE AMERICAN CONTRALTO

Adrienne Remenyi
THE SINGING AUTHORITY

With the free supplementary classes offering the most thorough and practical course for singers preparing for church, concert, opera or teaching.

For Catalogue write to Sec'y, Box 7
The von Ende School of Music
44 West 85th Street, New York

Albert Schott's Tour.

Although Albert Schott was born in Washington, D. C., most of the work of this talented American singer has been done in Europe. As leading tenor he sang in many of the opera houses of Germany, Bulgaria, Roumania, Servia, Montenegro, as well as in Stockholm and Copenhagen. His operatic repertoire is unusually large. During the last few years he has sung with great success all of the following roles:

Walter	"Meistersinger"
Lohengrin	"Lohengrin"
Tamino	"Die Zauberflöte"
Tannhäuser	"Tannhäuser"
Tristan	"Tristan und Isolde"
Fra Diavolo	"Fra Diavolo"
Siegfried	"Siegfried"
Eric	"Der Fliegende Holländer"
Siegfried	"Götterdämmerung"
Florestan	"Fidelio"
Canio	"Pagliacci"
Don Jose	"Carmen"
Adolar	"Euryanthe"
Arnold	"William Tell"
Edgardo	"Lucia di Lammermoor"
Max	"Der Freischütz"
Manrico	"Il Trovatore"
Faust	"Faust"
Vasco di Gama	"L'Africaine"
Raoul de Nangis	"Huguenots"
Eleazar	"La Juive"
Huon	"Oberon"
Mansaniello	"La Muette de Portici"
Lionel	"Martha"
Stradella	"Stradella"
Don Octavio	"Don Giovanni"
The Prophet	"Prophete"
Radames	"Aida"
Turiddu	"Cavalleria Rusticana"
Joseph	"Joseph in Egypt"
Parsifal	"Parsifal"
Siegmund	"Die Walküre"
George Brown	"Dame Blanche"

The Concert Direction M. H. Hanson has made arrangements to handle Mr. Schott's bookings and a long transcontinental tour now is being arranged for him.

The Things That Count.

New York, September 2, 1914.

To the Musical Courier:

Your reply to the Sun's editorial of August 26, greatly interested me. I find in my work as a pianist and teacher that the foreign label means nothing, but that, as you suggest, musicianship, interpretation and power of emotional expression are the things that count. The great American public applauds these without stint, regardless of nationality.

Very truly yours,

JOHN REBARER,
420 Madison avenue.

Pilzer to Give New York Recital.

Maximilian Pilzer, the violinist, will give a recital at Aeolian Hall, New York, on December 6.

NORAH DREWETT
THE FAMOUS PIANIST
SEASON 1914-15
Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON : : : 437 Fifth Avenue, New York
STEINWAY PIANO USED

MRS. KING CLARK
Mezzo Soprano
American Tour
WHOLE SEASON 1914-15
Management, M. H. Hanson
437 Fifth Ave. New York

BOSTON BREVITIES.

Symphony Hall Manager Returns from His First Trip Abroad—Had Long and Uncomfortable Voyage from Italy to New York—A Concert in the White Mountains.

Manager Louis A. Mudgett, of Symphony Hall, is the latest returning musical voyager to unfold his tale of hardship. Mr. Mudgett with his wife and young son were in Switzerland when general war was declared, and immediately tried to get to England by way of Holland. Finding this impossible, they did the next best thing and returned to Italy, which they had left but a short time before. Fearing, however, that this country might become involved any minute, and deciding that home was the safest place after all, Mr. Mudgett took passage on an Italian steamer which offered steerage accommodations only, and after a far from comfortable voyage of sixteen days reached New York with none too pleasant recollections of his first European trip. Mr. Mudgett could say nothing definite about his Symphony Hall Sunday concerts, but hoped they might be arranged by November.

THE SEYDELS TO RETURN.

Word received by Mrs. Theodore Seydel from her husband and daughter, Irma Seydel, now in Germany, tells of their intended return to this country on September 19.

CHARLES ANTHONY IN WHITE MOUNTAINS.

From the Mount Washington House, Bretton Woods, N. H., comes word of a concert given by Charles Anthony, the Boston pianist, on August 30, when he played a concerto with the combined orchestras of the Bretton Woods hotels. Mr. Anthony has been spending the summer at the Mount Pleasant House as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. William P. Dunham.

BLANCHE FREEDMAN.

Gemünder Issues New Catalogue.

August Gemünder & Sons, New York, dealers in violins, violoncellos and bows, have just issued an unusually handsome and valuable catalogue for the season of 1914-15. In a clear and terse foreword, which contains so much valuable and expert information that it should be read by every player on a bowed instrument, a general resume of the violin business is given. In this foreword mention is made of the victory scored by the change in our tariff laws so that, instead of a 45 per cent. duty on every old violin imported, all violins over 100 years old are admitted duty free, and it is added that, "As modern violin makers, we knew that no such protection to home industry . . . was needed. It was our opinion, based on knowledge, that the decision between old and modern violins is a matter of individual preference."

This foreword then goes on to state the means by which the prices of old violins are controlled, and their probable makers determined. Read it. It will be worth your while and will give you a knowledge of some facts of which you are probably ignorant.

The catalogue contains descriptions of nearly 200 violins, cellos, etc., with prices varying from $40 to $2,000, and has also a series of valuable and well made photographs of the principal objects in this splendid collection, showing, in most cases, both back and front of each instrument.

LONDON HAS PROMENADE CONCERTS DESPITE WAR.

Queen's Hall Orchestra Attracts Good Sized Audiences—Stravinsky's "Scherzo Fantastique" Has First English Performance—Initial London Hearing of Coleridge-Taylor's Orchestral Rhapsody "From the Prairie"—Musical Courier Representative's Impressions Entertainingly Registered.

16 Adamson Road, N. W.,
London, August 28, 1914.

Wednesday evening I had my first experience at one of the famous promenade concerts of Sir Henry Wood and his Queen's Hall Orchestra. Notwithstanding the war, these concerts are doing excellent business. The great hall, both seats and standing room, was well over three-fourths full. It was an attentive audience and a kind one as well, for it applauded good and bad alike with equal heartiness.

THE ORCHESTRA.

As for the orchestra, it plays well. Considering that it plays a huge program at least three hours in length, every evening except Sundays, for ten successive weeks, it may be said that it plays very well. There are—or rather there were—many better orchestras on the Continent; there are also worse ones. The chief faults of the Queen's Hall Orchestra appear to be those most common orchestral faults of all too much trumpets and trombones in a forte and a raggedness in the attack of the various instrumental divisions. To put it in sporting terms, it is comparatively seldom that they all get off to a fair start.

TWO NOVELTIES.

The program had two interesting novelties. Stravinsky's "Scherzo Fantastique" for orchestra, op. 3, a comparatively early work, was given its first English performance. The work had evidently been carefully rehearsed and called forth the best playing of the evening. It is nothing startling. There is tremendously clever orchestral technic, of a weird kind, which does not cover up the lack of real ideas. The trio, moderato assai in three-four time, was rather sweet, almost banal at times. I have a suspicion, however, that Sir Henry took the whole work much too slow and contributed this to its lack of attractiveness. Certainly Stravinsky's reputation for being disagreeably unusual cannot have been won on a work so innocuous as this.

The second novelty, as orthodox as Stravinsky is supposed to be heterodox, was Coleridge-Taylor's rhapsody for orchestra, "From the Prairie," its first performance in London. While not exactly great, it is an agreeable work, richly scored with a sure hand and good to listen to. The main theme is very noble in character and cleverly handled. It would hardly, however, suggest anything about a prairie to anybody who had not read the title.

CONCERT IMPRESSIONS.

It was really good fun, this concert, and there were three soloists, who shall remain nameless. One was a young lady who sang "Divinités du Styx" not half badly either, and seemed to fancy herself as a sort of "female baritone," judging by the prodigality and quality of her low tones. Another was a bass who sang Loewe's "Sir Oluf" ballad. When the bass gentleman had ceased from his labors, my neighbour (notice the "u"!), a large stout

OXFORD CIRCUS AND REGENT STREET, LONDON.
These business thoroughfares are situated in the heart of the West End.

HELEN BLAIN CONTRALTO
Address: Usual Agents
Residence: 29 Upper Baker St., Regent's Park, London, N.W.
Telephone 471 Mayfair

YEATMAN GRIFFITH SOLE TEACHER OF FLORENCE MACBETH
PRIMA DONNA COLORATURA OF THE CHICAGO OPERA COMPANY
Studios: Holland House, 143 Maida Vale, London

MURIEL LITTLE (Leipzig Diploma)
Voice Production Taught on Method of ELENA GERHARDT
2 Wellington Road, N. W

The most eminent Composers, best Songs and Song Cycles are to be found in the Catalogue of
BOOSEY & CO. NEW YORK and LONDON
FREE on request. THEMATICS of latest important additions
9 East 17th Street New York

HERMANN KLEIN
Teacher of Some of the Most Successful Singers Now Before the Public
Co-Editor, Garcia's "Hints on Singing"; Author, New English Version of "Carmen"; Translator, Metzler's Mastersongs, "Lieder in English."
40 Ave. Road, Regent's Park, N. W., London

Cable: Keynote, London
CONCERT DIRECTION
DANIEL MAYER
Established 1890
Chatham House
George Street
Hanover Square, W.
LONDON, ENGLAND
ENGLAND'S PREMIER AGENCY

HEINRICH GEBHARD Pianist
Management: GEORGE WHIPPLE
162 Tremont Street :: :: :: Boston, Mass

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. HUBBARD
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
SYMPHONY CHAMBERS BOSTON.

IRMA SEYDEL
America—Entire Season 1914-1915
Address THEODORE SEYDEL 70 Westland Avenue, Boston

GEORGE EVERETT
BARITONE—Boston, Covent Garden, Century Opera Companies
Manager, Frederick M. Waterman, 177 Huntington Avenue, Boston

FELIX FOX PIANIST
Summer Classes June 8 to July 25
STEINERT HALL ANNEX - - BOSTON, MASS.

WILLARD FLINT BASS
Soloist Nine Times, HANDEL and HAYDEN SOCIETY
246 Huntington Avenue, Boston
Management: Briggs Musical Bureau - Chicago

CLARA TIPPETT
TEACHER OF SINGING
321 Pierce Building - - - Boston, Mass.

Priscilla WHITE Teacher of Singing
602 Pierce Building
BOSTON - MASS.

man with a strong pipe and beads of perspiration, turned to me and said, "I didn't get much of that. The band was too loud, don't you think?"

"No," I replied, "the gentleman was too soft."

Which, after all, amounts to the same thing.

A certain young lady, whom we will call Miss Bessie without revealing her other name, was down for the Mendelssohn violin concerto. She appeared and started off bravely with the opening phrases, though with a tone hardly thicker than a silk thread. Then came the big tutti and at its end the time for Miss Bessie to start her solo again. But alas, her mental clock had stopped. The fingers were willing and the fiddle was there; the concertmaster, who naturally knows the concerto by heart, obliged with the cue and Miss Bessie tried one or two false starts, but it was no use. The orchestra stopped. Miss Bessie disappeared, but returned in a moment with a smile and her music, followed by a kind friend with a music stand. Everybody started fair this time, and it was finished to the bitter end, which brought with it very hearty applause, more, I think, in recognition of Miss Bessie's courage than her playing—which was bad.

A Discovery.

After this my neighbor borrowed my program and discovered that what he had heard was written by a gentleman named Mendelssohn. "Mendelssohn," said he, handing back the program, "wrote the 'Spring Song' when he was living at Denmark Hill" (a part of London, I believe).

"Did he?" said I.

"Yes," said he.

A momentous fact for Mendelssohn biographers, if it has not already been unearthed.

Promenade Concerts are Popular Affairs.

These Promenade Concerts are popular concerts in the best sense of the word. There is a lot of good music, well played. It only costs a shilling to stand up for the whole three hours, if you want to, or you can sit down for two shillings. One misses the comfortable chairs, tables and good beer which so help to make the popular concerts enjoyable on the Continent, but even in Queen's Hall one may smoke, which helps a lot.

Sir Henry Wood has certainly done more than any other one man to bring the light of good orchestral music into England, and he deserves well of the English people.

How Beethoven's "Fifth" Was Played.

But I wonder if the tempi of the fifth symphony, which concluded the first part of the concert, followed the English tradition? I rather think it was Sir Henry's own reading and it certainly gave an absolutely false picture of the immortal masterpiece. The brio for which Beethoven specially calls in the first movement was absolutely absent and there was no suggestion of Beethoven's "moto" in the awful dragging of the andante. Not a nuance, not a suggestion of any genial touch. The first bars of the "Scherzo" drove me away, though there was a good hour of music still to come. H. O. Osgood.

Alice Garrigue Mott Still in Europe.

Alice Garrigue Mott, the New York teacher of voice, is still in Europe enjoying a delightful vacation despite the war. The latter part of July she spent much of her time in the Bavarian Alps. On August 12, she went to Salzburg, where she visited her friend, Lilli Lehmann, and expected to attend the Musikiest in celebration of the opening of the Mozarthaus.

Minna Jovelli, one of Alice Garrigue Mott's many professional artists, has been engaged in Prague to sing the leading operatic coloratura and young dramatic roles.

VIDA
LLEWELLYN
PIANIST
In America 1914-1915

. . . . "The pianist has at her command a sonorous and refined tone and a very remarkable technic."
—Berliner Borsen Courier.

New York Recital, November 14th
Aeolian Hall

CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue New York City

Minna Jovelli was decorated Hof Kämmer Sängerin of Coburg.

Alice S. Emison has signed with the Washington Seminary as recital singer and head of the vocal department.

On October 1, Mme. Mott will open her season of 1914-1915 at her residence studio, 172 West Seventy-ninth street, New York.

VIEW FROM BALCONY AT BERCHTESGADEN.

The accompanying picture was taken at Berchtesgaden.

Dufault's Farewell Australian Concert.

Paul Dufault, who has been on the other side of the world for the last year, gave his final concert in Adelaide, South Australia, July 4, thus celebrating our "Independence Day." The Melbourne Punch of July 2 [illegible] portraits of Mr. Dufault and his manager, Frederic Shipman, saying:

The return to Melbourne of Paul Dufault for three farewell concerts is an opportunity of again hearing this distinctly different singer that will be heartily welcomed. These concerts, it is stated, will be Mr. Dufault's absolutely final appearances here, as he leaves very shortly for Canada. We are responsible to Paul Dufault for many new and delightful songs which he has introduced to us; indeed, there are numerous songs which will always be associated in our memories with the name of the melodious French-Canadian. The Dufault farewell season will consist of three concerts, which will be given at the Auditorium on July 8, 9 and 10.

Rescues Wife from Drowning.

Ridgley Hudson, of Chicago, and his wife, who are summering at Wequetonsing, Michigan, had a rather exciting experience on their second day at this summer resort.

Mr. and Mrs. Hudson were walking out on the dock, and Mrs. Hudson stepped on the end of a loose plank, and slipped off into about fifteen feet of water. Mr. Hudson with great presence of mind, took off his coat and shoes, and went in after her. There was absolutely no way of getting help, so they were obliged to swim to the shore. Fortunately Mrs. Hudson is of small stature, and the shore was only fifty yards away, so Mr. Hudson was able to tow her in, though the water was ice cold.

When they were safe on shore, a crowd had gathered on the dock to congratulate Mr. Hudson on his rescue. He felt thankful that he was a good swimmer and that he had been spending his summers at this resort all his life, and was familiar with the current of the harbor.

Mr. Hudson writes that both he and his wife are working hard, preparing new programs, as they expect to have a busy season under the exclusive management of Gertrude V. O'Hanlon.

Bertha Yocum Re-engaged.

The summer normal piano course given at "Our Lady of the Lake," San Antonio, Tex., brings again to notice the excellent work of Bertha Yocum, the well known exponent of the Leschetizky method.

Before going South Miss Yocum had won for herself the reputation of one of the foremost exponents of Leschetizky in Philadelphia and New York. Her record in the South has placed her in the front rank, both as pianist and teacher.

Last season she was called to San Antonio as specialist in the Leschetizky method to present the method to the teachers assembled there from all parts of Texas and the Southwest. Her work was so successful that she was reengaged for this season.

In addition to teaching, Miss Yocum appeared in recital with marked success.

Parma, Italy, held an opera contest (prize 20,000 lire), which has been won by Giovanni Pennachio, of Florence, with a work called "Erika."

SPALDING

ACCOMPANIED BY ANDRÉ BENOIST

Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York, wishes to make known that Mr. Spalding has arrived in this country, and will open his forthcoming tour at Carnegie Hall, New York, November 11, 1914

CHICAGO APOLLO CLUB ANTICIPATES GOOD SEASON.

Excellent Series of Concerts Arranged—Local Musician Gets to London from Germany—Classical Recitals—Other Items.

Chicago, Ill., September 5, 1914.

Judging from the Apollo Club announcement just received from Carl D. Kinsey, its secretary and treasurer, the season of 1914-15 should be especially good for the club. An excellent series of concerts has been arranged, and now that the opera season has been abandoned the club should have a larger patronage than ever before. The season will open with an extra concert on Sunday afternoon, October 18, at the Auditorium Theatre, when Elgar's "Caractacus" will be presented, with Marie Sundelius, soprano; Paul Althouse, tenor; Theodore Harrison, baritone, and a basso as soloists.

The first regular concert will take place on Friday night, December 25, at the Auditorium Theatre. Handel's "Messiah" will furnish the evening's entertainment, and Mary Ann Kaufman, soprano; Louise Harrison Slade, contralto; John W. Nichols, tenor, and Clarence Whitehill, bass, will take the solo parts. Schmitt's "Forty-seventh Psalm" and "The Veil," by Cowen (both of which will be given first performances in America on Monday night, February 22, at Orchestra Hall), will comprise the program for the second regular concert. Leonora Allen, soprano, and Andrea Sarto, baritone, are the soloists already engaged for this concert, and the contralto and tenor are still to be announced.

A boy choir of 150 voices will assist the Apollo Club in Bach's "Passion" music, to be presented Monday evening, March 25, at Orchestra Hall. The assisting soloists will be Florence Hinkle, soprano; Alma Beck, contralto; Nicholas Douty, tenor; Burton Thatcher and G. Magnus Schutz, bassos. This performance will begin at 5 o'clock in the evening and continue until 6.30, with a recess, and then again from 8.30 until 10.15. At all the regular concerts the entire Chicago Symphony Orchestra will accompany the club.

GEORGIA KOBER HEARD FROM.

Georgia Kober writes from London that she has been in Germany, where it is impossible to send out or receive any mail. She says it is quite impossible to study or travel over there now, as can well be understood. Miss Kober has had many experiences, she says, and will be glad to get home again. She is the president and head of the piano department at the Sherwood Music School.

CLASSICAL RECITALS AT STURKOW-RYDER STUDIOS.

Theodora Sturkow-Ryder announces a series of classical recitals to be given at the Sturkow-Ryder studios this coming season—the first to be held the last week in October. Advanced pupils will take part and Mme. Sturkow-Ryder will have the assistance of Mme. J. Devore, violinist, who will play a sonata for piano and violin at each concert. The composers to be represented at the October recital will be Haydn, Beethoven and Chopin for piano, and the Handel sonata in D major for violin and piano.

GUY WOODWARD SOLOIST AT MIDWAY GARDENS.

On Tuesday evening, at the Midway Gardens, Guy Herbert Woodard, the concertmaster, was the soloist, playing the "Largo" of Handel. Mr. Woodard is a violin teacher at the Bush Temple Conservatory.

Wednesday evening was "Symphony Night" at the Midway Gardens, German composers were represented on Thursday, and the usual "Wagner Night" was scheduled for Friday.

AMERICAN CONSERVATORY GRADUATE HONORED.

Information has just been received at the American Conservatory that George Damson, a graduate of the department of public school music, has been elected to the position of director of the public school music and teacher of violin in the Colorado State Normal School at Gunnison, Col. Mr. Damson is a pupil of O. E. Robinson, director of the department of public school music, and Herbert Butler, director of the violin department.

This makes another fine position added to the long list of those already secured this season by the graduates of the department of public school music of the American Conservatory.

MUSICALES AT EVANSTON WOMAN'S CLUB.

A series of musical entertainments will be given on the third Tuesday of each month, beginning in October, by the Evanston Woman's Club. Rachel Busey Kinsolving will have charge of the musicales, the last of which will take place in January.

GREETINGS FROM THE ROSENFELDS.

This office has received postcard greetings from Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Rosenfeld and party from Washington Harbor, Washington Island, Wis.

Morgan Kingston Returns to New York.

Morgan Kingston, the Welsh tenor, who is enrolled as principal tenor with the Aborn forces at the Century Opera House, New York, returned Saturday, August 29, from England, where he had spent the summer in resting and incidentally in learning roles in six new operas in which he will appear in this season at the popular New York opera house. Kingston apparently is in splendid condition, and this, his second season before American audiences, should prove to be even more successful than his first year at the Century, which, in truth, was his first season on any operatic stage. With Kingston's voice, his remarkable resourcefulness, the natural physical endowments that fit him so well for any role he cares to assume, and, above all, the British determination to succeed at all costs to the best of his abilities, such qualifications as these give to the operatic world an artist who will undoubtedly mount to great heights in his profession.

Kingston's first appearance of the season will be made in "Carmen" on Tuesday evening, September 15.

Flonzaley Quartet Safe in Lausanne.

A cable from the Flonzaley Quartet states that the members of that organization are well and safe in Lausanne, Switzerland, and will sail for America so as to be here November 1, several weeks earlier than was originally planned. The dispatch was signed by Adolfo Betti, first violin of the Flonzaleys, and was the first word that Loudon Charlton, the organization's manager, has been able to get from the attraction since the outbreak of the war. It was feared that the Flonzaleys' plans might be seriously interfered with by the war, as there was some doubt as to the members (who are of three nationalities) having reached Lausanne before the beginning of hostilities. Not only does the message that Mr. Charlton has received insure the Flonzaleys' arrival earlier than was scheduled, but it makes it highly probable that instead of returning to Europe in April, the quartet will remain in America until the very close of the season.

Max Friedman Opens Studio September 1.

Max Friedman, one of Brooklyn's well known piano teachers, returned to the city refreshed and rested from his summer outing, which he spent in Neponik, Sullivan County, N. Y.

The past season has been a strenuous one, but the coming one will far surpass any season this teacher has ever had, as many applications are coming in, not only from Brooklyn and vicinity, but from Western and Southern States as well.

Century Opera House Magazine.

The first issue of the Century Opera House Magazine for the season 1914-15 has just appeared and speaks well for the new editor who will have charge of it this season. This issue contains fifty pages of reading and advertising matter, including a program of the first week of the Century season, photographs and biographical sketches of the Century artists, and other items of interest. It has a neat and tasteful cover and is in every way handsomer than former issues.

FRANCES INGRAM
Management: SHAW & TUCKER Orchestra Building, Chicago

GEORGE SHEFFIELD, Tenor
Management Concert Direction M. H. HANSON,
437 Fifth Ave., New York.
Private address: 4654 Beacon St., Chicago, Ill.

GLENN DILLARD GUNN
PIANIST
421-424 Fine Arts Building - - Chicago, Ill.

LEON SAMETINI
Holland's Greatest VIOLINIST
Management ALMA VOEDISCH
3941 Rokeby Street, Chicago

Mrs. STACY WILLIAMS Voice Production :: Repertoire ::
In Europe June 15 to September 15
For information, prospectus, etc., address
Mrs. Williams, 405-406 Kimball Hall - Chicago, Ill.

Lucille STEVENSON SOPRANO
Address:
4439 Berkeley Avenue, Chicago
Telephone, Oakland 1570

LECTURES, OPERA TALKS, AND PIANO LECTURE RECITALS
By
HENRIETTE WEBER
Also the Larkin-Weber Recitals
THE LARKIN-WEBER RECITALS
Are Creating a SENSATION
Engagements booked in all leading cities
Address MISS H. WEBER, Auditorium Building, Chicago, Ill.
or Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway : New York

MARION GREEN BASSO CANTANTE
Auditorium Building, Chicago
Home Phone: Ravenswood 5774 Studio Phone: Harrison 4868

THOMAS N. MAC BURNEY BARITONE
Voice Production Song Recitals
Three years assistant to Frank King Clark
Suite 609 Fine Arts Building, Chicago, Ill.
Phone Harrison 6669

HERMAN DEVRIES
Formerly Baritone with the Metropolitan Opera House, New York; Covent Garden, London; Grand Opera and Opera Comique, Paris; Theatre Royal de la Monnare, Brussels, Etc.
VOCAL TEACHER
MRS. HERMAN DEVRIES
ASSOCIATE VOCAL INSTRUCTOR
Studios: 518-528 Fine Arts Building - - - Chicago, Ill.

BUSH TEMPLE CONSERVATORY
N. Clark St. and Chicago Avenue, Chicago
Kenneth M. Bradley, President
SUMMER SESSION
BEGINNING JUNE 22
Special Courses in MUSIC, Expression, Languages, Public School Music, Dramatic Art
Conducted by an unsurpassed faculty, including:
Mme. Julie Rive-King Harold von Miskwitz Mme. Justine Wagner
Guy Herbert Woodard Frank B. Webster Edgar A. Nelson
Grace Stewart Potter Eleanor Smith Edward Dvorak
Miss Julia Riley Ernest O. Todd Adelaide B. Lewis
The management announces the exclusive teaching engagement of the world's most famous baritone: CHARLES W. CLARK
Students wishing private lessons with any of the above named Artists should make application in advance.
The Bush Temple Conservatory is the only music school in Chicago which has its own Dormitory.
Reservation of rooms must be made in advance.
For Catalog and Special Literature Address: Edward H. Schwenker, Sec'y

Over 3,000 Persons Hear Alice Nielsen.

By reading the appended press criticisms one can appreciate, in a small degree the enthusiastic welcome extended to Alice Nielsen, the soprano, on the occasion of her appearance at the Chautauqua concert in Charles City, Iowa, August 6:

Almost every seat in the vast auditorium was filled, the people having come from far and near to hear the concert given by Alice Nielsen, the famous soprano. At 8.30 the prima donna made her appearance on the stage, and was given an ovation by the expectant audience. Any effort to put into cold type any conception of Miss Nielsen's singing would be like an effort to describe the perfume of the rose, so we refrain.

Miss Nielsen is a charming lady who sings with such ease and freedom from affectation that she is at once taken into the hearts of her hearers. Last evening she responded most graciously to the demands made upon her by the enthusiastic audience, singing at various times: "Sweet Genevieve," "From the Land of the Sky Blue Water" and "The Last Rose of Summer."

The program proper was made up of groups of English, German and Italian songs, all of which were sung with a perfection that left nothing to be desired in their rendering.

Miss Nielsen's concert can be set down as one of the distinct and decided successes of the Chautauqua period.—The Daily Intelligencer, Charles City, Ia., August 6, 1914.

Over 3,000 people had the extreme pleasure of listening to Alice Nielsen, in grand concert, last evening. From the opening number until the closing one, Miss Nielsen held this vast audience spellbound. To attempt to describe the wonderful voice of the singer, to portray her rare personality and graceful charm, lies beyond the power of the visitor and mere words would be inadequate indeed.

Never have the people of Charles City and vicinity had the opportunity of hearing so sweet and clear a soprano voice combined with power, and Miss Nielsen will be heard in but four Chautauquas, and this was her first engagement along this line.

This musical event will long remain in the minds of the hearers and fortunate were those who took advantage of this chance to hear America's greatest living soprano singer. Perfect satisfaction was expressed on all sides, and the management are to be congratulated upon their happy choice in selecting Miss Nielsen to charm the Charles City Chautauquans.—Daily Press, Charles City, August 6, 1914.

Nelson and His Band Are Popular.

To play to over one million people during a series of seventy-two concerts is a record that any concert organization can be proud of, and one that very few can boast of. This record has been established by Nelson and his Band, of Minneapolis, Minn., at Lake Harriet Roof Garden during the past season, and prospects were said to bid fair to break this record by many thousands when the final concert was given by this band September 6. The attendance for this season, up to within two weeks of the close, totaled 1,178,000. This year has marked the sixth consecutive season of Nelson at Lake Harriet, and his popularity as a conductor, and his symphonic programs appealed to the public to such an extent that the huge ampitheatre was filled long before the programs began.

Mr. Nelson has demonstrated his ability as a conductor by presenting for his patron's approval, and scoring a tremendous success during the past season, symphonies Nos. 3, 5 and 6, Tschaikowsky; "New World" symphony, Dvorák; sixth symphony, Beethoven; fourth symphony, Haydn; "Rustic Wedding" symphony, Goldmark, and Handel's "The Messiah, with the solo parts taken by instrumental soloists, and choral parts taken by the entire band.

Conductor Nelson has gone far out of the beaten and traditional paths in making up his programs, and has proven that symphonies properly selected and arranged can be played with artistic effect by his band, and the ever increasing appreciation as shown by the audiences have fully justified his departure as unconventional as it may seem. Conductor Nelson has raised his band to such a standard as to be compared with the best there is in band music, and has during past years secured as assisting soloists world famed artists like Florence Macbeth, Esther Osborne, Hannah Butler, Ralph Errolle, Cora Kempre, Ross Millhouse, Miles B. Sery, and many other soloists, both vocal and instrumental. Mr. Nelson has, by dint of conscientious work, reached the topmost rung of the ladder, and with his artistic organization is recognized as one of the leading conductors of today.

NELSON AND HIS BAND.

Musical Tennis Players.

The accompanying snapshot shows Edna Gunnar Peterson, pianist, of Chicago, enjoying a game with Herbert Satterly Ullmann. It was taken in Douglas, Mich., at Mrs. Leach's private tennis court, where Miss Peterson spent part of her vacation. Miss Peterson spent three weeks at Douglas, visiting one week at a time at the summer home of Mrs. Nelson McClary, of Oak Park, Ill.

EDNA GUNNAR PETERSON AND HERBERT SATTERLY ULLMANN AT DOUGLAS, MICH.

Miss Peterson expects a very active season during 1914-15, which has been booked by Gertrude V. O'Hanlon, her manager.

George Dostal's Asbury Park Success.

The Bohemian tenor, George Dostal, has added another victory to his list in the American concert field by appearing with marked success at two out of the three performances which composed the Elks' Music Festival held at Asbury Park, N. J., during the week of August 24.

The original arrangements for the music festivities, which were under R. E. Johnston's management, called only for Dostal's appearance on the Thursday evening program, together with Alice Nielsen, soprano; Emil Polak, pianist, and Nahan Franko, violinist. However, the tenor, at a very late hour, was called upon to substitute for the tenor, Florencio Constantino, who was to have appeared Saturday night. Dostal was no stranger to his Asbury Park audiences, as was demonstrated by the hearty recognition he was shown at their hands on both evenings. Being in splendid form, his singing was most inspiring. His reputation is rapidly spreading throughout the country, and if his work and artistic worth can be computed by what he accomplished on this occasion there is little doubt but what he will have no difficulty in living up to all the predictions made for him. His singing and English diction are superb and in his Italian arias ample proof of his fine Italian schooling is evidenced.

Ample proof of Dostal's resourcefulness and versatility was given when, with but one day's notice, he was able to step into Constantino's place and sing the latter's program. This feat excited comment and praise from both the Asbury Park public and newspapers, and he was styled as one of the most dependable artists ever heard in that place.

Miss Preston and Francis Rogers to Give Recital.

On Friday afternoon, September 11, a recital is to be given at the home of Mrs. J. J. Wysong, Ochre Point, N. Y., by Miss Preston and Francis Rogers, assisted by Mrs. George Peabody Eustis.

WALTER PETZET.

THE XAVER SCHARWENKA

Master School of Piano Playing and Teachers' Seminary

Faculty: Director, Prof. Xaver Scharwenka, Court Pianist to the Emperor of Austria-Hungary; Assistant Director, Prof. Walter Petzet; Principal Assistants: Miss Martha Siebold, Miss Isolde Scharwenka.

THE MASTER SCHOOL OF PIANO PLAYING is in no way connected with the Klindworth-Scharwenka Conservatory of Music, with which Prof. Xaver Scharwenka has severed his connection.

The new institution is a special school for pianoforte playing, and affords its pupils the opportunity to acquire a complete pianistic training for the concert stage, or to thoroughly equip themselves for the profession of piano instruction.

The first term begins September 1, 1914.

Any desired information, prospectus, etc., sent on application to

THE MASTER SCHOOL OF PIANO PLAYING
BLUMENTHALSTR. 17, BERLIN, W.

XAVER SCHARWENKA.

IN ALL THE KEYS.

John W. Nichols, the tenor, and his wife, concert pianist, send friends a post card picture, containing a series of miniature reproductions of "Summer Snaps," taken in the Lake Champlain region. They have had a very successful season as members of the teaching staff of the University of Vermont, and are now filling Chautauqua dates in central Pennsylvania. A lot of bookings for the early fall are already registered, for both artists and separately.

Otto Luebkert, manager of the Germania Life Insurance Company, Washington, D. C., sings regularly in church, confining his excellent abilities to that field. Several years ago he sang the title role in "Judas Maccabæus," when given by the Washington Choral Society. His fine business success has led to the neglect of his solo singing, a matter much regretted by all who know his splendid voice and interpretation.

Claude Warford returned to New York last week, en route from Lincolnville Beach, Maine, to Asbury Park, N. J. He discovered that some one had been in his apartment, and had stripped his dressing room not only of his clothing, but of numerous other articles. The only thing remaining was a pillow case, into which were incongruously thrown a bathrobe, two silk vests, a bath sponge, clothes brushes, and other small articles. Mr. Warford is congratulating himself that he had a well stocked wardrobe with him, and especially his valuable collection of scarf-pins. Fortunately, and strange to say, no studio ornaments had been molested. "And now," said Mr. Warford, "that the 'horse' is stolen I've had a special lock put on the door."

C. Wenham Smith, the Newark (N. J.) organist; Mrs. Smith, and their daughter, Ethel Cecelia Smith, the violinist, are all still in Europe.

James Sauvage, the Newark (N. J.) baritone and teacher, is also in Europe.

Professor Frysinger, of the music department Nebraska State University, gave an organ recital in the Methodist Episcopal Church, Thursday evening, August 20, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society.

Lotta Ashby Othick, who for a number of years was a favorite in musical circles, returned recently to Tacoma, Wash., for a month's visit with friends before leaving for New York to continue her musical work. Mrs. Othick was a member of the St. Cecilia and Ladies' Musical Clubs, and her soprano voice was in much demand for concert and church work.

Emily Frech Barnes, of Washington, D. C., has continued her teaching of singing and elocution at her studio during the summer months, being among the few teachers who conduct summer classes. She has gone to Eaglesmere, Pa., for a month's vacation preparatory to resuming her work in September.

Georgia E. Miller, director of the Virgil Clavier Piano School, is spending the remainder of the summer and early fall at Luxleigh Cottage, Blue Ridge Summit, Pa.

Martin Richardson, son of Mary M. Richardson, of Arcola, Minn., on the St. Croix, recently spent a few days in St. Paul as the guest of George Fairclough. Mr. Richardson, who was a former solo boy in the choir of St. John's in St. Paul, has been studying in Italy for several years and recently returned to this country. While in Italy Mr. Richardson had success both in concert and opera. He made his debut in opera at Florence last May, singing the leading tenor role in "Don Pasquale." In June he went to London, where he sang at three important private musicales.

The camp meeting services at Ocean Grove recently were enlivened by the good singing of the Bethany Quartet, of Philadelphia, which gave several selections, and the Seaville Quartet, which sang at the young people's services.

On Sunday, August 24, the Bloomfield Liedertafel held a concert under the direction of Prof. John C. Vogel in Schuetzen Park, near Millvale, Pa. On August 26, singers in the various German societies connected with the Liedertafel gathered for an informal concert, at which the best German music was rendered. Richard Claus, a member of the Bloomfield society, was in charge.

Plans are now under way in the Stough evangelistic campaign camp in Harrisburg, Pa., for the organization of a gigantic 1,500 voice choir which will lead the singing in the tabernacle meetings during the big November campaign. Charles F. Clippinger, 224 Emerald street, musical director of the First United Brethren Church, has been made chairman of the music committee, and under his direction efforts are being made toward the organization of the big chorus. Men and women from every musical organization of the city, church choirs, Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor societies will be invited to join the chorus. Invitations will be sent to members of secular musical organizations as well. In addition to the organization of the chorus Mr. Clippinger will have under his direction the forming of a great orchestra and he will send invitations to instrumental players throughout the city and its vicinity. Not only will singers and players from the churches co-operating in the campaign be included in the invitations, but those from all churches in Harrisburg.

An interesting musical program was given recently at the First Presbyterian Church, of Two Harbors, Minn. Local musical talent participated in an interesting program, which opened with an organ prelude by Saint-Saëns.

Katherine Allan Lively, pianist, assisted Florida Parrish, vocalist, in entertaining the guests of Laura Stevens Boone at a delightful morning musicale, given recently in Houston, Tex.

Weekly concerts have been a feature this summer at Knoxville, Tenn. These concerts have been given by the Y. M. C. A. Orchestra of that city, under the direction of Henry J. Volz, the office of concertmaster being filled by Joseph Durish. The orchestra has been assisted by different soloists, one of whom was Harriet Brake, vocalist.

An application for a charter by the Philadelphia (Pa.) Operatic Society was filed recently, the object being given as "promoting the rendition of grand opera in English and other musical and artistic productions of all kinds."

Will C. Macfarlane, municipal organist of Portland, Me., played the following program at an organ recital at City Hall Auditorium: "March Militaire," Gounod; Melody in F, Rubinstein; symphonic tone poem, "Finlandia," Sibelius; intermezzo, "Cavalleria Rusticana," Mascagni; Elsa's procession, "Lohengrin," Wagner; overture, "Oberon," Weber; "Largo," Handel, and "Storm Fantaisie," Macfarlane.

Some twenty-five pupils of Walter B. Graham, Omaha, Neb., recently gave a costume program, made up of scenes from "Bohemian Girl," "Trovatore," and arias were given (also in costume) from "Madame Butterfly," "Tales of Hoffmann," "Lohengrin," "Magic Flute" and "Pagliacci."

A pupil who has but recently come under the care of Stanley Adams, the Toronto pedagogue, is Tandy McKenzie, of Honolulu, whose beautiful tenor voice and the ukalele (a native instrument on which he plays his own accompaniments) are very popular with his new friends.

Members of the Mobile (Ala.) Gesangverein Frohsinn recently presented J. M. Friedman, the genial caterer of the society, with a handsome gold pin. Mr. Friedman, who is half way between sixty and seventy years of age, serves the Frohsinn without remuneration because he loves music, and though he is no musician, is one of the most discerning and appreciative of hearers at the weekly rehearsals and quarterly concerts of the society.

William Nelson Burritt began his season of voice instruction at his handsome and conveniently located studio, 128-A East Nineteenth street, New York, on September 7 with a large enrollment of pupils.

Eleanor Patterson, the American contralto, was recently the recipient of a flattering letter of praise from Ella Wheeler Wilcox, who heard her sing. The letter was in part as follows:

The Bungalow,
Granite Bay, Short Beach, Conn.

Your splendid voice is still ringing in my ears. It is phenomenal! With your striking and magnetic personality you will surely have the world at your feet.

Cordially,
ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

WANTED

WANTED—A good teacher of piano, whose studio is in New York, and who has studied with Monsieur Isidore Philipp in Paris; a teacher who not only uses the French method, but prepares pupils for study with M. Philipp and one thoroughly prepared to teach, wanted by a young pupil who studied in Paris with this teacher. Address "R. H. A.," care MUSICAL COURIER, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.

WANTED—Experienced lady harpist, soloist, church, symphony orchestra, concert. Will consider good engagement. Only reliable managers need answer. Address "Harpist, L. F.," 29 East Twenty-ninth street, Box 1211, New York.

FOR SALE

FOR SALE—One Conn Booster Trumpet Cornet, brass, in case. One Wurlitzer American Cornet, silver plated, gold mounted, in case. One mahogany upright Conrad piano used about three weeks, guaranteed for twenty-five years (ask your dealer about Conrad pianos), all guaranteed good as new or your money back. Price very low on either instrument. $250.00 takes the lot. Write today. Albert Petran, Neffs, Ohio.

CENTURY OPERA HOUSE
Central Park West, at 62d and 63d Sts., New York
'Phone Columbus 8800
LYCEUM AND CONCERT HALL
To Rent for Concerts, Recitals, Lectures, Theatricals, etc.
For Terms and other Particulars Address
LYCEUM DEP'T
CONCERT BUREAU
Leading Artists of the Century are available for Concerts in Cities not more than 1000 Miles from New York. Address CONCERT DEP'T

BEECHER BURTON
TENOR
615 ORCHESTRA BUILDING, CHICAGO, ILL.

ZOE FULTON
PRIMA DONNA CONTRALTO
Direction: Marc Lagen, 500 5th Ave., New York
Per. Add.: Pennsylvania College for Women, Pittsburg, Pa.

SARTO
Bass-Baritone
(Late Metropolitan Opera Company)
Management: WALTER ANDERSON, 171 West 57th Street, New York

RUDOLPH REUTER
PIANIST
624 S. MICHIGAN AVE., CHICAGO

S. Costantino
Italian Vocal Instructor
Pietro A. YON
Concert Organist and Composer
STUDIO 853 AND 836 CARNEGIE HALL, NEW YORK

EMMA NAGEL SOPRANO
SEASON 1914-15
Management, WALTER ANDERSON, - New York

GAMBLE CONCERT PARTY
CHARLES WILSON GAMBLE, Pilot
BOOKING EVERYWHERE
East End, Pittsburg, Pa.

WALTER ANDERSON ANNOUNCES LOUISE VAN OGLE
In Illustrated
"TALKS ON MODERN OPERAS"
Assisted by EMMA NAGEL, Soprano
Western Tour, January-February, 1915
Address 171 West 57th Street - - - New York

Morse - Rummel
VIOLINIST
Endorsed by Nikisch, Damrosch, Ysaye, Godowsky
DIRECTION - Walter Anderson, 171 West 57th Street - NEW YORK

MUSICAL COURIER

A WEEKLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND ITS ALLIED ARTS

Thirty-fifth Year | Price 15 Cents | Subscription $5.00 | Foreign, $6.25 Annually

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 11 | NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1914 | WHOLE NO. 1799

MARGARETE MATZENAUER
Dramatic Soprano

INTERNATIONAL MUSICAL AND EDUCATIONAL AGENCY.
Church, Concert and School Positions Secured.
MRS. BABCOCK.
Carnegie Hall, New York.
Telephone: 2434 Columbus.

HELENE BARTENWERFFER
MEZZO SOPRANO VOCAL INSTRUCTOR.
111 W. 74th St. Tel. 4934 Columbus.

M. F. BURT SCHOOL
Sight-Singing, Ear-Training, Musical Stenography. Normal courses in Public and Private School Music. Special coaching for church trials.
New York School, 1202 Carnegie Hall.
Address Brooklyn School, 1202 Lefferts Place.

PAUL SAVAGE,
VOICE CULTURE.
803 Carnegie Hall,
New York.

H. RAWLINS BAKER,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Studio, 622 Aeolian Hall.
Tel. 8296 Bryant.

MAX KNITEL-TREUMANN,
BARITONE.
Voice Culture—Art of Singing.
Studio, Carnegie Hall.
Mail address: Fifth Ave., New Rochelle, N. Y.

Mrs. Henry Smock Miss Susan S.
B O I C E.
VOCAL STUDIOS.
43 E. 27th St., N. Y., Tel. 1977 Mad. Sq.

EUGENIE PAPPENHEIM,
THE CELEBRATED PRIMA DONNA.
Voice Culture in All Its Branches.
The Evelyn, 101 W. 78th St., New York City.
Telephone: 7048 Schuyler.

MARY HISSEM DE MOSS,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
106 W. 90th St. Phone, 3552 River.
Exclusive m'g't of Haensel & Jones, Aeolian Hall.

MME. MINNA SCHLOEMANN,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION—Serious Pupils Only.
10 Manhattan Ave., N. Y. Phone, 4845 Riverside.

HENRY T. FLECK,
Head Musical Department,
Normal College, New York.
69th St. and Park Ave. - - - Tel. 2443 Plaza.

FLORENCE E. GALE,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals and Concerts.
Instruction, Leschetizky Method.
151 W. 70th St. Telephone, 5331 Columbus.

HATTIE CLAPPER MORRIS,
TEACHER OF SINGING IN ALL BRANCHES.
1730 Broadway, Cor. 55th St.
Telephone, 4117 Columbus.

ZIEGLER INSTITUTE OF NORMAL SINGING
Mme. Anna E. Ziegler, Director.
Met. Opera House Bldg., 1425 B'way, New York.
Tel. 1274 Bryant.

HENRIETTA SPEKE-SEELEY,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
1425 Broadway—Metropolitan Opera House.
Residence, 2184 Bathgate Ave. Phone, 3967 Tremont

DUDLEY BUCK,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
Aeolian Hall, 33 West 42nd St.
Phone, 7408 Bryant. New York.
Special Summer Course.

GRAND CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC,
113 West 85th St., New York. Tel. 4152 Schuyler.
Special course for teachers and professionals. Degrees granted. Thorough course for beginners.
Dr. B. Eberhard, Pres. (Thirty-ninth year.)

ELIZABETH TOPPING
PIANO INSTRUCTION.
254 W. 104th St. - - - New York.

ELIZABETH K. PATTERSON,
SOPRANO. TEACHER OF SINGING.
Studio: 257 West 104th Street.
'Phone, 8101 Riverside.

JANET BULLOCK WILLIAMS,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
122 Carnegie Hall.

JAMES P. DUNN,
Composer and Organist, St. Patrick's Church, Jersey City. Instruction, Piano, Organ. Theory and Sight Singing. (Specialty Gregorian Chant and Catholic Church Music.) Phone, 782-R Bergen.

SIGNOR FILOTEO GRECO,
THE ART OF SINGING.
Studio: 62 East Thirty-fourth Street, New York.
Telephone: 4879 Murray Hill.

LOUISE KELLOGG,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
1211 Carnegie Hall. Tel. 1350 Columbus.

MORITZ E. SCHWARZ,
Ass't Organist, Trinity Church, New York.
RECITALS AND INSTRUCTION.
Address Trinity Church, New York.

ADOLF GLOSE,
Concert Pianist, Piano Instruction. Coach for professional and advanced singers.
Residence studio: 81 Morningside Ave., City.
'Phone, 2193-J Morningside.

LISBET HOFFMANN,
PIANIST.
12 Pierce Street, Stapleton (Staten Island).

WILBUR A. LUYSTER,
SIGHT SINGING SPECIALIST.
(Galin-Paris-Chevé Method).
Instructor 8 years at Metropolitan Opera Co. All Singers taught to read (church or otherwise), Rhythm, Ear Training, Supervisors' Course.
Tuesday and Friday Classes. 64 E. 34th St., N. Y.
Tel. 5469-J Bedford. 127 Quincy St., Brooklyn.

Miss EMMA THURSBY,
SOPRANO.
Will receive a limited number of pupils.
Residence, 34 Gramercy Park.
Phone, 3187 Gramercy. New York City.

BRUNO HUHN,
231 West 96th St., New York.
STYLE. DICTION, REPERTOIRE, ETC., TO VOCALISTS.
Will teach during the Summer.

DR. A. MADELEY RICHARDSON
Member of the Faculty of Institute of Musical Art.
VOICE PRODUCTION AND TONE-PLACING.
Teacher of singing, from the earliest stages to Opera, Oratorio and Recital work.
Tel. Morningside 7587. Studio, 490 Riverside Drive.

JOHN W. NICHOLS,
TENOR.
330 W. 58th St., N. Y. C. Phone, 1434 Columbus.

CLAUDE WARFORD,
TENOR.
Metropolitan Opera House.
1425 Broadway, New York.

CARL M. ROEDER,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
607 Carnegie Hall and 423 East 140th St.

FREDERICK E. BRISTOL,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
No. 143 West 42d St., New York.

MR. CHARLES LEE TRACY,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Certified Teacher of the Leschetizky Method.
Studio: Carnegie Hall, - - New York City.

JOSEPH PIZZARELLO,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Voice Developed—Style, Opera.
851-852 Carnegie Hall, New York.

WILLIAM NELSON BURRITT,
VOICE SPECIALIST
AND REPERTOIRE BUILDER.
128A East 19th Street.
Tel. Gramercy 3848.

WALTER L. BOGERT,
Ex-President of N. Y. State Music Teachers' Ass'n.
TEACHER OF SINGING.
Baritone. Lectures and Recitals.
130 Claremont Ave., New York. Tel. 291 Morn'side.
Tuesday and Friday, Aeolian Hall.

Piano Instruction Telephone
Theory of Music 7280 Schuyler
CARL HAHN,
MUSICAL DIRECTOR.
Studio: 172 West 79th St. (The Avonel).

F. W. RIESBERG,
INSTRUCTION—PIANO, ORGAN, HARMONY.
With the "Musical Courier"; Sec'y Manuscript Society; Organist Central Baptist Church, New York. 439 Fifth Ave.; Tel. 4292 Murray Hill.
Residence, Park Hill, Yonkers, N. Y.

JESSIE DAVIS,
PIANIST.
Concerts—Recitals—Lessons.
Studio: 701 Pierce Bldg., Boston.

CARL FIQUÉ, Piano
KATHERINE NOAK-FIQUE,
Dramatic Soprano
FIQUE MUSICAL INSTITUTE,
128 DeKalb Avenue, Brooklyn.

Miss GENEVIEVE BISBEE,
—Leschetizky Method—
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
A limited number of resident pupils received.
[illegible] East 60th St. 'Phone, 6109 Plaza.

WARD LEWIS,
ACCOMPANIST—With Mr. David Bispham season 1914. With Riheldaffer-Gailey Co. touring Summer 1914.
547 Riverside Drive, New York.
Phone, 3753 Morningside.

ALICE GARRIGUE MOTT,
ART OF SINGING.
172 West 79th St., New York.

ESPERANZA GARRIGUE,
ART OF SINGING.
Heathcote Hall, 609 West 114th St., New
Tel. 7814 Morningside.
(Bet. Broadway and Riverside Drive.)

MRS. WILLIS E. BACHELL
TEACHER OF SINGING.
22 East 33d St., New York C

MME. EMMA A. DAMBMANN,
(Mrs. Hermann G. Friedmann.)
CONTRALTO.
Vocal Instruction, Concerts.
Residence Studio, Hotel Calumet
Phone: Columbus 1628. 340 West 57t

THE NEW YORK INSTITUTE
VIOLIN PLAYING, PIANO
VOCAL CULTURE, 230 East 62d
Complete musical education given to stu from the begining to the highest perfection.
F. & H. CARRI, Direct

MARY T. WILLIAMSON,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals, Concerts, Instruction.
Leschetizky Method. 21 East 75th St.
'Phone, 1302 Lenox.

MR. AND MRS. THEO. J. TOEDT
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Home Studio: 163 East 62d St., New Y

T. TERTIUS NOBLE,
ORGANIST AND MASTER OF THE CH
Lessons in Organ, Theory and Composit
St. Thomas' Church, Fifth Ave. and 53d

VON DOENHOFF,
VOICE—HELEN. PIANO—ALB
1186 Madison Ave.
'Phone: 1332 Lenox.

DANIEL VISANSKA, VIOLINIS
Nine years of successful teaching and concer in Berlin. Will accept engagements and a li number of pupils.
Address: 25 West 126th St., New Yorl
Phone, Harlem 3427.
[In Philadelphia Mondays. Address 1821 mond St.]

ELENA DE OLLOQUI,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
111 East 62d St., New York. Tel., 2285

MME. LISETTE JOSTY-HAMMON
"Voice-placing and Singing" through "Cor
Italian Enunciation."
Metropolitan Opera House Bldg.,
1425 Broadway, New York.

HERBERT WILBER GREENE
SCHOOL OF SINGING.
Director of the Brookfield Summer School of Si
701 Carnegie Hall, N. Y. City.

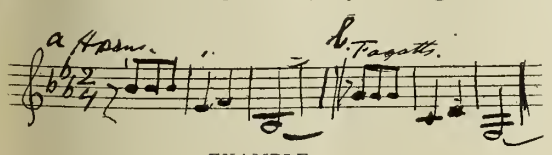
MUSICAL COURIER

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 11. NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1914. WHOLE NO. 1799.

THE ART OF CONDUCTING.

As Exemplified in the Achievements of Arthur Nikisch.

BY EDGAR STILLMAN KELLEY.



It is said that, once upon a time, when the Persian embassy were guests of the London authorities, they were treated to the production of a standard opera at Covent Garden. This form of art served more as a bewilderment than an amusement. It was but natural that they were unable to follow the melodies, while their efforts to compute the number of notes played and sung were likewise fruitless. Nevertheless the endeavor to amuse the Orientals was not altogether futile, for they manifested great interest in the movements of the various musicians, especially those of the mysterious man in the midst of the orchestra who performed with a stick upon an invisible instrument.

ARTHUR NIKISCH.

We smile at the quaint conceit and yet it touches the very heart of the subject with which we are now concerned—the mystery of the conductor's art. To many of the multitude it seems an easy matter thus to play upon an impalpable something, merely by moving one's arms through space. It obviously requires no five finger exercises or scale practice; neither painful stopping of the strings, nor patient drawing of the bow; no long sustained breaths with cautious lip pressure to secure correct intonation and well modulated nuances; in fact not even the wrist exercises incidental to the functions of the kettle drummer. Indeed so apparently free from all disagreeable details is the mechanical technic required by the orchestral director, that we are reminded of the old saying that "when one can neither play nor sing, he becomes a conductor."

EXAMPLE 1.

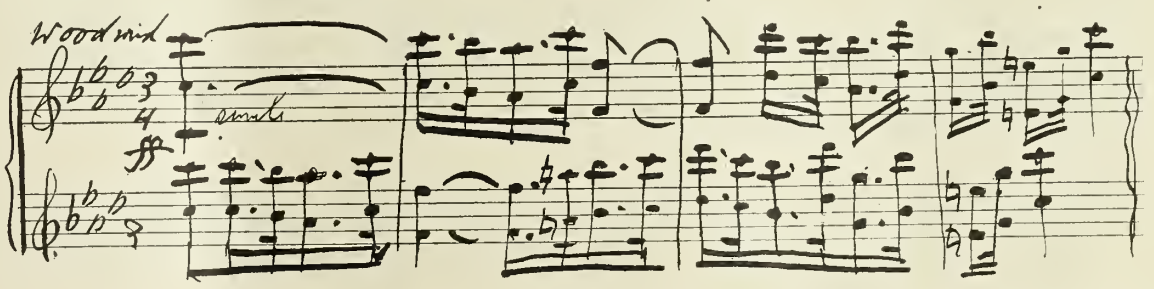
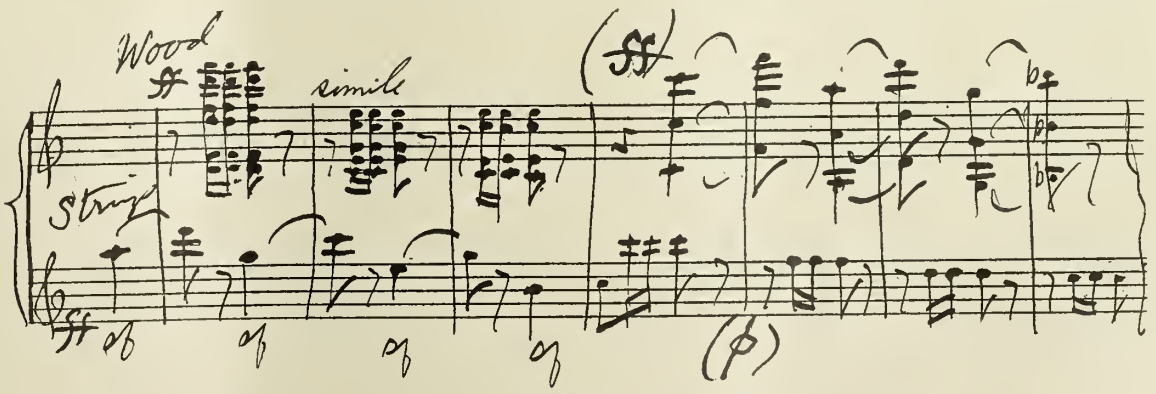
In another respect also does the activity of the man with the "time stick" differ from that of the executants. A pianist or violinist is often at the mercy of the instrument he employs, and we can instantly tell when an inferior quality of tone-producing medium is substituted for one of the first rank. There are no such differences in the values of conductor's batons for the same instrument may at one time seem like a bungler's bludgeon, at another like a friendly guide, and again like a wizard's wand. It goes without saying, therefore, that the entire secret of success lies in the manner in which the director's staff is manipulated, and this depends upon the inherent talent, training, opportunities for individual development, and the conscientious exercise of all those faculties, emotional, analytical and critical that are indispensible to the make-up of a music leader.



During the past few decades the conductor has become more and more a factor to be reckoned with. His activity has so gained in intellectual importance, that from the foot-stamping time-beater of the age of Lully, he is now regarded more as a virtuoso and an arbiter of taste. Indeed it is in his power to make an unknown composer, or to break a known one.

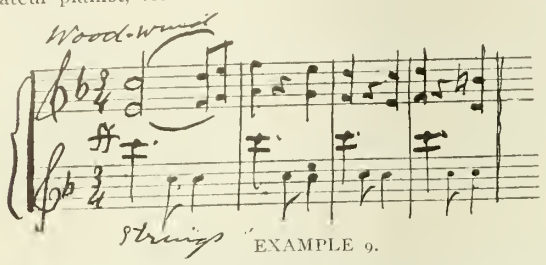
I have long intended putting on paper a few ideas concerning the mission of the conductor, his duties and his privileges, but only recently when chance brought me into communication with Arthur Nikisch, were these fugitive concepts and impressions brought to a focus. It was gratifying to have certain impressions confirmed and illustrated by the personal experience of so great an exponent of his art, and where other views of mine seemed too radical, to have them gently toned down to normal proportions. Especially valuable has been the acquisition of new material illustrating the principles at work in the revision of orchestral scores, in order to gain a truer insight into the original intentions of this or that composer concerning the building up of his tone-structures.



EXAMPLE 2.

In order to understand the work of an artist we must know something of his antecedents and of his early training, as well as of his later career. M. Taine, in one of his lectures on art, said to his class: "Young gentlemen, in order to produce work of the highest order you must be born geniuses. This is a matter that concerns your parents, not me. I can merely indicate the manner in which you should pursue your studies."

EXAMPLE 3.



EXAMPLE 4.

As the art work of Nikisch is to serve as the means of illustrating the various points touched upon in this essay, it will be necessary to give certain biographical data which will facilitate our comprehension of his taste, culture and attainments.

August Nikisch, the privatc secretary (Ober-Buchhalter) of the Baron Sina, was an ardent lover of music. As an amateur pianist, violinist and cellist, he derived the keenest pleasure from the performance of chamber music of the best masters. When, therefore, he married Luise von Robasz, it was not strange that he should have expressed the earnest desire that their first son might become a professional musician. But this wish was not to be realized; on the contrary, the child showed a direct disinclination to study, as did also a daughter somewhat younger. When, therefore, the second son, Arthur, was born, October 12, 1855, in Lebenyi Szent Miklos in Hungary, the father determined to forestall further disappointment by not permitting him to study music. Even here the parent was fortunately thwarted. This inherent fondness for the art being unabated, he continued to invite artists of the first rank to his dwelling, among them men like Hellmesberger, Rover and Door. When, therefore, at the age of three and a half years the child, Arthur, had the opportunity of hearing a string quartet, he was completely fascinated, and thus was awakened the longing to study music. The father revoked his decision and placed the child enthusiast in the care of Franz Prochazka, a leading teacher in Butschowitz, a small village in Moravia, whither in the meantime the family had moved.

EXAMPLE 9.

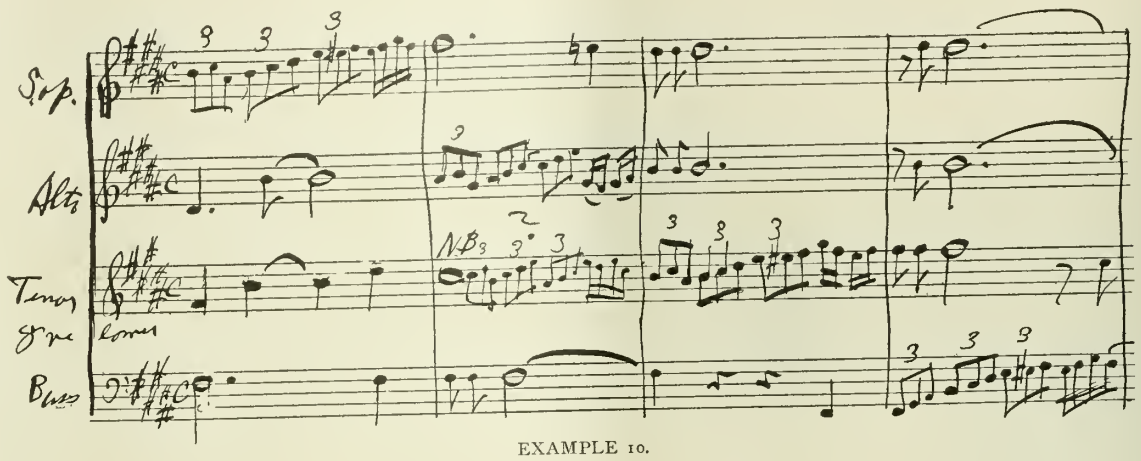
The incidents in the career of the infant phenomenon now follow in such rapid succession, and are of such unusual character that they read like the stories of the youthful Handel, Mozart or Liszt. And this is fortunate, for to have one with us in the flesh of whom such remarkable things are told gives us renewed confidence in those tales of the old masters, to which the action of time has imparted a semi-mythical hue. A few years ago when Berlin was besieged by a number of Wunder-Kinder, the veteran violinist Joachim was asked if he thought such precocity a favorable omen for the future career of the young candidates. The reply was, "All great artists were once Wunder-Kinder."



When only seven and a half years of age Arthur was taken to a neighboring town and listened for the first time to an orchestrion, which played the overture to the "Barber of Seville," and an elaborate fantasia on "Robert le Diable," both of which the child copied from memory, and this after having studied but a year and a half, an achievement truly Mozartian. So rapid were the lad's strides that at the age of eight he was playing in concerts the virtuoso transcriptions of Thalberg with such success that the father consented to the son's desire to become an artist. Accordingly at the age of eleven he entered the conservatory at Vienna, where from the outset his unusual gifts created a sensation, for so advanced was he in musical theory that he was placed in the highest class of composition, among students eighteen to twenty-two years of age. As a further proof of his precocity may be cited his wisdom in selecting the studies essential to the attainments of his ultimate goal—a post as musical conductor. He devoted himself especially to the violin under Hellmesberger, continuing his theory work under Dessoff and piano with Schenner.

Realizing the value of time the father engaged private instructors who took the young student through his academic courses in far less time than is usually consumed in the public schools. In the meanwhile Arthur became known as a star pupil in the conservatory, where his career was sensational to a degree. When thirteen years of age he earned the first prize (a silver medal) for composition, the second prize for violin playing, and the second prize for piano playing. At the age of eighteen Nikisch left the conservatory and as an especial distinction was allowed to conduct a movement of his own D minor symphony. Among the students in the orchestra who later became distinguished was Felix Mottl, who played the kettle drums. Mottl, like Anton Seidl and others, learned the tympanist's art in order to familiarize himself with the inner workings of the orchestra. In the spring of 1872 Richard Wagner visited Vienna and the students of the conservatory decided to present him with a silver cup. Nikisch was chosen as spokesman, and was received by the master with friendly enthusiasm, and replied in a speech in which he said: "It gives me the greatest satisfaction to see the youths with me, for this assures me of my final triumph!"

EXAMPLE 5.

EXAMPLE 10.

EXAMPLE 6.

EXAMPLE 7.

EXAMPLE 8.

A few weeks later came the celebration in Bayreuth of Wagner's birthday, when the corner stone of the Festspielhaus was laid. On this occasion it will be remembered the master conducted Beethoven's ninth symphony and other works. Among the first violins of the carefully selected orchestra were ten concertmasters from prominent court and city opera orchestras, led by the great Wilhelmj, and it was a proud moment for the youthful conservatory graduate to be numbered among the players, for as yet he was not a regular member of any orchestra. It is a genuine pleasure to hear Nikisch tell of Wagner's magnetic conducting, his eloquence at the rehearsal, explaining the meanings of the various passages of Beethoven's masterpiece and justifying his alteration of the orchestration (of which more later).

On New Year's Day, 1874, Nikisch was officially engaged as one of the members of the Vienna Court orchestra, and during the following three years enjoyed the privilege of playing under the best masters of the conductor's art, such as Herbeck, Dessoff, Rubinstein, Liszt and Brahms, and also Wagner again. Christmastide, 1877, Nikisch received an invitation from Angelo Neumann (then manager of the Leipsic Opera) to take a position as chorusmaster in that institution. Weaponed with the best recommendations from his Vienna teachers, the young director went to Leipsic and began his activity in February, 1877. His method of discharging his duties in the lighter operas inspired great confidence, and he was soon called upon to act as substitute for the first conductor, Sucher, in performances of "Tannhäuser" and "Walküre." Not long after Sucher was called elsewhere, and Nikisch fell heir to the musical throne at the age of twenty four. Thus early was his idea realized.

Undoubtedly the most valuable criticism, or rather, rhapsodical commentary, ever penned by a competent writer concerning the art of Nikisch was that which appears in the day book of Peter Tschaikowsky, written in 1887:

The Leipsic Opera may well be proud of its gifted young Kapellmeister who has made a specialty of the Wagnerian music drama. I heard there "Rheingold" and "The Mastersingers." The orchestra of the opera is the same as that of the Gewandhaus, consequently of the first rank. Although the orchestral performance under Reinecke's direction is difficult to improve upon, still one first obtains an accurate impression of orchestral perfection when the group of instrumentalists plays under the baton of the highly talented Kapellmeister, and even then are only the possibilities fully revealed when one listens to the performance of the difficult and complicated scores of Wagner conducted by such a wonderful master of his art as Herr Nikisch.

EXAMPLE 11.

His conducting has nothing in common with the effective and, in its way, inimitable manner of Hans von Bülow. In the same degree in which the latter is nervous, restless and effective through the eccentric methods he employs, Herr Nikisch is quiet, economical in regard to superfluous movement, but extraordinarily commanding, mighty and thoroughly self controlled. He does not merely direct, but yields himself up to a mysterious spell. One hardly notices him, for he makes no efforts to attract attention to himself, and yet nevertheless, one feels that the orchestral body, like one instrument in the hand of a remarkable master, is thoroughly under his control, willing and submissive.

This conductor is small of stature, a very pale young man, with beautiful poetic eyes that possess some fascinating power which compels the orchestra now to thunder like the trumpets of Jericho and then to die away in a breath depriving mysticism. And all this is accomplished without the auditor noticing the Kapellmeister who controls his orchestra like so many faithful servants.

In the winter of 1879-80 Nikisch acted as substitute for Reinecke at the Gewandhaus concerts. One memorable event was the production of Schumann's D minor symphony, on which occasion Frau Clara Schumann was present. After the concert she came to the young conductor and with deep emotion exclaimed: "Oh! if my poor Robert could have only heard this performance. He never had an idea that it could have sounded like that!"

In 1881 Nikisch conducted the Tonkünstler Versammlung in Magdeburg when Liszt's "Totentanz" for piano and orchestra (Martha Remmert, pianist) and Borodin's E minor symphony were among the novelties.

Another phase of the Leipsic period was Nikisch's participation in the founding of the Liszt Verein in 1885,

NORAH DREWETT
THE FAMOUS PIANIST
SEASON 1914-15
Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON : : : 437 Fifth Avenue, New York
STEINWAY PIANO USED

MRS. KING CLARK
Mezzo Soprano
American To
WHOLE SEASON 1914
Management, M. H. Ha
437 Fifth Ave. New

ucting the "Faust" and "Dante" symphonies. Indeed, ikisch has directed all the concerts of the society, giving e "Faust" symphony every other year.

In 1889 Nikisch was called to act as conductor of the oston Symphony Orchestra. His work in connection with is organization was a feature not only of the musical fe in the New England metropolis, but of all those cities sited by that orchestra, and deep regret was expressed y his many friends when he left in 1893 to accept a call the Buda Pesth Opera.

In 1895 he was engaged to lead the Gewandhaus conerts, which are still in his charge. From this time on his areer is too well known to call for comment, but for sake f completeness his connection with the Berlin Philharonic Orchestra should be noted. Not only has he led ie celebrated annual series of concerts given by this orhestra in the Imperial capital, but also those given in forgn lands. Furthermore he has been in intimate relationhip with the London Symphony Orchestra, with which e toured this country two years ago.

Through years of familiarity with Nikisch's activity in erlin I have had occasion to wonder at the enthusiasm e displayed when conducting works by composers of such idely divergent aims and ideals as Wagner and Brahms, eethoven and Strauss, Tschaikowsky and Reger. I ought if I could learn something of his early tastes and references, this might throw some light on his present ttitude. Learning that among the works that fascinated im as a child, the D minor string quartet of Schubert mpressed him most deeply, it would appear that the harnonic richness of the romantic school might lead him to nake propaganda for works of that class, but it seems not. Nikisch is neither a partisan nor a propagandist for any ndividual or cult. He says: "I recognize no school or endency (Richtung). When work interests me, be it vhat it may, I take it to myself, absorb its contents and give it again to the public, as though I were composing, nd I express through the medium of this or that passage ny own individual impressions and feelings."

This reminds one of Wagner's letter to Liszt, in which he tells the latter that in playing the C sharp minor quaret of Beethoven, he gave Wagner the impression that he (Liszt) was recomposing the work. This eclecticism is of as great advantage to the conductor as it is detrimental o the career of the composer. The conductor like the actor who can throw himself into the mood of the hero one night and the villain the next, has a great advantage over an artist who confines himself to the roles which are all of one type. The eclectic composer on the other hand, s liable to fall into the habit of jumbling up heterogeneous styles, such as writing one passage in the manner of Mozart and another in the idiom of Schumann or Wagner.

In this connection it may be said that in spite of his recognized qualification as a composer, Nikisch has exerted an unusual self control shown in his persistent abstinence from all efforts at creative art. When asked for his views on this subject he replied that there were several reasons why it was unwise for one to endeavor to combine the functions of composer and conductor. "In the first place I believe that composition is an art to which only the elect should devote themselves, and it is a childish ambition to combine such extremely exacting activities as the creation of music and its presentation to the public in orchestral and choral form. Granted that an artist possesses equal gifts as composer and conductor, the exhausting duties of rehearsing, say three hours in the morning and conducting concert or opera every evening, will claim his best energies. If he indulge in three hours of leisure in which to compose, the chances are that with his brain filled with all conceivable strains, he will find himself writing passages which on near inspection will prove to be from the symphony he rehearsed in the morning. I regard, therefore, the nickname 'Kapellmeister-musik' applied by Wagner to such products as thoroughly justified."

In an essay like the present, the writer is permitted to give individual views, and likewise his reasons for holding them. As chance has afforded me the unusual opportunity of verifying certain of my conceptions concerning conducting and the occasional revision of standard works, especially those of the classical symphonies, by conferring with a man of such phenomenal gifts and wide reaching experience as Arthur Nikisch, I will call attention of music lovers in general and young students in particular to the following paragraphs:

Essays appear from time to time dealing with the relative merits of objective and subjective interpretations of musical compositions. A subjective rendering of a given work is supposed to give the conductor carte blanche to interpolate such ideas concerning the piece in question as may occur to him. To such an extreme may this be carried that an executant sometimes claims he knows the import and the original intention of the composer better than the composer himself. The objective rendering is supposed to be such an one in which the player or director surrenders himself completely to the letter of the printed page. The extreme limit of this method is a servile following of every sign and mark as left by the composer. If we admit the presence of human shortcomings in the artist who is to give expression to human emotions and impressions, we are surely entitled to the liberty of studying the scores of the master with a view of ascertaining his true intent when writing it. Hence we have the right to assume that where two similar passages exist in the same piece, one thoroughly effective, the other less so, the composer has either planned the latter with undue speed, or the means for rendering it equal in quality to the first passage were inadequate.

Take, for instance, the announcement of the second theme in Beethoven's fifth symphony. On its first appearance it is given by the horn with full and resonant tones, but on its recurrence in the reprise it is uttered, or rather muttered, by the bassoons, whose tones in that register are soft and fluffy, wholly out of keeping with the noble character of this motive. See Example 1 (A and B).

Why this discrepancy in the instrumentation of so great a master? Because the natural horn, the only one in existence at that time, could give the tones of the theme when in the key of E flat (at a), but not in the key of C (at b).

In my treatise on "Chopin the Composer" I have gone into this matter at some length in the section on "Orchestral Experiments." Here it is shown that with the old horns and trumpets it was impossible to perform their of chromatic character, or motives that modulate this reason neither Chopin nor Schumann could have done full justice to their rich harmonic motives in giving them to the orchestra of that day. Illustrations are also given showing how, even with the simple themes of Beethoven, significant gaps occur, from time to time, in passages which now, thanks to the chromatic horns, would be filled out in a manner as homogeneous as euphonious.

In discussing this phase of classical orchestration with Nikisch and the advisability of remedying it, I was interested to note that he never hesitates to alter a phrase if it is done in the spirit of the composer. Thus in the above quotation from the fifth symphony, Nikisch adds the horn at No. 1 B. Had the chromatic horns been at Beethoven's disposal, he never would have dreamed of giving the motive to the bassoons. The reader will observe that in the series of modifications made by Nikisch in certain scores nothing is changed that is not absolutely necessary to give the passage as nearly as possible according to the conception of the composer. Hence the in-the distinguished young American tenor, has just returned from Paris and London, where he has been studying repertoire in Song and Oratorio. He will be available for Song-Recital, Concert and Oratorio engagements after October First.

"A VOICE OF EXQUISITELY BEAUTIFUL QUALITY"—Chicago Tribune

MR. ALBERT LINDQUEST

PERSONAL ADDRESS: 11251 SOUTH PARK AVENUE, CHICAGO

"A BORN INTERPRETER OF SONG"—Minneapolis Tribune

Following His Triumphant Tour of Australia

Harold Bauer

Returns for Another American Tour Which Will Open Oct. 15

Read the verdict of the Australasian critics who with the leading musical authorities of Europe and America unite in terming BAUER unqualifiedly the - - - - - Master Pianist

"Enthusiasm mounted higher and higher, so that at the close of the recital Mr. Bauer was cheered to the echo. As a pianist, he is a classicist, a great classicist, absolutely without the faintest hint of pose. Again, Mr. Bauer is a pianist of immense strength, a veritable Nietzschean superman."—Sydney Morning Herald.

"He is one of the finest artists ever heard in this part of the world. He is eminently virile and endows everything he touches with the life of his own magnetic personality."—Sydney Daily Telegraph.

"In every sense a great artist—and one of dominating personality—he is one of the very few pianists an intelligent lover of music cannot afford to leave unheard. From first to last yesterday's recital was memorable."—Melbourne Age.

"As regards the performance, it has not often been given to a Melbourne audience to listen to anything so artistically perfect. Everything played had the mark of flawless and individual artistry."—Melbourne Australasian.

"In Harold Bauer we have undoubtedly the greatest artist on the piano who has ever visited Australia. He is able to give complete satisfaction in a more varied way than any pianist we have heard out here. He comes as a revelation."—Melbourne Argus.

"He is a master alike of his art and of his instrument; his technic is masterly, and his exposition masterful. This epithet 'masterful' applies with remarkable fitness to Bauer's playing. He does not coax or wheedle; he compels. There is no effort about his method of compulsion. No finer or more convincing pianist has ever visited Australia."—Australian Musical News.

FOR TERMS AND DATES, ADDRESS

LOUDON CHARLTON, CARNEGIE HALL, N. Y.

MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

MARQUIS de TRABADELO
4, rue Marbeuf, Paris

Frederic Ponsot Sout professor de chant diplome par Mme. Mathilde Marchesi 151 Rue de Rome

Jean Verd PIANIST 35 Rue Vineuse - Paris

CAMILLE DECREUS
47 rue de la Tour :: :: :: PARIS

THUEL BURNHAM
PIANIST
IN PARIS ENTIRE SUMMER
119 Rue de la Tour (XVI) Paris

REGINA DE SALES TEACHER OF SINGING
Pupils Prepared for Opera, Oratorio, Concert
40 Rue de Villejust (Ave. du Bois de Boulogne), Paris.

VON STEEGE VOICE PLACEMENT
6, Chaussée de la Muette | Opera, Repertoire
Director, Compagnie Internationale Lyrique

E. BERTRAN 28, RUE COPERNIC PARIS
Specialist in Voice Placement Opera Concert

ELISABETH MACK Gesture Dramatic Action
LECTURE—RECITALS
French and English Readings America—October to April Address, care Musical Courier
(Especially for opera students) Courses Begin April 1, 1914 Paris, 43, rue Michel Ange

Wager SWAYNE Pianists Prepared for Public Appearances
39 Rue de Prony (Parc Monceau) - - PARIS

DELMA-HEIDE
30 Rue Marbeuf (Champs-Elysées,) Paris
Maestro di Bel Canto Italiano
Prepares Singers for Opera and Concert in Italian, French, German and English

Jean de Reszke
53 Rue de la Faisanderie
Paris

L. d'AUBIGNÉ
Teacher of Singing
30, AVENUE KLEBER :: :: PARIS

LAMPERTI-VALDA
SCHOOL OF SINGING
61 Avenue Niel - - - Paris, France
All Communications to Be Addressed to
MME. GIULIA VALDA

ARTHUR
ALEXANDER
TENOR
Teacher of Singing
14, rue Raynouard, Paris
American Tour Beginning
February 1915
Management M. H. HANSON

terpretations of Nikisch may be said to combine the best traits of the subjective and objective methods.

For convenience it would be well to divide the alterations made to render given passages more effective and in accord with the composer's wishes into four classes, as follows:

A. Changes in the expression marks.
B. Alterations of the phrasing, etc.
C. Improvements in the instrumentation.
D. Alterations of the notes themselves.

Example 2, from the first movement of the seventh symphony by Beethoven, is an illustration of how the trumpets and horns completely drown the violins in measures 2 and 3, if allowed to play as marked. Nikisch's remarkings are in brackets.

Example 3, from the slow movement of Beethoven's fifth symphony, shows how, by marking the violins and woodwind ff, the brass and kettledrums p, we have an interesting bit of imitation. How often is it heard?

Example 4, from the finale of the seventh symphony, shows how, by marking the woodwind (upper stave) in measures 4 to 7 ff and the strings p, we have an effective specimen of antiphonal work, which is otherwise lost.

The fugato in the scherzo of the C minor symphony contains a passage for basses where careful bowing greatly strengthens the effect, as shown in Example 5.

A very striking improvement in the phrasing greatly clarifies the final utterance of the main theme of the first movement of Beethoven's ninth symphony. In the tenth measure before the end, instead of four eighth notes with tremolo, which blur the entrance of the theme, Nikisch rearranges it as in Example 6.

In Examples 7 and 8 the passages for flutes and violins, which are to be played an octave higher, are indicated in brackets. In Beethoven's day this was impracticable, therefore he wrote in the lower octave. These illustrations are also from the above quoted movement.

Another passage from the scherzo of the same symphony is shown in Example 9. The upper stave indicates the melody given to the woodwind, which is doubled in the octave above and below. The strings take the figure shown in the lower stave in quintuple octaves. As written the melody is drowned by the strings, and to restore a balance between the two groups Wagner strengthened the wind parts by adding the horns. This was one of the modifications in Beethoven's scores introduced by the master at the time of the Bayreuth production above referred to. In fact, all the quotations from the ninth symphony have reference to alterations made at that time. Nikisch says that in this instance, even with the help of the horns, it is sometimes difficult to bring out the theme when the body of strings is large.

In Example 10, from the last movement of the same symphony, even the phraseology is altered. In the second measure at N. B. the tenor sustains C sharp instead of singing the figure, as originally written. This is in order to emphasize the imitation in the various voices, so that we have four regular entrances—soprano, alto, tenor, bass.

This system of carefully bringing out the various voices and securing a balance of parts has been applied by Nikisch to more recent composers, but be it remarked such amendments are made with great caution and commendable reluctance, as one might easily set an undesirable precedent by too many and ill advised alterations. The "Tannhäuser" overture was written for two natural and two chromatic horns. In the coda, where the "Pilgrims' Chorus" appears for the last time, the inner voice is taken by the chromatic horns. Nikisch causes the third and fourth horns to be doubled by the first and second, thus bringing out the beautiful inner part otherwise inaudible.

In the "Meistersinger" vorspiel, at the end of the working out section, the main theme is given to the brass in the inner register, while the strings perform the figurations in the higher register, frequently completely covering the theme. Nikisch strengthens this theme by adding the third trombone. See Example 11.

It will be seen from the foregoing that Nikisch's knowledge of composition is of great value to him in his preparation and rehearsal of all orchestral scores, and that these artistic results could only be attained through a happy combination of theoretical knowledge and practical accomplishment.

Becker Resumes Teaching.

Gustav L. Becker, chairman of the committee on standards of teaching of the New York State Music Teachers' Association, announces that he will resume his teaching, season 1914-15, September 22, at studio 19, Steinway Hall, 109 East Fourteenth street, New York.

Courses are planned for advanced piano students and for music teachers wishing further to perfect themselves. A special course is also provided for less advanced pupils under capable assistant teachers, trained by Mr. Becker, who uses his "superior graded course."

Circulars containing further information will be sent on application.

Mme. Koelling at Chickering Hall Opening.

Helene Koelling was the soprano soloist at the opening of the attractive new Chickering Hall, Lord & Taylor's, New York, on Thursday afternoon, September 10.

Mme. Koelling was heard in the "Traviata" (Verdi) aria, a group of English songs, and "Villanelle" (Dell' Acqua), in the last of which she pleased her audience particularly. In her Aeolian Hall (New York) recital last season, and other appearances, Mme. Koelling had already won the favor of a goodly coterie of New York lovers of vocal art. The delightful quality of her voice, its flexibility and clarity, and her excellent sense of interpretation, again pleased the good sized audience present, in which were noted well known musicians.

Salvatore Giordano sang the Verdi "Celeste Aida," from "Aida"; "For You Alone" (Geehle), and "Vieni" (Denza). Signor Giordano possesses a tenor voice of exceptionally good quality. He gave an encore from "Pagliacci."

The piano numbers were given by Wilhelm Spohr. These were: Chaconne, G major, Handel; prelude C minor, prelude, B flat major, op. 28; nocturne, D flat major, op. 27, No. 2, Chopin; rhapsodie, op. 79, No. 1, B minor, Brahms.

Sokoloff and Ariano in Joint Recitals.

Johanna Sherrick is arranging a series of sonata recitals for Nikolai Sokoloff, the young Russian violinist, and Adrian Ariano, the Italian pianist, to be given during January. Both Sokoloff and Ariano have the same lovely quality of tone and are particularly suited to each other's style of playing.

JOHN HEATH PIANIST AND TEACHER
(Care Paris Office, Musical Courier)

ARNOLDE STEPHENSON SOPRANO
Management: Daniel Mayer, London A. Dandelot, Paris

MARTINUS SIEVEKING Pianist
INSTRUCTION BY A NEW METHOD.
Pupils limited. Results guaranteed.
36, rue Theophile Gautier, Paris, XVI.

WILLY von SADLER
TEACHER OF SINGING (Italian Method)
STUDIO 23, rue de l'Université - - - PARIS

THE FRANCES E. DEVERELL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS
9 rue de Chaillot, Paris, France (Champs-Elysées). Exclusive residence district. Thorough French Course. Art lectures in great galleries. Season box at Opera. Travel classes. Address Mrs. G. J. Deverell, 109 Cedar St., Lapeer, Michigan, or Mlle. Deville Chabrol, 82 rue Vaneau, Paris.

GABRIEL LAPIERRE
(With Melba and Kubelik in America, Winter 1913-14)
Teacher of Singing;
15 bis Boul. Jules Sandeau - - PARIS

Mme. KATE ROLLA
Former Prima-Donna, Covent Garden, London; Imperial Opera House, Moscow and St. Petersburg; San Carlo, Naples; Metropolitan, New York, etc.
PUPIL OF MARCHESI
Voice Culture, Opera or Concert, Repertoire, Diction.
Paris Studio
Pupils taken En Pension. Address, 11 rue Scribe.

OSCAR SEAGLE
"New House," Bramber, Sussex, England, from June to September, 1914
IN AMERICA OCTOBER TO MAY, 1914-1915
Management: Loudon Charlton, Carnegie Hall, New York

SHEET MUSIC IN PARIS
The only store carrying a large stock of German, Russian, English and American music as well as French music.
MAX ESCHIG
TWO STORES—
13 Rue Lafitte (Near Boulevard des Italiens)
48 Rue de Rome (Near the Conservatory)

Helen Bixby Wetzel Now in London.

Helen Bixby Wetzel, the young prima donna, is now in London studying with Maestro Blackburn. Miss Wetzel took up her work in London with this teacher within twenty-four hours after she arrived there, which shows the ambition of at least one artist, notwithstanding the war. Miss Wetzel is not even thinking of the war, but works hard every day and sees nothing but success. If the war conditions permit, she will undoubtedly go back to Italy, for the fall season, where she has won much success in grand opera, and will carry out all original plans. Miss Wetzel and her teacher are delighted over the improvement in her voice. In a recent letter to her mother, who is in Indianapolis, she said: "I am utterly astounded at what I do every day and can hardly believe it is I who am singing. The voice is getting so big and full, and the high tones are going to be glorious." Her teacher intends to take her back to Italy and have her make her debut in two or three theatres and then go back to sing at Covent Garden.

HELEN BIXBY-WETZEL EN ROUTE FOR HER SECOND YEAR IN ITALY.

The accompanying picture of Miss Wetzel was taken en route for her second year in Italy. She is the young lady on the left.

Albert Lindquest's Return to America.

Albert Lindquest, the tenor who left last June for a year of study and concertizing in Europe, came back to Chicago last Monday, September 7. Mr. Lindquest called at the Chicago office of the MUSICAL COURIER on Tuesday, September 8. He left London Saturday, August 28, as a steerage passenger on the steamship Alaunia, arriving in Montreal on Saturday, September 5. The Alaunia, which was built for 1,200 passengers, left London with 2,000 on board. Mr. Lindquest left Paris (where he had been making his residence during his stay abroad) for London, and reached the English capital only two hours before sailing. To a representative of the MUSICAL COURIER Mr. Lindquest said that he saw Vanni Marcoux in uniform at the Café Paix in Paris. Other singers were seen by Mr. Lindquest walking around in their uniforms, several of them being officers. Mr. Lindquest added that he met, while in Paris, Constantin Nicolai, basso of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, who told him that though he was a Greek, he would like to give up his Greek citizenship to join the army, adding: "The French people have always treated me right, and it is in France that I have made most of my career, and it seems only just that I should help a country which so generously received me, and I have already applied to the government to be enlisted."

Mr. Lindquest added that Lina Cavalieri, Lucien Muratore's wife, had enlisted as a French nurse and that she and her husband had been sent to the front, probably in Alsace.

Mr. Lindquest, who had refused many engagements for this season and who resigned from Sinai Temple, where he was the tenor soloist, informed the MUSICAL COURIER representative that he was now open for dates and that, having resigned from Sinai Temple and his position being filled at the present time, he would be able to leave Chicago for a longer period than heretofore, and expects to make a transcontinental tour.

The Cologne Conservatory, which was to have reopened September 16, will remain closed indefinitely.

David Robinson, Artist and Composer.

David Robinson, the violinist, formerly concertmaster of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, is preparing for a busy season as soloist and teacher.

Wherever this young artist has appeared he has been the recipient of most flattering comments by critics, for his rich and sympathetic tone, brilliant technic and musicianly interpretation.

He is one of those true artists, whose finished playing invariably creates a lasting impression on his audiences. His facile and graceful bowing, particularly in staccato passages, never fails to arouse general interest.

As a composer Mr. Robinson has gained considerable recognition among musicians of note both in this country and in Europe. He has written several orchestral works, string quartets, etc., a fact which shows him to be thorough in his work.

Mme. Mott Is on Lake Champlain.

Alice Garrigue Mott was waiting in Berchtesgaden, Germany, for the opening of the Mozart Festival at Salzburg, when war was declared. With many other Americans she was obliged to take the only train to Munich, where she had to remain for some time, until an "American Special" took a large number of persons to Holland. Mme. Mott was fortunate in obtaining a cabin on the Laurentic, which arrived in Montreal September 5. At present Mme. Mott is on Lake Champlain, and will return to New York to open her season October 1, at her residence studio, 172 West Seventy-ninth street, New York.

THUEL BURNHAM PIANIST

American Tour November to April 1914-15

"Unchained a veritable furore of enthusiasm." —Gil Blas, Paris

"He is an artist of the kind one would hear often with the greatest pleasure." —Comoedia, Paris

Management:
Harry Culbertson - - Fine Arts Building, Chicago
STEINWAY PIANO USED

John Barnes Wells Ready for Work.

John Barnes Wells has returned to New York, and is now ready to begin his concert season, which begins early in October. He is again under the direction of Foster & David. Mr. Wells has also a large class of pupils from all over the country, who have heard him in concert work and desire to study with him. With Mrs. Wells and his daughter, Dorothy, he spent the summer at Roxbury, N. Y. While there Mr. Wells sang several times at the home of Mrs. Finley J. Shephard, formerly Helen Gould. Last week he appeared in Wildwood, N. J., in the "Persian Garden," given by Mrs. A. G. Hontz, of Philadelphia. Mr. Wells has composed several new songs that will be published this fall.

Alexander Bloch Returns.

Alexander Bloch, violinist, has just returned from Dresden, Germany, where he has been continuing his studies with Leopold Auer. He got out of Germany with slight difficulty and sailed from Rotterdam, August 29. He has assured his managers, Foster & David, that the New York climate just now is preferable to anything Europe has to offer. His New York recital will be given at Aeolian Hall early in November. The program will contain several numbers new to New York.

PIANOS IN PARIS

Weber & Steck Pianos. Pianolas. Pianola-Pianos

We invite comparison with any and all French makes both as regards quality and price.

Renting for Music Students a Specialty

THE AEOLIAN CO., 32, AVENUE DE L'OPERA

Sachs-Hirsch Helps Our Embassy.

Among the arrivals on the steamship Rotterdam on Monday morning, September 7, was Herbert Sachs-Hirsch, the pianist. In spite of the fatigue resultant after days of trouble, inconvenience and a rather rough sea voyage, Mr. Sachs-Hirsch gave a vivid and interesting account of actual experiences in the warring nations.

He went to Vienna in April, 1913, and had been working with Leopold Godowsky, the famous pianist. When war broke out, Mr. Sachs-Hirsch was in Berlin on a visit. As all Americans in Germany must, he went to the American Embassy on the first day to register. Seeing the terrific rush there he knew they needed help, so he offered his services. He was accepted gladly, and for two weeks worked steadily at the Embassy as a temporary attache. He first had to work in the passport department, making out emergency passports. In the first week 5,000 of these were issued. British subjects, too, were under the protection of the American Embassy in Germany. The English passports had to be vised, stamped with the American seal and the words "Under protection of American Embassy at Berlin."

In the second week Mr. Sachs-Hirsch was in charge of the communications of the German border office and also was head of the department for registration of applicants for transportation to America. In this work he had his own desk and six men as volunteers under him. The system was to stamp the passports "Recommended for transportation to America" and the Ambassador's signature. The helpers each had a card index file and in the various classifications the names were registered. Mr. Sachs-Hirsch received daily dispatches from the consuls throughout Germany and had to record these upon the files. It was interesting work, even though very trying because of the speed and accuracy required.

Through Mr. Sachs-Hirsch's connection with the Embassy, he met a representative of the American-Holland

1, F. Wight Neumann; 2, Mme. Gadski; 3, Mme. Schumann-Heink; 4, Mme. Bloomfield Zeisler; 5, Max Zach; 6, Eleanor Spencer; 7, Herman Menth; 8, Herbert Sachs-Hirsch, on the SS. Rotterdam, Holland-American Line.

Line, and through his courtesy and kind services procured one of the best cabins on the steamship Rotterdam, sailing August 29.

Fire of Genius.

"Don't worry about the so called 'fire of genius,' my son," says the Old Philosopher. "Get in the winter's wood and coal, and they'll make fire enough to keep your heart happy and your shins warm."—Atlanta Constitution.

Not the least happy feature of the recent Covent Garden season was the revival of Verdi's "Falstaff" after twenty years, and in view of the manifest delight in which it was received, it is certainly to be hoped that it will be retained in the repertoire henceforward.—London Truth.

Mme. OLIVE FREMSTAD

Exclusive Management FOSTER & DAVID, 500 Fifth Avenue, New York

NOW IN AMERICA—DATES BOOKING SEASON 1914-1915

STEINWAY PIANO USED

Alberto JONAS
Jenaer St. 29, Berlin, W.

HOWARD WELLS
PIANIST AND TEACHER
Authorized representative of
LESCHETIZKY
5428 KIMBARK AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.
Appointments by telephone, Blackstone 1620.

ELEANOR HAZZARD
PEOCOCK
(SOPRANO)
Exclusive Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON
437 FIFTH AVENUE - - - NEW YORK CITY

OLGA AND HELENE CASSIUS
Vocal Instruction
Pupils prepared for the operatic and concert stage. Specialties: Placing of ruined voices, rectifying of wrong methods of breathing by articulation of consonants and voice inflection, and fundamental building of speaking voice. Send for Olga Cassius' "Die Erzieuhung der Stimme und Atmung."
Studio: Prager Str. 35, Berlin, W.

MAURICE VERA KAPLUN
ARONSON
PIANIST-PEDAGOG CONCERT-PIANISTE
BERLIN, W. BOZENER ST. 18

VICTOR HEINZE
Send for free booklet "Studying Music Abroad"
Pianist and Teacher Most modern principles. Thorough artistic education. Eminently successful.
PETER VISCHER STR. 19 BERLIN-FRIEDENAU

VITTORINO MORATTI
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
For four years the only assistant of the late G. B. LAMPERTI
Authorized representative of his method
BERLIN W., MOTZ ST. 53

GEORGE FERGUSSON
BARITONE
VOCAL INSTRUCTOR
Augsburger St., 64 Berlin W., Germany

SUMMER CLASS FOR THE
LESCHETIZKY METHOD
UNDER INSTRUCTION OF
MRS. POTTER-FRISSELL
IN NEW SCHANDAU-OSTRAU, SAXON SWITZERLAND, GERMANY
Address Villa 6, as above.
Class continues until October 15, 1914

King Clark Studios
Kurfürstendamm 63, Berlin, W.
Cable Address: KINGARK, BERLIN

MARGARETE MATZENAUER'S SUPREMACY AS AN ARTIST.

BY FITZHUGH W. HAENSEL.

I first heard Margarete Matzenauer at the Metropolitan Opera House four years ago, and with thousands of others at once recognized that the music lovers of America had been favored by a new contralto possessing a remarkable voice and exceptional qualities as an artist. Everybody was captured by her truly marvelous singing, and each season since this exceptional voice has been adding to its brilliancy and power. The most delightful quality of the Matzenauer voice is its freshness and fullness. So many contraltos who have been exploited in opera and concert show the unkind marks and marring effects of old Father Time, but this comparatively new voice is full, round, clear, fresh and altogether pleasing.

And now after her unparalleled success as a contralto, Mme. Matzenauer this year announces herself as a dramatic soprano. The unusual range of this artist will easily admit of this, and judging by past performances Mme. Matzenauer will meet with the same unqualified success among dramatic sopranos that she did when announced as the premier contralto of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

The advent of Matzenauer at the Metropolitan was unaccompanied by a fanfare of trumpets, notwithstanding the fact that her ability and worth as a singer were fully recognized among the elect of Europe. The artist won her way into the hearts of the music lovers of Broadway through sheer merit. Old idols were displaced and room was made for this singer, whose voice thrilled with its glorious youth. According to the calendar, winter presses upon the footsteps of spring, but in life spring—which is youth—presses forever on the footsteps of winter. And the Matzenauer voice is the voice of spring.

Matzenauer is a singer who can be relied upon in an emergency, as was well illustrated on New Year's Day, 1912, when, without even an orchestra rehearsal, she sang Kundry, the dramatic soprano role of "Parsifal," on less than an hour's notice. She had never appeared as Kundry, but had studied the role at Bayreuth and knew its requirements. Her remarkable performance on this shortest of notice won the entire corps of critics of the press of Greater New York, and the event was so unusual that the Associated Press carried a story of the performance to its entire service as a matter of news.

Many prima donnas seem afraid of work. Not so with Mme. Matzenauer. On the week previous to her never-to-be-forgotten performance of Kundry, she had appeared in five different operas and was the principal soloist at the Sunday night concert, but Monday found her ready and willing to appear in the leading role of "Parsifal" on less than an hour's notice and in each and every instance, to use a little expressive American slang, "she made good." A strong constitution, iron nerves and years of training under Felix Mottl in Munich, enable this versatile artist to accomplish most difficult undertakings without the slightest evidence of trepidation and in an astonishingly brilliant manner.

Mme. Matzenauer is the child of a musical household. She says she does not remember the time when she could not sing. Her father was an opera conductor, and her mother an operatic soprano. At the time when other children are usually learning their letters, Mme. Matzenauer was humming arias along with the stars who appeared in the opera house where her mother and father were engaged. She told me once of her childhood days, when she used to stand in the wings to watch her mother, and as she watched how she "built castles in the air," as children are wont to do.

The dreams of the wee Matzenauer came true at the age of twenty, when she made her debut as Puck in "Oberon" at Strassburg. This was fourteen years ago. Three years later she was called to the Court Theatre in Munich. For seven years she was the leading contralto at the Wagner Festivals in the Prince Regenten Theatre in Munich, and during that time was a guest singer at Bayreuth, Amsterdam, Cologne, Frankfort, Berlin, Vienna, Prague, Budapest, Leipsic and Hamburg. Mme. Matzenauer made her American debut at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York in 1911, after which she appeared under the direction of Arturo Toscanini at the Teatro Colon, Buenos Aires. In the South American metropolis she met and married the Italian tenor, Edouard Ferrari-Fontana, who has since won fame and fortune by his remarkable singing with the Boston Opera Company, of which he is leading dramatic tenor. At the Metropolitan Opera House last year, Ferrari-Fontana appeared as Avito in "The Love of the Three Kings," a role which he created both in Europe and America.

Mme. Matzenauer will begin her concert tour in October and will continue the same until the opening of the Metropolitan Opera season in November. She will sing at the Metropolitan Opera House for a period of three months, and she had planned after that to join the Boston Opera Company for the balance of the season, but the latter arrangement may be changed through the possible cancellation of the Boston opera season on account of the war in Europe.

Mme. Matzenauer also had planned to return to Europe in the spring for the London season at Covent Garden, also for the opera in Paris, but those engagements may be affected by the hostilities abroad.

Following the above mentioned engagement, Mme. Matzenauer had planned some guesting performances in various opera houses on the Continent, also an appearance in May at the Verdi Festival at the Royal Opera in Vienna.

David Bispham Instrumental in "Community Sing."

When David Bispham was in Portland, Oregon, in the latter part of 1912, on one of his long concert tours, he sang on New Year's eve, 1913, in the open air, leading a great number of persons who had gathered to listen to music and who remained to take part in it. It has now become an annual custom. On the same tour, in San Francisco, Mr. Bispham appeared under similar auspices with Kubelik and others where Tetrazzini had sung the year before. Mr. Bispham said it was a great inspiration to hear from twenty-five to fifty thousand voices in songs that belong to the people, and he believes that in an outburst of this sort they are brought closer to each other in sympathies and in strength.

That Mr. Bispham's example and emulation have not been lost was proven recently when there was held by the Portland Monday Musical Club in Multnomah Field, the home of the great Athletic Club of that section of the country, what they termed "A Community Sing," under the direction of William H. Boyer. There was no attempt at a prepared program, nor at a repertoire of musical distinction, but there were such well known songs as "Old Folks at Home," "America," "Rock of Ages," "Silver Threads Among the Gold," "My Old Kentucky Home," and other old familiar songs of the people. There were between two and three thousand singers at Multnomah Field and the enthusiasm with which this was approached was a satisfaction to the noted American baritone, whose identification with the event was proven by the program and newspaper clippings sent to him from those who remembered him in the matter.

Wilbur A. Luyster Opens Season.

Wilbur A. Luyster will begin rehearsals directly for a concert to be given by the Metropolitan Life Glee Club for the benefit of the patients at Mount McGregor sanitarium.

Mr. Luyster is conductor also of the Schubert Choral Society, Boonton Choral Society and the Glee Club of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, New York, and has for eight years been a director of sight singing at the Metropolitan Opera House; he is also teacher of sight singing at the New York College of Music and Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences.

A Frederic Martin Correction.

For the New York Oratorio Society performances of December 29 and 30, the basso will be Frederic Martin, who has a contract for those appearances. This announcement is made because inadvertently the MUSICAL COURIER recently mentioned another basso as the one engaged for the performances in question.

Steinway Studios, Berlin
Berlin, S. W. Bergmann St. 102
Very accessible, modern, sound-proof studios with Steinway Grands for rent.
For terms apply to warerooms
STEINWAY & SONS
Koniggratzer St. 6, Berlin, W., 9

SPALDING'S TRIUMPH AT THE SCALA.

"One of the first violinists of his time" is one of many flattering references to Albert Spalding contained in the following:

The following criticisms will attest to the success almost unprecedented which attended Albert Spalding's concert at the Scala Monday evening. The American violinist was received with a demonstration which could leave no doubt as to his popularity in this city. The encores were numerous enough to form another program, and the concert itself was pronounced to be one of the musical events of the season.—Milan, April 23, 1914.

Spalding was already known to the public of Milan by the success of his concerts last April at the Conservatory Hall. He was already then considered one of the first violinists of his time for the clarity, purity and simplicity of his interpretations, which, however, never lacked warmth or plastic charm. The concert yesterday evening, before an audience among whom figured most of our musicians and amateurs, he has reconfirmed his rare qualities, performing music of Bach, Corelli, Tschaikowsky, Paganini, etc., the varied and arduous difficulties of which have swamped many a concert giver, both great and small. This is music which has become familiar to all frequenters of concerts. Rather than searching for new and rarely performed compositions, violinists prefer to express their talents with music of the well known masters, imposing upon it, either well or badly, their own particular temperaments. Spalding, however, does not abuse this tendency, and is admirable for his faithful adherence to the different styles. This characteristic he has confirmed in a particular way in turning from the fugue of Bach, of which he designed the complex architecture with a vigorous and austere expression, to the concerto in D by Tschaikowsky, putting in vivid light all the rich fantasie of lacework and striking the intense note of passion. Prolonged and unanimous applause has, during the entire concert, greeted the great artist and his accompanist, André Benoist.—Corriere Della Sera, April 21, 1914.

Albert Spalding yesterday evening proved himself a worthy successor to the great luminaries of the violin art who have preceded him at the Scala, headed by Pablo de Sarasate. His hearers were delighted to find themselves before an artist whose qualities permit him to emerge conspicuously from the ranks of concert violinists, and awarded him with satisfaction the honors of a serious success. Already last year at the Conservatory he had acquired the admiration of competent judges by the seriousness of his musical intelligence, by the excellence of his complex gifts of interpreter and technician. At the Scala these gifts were still more in evidence. I have no fear of exaggerating in giving to Spalding the qualification of "Pure in Art." This art is truly limpid, built on the rocks of truth and disdainful of those tricks which most violinists wish to impose upon the impressionable public. He does not go in the research after effect for the sake of effect; he does not curry the favor of the public with affectation nor with enticing effeminacy; he does not alter nor disturb the composer's intentions with neurasthenics and trickery; he wishes to be a stylist, and succeeds in the most satisfactory manner; an austere stylist never rigid nor angular. His tone is pure in quality; pure and rich with the added advantage of expression and phrasing, the musical line always appears clear and vigorous; the presentation always straightforward and eloquent. With nobility of accentuation he played the sonata by Corelli, putting in strong relief all the splendors of its inspiration, then with great interpretative mastery and an execution clear as crystal, the insidiously polyphonic adagio and fugue for violin alone by Bach.—La Persevaranza, April 21, 1914.

Spalding is a serious musician, an instrumentalist worthy of the favor and the attention of the most exacting audiences. Of his strong qualities as a concert giver there had been no doubt, and the new proof which he gave yesterday justified his selection as the initiator of the season of concerts at the Scala. Spalding's technic is overwhelming, perfect in intonation, and clear in passage work. He touched the two extremities of his art, passing the difficult cadenza of the concerto in D by Tschaikowsky to the adagietto by Bizet, which had to be repeated.—Il Secolo, April 21, 1914.

A very great success was awarded this concert giver for his virtuosity, not only mechanical, but profoundly interpretative. Spalding possesses, together with the greatest mastery of his art, a temperament musical and poetic of a superior order. His tone is sensitive; he has an artistic line in passages, both rapid and broad, and a soul that guides a hand almost magic!—Il Sole, April 22, 1914.

The praiseworthy undertaking of the Society of the Amici di Musica has been crowned with a brilliant success; yesterday evening at the concert of the violinist, Albert Spalding, all the intellectual public of Modena were present. The Teatro Storchi, therefore, was crowded, and, what is more important, those present were so enthusiastic over the prodigious art of Albert Spalding that they probably would have never departed and would have continued demanding encores for who knows how long, if everything in this world, especially joy, did not have an end.

Albert Spalding has that great power of fascinating all who listen to him because it seems that he expresses with his violin in a language sublime and rare the most exquisite sensations of his great artist's soul. He could say, like the interpreter of an unknown poem, "With his hand he liberates the essence of my life."

ALBERT SPALDING.

Yesterday evening he initiated the concert with a sonata in G by Porpora. From the first movement of a religious character he passed victoriously through the sinister difficulties of the fugue, singing (that is the right term) with passionate sentiment the tender aria, and closing with the allegretto moderato in wealth of sonority really portentous. The first applause burst forth insistently.

In the second part of the concert, instead of the "Mendelssohn Concerto," which had been announced (and which Spalding had already played here last year), the violinist has executed a tremendously difficult work of Tschaikowsky, the first movement of the concerto, op. 35, into which he has infused so much life and expression that the public demanded an encore to which Spalding responded with his own arrangement of Bizet's adagietto. What sentiment in that exquisite page of music; what plaintive and tender expression, and the public being unwilling to hear it only once Spalding after many recalls satisfied them by repeating this number. In the third part of the program, Spalding rendered his own prelude full of poetic color, then the lively "Zapateada" of Sarasate, which he was also obliged to repeat; then came the "Campanella" of Paganini, and the audience refused to go, still wanting more music; therefore, as extras he performed the eighth Spanish dance of Sarasate, then a nocturne of Chopin. Who, better than Spalding, can evoke the passionate spirit of that exotic musician? The public was still intoxicated, but not satiated. More! more! and then Spalding played the "Hungarian Dance" by Brahms, and as the applause still continued he gave as a final encore the fugue of Rust. At last the public departed, taking with them the sensation of having experienced the highest attainment of superhuman joy.

We must not forget that to the splendid success of the concert was largely contributed the artistic support of the pianist, André Benoist, who, more than a mere accompanist, is a collaborator of Spalding.—Il Panaro, Modena. (Advertisement.)

ALBERT SPALDING'S VALUABLE VIOLIN.

OWING TO THE WAR

MR. CHARLES W.

CLARK

has cancelled the extensive tour of Great Britain and Ireland booked for him by L. G. Sharpe of London

And Is Available for Recitals and Concerts

FOR THE WHOLE SEASON

Apply for dates to

Concert Direction M. H. HANSON

437 Fifth Avenue :: :: New York

Leginska Concert at Long Beach.

August 31, Ethel Leginska, the young pianist, by courtesy of Mr. and Mrs. Abell, gave a concert at Hotel Abell, Long Beach, L. I., assisted by Nahan Franko, the conductor and violinist. Following was the varied and enjoyable program:

Sonata for violin and piano.....Grieg
Nahan Franko and Miss Leginska.

Ballade in G minor.....Chopin
Three etudes, op. 10, in F major, E major, C major.....Chopin
Prelude in D flat major.....Chopin
Three etudes, op. 25, in A minor, F minor, C minor.....Chopin
Miss Leginska.

Prize Song .....Wagner
Mazurka .....Wieniawski
Nahan Franko.

Hark! Hark! the Lark.....Schubert-Liszt
Etude in F sharp major.....Arensky
Moments Musicaux .....Leginska
Arabesques on the Blue Danube Valse.....Schulz-Evler
Miss Leginska.

An Estate Settled.

The will of Henry Gutzeit, of San Francisco, Cal., was filed in the Probate Court shortly after his death in December, 1912. The estate has just been settled. Charles L. Wagner, manager of John McCormack, is a nephew of Mr. Gutzeit and one of the heirs. The estate was valued at $340,000.

SCHUMANN-HEINK

TOUR--SEASON 1914-15--NOW BOOKING

Direction: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th Street, New York

STEINWAY PIANO USED

KATHARINE COODSON

Management: Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York.

"A POETESS OF THE PIANO"

In America January to April 1915

TOUR NOW BOOKING

KNABE PIANO

A. CARBONE

MASTER IN THE ART OF SINGING

(Late Leading Singer (for twelve seasons) with the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company)

Art of Singing from the first rudiments to the classic "Bel Canto"

School of Opera, with Acting and Modern Languages. Carbone's Breath Controller recommended by famous singers, teachers and physicians as unique apparatus for breathing exercises. Circular sent on application

Thirty Years' Experience. Highest References.

AEOLIAN HALL, WEST 42nd STREET, NEW YORK CITY

NELSON AND HIS ORCHESTRAL BAND

OF MINNEAPOLIS

Assisted by Celebrated Soloists, Will Make a Concert Tour During Months of October and November, 1914. For dates address

OTTO L. HEEGER, Mgr., Shiffman Building - St. Paul, Minn.

FLORENCE MULFORD

CONTRALTO

Of the Metropolitan Opera Company

HAENSEL & JONES

Aeolian Hall, 27 West 42d Street NEW YORK

Personal Address:

1104 Broad Street, Newark, N. J.

Phone, 525 W-Market

MAESTRO FRANZ EMERICH

VOCAL INSTRUCTION

PUPILS PREPARED FOR THE OPERATIC AND CONCERT STAGE

and MADAME TERESA EMERICH

Some Distinguished PUPILS of MAESTRO and MME. EMERICH:

CHARLES DALMORES, tenor, formerly Metropolitan Opera Co. and Covent Garden. Lohengrin of Bayreuth festival.
ADAM DIDUR, basso, Metropolitan Opera Co.
FRANCIS MACLENNAN, tenor, Berlin Royal Opera and Hamburg Opera.
*HANS TANZLER, tenor, Royal Opera, Karlsruhe.
CAVALLIERE MARIO SAMMARCO, baritone, formerly Metropolitan Opera Co. and Covent Garden.
PUTNAM GRISWOLD, basso, formerly Metropolitan Opera Co., Berlin Royal Opera and Covent Garden.
*MARGUERITA SYLVA, Carmen in the guest performance of Caruso at the Berlin Royal Opera.
MARGARETHE MATZENAUER, mezzo-soprano, Metropolitan Opera, New York.
*HELENA FORTI, soprano, Dresden Royal Opera.
MARY CAVAN, soprano, Hamburg Opera and Chicago Opera Co.
HEINRICH HENSEL, Dramatic Tenor, Hamburg, Stadt Theatre.

INSTRUCTION GIVEN IN ENGLISH, GERMAN, FRENCH AND ITALIAN

*The names marked * are those of pupils of Mme. Emerich.* 'Telephone Am.tPfalzburg No. 2067 BERLIN, W.W. Nicelsbergerplatz I

Announcement Extraordinary

VICTOR BENHAM

Pronounced by the European Press as "America's Greatest Pianist"

Owing to the war conditions in Europe, will remain in New York during this season and will accept a limited number of pupils. Mr. Benham's pupils are accepted by the world's famous pedagogues, including Leschetizky, Phillip, Godowsky, etc.

For terms etc., address Victor Benham, Steinway Hall, East 14th Street, New York.

Christine Miller Heard From.

Christine Miller is in Berlin, Germany, awaiting an opportune moment to return to America, according to a letter which has just been received by Fitzhugh W. Haensel, of Haensel & Jones.

This is the first word from Miss Miller direct since the war started, although Mr. Haensel received a cablegram from Thomas Nelson Page, American ambassador at Rome, stating that word had been received from Berlin that the contralto was safe in the German capital.

Miss Miller's letter is in two parts, the first under the date of August 8 and the second on August 23. The first part says:

"During the war letters are allowed to pass through Germany for foreign parts only when written in German and not sealed. As I cannot write German, I have requested a friend to do it for me, but, as you read and speak German, no translator will be needed in New York.

"I am perfectly well and in the best of hands, and in no danger whatsoever. Until August 17 it was impossible for me to leave this town (Reichenhall) on account of the mobilization of the troops.

"I have had no letters from the American Express Company in Berlin for over two weeks because the company is not allowed to forward mail. When I do leave here I hope to go either to Munich or Berlin, where I can find an American consul and get a pass. I will also consult the consul as to the best way to get away. Should the war last a long time I may have difficulty getting steamship accommodations. At present I have a cabin reserved on the Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, scheduled to sail September 12, but of course no German ships will sail.

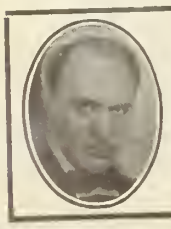
"Here in the Bavarian Alps one hears very little in the way of war news or any other news, for that matter. But I cannot complain, as I am having no trouble cashing my checks."

Under the date of August 23 Miss Miller continues:

"Upon my arrival in Berlin yesterday I found that this letter had not been forwarded but was being held for me, although all conditions concerning foreign mail had been complied with. The only thing I can do is to send it again and hope that it will get through. The journey from Reichenhall to Berlin (ordinarily a few hours) took five days. This seems difficult to believe, but is an actual fact. The distance is about from Pittsburgh to Altoona. At the present moment I cannot send you any particulars concerning my trip. Today is Sunday, so I cannot see the consul. I am feeling perfectly splendid and have not the slightest doubt but that I will find a way out of Germany shortly."

Winnifred Bambrick in Ottawa.

The harp is one of the most romantic and picturesque of musical instruments, but of late has been considered useful mainly for an accompaniment. The success of the young Canadian harpist, Winnifred Bambrick, at her recital in Aeolian Hall, New York, last winter, did much to re-establish the harp as a pre-eminent solo instrument. All of the New York papers without exception spoke enthusiastically of her "decided virtuosity," her "dexterity," her "splendid intonation and expression," and her "great brilliancy." After spending several weeks at Chelsea, in the Laurentian Mountains, Quebec, Miss Bambrick has now returned to her home in Ottawa to arrange her programs for the coming season. Her tour will open in November and the youthful harpist will give a number of recitals in the South and Middle West.



Edward S. Luce at Cotner University.

Edward S. Luce has been elected dean of the music department, Cotner University, Bethany, Neb., a suburb of Lincoln. Mr. Luce has held a similar position at the Spearfish State Normal, Spearfish, S. Dak., for the past four years.

Mr. Luce and his wife, Elizabeth Eastwood Luce, gave a recent successful concert tour through South Dakota, Wyoming, and Nebraska.

Mme. Hudson-Alexander Alters Plans.

Caroline Hudson-Alexander, the soprano, who had arranged to sail for Europe, August 29, on the steamship Carmania, fortunately was able to cancel her reservation. Mrs. Alexander had planned to spend several weeks coaching with Sir Georg Henschel, in London, and to return in time for her appearance in recital at Aeolian Hall, New York, Thursday evening, October 29.

RUDOLF BERGER

FAMOUS TENOR of the Metropolitan Opera Company

Available for Concerts May and June, 1915

Management: R. E. JOHNSTON

1451 Broadway - - New York

Standardization Requirements.

Steinway Hall,
New York, September 8, 1914.

To the Musical Courier:

In order to make matters more clear to those intending to apply for active membership in the N. Y. S. M. T. A., especially regarding the question of who may or may not be eligible without an examination, I ask you kindly to publish the enclosed articles from the constitution and by-laws of the association:

THE NEW YORK STATE MUSIC TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION.

Section 2. The object of this association shall be:
(a) Mutual improvement by interchange of thought.
(b) Development of improved methods of instruction.
(c) Furtherance of professional fraternity and elevation of the standards of professional work.
(d) Encouragement of musical composition.
(e) Raising of standards in musical taste and of musical culture in general.

ARTICLE II.

MEMBERSHIP.

Section 1. Members. The membership shall consist of four classes—active, associate, founding and auxiliary.

Section 2. Active. Any person may become an active member who is able to comply with one or all of the following requirements:

(a) That the applicant can give satisfactory evidence that he has been a successful teacher in his locality during a requisite length of time. Beginning with the adoption of this alteration in the constitution, the required time of successful experience shall be eight years, and thereafter, for at least the following six years the required term of such experience shall be increased by two years each succeeding year.

(b) That the applicant shall have attained an unquestioned and highly favorable reputation as a teacher of music, without regard to experience.

(c) That the applicant comes supplied with properly obtained credentials from some institution of musical learning or recognized standing or from a private teacher who is eligible to class (b), as given above. These credentials must show that the applicant has achieved a requisite proficiency as a musician and as a teacher of music.

(d) That all applicants, unable to comply with any of the foregoing requirements, can satisfy the examining board by the passing of suitable examination tests, that they are competent to teach music in their respective branch or branches at least to the extent of our, at the time formulated and accepted "Essential Standard."

Section 3. Associate. Any person who is interested in music as a patron or a student, or is engaged in a musical occupation as a means of support other than that of teaching, may become an associate member, with all the privileges and rights of an active member except those of debate and vote.

Section 4. Founding. All those who were active members in good standing at the time these alterations were adopted, and who remain in such good standing, are to be considered "Founding Members," and as such shall be exempt, except of their own volition, from any further requirements to establish their eligibility.

Section 5. The annual dues shall be $2.00.

Section 6. Life Membership. The life membership fee shall be $25.00. Money received for life membership shall be invested and only the interest used.

Yours very truly,
GUSTAV L. BECKER,
Chairman Committee on "Essential Standard" Examinations, N. Y. S. M. T. A.

Gardner to Join Kneisel Quartet.

Samuel Gardner, the young American violinist, has been engaged as a member of the Kneisel Quartet. Mr. Gardner succeeds Hans Letz, who is now in the German army. Mr. Gardner received his entire musical education in this country and his engagement by this company is a high compliment. He will be available for a limited number of solo engagements and for next season will be as formerly under the management of Foster & David.

Seger Conservatory Opens.

The Seger Conservatory of Musical Art, located at 1547 St. Nicholas avenue, New York, announces the opening of the school for the season. William T. Seger and Edward C. Seger are the directors, and the departments are piano, violin, violoncello, organ, harmony, composition, counterpoint, vocal instruction, elocution and dramatic art.

Mme. Fremstad Begins Concert Tour.

Olive Fremstad will leave in a few days for the Pacific Coast to begin her concert tour. Her season opens in Seattle October 1. Engagements immediately following are at Victoria, Spokane, Portland, Tacoma, Fresno, Oakland, San Francisco and Los Angeles. Mme. Fremstad's season under the direction of Foster & David will be a long one.

Henry P. Schmitt Resumes Teaching.

Henry P. Schmitt, formerly concertmaster of the Philharmonic Society, of New York, announces that he has resumed teaching at his studio, 203 West Eighty-first street, New York.

"You persuaded your husband to join a glee club?"

"Yes," answered Mrs. Biggins; "when he starts to sing at home I can now advise him not to tire his voice, and when he sings in the club I can't hear him."—Washington Star.

CLARENCE EDDY
AVAILABLE FOR ORGAN DEDICATIONS AND RECITALS
Address: 5101 OAKWOOD BOULEVARD CHICAGO
Season 1914-15

SEASON 1914-1915 MRS. H. H. A. BEACH
M. H. HANSON 437 Fifth Avenue New York

SEASON 1914-1915 MAUD POWELL
H. Godfrey Turner 1400 B'way, New York

JENNY DUFAU
COLORATURA SOPRANO
Concert Recital
Chicago-Philadelphia Grand Opera Company
Under Management of HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Building, Chicago

VAN YORX
THEO. ——— Tenor
Studios: 21 West 38th Street, - New York
3701 Murray Hill

GABRILÓWITSCH
THE EMINENT RUSSIAN PIANIST
AMERICAN TOUR JANUARY-APRIL, 1915
Management, LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, N. Y.
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

GIUSEPPE CREATORE AND HIS BAND
NOW BOOKING FOR 1914-1915
OFFICE: 1512 TRIBUNE BUILDING, - - - CHICAGO, ILL.

A NAME TO CONJURE WITH!
THIBAUD
For Terms and Dates Address
A Violinist Whom France Declares to Be Without an Equal
Thibaud's American visit last winter was the violinistic sensation of the season. His return in the Fall will be an event of first importance.
LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, New York

U. S. KERR
BASSO CANTANTE--Song Recitals and Oratorio a Specialty
For Bookings Address 538 West 143d Street, New York City
'Phone 3313 Audubon

JULES FALK VIOLINIST
NOW IN AMERICA
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU 1 West 34th Street, New York

The Guilmant Organ School
DR. WILLIAM C. CARL, Director
A School for Students with serious aims, who desire to become expert Organists. REOPENS OCT. 6th.
Send For New Catalogue. 44 West 12th St., N. Y.

LEONARD BORWICK PIANIST
WILL TOUR AMERICA SEASON 1914-15
"Leonard Borwick is an artist gifted not only with refined taste and deep musical feeling, but with the technique of a master."—Berlin Borsen Courier.
Management—WOLFSOHN BUREAU, 1 West 34th St., New York. Steinway Piano Used

REBARER
420 MADISON AVE., NEW YORK

MARGARET KEYES CONTRALTO
WITH CHICAGO GRAND OPERA CO.
Management, THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU, 1 W. 34th St. New York
Personal Address, 600 West 138th St. Phone 1810 Audubon

Walter Henry Hall
Professor of Choral Music Columbia University
Address, 49 Claremont Avenue

Angelo CORTESE
America's Distinguished
HARPIST
Management, Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, N. Y.

CORNELIUS VAN VLIET
Dutch Cellist
2514 Emerson Ave., S., Minneapolis, Minn.

Carl Pohlig
CONDUCTOR
Address: VILLA POHLIG, PLANEGG
near Munich, GERMANY

MARGARET HUSTON
SOPRANO
In Europe Season 1914-15

Nana
GENOVESE
MEZZO SOPRANO. Formerly Manhattan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts, Recitals and Musicales
EXCLUSIVE MANAGEMENT, ANNIE FRIEDBERG, 1425 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

J. FRED WOLLE
ORGANIST
Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau
1 West 34th Street, New York

GIORGIO M. SULLI
Teacher of Carmen Melis, Clara Clemens, Mme. Martha de Lachmann, Reinhold von Warlich, Mario Sammarco, Lena Mason, Tarquinia Tarquini and other well-known singers of Grand Opera or Concerts. Musical Director of the Labor Temple Choir, New York. Teaching during summer, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday only. Special terms.
VOCAL STUDIO. 1425 Broadway
Metropolitan Opera House Building, New York
(Phone, 2762 Bryant)
Public Recitals throughout season for advanced pupils. Write for Circulars.

JAN SICKESZ
DUTCH PIANIST
American Tour Begins October, 1914
Management ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, New York
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

Mme. Lavoie-Herz's Views.

At the request of many of Mme. Lavoie-Herz's admirers that pianist will open a studio in Toronto. It will be a real advantage for Toronto to boast such a teacher as Mme. Lavoie-Herz, who masters all the modern methods of piano playing and pedagogy, which she acquired during her seven years' study abroad in contact with musical giants like Arthur Schnabel and Alexandre Scriabine.

Especially when European centers are closed to pupils who intended to study abroad it will be grateful news to them to learn that in Mme. Lavoie-Herz they can find one of the best equipped teachers available on this side of the water.

All who have had the advantage to meet this artist declare themselves much benefited by association with her. Her personality is magnetic and her musical intelligence and insight are most impressive.

Regarding her art, Mme. Lavoie-Herz recently spoke as follows to a MUSICAL COURIER representative:

"It is appalling to realize the number of music teachers who advertise themselves as competent teachers who, however, do not understand 'la raison d'être' of the art and never studied seriously. No one is justified in teaching who does not possess a good method which he can expose clearly to his pupils. In thousands of homes the piano is played and by thousands the piano is taught. It is therefore a question of the highest importance for the musical education of the people whether this teaching is based on logical or illogical principles. A natural, scientific conception of all questions concerning piano playing has established itself slowly, but by far not sufficiently. This natural scientific method means a valuable gain toward the advancement of the understanding in an art-pedagogical domain, which for a decade was characterized by torture of youth, stupidity and unnaturalness. The principal cause for this calamity was that the teacher had not sufficient knowledge of the nature of the piano and therefore did not understand its treatment.

MME. LAVOIE-HERZ IN FIESOLE, NEAR FLORENCE, ITALY.

"It is a mistake when teachers think they can influence tonal effect by movements accompanying touch. Solely the degree of weight is decisive for the tone, and for this reason different movements accompanying touch in employing the same weight for the creation of tonal effect are absolutely unnecessary. Only through the understanding of physiological and physical laws can proper piano technic be developed.

"It cannot develop through stiffness and want of freedom, and on that account all exertions employed by the performer during execution must exhibit absolute freedom to attain the highest artistic aim. Absolute freedom is consequently at the bottom of all great and perfect piano technic. The revelation of the psychic feeling of the performer's intellectual conception needs the fullest bodily freedom to be able to express itself perfectly. I regret not to be able to discuss at length all the many other important points, like proper conception of elasticity, the free fall, rotation movement, fallacy of key hitting or striking, pedaling, etc. They form a volume by themselves.

"Art," continued the pianist, "is like the radiant noon sun and the different arts are like her rays. To be able to understand the nature of the eternal essence which lies in the innermost heart of this glorious sun and to be able to glimpse at its unsurpassable divine beauty, every artist craving to attain the highest possible ideal ought to study the nature of the different rays symbolized by poetry, painting, sculpture, music, architecture, etc., and by it widen constantly his artistic horizon, never losing sight of his eternal sun. What a beautiful work it is for a teacher to awaken a pupil to these great truths, to make him feel that sense for the beautiful, through which we live our

WHITEHILL BASS-BARITONE
Formerly Metropolitan Opera Management: The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th Street, New York.

SLEZAK
The Great Czech Tenor
In America January, February, March and April, 1915
Exclusive Management:
HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York City
Hardman Piano Used

HENRIETTE BACH
VIOLINIST. Management, Wolfsohn Bureau, 1 W. 34 St., N. Y.

The HAMBOURG CONSERVATORY of MUSIC
PROFESSOR MICHAEL HAMBOURG, JAN and BORIS HAMBOURG, Directors
Unsurpassed faculty of over sixty teachers. Re-opens September 1st
TORONTO, CANADA

GIUSEPPE FABBRINI DISTINGUISHED ITALIAN PIANIST
Minneapolis

LIMA O'BRIEN
ACCOMPANIST
21 West 30th St. :: :: :: :: New York City

FREDERIC C. FREEMANTEL Teacher of Singing
89 South Tenth Street Minneapols, Minn.

Mr. and Mrs. JOHN DENNIS MEHAN Season 1914-15 Begins Sept. 21, 1914. Until Sept. 19, Tel. Coney Island 2267
STUDIO: 70 CARNEGIE HALL
Telephone Columbus 5946

GAREISSEN STUDIO HALL: 64 East 34th St. NEW YORK CITY.

MABEL
GARRISON
SOPRANO
Metropolitan Opera Company
Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway : : New York City

JANE OSBORN-HANNAH
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Song Recitals Concert and Orchestral Appearances
AVAILABLE ENTIRE SEASON
Personal Management Chas. L. Wagner, 1451 Broadway, New York

JOHN McCORMACK
In America Entire Season 1914-15
EDWIN SCHNEIDER, Accompanist
Always and only under personal management of Chas. L. Wagner 1451 Broadway New York
Steinway Piano Used

RUDOLPH GANZ
"THE PIANIST WITH A MESSAGE"
Returns to America for
Season of 1914-1915
Exclusive Management, CHARLES L. WAGNER
1451 Broadway, New York
Steinway Piano Used

ALICE NIELSEN
Prima Donna Soprano
SEASON 1914-15 AMERICAN CONCERT TOUR
Steinway Piano Used
Personal Management, CHAS. L. WAGNER
1451 BROADWAY - - NEW YORK

DJANE LAVOIE-HERZ
CONCERT PIANIST
Touring Canada and United States Season 1914-1915
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.
Steinway Piano used.

WILLIAM WHEELER TENOR
Soloist Worcester Festival
O. J. EHRGOTT
156 Fifth Ave.
Personal Representative
Personal Address: 61 Hamilton Place, New York

FRANCIS ROGERS BARITONE
Recital, Oratorio, Concert
Also a few Pupils
563 Park Ave., New York
Management: LOUDON CHARLTON
Carnegie Hall

LOUISE JANSEN WYLIE Soprano
Management, Iris Pendleton, Philharmony Hall, Wichita - Kansas
New York Address, 736 W. 181st Street

LILLIAN SHERWOOD NEWKIRK
VOICE CULTURE, ITALIAN METHOD.
Special attention to tone production.
1425 Broadway, Metropolitan Opera House Bldg., New York.
Mail address, 11 Morgan Ave., Norwalk, Conn.

Adele Krueger
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Concert, Oratorio, Recital
Management of Miss Annie Friedberg, 1425 Broadway, New York

LEO BRAUN
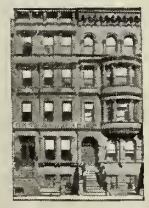
Voice Culture : Repertoire
Opera Concert Oratorio
Studio: 446 CENTRAL PARK WEST

GEORGE HAMLIN
Will, without fail, fill his engagements in America next February, March and April.
HAENSEL & JONES. AEOLIAN HALL. NEW YORK

ALBERT SCHOTT
DRAMATIC TENOR
In America Season 1914-1915. Available for Recitals, etc.
Exclusive Management Concert Direction. M. H. HANSON.
437 Fifth Ave., New York



R. E. Johnston Presents by Courtesy of Senator and Mrs. W. A. Clark
ANDRE TOURRET
French Violinist and
CAMILLE DECREUS
French Pianist (Ysaye's pianist for past two seasons)
IN JOINT RECITALS—SEASON 1914-15
All business communications should be sent to R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway - New York
CHICKERING PIANO USED

MANUEL
QUIROGO
THE WONDERFUL SPANISH
VIOLINIST
American Tour Opens Carnegie Hall, October 17th
Direction Sam S. and Lee Shubert
MANAGEMENT, R. E. JOHNSTON,
1451 BROADWAY - - NEW YORK CITY

OVIDE MUSIN'S Virtuoso School of Violin
Recognized as the HIGHEST SCHOOL of violin playing in the United States

Instruction given by this world renowned Virtuoso in person, in the Authentic tempos, style, fingering and bowing of the classical repertory, ancient and modern. Musin's SPECIAL SYSTEM greatly LESSENS the time ordinarily spent in acquiring technic and how control. Piano, Harmony, with eminent teachers. Singing with Mme. Ovide Musin, Coloratura Soprano. Write for outline of Course by CORRESPONDENCE, and THEMATIC CATALOGUE of compositions and editions by OVIDE MUSIN. Dormitories for limited number of students in School. Practice Unrestricted. CHAPERONAGE. Address the REGISTRAR, most precious hours; to open his intellectual eyes, through which he will be able to see the true path leading to nis eternal sunshine; to open his mind to the understanding that arts do not form multiplicity, but a great, deep unity —unity from which the one real, pure, unfettered happiness can be drawn. The aim of art is to educate, to awaken thought. The higher the thought awakened, the higher the art, and, as it is a proved fact that spiritual beauty speaks in the highest terms to the soul, the more spiritual the art, the greater it will be.

51 West 76th St., New York.

"In music, for instance, from the pleasure giving sound which so many consider the aim and end of music to spiritual expression lies a great margin; for mere beauty of sounds is purely sensuous and cannot help to the same high development of mind and soul of the pupil, and for that reason he ought to be helped to unroll his power of discrimination so as to be able to discern for himself why Grieg or Moszkowski do not stand on the same artistic level as Schumann or Brahms. Then when he will be able to feel, through knowledge, where real beauty lies, he will be ready to express his own self more freely and be able to understand more clearly the great message that art brings us from her divine realms. The soul is like a stringed instrument, and music is the plectrum which will make it vibrate in its mightiest way. Consequently music proves itself to be one of the greatest factors of evolution, and for this reason every one ought to have at heart the desire to develop in oneself every means possible to the deeper understanding of his divine art-music."

The Late Emil Fischer.

The accompanying picture is an old one (originally published in the MUSICAL COURIER) of the late Emil Fischer in his best role, that of Hans Sachs in "Meistersinger."

EMIL FISCHER AS HANS SACHS.

Apropos, Fischer at the time of his death was not eighty-three years old, as stated last week in these columns, but seventy-seven.

Daniel Visanska Expected Soon.

Daniel Visanska, the New York and Philadelphia violinist and teacher, has been detained in Capri. A recent cablegram received from him by his brother in New York stated that Mr. Visanska was well and expected to sail for America on the steamship Saint Anna September 14.

Von Sternberg Returns This Month.

Constantin von Sternberg, president of the Sternberg School of Music, Philadelphia, is at present in Germany. He is expected to return by October 1.

A young lady called one day on Rubinstein, the great pianist, who had consented to listen to her playing.

"What do you think I should do now?" she asked when she had finished.

"Get married," was the answer.—London Music.

FOR more than ninety years the world of music-lovers has sat in judgment on the Chickering piano and pronounced it time and again a musical instrument of unsurpassed merits. Chance, you see, has no place in the repeated rendering of such verdicts. Intelligent appreciation and the best of taste determine them.

This universal acknowledgment of superiority is due to the spirit which fires the piano's producers. It is the spirit of the old guild workers, the spirit that animated Jonas Chickering, the first maker and his workmen, that is alive today.

Chickering
Piano

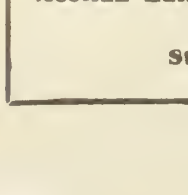
The Chickering is more than a mechanical combination of sound makers, it is an instrument of individuality, unique in its tone qualities, found in homes where musical appreciation is of the highest.



Chickering & Sons
BOSTON

Established 1823 Pianos and Players
Division of American Piano Company

LORETTA del VALLÉ
SOPRANO COLORATURA
First Time in America
Season 1914-15
OPERA—PRAGUE
OPERA—DRESDEN
OPERA—CASSEL
OPERA—MANHEIM

Mme. DE VERE-SAPIO
Prima Donna Soprano from Paris Grand Opera; La Scala, Milan; Covent Garden, London; Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., etc., etc., in America Season 1914-15. For terms and dates address:
65 Central Park West, New York.

ROMUALDO SAPIO
Formerly Conductor Metropolitan Opera, New York, and having coached the majority of great operatic artists, among whom: Adelina Patti, Nordica, Tamagno, Etc.
VOCAL STUDIO, 65 CENTRAL PARK WEST, N. Y.

Ellen Keller
VIOLINIST
In America Season 1914-15. NOW BOOKING
Exclusive Management;
Gertrude F. Cowen, 1451 Broadway, New York City

MME. MARIE RAPPOLD
Celebrated Prima Donna Soprano
of the Metropolitan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts — January to June, 1915
Exclusive Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY

NEW YORK COLLEGE OF MUSIC
128-130 East 58th Street
CARL HEIN Directors AUGUST FRAEMCKE
The college has for its object the universal higher education in all branches of music—Department for those who desire to teach music—Course for Supervisors of Music in Public Schools—Opportunities and training for public appearance—40 Instructors of highest reputation—Newly engaged, Rubin Goldmark, Composition; Michel Sciapiro, violin.
CATALOG ON APPLICATION

ARTHUR SHATTUCK
The Distinguished American
PIANIST
In America Season 1914-15
Management, HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York
Steinway Piano Used

How Schott Draws.

Albert Schott, the tenor, in his long and successful career in Europe has had many interesting and characteristic experiences, but one which he likes to recall with particular glee is the happening at Kaiserslautern (near Elberfeld), Germany, which caused such a local stir of amusement that it was commented upon in the Kaiserslautern papers and from there copied into the journals all over Germany. Even parodistic verses were printed about the occurrence.

As the story is related in one of the papers, it all came about on one of the "great appearances of Schott in Kaiserslautern, which took place two or three times each season, and nearly always as Lohengrin, a role in which that city seemed to wish to hear no one else.

The Schott "Lohengrin" performances were therefore periodical gala days in Kaiserslautern, and when one of the recent ones was about to take place it was no wonder that Frau Klumpke (to give her a fictitious name) made ready with all the rest of the women in town to be at the opera house and assist in the rapturous greeting which the gifted and romantic looking tenor never failed to receive from admiring femininity. "The Klumpkes were poor people and had ten children," runs the tale, "so that when the mistress of the household sallied forth to purchase the 'Lohengrin' tickets, her husband grumblingly promised to undertake the duties of maid and put the children to bed. 'You Kaiserslautern women seem to forget your homes and families and everything else when that Schott fellow comes to town. The devil take him.' 'You know you are just as crazy to hear him as the rest of us,' replied the wife as she went out.

ALBERT SCHOTT AS LOHENGRIN.

"On their way to the opera house later in the evening, Frau Klumpke asked her spouse: 'Did you have any trouble getting the children to go to bed?' 'They all were playing before the door and I had no trouble in sweeping them all into the house—all except one, who showed rebellion and began to run away. But I went after him and gave him a thrashing and in spite of his kicks and protests I shoved him into bed and threatened to whip him within an inch of his life if he made another sound. Then he kept quiet and went to sleep.'

"After the 'Lohengrin' performance, the Klumpkes arrived near their home when they encountered a little knot of neighbors gathered on the corner, who informed them that little Hans Schmidt, the tiny son of the tinsmith nearby, had been lost and the frantic parents and the police of the city were searching for him. 'Too bad,' murmured sympathetic Frau Klumpke; 'I can imagine poor Mrs. Schmidt's feelings. I am a mother myself.'

"Early in the morning when she arose, Mrs. Klumpke went to the enormous family bed in which her ten youngsters slept and followed her usual custom of counting them. To her astonishment there were eleven! She counted again with the same result. She awakened the children, who scrambled up and rushed at her joyfully—all except one, who opened his eyes sleepily and immediately began to weep lustily. 'Good heavens, it's little Hans Schmidt,' cried the good woman. To call in her husband and to have him carry the lost boy to his parents around the corner was the work of only a few moments, and it is easy to imagine what Mrs. Klumpke said to Herr Klumpke when he returned. One of the things she might

HELEN WARE
Exclusive Manager, Laszlo Schwartz
Room 912, 1170 Broadway, New York

EDYTH WALKER
(Imperial Royal Chambersinger, Court of Austria--Hungary)
Dramatic Soprano
Metropolitan, New York.
Covent Garden, London.
Imperial Royal Opera, Vienna.
Royal Opera, Berlin.
Festspielhaus, Bayreuth.
Royal Opera and Wagner Festivals, Munich, etc., etc., etc.
Season 1914-1915 with the
Chicago Opera Company

The Sensation of the Year
CARL FLESCH
The Great Hungarian Violinist
Second American Tour
ENTIRE SEASON 1914-1915
Management HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York
KNABE PIANO

BARONESS SIGNE VON RAPPE
SOPRANO
Prima Donna, Vienna and Stockholm Operas. Principal Soloist 6th QUADRENNIAL MUSIC FESTIVAL OF THE AMERICAN UNION OF SWEDISH SINGERS, MINNEAPOLIS, JUNE 8-9, 1914.
"A voice of great range and brilliance."
—Minneapolis Tribune, June 9, 1914
American Tour, March-May, 1915
OPERA :: LIEDER :: ORATORIO
in Swedish, Italian, German, French and English
Sole Management:
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

YVONNE DE TRÉVILLE
Coloratura Soprano
Grand Opera Prima Donna
NOW IN AMERICA
SEASON 1914-15 BOOKING
Available for Concerts, Musicales, Recitals and Festivals.
New York and Brooklyn Recitals Early in November
European Address: 68 rue de l'Aurora, Bruxelles, Belgium
American Address: - 62 De Hart Place, Elizabeth, N. J.
Cable Address: Detreville-Bruxelles

MARGARET HARRISON SOPRANO
38 West 56th Street New York

DONALD CHALMERS BASSO
Address for the Summer
29 Ocean Pathway, Ocean Grove, N. J.
RECITALS :: ORATORIO :: OPERA

EVAN WILLIAMS
TENOR
Akron - - Ohio
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU

Horatio Connell
BASS BARITONE
Management HAENSEL & JONES, AEOLIAN HALL, NEW YORK

PHILIP SPOONER TENOR
205 West 57th St., New York City
'Phone, 6510 Columbus

GENEVIEVE FINLAY-STEWART
DRAMATIC CONTRALTO
HAENSEL & JONES Aeolian Hall, New York

THOMAS FARMER Baritone
Engaged for St. Paul by Handel Society, London, May 12th
Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON, 437 Fifth Avenue New York

PAUL DUFAULT
TENOR
Address 339 West 23rd Street Tel. 7731 Chelse

CAROLL BADHAM PREYER
TEACHER OF SINGING—Italian Method (Lamperti diploma)
Studio: 27 West 67th Street Tel. Columbus 1123

George CARRÉ
TENOR
15 East 10th St. Tel. 2927 Stuyvesant New York

Christine MILLER Contralto
Personal address: 1003 Heberton Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.
Management: HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York

REINALD WERRENRATH
BARYTONE
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th Street, - - New York

EDGAR
STILLMAN-KELLEY
STEINWAY HALL, NEW YORK, N. Y.

REBECCA DAVIDSON PIANISTE
Management: WALTER ANDERSON
171 West 57th Street New York

Joseph Baernstein Regneas
TEACHER OF SINGING
Telephone Schuyler 3786 Studio, 133 W. 80th St., New York
From the first rudiments of tone placing to artistic finishing for Concert, Oratorio and Opera

BARONESS Olga von Türk-Rohn SOPRANO
"Europe's Famous Song Bird"
Season 1914-15 Now Booking
Management
Metropolitan Musical Bureau, New Brunswick, N. J.

CECIL FANNING Baritone
H. B. TURPIN Accompanist
Having returned from a year of concert giving in Germany, Italy and England, are
NOW AVAILABLE FOR RECITALS IN AMERICA
Address: H. B. TURPIN, Dayton, Ohio

have said is this: 'So it is only the women, is it, who lose their heads in their anxiety to see Schott in "Lohengrin." It seemed to me that you were in such a hurry to get there, that you couldn't even tell the difference between putting your own children to bed and kidnapping the son of somebody else.'"

Frances Ingram at Atlantic City.

Frances Ingram has had a most delightful trip motoring from Chicago to New York and back. She visited all places of interest en route, not forgetting to have an early morning dip in the breakers at Atlantic City, N. J.

FRANCES INGRAM SURF BATHING AT ATLANTIC CITY.

Hanna Butler's Interrupted Vacation.

Since Hanna Butler's unexpected return from Europe on August 16 she has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Miles, of New York, at their country home (Clifton) at Christmas Cove, Maine.

The accompanying snapshot was taken on top of the Grouergrat in the Alps of Switzerland on August 2. At that time Mrs. Butler did not even know war had been declared. She had been coaching in Switzerland for a week, but sailed from Naples on August 4. Mrs. Butler will go to Bar Harbor from Christmas Cove, Me., and expects to return to Chicago about the first of October, when she will reopen her studio in the Fine Arts Building. Her secretary writes her that already pupils have engaged all of her teaching time, which is limited.

HANNA BUTLER ON THE SUMMIT OF THE GROUERGRAT IN THE SWISS ALPS.

Mrs. Willis E. Bacheller.

Mrs. Willis E. Bacheller, teacher of singing, announces the reopening of her studio for the season 1914-15 at 22 East Thirty-third street, New York City, on Wednesday, September 16.

SOUSA AND HIS BAND
"HEARD THE WORLD AROUND"
Office: 1 West 34th Street
Telephone 6128 Greeley

Alexander BLOCH
CONCERT VIOLINIST
Management, Foster & David, 500 Fifth Avenue, - New York

KIDD KEY CONSERVATORY SHERMAN TEXAS
Hana Richard has baan mada Dirsctor in tha Conaarvatory and is aaaistad by an able corps of teachers. Bandstson Natzorg haa alao baan addad to tha Conaarvatory faculty. For catalog addreaa
MRS. L. A. KIDD KEY

INEZ BARBOUR SOPRANO
Concert-Recital-Oratorio
Management: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th St., New York

FLORENCE AUSTIN
America's Violinist
Season 1914-1915 Now Booking
Address:
THOMAS McGRATH, 133 East 34th St., New York
Phone Murray Hill, 2239

JANE CATHERWOOD SOPRANO and TEACHER
Fowler Apartments, 1110 W. Washington Street
Los Angeles, Cal. Phone 20584

MARIE KAISER
SOPRANO
Managamant: WALTER ANDERSON, 171 West 57th St., New York

MARGARET SHIRLEY
Soprano
Available for Concerts: Recitals, Musicales
IRISH BALLADS A SPECIALTY
Exclusive Management: ANNIE FRIEDBERG, Metropolitan Opera House Bldg., New York

FRANCES ALDA SOPRANO OF THE METROPOLITAN OPERA CO.
Assisted by Gutia Cassini, Cellist, and Frank La Forge, Pianist
SEASON 1914-15 NOW BOOKING
Exclusive Managamant for Concerts: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York City
Baldwin Piano Used

Dramatic Mezzo Soprano
SARA HEINEMAN
Concerts and Recitals also Southern Folk Songs in Costume
In Europe During Summer
Mail to Musical Courier - - - 437 Fifth Avenue

Baroness Evans
Von KLENNER
America's Representative of the
GREAT GARCIA VOCAL METHOD
Grand Prix—Paris Exposition, 1900. Summer School—Point Chautauqua, Chautauqua Lake, N. Y. June 25th to Aug. 27th, 1914.
Tradition Languages Repertoire Diction Special Courses for Teachers. Address, New York Studio, 952 Eighth Avenue

THE PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY
of NEW YORK
1914 Seventy-Third Season 1915
JOSEF STRANSKY, Conductor
SUBSCRIPTION SERIES:
New York, Brooklyn, Baltimore and Washington.
TOURS;
New England, New York State, Canada, Middle West, South
Prospectus on application to
FELIX F. LEIFELS, Manager Carnegie Hall, NEW YORK

Charles BOWES Vocal Instruction
Returning to New York in October
Address: Care of Musical Courier

HERBERT FRYER
The Distinguished English Concert Pianist
In America the Whole Season 1914-1915
For Engagements, Etc., Address
WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU, 1 West 34th Street, New York

TINA LERNER
Distinguished Russian Pianist
FOURTH AMERICAN TOUR 1914-15 NOW BOOKING
Management, Loudon Charlton, Carnegie Hall, New York. MASON & HAMLIN PIANO

MADAME ANITA RIO
CELEBRATED AMERICAN PRIMA DONNA SOPRANO
after six years of operatic successes in Europe, will return to this country in September for Concert and Oratorio Engagements.
Management - - MUSIC LEAGUE OF AMERICA,
HOWARD E. POTTER, Business Manager
AEOLIAN HALL - - - NEW YORK

ELEANOR SPENCER
PIANIST

Returns to America Season 1914-15
Management, Antonia Sawyer
1425 Broadway, New York
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO

After Nine Years in Leipsic
MRS. CARL ALVES
will resume residence in New York next August, beginning vocal instruction September 15
Applications may be made now with
C. WALDEMAR ALVES
48 West 90th Street -:- New York

Season 1914-1915
ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, New York
Has the Honor to Present the Violinist
SPALDING
Assisted at the Piano by
ANDRÉ BENOIST
Steinway Piano

NEWARK MUSIC FESTIVAL ASSOCIATION OPENS OFFICES

Organization of Chorus of Thousand Voices Begins—Director C. Mortimer Wiske Takes Personal Charge—Voices to Be Tried Three Days a Week—Noted Artists to Assist—List of Committee Members and Guarantors Nearly Complete—Musical Notes of Interest.

Concerts to Be Held in Armory on Evenings of May 4, 5 and 6

Newark, N. J., September 14, 1914.

The Newark Music Festival Association has opened offices in the Lauter Building, 593 Broad street. Here, under the personal charge of Director C. Mortimer Wiske, the organization of the gigantic chorus of a thousand voices and the orchestra of one hundred members is being rapidly carried forward. A large number of applicants, at this writing, already have expressed their desire to join, and singers from Elizabeth, Montclair, Bloomfield, the Oranges, Glen Ridge and other suburbs as well as Newark, it is expected, will send in their names at an early date.

That the festival association's plan will be carried out in the minutest detail there seems to be no doubt. With the chorus permanently organized rehearsals can be pushed forward rapidly. The present war in Europe, it is believed, will have little effect upon the securing of soloists. Negotiations are now being made with some of the world's most renowned artists.

Definite arrangements have been made to hold the festival in the First Regiment Armory, Newark, on the evenings of Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, May 4, 5 and 6, 1915. "Wagner Night" will open the series of concerts, "Opera Night" will follow and "Concert Night" will conclude the festival.

"One Thousand Singers," the Slogan.

One thousand singers is the aim of the association. It is to be a gigantic organization, and not one singing society nor individual vocalist, whether professional or amateur, is to be overlooked when the four or five thousand letters of invitation are sent out in the near future. It is necessarily a difficult problem to reach every one, no matter how complete the list. For this reason, singers and societies can assist materially by sending Mr. Wiske any names available.

In the near future an attempt will be made to organize a chorus committee comprising directors of choirs, choral societies and of operatic companies, teachers of vocal culture, church organists and leaders of the many organizations which give annual minstrel shows and other musical performances. Through this committee it is hoped to reach a vast number of singers who could not be brought into the chorus through any other means. At an early date a letter will be sent out by the association for the purpose of calling together the musical leaders for this chorus committee.

The association realizes that noted artists can be brought to Newark at any time, but never will such a chorus have been heard here before. The organization of such a chorus would necessarily have a marked effect upon the tastes of the people of this city in so far as things musical are concerned. It would be a matter of civic pride to belong to such an organization.

It is to be hoped that the high school and normal school students can be made interested through the efforts of the school officials who are to be approached. Factory owners are to be asked to post notices calling attention to the formation of the chorus, in order to interest the vast number of good singers who are to be found among their employees. Notices are to be posted in the large stores and in the clubs and lodge rooms. Every possible method of reaching all available singers is to be used, and in this way it is hoped the chorus of one thousand will be secured.

Naturally, the renting of a rehearsal hall, the procuring of music for the singers, light, heat, etc., all represent a considerable expense. Most societies or clubs charge monthly or yearly dues, or assessments, in order to cover these expenditures. Mr. Wiske, however, has devised a still better plan which will not be felt so much by the individual singer, and yet will help, to a large extent, to cover this burden of expense.

Each member of the chorus will be asked to pay ten cents a rehearsal, this money to be paid at each meeting to the treasurer of the chorus, who will be appointed by the members.

Applications for membership in the chorus or orchestra can be made in writing or by applying at the offices of the association in the Lauter Building, 593 Broad street, be-

EMIL J. POLAK
ACCOMPANIST AND COACH
Address: 217 E. 71st St., New York City Telephone 923 Lenox

MADAME MOLIÈRE
VOICE CULTURE
Five years Grand Opera. Principal cities of Europe. Berlin, Hamburg, etc.
Address, Musical Courier Co.

Mme. GUERCIAS
OPERATIC SOPRANO
Spanish, Russian, French, German, Italian
AT PRESENT IN EUROPE
SEASON 1914-1915 IN AMERICA

MME. ROSA OLITZKA
CELEBRATED RUSSIAN CONTRALTO
Engaged as Soloist, Great Texas Saengerfest, May 11 to 14, 1914
AVAILABLE FOR CONCERTS, ORATORIOS and MUSICALES
Manager R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, New York

"The perfection of Quartet playing."—London Daily Mail.
The World's Greatest Chamber Music Organization. The

FLONZALEY QUARTET
Tour 1914-15 Now Booking
Management: LOUDON CHARLTON, 868 Carnegie Hall, New York

Madame Helene Koelling

COLORATURA SOPRANO
TOUR NOW BOOKING
Management, Antonia Sawyer: 1425 Broadway, N. Y. City

The Kranich & Bach grands have distinct differences that make them individual. No grand piano manufactured has the same touch, this through an improvement in the action that is of unusual advantage to the musician. A trial will demonstrate the differences and advantages.

KRANICH & BACH
New York

Ask for catalogue.

MARIE SUNDELIUS Soprano
Exclusive Management
ERTRUDE F. COWEN, 1425 Broadway, New York

MME. GRACE HALL RIHELDAFFER
SOPRANO
24 9th AVE., MUNHALL, PITTSBURGH, PA.

Florence Hinkle
....SOPRANO....
Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th St., New York

BYFORD RYAN
Three Years Leading Tenor, Opera Comique, Berlin
Vocal Studio: 28 West 63rd Street - - New York

Lionel Robsarte
Opera Tenor
Instructor to the Profession. Hotel Woodward, N. Y.

ADELAIDE GESCHEIDT
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Instructor of the Miller Vocal Art Science and The Art of Singing
817 Carnegie Hall Tel. 1350 Columbus

JOHN THOMPSON AMERICAN PIANIST
IN AMERICA SEASON 1914-1915
Management: ROBERT P. STRINE, Estey Hall, Philadelphia

Miss LEGINSKA
Hotel Grenoble, Seventh Ave. and 56th St., New York, Tel. 909 Columbus
"One of the most remarkable women pianists now before the public."—N. Y. Tribune, April 22, 1914.

HELEN BIXBY WETZEL
Coloratura Soprano
Now appearing with several Italian Grand Opera Companies. MILAN, ITALY

GERMAINE SCHNITZER
THE FAMOUS AUSTRIAN PIANIST
In America Season 1914-1915
Direction: R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, New York City
BALDWIN PIANO

LESLEY MARTIN, Bel Canto
STUDIO: 1425 Broadway, New York
SINGERS — Susanne Baker Watson, Cora Cross, Pauline Fredericks, Andrew Mack, Nellie Hart, Marion Stanley, Estelle Ward, Gertrude Hutcheson, George Bemus, George Gillet, John Hendricks, Dr. Eugene Walton Marshall, Fiske O'Hara, Horace Wright, Mabel Wilbur, John H. Stubbs, Edward Foley, Albert Wallerstedt, Umberto Sacchetti and many other singers now before the public in opera and church work.

Season 1914-15
LOUIS SIEGEL
Violin Virtuoso
FIRST AMERICAN TOUR
Management: R. E. Johnson, 1451 Broadway, New York

1914-15 SEASON 1914-15
GRACE POTTER
PIANIST
MARIE HERTENSTEIN
PIANIST
FRANCIS MACMILLEN
VIOLINIST
Exclusive Management S. E. MACMILLEN, 618 Candler Bldg., 220 West 42nd St., New York. Phone Bryant 8520

Oscar Saenger
TEACHER OF SINGING
From the rudiments of tone placing to artistic finishing for concert, oratorio, recital and opera. Teacher of famous Opera and Concert singers, among whom are:
Mme. Marie Rappold, soprano; Miss Florence Hinkle, soprano; Miss Mabel Garrison, soprano; Miss Helen Warrum, soprano; Mme. Bernice de Pasquali, soprano; Mr. Rudolf Berger, tenor; Mr. Heinrich Hensel, tenor; Mr. Orville Harrold, tenor; Mr. Paul Althouse, tenor; Mr. John Young, tenor; Miss Lila Robeson, contralto; Miss Mildred Potter, contralto; Miss Kathleen Howard, contralto; Mme. Josephine Jacoby, contralto; Miss Sibyl Conklin, contralto; Mr. Henri Scott, basso; Mr. Allen Hinckley, basso; Mr. Louis Kreidler, baritone; Mr. Albert Wiederhold, bass-baritone; Mr. Leon Rains, basso.
TEL. 687 LENOX STUDIO: 6 EAST 81st St., NEW YORK
Resume Teaching October 1st.

tween the hours of 10 a. m. and 10 p. m., on Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays of each week. Mr. Wiske will be at the offices at this time not only to try voices, but also to give any information that may be desired of him.

The complete programs and the list of soloists will be announced at an early date.

Alfred L. Dennis is temporary secretary of the association, and the members of the Festival Committee include twenty-five of Newark's most prominent men and women. The list of guarantors is rapidly nearing the desired one hundred mark.

The organization committee is composed of the following members: Wallace M. Scudder, Alfred L. Dennis, Mrs. Spaulding Frazer, James S. Higbee, Mrs. Jay Ten Eyck, Rev. Lyman Whitney Allen, Frederick Frelinghuysen, Louis Plaut, Louis Bamberger, Isabella Sims, Peter Campbell, Gen. Edward M. Hine, Maj, William Bryant, Alexander Berne, Edward Flannigan, Charles Grant Shaffer, Daniel Hervey, Frank Mindnich, Edwin Wickenhoeffer, George Kuhn and Thornton W. Allen.

Each week the MUSICAL COURIER, in the Newark letter, will publish the news concerning the festival, and also will inform its readers of other current musical happenings throughout Newark and its suburbs.

MUSIC NOTES.

Mrs. Carl Hartmann, formerly well known in Newark as Mabel Lindley Thompson, has recently published in Chicago four songs of her composition.

Hans Letz, the second violin of the Kneisel Quartet, who visited his old home at Strassburg this summer, says the Sunday Call, found himself in the German landwehr on the first day of the war. His place in the quartet will probably be taken, temporarily, by Samuel Gardner, one of Mr. Kneisel's pupils. Mr. Svecenski, the violinist of the quartet, was at his home in Croatia when the war began. He sailed on the Re d'Italia for New York. The Kneisel Quartet will give a series of concerts in Wallace Hall this winter.

On another page of this issue of the MUSICAL COURIER will be found an interesting article about Herbert Sachs-Hirsch, the pianist. Mr. Sachs-Hirsch is a Newarker, residing at 36 Stanley avenue. T. W. A.

Marie Yahr Wins Endorsement of Thaviu.

Marie Yahr, one of Chicago's best known singers, appeared during the summer in Cincinnati at the Zoo with the Thaviu Band. After the close of the engagement the conductor of the band sent Mrs. Yahr the following letter:

MARIE YAHR.

MY DEAR MRS. YAHR: It affords me sincere pleasure to inform you of the many compliments I have received both from management and public regarding your beautiful voice and fine acting during your engagement with my company.

Personally, I was more than pleased to have had the opportunity of having your services.

With best wishes for your continued success and kind personal regards, I am,

Very sincerely yours,
(Signed) A. F. THAVIU,
Conductor of the Thaviu Band.

Mrs. Dunning Is in New York.

Carrie Louise Dunning, the originator of the Dunning System of Improved Music Study for Beginners, will open her New York class for teachers, September 18.

Mrs. Dunning is at present staying at the Hotel Hargrave, West Seventy-second street, New York.

IN the choice of a piano, as in the building of a home, the object sought is the ideal. Individual ideas differ as to what is ideal in a home, but the judgment of music lovers everywhere proclaims the

STEINWAY

as the ideal piano —because the Steinway is wonderfully perfect in tone, mechanically correct in every detail, and artistically beautiful.

For your ideal home— a Steinway Piano.

STEINWAY & SONS
Steinway Hall
107-109 East 14th St., New York
SUBWAY EXPRESS STATION AT THE DOOR

FOUNDED JANUARY, 1880

MUSICAL COURIER
A WEEKLY JOURNAL
DEVOTED TO MUSIC, THE ARTS AND ALLIED LINES

ESTABLISHED
BY
MARC A. BLUMENBERG

PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY
BY THE

GRAND PRIX
PARIS EXPOSITION
1900

MUSICAL COURIER COMPANY
(Incorporated under the laws of the State of New York)
LOUIS BLUMENBERG, President
ALVIN L. SCHMOEGER, Sec. and Treas.
437 Fifth Ave., S. E. Cor. 39th St. - - - - New York
Cable address: Peguiar, New York
Telephone to all Departments 4292, 4293, 4294, 7357 Murray Hill
LEONARD LIEBLING - - - - - - EDITOR
H. I. BENNETT - - - - MANAGING EDITOR

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1914.

No. 1799

OFFICES AND REPRESENTATIVES

MIDDLE WEST DEPARTMENT—
Chicago Offices, 615 to 625 Orchestra Building, Rene Devries, General Representative, in charge.

UNITED STATES AND CANADA

BOSTON—
Blanche Freedman, 108 Hemenway St., Suite 10. 'Phone: B. B. 5554.
SAN FRANCISCO—
Alfred Metzger, Rooms 1009-1010, Kohler & Chase Building, 26 O'Farrell Street.
PHILADELPHIA, PA—
Harold Parry Quicksall, 5719 Windsor Place.
PITTSBURGH, PA.—
Hollis Edison Davenny, 5012 Friendship Ave., E. E.
ST. LOUIS, MO.—
Ernest R. Kroeger, Musical Art Building, St. Louis, Mo.
ST. PAUL, MINN.—
Johnson McClure Bellows, Musical Editor of St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press.
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Miss Ruth Anderson, 49 So. Eighth St.
LOUISVILLE, KY.—Katherine Whipple-Dobbs, 425 Fourth Avenue.
COLUMBUS, OHIO—Miss Emily Church Benham, 1299 Bryden Road.
BUFFALO, N. Y.—Cora Julia Taylor, 819 Richmond Avenue.
NEW ORLEANS—Harry B. Loeb, Box 79.
LOS ANGELES—Mrs. Jane Catherwood, 1110 W. Washington St.
KANSAS CITY—Geneve Lichtenwalter, 600 Studio Bldg.
CINCINNATI—
Mrs. Jessie P. Tyree, 9 The Westmoreland, Mason St., Mt. Auburn.
OMAHA—Jean P. Duffield, 205 Boyds Theatre.
LINCOLN, NEB.—Mrs. E. S. Luce, 1614 O St.
PROVIDENCE, R. I.—William Place, Jr., Jackson Bldg.
DES MOINES—Mrs. Caroline Young Smith, 1082 21st Street.
DENVER—Mrs. Dolores Reedy-Maxwell, 1516 Milwaukee St.
PORTLAND, ORE.—John R. Oatman, 445 Sherlock Bldg.
WICHITA, KANS.—Ralph Brokaw, 109 East 3d St.
VICTORIA, B. C.—Miss May Hamilton, 524 Michigan St.

EUROPEAN

BERLIN, W.—
Arthur M. Abell, Jenaer St. 21.
Cable Address: Abell, Wilmersdorf, Berlin.
PARIS—
H. O Osgood, 43 Boulevard Beausejour.
LONDON—
H. O. Osgood, Swiss Cottage, 16 Adamson Road, N. W. in charge. Telephone: 5379 Hampstead "In Charge."
DRESDEN—
Mrs. E. Potter-Frissell, Eisenstuckstrasse 16.
MUNICH, GERMANY—
Miss Alice L. Bryant, Finken Strasse 2.
VIENNA—
Frank Angold, Florianigasse 60.
MOSCOW, RUSSIA—
Ellen von Tideböhl, Arbatte, 34 Deneschny.
ROME, ITALY—
Mrs. Dolly Pattison, 9 Piazza di Spagna.
STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN—
Louisa Upling, Roslagsgatan 19.
LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND—
W. J. Bowden, 22 Fern Grove.

For the names and addresses of correspondents and representatives not in this list, apply to main office.

SUBSCRIPTIONS: (In Advance)

United States	$5.00	Canada	$6.00
Great Britain	£1 5s.	Austria	30 kr.
France	31.25 fr.	Italy	31.25 fr.
Germany	25 m.	Russia	12 r.

Single Copies, Fifteen Cents, at newsstands.
Back Numbers, Twenty-five Cents.

Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class Matter.

THE MUSICAL COURIER is for sale on the principal newsstands in the United States and in the leading music houses, hotels and kiosques in Belgium, England, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Switzerland and Egypt.

American News Company, New York, General Distributing Agents.
Western News Company, Chicago, Western Distributing Agents.
New England News Company, Eastern Distributing Agents.

ADVERTISING RATES:

On reading page, per inch, per year	$400.00	Front pages, per issue	$500.00
On advertising page, per inch, per year	200.00	Line (agate) rate on reading page, per issue	1.00
Column rate, per issue	150.00	Line (agate) rate on advertising page, per issue	.50
Full pages, per issue	400.00

THE MUSICAL COURIER EXTRA
Published every Saturday by Musical Courier Co.
Devoted to the interests of the Piano Trade.

MONDAY PERFORMANCES.

Owing to the large papers which The Musical Courier prints during the regular musical season, it has been found necessary to start the paper to press on Monday evening, so as to insure its going into the mails on Tuesday and its delivery to the subscribers on Wednesday, our day of publication. Reports of Monday performances in New York will, therefore, have to be curtailed to the briefest possible limit in the Musical Courier issue of the same week.

Maurice Renaud, the French baritone, is serving in the 137th Infantry Regiment and is at the front. Although Renaud is fifty-two years old he enlisted as a volunteer.

Mrs. Ruth Blumenberg, widow of Marc A. Blumenberg, arrived in New York last Saturday from Paris on the steamship France, and is en route to California for a visit.

A. J. Goodrich, teacher of theory and author of musical text books, left Geneva, Switzerland, about September 8, for Paris. Mr. Goodrich expects to return to New York October 1.

As late as September 7, there was a Wagner program at the Promenade concerts in London, so that after all Anglo-German hostilities do not seem to have extended to the music of those two countries.

Otto Goritz is not serving in the German army, as erroneously reported in many quarters. He was found to be suffering from a complaint which prevented his marching and he was excused from joining his regiment. The baritone will return to this country as soon as he is able to secure a sailing.

Theodore Spiering, the conductor and violinist, will arrive in this country from Europe about September 21. He can be addressed in New York care of Steinway & Sons, G. Schirmer, or the Musical Courier. Mr. Spiering will spend the winter in this country. Important negotiations regarding his services are now pending.

Riccardo Martin, the Metropolitan Opera tenor, cabled Charles L. Wagner, his manager, that he was to sail on the steamship Canopic from Naples on September 10, and is due to reach Boston about twelve days later. By this arrangement Mr. Martin will be available for more concert dates than originally intended, the European war having changed his plans for this season.

Despite the war, the Berlin Royal Opera opened on September 1. The public in the German capital is supporting amusements liberally and will continue to do so. Those who know say that the winter of 1870-1871 was one of the most profitable theatrical and musical seasons ever experienced in Berlin. The Blüthner Orchestra, reduced to thirty-two men, announces that it intends to continue its folks' concerts and will be able to secure substitutes for the absentees.

The great anxiety that has been felt concerning the exact location of Dr. Ernst Kunwald, and the possibility of his not being able to return from Europe in time for the opening of the symphony season in Cincinnati has been allayed in a measure by a letter received from Dr. Kunwald, written from Bavaria, and received at the office of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra Association on September 4. In this letter Dr. Kunwald gave a number of directions about matters concerning the orchestra and declared he was safe in Bavaria and would be in Cincinnati without fail to begin rehearsals with the orchestra on October 15. He said nothing that would lead one to infer he or Mrs. Kunwald, who accompanied him abroad, had suffered any hardships or were in danger at any time. In fact, his only reference to the militarism that is devastating Europe was a brief mention of "the terrible Austrian war." It is consoling to know that America is not to be deprived of the presence and valuable work of Dr. Kunwald for even a part of his regular season in Cincinnati.

One immediate significant good result for American music brought about by the European war, is the engagement of an American artist, Samuel Gardner, for the Kneisel Quartet, to take the place of Hans Letz, the German violinist, who is serving in his country's army. Young Mr. Gardner is a player of finished technic and much musical refinement and it is safe to predict that his work in his new position will show Mr. Kneisel his mistake in neglecting hitherto to give our native string players a chance in his organization.

The American Aid Society of Canada gave a concert at the Arena, Toronto, Canada, on Thursday evening, September 10, in behalf of the Canadian Patriotic Fund. The audience numbered 7,000 people. Speeches were made by the Duke of Connaught, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Sir George Foster, and their patriotic utterances aroused fervent enthusiasm. The musical program was given by Mabel Garrison, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company; George Dostal, tenor; Jerome Uhl, baritone, and Emil J. Polak, pianist. The Canadian national anthem, "O, Canada," "Maple Leaf," "Star Spangled Banner" and the Russian national anthem were sung by the quartet of soloists. Why was the "Marseillaise" omitted?

When the Musical Courier recently announced the coming American visit of Mark Hambourg, the statement now proves to have made the wish father to the thought, for nothing definite has been settled by Hambourg as to his plans for the immediate future, even though negotiations are pending for a 1914-1915 tour through the United States and Canada. It is natural that the present unsettled conditions abroad, with the consequent disarrangement of European artists' engagement calendars, should cause American managers to cast longing eyes across the ocean toward players and singers who were not to come here until later seasons, and it was a persistent New York rumor that a local impresario had secured Hambourg for this winter which caused the Musical Courier to print the news of his coming. We hope still that we were not wrong, for this admirable artist has not been heard here in a number of years, and the time is ripe for his reappearance in a country where he possesses a faithful clientele which remembers his former successes with unabated pleasure.

The arrival in America of Leopold Stokowski has practically assured a successful season for the Philadelphia Orchestra, especially as he has already filled the places of those musicians unable to leave Europe. Mr. Stokowski and his wife and party were among those who encountered many hardships before arriving in America, but Mr. Stokowski's devotion to the interests of his orchestra determined him at all costs to make the attempt, although friends had sent an ample amount of money for the Stokowskis to Switzerland and they might have gone there and waited in comfort until a more opportune moment for making the trip. But Mr. Stokowski was determined to take no chances, especially as he realized that his orchestra probably required his services now in rearranging the personnel. Mme. Samaroff-Stokowski has a busy season ahead. She will be heard during the winter with the New York Symphony Orchestra, the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, and in recital in New York, Boston, Chicago and many other cities.

A CONCERT TOUR OF THE VOLGA.

By Arthur M. Abell, Special Representative of the Musical Courier on the Tour of the Volga Made by Sergei Kussewitzky and His Symphony Orchestra.

VI.

[This communication was delayed five weeks in transit, owing to war conditions.—Editor Musical Courier.]

From Saratow our course was almost due south to Tsaritsin, about 600 versts distant. The scenery along the river offered much the same general features as hitherto. Tsaritsin is one of the most characteristic of all the Volga cities. Although it numbers 80,000 inhabitants, it is more like a big, overgrown country village than a city. The keynote of the town is dust. Such clouds of dust as filled the streets I have never seen before. The location of Tsaritsin, however, is very picturesque and the inhabitants offered much of interest. The better class of Russians formed a comparatively small percentage of the population, the rest being a motley crew of Cossacks, Tartars and Calmucks. The word Tsaritsin means "yellow water" and is taken from the color of the waters of the Volga. The town is an important commercial center and is one of the busiest and most thriving places on the Volga. Not far from Tsaritsin was situated Sarai, the ancient capital of the "Golden Horde."

At Tsaritsin, Kussewitzky was compelled to give his concert in the summer theatre, an edifice that served the purpose fairly well. Connected with it was a large garden with an open air stage, where a variety show was going on at the same time our concert was taking place. The public was very nonchalant, most of the men keeping their hats on during the entire concert. But they were very appreciative and demonstrative, nevertheless, and the theatre was also well filled. The program comprised the Rimsky-Korsakow overture, Rachmaninoff's symphony, the prelude to "Parsifal," the Beethoven C minor concerto and Liszt's "Mazeppa." At this concert Risler played the C minor concerto for the first time during the tour. It had been quite impossible to rehearse it with the orchestra, so it was presented without a rehearsal. This, of course, offered Kussewitzky an opportunity to reveal his remarkable powers as a conductor. He was quite unfamiliar with the score, as the C minor concerto is never played in Russia, and he had only gone over it once with Risler at the piano, but he followed the pianist with remarkable fidelity. Kussewitzky is a born musician and a natural leader. Although the C minor concerto is not so effective as either the G major or the E flat major, Risler played it with such exquisite finish and refinement and with such purity of style that even this naive public went into rapture over his performance.

Below Tsaritsin we entered an archipelago of small islands, which completely changed the appearance of the Volga for some miles. This archipelago passed, the Volga's giant flow again stretched itself out in an unbroken expanse on either hand. The right bank had become flat and sandy and from mid-stream it was often difficult to see where the water ended and where the land began. Numerous passenger steamers from Astrakhan, bound northward, and tugs pulling long lines of barges passed us, and occasionally on the banks we would see immense herds of cattle, sheep and also camels, for the camel is used almost exclusively here for agricultural purposes. But save for these sights and the gulls which followed us throughout our entire journey, there was nothing to confine the illimitable spaces of the river, steppes and sky. For below Tsaritsin begin the immense Russian steppes.

(1) Packing caviar for shipment at Astrakhan. (2) General view of dust-blown Tsaritsin with the Volga in the background. (3) A million fish high and dry at Astrakhan. The entire space between the men and the boats is filled with fish. (4) Kalmucks worshipping Budda in the interior of their temple. (5) A caravan of camels in the Steppes. (6) Persian deck hands loading and unloading the steamers at Astrakhan. (7) A beautiful church at Astrakhan. (8) The Theatre at Tsaritsin. (9) A Kalmuck chieftain and his wife and daughter. (10) A Kalmuck tribe enjoying their midday meal in front of their tent.

Wonderful was the play of light on the majestic sheet of water at sunrise and sunset; the ever changing streaks of gold, blue, pink, orange, lilac and mauve were a delight to the eye. The great steppes on our left are the dried up bed of an ancient sea, of which the Caspian is a remainder. These steppes are bleak and barren, wholly unsuited to agriculture, and are inhabited only by Kirghiz and Calmuck nomads. The Calmucks are of Mongolian extraction; they first appeared in Russia in the early part of the seventeenth century. The Calmucks vowed subservience to the Czar but in practice they are wholly independent of the Russian government.

On the afternoon of the next day, after leaving Tsaritsin, we paid a visit to an important Calmuck settlement on the low, verdant left bank of the Volga. When they saw our steamer anchor and our party put off in small boats, the Calmucks were astonished and believed that the Czar himself was coming to pay them a visit. We found them very peaceful and friendly. They are of middle stature and squat-figured and look very much like Eskimos; in fact, some of them resemble American Indians for they have black, straight hair, large heads, slanting eyes and a brownish-yellow complexion. They are all inveterate smokers; even the women had pipes in their mouths. They wear the loose Caucasian garment of one piece.

There are several Calmuck settlements along the Volga but the greater part of the tribes are nomads and wander aimlessly about the steppes rearing their black cattle and horses. They seem to be very friendly toward wild animals, for while we were with them an immense eagle soared above the settlement within easy gunshot, but no attention was paid to it. The Russian government formerly made several attempts to have the Calmucks adopt a settled mode of living. They were offered large tracts of land, farm buildings and a certain amount of cash, but not a single one could be prevailed upon to settle down to a regular life. So the empty homesteads had to be turned over to Russian peasants. The Calmucks burn their princes and priests after the custom of the East Indians, but the common dead are simply left on the steppes as a prey to the vultures.

We were much surprised to find that these semi-savages were devoted Buddhists and that they had erected a temple of no mean proportions, as will be seen from one of the accompanying snapshots which I took. Frame houses had been built for the priests near the temple but the rest of the tribe live in tents, something like Indian tepees. We noticed that the Calmucks nearly all had inflamed eyes and that their eyesight was in most cases bad. This eye trouble, which is quite prevalent among the 80,000 Calmucks that now inhabit the steppes of Russia, is caused by the constant blowing of the fine sand into the unprotected eyes in their rovings over the desert.

Astrakhan, the last city on our route, is one of the most remarkable towns on the globe. Its population is a mixture of Persians, Tartars, Armenians, Calmucks, Russians and Georgians. In ancient times Astrakhan was a settlement of Asiatic hordes, but about the third century of the Christian era it became the capital of the powerful Khasar Empire, that stretched over all Southern Russia. Astrakhan is favorably situated for trade, with the Caucasus, Persia and Eastern Russia and has developed into a flourishing port, second only to Odessa in importance in Southern Russia. The fishing industry here is tremendous. About 100,000 fishermen from Astrakhan are engaged in fishing on the Volga and the Caspian Sea. At least another 100,000 fish on the Volga between the source of the river and Astrakhan. The caviar industry here is the greatest in the world, although the great caviar fisheries are not situated at Astrakhan proper, but at the mouth of the Volga, some sixty miles further south. Peter the Great made Astrakhan the base of his operations against the Persians. Astrakhan carpets are famous and we had heard so much about the industry that we went to several of the leading carpet merchants, hoping to see the process of carpet weaving, but we soon discovered that no carpets are made at Astrakhan at all, but that all that go by that name are imported from Persia.

Very interesting is the harbor life at Astrakhan with its perfect seas of masts of the fishing smacks, which can be counted by the thousands. Large two and three-mast ships, which look like ocean going vessels but are, of course, intended for the Caspian Sea service only, and steamers and tugs of all sizes were constantly going and coming. It was the most animated harbor life I have ever seen anywhere. The town has a few beautiful churches and two towers of the ancient Kremlin still exist.

Curiously enough, Kussewitzky received in this remote center of commerce the greatest ovation of all. The audience was literally wild with enthusiasm and the brilliant conductor was applauded and cheered as he probably never was in his life before. It was elemental enthusiasm. Among the listeners who thronged the theatre on both evenings—for two concerts were given here—I noticed Tartars, Calmucks and many Armenians. While the Tartars and Calmucks have shown no musical talent hitherto, the Armenians have shown unusual ability in that direction. They formed twenty-five per cent. of the audience at Astrakhan. I also noticed a good many Jews. Risler's final appearance at the first concert at Astrakhan was the signal for a great ovation. The enthusiasm which his playing evoked was no less spontaneous and boisterous than that which Kussewitzky's conducting had called forth. Both Kussewitzky and Risler will remember their success at Astrakhan as milestones in their artistic careers.

At the second concert we made the acquaintance of Mlle. Kowalenko, soprano of the St. Petersburg opera, who was the soloist during the trip up the Volga, for concerts were given at some of the most important towns on the river up stream, also. Mlle. Kowalenko had just arrived from St. Petersburg, four days and four nights by express train, and although tired out by the long journey, she sang beautifully and made a splendid impression. She was heard in two arias from Rimsky-Korsakow's opera, "Snegurotschka," beautiful, grateful numbers with a distinctly Russian flavoring. The diva made a great hit and responded to the insistent applause with three encores.

At Astrakhan the morning after the second concert, Mrs. Abell and I left Kussewitzky and his party, as we had decided to return to Berlin via the Caucasian Mountains, the Black Sea and Constantinople, rather than to sail up the Volga again. In my next three articles I shall have something to say about our most interesting experiences in crossing the Caspian and the Black seas and the wonderful Caucasian Mountains. There was much merry making during our last night on board and it was with heavy hearts that we bade Mr. and Mrs. Kussewitzky (whose guests we had been for so many weeks) and our other fellow voyages adieu.

These concert tours of the Volga, which Kussewitzky proposes to make every two years from now on, must be counted among the most remarkable in the annals of music. He undertakes them from purely unselfish motives, since the receipts, although considerable, fall far short of the expenses, it being his hobby not to make money, but to awaken in the remote towns along this mighty stream the interest and love for music which is unquestionably slumbering there. This tour of 1914 was the third one undertaken by Kussewitzky and it was by all odds the most successful, as conditions were very favorable. On his first tour the attendance was small, because the inhabitants of the towns he visited were suspicious of his motives. They could not understand how an artist could be generous enough to travel so many thousands of miles just to offer them an opportunity to hear first class symphonic music. For it was clear to everybody from the start that there could be no pecuniary recompense for the distinguished conductor. However, these suspicions were speedily overcome and the second tour revealed a much more friendly attitude on the part of the public. It remained for this third tour, just completed, however, to show how really great is the gratitude and appreciation of these distant peoples. The name of Kussewitzky is now loved and revered by everyone interested in music along the Volga.

WAGNER A PROPHET?

The attached letter, whether applicable to certain contemporary conditions or not, is clever and makes entertaining reading. It was published in the New York Sun of September 9:

To the Editor of The Sun:

SIR—Where was it I read a few lines in German seemingly addressed to some mighty potentate who had not due regard for treaties? Or did I hear them spoken or sung? Yes, that was it, sung, and by a German bass. An overlord had threatened to regard a treaty as a mere scrap of paper, whereupon the astonished party of the second part said something like this to him:

"Son of Light, lightly swayed, hear and heed! Treaties hold true. All thou art thou art through treaties. . . . All thy wisdom I curse; far hence shall fly from thee Peace when thou dost not honorably and freely keep sacred thy treaties!"

One recalls also that the crafty dodging of honorable methods by this Son of Light, war lord of Walhalla, led to his ultimate destruction. But of course Wagner died before he could have conceived the possibility of his words being pointed at any one except Wotan.

New York, September 8. MUSIC LOVER.

ARTHUR SHATTUCK WRITES FROM PARIS.

Arthur Shattuck, the American pianist, was still in Paris on August 23. On that date he addressed a letter to W. Spencer Jones, of the firm of Haensel & Jones, in which he said: "This war has so completely paralyzed everything on earth that I am beginning to wonder if piano playing ever really existed. I was agreeably surprised this morning, however, on learning that my tour of England during the month of November has not been cancelled, but is to be played."

FRANCIS MACMILLEN DUE SOON.

Francis Macmillen, the violinist, has managed to reach Lucerne from Dresden, and will sail for this country very shortly from Genoa. In view of his earlier arrival here his American tour will begin several weeks sooner than anticipated, especially as his management found it easy to secure the extra dates owing to the demand for Macmillen's services. He will have an unusually busy season.

LEOPOLD GODOWSKY TO WINTER IN AMERICA

Leopold Godowsky, the pianist, will spend this winter in America, giving recitals throughout the country. It is impossible for Godowsky to reach Vienna from London, and there would be little use in his doing so, for the Meisterschule (of which he is the pianistic head) has been closed since the Austrian nation was declared to be in a state of war. Godowsky will play the Knabe piano, and is under the management of R. E. Johnston.

ALBERT SCHOTT'S LOSS.

Albert Schott, the tenor, has lost three close relatives in the war, one of them being a captain, and the other two lieutenants.

SIGHTS AND SCENES ALONG THE VOLGA.

(1) A street in Tsaritsin, showing the typical Russian wooden houses such as form the great majority of buildings in all Russian towns. (2) The interior of one of the many establishments where fish are salted down, at Astrakhan. There were one and a half million herring in this place when Mr. Abell photographed it. (3) Fishing boats in the harbor of Astrakhan. (4) The old Persian cemetery near Astrakhan. The open coffin, seen in another photograph of this series, was simply turned upside down and the body dropped into the grave. The coffin is used over and over again. (5) A Persian funeral at Astrakhan, photographed by Mr. Abell. The body is transported in an open coffin, covered only with a cloth. (6) Latest picture of Sergei Kussewitzky. (7) Some of the Kussewitzky party with a caravan that had just arrived at Tsaritsin from the Steppes. (8) A village on the Volga. (9) Afternoon tea on the Volga steamer Imperator. (10) The Buddhist Temple of the Calmucks, which was a great surprise to the visitors. (11) With the Calmucks—Four Calmuck chiefs, with Kussewitzky, Abell, Risler and Petruschku (left to right). (12) A typical Russian Provincial house, on the outskirts of Tsaritsin. Standing in front of it, from left to right: Mme. Risler, A. M. Abell, Mrs. Abell, Eduard Risler.

BOSTON'S SUBSTITUTE OPERA SEASON.

As already announced, Boston is to have its opera season at the Boston Theatre, under the management of W. H. Leahy. Mr. Leahy is a Boston man and is in no way related to the gentleman of the same name who is known to the musical world by his association with the San Francisco Tivoli and better still as Tetrazzini's manager. Mr. Leahy was for some years connected with the regular Boston Opera Company.

The Boston Theatre has been rented and expenses guaranteed by a wealthy resident of Boston, so that the material success of the present undertaking is assured. The artistic success is assured by the fact that Alexander Bevani, manager of the Bevani Opera Company, has been placed by Mr. Leahy in the position of impresario.

Mr. Bevani has engaged the following principal artists and conductors for twelve weeks of Italian opera, during which about twenty operas will be given (including "Otello," "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Pagliacci," "Norma," "Favorita," "Ballo in Maschera," "Traviata," "Rigoletto," "Gioconda," "Boheme," "Tosca," "Butterfly," "Navarraise," "Faust," "Martha," etc.): Johanna Kristoffy, lyric soprano, from the Royal Opera, Berlin; Miriam Ardini, coloratura soprano; Miss Lynbrook, dramatic soprano; Alice Gentle, mezzo soprano; Blanche Hamilton Fox, contralto; Giuseppe Tricario, dramatic tenor; Giuseppe Opezzo, dramatic tenor; Umberto Sacchetti, lyric tenor; Ferruccio Corradetti, baritone; Millo Picco, baritone; Pietro Galazzi, baritone; Pietro de Biasi, bass; Joseph Florian, bass; Arturo Bovi, conductor; Ignacio Castillo, conductor; Corruccini, prompter.

Four operas will be given each week, the bill for the first week, beginning October 5, being "Aida," "Carmen," "Trovatore" and "Lucia." The chorus, orchestra and ballet of the regular Boston Opera Company have been engaged for this substitute season of opera at the Boston Theatre. The scenery and costumes are being made in Boston.

Prices will be from $3 to $1.50 for the main body of the house, 600 reserved seats at $1 and gallery seats and admission at fifty and twenty-five cents.

In addition to the regular artists engaged for the season it is planned to have a number of others appear at "guest" performances.

UNPATRIOTIC.

It was announced in the MUSICAL COURIER of September 2 that "Chicago makes known the unwelcome news that it will have no opera season this winter, owing to the uncertainty of getting its artistic personnel in time. All of them are in Europe and several of the principals are fighting with the armies there. The board of directors have cabled Cleofonte Campanini, who is in Italy, to notify the various members of the company that all contracts have been canceled." Several weeks ago the Chicago Opera Company sent notices to the daily papers stating that singers were exempt from military duties and at that time the MUSICAL COURIER promptly printed a denial, stating that singers had to serve their colors. Indeed many singers distinguished themselves on the battlefield in the Prussian war of 1870, several of them showing so much courage in battles as to be honored with the military cross.

The closing of the Chicago Opera Company does not seem to have been a necessity, reports our Chicago office, especially if it is true that the subscriptions for this year were larger than those of the previous seasons. The Chicago Opera Company lost much money for its directors and backers on tour last year and the amount of the loss was published exclusively in the MUSICAL COURIER several months ago. The deficit was a great shock to the directors, even though one member of the board denied that the loss was serious. However, the truth of the matter is that the tour of the Chicago Opera Company, financially speaking, was a fiasco, while artistically it was a big success.

It is a fact that some French and German artists of the Chicago Opera Company went to the front, but French and German artists were greatly in the minority in the ensemble of the Chicago Opera. Outside of Heinrich Hensel, tenor, there was no other German male singer. Among the Frenchmen who could not return to this country were Lucien Muratore, Vanni Marcoux, Gustave Huberdeau, Edmund Warnery and Marcel Charlier. Those artists could have been replaced by American singers. In the French operas Clarence Whitehill could have replaced the French singers in either the basso or baritone parts, as he has sung the French repertoire at the Paris Opera Comique, and it is said he is as good an exponent of the French school as of the Wagnerian repertoire. There is in Chicago a tenor of the name Wegener, who has met with considerable success in England in Wagnerian operas, who could have been given a chance, and Henri Scott, who had been reengaged, would have been able to sing many roles in which he had not as yet been heard in America. Furthermore, there are many American singers who have had operatic training who could have jumped in and most of them would have made a success.

This war was an opportunity for American artists to come to the front and the directors of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, all of whom are American, should have given a chance to their fellow citizens to endorse the work of American singers.

"It has been rumored this week," reports our Chicago office further, "that Chicago will have an opera company anyway this year, probably in the coming of the Century Opera Company of New York."

A MATTER OF TEMPERAMENT.

A mercurial temperament may be a very good equipment for a musician, and for artists in general; but in these stirring times of war the even tempered man with the cool head is the better off. What is the use of being wafted to the cloudy heights of the seventh heaven, or plunged into the ice of Dante's deepest hell by a mere report in the newspapers?

Why waste so much good energy in emotional excitement?

No amount of pro-Germanism, pro-Frenchism, pro-Britishism, or pro-Russianism can help or hinder the result at all. The end of the war will be determined by the armies in the field, the navies on the sea, the money in the banks, and the food supplies.

It is better far for the musicians of America to attend to their own affairs and leave fighting to professional soldiers, who would be the first to ridicule the armchair strategy and the office tactics of their civilian censors throughout the world.

No doubt we all take sides, one way or the other. We cannot help doing so, because we are all creatures of emotion first, and men of reason a long way after. But let us remember that our sympathies and prejudices are valueless. They concern ourselves only, and are impotent to shape the destinies of the belligerents.

We call to mind a passage in an essay by the Scotch philosopher, Hume, which serves our turn at this moment. Says Hume, referring to a certain book: "Does it contain any abstract reasoning concerning quantity or number? No. Does it contain any experimental reasoning concerning matter of fact and existence? No. Commit it then to the flames; for it can contain nothing but sophistry and illusion."

We suggest that our musicians and music students employ their time in attending to their musical advancement rather than in sophistry and illusion about affairs over which they have no control whatever even if they have the military skill of a Joffre, a von Moltke or a Kitchener.

It will do no harm to look ahead. What will be the conditions we must face next spring, or later in the season? Naturally, we cannot tell. But there must be a difference in the world of music next year. These gigantic wars not only change the map; they throw down the barriers in the world of thought, and enlarge the boundaries of art as well. Beethoven is separated from Mozart more by the French Revolution than by inherent genius.

"The Revolution forged the bugle; the nineteenth century sounds it," wrote Victor Hugo.

We may safely say that present rearranging of the map, and shattering of old customs and conventions, will have an enormous influence on the thought, literature, art, and music of the future. We shall see some of the effects of this upheaval, but not the whole of them, for they will be far reaching, long after we have joined the great majority. In the meantime it is advisable to study music and general self culture, leaving the war to those in the fighting line.

Let our strategy be to keep abreast with the times in musical thought and postpone the dreaded day when we will be classed "Old School," and be routed from our entrenchments by the raw recruits of the newer epoch that is about to be born amid the travail of the world's most terrible war.

FOR AMERICAN OPERA.

The energetic and patriotic gentlemen of Philadelphia who see no reason why a first class opera company should not be organized for the American season, notwithstanding the probable defection of numerous popular European artists, will be interested in the news which has just reached New York that George Hamlin has obtained passage on a steamer leaving Naples September 10, after having been obliged to cancel the European engagements which were to have kept him abroad until the middle of January.

As Mr. Hamlin's American concert tournée does not begin until February, he will probably be free until that time to lend his aid to a new operatic venture. With such a sterling singer and actor to head the tenor section, and with the probable availability of Clarence Whitehill, Henri Scott, David Bispham, Francesco Daddi, Herbert Witherspoon, William Hinshaw, Francis Maclennan, Allen Hinckley and numerous other male artists of recognized distinction; with no lack of feminine stars, from Schumann-Heink to Mary Garden; with a chorus and ballet which could be eked out by recruits from the opera schools of Boston, New York and Chicago, it would seem that a thoroughly admirable company might be marshaled together.

WORD FROM THIBAUD.

The first word which Loudon Charlton has had from Jacques Thibaud, the French violinist, has come indirectly through Thibaud's London agent, who writes: "I have just received a letter from Thibaud in which he says, 'Assure Mr. Charlton that despite the war I shall be in America for my tour as arranged.' Thibaud's plans include an appearance in London before he comes to this country in December, and he will remain in America until the very close of the season, his tour including appearances as far west as the Pacific Coast, and as far south as New Orleans and Texas.

AMERICA'S HOST ABROAD.

[The MUSICAL COURIER is endeavoring to keep the subjoined list up to date. As soon as arrivals are reported in this country their names are removed from this roster. Should there be an oversight, or should any of America's musical personages now abroad not be included in the appended table, the MUSICAL COURIER would be grateful to receive such information so as to be able to keep the reference schedule correct. This list is not confined to Americans exclusively but embraces also all foreign artists resident in this country or who were expected to come here for participation in the musical season of 1914-15.—Editor MUSICAL COURIER.]

A

Arthur M. Abell, J. Allen, Leonora Allen, Richard Aldrich, Pasquale Amato, Paolo Ananian, Frances Alda, Richard Arnold, Arthur Aldridge.

B

Louis Blumenberg, W. L. Blumenschein, Birdice Blye, Alice L. Bryant, Mrs. Norah Brandt, Enid Brandt, Mrs. H. H. A. Beach, Charles Bowes, Eddy Brown, Thuel Burnham, John Braun, Alice Bingham, Mrs. George Beck, Helen Blain, Lillian Blauvelt, Carlo Buonamici, Rudolf Berger, Alessandro Bonci, Ferruccio Busoni, Willy Burmester, Amadeo Bassi, Lucrezia Bori, George Barrere, Grace Burnap, Hope Hopkins Burroughs, Mrs. A. M. Blair, Wilhelm Bachaus, Jessie Baskerville.

C

Enrico Caruso, Julia Claussen, Cleofonte Campanini, Shanna Cumming, Lina Cavalieri, Arthur M. Curry, Claude Cunningham, Augusta Cottlow, Pauline Curley, Lucy Call, Grace Cole, Marian Clark, Kittie Cheatham, California University Glee Club, Gertrude Cleophas, Jane Noria-Centannini, Maria Cavan, Julia Culp, Francis Coppicus, Jacques Coini, Ernesto Consolo, Charles Cooper, Andrea Casertani.

D

Mildred Dilling, Laurette Duval, Vernon d'Arnalle, Adamo Didur, Charles Dalmores, Norah Drewett, J. F. Delma-Heide, Jenny Dufau, Emmy Destinn, Eleonora de Cisneros, Gaston Duchamel, Loretta del Valle, Marie Dentscher.

E

Annie Ellermann, Albert Elkus, Emma Eames, Edwin Evans, C. A. Ellis, William Engle.

F

George Fergusson, Truman Fassett, Mrs. E. Potter-Frissell, Benjamin Fabian, Geraldine Farrar, William Förster, Anna Fitzhugh, Carl Flesch, Edoardo Ferrari-Fontana, Flonzaley Quartet, Martha Falk-Mayer, Sam Franko, Rita Fornia.

G

Giulio Gatti-Casazza, Louise Gunning, Leopold Godowsky, Katherine Golcher, Katharine Goodson, Esperanza Garrigue, Hedwig Glomb, Emily Gresser, Mary Garden, Paolo Gruppe, Emilio de Gogorza, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, Clara Clemens-Gabrilowitsch, Aristodemo Giorgini, William J. Guard, Paolo Gallico, A. J. Goodrich, Albino Gorno, Otto Goritz, Dinh Gilly, Elena Gerhardt, Joseph Gotsch, Mr. and Mrs. Felix Garziglia, Mrs. Warner Gibbs, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Gans, Archer Gibson.

H

Julia Hostater, Sara Hayman, David Hochstein, Ellis Clark Hammann, Sara Heineman, W. H. Henderson, Sue Harvard, Margaret Huston, Edwin Hughes, Ada Soder-Hueck, William Hinshaw, Edward Hargreave, Elmer G. Hoelzle, Allen Hinckley, Genevieve Houghton, Alfred Hertz, Heinrich Hensel, Frieda Hempel, Marie Hertenstein, Josef Hofmann, Hans Himmer, Edna Hoff, Walter Heermann, Carl Hillman, George Harris, Jr.

J

Sascha Jacobson ,Anna Taylor Jones, Carl Jörn, Clayton Johns, Edward Johnson, Hermann Jadlowker.

K

Grace Kerns, Mme. Rider-Kelsey, Earle G. Killeen, Sergei Kotlarsky, Georgia Kober, Adele Krueger, Fritz Kreisler, Dr. Ernst Kunwald, Leopold Kramer, Louis Koemmenich, Walter Kirschbaum, Frank King-Clark, Mrs. Frank King-Clark.

L

Felice Lyne, Hans Letz, Kathleen Lawlor, Leslie Loth, James Liebling, Cordelia Lee, Lucille Laurence, Marie White Longman, Josef Lhevinne, Georges Longy, Frank la Forge, Theodor Latterman, Henri Le Roy, Mario Lambardi, Dr. and Mrs. Lovette, Edwin H. Lemare, Elizabeth Leonard, Louis Lombard.

M

Charles Henry Meltzer, Florence MacBeth, Zitella Martin, Marguerite Melville, Beulah Munson, Alma Moodie, Francis Maclennan, Florence Easton Maclennan, Christine Miller, Harry Munro, Marie Mohler, Francis Macmillen, Isolde Menges, Dr. Karl Muck, Ottilie Metzger, Lucian Muratore, Vanni Marcoux, Margarete Matzenauer, André Maquarre, Elisabeth Mack, Hans Merx, John McCormack, Daniel Maquarre, Katharine McNeal, Leopold de Maré, Laya Machat, Mrs. Daisy McKay, Victor Maurel.

N

Louise Nikita, Emma Nevada, Mignon Nevada, Hildegarde Nash.

O

Hendrikje Ohlsen, H. O. Osgood, W. B. Olds, Professor Otto, Mrs. Charles Orchard, Margarete Ober.

P

Paul Petri, Carroll Badham Preyer, Louis Persinger, Mrs. Dolly Pattison, A. Buzzi-Peccia, Henry Perry, Eleanor Pochler, Harry Phillips, May Esther Peterson, Ignace Jan Paderewski, Lucille Peck, Eleanor Peocock, Kathleen Parlow, Giorgio Polacco, F. Parme, S. van Praag, Anna Pavlowa.

Q

Alfred Quinn.

R

Titta Ruffo, Kate Rolla, Claude Reddisch, Meta Reddisch, Leon Rains, Anita Rio, Elizabeth Reeside, Léon Rothier, Henry Russell, Marie Rappold, Albert Reiss, Jacques Renard, H. Royer, Leon Rice.

S

May Scheider, Gaston Sargent, Viola Gramm-Salzedo, Gladys Seward, Arnolde Stephenson, Carl Stasny, Wager Swayne, Irma Seydel, Theodore Seydel, Arthur Shattuck, Kurt Schindler, Ernest Schelling, Sigismund Stojowski, Albert Stoessel, Oscar Saenger, Andrea de Segurola, James Sauvage, C. Wenham Smith, Ethel C. Smith, Pitts Sanborn, Oscar Seagle, Katherine Stevenson, Herman Sandby, Ella Spindler, Alexander Savine, Frank Steen, Loyal Phillips Shaw, Eleanor Spencer, J. D. Sample, Leo Slezak, Maria Sammarco, Arrigo Serato, Sevcik Quartet, Antonio Scotti, Max Smith, Josef Stransky, Giulio Setti, Leo Schultz, Ann Swinburne, Rudolph E. Schirmer, Arthur P. Schmidt, Bruno Steindel, Umberto Sorrentino, George W. Stewart, Harry Rowe Shelley, Marcella Sembrich.

T

Louis Campbell-Tipton, Louise Gerard-Thiers, Arturo Toscanini, Jacques Thibaud, Luisa Tetrazzini, Otto Tuft, Oswald Thumser, Enrico Tremonti, Elizabeth Topping, Isadore Troostwyck.

U

Otto Urack, Josef Urban, Jacques Urlus.

V

Alice Verlet, Otto A. Voget, Edna ver Haar, Coenraad von Bos, Luisa Villani, Ferdinand von Inten, Constantin von Sternberg.

W

Felix Weingartner, Helen Bixby Wetzel, Edyth Walker, Hermann Hans Wetzler, Clarence Whitehill, Marie Louise Wagner, Nancy White, G. C. Weitzel, Helen Warrum, Coral Wait, Carolina White, Priscilla White, Frank Waller, Beatrice Wheeler, Herman Weil, Anton Witek, Vita Witek, E. Walther, Edith Bower Whiffen, Grace Bonner Williams, Frederic Warren, Mrs. Warren.

Y

Eugen Ysaye, S. Costantino Yon, Pietro A. Yon.

Z

Alice Zeppilli, Katherine Ziegler.

Returned and Returning.

Riccardo Martin, tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, is en route to New York from Naples via Boston on the steamship Canopic. This boat left the Italian port on September 10 and is due at Boston about September 22.

Daniel Visanska, the violinist, and teacher, is also on the way to America.

Alice Garrigue Mott, the New York vocal teacher, returned on the steamship Laurentic, arriving in Montreal September 5. Mme. Mott is at present on Lake Champlain.

Philip Spooner, the American tenor, returned to his home in New York last week. He came over on the steamship Laconia, which reached Boston September 9.

Theodore Spiering sailed for New York on September 12 aboard the steamship Nieuw Amsterdam, from Rotterdam.

Albert Lindquest, the Chicago tenor, returned to the [illegible] from Europe on September 7.

George Hamlin, the tenor, sailed from Naples [illegible] 10 and should reach this country about twelve days [illegible]

Hattie Clapper Morris, the New York vocal teacher, has returned from London.

Herbert Sachs-Hirsch, the pianist, has returned to New York from Berlin. He came over on the steamship Rotterdam, arriving in New York September 7.

F. Wight Neumann, the Chicago concert manager, was also a passenger on the steamship Rotterdam, arriving here on Labor Day.

Mrs. J. B. Kendall, Mrs. Josef Kaspar and Henry Kaspar are Washington, D. C., musicians who have returned to their homes from Europe.

Anna Case, the Metropolitan Opera soprano, will return about September 16. She sailed from England on the steamship Royal George, via Montreal, September 9 and is due there September 15 or 16.

Dr. William C. Carl, the American organist, sailed from Liverpool, September 12, on the steamship Mauretania.

Helen Stanley, the Century Opera soprano, arrived on the steamship Rotterdam early last week.

Edward Collins, the pianist, returned from Europe last week on the steamship Rotterdam.

Katharine Hoffmann, the pianist, and accompanist for Mme. Schumann-Heink, arrived in New York last week on the steamship Rotterdam.

Hermann Genss, composer-pianist, also was a passenger on the Rotterdam.

Bertha Bauer, directress of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, has returned from Europe.

Elvira Leveroni, contralto of the Boston Opera Company, arrived in New York September 11 on the steamship Celtic from Liverpool.

Mrs. Otto H. Kahn arrived on the Mauretania September 3.

Leon Sametini, Adolf Mühlmann, Walter Knupfer and Ettore Ruffo, members of the Chicago Musical College faculty, are expected back from Europe this week.

Marguerite Valozy, pianist, arrived on the steamship Minnetonka, September 7.

Herbert Foster Sprague, the Toledo organist, will sail on the steamship Philadelphia from England, September 19.

Pasquale Amato, the Metropolitan Opera baritone, is expected to sail from Italy on September 26.

Agide Jacchia, conductor, of the Century Opera Company, is reported to be returning on the steamship Ancona, of the Italian steamship line.

Andreas Dippel has sailed on the Potsdam, according to a cable received by the Dippel Opera Comique Company direction.

Svecenski, of the Kneisel Quartet, sailed on the steamship Re d'Italie, August 31.

Elinor Comstock, principal of the Elinor Comstock Music School, New York, has returned from Europe.

William Beck, baritone of the Chicago-Philadelphia Opera Company, arrived in New York on the steamship San Guglielmo from Italy.

Sam Lamberson, the Spokane, Wash., pianist-teacher, returned on the steamship Rotterdam.

Marie Kaiser arrived on the steamship Principesse di Mafalda from Italy.

Rudolf Ganz, the Swiss pianist, is expected to arrive in New York September 18 on the steamship Antilles.

Louis Siegel, the violinist, arrived in Montreal on the steamship Megantic.

Frank Gittelson, the violinist, sailed from Rotterdam on the Nieuw Amsterdam September 12.

Paul Althouse has arrived on the steamship San Guglielmo from Naples.

Mrs. William Rogers Chapman, president of the New York Rubinstein Club, has returned from Europe.

Edythe Reily, cellist, was a passenger on the steamship Arabic, which arrived September 4.

Roderick White, the violinist, has returned to New York.

Heinrich Gebhard, the Boston pianist, expects to sail from Naples for New York, September 17.

Herbert Witherspoon, basso of the Metropolitan Opera Company, has returned to New York.

Henrietta Michelson, pianist, has returned from Europe.

Bainbridge Crist, American composer, who has been residing in London, is now in America.

Elmer Keye, the American tenor, returned on the steamship Rochambeau, September 7.

Ruth Blumenberg (widow of Marc A. Blumenberg) returned from Paris last Saturday on the steamship France and proceeded to California for a visit.

Jeanne Jomelli is reported to have sailed from England, September 12, on the steamship Lusitania.

Josef Hofmann, the pianist, sailed on the steamship Antilles from Genoa for New York September 11.

Louise Bramhall, well known because of her active interest in the Hotel Plaza, New York, salon concerts, booked to return on the steamship Campagnia, September 17.

Karl Jörn, tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, has arrived in New York from South America.

Agide Jaccobia, conductor of the Century Opera House, New York, returned on the Ancona, September 12.

CENTURY OPERA OPENS.

The Century Opera House, New York, opened its season on Monday evening, September 14, with an altogether brilliant performance of Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet." It is evident from the spirit of genuine festivity noted upon this occasion that the public is inspired by a very real enthusiasm for the enterprise, and it is no less evident that the expectations of our public will not be disappointed during the coming season, for the performance of Monday evening showed not only that the high standard of last season has been maintained, but that it has in certain features been improved upon, particularly in the matter of the general cohesion of the ensemble. The Messrs. Aborn are to be most heartily and sincerely congratulated upon their success.

Among the artists who helped to realize the exceptionally artistic performance were Lois Ewell, Orville Harrold, Henry Weldon, Thomas Chalmers and George Everett. Details of their interpretation will be published in a later edition of the MUSICAL COURIER.

R. E. JOHNSTON INJURED.

R. E. Johnston, the manager, was thrown from a street car a few days ago and received such a serious injury to his hip that he has been unable to walk since. His recovery is certain, but his physicians prescribe utmost care and complete rest—in spite of which the irrepressible impresario is carrying on business as usual with the aid of a secretary, a telephone, and some telegraph blanks.

THE MUSICAL SEASON.

War or no war, the musical season in New York seems to promise exceptionally well, to judge by a telephone call received at the MUSICAL COURIER office last Thursday, September 10. The voice inquired: "Could you tell me, please, what concerts are on for tonight?"

THE WORCESTER FESTIVAL.

The fifty-seventh annual Worcester Festival will be held at Mechanics' Hall in that city on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of next week. Following its usual custom, the MUSICAL COURIER will have a special representative in attendance.

SIMPLE MATHEMATICS.

New York City has 5,333,537 inhabitants, and so there remains nothing to do for the managing and concertizing fraternity except to get the 5,333,537 to listen.

CARL BRAUN SAFE.

Carl Braun, of the Metropolitan Opera, is reported to be safe in Philadelphia, whither he escaped soon after the declaration of war in Germany.

Phyllis at the Piano.

Against the sky's ethereal bloom
A curving line of silver's set;
Like flowers long-stemmed, of shining hue
The stars hang trembling from the blue.
From out the thicket's od'rous gloom
A nightingale makes amorous fret.

Within the softly shadowed room
I watch her hand's pale rhythmic grace,
While on the silence slow unfurls
Long notes, like pearls
Unstrung and fine; and thro' the gloom
My heart divines her face.

—Julia Neely Finch.

"Does the musical critic actually hear the faults that he blames and the virtues he praises in opera and concert," asks the Literary Digest of August 22, "or do his training, sound-habits, nervous system, and so on, betray his ear?" In the Scientific American (July 25) there is mention of Professor Marage's musical experiments with three hundred students at the Paris Sorbonne, as a result of which he "wonders if musical critics are not often influenced by the special dispositions of their auditive nerves. The particular action of vibrations on each nervous system, the habit of hearing certain sounds, and, lastly, the previous education must deprive the artistic criticism of the value possessed by the scientific criticism." Finally, comes the question as to whether all vibratory disturbances in the air are audible. The Paris Cosmos (July 9) discusses Dr. Gianfranceschi's observations which show that the number of vibrations necessary to enable a sound to be heard is not constant and varies from two to forty or more. Says Cosmos: "Dr. Gianfranceschi, however, was able to recognize certain sounds of much shorter duration—less than a hundredth of a second, but it should be said that these sounds were very familiar ones, such as the voice of a singer who had assisted him for several years in his studies of the vowel sounds. In this case his ear had become habituated by practise to recognize a given sound more and more quickly. When sung by another voice, the same sounds required for identification a longer time, of the usual order of magnitude."

All of the foregoing makes us feel more or less like a scientist ourself, for nine years ago, in that column of truth and research, called "Variations," we wrote the following (MUSICAL COURIER, February 22, 1905):

"Until last week I confess I had but small regard for cellists. Having myself studied the piano, I shared with most other pianists the ill concealed contempt which they feel for their cousins of the stringed instruments. Nearly all the cellists I ever had known were men of a doleful cast of countenance, with a cynical view of life, fond of wearing flowing neck garb and colored silk handkerchiefs and given to a chronic bewailing of the lack of solo opportunities on the cello and the dearth of an adequate concert literature for that instrument. One cello playing chap of my early Berlin days had a working knowledge of philosophy, and in a certain cafe debate quoted Herbert Spencer's theory of melody. But I afterward found out that the cellist in question played piano very well and had a brother who taught piano at a municipal conservatory. For some reason or other I could not be made to believe that a cellist thought much about music after he had acquired his staccato and was able to lose any ordinary accompanist in Davidoff's 'Am Springbrunnen.' I did not change my mind until quite recently, when I met Ludolf Saitenkratzer at an orchestral concert and let fall a chance remark about 'the conductor who would not and the conductor who could not make a forte.'

"'Who is worse?' I asked.

"'Forte is a relative term,' answered Saitenkratzer, without looking in my direction.

"'But even the critics are agreed——'

"'All criticism is relative,' interrupted Saitenkratzer. and just then the symphony began.

"When the last note had sounded I turned again to the cellist and said: 'About forte being a relative quality——'

"'Is it a quality?' he asked. 'If you'd like to walk as far as my home we might go into that matter a little deeper.'

"We pushed our away around the crowded corner, and. as we swung into Seventh avenue, Saitenkratzer resumed: 'You see, I always feel a bit sorry for conductors who are accused of too much or too little forte and critics whose scale of dynamics seems all wrong. Sometimes it is and sometimes it isn't. And sometimes both the conductors and the critics are wrong.'

"'I don't quite see——'

"'Before all things we must not judge all hearers alike. whether they be conductors, critics or merely listeners for pleasure. They have their physical differences—even anatomical differences—which ought to be considered. Have you ever stopped to reflect that the thickness of the skull varies in different individuals, and have you calculated what effect Strauss might have on a person with a thin skull and Mozart on a person with a thick skull? Or do you imagine that every conductor is sensitive to sound in the same degree and manner when he stands on the platform and acts as the direct reflecting medium of the clarinets, horns, trombones and tubas, which are all pointed straight at him?'

"'Well—er—your question——'

"'The shape of the head tells an interesting story to one who knows. I need hardly remind you that at a very early period of foetal existence the cerebrum is inclosed in a membranous capsule external to the dura mater and in close contact with it. This is the first rudiment of the skull, the cerebral portion of which is consequently formed before there is any indication of a facial part. Imperfect development or ossification of these rudimentary parts often gives rise to peculiarities in hearing.'

METROPOLITAN OPERA STARS IN WAR STRICKEN PARIS.
Left to right: Arturo Toscanini, Giulio Gatti Casazza, Frances Alda, Mme. Toscanini and her daughter, Wally.

"'Then the critics who——'

"'Comparative anthropology classifies human skulls as dolichocephalic, or long, mesocephalic, or medium, and brachycephalic, or broad. Now, after determining the shape of the skull, other considerations should follow, such as the condition of the cranial sutures, the size of the auditory meatus——'

"'But are not all meatuses—I mean meati——'

"'Certainly not, nor is the auricular opening always the same in shape and position. But aside from the mere function of hearing there is, too, the doctrine (expounded by some of our best medical scientists) that regards the form and proportions of the skull as an index of the mental qualities or temperament. Have you ever looked into craniognomy at all——'

"'I read in a paper that the Bertillon system——'

"'Not at all the same thing. The measuring of the craniometrical planes has nothing to do with their construction. The brain shell or the brain bowl is studied externally by Bertillon. Do you know anything of craniotabes, for instance?'

"'I can't say that I have read him; but——'

"'Craniotabes is a circumscribed softening of the bones of the skull, resulting in patches of thinness. It is a rachitic disease of infancy. Then one's hearing may be impaired, too, by furuncle, or boil, cellulitis, impacted wax, foreign bodies, bony growths, and wounds or other injuries of the drum membrane.'

"Then the critics might——'

"'All the diseases of the ear are divided into those of the auricle, the external auditory apparatus, the middle ear and the mastoid process.'

"'Now, I suppose the middle ear——'

"'Then there are congenital malformations, such as deformities, appendages and supernumerary growths, cutaneous diseases, inflammatory processes attacking the cartilage, tumors, catarrh, congestive condition of the Eustachian tube—in the latter there is the result of a closed tube, with partial deafness and constant noise. Then the abuse of alcohol often impairs the hearing, and causes whistling or buzzing or crackling noises in the ear.'

"'That interests me. A man who drinks, therefore——'

"'And then the small bones, the muscles and the cartilages of the ear—the subject is well nigh endless. One man in a thousand has a perfect hearing ear and——'

"'I see now why dynamic force——'

"'Ah, that brings us to the subject of acoustics. And just here let me remind you of the researches—with which I assume you to be familiar—of Helmholtz, Poynting, Thomson, Sabine, Rayleigh, Ebbinghaus, and Waller, to name only a few.'

"'Of course, at college—that is—you know, in America we——'

"'The Helmholtz theory, for instance, has received confirmation on the pathological side by the discovery that, in certain individuals, the hearing of tones is abrogated over a definitely circumscribed portion of the scale (called tonal gap) or is abrogated in general, but retained over a similarly circumscribed area (called tonal island). Vivisectional experiments on dogs seem to show that excision of the tip of the cochlea (where the membrane is widest) produces a deafness to bass tones.'

"'Now, if in dogs, why not——'

"'Exactly. And then there are the purely acoustical properties of a hall or concert room, per se, and in relation to the individual room. The sound waves spread out in the surrounding medium with a velocity called the "velocity of sound" which depends alone upon the elasticity of the medium with respect to a compression and upon its density, if the medium is homogeneous. Like all waves they may experience reflection, or echoes, refraction, as when passing cold air to hot air, or dense air to rare; dispersion, inteference and——'

"'I see. For instance, the——'

"'I know what you would say. In dry air it is 331.36 metres per second. The acoustic success of a room depends largely on the nature of the tonal reverberation. It should not exceed two seconds by more than a few tenths of a second.'

"'Therefore, the critical ear, when listening for intonation on the violin, or pedaling on the piano——'

"'The material of which the hall is made must not be forgotten, as that influences the absorbing power. The capacity for hard pine wood sheathing is 0.061; plaster on wood lath, 0.034; plaster on wire lath, 0.033; audience—per square metre—0.096——'

"'Measuring audiences by the metre is perhaps——'

"'An isolated woman absorbs 0.54 and an isolated man 0.48——'

"'Well, isn't that rather——'

"'Carpet rugs, 0.20——'

"'I believe we are——'

"'Plants. 0.11——'

"'Isn't this your street?'

"'Upholstered chairs, .30——'

"'I'm afraid I'll have to be going——'

"'Oh, this is Third avenue. What a pity. It's a positive delight to meet a man so thoroughly posted and so willing to tell what he knows. I hate those persons who merely dabble in things and then assume the grand manner. You know I never read articles on music by musicians, or even criticisms about my playing. I have just given you a few hints why. If you'd like to come in and let me go over the ground thoroughly——'

"'I'm awfully obliged, but really——'

"'I could convince you——'

"'I'm sure you could. Here's my car——'

"'I admire a man who——'

"'Thank you, thank you, a thousand thanks——'

"'I could tell you, for instance——'

"'Good by. Aud Wiedersehen.'

"'You see, a conductor's forte——'

"The 'all aboard' of the conductor and a sudden jump onto the rear platform saved me. I shall never doubt a cellist again."

Forward March.

Goldmark, at the age of eighty-two, is the oldest living well known composer. Saint-Saëns and Cui are next with seventy-nine years each. Then follows Bruch, seventy-six; Gernsheim, seventy-five; Boito, seventy-two, and Sgambati, seventy-one. In the sixties one notes Tosti, sixty-eight; Philipp Scharwenka, sixty-seven; Hildach, sixty-five; Xaver Scharwenka, sixty-four; d'Indy, sixty-three; Cowen, Huber and Carré, sixty-two; Sjögren and Foote, sixty-one; Chadwick, Humperdinck, Moszkowski, sixty. Over the half century mark we find Messager, fifty-nine; Taneiew, Sinding, Sousa, Schütt, fifty-eight; Kienzl, Elgar, fifty-seven; Hubay, Leoncavallo, Puccini, fifty-six; De Koven, fifty-five; Charpentier, Franchetti, fifty-four; Bemberg, Chaminade, fifty-three; German, fifty-two; Mascagni, Pierné, fifty-one. Strauss and d'Albert are lads of fifty; Glazounow counts forty-nine and Giordano forty-five, while Perosi and Scriabine are children of forty-two, and Rachmaninoff is a baby of forty-one. In the executant ranks of the top ones are Sofie Menter, seventy-three; Patti and Richter, seventy-one; Auer, sixty-nine; Barth, sixty-eight; De Pachmann and Lilli Lehmann, sixty-six, and Carreño and Joseffy, sixty-one. The young folks include Nikisch and Paur, fifty-nine; Ysaye, fifty-six; Paderewski, fifty-five; Sauer and Stavenhagen, fifty-two; Philipp, Weingartner and Siloti, fifty-one; Melba, forty-nine; Busoni, forty-eight; Siegfried Wagner, forty-five, and Godowsky, forty-four.

Measured Music.

From the New York Evening Telegram of recent date, submitted by Gustav L. Becker:

"Wanted—Barytone solo, and harmony, 5 ft. 10 in. for organized trio, between 11 and 12 o'clock Thursday. Ted Snyder's, Strand Theatre Building."

Baritone solos five feet ten inches long should not be difficult to find. See Wagner operas. The tallest harmony we know is in Schönberg's quartet.

Cannon Balls and Baseballs.

A newsboy at Sherman square has the true American sense of proportion. Last week, when the New York ball team was defeated by the Bostons, the urchin shouted: "Extry, extry! The Germans and the Giants lose!"

How Finck Feels.

Henry T. Finck writes from the North: "These be ferocious times. My laddie has been on the warpath too; eleven woodchucks is his record. The gardeners near Camden, Me., have erected a monument to him. What do I think of the war? I gave a young lady the other day a copy of my 'Food and Flavor' and wrote on the flyleaf: 'Kaiserschmarren is better than Kaiserwilhelm.' . . . I cannot afford to miss a copy of the MUSICAL COURIER in these days of no—European—papers."

Exit Bzzzz!

Hark to the strains of the "Mosquitoes' Funeral March," the gladdest tones of autumn.

Another German Capture.

The Germans now appear to have taken Flight.

Pupils of Terpsichore.

In a new book called "The Dance," we read that "dancing is, in effect, music of the eye." Contrariwise, therefore, we shall say hereafter "Her eyes maxixed mischievously," or of a cross-eyed girl, "Her left eye hesitated noticeably, but her right optic tangoed with merriment."

Truth Will Out.

Jean Gilbert, the successful comic opera composer, makes known that he is a German and henceforth will use his right name, which is Max Winterfeld.

By Any Other Name.

In a paper called The Music Student, M. Montagu-Nathan has a three-page argument with himself as to whether the spelling should be Glazounoff, Glazounov or [illegible] now, Tschaikowsky, Tschaikovsky or Chaikovsky, Dargomijsky or Dargomizhsky, etc. What'sczh [illegible] ferenczffscw sotschc longcjskff asffvwc wehcjk haveczsc theirkkwff musiczcjskhffwv?

On the Fence.

At the Aschenbroed'l Club, the German musicians are torn by conflicting emotions. They love the Kaiser, but—the price of Pilsener is going up. LEONARD LIEBLING.

British Tribute to Yankee Invention.

We Britishers, says Answers, a British publication, owe a lot to our cousins, the Yanks—the British housewife more especially. They gave her the sewing machine. That one invention alone did more to enlighten her labors probably than any other before or since. When it came upon the scene, round the year 1846, she was doing all her sewing by hand in the old laborious way. Needlework was needlework in those days!

But when Elias Howe, a young Massachusetts mechanic, hit upon the happy idea of making a needle with one eye in the point, and, fixing it up to connect with a tiny shuttle no bigger than an acorn, nineteen-twentieths of her drudgery in this direction was forever done away with.

Since then they have given her first mechanical carpet sweepers in lieu of brooms, and later the vacuum cleaner, to say nothing of such handy household labor saving devices as knife cleaning machines, washers and wringers, gas stoves and geysers.

As regards her personal dress and adornment, curl papers have been completely superseded by metal "curlers" and other similar devices, practically all of them of American origin. The dress suspender, too, comes from America; so do the rubber heels she wears on her boots.

The business man has also much to be grateful for. The typewriter, introduced into this country by the American Remington Company in 1873, stood in much the same relation to the pen as did the sewing machine to the needle. The telephone, another "Yankee notion," has expedited business methods to an enormous extent. Hardly any up to date office nowadays is complete without an American rolltop desk.

The same versatile people have given us ragtime music, golliwogs and Teddy bears. The moving staircase is theirs, and the lift—which, by the way, they term an elevator. The Pullman railway car is, of course, named after its inventor, the well known American railway magnate. The Westinghouse air brake was invented by an American engineer of that name in 1872 and adopted by the railways in this country, after exhaustive trials, in 1875.

No invention seems too big for the Jonathan, just as none is too little. He taught us how to make boots by machinery and how to shear sheep by the same means, the latter a feat long regarded by agriculturists as an impossible one. Mowing and reaping machines, of course, reached our country from theirs many years ago.

Rolled gold jewelry, cheap alarm clocks and countless other inexpensive luxuries have come from America.

Letters for Hartmann.

Letters have been received at the MUSICAL COURIER office for Arthur Hartmann and are heing held here subject to his arrival in New York.

OBITUARY.

Ludwig Englander.

The well known comic opera composer, Ludwig Englander, died last Sunday, September 13, at his home in Far Rockaway, L. I. He was sixty-four years old.

Englander came to America from Austria in 1882, and after conducting comic operas for awhile, began to write them, winning success almost immediately.

Among his works were: "The Prince Consort," "1776," "The Twentieth Century Girl," "A Round of Pleasure," "A Daughter of the Revolution," for Camille D'Arville; "The Caliph," for Jefferson De Angelis; "Half a King," for Francis Wilson; "The Little Corporal," "The Monks of Malabar" and "The Rounders" for Thomas Q. Seabrooke; "In Gay Paree," for Mabelle Gilman; "The Casino Girl," for Virginia Earle; "Sally in Our Alley," for Marie Cahill; "The Belle of Bohemia," for Sam Bernard; "The Office Boy," for Frank Daniels; "A Madcap Princess" for Lulu Glaser, and "The Two Roses" for Fritzi Scheff.

Englander was married to the sister of Paula Loewe, the former Viennese comic opera soubrette, but had been divorced. With the money he received from his operas, the late composer gradually bought a valuable and carefully selected library, which for many years had been the chief pleasure of his life and the envy of his literary friends.

Pavlowa Announces Plans.

Six new classical ballets, a forty minute modern ballroom soiree and ten new divertissements will be presented by Anna Pavlowa during her forthcoming tour of America. This announcement is made by Max Rabinoff, managing director, who has just returned from Europe to complete final arrangements for the Pavlowa tournee. Pavlowa will be surrounded by a bigger and better supporting ballet company then ever before and her complete symphony orchestra. In addition to her new program and enlarged company, Pavlowa will have an entirely new set of scenery and costumes, representing an outlay of approximately $125,000, so as properly to present her new programs.

Bakst, Annisfeld, Rothenstein, Sime, Malvina Hoffman and others have contributed their art in making the settings for Pavlowa. For the ballroom soiree Paquin, one of the most famous makers of gowns in the world, has designed all the costumes. The very last word in modern ballroom gowns will be given in the costumes for Pavlowa, and this should prove a delight to women.

Among Pavlowa's supporting company will be M. Clustine, "the pet of Paris," and M. Volinine, reputed to be the handsomest classic dancer in Europe. M. Clustine, through special permission of the Czar of Russia, is "directeur generale de choreographie" of the Paris Opera House. Prior to going to Paris M. Clustine was "maitre de ballet" of the Imperial Opera Houses in St. Petersburg (Petrograd) and Moscow. He is recognized not only as a great balletmaster, but also as an authority on ballroom dancing, and is always in demand at the Paris soirees. M. Volinine will be remembered as the dancing partner of Mlle. Geltzer at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, and also for his short tour with Mlle. Genée. When M. Volinine appeared during the Russian ballet season at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, he created a sensation. He is handsome of face, has a commanding physique, and is noted in Europe for his artistic performances while premier danseur of the Imperial Opera, Moscow. M. Warszinski, who will also dance with Pavlowa, has been granted a leave of absence from his post as premier danseur of the Warsaw Opera. He also is noted in the European capitals. Stephanie Plaskowieczka, who created a sensation last season, both because of her dancing and her blond beauty, will again be a solo danseuse with Pavlowa this season. M. Ukrainsky, another of last season's favorites, will be one of the solo danseurs this year. Those who remember Schubert's "Moment Musicale" will be pleased to know that Mlles. Butzova and Crombova, who scored in that divertissement, will be with Pavlowa once more. Stanislawa Kuhn, solo danseuse from the Opera at Warsaw, will make her appearance once more with Mlle. Pavlowa after an absence from the company for two seasons.

In addition to the classical portion of Pavlowa's program she will present forty minutes of modern ballroom dancing. No expense has been spared in providing the scenery and costumes for this soiree. A replica of one of Europe's most noted ballrooms is the setting. Paquin designed and has executed the costumes, which will be ultra in their style and modernity. Pavlowa has spent much of her summer studying modern society dances. She has originated several entirely new dances and has standardized others. These she will introduce as a part of her program. What she will present will not only be the last word in art and grace, but also will undoubtedly be the model after which all ballroom dances will be made.

Mme. Moliere in America.

Mme. Molière, dramatic soprano of the Berlin and Hamburg Operas, has just returned to New York on account of the disturbed conditions abroad. Mme. Molière was well known here before going to Europe some years ago, and her return to this city will be welcome. Her present plan is to open a studio here, and she will also be heard in concert and opera.

MME. MOLIERE.

BOSTON NOTES.

Boston, Mass., September 11, 1914.

The chief bit of musical news in Boston this week is William H. Leahy's announcement of a sixteen weeks' season of grand opera, to be given at the Boston Theatre, commencing October 5, a full account of which will be found on another page.

ELVIRA LEVERONI RETURNS.

Elvira Leveroni, contralto of the Boston Opera Company, who appeared with great success in Paris and London during the recent operatic season, arrived in New York today on the steamer Cedric, which sailed from Liverpool September 2.

HUBBARD STUDIOS OPEN.

Arthur J. Hubbard, the vocal teacher, opened his studio last week. Mr. Hubbard is not worrying over prospects for this season, when pupils are applying for lessons from all parts of the country, and even from war worried Canada.

A Tietjens Song.

Adele Laeis Baldwin, the contralto, has been singing with unusual success a song by Paul Tietjens, called "Blind." It is to be published shortly.

Address Wanted.

The MUSICAL COURIER office is holding for proper address a letter for Mr. C. Mapes.

THE GERMAN-AMERICAN TO HIS ADOPTED COUNTRY.

[By George Sylvester Viereck, in The International, September.]

The great guns crashing angrily
Sound, distant echoes, in our ear.
We pray for those beyond the sea
Whose lives to us are very dear.

We catch a mother's smile. We seize
In thought a father's hand again.
We see the house and, through the trees,
A girl's face in the window pane.

May God above them stretch His hand,
For men are mowed as fields of rye.
Destruction rides on sea and land
Or drops, like thunder, from the sky.

Columbia, though thou shed no tear,
Must thou fan hate with evil breath
Through ghouls in easy-chairs who sneer
While these our brothers go to death?

Upon their page with hellish glee
They prance their joy in black and red,
While Teutons strike for liberty,
And Teuton mothers count their dead.

While Death and warring Cherubim
O'er blood-red fields of battle flit,
Upon the shining mail of him
Who leads God's hosts, they puke their wit.

Shall these that are thy children fling
Their gibes upon our brothers' scars?
We taught our hearts thy songs to sing,
Aye, with our blood we waged thy wars.

We fought thy fight when Britain's paw
Upon thy country's heart was laid,
When the French eagle's iron claw
Perturbed great Montezuma's shade.

The dry bones of our kinsmen rot
In Gettysburg. Was it for this?
Are Schurz and Steuben both forgot?
Nay, thine is not a traitor's kiss.

Let not thy words belie the right,
Turn not from them that are thy kin!
Thy starry crown will shine less bright
If freeman lose, if Cossacks win.

The Red Czar's blight shall never fall
Upon the earth, nor freedom pale,
While the white blade of Parzival
Still guards the Teuton's Holy Grail.

HELEN BLAIN CONTRALTO
Address: Usual Agents
Residence: 29 Upper Baker St., Regent's Park, London, N.W.
Telephone 471 Mayfair

YEATMAN GRIFFITH SOLE TEACHER OF FLORENCE MACBETH
PRIMA DONNA COLORATURA OF THE CHICAGO OPERA COMPANY
Studios: Holland House, 143 Maida Vale, London

MURIEL LITTLE (Leipzig Diploma)
Voice Production Taught on Method of ELENA GERHARDT
2 Wellington Road, N. W

The most eminent Composers, best Songs and Song Cycles are to be found in the Catalogue of
BOOSEY & CO. NEW YORK and LONDON
FREE on request. THEMATICS of latest important additions
9 East 17th Street New York

HERMANN KLEIN
Teacher of Some of the Most Successful Singers Now Before the Public
Co-Editor, Garcia's "Hints on Singing"; Author, New English Version of "Carmen"; Translator, Metzler's Mastersongs, "Lieder in English."
40 Ave. Road, Regent's Park, N. W., London

Cable: Keynote, London
CONCERT DIRECTION
DANIEL MAYER
Established 1890
Chatham House
George Street
Hanover Square, W.,
LONDON, ENGLAND
ENGLAND'S PREMIER AGENCY

HEINRICH GEBHARD Pianist
Management: GEORGE WHIPPLE
162 Tremont Street :: :: :: Boston, Mass

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. HUBBARD
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
SYMPHONY CHAMBERS BOSTON.

IRMA SEYDEL
America—Entire Season 1914-1915
Address, THEODORE SEYDEL, 104 Hemenway St., Boston

GEORGE EVERETT
BARITONE—Boston, Covent Garden, Century Opera Companies
Manager, Frederick M. Waterman, 177 Huntington Avenue, Boston

FELIX FOX PIANIST
Summer Classes June 8 to July 25
STEINERT HALL ANNEX - - BOSTON, MASS.

WILLARD FLINT BASS
Soloist Nine Times, HANDEL and HAYDEN SOCIETY
246 Huntington Avenue, Boston
Management: Briggs Musical Bureau - Chicago

CLARA TIPPETT
TEACHER OF SINGING
321 Pierce Building - - - Boston, Mass.

Priscilla WHITE Teacher of Singing
602 Pierce Building
BOSTON - MASS

1

2

3

4

5

6

7

8

9

10

11

12

13

14

15

16

17

18

19

IN VIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS.

[Russia—No. 3.]

(1) A Caucasian mountain view of inspiring aspect. (2) "Elborus," the highest mountain of the Caucasus. (3) Caucasian warrior doing the "Dance of the Sword." (4) Kisslovodsk, a Caucasian watering place. (5) Quartet of Caucasian mountaineers of the tribe "Sazanderes." (6) The Tiflis Opera. (7) Caucasian girl dancing the "Lesghinka." (8) Majorenhof, on the shore of the Baltic Sea. (9) The Warsaw Philharmonie. (10) New picture of Czar Nicholas II of Russia. (11) The Kremlin of Moscow; scene in "The Merchant Kalashnikow." (12) Inside of the Kremlin grounds in Moscow. (13) The Charkow Theatre. (14) Odessa's sea stairs. (15) Odessa Opera House. (16) Ancient monastery at Kiew. (17) The Rostow Theatre. (18) Rostow on the Don. (19) The Kiew Opera.

LURA ABELL'S HOMECOMING.

Assistant Berlin Representative of the Musical Courier Comes Over on the Steamship Rotterdam Which Brought Back Many Prominent Musicians and Students—An Interesting Account of Conditions in Germany and the Homeward Voyage—Brilliant Benefit Concert En Route—Baseball Talk Greets Passengers Upon Nearing New York.

Bridgeport, Conn., September 11, 1914.

On the evening of the last Sunday in June I was at the home of some German friends in Friedenau, one of the southern districts of Berlin. We had finished supper and were discussing plans for the holidays, which I was to spend with them, when we were startled by one of the children, who ran in from the street bringing an "extra" that told briefly of the assassination of the Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his wife.

Although we were horror struck at the barbarity of this deed, we did not dream that thousands and thousands of lives would be sacrificed to expiate the crime, that countless other thousands would suffer untold miseries and that I myself, among a host of other foreigners, would be driven from the country as the result of that atrocity.

At any rate there had been so many threats of war during the past few years that we had grown used to war talk and no longer took it too seriously. Every one went away for the holidays as usual.

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Abell had so recently returned from Russia that their intention was to remain in Berlin during the summer. But July brought such unusually hot weather that they left only ten days before Germany declared war, for the island of Rügen in the Baltic Sea.

From July 26 the situation developed so rapidly, however, that we could scarcely prepare ourselves to grasp the awful facts. The people did not want war and all the signboards in the capital bore great placards headed "Gegen den Krieg" (Against the War) and announcing a mass meeting of citizens to discuss the situation. But the danger was now too imminent to ignore and the army must be ready to set in motion on a moment's notice, if necessary. So, with that calm, methodic system so characteristically German, the government prepared for the worst, although the Kaiser assured his people that he was sparing no effort to prevent the catastrophe. Heralds were sent to the summer resorts on the Baltic to call the people home, for once the army commenced mobilizing, all trains must be at its service and civilians would be unable to travel.

The island of Rügen being less accessible, my brother did not get the news in time to get away before war against Russia was declared and after that there was no leaving for home until mobilization was completed.

The Kaiser addressed the people from a window of the Royal Palace. The enthusiasm of the listening crowds was wonderful and the Kaiser was cheered to the echo, after which all joined in patriotic songs. The accompanying photograph shows the people massed in front of the palace just after the Kaiser had concluded his speech.

Meantime my brother waited at Rügen all through the mobilization. For several days I did not know where he was, as I was told that the island was covered with soldiers and all civilians had been taken off. The latter was not true, but it kept me from writing to him and then it was his turn to be worried as to the state of things in Berlin. Finally, on August 12, he and my sister-in-law and niece were able to get a train for home, but it was a long and tedious trip.

Meantime my brother arrived from Rügen, and learning that a special train, in charge of the United States Embassy, would leave at once to carry Americans into Holland, my brother advised me to take advantage of the opportunity to get out of the country while the coast was still clear. For there was always the fear that Holland might be forced into the war.

My brother decided to remain in Berlin until the war is over or until such time as conditions make it dangerous to remain there. Many of the permanent residents among Americans followed this course, among them Augusta Cottlow and her family.

In Holland I was obliged to wait two weeks to get passage, leaving August 29 on the steamship Rotterdam.

When the Rotterdam steamed up the lower bay of New York, on Sunday night, September 6, and the friendly lights of home shores came into view there were cries of joy on all sides. During all the nine days of the voyage the principal idea in every mind on that much overcrowded ship had been "just to get home." There had been rumors on board that Holland might have to abandon her neutrality before our vessel made port and many were afraid that she might turn back, as the Kronprinzessin Cecilie had done, and leave us stranded in Holland. Twice we had been stopped by English men of war. Off Land's End three of them surrounded the steamer, while her papers were being examined, and another rumor had it that so many difficulties were put in the way of our continuing the voyage that the Rotterdam would be the last Dutch ship across.

So, after all the disquieting reports that had worried the refugees during the trip, every one was sincerely thankful to see the shores of New Jersey and Long Island outlined by pin points of blinking lights.

A small boat ran up alongside, as we lay to, and we hung over the rail to hear the first words of welcome. Most of us had had no news from America for weeks and we knew that there had been great anxiety in many a home for the welfare of friends caught in the warring

Photo at the left: The proclamation of "state of war" being read in Berlin before the Zeughaus on Unter-den-Linden by a lieutenant of the Alexander Regiment.

Lower right photo: An enthusiastic crowd before the Royal Palace in Berlin cheering the Kaiser, who had just addressed them, in the early days of the war.

Group to the right: Mme. Bloomfield Zeisler, Mme. Schumann-Heink, Mme. Gadski, and Max Zach, on the steamship Rotterdam. Taken expressly for the MUSICAL COURIER.

Center photo: The steamship Rotterdam held up by English men-of-war, three of which surrounded the steamer off Land's End.

Photo at reader's left: Back row, from left to right, Mme. Bloomfield Zeisler, Mme. Schumann-Heink, Mme. Gadski, Max Zach, Helen Stanley, Clayton Johns, Eleanor Painter; second row, Alexander Bloch, Hermine Meuth, Eleanor Spencer, Miss Bloch, on board the steamship Rotterdam.

countries. So we listened breathlessly for the message which had brought the little boat out to meet us. We couldn't see the man who delivered it, but it was a warm, robust voice that shouted up to us in confident and reassuring tones: "The Giants are going to lick Boston tomorrow!"

And suddenly we realized that there are other things of importance in the world, besides war and refugees from war—and not the least of these is baseball.

There were a good many musicians on board the Rotterdam, some first class, some second class, some steerage. People took what they could get in the way of bookings, and even Mme. Schumann-Heink had to content herself with what she jokingly called "first class steerage quarters"—one of the temporary cabins arranged in the baggage room. Mme. Gadski and her daughter, too, had to take a small inside stateroom, the more uncomfortable on this trip because it was necessary for Mme. Gadski to have a slight operation performed on her throat during the voyage, which compelled her to spend much of the time in her cabin.

However, Mr. Guggenheimer, who had a cabin de luxe, placed it at the disposal of the Gadskis during the daytime, and Mme. Schumann-Heink was soon invited into more comfortable quarters by some one occupying a first class cabin on an upper deck.

Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler, accompanied by her husband, was another of the passengers on this memorable voyage. Among other musicians were Max Zach, conductor of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra; Edward Collins, the pianist, and his sister; Mme. Hoffmann, Mme. Schumann-Heink's accompanist; Helen Stanley, of the Century Opera Company; Eleanor Painter, formerly of the Deutsche Oper, whom Andreas Dippel has engaged for leading soprano roles; Eleanor Spencer, the American pianist, who is to make her second tour of the United States this season; Clayton Johns, the English composer; Hermann Genso, composer, critic and pedagogue, of San Francisco; Alexander Bloch, the violinist, and his cousin and accompanist, Miss Bloch; Hermine Meuth, pianist, and Mr. Pfeiffer, of the Philadelphia Orchestra.

There were also a good many music students aboard. The trip was trying enough for those in first and second class cabins, owing to the overcrowded conditions, but there was real suffering among the steerage passengers. Many of them, who bought third class tickets, did not learn that they were to travel steerage until they came on board. Nearly all of them were United States citizens, among them a Boston millionaire and his family, a composer, a violinist and a piano student from Berlin. They slept in their steamer chairs on deck rather than occupy the steerage berths, and, finding it impossible to eat the food provided for them, some lived on sandwiches which second class passengers carried from their table to them, or bought food, milk, eggs, etc., being charged extra for them.

Mr. Busch, the brewer, and his family were on board, and it was reported that he paid $7,000 for the captain's stateroom, but I cannot vouch for the truth of this.

With three such world celebrities as Mme. Schumann-Heink, Mme. Gadski and Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler thus brought together, demands for a concert were inevitable. A committee was formed, with A. M. Hanauer as chairman, and a concert for the benefit of the life saving institutions of South Holland and the Seamen's Home of New York was arranged for the evening of Saturday, September 5. Five hundred tickets were sold in less than an hour at $2 each, and probably as many more would have been just as eagerly purchased had it been possible to provide seats for all who wished to listen.

To Edward Collins, himself a pianist of marked ability, was given the honor of introducing the program, which follows:

Nocturne, C minor ..... Chopin
Rigoletto Paraphrase ..... Verdi-Liszt
Edward Collins.
Aria, Samson and Dalila ..... Saint-Saëns
Down in the Forest ..... Ronald Agnus Dei ..... Bizet
Mme. Schumann-Heink.
Meditation, Thais ..... Massenet
Charles Mönch.
Liebestraum, No. 2 ..... Liszt
Valse ..... Chopin
Marche Militaire ..... Schubert
Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler.
Aria, Tannhäuser ..... Wagner
Love Came in the Door ..... Max Liebling
Children's Song ..... Taubert
Johanna Gadski.

The nobility and simplicity of Mme. Schumann-Heink's singing made her audience forget at first everything but her glorious voice. But when she responded to the storms of applause with the "Brindisi" from "Lucrezia Borgia," we found ourselves wondering at the marvelous ease with which she controlled that big dramatic organ in coloratura. Her success with the audience was enormous, as always.

After Mme. Gadski's program numbers she gave the "Walküre" call and then Mrs. Beach's "The Year's at the Spring."

One of the great successes on the program was Mme. Zeisler's playing of Schubert's "Marche Militaire." It was an inspired performance, virile, exquisite in shading, and intense with a rhythm that set the pulses dancing. It was followed by such a furore of applause that Mme. Zeisler acknowledged the ovation with Edward Schütt's "A la bien Aimée."

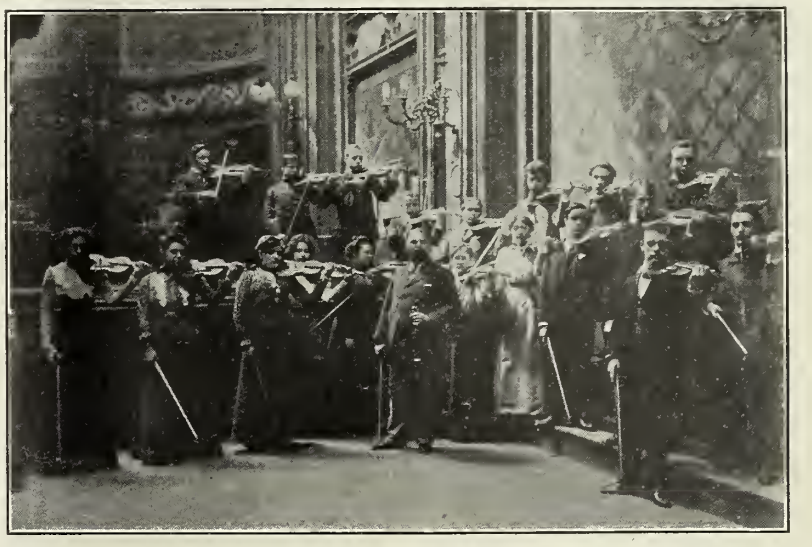
Edward Collins distinguished himself with his mature interpretations and round, singing tone.

Naturally the acoustics in the dining hall were not all that could have been desired, and those sitting beneath the balconies lost some of the finest pianissimo effects. However, from the balcony overhead, where many who were unable to obtain tickets crowded to listen, not a tone was lost and the most exquisite enjoyment was afforded.

Over $1,000 in receipts were turned over to the two charitable organizations as the result of this concert, but aside from the artistic and financial success, the event will never fade from the memories of those present, because of the intensely human and dramatic significance attached to it. When one remembers that the Rotterdam was taxed to carry over four times her usual number of cabin passengers, it will be realized to what sacrifice of personal comfort every one was subjected. It was therefore more praiseworthy that these great artists should so generously give their services under these trying conditions. The interest awakened by the concert had, moreover, a most salutary effect upon the refugees, all of whom were more or less depressed by the experiences they had been through.

I had an amusing experience in getting the snapshot of Mme. Gadski, Mme. Schumann-Heink and Mme. Bloomfield Zeisler to accompany this article. As there were 1,386 first cabin passengers, distributed over six different decks, it took considerable time to locate the three artists at the moment when weather conditions were most favorable to photography, and to get them together on the hurricane deck. But the moment they appeared to pose for me, up sprang a regiment of camera fiends from different parts of the deck, and, forming a solid line in front of the defenseless group, they opened fire, without ceremony or "by your leave." In order to get the picture myself I had to step in front of the firing line and ignore a very brusque request to "get out of the way," as I was obstructing their view of the artists.

LURA E. ABELL.



Musin Violin Classes.

Ovide Musin's celebrated system of instruction to pupils in classes, which has produced such rapid and marked progress in the work of his pupils at the Royal Conservatory of Liege and in his New York School of Violin, has heretofore been available only to those New York pupils who took private lessons.

Mr. Musin now feels that, as very many violin students have been debarred from this instruction and practice in technic and repertoire work, that the benefits derived should be extended to many who do not take private lessons; therefore he will enroll pupils who will receive class lessons only. Each lesson lasts one hour and twenty minutes.

Many violin teachers come from all parts of the country expressly to study this system of instruction in order to adopt it in their teaching. Private lessons will, of course, be continued as usual.

While professor at Liege, Mr. Musin's Royal Conservatory class became celebrated and their playing created a sensation at the Royal Opera at Brussels, when they played before royalty and the diplomatic corps, and a vast audience. Master and pupils were honored by being personally complimented by King Albert and by people distinguished in art, as well as by the press and public.

OVIDE MUSIN'S CLASS AT THE ROYAL CONSERVATORY, LIEGE, BELGIUM.

A CLASS AT OVIDE MUSIN'S VIRTUOSO SCHOOL OF VIOLIN, NEW YORK. MR. MUSIN DIRECTING.

Huss Artist Pupils Win Commendation of Celebrities.

Two of Henry Holden Huss' pupils had the rare privilege last season of playing before Paderewski, Harold Bauer, and Katharine Goodson. On the morning of the day he sailed for Europe, Paderewski invited Winthrop Parkhurst to play the finale of the Schumann concerto for him. He warmly complimented Mr. Huss and the young and gifted pianist, saying, "he plays very musically, beautifully; he has been very well taught." Eleanore Payez, one of the most gifted of the Huss artist pupils, and young Parkhurst played still earlier in the season for Harold Bauer, who also expressed himself as deeply interested in their musicianly interpretation. Katharine Goodson was also very enthusiastic over Miss Payez's playing, when, in the spring, the latter interpreted several of Mr. Huss' compositions to her.

Among some of last season's successful public recitals by Huss artist pupils might be mentioned Miss Payez's recital in Montreal, Windsor (Ont.), Wilkesbarre (Pa.), and early in the summer her third annual engagement at the Catholic Summer School, Cliffhaven, on Lake Champlain, when she gave two recitals. Edwin Stodola had several successful appearances in New York and Brooklyn. Florence Beckwith made a hit with her brilliant playing at a Cleveland recital. Winthrop Parkhurst made a delightful impression with his playing at a Brooklyn charity concert, and Ethel Thompson gave interesting and musicianly recitals in Brooklyn and Patchogue, L. I.

"Romeo and Juliet" won a bigger success at its first production in Paris than any other of Gounod's operas. "Faust," as is well known, was not appreciated at first, and made its way only gradually.—New York Evening Post.

FRANCES INGRAM

Management: SHAW & TUCKER Orchestra Building, Chicago

GEORGE SHEFFIELD, Tenor

Management Concert Direction M. H. HANSON,
437 Fifth Ave., New York.
Private address: 4654 Beacon St., Chicago, Ill.

GLENN DILLARD GUNN

PIANIST

421-424 Fine Arts Building - - Chicago, Ill.

LEON SAMETINI

Holland's Greatest VIOLINIST
Management
ALMA VOEDISCH
3941 Rokeby Street, Chicago

Lucille STEVENSON SOPRANO

Address:
4438 Berkeley Avenue, Chicago
Telephone, Oakland 1570

CHICAGO SCHOOLS AND TEACHERS RESUME SESSIONS.

A Tone of Optimism Prevails in the Middle Western Metropolis—Managerial Announcement—Members of Local Music Fraternity Returning from Europe—Many Catalogues Issued.

Chicago, Ill., September 11, 1914.

Arthur M. Burton has returned from a month's vacation and has resumed his teaching in the Fine Arts Building. From all indications the season looks bright for Mr. Burton.

WALTER SPRY SCHOOL OPENED.

The Walter Spry Music School began its fall term September 10 and the office reports the largest registration prior to the opening in the history of this institution. The school has materially increased its faculty, so that it has now one of the largest and most distinguished corps of teachers to be found in the Chicago schools. Among the new members are James Whittaker, piano department; Hugo Kortschak, Emily Barber and Orville W. Barker, violin department; Edmond Warnery, opera, and Letitia Gallaher, vocal department. Mr. Spry has built up an institution of which Chicago may well feel proud, for it offers courses which for completeness and thoroughness compare well with the best institutions in Europe and America.

CAROLYN WILLARD ANNOUNCES OPENING OF HER STUDIO.

Carolyn Willard announces the opening of her studio for pianists Tuesday, September 15. Luella Sweet and Selma Forsberg will assist with the preparatory and children's work. This opens the seventh season of the Carolyn Willard studio at 721 Fine Arts Building.

ALBERT BORROFF BACK FROM VACATION.

Albert Borroff, the well known basso, has returned from his vacation, spent in the woods of Wisconsin, and resumed his teaching at his studio in Kimball Hall.

CELÉNE LOVELAND'S ACTIVITIES.

Although Celéne Loveland has been booked for many concerts this season she does not intend to relinquish her teaching activities, and is arranging her lesson hours in such a way that the progress of her pupils will in no way be interfered with by her absence to fill concert dates. "I love the work with my pupils and their musical development is of the greatest interest to me," she says, "and it is my aim to do nothing that in any way impedes their progress."

AMERICAN CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC.

President Hattstaedt, of the American Conservatory, and Mrs. Warren, the efficient secretary, have been kept extremely busy with preparations for the opening of the new school year. The outlook for a record breaking registration is said to be most propitious in spite of the disturbance of the European war.

A number of important features have been added to the curriculum of the conservatory, additions made to the teaching space, which will further facilitate matters.

The new school year began Thursday, September 10.

Karleton Hackett and family have returned from Europe after rather strenuous experiences, which have been widely read in the columns of the Evening Post.

Wilhelm Middelschulte made his exit from Germany by way of Holland. His brother is an officer in the German army.

Ragna Linne sailed from Christiania for America on August 28.

Marie Bergersen, one of the conservatory's talented pupils, who studied during the past season in the Imperial Academy under Godowsky, made a hurried departure from Vienna and arrived safely in Chicago.

Adolf Weidig will return September 8 from Berkeley, Cal., where he spent part of the summer.

Walter Pyre, the new director of the School of Expression of the American Conservatory, has arrived in Chicago to take charge of his department.

Clarence Loomis, a former graduate and teacher of the American Conservatory, also a student at the Imperial Academy of Music in Vienna, is at present in Switzerland, but will be in Chicago soon to resume his teaching.

BRIGGS MUSICAL BUREAU.

Ernest L. Briggs announces that he has booked the course in Burlington, Ia., this year and that the following artists will appear there: Alice Eversman, soprano; Helena von Sayn, violinist; Gordan Wedertz, organist; Anita Carranza, soprano; Prudence Neff, pianist; August Carl Lentz, violinist; Janina Butkiewicz, Russian dancer; International Trio; Burton Thatcher, baritone; Mr. and Mrs. John Nichols, tenor and pianist; Grace Hamilton Morrey, pianist; Irma Seydel, violinist.

Now that the announcement has been made of Irma Seydel's sailing from Holland, all of the feature artists booked by Ernest L. Briggs are in America with the exception of Robert Dolejsi, who will probably not come to this country, but his dates will be filled by August Carl Lentz, of the German Royal Opera Orchestra, who has arrived in America.

Irma Seydel has been booked for an extensive tour covering appearances with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and dates in Sherbrooke (Canada), Buffalo (N. Y.), in Chicago with the Metropolitan Artists' Recital Course, in Burlington (Ia.), Lincoln (Neb.), Fremont (Neb.), and through Kansas and Oklahoma. The Western tour will begin during the last of February and will continue through March.

Helen Bright Bengel will open her season with a new concert program, presenting the notable compositions of Germany, France, Russia, England and Italy. She will appear in the Metropolitan Artists' series of recitals on November 15. Mr. Briggs announces that the opening of her Western tour will be in Fort Dodge, Ia., where she will give the European program for the first time this season. This appearance will be immediately following her Chicago recital.

MANY CATALOGUES AT HAND.

This office acknowledges receipt of many catalogues and pamphlets from schools and private teachers in Chicago and the Middle West. To review separately at this time

LECTURES, OPERA TALKS, AND PIANO LECTURE RECITALS
By
HENRIETTE WEBER
Also the Larkin-Weber Recitals
THE LARKIN-WEBER RECITALS
Are Creating a SENSATION
Engagements booked in all leading cities
Address MISS H. WEBER, Auditorium Building, Chicago, Ill.
or Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway : New York

MARION GREEN BASSO CANTANTE
Auditorium Building, Chicago
Home Phone: Ravenswood 5774 Studio Phone: Harrison 4868

THOMAS N. MAC BURNEY BARITONE
Voice Production Song Recitals
Three years assistant to Frank King Clark
Suite 609 Fine Arts Building, Chicago, Ill.
Phone Harrison 6889

HERMAN DEVRIES
Formerly Baritone with the Metropolitan Opera House, New York; Covent Garden, London; Grand Opera and Opera Comique, Paris; Theatre Royal de la Monnare, Brussels, Etc.
VOCAL TEACHER
MRS. HERMAN DEVRIES
ASSOCIATE VOCAL INSTRUCTOR
Studios: 518-528 Fine Arts Building - - Chicago, Ill.

BUSH TEMPLE CONSERVATORY
N. Clark St. and Chicago Avenue, Chicago
Kenneth M. Bradley, President

SUMMER SESSION
BEGINNING JUNE 22
Special Courses in MUSIC, Expression, Languages, Public School Music, Dramatic Art
Conducted by an unsurpassed faculty, including:
Mme. Julie Rive-King, Guy Herbert Woodard, Grace Stewart Potter, Mee Julie Riley, Herold von Mickwitz, Frank B. Webster, Eleanor Smith, Ernest O. Todd, Mme. Justine Wegener, Edgar A. Nelson, Edward Dvorak, Adelaide G. Lewis
The menegement announces the exclusive teaching engegement of the world's most famous baritone: CHARLES W. CLARK
Students wishing private lessons with any of the above named Artists should make application in advance.
The Bush Temple Conservatory is the only music school in Chicago which has its own Dormitory.
Reservation of rooms must be made in advance.
For Catalog and Special Literature Address: Edward H. Schwenker, Sec.

the prospectus of any of those institutions would be unfair to those not mentioned and who have been kind enough to forward this department their literature for perusal. From Chicago this office has received a very well gotten up catalogue from the Chicago Musical College, where very few changes are to be noticed. The faculty is as strong as ever and the season 1914-15 should be a most successful one at the Ziegfeld school.

The American Conservatory of Music, of which John J. Hattstaedt is the president, is always surrounded by an eminent faculty.

The Bush Conservatory, of which Kenneth M. Bradley is the director, confines its principal announcement to the engagement of Charles W. Clark as head of its vocal department. The piano, violin, organ, harmony, composition and orchestration classes remain under the supervision of the same mentors. As heretofore, Mr. Bradley will have charge of the musical history class as well as the Normal training.

One of the most interesting catalogues received this year emanates from the Walter Spry School of Music in the Fine Arts building. The faculty is one of the strongest ever assembled and the names of the teachers found in the rostrum would justify the prediction that this season will be the best in the history of the school, which insitution, by the way, will move from the sixth to the seventh floor of the Fine Arts Building early in October. The change being necessitated by the need of more space. Mr. Spry, as heretofore, will head the piano department and will play several times before his interpretation class.

The above named schools are known as the four best musical institutions in Chicago.

RUDOLPH ENGBERG BACK IN CHICAGO.

A friend of Rudolph Engberg, the Chicago baritone who when last heard from was in London, informed this office that on last Wednesday, September 9, he saw Mr. Engberg in Chicago purchasing candy at Plows and looking the picture of health. Probably Mr. Engberg came back to Chicago incognito, as neither the daily press nor the MUSICAL COURIER were aware of his presence until one of our friends gave us the above information.

DELLA THAL RESUMES TEACHING.

Della Thal, pianist, has issued cards announcing the reopening of her studio Thursday, September 10, at 610 Fine Arts Building.

CHICAGO MUSICAL COLLEGE TEACHERS.

Word has been received from W. K. Ziegfeld, manager of the Chicago Musical College, to the effect that Leon Sametini, violinist, is a passenger on board the steamer Tunisian, which will arrive two days late at Montreal. Other members of the faculty of the Chicago Musical College who will return during the present week are Adolf Muhlmann, Walter Knupfer, and Ettore Titta Ruffo.

RAGNA LINNE RETURNS.

Ragna Linne has just returned from Europe and she informed a representative of the MUSICAL COURIER that she is glad to be back at home. Mme. Linne has resumed her teaching at the American Conservatory, where for many years she has been one of the leading instructors.

Carl Writes from Europe.

Val-Mont, Territet, August 20, 1914.

A member of the staff of the MUSICAL COURIER has heard from Dr. William C. Carl as follows:

DEAR MR. RIESBERG—The war is on! Each day the plot thickens. When the first news was received, a few of the Frenchmen here fled to France, and their haste seemed premature. Before one could begin to realize what was happening, there was no way of escape. Thousands of Americans and Britishers are in Switzerland, and many without a sou.

This fortunately is a neutral country, and all is quiet. The men responded to the call of mobilization without a murmur, leaving the country in the care of their families or the men who are beyond the age limit. All are willing to do something. The young lads under sixteen are organizing. The women work in the fields, for the harvest must be gathered, and this is a serious matter for Switzerland, dependent as she is on other countries for many things such as coal, meat, fruit and vegetables.

Economy is the watchword and all are practising it. The shops are devoid of customers, and money is scarce and difficult to obtain. Gold is a rare luxury. Theatres and concert halls are closed, and even the organ concerts are all canceled. Music is not permitted in the parks and guests are requested not to dance in the hotels. The American and English consulates are besieged with people and the bulletins are eagerly read. It is necessary to have a passport to enter France, and after obtaining it, with the signature of the American Minister affixed, then the French consul must "visé" it, and for each transaction ten francs is asked.

At the French consulate I was obliged to wait at the top of a staircase in a crowd of Russians, French, English and Americans. It took two hours for my turn to come. Three hundred of these passports are signed each day. A tremendous effort is being made by the American and English consuls to organize special trains to convey us to the French coast and thence to England. The first one will leave in a few days, and I am therefore in hopes of getting out of "exile" within a few days. It will be necessary to carry provisions for two days and water to drink.

There are no porters at the stations and every one must look out for himself. Only a limited amount of baggage can be taken, as the trip is one to be dreaded.

Josef Hofmann and his wife are doing their own housework, so I am told. Their servants have all fled and there is nothing else to do. Their villa is near here.

Paderewski has been wandering about the streets of Montreux recently, and his villa is also in this vicinity.

Maurice Kufferath, director of the grand opera in Brussels (Theatre de la Monnaie), with Mme. Kufferath, are here at Val-Mont. When the opera will reopen no one knows, and all the season's plans are at a standstill.

My passage is booked for September 12 on the Mauretania from Liverpool. I shall hope soon to reach London and from there be on my way for America. I have new plans and interesting news for the Guilmant Organ School, which reopens early in October with a large enrollment.

While in Paris I met many of the great artists, and will have considerable to say on my return, which I trust will be soon.

Long live America! I will take off my hat to Sandy Hook.

Cordially,

WILLIAM C. CARL.

Mme. Rosa Olitzka
Celebrated Russian Contralto
ASSISTED BY
Kathleen Hart, Soprano
Exclusive Management West of Cleveland
By special arrangement R. E. Johnston
Elizabeth Rothwell Wolff, Soprano
From Royal Court Theatre Darmstadt.
Walter Henry Rothwell at the piano, condr.
St. Paul Symphony Orchestra
AND
Miss Edna Gunnar Peterson, Pianist
Mr. Albert Borroff, Basso-Cantante
Lecture Recitals, Oratorio
Mme. Cora Kempre, Soprano
Fresh from European Operatic Triumphs
Miss Esther May Plumb, Contralto
Recitals, Oratorio
Mr. Ridgley Hudson, Tenor
Recitals, Oratorio
Miss Clara Williams, Soprano
Oratorio
Miss Celéne Loveland
Piano Lecture Recitals
AND
Metropolitan Grand Opera Quartette
Exclusive management:
GERTRUDE V. O'HANLON
Cable Building Chicago, Ill.

Two More Baernstein-Regneas Pupils Secure Good Bookings for This Season

Caro Sapin, contralto of the Boston Opera Company, which organization will not give performances this year on account of the disturbed conditions abroad, will make an extended concert tour, under the management of the White Concert Direction of Boston.

Mme. Sapin made so profound an impression on the public, press and managers of Boston by her excellent performances during the past season, that her services were immediately sought in other channels, as soon as it was announced that there would be no grand opera there this season.

Helen Goff, who has had success in minor parts during the past two years, has signed a very advantageous contract to sing the prima donna role in a new musical work which will have its premiere about October 1.

Victor Herbert has written the music for Miss Goff, which is sure to receive the proper interpretations from this splendid artist.

GRAND RAPIDS NOTES.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Septembe

One by one the music teachers are returning from their summer vacations, and gradually a musical atmosphere is being created. Notwithstanding the disappointments caused by the European war, the outlook for the coming year is very bright.

The first meeting of the St. Cecilia Society will be held October 2. With Mrs. William H. Loomis as president and Charlotte M. Hughes vice president, and an efficient board of directors, the coming St. Cecilia year is an assured success. Special "study classes," under the most competent leaders, are to be formed, and a St. Cecilia chorus is to be organized, with Walter E. Hartley (organist of St. Mark's Church) as director. Recitals are to be given to the members of the society by the following artists: In November, the Kneisel Quartet; also an organ recital, by Wilhelm Middelschulte. In January, Ossip Gabrilowitsch will be heard in a piano recital. Christine Miller and Edith Chapman Goold are engaged for some time in March.

Under the management of J. W. Beattie (director of public school music) the following course is booked for the High School Auditorium: The Chicago Symphony Orchestra, in November; Fritz Kreisler, in January, and the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, in February. The price of this course is put within reach of all students.

Through the efforts of Mr. Beattie a "teachers' training course" for public school music has been added to the curriculum of the Junior College, whereby the teachers may have instruction from the best musicians and a practical training in the teaching of grade music. The Grand Rapids schools are most fortunate in having such a progressive director.

The Association of Commerce is doing much to advance municipal music, having appointed a capable committee to assist in the work. The city is deeply indebted to Mrs. Charles B. Kelsey (chairman of the municipal music committee) for being the real inspiration for civic music, and it is to be hoped that the near future has in store for Grand Rapids a municipal Christmas tree, orchestra and chorus.

For the third season the young ladies of the "Mary Free Bed Guild" are giving their time to a great work. By bringing several prominent artists and giving the music lovers a feast of good things, they are ministering to the sick and suffering. A free bed in the U. B. A. Hospital is maintained by this noble corps of workers. Rosamond Rouse, the president of the guild, spares neither time nor thought in making the guild work a success. The list of attractions follow: According to the schedule the first booking is for October 23, when Emilio de Gogorza, baritone; Mme. Jeska Swartz Morse, prima donna contralto, and Rudolph Ganz, pianist and accompanist, will appear in concert. Alma Gluck, soprano, and Leon Rennay, French baritone, will appear December 10. The Trio de Lutece and Jane Osborn Hannah, January 5. Maggie Teyte, soprano, and Carl Flesch, violinist, January 15. John McCormack, tenor; Daniel McBeath, violinist, and Edwin Schneider, accompanist, for the last attraction.

Marguerite Kortlander, a teacher in the Málek School of Music, has returned from a summer spent in New York, having studied in the New Rochelle School of Music.

A. C. T.

America's Opportunity.

War, which will extinguish many artistic flames in Europe, is about to light those in America which too long have remained dark, says Felix Borowski in the Chicago Record-Herald. There will be a rearrangement of artistic frontiers in the Old World as well as a rearrangement of its political geography by the time the roar of cannon and musketry has ceased. Dynasties may fall, but dynasties will come to life, and history will be made anew.

It is certain that the opportunity of music and of musicians in America is at hand. Sometimes it has taken long for the people of a country to put their trust in their country's art, but there have been occasions when that trust has been forced upon them. This land, dominated since the beginning of its musical history by foreign influences, will be compelled—for some time at least—to seek its art within itself. Now is the time for the musicians of America to prove to themselves, to their own people, to the world that it is not necessary, that it has never been necessary, for our public to hang beseechingly upon the skirts of music makers in Paris, Berlin, Vienna and Moscow, to provide itself with art to charm the ear.

It would be the merest chauvinism to assert that no benefit has come or could come to the art of this country by way of Europe, but it is certain that the universal passion for foreign music, for foreign singers, players, teachers, has done much to retard the growth of our native art. In England there has been, as there has been with us, a similar attitude toward alien art; but there, too, a new era is dawning for the British musician, for the extraordinary kindling of patriotic fervor will sweep him into the tidal wave of public joy in the things are are its own.

Margaret Drew
PIANIST-ORGANIST
has just returned from her summer vacation and re-opened her studio at 304 Metropolitan Music Co. Building, Minneapolis, Minn.

WILFRIED KLAMROTH
TEACHER OF SINGING
Resumes teaching in New York, October 1, at his new studio,
124 EAST 39th STREET
Until October 1, address at
HILLBOURNE FARM
Vail's Gate, New York

RICCARDO MARTIN
FAMOUS TENOR
Metropolitan Opera Company
Available for Concerts
October, November, 1914. May, 1915
Management:
CHARLES L. WAGNER, 1451 Broadway, N. Y.

Zoellner Quartet
Coast to Coast Tour 1914-15
H. Culbertson, Fine Arts Bldg, Chicago

BARITONE

Concert, Oratorio, Recitals, Etc.

BERNHARD STEINBERG
It is a rich voice of large volume and full-reaching power, and one admirably adapted to the kind of singing which dominated the program, the robust and dramatic. . . . In the matter of musical taste and feeling in the interpretation of his songs Mr. Steinberg was entirely satisfactory. He sings with a good deal of authority and repose, and does not fail to convey the proper mood of his song.—Times.
Address all communications to - JULIUS C. MEYER, Secretary
1425 Broadway, Suite 69-70, New York City Tel. 7222 Bryant.

Irma Seydel's Brief but Brilliant European Tour.

In a recent letter received by her mother, Irma Seydel, the young American violinist, who went abroad in June for a nine months' concert tour of Europe, sent the appended notices of her first engagements, together with a list of her advance bookings for the month of November. There were six engagements with symphony orchestras in these important German cities: Hanover, Sachsen, Weimar, Hamburg, Baden-Baden and Heidelberg. All these have of course been canceled and Miss Seydel will spend the entire season in America.

Criticisms of Irma Seydel's sixth appearance with the Cologne Orchestra and first appearance with the Royal Orchestra of Sondershausen:

Irma Seydel, whom we have here repeatedly attested as an eminent violin virtuoso, gave the concerto by Paganini. She played with technical maturity and purity and with such brilliancy of tone that we can speak of the height of virtuosity. The young artist violinist will rapidly make her way through the concert halls of the world.—Koelner Local-Anzeiger.

IRMA SEYDEL AND HOFKAPELLEN PROF. CORBACH READING THE MUSICAL COURIER AT SONDERSHAUSEN, JULY 25, 1914.

The little Irma Seydel, of Boston, has now developed into one of the very great ones. She played the violin concerto by Paganini with orchestra with such virtuosity, so sweet a tone and plastical interpretation that she received thunderous applause and gave the fourth movement of the Lalo "Symphony Espagnole" as an encore. —Koelner Tageblatt.

Irma Seydel, who is a much beloved guest at the Gurzenich, captivated us again. Her technic is still more finished, her interpretation more ripened, her tone still fuller and more virile than before. She easily ranks with the first in her art.—Koelnische Zeitung.

Irma Seydel played the D minor concerto by Vieuxtemps and the polonaise by Wieniawski with a big tone, splendid bowing, elegant finger technic and pure intonation. The true musical soul of the artist was apparent in her splendid rhythm and wonderful interpretation.—Nordhausen General-Anzeiger.

Musicolony Attracted Many.

The Watch Hill Weekly of September 7 has the following article relating to Musicolony, which is so well known as a resort with a fine future for people of the musical world:

WELL PATRONIZED.

MUSICOLONY HAS MANY GUESTS—PLEASED WITH LOCATION.

Musicolony, situated in Westerly, R. I., facing the Atlantic Ocean, is now being patronized by many of the interested members, who are now lot owners, and from time to time are visiting this beautiful location and are most enthusiastic over their investment.

When one arrives at the old farm house at Musicolony he is immediately impressed with the extraordinary beauty of the place, and as one walks down the gradual slope from the Boston Post road to the lake front, a succession of enchanting, ever changing views greet you.

What a glorious surprise one gets after crossing the lake and walking across a short stretch of picturesque emerald hued dunes to step almost into the broad Atlantic, breaking in great billows upon the superb beach.

Musicolony offers everything any one could possibly wish for, low temperature, still water, surf bathing, and charming woods, brooks and fields.

Emma Dambmann (Friedmann), of New York, contralto singer and teacher of voice culture, has purchased a magnificent plot here and she intends to build an attractive bungalow eventually. At present she enjoys a portable house, every summer finding her there for some weeks enjoying quiet restfulness. Then she journeys to the mountains or to some other fashionable resort. She enjoyed the past summer at Watch Hill, R. I., at the Watch Hill House, located six miles from Musicolony. Otto Graff and family sublet the Dambmann house for August and September and are enthusiastic over Musicolony and surroundings.

Northwestern Conservatory Notes.

Minneapolis, Minn., September 10, 1914.

The first week in September is usually devoted to registration, but because of the prompt enrollment of a large number of students for regular courses in the different departments of the conservatory, the schedule of the first division classes was in working order Wednesday, September 2, Monday and Tuesday having been devoted to registrations. The second division classes in the same subjects will be formed September 14, instead of September 28 as in former years. Enrollment of students has been going on for the last two weeks; thus far, the largest enrollment has been for work leading to graduation in the public school music and public school drawing departments. A goodly number of high school and grammar grade pupils of the city schools have enrolled for yearly work in the piano department. The fact that credit is now given by our public schools for work done at the conservatory is expected to increase materially the year's enrollment.

Ethel Daugherty, who has been spending her vacation at Isle Royal, returned September 1 to begin her work as head of the theory department of the conservatory. Estelle Holbrook, dean, returned the first part of August from a five weeks' walking tour in Glacier Park, Montana. Anne M. Hughes, director of public school music department, has spent her vacation at Isle Royal. She expects to return September 21, her assistant, Ennis Johnson, having charge of her classes until that time. Alta Churchill, instructor in English literature, has spent the summer at her father's home in Reedsburg, Wis. Marie Grenier, instructor in French, and Lois S. Kellogg, instructor in domestic science, have spent the summer in Chicago. Luella Rose Bender, of the expression department, has just returned from a three weeks' vacation in Hubert, Minn. Mrs. Leslie Hall Pinney has spent part of her vacation at the Chicago Normal School of Dancing, where she was one of seven granted a diploma and degree out of a class of fifty students doing advanced work to that end. Alice Monette, the conservatory bookkeeper, returned on August 26 after two weeks' vacation in the north woods. Teachers who remained at the conservatory going on with their classes after the close of the summer session were Karen Westvig, Gladys Conrad, John Jacob Beck, Franz Dicks.

Although the regular class work of the Conservatory Expression School does not begin until October 1, a good many pupils are beginning private lessons and class work in other departments. John Seaman Garns, the director, is formulating plans for the coming year which will include several new courses and other new features which will further the development of the school. Several additions have been made to the Northwestern Repertory Players, an organization which is open not only to students of the school, but to outsiders—amateurs of talent and experience.

Jessie Guild, for three years a student in the Normal Department of Pratt Institute of New York City, from which she graduated with honors, has for the past two years been head of the art department at Stanley Hall and the Northwestern Conservatory. Miss Guild has just added to the curriculum of the Conservatory Art School a complete course equivalent in all essentials to that offered by the Pratt Institute. For the past four years, graduates of the public school drawing department of the conservatory have been doing successful work as supervisors, but this new course will give students a far broader training and a more thorough equipment for their work.

Friday evening, September 25, has been chosen by Olive Adele Evers, president of the Northwestern Conservatory, as the date of the annual president's reception. The reception will be given in honor of the new members of the faculty. Members of the class of 1915 are on the committee of reception. Dancing will be in charge of Mrs. Leslie Hall Pinney.

RUTH ANDERSON.

Helen Stanley Has Returned.

Helen Stanley, who will be one of the leading sopranos at the Century Opera House, New York, this season, arrived on the steamship Rotterdam early last week. Miss Stanley spent the summer in Berlin coaching with King Clark, the well known vocal teacher.

Pesaro, Italy, heard Zandonai's "Francesca" recently under the direction of the composer.

MAUDE KLOTZ
Distinguished American Soprano
AVAILABLE FOR
RECITALS - FESTIVALS - ORATORIO
FOR TERMS, DATES AND ALL PARTICULARS, ADDRESS IMMEDIATELY
R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, NEW YORK
G. DEXTER RICHARDSON, Arbuckle Building, BROOKLYN, N. Y. or HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, NEW YORK

MAUD POWELL INTERVIEWED.

The Violinist Gives to Musical Courier Representative Interesting Views on Audiences and What They Like Best—Also Discusses New Music Faults—Admires Sibelius.

Maud Powell possesses that prime indication of true reatness: absolute modesty and a dislike for talking about erself. She was seen recently by a representative of the USICAL COURIER in her beautiful studio in the art centre f New York which clusters about Gramercy Park, and ie talked of music, of art, of architecture, entertainingly, nstructively, brilliantly, showing not only the thoroughess of her knowledge of, but the depth of her insight nto, music and all of its allied arts. But herself she assed over with a word.

Her tour? Certainly, it was to begin early—October 12 -as it always does, and continue, as usual, far into the te spring. It would take her from coast to coast, from Iorth to South. Her bookings were made long ago and ompleted early enough to admit of herself and husband, ho is also her manager, taking a long rest in their faorite playground, the White Mountains.

"Yes," said Mme. Powell, "I play everywhere, from the rgest cities to the smallest towns. My programs? No, never suit them to any particular audience. I never 'play own to the public taste.' The American public is the ost discriminating and the most grateful that it is posble to imagine. I have noticed, however, that American udiences do not care for long introspective things. Some ort of poetic or dramatic point is necessary—the music ust paint a picture.

"And then, I think the matter of a form that is easily elt is of great importance. These long-winded things that ander on and on and never seem to get anywhere are readful! I feel that way about them myself and the verage American audience certainly feels the same.

"That is one of the troubles with much of the new usic that is sent me to try—either that, or a forced atempt at lightness and popularity which ends in triviality. ometimes these things sound nice when you first hear em, but their charm soon wears off. It is so terribly difcult to write anything that is pleasing and yet has the ue classic ring; and it is no less difficult to write things ossessing true depth and are not merely gloomy, sombre nd tiresome.

"No, in America one need never 'play down to any audince,' not even in the far outlying regions of the West. play Bach violin and piano sonatas for mixed audiences ut in those regions, and I can tell from the attitude of ttention that such works as these are thoroughly appreiated.

"What people demand is form, rhythm, melodic line. hey do not like popular things and anyone who attempts play such things will fail.

"You think it strange that anyone in these modern days ould speak in favor of form? Well, but even the modrns, the best of them, possess that instinct of perfect balnce which is the true foundation of form. Those who rofess to have a contempt for it are generally merely igorant. They are lacking in that feeling for architectural utline which comes with perfect knowledge and they exse themselves by a pretended contempt for it.

"It is this that I like so much in Sibelius. With all his gged strength and independence he always possesses that mplete balance, that perfect architectural outline, which nders his music so lucid. I love his concerto; its strong, gged themes, its wonderfully direct appeal, its modernm and yet withal its complete simplicity of thought and ructure. It was a joy to me to introduce this concerto America and I play it every year with unflagging inrest. It grows on one.

"I had a delightful meeting with Sibelius at the Norfolk estival, where some of his new compositions were played. am planning to play some new works by him this season, rtly arranged by myself.

"I have just come down from the White Mountains, Whitefield, and am glad to get to work again, although had a delightful time there planning our new home there. h! yes, we planned it ourselves, and the builders are at ork on it now. It is up on the hillside—not right on top the hill, for I like to leave some impression to be gained going beyond the confines of the home grounds. To ve constantly with the best view only destroys its greatest lue—its power to surprise.

MAUD POWELL.

Alice Verlet Still in Paris.

Alice Verlet, the French coloratura soprano, writes her nager, M. H. Hanson, under date of August 26, that e is still at her home at 159 Rue de la Pompe, Paris. lthough many of her friends have gone to Bordeaux and most of the houses around her are closed, Mlle. Verlet plans to keep her house open at least until she leaves for America for her concert tour. With a brother in the French army at the front, the soprano says she wants to have a home for him or any of his friends who may be wounded. While the regiment of which her brother is a member has already been actually engaged in the conflict, Lucien Verlet was still safe at the time the letter was written.

USE ORIENT

CLEANER AND POLISH
On Your Piano

A new Marvelous Discovery. Nothing else like or equals it. Guaranteed harmless, odorless and free from anything oily, greasy or sticky. You can sit on a chair the next minute after Cleaning and Polishing without danger of greasing or soiling the finest fabric. Cleans and Polishes while applying it, transforming a dull, dingy Piano into a most brilliant, attractive piano with magical swiftness and ease. Endorsed by Piano makers, dealers and all who have used it. To convince you how different and superior this product is over all others we will mail you a trial sample for 4 cents postage, or better still send 50 cents in stamps for large 12-ounce bottle fully prepaid. Your money back if not more than satisfied. Piano makers, Dealers and Agents, you need Orient Cleaner and Polish to protect the finish on instruments you sell; write us for prices. ORIENT CHEMICAL CO., 472 Gumbel Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

Raimund von Zur-Mühlen

The distinguished vocal teacher and coach (for the last ten years in London) will open a New York studio on

November 1st, 1914

The number of pupils which Mr. von Zur-Mühlen can take is strictly limited and prompt application for lessons is advisable.

All communications to
PAUL DRAPER
18 West Eighth Street

PAUL DRAPER
Lieder Singer
Teacher of Voice

Personal address: 18 West 8th Street.
For concerts, recitals, etc., address
Loudon Charlton. Carnegie Hall, New York

Owing to the Cancellation of his European Dates

GODOWSKY

Will be in America this Season

Management: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, N. Y.
KNABE PIANO USED

F. WIGHT NEUMANN RETURNS.

Chicago Manager Relates Experiences to a Musical Courier Representative in New York—Looks for a Fine Season.

F. Wight Neumann, the Chicago manager, was interviewed by a representative of the MUSICAL COURIER during his recent short stay in New York.

"I was stopping at Bad Gastein," said Mr. Neumann, "when mobilization began, and I did not move until the 'Landsturm' was called in. That, I knew, was evidence of a serious conflict, and I packed up and went to Munich.

"I stayed in Munich for three weeks and two days. During my stay there everything was quiet and orderly. I found there a large number of artists, including Josef Stransky, Edyth Walker, Otto Weil and his wife, Brecher, of Cologne; Kempner, of Strassburg, and Sachs, the Vienna critic; Mme. Orgine, the teacher of Edyth Walker; Max Smith, of the New York Press, and his wife; Campanini and Daiber, secretary of the Chicago Opera; Stokowski and his wife (Olga Samaroff), Gabrilowitsch and his wife, C. A. Ellis and Professor Parker. Dr. Karl Muck was in Bayreuth.

"We put up, most of us, at the Hotel Vier Jahreszeiten. We felt no anxiety about getting away, for the government, which proved its splendid efficiency in every way, was regularly dispatching first-class trains made up of parlor and dining cars every Monday and Tuesday, and a second class train every Wednesday.

"Ellis left the first week on Tuesday and I left a week later with 189 other Americans. Our train went straight through to the Hague direct without change, the only formality being the showing of passports at the frontier.

"Gabrilowitsch was arrested at Kreuth on the Tegernsee, near Munich, as a Russian spy. He was kept in prison there for fifteen hours and then taken to Munich, where he was allowed to stop at the Hotel Vier Jahreszeiten under surveillance. He got out of Germany by way of Lindau and escaped to Switzerland.

"Stokowski, leader of the Philadelphia Orchestra, also had some trouble with the authorities, being a citizen of Great Britain. The telephone was taken out of his house, and the house watched by the police. He installed eight beds in his home for the Red Cross and otherwise showed his lack of animosity toward the Germans, but was finally requested to leave the country and went to Holland.

"Campanini, who was at Bad Nauheim, telegraphed to Edyth Walker for money, and reached Parma by way of Switzerland. He hoped to get his company to America by chartering a steamer, associating himself in this enterprise with other American companies, but since the Chicago opera season has been cancelled, this plan had to be abandoned.

"At the request of Gatti-Casazza Otto Weil is remaining in Munich so as to be able to communicate with those members of the Metropolitan Opera Company who are in Germany. Geraldine Farrar is also in Munich in the sanatarium, where she spent this summer and the last, and is now in excellent health.

"The artists I am to manage in Chicago now are all safely out of the war zone. Among them are Schumann-Heink, Gluck, Zimbalist, Bloomfield-Zeisler, Gadski, Olitzka, Slezak, who was in Russia, but arrived at Tegernsee on August 26; Sembrich, who expects to sail from Rotterdam on October 4; Josef Hofmann, Destinn, Gilly and Maggie Teyte, who are in London, and Carl Flesch, who is in Scheveningen.

"As for some of the others, Mr. and Mrs. Mannes, Friedberg and Serato, I do not know where they are. Two members of the Kneisel Quartet are at Blue Hill, Maine, but I do not know where the others are. Culp and Bos are in Holland.

"During our stay in Munich we all congregated every afternoon at the Hofgarten for coffee. Edyth Walker has a beautiful apartment in Munich. She is the highest priced artist in Europe today. Her Kundry and Isolde are wonderful.

"This is going to be a big season. Times of panic and stress are the best for the amusement world. That has been the case in former panics and will be so again this year. There is no cause for worry. This season will be a money maker."

Matzenauer Writes Her Managers.

Margarete Matzenauer, writing from Villa Ferrari, Cesenatico, Italy, under the date of August 20, says to her managers, Messrs. Haensel & Jones:

"I am sending you by express the music for all my concert programs, together with a large number of new selections which I have added to my repertoire during the summer. You will note that I have plenty of material from which to select and the one thing uppermost in my mind is to please the club or society which books my recitals. I am delighted with the large number of appearances you have secured for me and I wish to assure you that I have my passage already engaged and will arrive in New York within a very few days now."

PHILIP SPOONER TELLS OF WAR EXPERIENCES.

American Tenor Back from the Scene of War with Interesting Stories and Prospects of an Active Season.

Among the many "thrills" experienced by Philip Spooner, the American tenor, during his recent sojourn in Europe, he recalls the one at Dijon with the greatest vividness and he will doubtless remember it the longest.

On a roundabout and tiresome trip from Berne to Paris, which included five changes, with all the attendant disadvantages and inconveniences of travel in Europe just now, Mr. Spooner, with his parents, Senator and Mrs. Spooner, arrived in Dijon, France. In trying to send a telegram to Paris, he found it had to be written in French and signed by the chief of police. Having accomplished this he was hurrying back to the station, when he was halted by a guard, who had suspicions of Mr. Spooner's camera. (Unbeknown to the tenor these are forbidden in war time.) In vain the latter protested that he was an American citizen. His passport was demanded but this was with his baggage at the station. Back he was taken to the chief of police, although his train was due to leave in twenty minutes. Questioned in French, Mr. Spooner discovered to his amazement that he was being taken for a German spy. He was threatened with incarceration if he could not prove his identity as an American citizen.

PHILIP SPOONER.

"But I am an American—an American singer," insisted Mr. Spooner, to whom the situation was proving disagreeably serious.

"If you are a singer, sing," was the rejoinder.

Truly American, Mr. Spooner was "game." He sang one song in English and one in French, to his critical one-man audience. It is a question, however, if his largest audience ever caused him greater anxiety.

"Voilà! vous pouvez chanter!" exclaimed the astonished prefect at the conclusion. The proof was sufficient to this representative of the martial law and after some further parleying Mr. Spooner was allowed to proceed on his way with his offending camera.

At La Roche lodging could be obtained only in a tavern. The saloon below was filled with noisy French soldiers. Mr. Spooner, was given a room over the kitchen. After the culinary noises had finally ceased for the night, Mr. Spooner discovered that he could gain no rest until he had disposed of a few of the many mosquitoes which infested the room. This meant a ten minute interval conquest. They were—he maintains—of a size, which would make the far famed New Jersey variety look small. The accompaniments of the approach of dawn also reminded him of his New Jersey farm.

A permit was necessary to leave Paris, and a passport to enter England. Mr. Spooner told a MUSICAL COURIER interviewer that he stood in line two hours to obtain the latter. At his hotel in Paris, three floors had been made ready for a hospital and eighty-seven of the former servants were in the French army.

Mr. Spooner was in Italy at Lake Como when the war was declared. His first difficulties were chiefly those of getting ready money.

Louis Lombard, with whom the Spooner party lunched at Lake Lugano, was of great value in assisting Americans.

In Lucerne there were 3,000 Americans. An American organization relieved the situation greatly. "Switzerland," says Mr. Spooner, "then looked as warlike as France." He spoke of the hundreds of stranded school teachers, fifty of whom were in Lucerne.

Mr. Spooner referred to the inspiration and good cheer of Louise Bramhall, of New York, on this occasion.

Senator Spooner was delegated to have an audience with the president of the Swiss Republic, whom he found to be a highly cultured, delightful gentleman, to see about a special train to get the Americans in Lucerne through Germany to Rotterdam. This special train was at length obtained through the timely assistance of Ambassador Gerard in Berlin. In all this Philip Spooner was greatly impressed by the remarkable business system shown in the Swiss railway offices and he was given also a wonderful insight into the detail of war "red tape."

Mr. Spooner said it was not at all uncommon to wait hours in search of lodgings. His party arose at four o'clock one morning to catch an early train, then was obliged to wait three hours. From Berne to Paris required forty-eight hours, a trip which usually requires about twelve hours.

The tenor mentioned a delightful meeting with Louis Blumenberg, president of the MUSICAL COURIER Company, who is now in London.

The steamship Laconia, on which the Spooner party returned, followed the extreme northern route and was escorted by armed cruisers. All the portholes were blanketed at night.

The usual benefit concert occurred on board. Mr. Spooner participated. Among others, was Percy Grainger, the English composer-pianist, who is about to take a tour through the United States.

"I realized this summer more than ever before," observed the tenor, "that American artists are as warmly appreciated and as eagerly sought in the Old World as the foreigners are in America. While some of us have experienced the fact that a prophet has honor in his own country, I have met American artists this summer, whose performances were far superior to those of many of the foreign artists appearing in America, and who have not been able to have even a hearing before our American managers. Let us hope that their opportunity will come this year, while some of the foreign artists are obliged because of the war to remain in Europe."

Mr. Spooner's season, which he will open with a concert in the Middle West, September 28, bids fair to be an unusually busy one.

VIDA
LLEWELLYN
PIANIST
In America 1914-1915

. . . . "The pianist has at her command a sonorous and refined tone and a very remarkable technic."
—Berliner Borsen Courier.

New York Recital, November 14th
Aeolian Hall

CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue New York City

Mehan Studios Open September 21.

Mr. and Mrs. John Dennis Mehan, of Carnegie Hall, have issued the following card, which is self-explanatory:

THE MEHAN STUDIOS
SEVENTY CARNEGIE HALL
NEW YORK CITY

Mr. and Mrs. John Dennis Mehan will be at their studies Monday September the Twenty-first, for the season of Nineteen-hundred-fifteen and fifteen, when they will be pleased to receive thier friends and pupils.

Telephone Columbus 5946.

Until September the nineteenth address 92 West End avenue, Manhattan Beach, Long Island. Telephone Coney Island 2267.

The Seydels to Return This Month.

Irma Seydel, the violinist, and her father, Theodore Seydel, of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, expect to return from Europe September 28.

DREAMS AND DREAMERS.

BY ARTHUR SHATTUCK, THE AMERICAN PIANIST.

It is pleasant when the facts of life annoy us to remember that we are only dreamers in a world of dreams. Our dreams are no less real to our minds than our waking adventures, and it is only chance that has led us to exaggerate the importance of the one at the expense of the other.

If there had been no savages in the earlier days of the world, we might have easily come to consider our working life as a pleasant period of rest for the emotions, while cultivating our dream pastures till their roses become like crimson domes and their lilies like silver towers under the stars.

But the influence of the stone age is still upon us. The men who could throw the stone hammer farther than their neighbors had the ordering of events, and so today we believe in stone and scoff at ghosts, we enjoy smoking room stories and yawn at dreams.

If our dreams pass with the morning it is no less true that our realities pass with the coming of sleep. We see a man fall asleep in a Pullman chair car, and our illusory faculties tell us that he is still there. While he himself, who should surely know, is only too well aware that he is being chased by a mad white bull across Long Island Sound. Probably he will return to the chair car presently, but meanwhile the bull and blue waters are as true for him as his stertorous body is for us who lament his deep snoring. And why should we prefer our impressions to his?

The point is important, because in supporting the claims of the dream world against those of our waking life it is necessary to meet the case of the man who says: "I should soon come to grief if I took to dreaming." It may be impossible to be successful in both worlds. It may be that if you cultivate the art of dreaming, you will pay for it daytimes, but as our chances on earth are limited by our opportunities, the lands of sleep are boundless and our holding is only limited by our capacity for dreaming. There are no trusts in dreamland.

Commanding our dreams is very largely a matter of practice. At first some might think a man who said he could dream when and whatever he wished to be untruthful. The effects of cucumber or lobster salads have been calculated in terms of nightmares to a nicety, and I am sure that by choosing a judicious daylight environment the will can be brought to bear almost directly on our midnight adventures.

In support of this I might refer skeptics to Dr. Lang's "Book of Dreams and Ghosts," which gives countless instances of people who solved important problems in their sleep which baffled them when they were awake. I know personally that some of the best practice I have had as a pianist was while dreaming at night. Frequently I have mastered some difficult score while in dreamland, and have on waking walked to my piano to find what I supposed would be work of a day's duration accomplished with ease through my dream of the night.

The dream world and the waking world overlap slightly.

SNAPSHOT OF A SHADOW IN THE SETTING SUN OF NORWAY.
Christian Sinding, the composer; Mrs. Sinding and Arthur Shattuck.

Usually we can recall a small chapter of the dream we have dreamed, and in our sleep we retain a little of our waking wisdom, and that is all. From the splendid garden in which you wandered last night you brought away nothing perhaps but a flower or two, broken in waking.

ARTHUR SHATTUCK AND HIS AUSTRIAN DACHSHUND, IN FRONT OF HIS HOME IN PARIS.

Tonight you may be flying about the housetops as [illegible] had never accepted the law of gravity as a fact.

In dreams we have no sense of right or wrong. We have no control over our actions and our movements appear to be guided by a will outside our own bodies, and this seems to be the will of the normal daylight man. Often our dreams are a dramatic commentary on our waking life or an expression of the emotions which the intellect has forced us to suppress in that life. If the latter is true we are more real in our dreams than when awake. And if the real art of living is to express ourselves as we are, it would seem that the whole duty of man is to dream.

Carbone Vocal Method Praised.

A. Carbone, the New York vocal authority, has resumed daily instruction at his Aeolian Hall studio.

All of his last season's pupils are expecting to return to Mr. Carbone, many of whom are already at work again. A large number of new pupils will be added to his list this season judging from the numerous applicants.

Mr. Carbone's exceptional understanding of voice production and his long experience as singer and teacher account for his unusual success as teacher of singing.

Alessandro Bonci, the tenor, has referred to Mr. Carbone as one of the few true masters in the art of singing to be found in America and in Europe.

David Bispham, the baritone, in referring to Philip Spooner, the tenor, a pupil of Signor Carbone, wrote the following to Mr. Carbone: "I certainly found Mr. Spooner's singing most artistic, in the very best style, such as A. Carbone can teach in that school of art, of which he is such a great master."

Mme. Pappenheimer, the soprano and teacher of voice, after hearing Mrs. J. A. Weinig, another pupil of Mr. Carbone, sing in a concert in the Catskill Mountains in August, praised the singing of Mrs. Weinig and the method of Mr. Carbone.

Percy Hemus' New Address.

Studio Hall, 64 East Thirty-fourth street, New York, is the new studio home of Percy Hemus, the baritone-teacher. "The fact that Studio Hall is on the way between the Vanderbilt and Waldorf-Astoria hotels, signifies more than one might think at first," says Mr. Hemus.

His studios are excellently located, unusually large, handsomely appointed, and have first class acoustics.

Mr. Hemus opened his new studios September 15 with many new pupils from the West and South added to his list of former ones, who have already returned.

When not on tour in recitals with Gladys Craven (Mrs. Hemus), pianist, he will devote the major part of his time to teaching. These concert tours have been and will be so arranged that they will not interfere with his teaching.

"Hemus Studio Evenings" are to be instituted, when many celebrities will be heard.

Professor Klengel, the cellist, played his own concerto at several symphony concerts in German cities just before the outbreak of war.

AMERICAN TOUR—NOVEMBER—MAY 1914—1915

WILLY BURMESTER
THE GREAT GERMAN VIOLINIST

Mr. Burmester will make his First Orchestral Appearance next season, November 6th, with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, playing the Paganini Concerto No. 1.

Other Orchestral Engagements are with the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, San Francisco Symphony Orchestra.

STEINWAY PIANO USED

For dates and terms apply to CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON, 437 Fifth Ave., New York

A DUAL ALLIANCE.

McCormack and Wagner are two names intimately associated by the musical world of today. They represent a "dual" alliance, as it were, an alliance which knows only the strictest harmony. They are names, too, as MUSICAL COURIER readers should know, which are not to be confused with the renowned "Richard" and the man of "reaper" fame, for they belong to the alert and original impresario, Charles L. Wagner, and the celebrated Irish tenor, John McCormack.

Mr. Wagner's latest conception is the "line of printing" reproduced below. This consists of three eight sheet stands in the center; four three sheet stands, and four one sheet stands. A single sheet measures 28 by 42 inches. The color scheme is of purple and brown—the purple suggesting a "royal" attraction, to quote the witty manager. The Irish scroll, with the McCormack initials, outlines the center sheet. The printing was brought out by the United States Printing Company.

Mr. Wagner designs all his own printing and furnishes posters liberally to all local managers.

A prominent theatrical man remarked to Mr. Wagner last season that "he could not turn around in New York without having McCormack stare him in the face"—a forceful illustration of the thoroughness with which this particular musical manager carries out his publicity plans.

Even after the box offices had been sold out for John McCormack's concerts last season, Mr. Wagner continued the extensive advertising, much to the perplexity of many observers. When interrogated as to the advisability of such a motive, the astute manager replied that he considered the thousands of people turned away at the concerts one of the best possible advertisements.

To the perfect harmony in which they work, Mr. Wagner also attributes the immense success of tenor and manager.

"All great honors have come to McCormack," Mr. Wagner remarked to a MUSICAL COURIER reporter, "therefore his printing and his advertising must at all times be dignified. There should be no superlative statements. To call him the greatest would be a mistake. I prefer to leave that with the American people, and in regard to McCormack, they have a delightful place to register their vote—at the box office.

"I do not expect every one to like my advertising," continued the impresario. "One man came to my office last year three times, to say that he did not like the poster with the hat on.

"'You can see it?' I asked.

"'Why, I can see it in my sleep.'"

"Then it is good advertising; too many sleep."

This reply was a really more convincing proof to Mr. Wagner of the effectiveness of his method of advertising than he himself had imagined.

The Wagner "line of printing" represents a new feature in advertising. The large posters with the same drawings and colors will be reproduced in small window cards.

When asked if John McCormack had been detained in Germany, the manager replied with characteristic humor: "The nearest McCormack ever came to Germany was to his manager, Wagner, and his accompanist, Schneider."

Malkin at Newport, R. I.

The accompanying snapshot shows Manfred Malkin in his automobile at Newport, R. I., where he spent his vacation. He had a thoroughly good time there, the society folk making much of him and his splendid pianistic talent and fine musicianship. He is deep in the registration of pupils, assigning of teachers, etc., at the Malkin Music School, 26 Mount Morris Park, West, New York City, and looks forward to a still better season than that of last year.

MANFRED MALKIN ENJOYING NEWPORT.

Mme. Haggerty-Snell's Pupils' Musicale.

Monday, 8.30 p. m., in her studio, 2647 Broadway, New York, Mme. Haggerty-Snell presented Rose Ridner, vocalist, and Laura Levussove, pianist, assisted by Lillian Luther, soprano, and Charles Norton Hunt, baritone. A large and enthusiastic audience greeted the participants. Miss Ridner comes from Vienna, where she studied several years, and is now a pupil of Mme. Haggerty-Snell. She is by no means an amateur. In her rendition of "Caro Nome" she showed her excellent technic and the beauty of her voice. Her personality is also very attractive. Altogether she is a fine little singer, with the promise of a great future. Each number of her program was artistically given. Miss Levussove divided her honors with Miss Ridner. She is a pianist of rare ability. Her technic is clean, powerful and melodic. Her rendition was suggestive of virtuosity. Miss Luther's singing was a surprise to some in the audience, as she is only fifteen years of age, but sang with lucid, well placed tones. She has a beautiful lyric voice that was heard best in Lehmann's "Spider."

Charles Norton Hunt sang with professional ease and expression. His voice is full of pathos, and the applause that greeted him attested to the appreciation of his audience. He has a splendid baritone organ and his enunciation is faultless.

Carrie Louise Lockwood was an able assistant as accompanist. She is a correct reader as well as an interpreter of emotions and her support was most efficient.

Mme. Haggerty-Snell has given many recitals in New York, but none have been superior to this.

Her pupils show her to be a teacher of the highest order, one whose ability is coupled with genius.

Marcella Craft in New York.

Marcella Craft has returned to New York, after a visit in Chicago, and has taken an apartment for the winter. This brilliant prima donna, who for the past five years has been one of the most popular American sopranos in Germany, will make her operatic debut in her native land in her favorite role, "Madam Butterfly."

Although a member of the Royal Opera at Munich, Miss Craft has made many "guest" appearances in different opera houses in various parts of Germany during her engagement abroad and has usually sung either "Madam Butterfly" or "Salome," in the Strauss opera of that name at these special appearances. The last "guest" appearance Miss Craft made were at Brunswick in June, when she sang "Madame Butterfly," "Salome" and Suzanne in "The Secret of Suzanne," a role which she rehearsed under the composer, Wolf-Ferrari, at the original production of the opera, which took place in Munich.

Roderick White
VIOLINIST
For information apply to Driggs & Le Massena, Inc.
501 FIFTH AVENUE NEW YORK

ADA SODER-HUECK
THE EMINENT GERMAN CONTRALTO,
famous for her correct Voice Placement and Tone Development, is open for a limited number of engagements. Singers prepared for Church, Concert, Opera. Celebrated Garcia Method taught.
Metropolitan Opera House, 1425 Broadway New York Phone 6221 Bryant

HOW JOHN McCORMACK IS FEATURED ON

Robsarte's Interesting Talk.

A representative of the MUSICAL COURIER had scarcely seated himself in the handsomely appointed reception room of Lionel Robsarte's apartment, Hotel Woodward, New York, when the teacher himself appeared. "Oh, I'm glad to be interrupted," he said in reply to excuses. "It will give me a couple of minutes to cool off, and that young lady deserves a breathing spell. Yes, I'm always busy, though no one expected me back as early as this. Most of my work now is of the transient order, as, for instance, Alice Carroll, the soprano, now in the studio, is rehearsing with a concert quartet, of which the tenor, Sydney Kamna, is another of my students. The man who preceded her is leading tenor in a new tabloid production of 'Fra Diavolo,' nine principals and chorus, which opens on the 'Big Time' next week. Johanna Lubsen is with 'The Quaker Girl' and Flora Hanewald is with 'The Firefly,' which opens in New England in a few days.

LIONEL ROBSARTE.

"Schueller, the tenor, who is due here in ten minutes, you must remember, he appeared at the Globe last year, with Marguerite Sylva. Mr. Murtagh, who follows him, has just returned from a concert trip in Ireland; his is a fine tenor voice, too. Mattie McKee, the Philadelphia soprano, is working with me again, despite the hot weather.

"Five of my pupils have contracts with Dippel, viz., Helen Tashman, Evelyn Bowman, Charles Schueller, Orton Love and Vincent Mara.

"As you know, I have no 'chronic patients.' If I don't think I can place them, so that their expenditure with me makes an A-1 investment, I don't accept them. Well, you must excuse me—so glad to see you," and this very "live wire" was already inside the folding doors and in the middle of a demonstration.

MR. AND MRS. CLARENCE EDDY AT OSSINING.
Left to right: Mrs. Clarence Eddy, Mrs. Dr. John Greulich and Mr. Eddy at Osage Farm, Ossining, N. Y.

Clarence Eddy Opens New Organ.

With a brilliant recital given on September 3, Clarence Eddy opened a splendid new four manual organ at the First Baptist Church, Syracuse, N. Y. His program was of the highest order, including compositions by Wagner, Rubinstein, Sibelius, Bach, Cadman, etc., and compositions and arrangements by Eddy himself, also a new concert prelude by Kramer, dedicated to Mr. Eddy.

At a second recital on the following evening the organist was assisted by Mrs. Eddy, contralto, who won a signal success with her rendition of an aria from "Joan of Arc," Tschaikowsky, and a group of songs by Strauss, Rogers, etc. Both recitals were largely attended and aroused great enthusiasm.

Klibansky Reopens Studio.

Sergei Klibansky, the vocal teacher, who was for eight years a leading instructor at the Stern Conservatory, Berlin, and for three years at the Institute of Musical Art, New York, reopened his studio at 212 West Fifty-ninth street, New York, September 15.

Temperance Music.

Frederick Schlieder tells in the Console of an organist friend who was requested by his rector to select anthems and solos that would be compatible with the subject of the sermon.

"Temperance" was to be the subject at one service, and the organist suggested as suitable "Lo, Every One That Thirsteth" and "Crossing the Bar."

The rector replied that "doublecrossing the bar" would be much more suitable.—Houston (Tex.) Chronicle.

LL BOARDS BY MANAGER CHARLES L. WAGNER.

William Wheeler Returns.

William Wheeler, tenor, who has been spending the summer at Southampton, N. Y., returned to New York last week. A few of his already accepted engagements for this season are: Recital at Westover School, Waterbury, Conn., October 22; concert in Pittsburgh, Pa., January 15; Flushing, N. Y., January 6; Stamford, Conn., March 9; Harvard University, March 11; Yale University, March 15; Princeton University, March 26.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM WHEELER, WITH THEIR SON, JOHN, LISTENING TO THEIR RECORD, "A NIGHT IN VENICE."

The following is a program given on July 28, at The Studio, Wayside, Southampton, by Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler:

Una Notte e Venezia.....Lucatoni
Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler.
Es blinkt der Thau.....Rubinstein
Im Kahne.....Grieg
Still wie die Nacht.....Bohm
Mr. Wheeler.
Le Moulin.....Pierne
The Sleep that Flits on Baby's Eyes.....Carpenter
Tout Gai.....Ravel
Mrs. Wheeler.
Say Over Again (from Sonnets from the Portuguese).....Kaiser Written for
Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler.
Nora Creina.....Old Irish
Thoughts Have Wings.....Lehmann
The Ringers.....Lohr
Mr. Wheeler.
June.....Downing
The Kerry Dance.....Molloy
The Plaint of the Little Bisque Doll.....Wade
Mrs. Wheeler.
La Serenata.....Tosti
Come under My Plaidie.....Old Scotch
Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler.

Winifred McCall was the accompanist.

Winifred Bambrick and Her Pets.

Winifred Bambrick is pictured here with her Shetland pony, "Desdemond," and her dog, "Pete." The young harpist's tour is referred to in an article on page 12.

Lest One Forget.

[From the Morning Telegraph.]

There are certain selfish and short sighted souls who are rejoicing over the fact that the War of the Seven Nations may prevent the appearance of many celebrated European interpretative musicians in America this season. This petty jubilation is based upon a fallacy so obvious that there is no need to state it. Artists create their own public. The patrons of concerts do not put aside every year a sum of money to be spent on concerts and operas regardless of the attractions proffered them. They wait until their interest is aroused.

Nor do those who attend operas and concerts stop to make inquiry as to the nationality of those who entertain them. It is naturally pleasing to think that American women have attained success in a universal art, as have Geraldine Farrar and Emma Eames. But it is purely a secondary consideration. "Musicianship, interpretation and power of emotional expression," says the MUSICAL COURIER, "are the things that count." Who can deny it?

The American nation has been built up by its generous and far seeing policy of assimilation of all the elements which seemed likely to benefit it. Our art is building up in the same way. It is folly to flatter mediocrity and stupidity by telling them they profit by the muzzling of genius. Were all the works of Beethoven destroyed tomorrow and forever, would the studio canaille, who are forever grating and scraping out their dreary commonplaces, profit in the slightest?

JAN SICKESZ READY FOR HIS AMERICAN TOUR.

Dutch Pianist Is Visiting Friends in Pennsylvania Prior to Entering upon a Busy Season.

Jan Sickesz, the Dutch pianist, arrived in New York, August 31, on the steamship San Giovanni from Naples. Mr. Sickesz had booked a first class passage, for which he had already paid, but was compelled to come over in the steerage of this steamer. From Cortina in the Austrian Tyrol, where he spent the summer at his villa, he went to Venice, which he reached after a great deal of hardship, traveling both by rail and automobile. From Venice he was able to get to Naples by rail.

JAN SICKESZ, THE DUTCH PIANIST, AT HIS VILLA CORTINA, AUSTRIA.

Since arriving in this country, Sickesz has been staying with friends at Ellenhurst, near Cresson, Pa. He will return to New York in a few days.

JAN SICKESZ ON BOARD STEAMSHIP SAN GIOVANNI, FROM NAPLES.

Mr. Sickesz is under the management of Antonia Sawyer, who has a very busy season booked for the pianist.

Janpolski Prepares for Busy Season.

Albert Janpolski, the Russian-American baritone, announces that his New York recital will be among the earliest events in November at Aeolian Hall. He will give at that time what he calls a "neutral" program—that is, it will include songs from German, English, Italian and Russian composers. For his Russian group he has several novelties by Gretchmaninoff, Rachmaninoff, Moussorgsky, etc.

Mr. Janpolski is to give a program of Russian songs at Newport, R. I., this month, under the auspices of the Russian Embassy, for the benefit of the wounded Russians.

Following his New York recital the baritone will make a three weeks' tour through the South and Middle West, singing in recitals and oratorio. Bookings are continually being made.

Mr. Janpolski is his own manager this season. He told a MUSICAL COURIER representative that his experience on his concert tours had shown him that the women's clubs and oratorio societies throughout the country usually know which artist they want, and that he considered the musical agency, for himself, for the most part unnecessary.

Despite his long concert tours he holds one of the highest paid choir positions in New York, at the West End Avenue Collegiate Church, where Florence Hinkle is soprano; Ida Hussy, alto; Paul Althouse, tenor, and Henry Hall Dunklee is the organist. Oratorio has been a weekly feature of the afternoon services of this church for a long time.

Mr. Janpolski was born in Russia, and lived there until he was twenty years of age. He is now, however, a naturalized American.

In regard to the present war Mr. Janpolski says: "It simply means that brother is killing brother. I have just received word from my brother in Kiev, Russia, that two of his sons are in the Russian army, at the front. From Leipsic my uncle writes me that his sons are at the front with the German army. So you may imagine how I feel."

Golf is the baritone's chief diversion at present, because he considers it the best exercise for a singer.

Charles W. Clark Under Hanson Management

Charles W. Clark has been obliged, on account of the war, to cancel the English tour which had already been booked for him, and which was to have kept him abroad until the middle of December. This news will be welcomed by his host of admirers in America, for it will admit of his beginning immediately his tour of this country.

CHARLES W. CLARK.

Mr. Clark has completed arrangements to be managed by the Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, New York. It seems that the baritone has definitely severed his connection with Paris, as he has rented his house there, and his family has joined him in America.

The Sternberg School Reopens.

The Sternberg School of Music, Constantin von Sternberg president, reopened for the season September 14. The Sternberg School is one of the busiest in the country and has been at its present location, 10 South Eighteenth street, Philadelphia, for several years.

Mlle. De Treville a Lover of Flowers.

Picture a garden of flowers, bursting forth in a thousand shades of beautiful color, and filling the air with the most wonderful fragrance! Then look again and you will see a figure moving carefully among the bushes and flower beds. It's Yvonne de Treville and her Japanese flowers.

MLLE. DE TREVILLE HAVING TEA.

"What are you doing to try to forget your worries over the war and the Belgian situation these days?" was asked of Yvonne de Treville this week.

"Why, just what the Japanese generals do under like circumstances, indulging in ike-bana, otherwise, the arrangement of flowers, which I learned in Honolulu from a charming little Japanese teacher.

"No, I shall not do as Yoshimasa, the fifteenth century Shogun, did, and give up my throne and career to devote all my time to the cultivation of this fine art, but I find that the daily half hour after breakfast spent in cutting and arranging the flowers from the garden, and especially the adjacent field, puts me in a good humor for my work.

"Of course, every one knows that the fundamental principle of all Japanese flower arrangement is to have three heights.

"For instance, this tall spray of golden rod represents Heaven, then the next feathery branch is for Man, and finally this short one," holding a rather stocky yellow plume in her hand, "is for Earth.

"Mme. Fugimara had a hard time to convince me that three branches were sufficient, and even now I like masses of salvia in this basket placed on the piano, don't you?

"I prefer to arrange the flowers with the various receptacles placed at the height, and, when possible, on the spot where they are to stand.

"This lovely green bowl is my favorite and you see I have it already in front of the mirror. However, I do not slant the tallest 'Heaven' branch toward the outer end of the mantle—that would be contrary to Japanese 'ike-bana.' No, indeed! As we will have five or more sprays I will arrange it in the 'in' or female style, having 'Earth' to the right. But now, you see, I am becoming very technical, so I will merely show you this beautiful combination, which is funny, but which I originated this morning.

"The golden glow has lost all its leaves, so glancing round the vegetable garden I spied some beautiful dull red leaves, and the cook had no tops to her beets this noon, for they were in the vase of the golden glow.

"I never pass the carrot bed without bringing in a bunch of those exquisite feathery green leaves. Just look how they soften and veil the stiffness of those mauve asters!

"Of course," continued the prima donna, "this is only one small half hour of the day, and I am sorry to say it is over now, and I have to attend to this very real work (pointing to a pile of letters just brought by the postman), for nothing goes from the office without my knowledge and signature, you know.

"Now, also, my New York and Brooklyn recitals mean extra work, too. Oh, not the musical side, for that is sunshine and joy; it is the business side, with a great big capital 'B.'

"Here, do take some of these branches of wild clematis with you as a souvenir of the country."

Making a Nation's Music.

Chicago, Ill., September 11, 1914.

To the Musical Courier:

It gives me pleasure to quote from William Curtis' book on Denmark the following: "Denmark has several notable composers, and it is one of the functions of the Copenhagen Orchestra to encourage the development of local musical talent. On Saturdays it is understood that the program will always be made up of the compositions of native composers, so that it usually draws to the glass dome a large audience of critics and others of musical education."

The vocal music is sung in the vernacular, of course. This music is made by musicians of talent and education. Questions of folksongs, themes and the like are left out. The product of the brains of these composers is what interests the public. And so it must be with any nation that wishes to produce a music of its own. Fifty Americans or more have sent operas on to the Los Angeles competition contest.

The Celebrated American Baritone

WILLIAM
HINSHAW

(Metropolitan Opera Company)

Specially engaged to sing Wotan and Wanderer in the Berlin Wagner Ring Festival June 23rd to August 21st, 1914

In America December to June

Concert Direction R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York

Composers of string quartets, songs, part songs, piano and organ works (all of equal value, along with orchestral works, in a nation's music) abound in large numbers in this country; yet, the best works are not given careful enough study; our mother tongue is shamefully neglected and we continue to neglect our best workers. There lies a large field of work to be done in this direction by our orchestral conductors and opera directors, our teachers and artists who perform in public.

That the interest of the American public will play a large part in this matter goes without saying. Those capable of judging must have all vocal music adequately translated; then, with our native works and translations and the scores of American artists at home, we need be crippled at no time and in no line of music. Operas, orchestras and concerts can continue as heretofore, and at last, as should be, the American citizen will have the first chance of success. ELEANOR EVEREST FREER.

A Suggestion.

New York, September 12, 1914.

To the Musical Courier:

Grove's Dictionary tells us that Leopold Mozart used a stringed instrument in his orchestra that was known as the baryton. Later, as voices began to be divided as to quality, "baryton" was applied to voices of men between the bass and tenor, because that quality resembled the sound of the baryton. We have no authority for a change of spelling; then why not keep the original and write "baryton"?

Very truly yours,
IDA HAGGERTY SNELL.

Anna Case Due.

In a letter to the MUSICAL COURIER, dated September 4, Fred O. Renard gives the following information about Anna Case, the Metropolitan Opera soprano:

Miss Case will be back here on or about September 16. She sails from England on the steamship Royal George, via Montreal, September 9, due there September 15 or 16.

Kathleen Parlow's Plans.

A letter from Kathleen Parlow to Loudon Charlton [illegible] that the European war has completely upset her plans this season, and intimates that she may possibly spend a portion of the winter in America. The Canadian violinist since her last successful tour of this country has been meeting with great favor abroad, and she had been engaged for a series of English and European appearances under important auspices. Her plan has been to return to America for the season of 1915-16, but if she can arrange to come this forthcoming year Mr. Charlton feels confident that the demand for her services will well warrant her doing so.

In the course of her letter Miss Parlow expresses the somewhat unusual regret that she is not a man so that she may take part in the war. "I am bewailing my luck at being a woman. I would give anything to go and enlist, and I simply envy Kreisler! I can't even nurse—I'm an absolutely useless member of society at this moment."

Among other Charlton artists who will soon arrive are Felice Lyne, the American prima donna; Ossip Gabrilowitsch, the Russian pianist; and the latter's wife, Clara Clemens-Gabrilowitsch, contralto. Harold Bauer is due from Australia the last of the month, while Edmund Burke, the Irish baritone, and Oscar Seagle, the American baritone, will be among the arrivals of the next few weeks. Tina Lerner, the Russian pianist, has already arrived. Mr. Charlton has heard indirectly from Jacques Thibaud, the French violinist, and Josef Lhevinne, the Russian pianist, and is confident that they will be here in ample time to fulfill their engagements which are not scheduled to begin until the latter part of December.

A recent addition to the Charlton list is Ernest Hutcheson, the pianist, who is held in high esteem both in this country and abroad. For the last two years Mr. Hutcheson has made his home in Berlin, where his recital and orchestral appearances have added considerably to his prestige.

Marcella Craft, Principal Soloist Maine Festival.

Marcella Craft, the brilliant interpreter of Salome in Strauss' opera and of Suzanne in Wolf-Ferrari's "Secret of Suzanne," at the Munich Opera, for both of which roles she was especially selected by the composers, has been engaged as principal soloist at the coming Maine Festival, to replace Emma Eames. She will sing at Bangor October [illegible] and at Portland October 5.

MARCELLA CRAFT ON LAKE MAGGIORE, ITALY.

Miss Craft's California tour opens as soloist with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra at its opening concert, November 5. From California she returns to the East, touring the entire country during the winter months, and returning again to California early in the spring.

In Vienna "Parsifal" was heard in two theatres, the total number of performances being 62. Cologne came next, with 28, followed by Barmen, 24; Frankfurt, 16; Leipsic, 15; Dresden, 15; Chemnitz, 14; Kiel, 14, etc.

Myrtle ELVYN

RENOWNED AMERICAN PIANISTE

Now Booking For American Tour 1914-1915
Concert Direction, HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Bldg., Chicago
KIMBALL PIANO USED

IN ALL THE KEYS.

Emma A. Dambmann (Mrs. Herman G. Friedman) returned from Watch Hill, R. I., last week, and is now occupying her apartment at Hotel Calumet, 340 West Fifty-seventh street, New York. She resumed vocal instruction, September 8, finding a good sized class awaiting her, as usual. The Watch Hill News of September 6 has the following to say:

Tuesday morning the guests of the Watch Hill House were quite startled at the early appearance of a picnic party, off to spend the day at "Musicolony," near Weekapaug. Attired in bathing suits they started out in four machines. In the party were Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Burden, Attleboro, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Byrnes, New York; Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Winfield, Orange, N. J.; A. Weldon Donaghue and Ethel Donaghue, the pianist, Hartford, Conn.; Beebe and Ethel Burden and Charles E. Burden, Jr., New York, and Mrs. Friedman (Emma Dambmann), of New York.

Elena deOlloqui, the pianist and instructor, has been the guest of Mrs. Greene (formerly professionally known as Jennie Dutton, the soprano), at her beautiful home, "The Folly," Onteora Club, Tannersville, Catskill Mountains. She returns soon to New York, and will be frequently heard during the coming season.

September 2 was "Sousa Day" at Willow Grove Park, Philadelphia. Mr. Sousa conducted a number of his own works. The day was devoted to the "March King's" compositions, played by the famous Sousa Band.

Estelle Wentworth, an American who has been appearing in opera abroad, has been spending the summer near New York. Because of the war, her return to Europe has been postponed.

Elizabeth Leckie, mezzo-soprano, and Margery Snyder, violinist, gave a recital at the Takoma Park Sanatorium, Washington, D. C., in honor of Lena Stiebler, of Baltimore. Both Miss Leckie and Miss Snyder studied voice with Miss Stiebler at the Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore.

Rienzi Thomas, conductor of the Birmingham, Ala., Spring Music Festival, is the director of three of that city's music clubs—the Treble Clef Club, Music Study Club Chorus, and the Arion Club. A consolidated chorus from these organizations will unite in rehearsing an oratorio and short compositions for next season's festival.

Nine thousand is said to be a conservative estimate of the number of people who listened to the concert given by the community chorus of 325 members and a band of twenty-five pieces in Genesee Valley Park, Rochester, N. Y., on an afternoon early in August. Fourteen numbers, including classical works and old familiar songs, were given. Mrs. D. M. Leavenworth sang the soprano solo in the "Inflammatus," from "Stabat Mater," Rossini. A local paper gave chief credit for the success attained to the director of the chorus.

The Salt Lake (Utah) Philharmonic Orchestra is preparing to give five recitals this season, three strictly symphonic affairs and two "pops."

The following numbers were played by Will C. Macfarlane, municipal organist, in the City Hall Auditorium, Portland, Me., August 25: "Coronation March" ("Prophete"), Meyerbeer; "Traumerei," Schumann; "Funeral March of a Marionette," Gounod; intermezzo ("L'Arlesienne" suite), Bizet; toccata and fugue in D minor, Bizet; menuet ("L'Arlesienne" suite), Bizet; "Farandole" ("L'Arlesienne" suite). Bach; prelude, "Parsifal," Wagner; "Evening Bells" and "Cradle Song," Macfarlane; largo, Handel; "Storm" fantasia, Macfarlane.

Four hundred German Beethovens, members of the Beethoven Männerchor of New York, visited Forest Park, Pa., over Labor Day. The society took its own orchestra.

Organist Tracy Cannon gave a special recital Tuesday afternoon in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Utah, for the visiting mining engineers. They gathered around the instrument afterward, asking all sorts of questions as to the console mechanism and the construction of the organ.

The music teachers of Chilton County, Ala., met in the office of the superintendent of education, Clanton, Ala., and organized the Chilton County Music Association. R. A. Smith was elected president and W. T. Bean secretary.

The Salt Lake City (Utah) Apollo Association is preparing to give a series of recitals during this season. The organization comprises from twenty to twenty-five young orchestra players, with headquarters at the Consolidated Music Company.

Viola Cain, a former pupil of Theodore van Yorx, and a young woman of rare attainments, who was booked recently for a twenty weeks' engagement as the leading woman in "The Girl of My Dreams," is winning a decided success in her new role. Miss Cain is the possessor of a beautiful lyric soprano voice and is an actress of unusual ability. Her present tour includes Lebanon, Pa., September 5; Pottsville, Pa., September 7; Freeland, Pa., September 8; Pittston, Pa., September 9; Scranton, Pa., September 10; Middletown, N. Y., September 11; Newburg, N. Y., September 12; Kingston, N. Y., September 14; Catskill, N. Y., September 15; Bennington, Vt., September 16; Hooser Falls, Vt., September 17; North Adams, Mass., September 18; Pittsfield, Mass., September 19; Great Barrington, Mass., September 21; Bridgeport, Conn., September 22; Springfield, Mass., September 23; Meriden, Conn., September 24; Middletown, Conn., September 25, and Stamford, Conn., September 26.

The manuscript copy of an anthem inscribed "To Wm. E. Arnaud, choirmaster and All Saints' Choir, Atlanta, Ga.," reached Mr. Arnaud recently after considerable delay in transit due to the perils of war. The anthem, entitled "O Lord of Heaven," was composed by Dr. Cuthbert Harris, of London, especially for All Saints' choir, and is an appreciation of esteem in which he regards the choir and its choirmaster.

Marianne Waebekindt Baumbach has opened a studio in Pittsburgh. She is a daughter of Carl Waebekindt and has studied extensively in Europe under widely known instructors, including Von Bülow and D'Albert. She appeared in concert for several years at the completion of her studies.

Gertrude Kastholm, contralto, and Vera Belle Plummer, pianist, gave an August concert in the new Town Hall, Nahant, Mass. Both are pupils of L. A. Torrens, of Nahant.

Pupils of Elizabeth Buhrmann gave an afternoon piano recital at her home in Waynesboro, Pa., recently.

With Henry W. Savage's "Everywoman" production, a large pipe organ is carried with the company and played as part of every performance. An organist travels with the company. In the big special orchestra that will go with "Sari" this season one of the instruments will be a zymbalum, which resembles a piano and is played with sticks. This will be the first time this instrument has been carried by an orchestra in this country, and on this side of the Atlantic there are less than a dozen of them in use. With "Sari" the zymbalum will be played by E. Zervellys, an artist of reported European reputation, who, it is said, has played in private for King Humbert of Italy, for Emperor Francis Josef of Austria, and for the President of France.

Percy Shaul Hallett has given up his organ position in Los Angeles and will play in Pasadena next year. John Diggle, organist of St. John's Cathedral, of Quincy, Ill., will take the position vacated by Mr. Hallett.

Florence McNair, pupil of James Torrington, Toronto, Canada, has been appointed soprano soloist at the Northern Congregational Church.

The Fincks in the Mountains.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry T. Finck are at Schroon Lake, the Adirondacks, after spending several months in Bethel and Camden, Me.

Cincinnati Notes.

Cincinnati, Ohio, September 11, 1914.

Disturbed conditions abroad have had no effect on the enrollment of music students at the various music schools in Cincinnati, which open this week prepared for an unusually busy season. The Cincinnati Conservatory of Music still has some teachers on the homeward way from Europe, among them Marcian Thalberg and Shailer Evans. Bertha Baur, the directress of the Conservatory of Music, reached Cincinnati last week after many difficulties experienced in returning from Europe, where she spent the summer. The conservatory leads the other music schools in the matter of enrollment, every one of its 245 rooms being engaged before the opening of the season.

Of the College of Music staff, Hans Schroeder, the new voice teacher, and Walter Gillewiz, pianist, both of whom were added to the teaching force last season, are already busy with their pupils. Louis Victor Saar was one of the first Cincinnatians to escape from Europe, and Signor and Mrs. Albino Gorno, who spent the summer in Italy, returned the first of the week. The college was fortunate in having but a few teachers abroad this year, and reports the largest enrollment of students in its history.

Cincinnati has suffered less than might be expected from the unsettled conditions abroad, considering the many musicians with foreign connections who call this city home. There are but two members of the orchestra abroad, Gaston Duhamel, a fagott player, and Walter Heermann, cellist. Heermann is in Switzerland and Duhamel in France. It seems quite certain that the symphony season will open on time and under the usual conditions, all who are not present being replaced by other men.

Nina Pugh Smith, the able and always interesting music critic of the Times-Star, is one of the Americans enduring much discomfort and even distress in Florence, Italy. She sailed with her brother, Judge Rober Pugh and his wife, in June, for Naples, expecting to visit Italy, France, England, Belgium and Germany. The sudden interruption to travel left them stranded in Naples without funds, and the only word that has been obtained from them told of Judge Pugh assisting the American consul in caring for the many Americans in that city.

JESSIE PARTLON TYREE.

Sondershausen announces that its famous Ducal Conservatory, scheduled to reopen October 1, will remain closed this season.

WANTED

EXPERIENCED young lady harpist, teacher, all around musician, possessing dramatic ability and doing refined novelty, will consider high class engagements from reliable managers. Also concert and symphony orchestras. Address by letter only, Marie Lodeen, 34 West Thirty-eighth street, New York.

WANTED—A good teacher of piano, whose studio is in New York, and who has studied with Monsieur Isidore Philipp in Paris; a teacher who not only uses the French method, but prepares pupils for study with M. Philipp and one thoroughly prepared to teach, wanted by a young pupil who studied in Paris with this teacher. Address "R. H. A.," care MUSICAL COURIER, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.

FOR SALE

FOR SALE—One Conn Booster Trumpet Cornet, brass, in case. One Wurlitzer American Cornet, silver plated, gold mounted, in case. One mahogany upright Conrad piano used about three weeks, guaranteed for twenty-five years (ask your dealer about Conrad pianos), all guaranteed good as new or your money back. Price very low on either instrument. $250.00 takes the lot. Write today. Albert Petran, Neffs, Ohio.

Mme. M. Karweska
GRAND OPERA ARTIST
SOUTHERN RUSSIA, BUDAPEST and VIENNA

MARIE YAHR Contralto
Oratorio - Concert - Recital and Opera
Phone. Ravenswood 2319. 849 Lakeside Place Chicago

GAMBLE CONCERT PARTY BOOKING EVERYWHERE
CHARLES WILSON GAMBLE, Pilot - - East End, Pittsburg, Pa.

ROYAL CONSERVATORIUM of MUSIC in LEIPSIC
Own building with one large concert hall and two small halls, also fifty teaching rooms. Founded by F. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy in 1843. Yearly attendance, 950 students of all countries. Students received at Easter and Michaelmas each year, but foreigners received at any time, in accordance with page 9 of the regulations.
The course of tuition includes every branch of musical instruction, namely: Piano, all stringed and wind instruments, organ, solo singing and thorough training for the opera, chamber music, orchestra, and sacred music, theory, composition, history of music, literature and æsthetics.
Prospectus in English or German sent gratis on application.
Director of THE ROYAL CONSERVATORIUM of MUSIC DR. ROENTSCH

Royal Conservatory of Music and Theatre
DRESDEN, GERMANY
Sixtieth Year, 1914-1915. 1,505 Pupils, 82 Recitals, 116 Instructors
Education from beginning to finish. Full courses or single branches. Principal admission times begin April and September. Admission granted also at other times.
Prospectus and List of Teachers from the Directorium

STRASSBERGER CONSERVATORIES OF MUSIC
Grand and Shenandoah Aves. and 2200 St. Louis Ave. } St. Louis Mo
The Most Complete and Best Equipped Music Schools in the West.
Partial Scholarships for Deserving Pupils and Other Free Advantages.
Open All Year Terms Reasonable Diplomas Awarded
64 Competent Teachers in all its Branches. Established in 1886. Catalogues Free

OF THE
UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS
15 SEP 1914

MUSICAL COURIER
A WEEKLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND ALLIED ARTS

Thirty-fifth Year | Price 15 Cents | Subscription $5.00 | Foreign, $6.25 Annually

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 12 | NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1914 | WHOLE NO. 1800

Copyrighted by "Hartsook Photo," San Francisco and Los Angeles, Cal.

JOHN McCORMACK

INTERNATIONAL MUSICAL AND EDUCATIONAL AGENCY.
Church, Concert and School Positions Secured.
MRS. BABCOCK,
CARNEGIE HALL, New York.
Telephone: 2634 Columbus.

HELENE BARTENWERFFER
MEZZO SOPRANO—VOCAL INSTRUCTOR.
111 W. 74th St. Tel. 4934 Columbus.

M. F. BURT SCHOOL
Sight-Singing, Ear-Training, Musical Stenography. Normal courses in Public and Private School Music. Special coaching for church trials.
New York School, 1202 Carnegie Hall.
Address Brooklyn School, 1202 Lefferts Place.

PAUL SAVAGE,
VOICE CULTURE.
803 Carnegie Hall,
New York.

H. RAWLINS BAKER,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Studio, 622 Aeolian Hall.
Tel. 8296 Bryant.

MAX KNITEL-TREUMANN,
BARITONE.
Voice Culture—Art of Singing.
Studio, Carnegie Hall.
Mail address: Fifth Ave., New Rochelle, N. Y.

MRS. HENRY SMOCK MISS SUSAN S.
B O I C E.
VOCAL STUDIOS.
43 E. 27th St., N. Y., Tel. 1977 Mad. Sq.

MARY HISSEM DE MOSS,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
106 W. 90th St. Phone, 3552 River.
Exclusive m'g't of Haensel & Jones, Aeolian Hall.

MME. MINNA SCHLOEMANN,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION—Serious Pupils Only.
10 Manhattan Ave., N. Y. Phone, 4845 Riverside.

HENRY T. FLECK,
Head Musical Department,
Normal College, New York.
69th St. and Park Ave. - - - Tel. 2443 Plaza.

FLORENCE E. GALE,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals and Concerts.
Instruction, Leschetizky Method.
151 W. 70th St. Telephone, 5331 Columbus.

HATTIE CLAPPER MORRIS,
TEACHER OF SINGING IN ALL BRANCHES.
1730 Broadway, Cor. 55th St.
Telephone, 4117 Columbus.

ZIEGLER INSTITUTE OF NORMAL SINGING
MME. ANNA E. ZIEGLER, Director.
Met. Opera House Bldg., 1425 B'way, New York.
Tel. 1274 Bryant.

HENRIETTA SPEKE-SEELEY,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
1425 Broadway—Metropolitan Opera House.
Residence, 2184 Bathgate Ave. Phone, 3067 Tremont

DUDLEY BUCK,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
Aeolian Hall, 33 West 42nd St.
Phone, 7498 Bryant. New York.

GRAND CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC,
113 West 85th St., New York. Tel. 4152 Schuyler.
Special course for teachers and professionals. Degrees granted. Thorough course for beginners.
Dr. B. Eberhard, Pres. (Thirty-ninth year.)

ELIZABETH TOPPING
PIANO INSTRUCTION.
254 W. 104th St. - - - New York.

ELIZABETH K. PATTERSON,
SOPRANO. TEACHER OF SINGING.
Studio: 257 West 104th Street.
'Phone, 8101 Riverside.

JANET BULLOCK WILLIAMS,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
122 Carnegie Hall.

JAMES P. DUNN,
Composer and Organist, St. Patrick's Church, Jersey City. Instruction, Piano, Organ. Theory and Sight Singing. (Specialty Gregorian Chant and Catholic Church Music.) Phone, 782-R Bergen.

SIGNOR FILOTEO GRECO,
THE ART OF SINGING.
Studio: 62 East Thirty-fourth Street, New York.
Telephone: 4879 Murray Hill.

LOUISE KELLOGG,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
1211 Carnegie Hall. Tel. 1350 Columbus.

MORITZ E. SCHWARZ,
Ass't Organist, Trinity Church, New York.
RECITALS AND INSTRUCTION.
Address Trinity Church, New York.

ADOLF GLOSE,
Concert Pianist, Piano Instruction. Coach for professional and advanced singers.
Residence studio: 81 Morningside Ave., City.
'Phone, 2193-J Morningside.

LISBET HOFFMANN,
PIANIST.
12 Pierce Street, Stapleton (Staten Island).

WILBUR A. LUYSTER,
SIGHT SINGING SPECIALIST.
(Galin-Paris-Chevé Method).
Instructor 8 years at Metropolitan Opera Co. All Singers taught to read (church or otherwise), Rhythm, Ear Training, Supervisors' Course.
Tuesday and Friday Classes. 64 E. 34th St., N. Y.
Tel. 5469-J Bedford. 127 Quincy St., Brooklyn.

MISS EMMA THURSBY,
SOPRANO.
Will receive a limited number of pupils.
Residence, 34 Gramercy Park.
Phone, 3187 Gramercy. New York City.

BRUNO HUHN,
231 West 96th St., New York.
STYLE, DICTION, REPERTOIRE, ETC., TO VOCALISTS.
Will teach during the Summer.

DR. A. MADELEY RICHARDSON
Member of the Faculty of Institute of Musical Art.
VOICE PRODUCTION AND TONE-PLACING.
Teacher of singing, from the earliest stages to Opera, Oratorio and Recital work.
Tel. Morningside 7587. Studio, 490 Riverside Drive.

JOHN W. NICHOLS,
TENOR.
330 W. 58th St., N. Y. C. Phone, 1434 Columbus.

CLAUDE WARFORD,
TENOR.
Metropolitan Opera House.
1425 Broadway, New York.

CARL M. ROEDER,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
607 Carnegie Hall and 423 East 140th St.

FREDERICK E. BRISTOL,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
No. 143 West 42d St., New York.

MR. CHARLES LEE TRACY,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Certified Teacher of the LESCHETIZKY METHOD.
Studio: Carnegie Hall, - - New York City.

JOSEPH PIZZARELLO,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Voice Developed—Style, Opera.
851-852 Carnegie Hall, New York.

WILLIAM NELSON BURRITT,
VOICE SPECIALIST
AND REPERTOIRE BUILDER.
128A East 19th Street.
Tel. Gramercy 3848.

WALTER L. BOGERT,
Ex-President of N. Y. State Music Teachers' Ass'n.
TEACHER OF SINGING.
Baritone. Lectures and Recitals.
130 Claremont Ave., New York. Tel. 291 Morn'side.
Tuesday and Friday, Aeolian Hall.

Piano Instruction Telephone
Theory of Music 7280 Schuyler
CARL HAHN,
MUSICAL DIRECTOR.
Studio: 172 West 79th St. (The Avonel).

F. W. RIESBERG,
INSTRUCTION—PIANO, ORGAN, HARMONY.
With the "Musical Courier"; Sec'y Manuscript Society; Organist Central Baptist Church, New York. 439 Fifth Ave.; Tel. 4292 Murray Hill.
Residence, Park Hill, Yonkers, N. Y.

JESSIE DAVIS,
PIANIST.
Concerts—Recitals—Lessons.
Studio: 701 Pierce Bldg., Boston.

CARL FIQUÉ, PIANO
KATHERINE NOAK-FIQUE,
Dramatic Soprano
FIQUE MUSICAL INSTITUTE,
128 DeKalb Avenue, Brooklyn.

MISS GENEVIEVE BISBEE,
—Leschetizky Method—
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
Also limited number of resident pupils received.
38 East 60th St. 'Phone, 6109 Plaza.

ALICE GARRIGUE MOTT,
ART OF SINGING.
172 West 79th St., New York.

WARD LEWIS,
ACCOMPANIST—With Mr. David Bispham season 1914. With Riheldaffer-Gailey Co. touring West Summer 1914.
547 Riverside Drive, New York.
Phone, 3753 Morningside.

ESPERANZA GARRIGUE,
ART OF SINGING.
Heathcote Hall, 609 West 114th St., New York
Tel. 7814 Morningside.
(Bet. Broadway and Riverside Drive.)

MRS. WILLIS E. BACHELLER
TEACHER OF SINGING.
22 East 33d St., New York City

MME. EMMA A. DAMBMANN,
(MRS. HERMANN G. FRIEDMANN.)
CONTRALTO.
Vocal Instruction, Concerts.
Residence Studio, Hotel Calumet
Phone: Columbus 1628. 340 West 57th

THE NEW YORK INSTITUTE F
VIOLIN PLAYING, PIANO A
VOCAL CULTURE, 230 East 62d S
Complete musical education given to stud from the begining to the highest perfection.
F. & H. CARRI, Director

MARY T. WILLIAMSON,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals, Concerts, Instruction.
Leschetizky Method. 21 East 75th St.
'Phone, 1302 Lenox.

MR. AND MRS. THEO. J. TOEDT
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Home Studio: 163 East 62d St., New Y

T. TERTIUS NOBLE,
ORGANIST AND MASTER OF THE CH
Lessons in Organ, Theory and Composi
St. Thomas' Church, Fifth Ave. and 53d

VON DOENHOFF,
VOICE—HELEN. PIANO—ALI
1186 Madison Ave.
'Phone: 1332 Lenox.

DANIEL VISANSKA, VIOLINIS
Nine years of successful teaching and conc in Berlin. Will accept engagements and a number of pupils.
Address: 25 West 126th St., New Yo
Phone, Harlem 3427.
[In Philadelphia Mondays. Address 18. mond St.]

ELENA DE OLLOQUI,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
111 East 62d St., New York. Tel., 228

MME. LISETTE JOSTY-HAMMO
"Voice-placing and Singing" through "C Italian Enunciation."
Metropolitan Opera House Bldg.,
1425 Broadway, New York.

HERBERT WILBER GREEN
SCHOOL OF SINGING.
Director of the Brookfield Summer School o
701 Carnegie Hall, N. Y. City.

MUSICAL COURIER

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 12. NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1914. WHOLE NO. 1800

LONDON AND PARIS DURING WAR TIMES.

What the Germans Would Find in Musical Paris—Movements of the Artists in the Two Capitals—London's Concerts Resumed.

London, England, September 4, 1914.

The MUSICAL COURIER Paris correspondent—pro tem London—sincerely hopes that, if the Germans do get into Paris (which seems doubtful now), they will not be so unkind as to come in on the southwest side through the Bois de Boulogne, in which case they would most unfeelingly disturb much of the beauty and chivalry of the American musical colony in Paris, which is, to a considerable extent, concentrated on that side of the city in Passy.

First in line would be "Commodore" Buckner's apartment, which is on the very walls themselves. Mr. Buckner, a prominent patron of American music in Paris, is lucky enough to be in America with his family this summer, but the apartment is—or was up to the latest advices—occupied by May Esther Peterson, the American soprano of the Opéra Comique, with her mother and sister. A few hundred feet farther would—alas!—bring the invader to the Paris office of the MUSICAL COURIER and the "lares e penates" of your correspondent as well. The splendid new house and studio—hardly finished—of Gabriel Lapierre is right at hand, too. I presume M. Lapierre—the accompanist of Melba and Kubelik on their American tour last winter—must be among his country's defenders, as he is still a young man.

Three steps farther directly into Passy and Oscar Seagle's house would be Germanized. The house is empty at present, but—malheureusement!—all the Seagle furniture is there.

Then following a straight line through Passy, the homes of Jean Verd and of Arthur Alexander would next fall into the "enemy's" hands.

Speaking of Mr. Alexander, he and Mrs. Alexander were due to leave Paris August 28 for Marseilles and to sail from that port on the steamship Patria for America yesterday (September 3).

JEAN VERD'S PATRIOTISM.

Jean Verd, the pianist, who, as I wrote in a recent letter, was safe here in England with the Seagles, did a very fine thing by packing up his belonging and starting home to volunteer for Red Cross service, as he was not eligible for the army, never having been obliged to serve. He was accepted, and at last reports was stationed at Sceaux, just south of Paris.

He escorted back to Paris Mme. Binet, an excellent teacher of French and French diction, with a large connection in the American musical colony, who, with her little son Jean, had also been at Bramber with the Seagle party.

A letter from Mme. Binet, written after she reached Paris, stated that, standing at the Arc de Triomphe, she counted just twelve people in the Avenue des Champs-Elysées, which gives anybody who knows Paris an excellent idea of conditions there.

OTHER PLUMS FOR THE GERMANS.

A column advancing along the line I have already mentioned would not have to spread out far to find the homes of many other musical friends and acquaintances—Jean de Reszke's splendid town house, Mme. de Sales' fine studio, the homes of Enrico Bertran and A. J. Goodrich, the studio, though not the home, of L. d'Aubigné. Of those mentioned, Mme. de Sales and Mr. and Mrs. Bertran were still in Paris at last accounts. L. d'Aubigné was at his home in Sèvres, just outside the city.

On the other side of the line of advance Arthur Hartmann would surely soothe the savage breast of the advancing host with his incomparable performance of that German masterpiece, the Bach "Chaconne." Mr. and Mrs. Hartmann were still in Paris last week, but he was preparing to go to America and will likely have arrived in New York before this letter is printed.

PARIS NOT RECOMMENDED.

I met Bessie Bouie, the vocal teacher, here in London last week. She wished to return to Paris before leaving for America, but was strongly advised by all of us not to do so, and, I think, surely did not attempt to, as events moved too rapidly.

LONDON MUSIC.

Now to come back to London. There is still more or less music here. The Promenades continue regularly to good patronage and Sir Henry Wood "obliges" with one or two novelties every week.

The proprietors of the Middlesex Music Hall have the courage of their convictions. They are turning their house into a temple of English opera at popular prices for four weeks at least, beginning September 7, and promise a longer season if patronage warrants it. The repertoire contains: "Faust," "Trovatore," "Carmen" and "Rigoletto," and the conductors will be Hamish MacCunn and Harrison Frewin. The company is drawn mostly from the principals of the Quinlan and Carl Rosa opera companies and the list contains no very well known names. This season will give employment to at least one hundred singers and instrumentalists, who would otherwise be stranded, and is to be heartily wished every success.

There is a National Sunday League here, whose object is to ameliorate the rigors of the British Sunday by providing pleasant but harmless amusement for its members and their friends. In accomplishing this end they have instituted a series of concerts each Sunday evening at the Palladium, devoted to strictly popular music.

A week ago Sunday evening the band of the Grenadier Guards was the chief attraction and there were soloists. The band plays very well indeed, and it is to be regretted that the leader is not a more musical person than he is, though the program proclaims his titles "M. V. O., Mus. Doc. (Oxon), Lieut." The soloists, excepting the large soprano lady, were good and the best of them was Helen Blain, who has a fine alto voice and knows how to use it. In Elgar's patriotic "Land of Hope and Glory"—an excellent thing, by the way, because it lacks the bombastic pretentiousness which mars many of the large works of the composer—and in the other numbers which followed she was very effective, and well deserved the hearty applause with which the audience called for encores. Notwithstanding the war Miss Blain is very much in demand, two recent summer engagements of a week each being at Bridlington and Yorkshire and at the Spa at Felixstowe.

VON ZUR MÜHLEN'S PLANS.

I understand that the Russian vocal teacher and coach, Raimund von Zur-Mühlen, famous throughout Europe as a lieder singer before his retirement some ten years ago and since then occupying in the London musical world much the same position as Jean de Reszke does in that of Paris, will open a studio in New York this coming winter. This is certainly good news for New York. Mr. von Zur-Mühlen was an intimate associate of, among others, Brahms, the Schumanns and Joachim, and he has the absolute tradition of the German lied at first hand. Such prominent lieder singers as Lula Mysz-Gmeiner, George Wolter and Julia Hostater return to him season after season in summer for special coaching.

A young American singer just entering on his career, Paul Draper, whom the war has cheated out of a number of professional engagements which were already booked for Germany next season, has decided to return to his New York home and make that his headquarters for the winter, devoting himself both to professional work and to teaching. Mr. Draper has been working with Von Zur-Mühlen for the last three years, and it is much to be doubted if there exists another professional singer in America who has such a thorough knowledge of the German lied, in which he has specialized.

GODOWSKY IN KEW.

Leopold Godowsky and his family have settled down for a while in a big house with three pianos at Kew Gardens. It does not look now as if the Imperial Royal Academy at Vienna would be doing much business the coming season. The great pianist is to spend most of the winter in America.

SEAGLE'S DEPARTURE.

Oscar Seagle, accompanied by his family and a few of his pupils who have remained until now, notwithstanding the scare, are to leave for New York next Tuesday on the steamship Baltic, provided, of course, that the White Star does not suddenly withdraw that boat as they were obliged to—for some secret reason—the Teutonic, which was due to sail tomorrow.

MCCORMACK'S DONATION.

Somebody told me that John McCormack has bought a million cigarettes, half of them for the soldiers in the field and half for those in the hospitals. Good for John!

SHAPLEIGH, THE FARMER.

Yesterday I saw Bertram Shapleigh, the composer, formerly a well known figure in the Boston musical world, and Mrs. Shapleigh, who had come up for the day from their great big farm in the Kent hills, far from war's alarums.

H. O. OSGOOD.

LATER LONDON NEWS.

Good English Opera Heard in War Capital—Souls Saved by Brass Band—London Full of American Artists from Paris—How a Yankee Got Ahead of English Music Publishers.

16 Adamson Road, N. W.,
London, September 11, 1914.

The principal feature of musical life here the past week has been the opening of the season of opera in English at the Middlesex Theatre. The performances began on Monday evening with the "Daughter of the Regiment," and the second opera to be produced was "Faust," which was sung for the first time last evening.

Arthur Spizzi, director of the company, and his associates are certainly to be congratulated on the excellence of the company which they have gotten together at so short a notice. The fact that the war has left many artists without employment has enabled them to obtain many good singers at very reasonable salaries, and they have taken full advantage of the opportunity offered them. Most of them come from the existing English opera companies—from the Carl Rosa or Moody-Manners and Quinlan.

In Florence Morden the company has a leading soprano who is well worthy of a place in any grand opera company. She was the Marie in "Daughter of the Regiment" and Marguerite in "Faust," and sung and acted splendidly in both, making a tremendous and well deserved hit with the public. All the supporting company—with the exception of Siebel in "Faust"—was excellent. Robert Parker's Mephisto in "Faust" stands out specially as a fine bit of work. He is an American, who formerly sang at Cologne and with the Quinlan company.

The chorus is first class in every respect and gets a lot of applause all to itself at every performance. The orchestra is a bit ragged, but not more so than must be expected of men who are unused to playing grand opera and who have of necessity insufficient rehearsals. Harrison Frewin conducted the "Daughter of the Regiment" very well, but Hamish McCunn was distinctly not brilliant as the director of "Faust." His tempi often dragged and his constant "sh—sh!" to the orchestra in calling for a piano is something that should absolutely be reserved for rehearsals. The principals and chorus alone are paid to make a noise with their mouths—not the conductor.

I never have been enthusiastic about "grand opera in English," but the excellence of these performances has quite converted me. The principals enunciated most distinctly and correctly and have understood how to handle the occasional awkwardness of the English text with cleverness. The new director of the Opéra in Paris should come over here and learn how to put on "Faust." With the exception of the orchestra, last night's performance was vastly superior to that which we are accustomed to in Paris.

It is good to be able to record that the public shows

(Continued on page 34.)

Albert Borroff's Vacation.

The accompanying picture shows how Albert Borroff, the basso, spends his vacation. He is extremely fond of the woods and fishing and this summer spent the whole month of August, with his family, on Lake Shishebogama, in northern Wisconsin. Twice during his wandering through the woods he got lost, but finally found his way safely home. Being an expert teacher, Mr. Borroff is giving his son John lessons in how to handle a boat. Mrs. Borroff, who was Anna Allison Jones, a noted contralto, is also shown in the picture. She went along to see that her two boys did not "rock the boat."

MR. AND MRS. ALBERT BORROFF AND THEIR SON, JOHN, ON PLACID WATERS.

Mr. Borroff has returned to his studio in Kimball Hall, Chicago, and expects his usual heavy season of concerts and teaching. He is also planning a song recital for the early fall, at which he will bring out one of his distinctive programs, and no one in the field of concert artists knows how to arrange a recital program better than Albert Borroff.

HELEN BLAIN CONTRALTO
Address: Usual Agents
Residence: 29 Upper Baker St., Regent's Park, London, N.W.
Telephone 471 Mayfair

YEATMAN GRIFFITH
Teacher of FLORENCE MACBETH, Prima Donna Coloratura and other prominent Artists and Teachers
Studios: Holland House, 143 Maida Vale - London

MURIEL LITTLE (Leipzig Diploma)
Voice Production Taught on Method of ELENA GERHARDT
2 Wellington Road, N. W

The most eminent Composers, best Songs and Song Cycles are to be found in the Catalogue of
BOOSEY & CO. NEW YORK and LONDON
FREE on request. THEMATICS of latest important additions
9 East 17th Street New York

HERMANN KLEIN
Teacher of Some of the Most Successful Singers Now Before the Public
Co-Editor, Garcia's "Hints on Singing"; Author, New English Version of "Carmen"; Translator, Metzler's Mastersongs, "Lieder in English."
40 Ave. Road, Regent's Park, N. W., London

LOS ANGELES HAPPENINGS.

Recent Musical Events in the Southern California Metropolis.

1110 West Washington Street,
Los Angeles, Cal., August 31, 1914.

Things still remain quiet in the musical field, with no prospect of an immediate change, although the plans for this season are being discussed quite widely.

The work on the new Trinity Auditorium is fast nearing completion, and it will be ready for occupancy the latter part of September. It will doubtless seem a little strange to the musical habitues not to follow the custom of the past and go to the old auditorium. The new place may seem a little out of the way at first, but the public will rapidly become accustomed to it, no doubt.

MR. CADY CLOSES HIS SUMMER SEASON.

Calvin B. Cady, of New York and Chicago, has just completed his third annual season in Los Angeles, covering the month of August. This summer visit of Mr. Cady's has become an established feature, and the opportunity for hearing his lectures and criticisms, together with Miss Large's beautiful interpretations, has been taken advantage of by a large number of music teachers and students. Mr. Cady's work is so broad and comprehensive that it covers a large field of education beyond the strictly musical sense.

Josephine Large, of Hull House, Chicago, has been Mr. Cady's artistic interpreter for many seasons, and her work has been a great pleasure. She has a large repertoire and she brings also a mind rich in knowledge and imagination; she possesses a broad sympathy, which gives her work a genuineness and sincerity marked by beauty of tone and richness of conception. The return of Mr. Cady and Miss Large will be looked forward to by many.

FROM RIGHT TO LEFT: MR. AND MRS. YEATMAN GRIFFITH, FLORENCE MACBETH AND HERBERT HARROUN, OF OBERLIN (OHIO) COLLEGE.
Miss Macbeth and Mr. Harroun are studying in London with Mr. and Mrs. Yeatman Griffith.

MRS. OGILVIE ENTERTAINS.

Mrs. James Ogilvie, vice president of the Music Teachers' State Association and one of the successful piano teachers here, entertained at her home on Union avenue Saturday afternoon, August 22, in honor of Calvin B. Cady and Josephine Large. Miss Large gave a short program, which was greatly enjoyed by the musicians present; following this Mr. Cady, at Mrs. Ogilvie's request, spoke upon the much discussed subject, "The Standardization of Music Teaching." Mr. Cady is eminently able to speak with authority upon this topic, and he brought out to a certain extent the negative side of the question, while seeing plainly the necessity and the advantage of controlling the subject of music teaching so as to bring the best equipped minds to the work of musical training. He feels, nevertheless, that it would be a very difficult matter to standardize anything but the formal side of the subject, fearing that the danger might be toward the tendency to destroy originality and spontaneity.

He decried the possibility of making the subject a mere mechanical test of information which could be secured from books and be committed to memory by any one, no matter what the natural equipment. He feels that the present trend in all kinds of education is toward too much formalism. Mr. Cady has an open mind, but simply wished to bring out some of the difficulties attendant upon reaching a satisfactory solution. A very interested discussion followed his talk, many of those present asking questions and expressing their views. All felt very grateful to Mrs. Ogilvie for her thoughtfulness in providing this delightful affair.

MABEL STROCK A GUEST IN THE CITY.

Mabel Strock, of New York, is in the city for a short time, the guest of Jane Catherwood. She leaves in a few days to resume her work in New York City. She will be the guest of honor at the September dinner of the Gamut Club, where her beautiful voice will no doubt be much enjoyed. She has had a delightful and restful summer visiting with her family and friends in southern California.

JANE CATHERWOOD.

Wolle Organ Recital.

On September 24, in the Nazareth Moravian Church, Bethlehem, Pa., Dr. J. Fred Wolle, the leader of the Bach Choir, will give an organ recital. Dr. Wolle's work as a musician and as an organist is well known to lovers of the art, and this concert is sure to be a success. Dr. Wolle will be assisted by Mrs. David A. Wood, soprano, of Philadelphia. Of her the Moravian (Bethlehem, Pa.) has the following to say:

Mrs. Wood is recognized not only as a vocalist with a voice of unusual richness and power, but also as a musician of unusual talent. On the death of the late Dr. David D. Wood (the blind organist of Philadelphia) some years ago, the musical world feared that many of his wonderful compositions, which had so often charmed his audiences, had been lost beyond recovery, because they had not been committed to writing. These Mrs. Wood, by means of her intimate knowledge of Dr. Wood's work and methods, as his reader, and her own musical talent and indefatigable labor, has been able to rescue and is now publishing.

Max Jacobs Reopens Season.

Max Jacobs, the violinist, and leader of the Jacobs String Quartet, has opened his studio and will resume instruction for the season. After October 1, his studio will be located at 9 West Sixty-eighth street, New York. His first recital of the season takes place at Ford Hall, New York, on September 22. This will be followed by a recital at Long Branch, N. J., September 28.

Yeatman Griffith's Busy Summer Season.

Among the prominent Americans who have been studying this summer in London with Yeatman Griffith are Florence Macbeth, prima donna coloratura soprano; Edna Showalter, prima donna soprano; Pauline Donnau, prima donna coloratura; Herbert Harroun, professor of voice at Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio; Ernest Chamberlin, professor of music at Knox College, Galesburg, Ill.;

MR. AND MRS. YEATMAN GRIFFITH AND EDNA SHOWALTER.
Taken at London studio of Mr. and Mrs. Yeatman Griffith. Miss Showalter has been spending the summer in London studying with Yeatman Griffith.

Lowell M. Wells, professor of voice, Iowa State Teachers College, Cedar Falls, Ia., and many others.

Grace Hall Riheldaffer's Plans.

Grace Hall Riheldaffer, the soprano of Pittsburgh, has been enjoying a short rest at Chautauqua, New York, after a very strenuous season. Her 1914-1915 season opens in October 8, with the Calumet Club, of Milwaukee, Wis., and nearly every date for the entire season is already booked. During the month of April, 1915, she will give twelve recitals in Canada, Toronto and Hamilton being among the cities where she will appear.

Cable: Keynote, London
CONCERT DIRECTION
DANIEL MAYER
Established 1890
Chatham House
George Street
Hanover Square, W.,
LONDON, ENGLAND
ENGLAND'S PREMIER AGENCY

IN VIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS.

[England—No. 4.]

(1) Liverpool Philharmonic Hall. (2) Interior of Liverpool Philharmonic Hall. (3) Tower of London. (4) National Gallery, London. (5) The nave and organ of the Lady Chapel, New Liverpool Cathedral. (6) The Houses of Parliament, London. (7) Buckingham Palace and Queen Victoria Memorial; the Guards' Band passing. (8) King George V of England. (9) Aeolian Hall, London. (10) Town Hall, Liverpool. (11) Westminster Abbey, choir from the east.

Germaine Schnitzer Hears from War Centers

Germaine Schnitzer, the Austrian pianist, has just received news from relatives in Belgium and Austria. She hears that everything in Vienna appears to be calm, whereas this cannot be said of Brussels.

The artist has been obliged to abandon her European tour, which included forty-five engagements. Miss Schnitzer will, therefore, devote her whole season of 1914-1915 to concerts in America, her adopted country.

Mme. Hudson-Alexander's Plans.

For Caroline Hudson-Alexander's song recital in Aeolian Hall, New York, Thursday evening, October 29, the soprano has engaged Arthur S. Hyde, the organist and choirmaster of St. Bartholomew's Church, New York, for her accompanist. Mme. Hudson-Alexander has prepared a varied program, and the occasion promises to be one of unusual interest. On October 22, the soprano will give a recital in Cleveland, Ohio, at the Hotel Statler.

Paul Draper Returning to America.

The war is sending back to America for this season a young American singer who is just beginning his European career and whom the war has cheated out of several excellent engagements already booked for the coming season in Germany.

Paul Draper, a son of Dr. William Draper and Mrs Draper, whose activities in connection with the Philharmonic Orchestra made her so well known in New Yo musical circles, began his musical career as boy sopra soloist in the Grace Church choir, New York. He dete mined first to become a pianist, and, going to Euro studied three years at the Royal Academy at Munich, h was obliged to give up the piano on account of neuri affecting his hands. Fortunately he had his voice, whi had changed to a tenor leger, to fall back upon, and went to Florence to pursue his vocal studies. He becar however, tremendously interested in German lieder, t highest form of expression in song, and went to Lond where he has worked for the last three years with famous authority in that branch of music, Raimund Zur Mühlen. Mr. Draper has an authoritative knowle of all the best of song literature and the ability to imp that knowledge in his interpretations.

PAUL DRAPER.

Carl Hahn a Former Lone Star Musician.

Carl Hahn, the conductor and instructor in piano a cello, who resides in New York, was formerly a citizen Texas, where he held an important position in the musi activities of San Antonio and its environs. Mr. Hahn v director of the Texas State Saengerfests and held a sim position with the Beethoven Society, the largest mus organization in the State. To these two important po Arthur Claassen, until recently director of the New Y Liederkranz and of the Brooklyn Arion Society, besi many other organizations of importance in the vicinity New York, has been appointed.

During his residence in the Lone Star State Mr. H also conducted the Texas State festivals and also American music festivals, which were held in San Anto his work there covering a period of twelve years. V the assistance of Mrs. Eli Hertzberg, president of State Federation of Women's Clubs, he organized the Antonio Symphony Orchestra. The concerts which Hahn gave with this body of men were an agreeable prise to musicians and music lovers, for they were a cess both artistically and financially. Mr. Hahn is a g admirer of the big State of Texas and is firm in his viction that it will, in the future, be an important fa in matters artistic and musical.

A. CARBONE

MASTER IN THE ART OF SINGING

(Late Leading Singer (for twelve seasons) with the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company)

Art of Singing from the first rudiments to the classic "Bel Canto"

School of Opera, with Acting and Modern Languages. Carbone's Breath Controller recommended by famous singers, teachers and physicians as unique apparatus for breathing exercises. Circular sent on application

Thirty Years' Experience. Highest References. AEOLIAN HALL, WEST 42nd STREET, NEW YORK CITY

REGINA de SALES

Teacher of Singing

Has returned from Paris and will open a studio in New York City

Madame OTTILIE METZGER

THE GREAT GERMAN CONTRALTO (Second American Tour)

and THEODOR LATTERMANN

THE FAMOUS BASS-BARITONE (First Appearance in America)

Who are now singing in the Hamburg Opera will arrive in America early in February

Opera :: Concert :: Oratorio

Management: Music League of America, Howard E. Potter, Business Manager
Aeolian Hall, New York

Owing to the Cancellation of the Season of Opera by the CHICAGO GRAND OPERA COMPANY will be available for concerts, oratorio and recitals during the entire season of 1914-15

HENRI SCOTT

Frederick Stock, Director of the Chicago Symphony, says:

"America today is producing wonderful voices. Take, for instance, Mr. Scott. He has a magnificent voice and everyone knows it."

Cincinnati May Music Festival, 1914.

"Henri Scott sang the bass part with sonority. tonal beauty and dramatic intensity."—Cincinnati Inquirer.

Address: A. M. JEFFERSON, Secretary, 6120 McCallum St., Germantown, Philadelphia, Pa.

RUDOLF BERGER

FAMOUS TENOR of the Metropolita Opera Company

Available for Concerts May and June, 1915

Management: R. E. JOHNSTON

1451 Broadway - - New Yor

SPOKANE NOTES.

212-213 Auditorium Building,
'Phone, Main 4479,
Spokane, Wash., September 7, 1914.

The Spokane School of Music announces the opening of its season with a neat catalogue containing half tones of the faculty members.

With the return of cooler days, the teachers are beginning to arrive in town, and the business of teaching has begun.

Olivia Dahl, who spent the summer in Norway, arrived here last week. All other Spokane people abroad are still unheard from. The last word from Sam Lamberson and Harry Robinson was a card from Berlin dated July 29.

Luther B. Marchant spent four weeks at Monterey, Cal., resting, and four weeks in San Francisco visiting old friends and coaching with his former teacher there. He gave a successful program at the Century Club in Berkeley on August 25.

George Buckley was in Detroit, Mich., for six weeks renewing old acquaintances.

Edgar Sherwood was in the studio two days a week, but managed to get into the vacation spirit by touring the Inland Empire in his automobile.

Clara Wagner is in New York studying, but expects to be back in Spokane about October 1.

Mrs. H. W. Allen's announcement for the season's series of concerts has been made. For the first number in the course, October 5, Olive Fremstad, the dramatic soprano, will appear. Then Evan Williams, tenor, comes in November; Alma Gluck, soprano, in January or February; Efrem Zimbalist, violinist, in February; Josef Lhevinne, pianist, in March.

ELMO M. MINEHART.

Henriette Bach Recreating.

The accompanying snapshot shows Henriette Bach, the young violinist, and the Hon. Simon Wolf, of Washington, HENRIETTE BACH AND HON. SIMON WOLF.

D. C., taken in the White Mountains, where Miss Bach has been enjoying her summer recreation.

Horatio Connell in "New Life."

For the fifth time Horatio Connell, the baritone, has been engaged to sing in Wolf-Ferrari's "New Life." The latest engagement is with the Philadelphia Choral Society, November 19, and will be the second appearance of Mr. Connell with this association in this work. Other "New Life" engagements include two successive seasons with the Milwaukee Musical Society and last season with the Mendelssohn Choir at the Toronto Festival.

Mme. Maverick to Sing for Red Cross Society.

Laura Maverick, contralto, has been engaged as soloist for the big concert to be given November 1 by the Beethoven Männerchor, New York, Emil Reyl, director. The proceeds of this concert will go to the Red Cross Society of the German army. This promises to be one of the best attended concerts of the year.

Anita Rio to Return to America.

Howard E. Potter has received a cable from Anita Rio, soprano, that she is on the White StaDr liner Canopic and will arrive in Boston about September 25.

Mme. Rio is returning to this country after a long absence in Europe, where she has been appearing in concert and opera.

CLARENCE EDDY
AVAILABLE FOR ORGAN DEDICATIONS AND RECITALS
Address: 510 OAKWOOD BOULEVARD CHICAGO
Season 1914-15

SEASON 1914-1915 MRS. H. H. A. BEACH
M. H. HANSON 437 Fifth Avenue New York

SEASON 1914-1915 MAUD POWELL
H. Godfrey Turner 1400 B'way, New York

JENNY DUFAU
COLORATURA SOPRANO
Concert Recital
Chicago-Philadelphia Grand Opera Company
Under Management of HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Building, Chicago

VAN YORX
THEO. —— Tenor
Studios: 21 West 38th Street, - New York
3701 Murray Hill

GABRILÓWITSCH
THE EMINENT RUSSIAN PIANIST
AMERICAN TOUR JANUARY-APRIL, 1915
Management, LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, N. Y.
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

GIUSEPPE CREATORE AND HIS BAND
NOW BOOKING FOR 1914-1915
OFFICE: 1512 TRIBUNE BUILDING, - - - CHICAGO, ILL.

A NAME TO CONJURE WITH!
THIBAUD
For Terms and Dates Address
A Violinist Whom France Declares to Be Without an Equal
Thibaud's American visit last winter was the violinistic sensation of the season. His return in the Fall will be an event of first importance.
LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, New York

U. S. KERR
BASSO CANTANTE--Song Recitals and Oratorio a Specialty
For Bookings Address 538 West 143d Street, New York City
'Phone 3313 Audubon

JULES FALK VIOLINIST
NOW IN AMERICA
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th Street, New York

The Guilmant Organ School
DR. WILLIAM C. CARL, Director
A School for Students with serious aims, who desire to become expert Organists. REOPENS OCT. 6th.
Send For New Catalogue. 44 West 12th St., N. Y.

LEONARD BORWICK PIANIST
WILL TOUR AMERICA SEASON 1914-15
"Leonard Borwick is an artist gifted not only with refined taste and deep musical feeling, but with the technique of a master."—Berlin Borsen Courier.
Management—WOLFSOHN BUREAU, 1 West 34th St., New York. Steinway Piano Used

Alberto JONAS
Jenaer St. 29, Berlin, W.

HOWARD WELLS
PIANIST AND TEACHER
Authorized representative of
LESCHETIZKY
5428 KIMBARK AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.
Appointments by telephone, Blackstone 1620.

ELEANOR HAZZARD
PEOCOCK
(SOPRANO)
Exclusive Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON
437 FIFTH AVENUE - - - NEW YORK CITY

OLGA AND HELENE CASSIUS
Vocal Instruction
Pupils prepared for the operatic and concert stage. Specialties: Placing of ruined voices, rectifying of wrong methods of breathing by articulation of consonants and voice inflection, and fundamental building of speaking voice. Send for Olga Cassius' "Die Erzieuhung der Stimme und Atmung."
Studio: Prager Str. 35, Berlin, W.

MAURICE VERA KAPLUN
ARONSON
PIANIST-PEDAGOG CONCERT-PIANISTE
BERLIN, W. BOZENER ST. 18

VICTOR HEINZE
Send for free booklet "Studying Music Abroad"
Pianist and Teacher. Most modern principles. Thorough artistic education. Eminently successful.
PETER VISCHER STR. 19 BERLIN-FRIEDENAU

VITTORIO MORATTI TORINO
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
For four years the only assistant of the late G. B. LAMPERTI
Authorized representative of his method
BERLIN W., MOTZ ST. 53

GEORGE
FERGUSSON
BARITONE
VOCAL INSTRUCTOR
Augsburger St., 64 Berlin W., Germany

SUMMER CLASS FOR THE
LESCHETIZKY METHOD
UNDER INSTRUCTION OF
MRS. POTTER-FRISSELL
IN NEW SCHANDAU-OSTRAU, SAXON SWITZERLAND, GERMANY
Address Villa 6, as above.
Class continues until October 15, 1914

King Clark Studios
Kurfürstendamm 63, Berlin, W.
Cable Address: KINGARK, BERLIN

TINA LERNER'S RECENT EXPERIENCES.

Russian Pianist Tells a Musical Courier Representative About Her Trips in Europe—Will Tour America This Season.

"It seemed to me then that piano playing never existed."

Tina Lerner, the Russian pianist, was recounting her experiences in the war inflicted district to a MUSICAL COURIER interviewer.

"Ten days previous to the declaration of the Austrian-Servian conflict, I had gone from England, where I had passed a delightful summer, down into the Austrian Tyrol, to Gossensas in the Brenner pass. I was the first one to start back to Berlin.

"At Munich the German troops were already mobilizing, but I succeeded in reaching Berlin without difficulty."

It was in Berlin that the plucky little Russian had an opportunity to show her calibre.

A Lerner party was to meet a party of American at one of the hotels Unter den Linden. They arrived just as war was declared with England. A great mob had gathered Unter den Linden.

TINA LERNER AT HER SUMMER HOME IN ENGLAND.

"Two German friends met us at the door," she related. "'Quiet, not a word of English!' they warned. We could hear the surging of the mob. They threatened the hotel. It was necessary for us to get away at once. Four of us stood before the mob as the doors were opened. You can imagine our feelings. An empty auto stood near. We were able to use it. The driver turned right into the mob, but we finally escaped through the tiergarten."

Miss Lerner had an equally exciting flight to Amsterdam.

"I was booked for the steamer Lusitania, November 6," she narrated, "but I was bound to get away if I had to go steerage. I still have my Lusitania ticket in my pocket.

"We were in Amsterdam. Americans were crowded in a kind of shed, awaiting inspection. I stood near a window. Friends outside said they would take me through.

"It was a big risk, but this happened and we escaped by auto to The Hague, and at length to Rotterdam by automobile, whence we sailed to America on the steamer Ryndam."

It will be recalled that Miss Lerner toured Europe in concert last year. Her plans were to concertize in Norway, London, Paris, Liverpool, etc., during September and October this year, but everything was "too upside down for that," to use the pianist's own words.

"You feel that America is the vantage ground now?"

"Yes, America always gives unlimited best opportunities. "I am beginning my tour in the Middle West, at Rockford College, Rockford, Ill. From there I intend to return East, to New York and Boston. After that I shall go to the Pacific Coast until January 1."

Miss Lerner says she is immensely fond of California and its people. It might be said that the Californians are great admirers of the classical featured, dark eyed, little artist.

Although optimistic about her present season here, her thoughts are with her mother in Berlin and with her friends across the sea.

For as Miss Lerner says: "I have, of course, very mixed feelings, being Russian by birth, an American by adoption, with residence in Berlin, and I am very much at home in England.

"I really feel as if every one of those feelings within me has felt one big blow."

Melba's Debut.

Nearly every one can trace various turning points in their lives, says Mme. Melba in the article "How I Began" in T. P.'s Weekly. For myself, I look upon a certain reception at Government House, Melbourne, as marking a "big day" in my existence. This reception occurred while Lord Normanby was Governor-General, and I appeared really as a pianist, but between my piano solos I sang some simple songs at the piano. Afterward, Lady Normanby came up to me and said: "Dear child, you play brilliantly, but you sing much better than you play. Cultivate your voice, and you will have a great career."

At seventeen I married, and started soon afterward to learn singing in earnest. It is a strange thing that my first teacher trained me as a contralto.

Alberto Randegger, the famous teacher, was not enthusiastic regarding my chance of success as a singer. So after this rebuff I felt very nervous when we journeyed to Paris, and I sang to the great Mme. Marchesi.

She listened with deep attention, and when I stopped she told me, with tears in her kind eyes, that she could only discover one break in my voice. "Stay with me a year, my child," she said, "and I will mend that break." My work, under her marvelous tuition, began the following day, and ten months later, at the Monnaie, Brussels, I made my first appearance on any stage, in any opera, as Gilda, in "Rigoletto!"

October 15, 1887! Shall I ever forget that date? My nervousness, my anxiety, my overwhelming relief when the curtain fell and I knew that I had justified Marchesi's belief in me, that I had really made a success. It was a wonderful, terrible night; a mixture of terror and joy such as I shall never experience again—although my nervousness seems to grow with each fresh performance.

That performance marked the beginning of my public career, and I hope I may say, without undue conceit or exaggeration, that I have never since looked back. For twenty-seven years I have served the public all over the world, and been proud to be their servant. My first appearance in London was made in May, 1888, at Covent Garden, when I sang the role of Lucia in Donizetti's "Lucia di Lammermoor." My work is my life. It has taken me round the world; it has brought me innumerable friends, known and unknown; it has given me the greatest happiness I have ever experienced in life.

Huss' Activities.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Holden Huss' sixth annual Southern and Western tour will begin early in November and will take in a wide territory. They have spent most of the summer at their Lake George summer home, which is provided with an adjacent artistic studio. Trips to the wilder Adirondacks and the Berkshires have been one of their chief diversions. Three of the Huss pupils, Eleonore Paycz, Ruth Covington and Ethel Thompson, have given informal recitals in the studio. Mr. and Mrs. Huss expect to return to New York City to begin a busy professional season on October 8.

Their first joint recital, about ten years ago, took place under interesting auspices. It was at the White House at the invitation of President and Mrs. Roosevelt. The East Room was crowded with a distinguished and brilliant audience; the diplomatic corps in its gorgeous uniforms adding color to the sober black and white studies of senators, judges and congressmen. What might have proved a serio-comic incident and came near suggesting Mozart's nose—playing the middle note of a very widespread harmony—occurred during one of Mr. Huss' solos. The floor of the magnificent room was so smoothly polished that it shone with mirror-like brilliancy, and the pianist during a Schumann novelette felt his seat slipping by degrees farther and farther from the piano, until the action of his arms was anything but legitimate according to rules of modern pianism. With a mighty effort he "saved the day" and the solo by pulling his seat into position during a short fermata. It is needless to say, that a large crowd was placed under the pianist before the next group, which prevented any more skating rink-like performances.

"While dressing in the morning I heard the landlord singing the tune of 'Nearer, My God, to Thee.' When I came downstairs I complimented her on her religious fervor, to which she replied: 'Lor, sir, it ain't that exactly; but that's the toon I always boil my eggs by—one vun if I want 'em soft and two if I want 'em hard!'"—From Cowen's "My Art and My Friends" (E. Arnold).

Steinway Studios, Berlin
Berlin, S. W. Bergmann St. 102
Very accessible, modern, sound-proof studios with Steinway Grands for rent.
For terms apply to warerooms
STEINWAY & SONS
Konigsgratzer St. 6, Berlin, W., 9

Julia Claussen Will Tour.

Julia Claussen, contralto of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, expects to return to this country to make a tour, which has been booked by Alma Voedisch, of Chicago.

MR. AND MRS. CLAUSSEN IN GOLDEN GATE PARK, SAN FRANCISCO.

The accompanying snapshot of Mr. and Mrs. Claussen was taken at Golden Gate Park, San Francisco, during the Chicago Opera Company's visit there last season.

Malkin Music School Reopens.

The second season of the Malkin Music School has begun auspiciously, with a larger enrollment of pupils of all ages than the combined roster of last year. The Malkin School is unique in several respects, not only as to location (at 26 Mount Morris Park West), but in the fact of having a superior virtuoso at the head, for Mr. Malkin has long enjoyed the reputation of being one of the finest pianists in America. His last conspicuous appearance was with Ysaye, in a joint recital at Carnegie Hall, when the New York, Brooklyn and other dailies united in his praises. The director also strongly emphasizes the fact that students who intended to go abroad to study will find in the Malkin Music School the efficiency, thoroughness and inspirational atmosphere of the leading European conservatories.

The unusual work of the violin, vocal and cello departments is also recognized, for in all these branches splendid results already have been obtained, and publicly shown, through recitals, etc. In a word, this institution is run by an artist virtuoso who has demonstrated his superiority, one who combines highest ideals with practical methods. The new catalogue will be sent on request; it contains all needful information, such as a list of teachers, rates of tuition, etc. The important matter of free and partial scholarships is mentioned, making clear that there are "free pupils" and some who enjoy partial free lessons because of unusual talent, but possessing limited means.

The following is culled from the new catalogue:

The Malkin Music School was organized with the chief aim in view to provide an efficient medium for musical education. It is unique in its nature, in that it presents sincerity of purpose, efficiency of teaching, and thoroughness or method; all these qualities being a reflection of the characteristics of the faculty, under whose personal supervision the smallest details will be subject.

The heads of the various departments are artists of the highest experience, utilizing intelligence of procedure and sound pedagogical principles in their instruction. The system of instruction is such as to afford the pupil every possible known advantage, namely, direct individual instruction, monthly public appearances of the pupils in recitals alternating with recitals given by the teachers; thus bringing the pupils, teachers and parents in constant contact, lending a healthy impetus toward diligent work and good progress. The ensemble class meets regularly, and so much has been accomplished that preparations are under way to extend this most valuable activity. Ensemble playing has helped wonderfully in the instruction, for it makes the student familiar with various musical forms, and also develops a keen sense discrimination.

Faculty—The faculty for the year 1914-1915 is as follows, with possible additions:

Faculty Council—Manfred Malkin, director; Vladimir Dubinsky, S. Kinkelstein, Pietro Floridia, Maurice Kaufman, Joseph Pasternack, Sophie Traubman, Arnold Volpe.

Piano—Manfred Malkin, F. T. Cortes, Morton B. Knafel, Ada Becker, Miss P. Rosenblum, F. Samuel, William S. Schwartz.

MANFRED MALKIN.

Violin—Maurice Kaufman, Henry Zucker, Arnold Volpe.

Cello—Vladimir Dubinsky, L. Rudie.

Voice Culture and Repertoire—Pietro Floridia, J. Massel, Ormond Osborne, Joseph Pasternack, Sophie Traubman.

Harmony, Composition, Ear Training—Rudolph Baumeister, Max Persin.

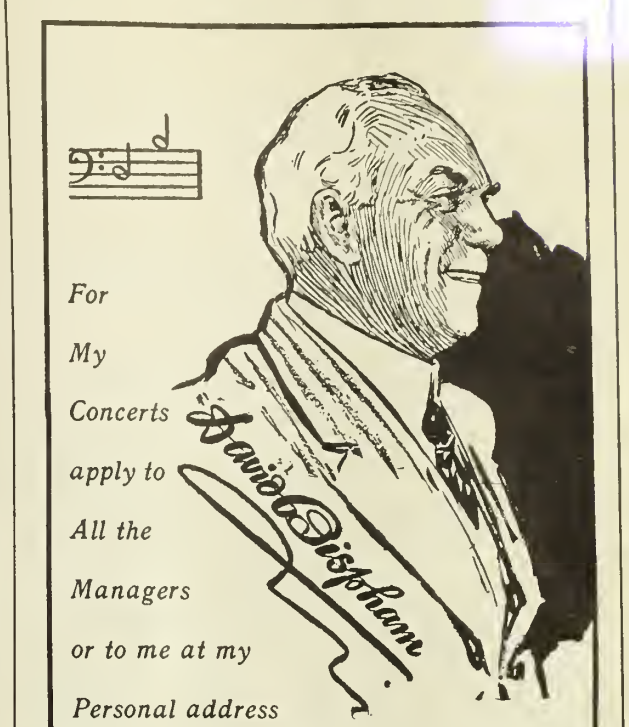
Ensemble Class—Arnold Volpe.

Orchestra Department—S. Finkelstein.

Paul Tietjens in New York.

Among those whom the war in Europe has decided to change their field of activity is Paul Tietjens.

Mr. Tietjens, who is a pupil of Leschetizky and, more recently, Harold Bauer, established himself in Berlin two years ago, where he engaged in the various musical occupations abounding in that city. Besides teaching, putting in hard work at the piano and engaging in composition, and frequently the harder work of listening to innumerable concerts, he found time to compose a new operetta, a feat not nearly as remarkable, however, as the fact that it was almost immediately accepted for production. The date of this production was fixed for October 1, but Mr. Tietjens now strongly suspects that the opening will be postponed to a much later date.



Reversing the usual order of things, Mr. Tietjens came to America this summer for a short vacation and had secured his return passage to Europe when the sailing was cancelled. He does not know yet whether he was lucky or not in missing some of the excitement on the other side of the Atlantic, but he does know that America is a good country to stay in. For that reason he has taken a studio at 11 East Fifty-ninth street, New York, where he is already busily engaged in teaching the piano.

Although Mr. Tietjens' name will probably always be associated with his early success, "The Wizard of Oz," he regards the composing of operettas as a decided side issue. He has never lost sight of the serious side of music, and has always kept up his work at the piano, in which he excels. He will be heard this season in recital, and in numerous private musicales.

PAUL TIETJENS.

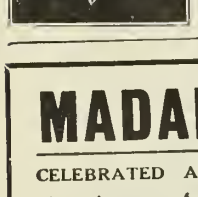
SCHUMANN-HEINK
TOUR--SEASON 1914-15--NOW BOOKING
Direction: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th Street, New York
STEINWAY PIANO USED

KATHARINE COODSON
Management: Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York.
"A POETESS OF THE PIANO"
In America January to April 1915
TOUR NOW BOOKING
KNABE PIANO

CORNELIUS VAN VLIET
Dutch Cellist
2514 Emerson Ave., S., Minneapolis, Minn.



MARGARET KEYES CONTRALTO
WITH CHICAGO GRAND OPERA CO.
Management, THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU, 1 W. 34th St. New York
Personal Address, 600 West 138th St. Phone 1810 Audubon

Angelo CORTESE
America's Distinguished
HARPIST
Management, Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, N.Y.

MARGARET HUSTON
SOPRANO
In Europe Season 1914-15

J. FRED WOLLE
ORGANIST
Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau
1 West 34th Street, New York

Nana GENOVESE
MEZZO SOPRANO. Formerly Manhattan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts, Recitals and Musicales
EXCLUSIVE MANAGEMENT, ANNIE FRIEDBERG, 1425 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

Carl Pohlig
CONDUCTOR
Address: VILLA POHLIG, PLANEGG
near Munich, GERMANY

MADAME ANITA RIO
CELEBRATED AMERICAN PRIMA DONNA SOPRANO
after six years of operatic successes in Europe, will return to this country in September for Concert and Oratorio Engagements.
Management - - MUSIC LEAGUE OF AMERICA,
HOWARD E. POTTER, Business Manager
AEOLIAN HALL - - - NEW YORK

GIORGIO M. SULLI
Teacher of Carmen Melis, Clara Clemens, Mme. Martha de Lachmann, Reinhold von Warlich, Mario Sammarco, Lena Mason, Tarquinia Tarquini and other well-known singers of Grand Opera or Concerts. Musical Director of the Labor Temple Choir, New York. Teaching during summer, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday only. Special terms.
VOCAL STUDIO, 1425 Broadway
Metropolitan Opera House Building, New York
(Phone, 2762 Bryant)
Public Recitals throughout season for advanced pupils. Write for Circulars.

JAN SICKESZ
DUTCH PIANIST
American Tour Begins October, 1914
Management ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, New York
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

May Beegle, Pittsburgh Manager.

May Beegle, Pittsburgh concert manager, announces a second season of Ellis concerts, with the following stars and dates: Olive Fremstad and Pasquale Amato, October 27; Julia Culp and Harold Bauer, November 24; Fritz Kreisler and Elizabeth van Endert, January 12; Boston Symphony Orchestra, January 27. These attractions promise to duplicate the success of the Ellis concerts last season, which are reported to have broken all records for attendance in Carnegie Music Hall.

In addition to this series, Miss Beegle will, as in former years, have a number of other attractions throughout the season, including Ferruccio Busoni; the New York Symphony Orchestra, for two concerts, with Maggie Teyte and

MAY BEEGLE,
Pittsburgh concert manager.

Josef Hofmann; Paderewski, Frances Alda, Francis Macmillen, and Pavlowa and her Russian dancers. Other important attractions are in contemplation, and will be announced later.

Miss Beegle ranks with the most efficient concert managers in the country, having a thorough knowledge of all that makes for success. Prior to entering into the managerial business for herself, she was secretary for the Pittsburgh Orchestra during Emil Paur's regime. Since the disbandment of this organization, Miss Beegle has given to the Pittsburgh public all the symphony orchestras and prominent stars during the past five seasons. Miss Beegle's office is 1312 Farmers Bank Building.

John Prindle Scott Returns.

October 16, The Monday Evening Club, of Norwich, N. Y., will give a recital devoted exclusively to works by the American composer, John Prindle Scott. The program, which will be sung by local musicians, consists of songs, quartets and choruses.

Mr. Scott has just returned to New York from his vacation feeling refreshed and ready for hard work. He spent the major part of the summer in the mountains, enjoying outdoor sports of all kinds, in which he is greatly interested. He walked about 300 miles.

Pittsburgh Ladies' Orchestra Has Returned.

After an absence of four weeks, the members of the Pittsburgh Ladies' Orchestra, of which Albert D. Liefeld is the director, have returned to Pittsburgh. During this time they have traveled a distance of thirty-eight hundred miles, throughout the States of Ohio, Illinois, Nebraska, Wisconsin and Michigan. They report a splendid trip, all having enjoyed the best of health. At a concert at the Chicago Y. M. C. A. (the West Side Branch), they scored a particular success. During October they will make a short tour of Ohio and western New York State.

Lizette Josty-Hammond Has Begun Teaching.

Lizette Josty-Hammond has resumed teaching at her studio in the Metropolitan Opera House Building, 1425 Broadway, New York.

Neglia's "Venetian Suite" scored a big success recently in Bad Nauheim.

DJANE LAVOIE-HERZ
CONCERT PIANIST
Touring Canada and United States Season 1914-1915
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.
Steinway Piano used.

Walter Henry Hall
Professor of Choral Music
Columbia University
Address, 49 Claremont Avenue

WILLIAM WHEELER
TENOR
Soloist Worcester Festival
O. J. EHRGOTT
156 Fifth Ave.
Personal Representative
Personal Address: 61 Hamilton Place, New York

FRANCIS ROGERS
BARITONE
Recital. Oratorio. Concert
Also a few Pupils
563 Park Ave., New York
Management:
LOUDON CHARLTON
Carnegie Hall

LOUISE JANSEN WYLIE
Soprano
Management,
Iris Pendleton,
Philharmony Hall,
Wichita - Kansas
New York Address, 736 W. 181st Street

LILLIAN SHERWOOD NEWKIRK
VOICE CULTURE, ITALIAN METHOD.
Special attention to tone production.
1425 Broadway, Metropolitan Opera House Bldg., New York.
Mail address, 11 Morgan Ave., Norwalk, Conn.

Adele Krueger
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Concert. Oratorio. Recital
Management of Miss Annie Friedberg. 1425 Broadway, New York

ALBERT SCHOTT
DRAMATIC TENOR
In America Season 1914-1915. Available for Recitals, etc.
Exclusive Management Concert Direction, M. H. HANSON,
437 Fifth Ave., New York

LEO BRAUN
Voice Culture : Repertoire
Opera Concert Oratorio
Studio: 446 CENTRAL PARK WEST

GEORGE HAMLIN
Will, without fail, fill his engagements in America next February, March and April.
HAENSEL & JONES, AEOLIAN HALL, NEW YORK

MADAME MOLIÈRE
VOICE CULTURE
Five years Grand Opera. Principal cities of Europe. Berlin, Hamburg, etc.
Address, Musical Courier Co.

MANUEL QUIROGO
THE WONDERFUL SPANISH VIOLINIST
American Tour Opens Carnegie Hall, October 17th
Direction Sam S. and Lee Shubert
MANAGEMENT, R. E. JOHNSTON,
1451 BROADWAY - - NEW YORK CITY

OVIDE MUSIN'S Virtuoso School of Violin
Recognized as the HIGHEST SCHOOL of violin playing in the United States

Instruction given by this world renowned Virtuoso in person, in the Authentic tempos, style, fingering and bowing of the classical repertory, ancient and modern. Musin's SPECIAL SYSTEM greatly LESSENS the time ordinarily spent in acquiring technic and bow control. Piano, Harmony, with eminent teachers. Singing with Mme. Ovide Musin, Coloratura Soprano. Write for outline of Course by CORRESPONDENCE, and THEMATIC CATALOGUE of compositions and editions by OVIDE MUSIN. Dormitories for limited number of students in School. Practice Unrestricted. CHAPERONAGE. Address the REGISTRAR,
51 West 76th St., New York.

JOHN McCORMACK'S ART.

The Irish Tenor Is Due in New York October 16 to Begin Another American Concert Tour—New York Recital October 31—Why This Artist Commands Such Wonderful Success—He Possessses Rare Musicianship, Is an Accomplished Pianist, Violinist and Master of Instrumentation—Is Now at Work on a Symphony—Manager Charles L. Wagner Is Enthusiastic Over the Approaching McCormack Season.

John McCormack will sail back to America on the steamship Mauretania, October 10, arriving in New York October 16. To mention that he is the Irish tenor seems superfluous, for it would seem that the whole world should know John McCormack. His concert appearances from coast to coast of the United States have always meant enthusiastic capacity houses. His European concerts are attended with the same results, and in Australia last season the vast audiences gave vent to an enthusiasm which became almost frenzy. The press of Sydney, Melbourne, Adelaide, etc., could not say enough in his praise, columns of which were reproduced in the MUSICAL COURIER at the time.

One great charm of the tenor's art is his ability to interpret the beauty and soul of song to those who otherwise give but little of their attention to vocal art—to those who "feel" and "enjoy" his singing, but cannot and do not care to know the reason why, as well as to those of recognized understanding and appreciation of music and the vocal art.

That John McCormack is young and a pleasing personality on the concert stage has its decided value, but the enormous box office receipts, wherever he appears, are as potent testimonials as one could desire to John McCormack's ability to give the keenest pleasure and enjoyment possible by his singing alone—a pleasure which recognizes the song as presented by John McCormack as the loadstone and puts the man in the background. People go to hear John McCormack sing. His programs do not fail to please. He is usually forced to double or triple them.

Bursts of applause greet McCormack's first appearance and the enthusiasm increases after every number. He never fails to win the hearts of his hearers from the first and to hold complete sway until the conclusion. Encore after encore is demanded, and his audiences are not satisfied until they are granted.

For John McCormack has a tenor voice of the sweetest lyric quality and ample temperament, to which heaven born gifts the tenor has added the fundamental requisites of technic. His portamento, mezzavoce, phrasing, breath control, remarkable diction, particularly in English; his splendid pronunciation of the foreign languages (his Italian has oft been declared perfect), like well-oiled machinery, place no incumbrance in the way of unhampered flow of song, and the people are caught and held by the magic of his voice and interpretations.

Nor is he confined in his interpretations to the purely lyric. McCormack can interpret the dramatic with equal voice and art.

The tenor possesses rare musicianship. He is an accomplished pianist, a violinist and master of instrumentation, in fact he is now at work on a symphony. Spending hours at the piano with the classic composers is one of McCormack's pet diversions. Difficulties with an accompanying orchestra are unknown to him. Each member of the orchestra recognizes the broad musicianship of the tenor at once, and John McCormack is given sympathetic support from each last man in the orchestra.

Just to follow his career in Australia alone last season suffices to show what he can do. And what was true there is true of every McCormack appearance.

In 1912 this reference to John McCormack appeared in the Los Angeles (Cal.) Times:

"John McCormack is the only young tenor I know today who fills perfectly the purely lyric tradition. How this English speaking young man ever took time to learn to sing will probably remain one of the anomalous mysteries of contemporary music.

"Such limpid use of the voice, such a delicate command of portamento, such mezzavoce, such round, luscious, appealing, ringing tone, floating on the breath and formed apparently without the slightest physical limitation or throaty pressure—to tell the truth, all these things do not seem logical or even sane in these days of passion-tattering. Mr. McCormack appears to bear the standard of bel canto pure and undefiled."

In 1914 the following appeared in the same paper:

"John McCormack is about to reach the twenty-ninth milestone of his life and is probably just now at his very best. He has gained greater poise and his well known lyricism rises to dramatic fervor when required. His quality of voice, tenor robusto, goes well with his virile, big, handsome personality. His enunciation is clear and his tone sympathetic; he has method, but, above all, that intelligent and emotional power of expression that holds and grasps an audience."

The above press notices are only two, chosen from a great number of others, which are apt illustrations of the striking growth in the ability of the tenor within two short years, and also of the increase in the appreciation of his audiences.

The McCormack-Wagner combination has been a happy one in every sense of the word. Charles L. Wagner, John McCormack's manager, has been, as one might say, to the business end what McCormack has been to the artistic side, making a decidedly well balanced combination.

Mr. Wagner's own statement illustrates their perfect understanding: "It took us only eight minutes by the watch to make our first contract in St. Paul five years ago. McCormack knew that I believed in him, and he had looked me up and believed in me. That made the contract and has kept our contract going."

Mr. Wagner also added, referring to the tenor: "I think McCormack's business is coming in bigger than ever, and it looks as if he will have the usual successful season that he deserves."

John McCormack's American season will open October 26. His first New York recital will be given in Carnegie Hall, October 31.

Mary S. Warfel in the Yosemite.

Mary S. Warfel, the young harpist, has sent to the MUSICAL COURIER the accompanying snapshot, taken recently in MARY S. WARFEL AND THE CALIFORNIA BIG TREE.

the Wawona Big Tree Grove, Yosemite National Park, California.

Unique Concerts in Odd Places.

The Ernest Gamble Concert Party has appeared in many odd places in its "little journeys" over the United States,

Canada, Mexico and Europe. The party has given concerts before 1,100 convicts at the State penitentiary, Fort Madison, Ia., and Mr. Gamble says it was a most intelligent and discriminating audience, who demanded only the best music and who would have hissed such sentiments as "Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight?"

A picturesque matinee performance was given on board the United States warship Wabash, with 800 sailors out on the open deck.

A most pathetic concert was given before several hundred blind people in the East End of London, and a more appreciative audience would be hard to find.

An entertainment hundreds of feet underground in the great natural theatre at Mammoth Cave, a mile or more from the mouth, was quite eerie with only the torches of the guides for illumination.

Concerts on board a transcontinental limited train, snowbound in the Cascade Mountains; in opposition to bull fights in Old Mexico, at Latin-American fiestas, before the pearl fishers in the isles of the Pacific, and in distant Western mining camps, have kept the nomadic existence of the Gamble Concert Party from becoming monotonous.

Piano Department

Including

HANS VAN DEN BURG
ELISE CONRAD
LAWRENCE GOODMAN
LEWIS M. HUBBARD
ALBERT ROSS PARSONS
LOUIS STILLMAN
SIGISMOND STOJOWSKI
VITA WITEK

Free supplementary classes in Theory, Rhythm, Ear Training, Solfeggio, Musical Form and Counterpoint, Canon and Fugue, Composition and Orchestration, Literary and Art Lectures, Musical History, Chamber Music.

For Catalogue write Sec'y, Box 7

The von Ende School of Music

44 WEST 85th STREET - - NEW YORK

Helen Ware Will Locate in New York.

Helen Ware, the interpreter of Hungarian and Slavic music, is to make her headquarters in New York.

The career of Helen Ware ought to serve as a source of great encouragement to all ambitious young artists, for this plucky violinist, throwing aside all precedents, struck out on a new path for herself, and after winning the hearty appreciation of the Continental music centers came home to repeat her successes in America.

Last season she appeared in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Detroit, Waterbury, Youngstown, and thirty-five other large cities in her own recitals of Hungarian and Slavic music, joint recitals with Yolanda Mérö, and as soloist with some of the prominent symphony orchestras.

After her first American tour, the greatly increased demand for Helen Ware's Hungarian and Slav recitals, also for joint recitals with Rudolph Ganz and Harold Bauer, necessitated the removal of her offices from Philadelphia to New York.

Laszlo Schwartz, manager of Helen Ware, has criss-crossed the States arranging Helen Ware's tour, and prophesies that his artist will about double her engagements of last season.

If one is to judge by the steady growth of this earnest young artist's success, it seems as if her motto, "Tempo Moderato—poco a poco crescendo," in regard to the growth of her artistic career, may be recommended to all ambitious young artists.

The success of this unique figure of the violinistic world can be traced not only to her soulful interpretation of the Hungarian and Slav masters, but also to the fascinating arrangements of her programs, which contain not only the unknown compositions from the Hungarian and Slav musical literature of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, but also introduce the worthy modern composers of the two continents.

Thuel Burnham on Way Home.

Thuel Burnham will sail from London via the Allen Line to Montreal on September 25. His tour of America, under the management of Harry Culbertson starts in North Dakota on October 10. This tour was originally scheduled not to begin until about the first of the year, but the war having made it necessary for Mr. Burnham to leave Paris, Mr. Culbertson, who had been refusing many dates for earlier in the season, was able to reconsider these refusals and start Mr. Burnham's tour immediately.

It is expected that Mr. Burnham will be in New York at least for a portion of the season. He was on one of the last trains to reach London from Paris and was thirty-six hours on the road.

Louise Gerard-Thiers Resumes Teaching.

Louise Gerard-Thiers, the New York vocal teacher, announces that she returned from abroad on September 15, and has opened her studio at Carnegie Hall, New York. Mme. Gerard-Thiers may be seen by appointment.

Season 1914-1915
ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, New York
Has the Honor to Present the Violinist

SPALDING

Assisted at the Piano by
ANDRÉ BENOIST

Steinway Piano

Mme. DE VERE-SAPIO

Prima Donna Soprano from Paris Grand Opera; La Scala, Milan; Covent Garden, London; Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., etc., etc., in America Season 1914-15. For terms and dates address:
65 Central Park West, New York.

ROMUALDO SAPIO

Formerly Conductor Metropolitan Opera, New York, and having coached the majority of great operatic artists, among whom: Adelina Patti, Nordica, Tamagno, Etc.

VOCAL STUDIO, 65 CENTRAL PARK WEST, N. Y.

Ellen Keller
VIOLINIST
In America Season 1914-15. NOW BOOKING
Exclusive Management;
Gertrude F. Cowen, 1451 Broadway, New York City

MME. MARIE RAPPOLD
Celebrated Prima Donna Soprano
of the Metropolitan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts — January to June, 1915
Exclusive Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY

NEW YORK COLLEGE OF MUSIC
128-130 East 58th Street
CARL HEIN Directors AUGUST FRAEMCKE
The college has for its object the universal higher education in all branches of music—Department for those who desire to teach music—Course for Supervisors of Music in Public Schools—Opportunities and training for public appearance—40 Instructors of highest reputation—Newly engaged, Rubin Goldmark, Composition; Michel Sciapiro, violin.
CATALOG ON APPLICATION

ARTHUR SHATTUCK
The Distinguished American
PIANIST
In America Season 1914-15
Management, HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York
Steinway Piano Used

Guilmant Organ School Catalogue.

William C. Carl, Mus. Doc., has arrived in New York, and the regular semesters of the Guilmant Organ School will begin. The enrollment is already large. Scores of organists, graduates of the school, occupy prominent positions in churches of America, Canada and elsewhere, and this is the best testimony of the thoroughly practical course laid out by Dr. Carl. Pupils are taught all the essentials connected with an organist and director's duties, even down to the little understood "insides" of the "king of instruments," for there is a course in organ tuning, repairing, etc.

The new catalogue is in press, and from it the following interesting matter is reprinted:

SCHEDULE OF WORK.

Two years constitute the course with a post-graduate course of one year for those desiring to perfect themselves still more, enlarge their repetoire, or in preparation for degrees, etc.

Examinations are held twice each year, in February by the faculty and in May before the board of examiners, when each student is required to play an organ piece, read a trio at sight, transpose a chant one tone up and down, read a vocal score at sight, harmonize a melody at the keyboard, harmonize a figured bass at the keyboard, modulate, in addition to paper work in harmony, counterpoint, orchestration, musical dictation, hymnology, musical form, write an essay, organ tuning, boy choir training and general questions on musical knowledge. These requirements are the same as demanded by the American Guild of Organists for the associate examinations. In the final tests an average of 70 per cent. in the paper work, and 70 per cent. in the work at the organ is required.

The school year extends over a period of thirty weeks, beginning October 6, 1914.

Christmas vacation, two weeks; Easter one week.

TUITION 1914-1915.

The terms for each year of the course are $200, payable in advance, and includes the subjects as indicated above and all advantages of the school. The fee for a diploma is $20.

Students desiring to study the organ under Dr. Carl without taking the regular course can do so. Terms for twenty lessons, $100, payable in advance. Length of each lesson, forty-five minutes.

SINGLE SUBJECTS.

Students can register for single subjects if desired. Terms on application.

Those desiring preparatory organ tuition can study with one of the assistant teachers, who have been personally trained by Dr. Carl. Rates $50 per term of twenty lessons.

All outstanding accounts must be paid before the annual examinations in May, otherwise the student will not be eligible for the same.

Students who register after the beginning of the term are charged for the full term. No allowance will be made for temporary absence from lessons, or for lessons discontinued, except in cases of protracted illness of several weeks' duration.

FACILITIES FOR ORGAN PRACTICE.

Exceptional advantages are offered for organ practice, and two organ are available—a three manual Roosevelt organ equipped with all mechanical accessories, etc., also a two manual instrument; both propelled by electric motors.

The terms for organ practice are: Thirty-five cents an hour on the two manual organ, and fifty cents an hour on the three manual organ.

Terms are invariably payable in advance, and all lessons will be charged for except in cases of protracted illness.

Address: 44 West Twelfth Street, New York City.
Telephone connection.
Cable address: Organista, New York.

Pelton-Jones Opens at Briarcliff Lodge.

Judging from indications, Frances Pelton-Jones, the celebrated harpsichord virtuosa, is to have the busiest season of her career. Fortunately, she is on this side of the Atlantic; had not a serious illness intercepted plans, she might have been more or less stranded in Europe. In addition to a vacation in Switzerland, Italy and Germany, her plans included concertizing in France and England, engagements in Paris and London having been arranged. As it is, Miss Pelton-Jones feels that America is "quite good enough," and it would seem from the number of inquiries for her that America shares the same opinion in regard to her and her unique art.

Following an opening concert at the beautiful Briarcliff Lodge, October 4, assisted by Florence de Courcy, contralto, she starts on a tour West, with Iowa and Nebraska as her destination, covering intermediate territory in Illinois, Ohio and Pennsylvania, where she is to appear in the "artist courses" of prominent colleges and clubs.

Inga Hoegsbro Heard in Recital.

A recital was given at Southport, Conn., September 12, under the auspices of Mrs. Frank Hillman Hall. Inga Hoegsbro-Christensen, the Scandinavian pianist and director of the Conservatory of Northern Music, New York, played compositions by Russian, Norwegian and Finnish composers, and was recalled after each appearance. Her style of playing, which was interesting, highly artistic and rich in coloring, was greatly appreciated by a large and enthusiastic audience. Beautiful roses were presented to the charming and unique artist. Mrs. Hoegsbro-Christensen it at present in Maplewood, N. J., where she is teaching a class of talented pupils, which gave a recital, Saturday, September 19.

The Conservatory of Northern Music will reopen its new studios in October.

HELEN WARE
Exclusive Manager, Laszlo Schwartz
Room 912, 1170 Broadway, New York

EDYTH WALKER
(Imperial Royal Chambersinger, Court of Austria--Hungary)
Dramatic Soprano
Metropolitan, New York.
Covent Garden, London.
Imperial Royal Opera, Vienna.
Royal Opera, Berlin.
Festspielhaus, Bayreuth.
Royal Opera and Wagner Festivals, Munich, etc., etc., etc.
Season 1914-1915 with the
Chicago Opera Company

The Sensation of the Year
CARL FLESCH
The Great Hungarian Violinist
Second American Tour
ENTIRE SEASON 1914-1915
Management HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York
KNABE PIANO

BARONESS SIGNE VON RAPPE
SOPRANO
Prima Donna, Vienna and Stockholm Operas. Principal Soloist 6th QUADRENNIAL MUSIC FESTIVAL OF THE AMERICAN UNION OF SWEDISH SINGERS, MINNEAPOLIS, JUNE 8-9, 1914.
"A voice of great range and brilliance."
—Minneapolis Tribune, June 9, 1914
American Tour, March-May, 1915
OPERA :: LIEDER :: ORATORIO
in Swedish, Italian, German, French and English
Sole Management:
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

YVONNE DE TRÉVILLE
Coloratura Soprano
Grand Opera Prima Donna
NOW IN AMERICA
SEASON 1914-15 BOOKING
Available for Concerts, Musicales, Recitals and Festivals.
New York and Brooklyn Recitals Early in November
European Address: 68 rue de l'Aurora, Bruxelles, Belgium
American Address: - 62 De Hart Place, Elizabeth, N. J.
Cable Address: Detreville-Bruxelles

WHITEHILL BASS-BARITONE
Formerly Metropolitan Opera Management; The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th Street, New York.

SLEZAK
The Great Czech Tenor
In America January, February, March and April, 1915
Exclusive Management:
HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York City
Hardman Piano Used

HENRIETTE BACH
VIOLINIST. Management, Wolfsohn Bureau, 1 W. 34 St., N. Y.

The HAMBOURG CONSERVATORY of MUSIC
PROFESSOR MICHAEL HAMBOURG, JAN and BORIS HAMBOURG, Directors
Unsurpassed faculty of over sixty teachers. Re-opens September 1st
TORONTO, CANADA

GIUSEPPE FABBRINI DISTINGUISHED ITALIAN PIANIST
Minneapolis

LIMA O'BRIEN
ACCOMPANIST
21 West 30th St. :: :: :: :: New York City

FREDERIC C. FREEMANTEL Teacher of Singing
89 South Tenth Street Minneapols, Minn.

Mr. and Mrs. JOHN DENNIS MEHAN Season 1914-15 Begins Sept. 21, 1914.
STUDIO: 70 CARNEGIE HALL
Telephone Columbus 5946

GAREISSEN STUDIO HALL: 64 East 34th St. NEW YORK CITY.

MABEL
GARRISON
SOPRANO
Metropolitan Opera Company
Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway : : New York City

JANE OSBORN-HANNAH
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Song Recitals Concert and Orchestral Appearances
AVAILABLE ENTIRE SEASON
Personal Management Chas. L. Wagner, 1451 Broadway, New York

JOHN McCORMACK
In America Entire Season 1914-15
EDWIN SCHNEIDER, Accompanist
Always and only under personal management of Chas. L. Wagner 1451 Broadway New York
Steinway Piano Used

RUDOLPH GANZ
"THE PIANIST WITH A MESSAGE"
Returns to America for
Season of 1914-1915
Exclusive Management, CHARLES L. WAGNER
1451 Broadway, New York
Steinway Piano Used

ALICE NIELSEN
Prima Donna Soprano
SEASON 1914-15 AMERICAN CONCERT TOUR
Steinway Piano Used
Personal Management, CHAS. L. WAGNER
1451 BROADWAY - - NEW YORK

SAN DIEGO HAS A NEW AND ACTIVE CHORAL SOCIETY.

People's Chorus Starts with Large Membership—Symphony Orchestra Begins Rehearsals.

San Diego, Cal., September 1, 1914.

This town has been very quiet since the State Convention of the Music Teachers' Association, which, by the way, was so admirably reviewed by Jane Catherwood, MUSICAL COURIER correspondent in Los Angeles. The report was much enjoyed by all the local musicians.

PEOPLE'S CHORUS ORGANIZED.

Willibald Lehmann, who was so energetic in connection with the Teachers' Association convention, has at last found something to do that will make use of his musical and executive ability and all his spare energy. He has organize a new choral society, to be known as the People's Chorus of San Diego, with an initial membership of over 300. This undertaking was launched in June and shows the healthiest possible symptoms of a long life, which is something this city has always had to contend with. It is apparently easy enough to start a chorus, but more difficult to keep it going, and the great interest and enthusiasm of this new organization is certainly hopeful. While beginning with lighter work, Willibald Lehmann's intention is to present "The Creation" in the near future with the best soloists available, and the chorus has already begun rehearsing this oratorio. The Popular Symphony Orchestra will work in connection with this body of singers.

This city is certainly fortunate in possessing men of Lehmann's ability and musicianship and the future of San Diego is practically ensured, musically, by the active cooperation of such men.

HOME FROM EUROPE.

Edna Darch has just returned from Europe after an exciting and interesting experience. Several other San Diegans, musical students and musicians, are at present in Europe.

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA REHEARSING.

The San Diego Symphony Orchestra, B. Roscoe Schryock, conductor, is already at work upon this season's offerings, which will include many ambitious programs.

TYNDALL GRAY.

Louise Jansen Wylie in the West.

Louise Jansen Wylie, the soprano, is to be the soloist with the Wichita Symphony Orchestra, Wichita, Kan., October 4. This will be Mme. Wylie's third appearance in Wichita.

"I will never forget Wichita," said the soprano. "My first appearance there was two years ago, and my train was so late in arriving that I was forced to sing an entire recital program without my dinner. My carriage drove me directly to Philharmony Hall from the train and I dressed in one of the dressing rooms while a large audience waited patiently."

Mme. Wylie's success in New York last season is creating much interest in her work throughout the West and her bookings already include the entire Middle West.

Mrs. Willis E. Bacheller's Pupils.

Since locating in New York City, about three years ago, Mrs. Willis E. Bacheller, the vocal instructor, has established a large clientele. The influx of pupils from all over the country has been on a steady increase, so she says, as this artist-teacher is well known from coast to coast for her conscientious and painstaking devotion to those who place themselves under her guidance.

At a concert given on April 22, 1914, Mrs. Bacheller had a list of four successful pupils, all of whom studied exclusively with her. They were: Sara Fuller, coloratura soprana; Dora Edwards, contralto; S. Rothstein, tenor, and Max Roselle, bass.

Mrs. Babcock Moves to Larger Studios.

Owing to the marked increase in her business of managing artists, Charlotte Babcock finds that her present quarters in Carnegie Hall, New York, are too small. After October 1 she may be found in the same building, at the fine and spacious studios known as No. 100, with an entrance on Fifty-seventh street.

David Dubinsky's Recital.

David Dubinsky, the Philadelphia violinist, is to give a recital in that city on October 27. Mr. Dubinsky will, without doubt, present a varied program in his usual pleasing manner.

"Test our musical resources" advises the Chicago Herald. It's a good idea. Never has there been a better chance.

The Knabe
The World's Best
Piano

When you invest in a piano—you want to be practical. You want to be certain that the Piano you invest in is thoroughly dependable—that it will give a full measure of satisfaction for every dollar you invest. Hence, when you are willing to put enough money into a Piano to insure the very best service without paying for unnecessaries—

Buy a KNABE

KNABE PLAYER-PIANOS

combine all the beauties of Knabe tone with the highest possible efficiency of expression control—in every sense THE WORLD'S BEST.

Representatives throughout the world. Catalogs and information forwarded upon request. New York prices universal with freight and expenses added to outside points.

THE KNABE
The World's Best Piano

MARQUIS de TRABADELO
4, rue Marbeuf, Paris

Frederic Ponsot Soul professor de chant diplome par Mme. Mathilde Marchesi
151 Rue de Rome

Jean Verd PIANIST
35 Rue Vineuse - Paris

CAMILLE DECREUS
47 rue de la Tour :: :: :: PARIS

JOHN HEATH PIANIST AND TEACHER
(Care Paris Office, Musical Courier)

VON STEEGE VOICE PLACEMENT
6, Chaussée de la Muette | Opera, Repertoire
Director, Compagnie Internationale Lyrique

E. BERTRAN 28, RUE COPERNIC PARIS
Specialist in Voice Placement
Opera Concert

ELISABETH LECTURE—RECITALS MACK Gesture Dramatic Action
French and English Readings
America—October to April
Address, care Musical Courier
(Especially for opera students)
Courses Begin April 1, 1914
Paris, 43, rue Michel Ange

Wager SWAYNE Pianists Prepared for Public Appearances
39 Rue de Prony (Parc Monceau) - - PARIS

GABRIEL LAPIERRE
(With Melba and Kubelik in America, Winter 1913-14)
Teacher of Singing
15 bis Boul. Jules Sandeau - - PARIS

DELMA-HEIDE
30 Rue Marbeuf (Champs-Elysées,) Paris
Maestro di Bel Canto Italiano
Prepares Singers for Opera and Concert in Italian, French, German and English

Jean de Reszke
53 Rue de la Faisanderie
Paris

L. d'AUBIGNÉ
Teacher of Singing
30, AVENUE KLEBER :: :: PARIS

LAMPERTI-VALDA
SCHOOL OF SINGING
61 Avenue Niel - - - Paris, France
All Communications to Be Addressed to
MME. GIULIA VALDA

MR. ARTHUR
ALEXANDER
THE TENOR
whose season was to commence February 20th, next, having escaped from Paris, is Available Now for his famous song recitals, playing his own accompaniments (Steinway Piano)
Management
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., New York

THE ART THEORIES OF THE MOTET CHORAL SOCIETY, OF WASHINGTON, D. C.

BY OTTO TORNEY SIMON, MUSICAL DIRECTOR.

From the standpoint of technic, program and lighting, the work and concerts of the Motet Choral Society of Washington may be considered unlike the usual presentation.

The basic tone in choral singing is generally one of sonority and breadth, necessary in the rendition of such compositions as those of Bach and Handel. In these and similar works the composer produces effects by structural and contrapuntal treatment; quantity, rather than quality of tone and fine shading, becomes an essential element.

In contradistinction to such a broad school of polyphonic art, there exists another that might be termed "the school of repressive tone," in which, by definite technic, the qualities of dominance and power are subordinated to unusual reserve and suggestion, resulting in an instrument responsive to the finer and subtler moods.

Of the solo voice the question may be asked, why sonority of tone and brilliancy of technic frequently awaken but casual interest, while the production of the mezza voce or of controlled pianissimo, especially in the upper registers, will immediately arouse the attention, and weave about the audience an unusual spell of psychological significance.

The answer would seem to be, that the latter quality exerts a peculiar stimulus on the imagination. It has the power to quicken, to evoke a mood, and to arouse in the subconscious self of the listener certain states of latent impression and memory, of reminiscence, of a keener sense of beauty, and of ideals and hopes long dormant.

OTTO TORNEY SIMON.

Such conditions in the deeper strata of man's being are awakened, not by the tone of effulgence, but by the tone in shadow.

In choral singing, this quality of the repressive tone, through the medium of correctly applied technic, has unusual interpretative possibilities. Such results, however, are not to be obtained by the director of only exceptional musical knowledge and gifts, for to these qualifications should be added the necessary skill of the master of singing. The importance of such knowledge, as an essential factor of successful and impressive choral rendition, has not been sufficiently realized or emphasized. Without it, the finest gradations of the esthetic quality and tonal color become impossible.

The principles of training the solo voice should therefore be directly applied to the choral body.

These principles of technic include breath control that will result in the evenly sustained tone of any degree of power, and also in the cantilena, or the smooth rendition of the phrase. They include the knowledge to adjust the registers of the female voice, and to develop the sombre upper tones of the male voice.

From this technic may be easily evolved the basic tone of beauty, suggestion and control.

The technic of the Motet Choral Society differs then from the usual choral technic, in special acceptance and cultivation of the repressive tone as a medium for expression. In so doing, it does not, however, exclude the broader quality of sonority and of power. The school of massive effects is frequently used.

Music is not the only art that may express profundity through reserve. The canvases of Corot and Rousseau are full of deep shadows, and the pictures of Carriere and Whistler are seen behind the veil of indistinctness or in the gloom of twilight that precedes the greater darkness. Many of the works of Turner are impressive through the delicacy of color tints, and indistinctness of haze and atmosphere, with outline of object or figure, however, almost obliterated. Under such conditions that essential spirit of art, which is its very life and essence, becomes alive and luminous, while the medium remains suggestive.

What is most impressive in art is founded not so much on the exuberances and joys of life, as on its sorrows, and these are lifted from the personal to universal significance by the intuitive vision of the creative artist. So the programs of the Motet Choral Society, though not excluding compositions of breadth and nobility, of lightness and charm, tend toward what is serious and even austere. They do not represent a casual pastime or diversion. If in any degree they have impressed in the past, it is because this

REGINA DE SALES TEACHER OF SINGING
Pupils Prepared for Opera, Oratorio, Concert
40 Rue de Villejust (Ave. du Bois de Boulogne), Paris.

THUEL BURNHAM
PIANIST
IN PARIS ENTIRE SUMMER
119 Rue de la Tour (XVI) Paris

ARNOLDE STEPHENSON SOPRANO
Management: Daniel Mayer, London A. Dandelot, Paris

MARTINUS SIEVEKING Pianist
INSTRUCTION BY A NEW METHOD.
Pupils limited. Results guaranteed.
36, rue Theophile Gautier, Paris, XVI.

WILLY von SADLER
TEACHER OF SINGING (Italian Method)
STUDIO 23, rue de l'Université - - - PARIS

THE FRANCES E. DEVERELL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS
9 rue de Chaillot, Paris, France (Champs-Elysées). Exclusive residence district. Thorough French Course. Art lectures in great galleries. Season box at Opera. Travel classes. Address Mrs. G. Deverell, 109 Cedar St., Lapeer, Michigan, or Mlle. Deville Chabrol 82 rue Vaneau, Paris.

Mme. KATE ROLLA
Former Prima-Donna, Covent Garden, London; Imperial Opera House, Moscow and St. Petersburg; San Carlo, Naples; Metropolitan, New York, etc.
PUPIL OF MARCHESI
Voice Culture, Opera or Concert, Repertoire, Diction.
Paris Studio
Pupils taken En Pension. Address, 11 rue Scrib

SHEET MUSIC IN PARIS
The only store carrying a large stock of German Russian, English and American music as well a French music.
MAX ESCHIG
TWO STORES—
13 Rue Lafitte (Near Boulevard des Italiens)
48 Rue de Rome (Near the Conservatory)

OSCAR SEAGLE
"New House," Bramber, Sussex, England, from June to September, 1914
IN AMERICA OCTOBER TO MAY, 1914-1915
Management: Loudon Charlton, Carnegie Hall, New York

lecper and universal significance of the profounder emoions has been touched.

The programs of these concerts are not alone confined to he scholarly form of the motet, with its fine interpretative ossibilities. Freer forms, with essential tone, shading and tmosphere are often given. In the compositions of greater ength the difficulty is to find inspiration throughout. We leem it more artistic to give portions of a work that are nteresting and inspirational, than the entire work for the nere sake of continuity.

The effects of lighting are also distinctive and unique. Music makes its impressions on the imagination through he sense of hearing, while vision often disturbs and interferes. The glare of high lights becomes an irritant to the nner vision of both artist and audience. During these concerts, therefore, the theatre is in darkness, while the ights of the stage are eliminated to such a degree that moion, form, physiognomy and dress become indistinct.

Where the presentation of an art is ostentatiously given ts spirit remains shyly hidden.

So the lighting effect of the Motet Choral Society creates an unusual atmosphere of preparation. In its dimness, through the medium of the repressive, veiled tone, art reaches out. Gropingly toward this the spirit of the listener advances, ever eager and receptive. The union of art and spirit is beyond the power of words or explanation, for it is a thing so deep in significance, and at the same time so exquisitely fragile, that to speak of it would be but to shatter it and destroy.

The music sung by the Motet Choral Society has included motets by Palestrina, 1528-1594 (Italian school).

Vittoria, 1540-1608.
Durante, 1684-1755.
Eccard, 1553-1611 (German).
Calvisius, 1556-1615.
Praetorius, 1571-1621.
Bach, 1685-1750.

Also, miscellaneous compositions by Handel, 1685-1759 (German).

Beethoven. 1770-1827.
Mendelssohn.
Wagner.
Liszt.
Rubinstein (Russian).
Tschaikowsky.
Glinka.
Taneyef.
Gretchaninoff.
Hamerik (Scandinavian).
Gade.
Berlioz (French).
Massenet.
Arne (English).
Elgar.
Bantock.
Coleridge-Taylor.

Mlle. De Tréville's Unique Folder Praised.

Yvonne de Tréville, the coloratura soprano, has received the following appreciation of her unique circulars from N. J. Corey, manager of the Detroit Symphony Association:

Detroit, September 10, 1914.

My Dear Mlle. de Tréville: I have just received your new circular, and it is worthy of special attention, for, like everything that you do, it is thoroughly unique and original. One would hardly have thought that there could be anything new along the line of circulars, but evidently you can originate a circular as well as an interpretation, both of them difficult enough feats. The careful thought you must have put in this has certainly resulted in something new.

It is an idea that many will doubtless hasten to copy, as it is so different from the hundreds of circulars that are contantly pouring into one's office. I am glad that your season is promising so brilliantly. For the good of the public you cannot be too busy.

With best wishes, I am,

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) N. J. Corey.

Esperanza Garrigue Returning.

Esperanza Garrigue, the New York vocal teacher, is due to arrive in New York on September 29 on the steamship Noordam.

Cadman's Plans for the Fall and Winter.

Charles Wakefield Cadman, composer, has recently changed his residence to Fort Collins, Col., near Denver, where he has taken a bungalow on the outskirts of the little city and within a superb view of the first range of the Rockies. In this retreat he expects to start the composition of a one act opera, a piano sonata and a piano quintet, besides several works in smaller form, this season.

Cadman will make a short concert tour this year on account of his desire to do creative work, and his concertizing with the Indian vocalist, Tsianina Redfeather, who assists him in his "Indian Music Talk," will be confined to two Mid-Western and Northwestern trips and to a spring tour on the Pacific Coast. He is now under the management of John C. Wilcox, of Denver, with L. E. Behymer looking after the Far Western engagements.

Princes Tsianina will appear with Cadman three times at the State Teachers' Association convention held at Kalamazoo, Mich. Also at Lawrence Conservatory in Appleton, Wis., and other Wisconsin cities, with Muskegon, Mich., and Grand Rapids taken on the same trip. Engagements are pending on this northwestern trip in Omaha, Lincoln and Kansas City. Mr. Behymer reports a protracted spring season for Mr. Cadman on the Pacific Coast. He and Tsianina Redfeather are booked with the Los Angeles Philharmonic Course and will fill engagements as far north as Seattle. They appeared with success in Portland, Ore., last spring, and a return date is expected in that city.

Cadman's trio in D major for violin, cello and piano is now issued by his publisher, White-Smith Music Company, Boston, Mass., and is already booked on the programs of prominent trio organizations. This work was heard with eminent success in New York at the Mozart Society, the Manuscript Society (played by Paulo Gruppe, Davinoff and the composer), and in Boston at the Harvard Musical Society, in Pittsburgh, Minneapolis, and the Pacific Coast cities last season. According to the critics on the dailies it has placed Mr. Cadman as a serious composer before the public, which had known him previously only as a composer of songs and ballads.

VIDA
LLEWELLYN
PIANIST
In America 1914-1915

. . . . "The pianist has at her command a sonorous and refined tone and a very remarkable technic."
—Berliner Borsen Courier.

New York Recital, November 14th
Aeolian Hall

CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue New York City

Mme. von Turk-Rohn at Asbury Park.

Due to her success in an early August appearance at the Arcade in Asbury Park, N. J., the Viennese soprano, Baroness Olga von Turk-Rohn, was recalled on September 5, 6 and 7 to fill three return engagements at that resort. Her success upon these last three occasions, when she appeared with the Arcade orchestra, was even greater than on the instance of her first appearance with the same organization.

Following are two extracts from the shore papers, in which praise for her brilliant performance is strongly voiced:

Another delightful concert, the last of the special week-end events at the Arcade, was given last night before a large and appreciative audience. It was one of the finest concerts that has been given on the boardwalk this summer.

The soloist last night was Baroness Olga von Turk-Rohn. It was a return engagement of the baroness and she received a cordial meeting. She was in fine voice and her singing added in no little measure to the pleasure of the concert. Her main numbers were the aria from "Faust" and Bartlett's well known composition, "Dream."—Shore Press, September 6, 1914.

Two large and appreciative audiences attended the final concerts at the Arcade yesterday afternoon and last night. The programs were artistic ones, the orchestra being at its best, especially in the farewell program; Baroness Olga von Turk-Rohn's singing being enthusiastically received.

Baroness Olga von Turk-Rohn has aimed to avoid the conventional, as shown by her solo work last night. In this direction her efforts were fully appreciated. She showed ripened dramatic powers and sang with her usual fervor and insight.—Morning Press, Asbury Park, September 8, 1914. (Advertisement.)

PIANOS IN PARIS
Weber & Steck Pianos. Pianolas. Pianola-Piano
We invite comparison with any and all French makes both as regards quality and price.
Renting for Music Students a Specialty
THE AEOLIAN CO., 32, AVENUE DE L'OPERA

Christine Miller at Clarksburg.

Christine Miller's recital in Clarksburgh, W. Va., last winter was a notable event. The contralto, who was in splendid voice and spirits, was cordially received, as the following verifies:

A thoroughly delightful and edifying musical evening was spent by an appreciative and sympathetic audience of local music lovers Tuesday evening in the First Baptist Church, where Christine Miller, the celebrated contralto of Pittsburgh, gave another of her always warmly welcomed recitals. Miss Miller never appeared before a local audience to better advantage, as she was in fine voice and spirits. In fact, she fairly brimmed over with enthusiasm, and it infected everyone of her hearers to such an extent as to make the affair notable in the history of local musical events. Her efforts were so fully enjoyed and her reception so cordial that she gracefully responded with an unusually large number of encores. Miss Miller's voice is one of remarkable quality and she has a splendid accuracy of pitch and sustaining power. Her voice is unique in that it is not only a rich colorful contralto, but is also beautiful in a soft soprano range. Nothing is to be desired in her enunciation and her expression, which, indeed, are striking features of her artistic ability. Then she is a beautiful woman and has a charming presence, frank and devoid of snobbishness, which appeals to all at once.—Clarksburg (W. Va.), Daily Telegram, February 18, 1914.

(Advertisement.)

The Ortmanns Open a Studio.

Carolyn Ortmann, the soprano, and Frederick William Ortmann, violinist and member of the New York Philharmonic Society, announce that they will open a studio for the study of voice and violin at 578 Madison avenue, New York. Trial of the voice should be made by mail or telephone (Plaza 6737) for appointment. Both these artists are well known in their respective lines of endeavor, and they should meet with every success in their new field of work.

Mme. Morrisey Is in Virginia.

Marie Morrisey will give three concerts in Virginia this week. The contralto, who has been busy all summer with her church work and with a series of recitals at New Jersey summer resorts, will give a recital in Aeolian Hall, New York, Monday evening, November 9.

HINSHAW
Metropolitan Opera
BARITONE
Berlin Wagner Ring Festival,
June 23rd to Aug. 21st
American Tour
DECEMBER TO JUNE
Management R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway, N. Y.

Mme. OLIVE FREMSTAD
Exclusive Management FOSTER & DAVID, 500 Fifth Avenue, New York
NOW IN AMERICA—DATES BOOKING SEASON 1914-1915
STEINWAY PIANO USED

SOUSA AND HIS BAND

"HEARD THE WORLD AROUND"

Office: 1 West 34th Street

Telephone 6128 Greeley

Alexander BLOCH

CONCERT VIOLINIST

Management, Foster & David, 500 Fifth Avenue, - New York

KIDD KEY CONSERVATORY SHERMAN TEXAS

Hens Richard hes been mede Director in the Conservatory end is assisted by an able corps of teeohers. Bendetson Netzorg hes elso been edded to the Conservetory feculty. For cetelog eddress

MRS. L. A. KIDD KEY

INEZ BARBOUR SOPRANO

Concert-Recital-Oratorio

Management: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th St., New York

FLORENCE AUSTIN

America's Violinist

Season 1914-1915 Now Booking

Address:

THOMAS McGRATH, 133 East 34th St., New York

Phone Murray Hill, 2239

JANE CATHERWOOD SOPRANO and TEACHER

Fowler Apartments, 1110 W. Washington Street Phone 20584

Los Angeles, Cal.

MARIE KAISER

SOPRANO

Menegement: WALTER ANDERSON, 171 West 57th St., New York

MARGARET SHIRLEY

Soprano

Available for Concerts: Recitals, Musicales

IRISH BALLADS A SPECIALTY

Exclusive Manegement: ANNIE FRIEDBERG, Metropoliten Opera House Bldg., New York

FRANCES ALDA SOPRANO OF THE METROPOLITAN OPERA CO.

Assisted by Gutia Cassini, Cellist, and Frank La Forge, Pianist

SEASON 1914-15 NOW BOOKING

clusive Menegement for Concerts: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York City

Baldwin Piano Used

Dramatic Mezzo Soprano

SARA HEINEMAN

Concerts and Recitals also Southern Folk Songs in Costume

In Europe During Summer

Mail to Musical Courier - - - 437 Fifth Avenue

Baroness Evans

Von KLENNER

America's Representative of the

GREAT GARCIA VOCAL METHOD

Grand Prix—Paris Exposition, 1900. Summer School—Point Chautauqua, Chautauqua Lake. N. Y. June 25th to Aug. 27th, 1914.

Tradition Languages Repertoire Diction Special Courses for Teachers. Address, New York Studio, 952 Eighth Avenue

THE PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY

of NEW YORK

1914 Seventy-Third Season 1915

JOSEF STRANSKY, Conductor

SUBSCRIPTION SERIES:

New York, Brooklyn, Baltimore and Washington.

TOURS:

New England, New York State, Canada, Middle West, South

Prospectus on application to

FELIX F. LEIFELS, Manager Carnegie Hall, NEW YORK

Mme. Von Klenner Resumes Teaching.

Baroness Evans von Klenner announces the opening of her New York studios, 952 Eighth avenue, on Tuesday, September 15.

Since the closing of her summer school at Point Chautauqua this prominent singing teacher has been spending some time in Pittsburgh, Boston, Erie and other cities, hearing voices, with the result that she opens her season with the largest number of pupils enrolled ever received at this time of the year. Several of her advanced pupils who went abroad last spring for the purpose of singing in Berlin, Paris and Vienna, have returned, and will continue their studies with Baroness von Klenner until the prospect for fulfilling their foreign engagements are more favorable. Among her prominent operatic pupils are Florence Mulford, Kathleen Howard, Dora de Fillippe, Katharine Noack Fiqué, Eleanor Creden, Camilla Elkjuer, Lucille

BARONESS EVANS VON KLENNER,
Driving her automobile at her summer home, Point Chautauqua, N. Y., and some of the pupils in her school of opera.

Brodsky, Carry Scheepens, and others, while in oratorio and church choir positions, and as teachers, their names are innumerable.

Rosalia Chalia Herrera in Concert.

An interesting vocal concert was given at Lexington Opera House, New York City, on Tuesday evening, September 15, before a good sized and enthusiastic audience. On this occasion the Spanish soprano, Rosalia Chalia Herrera, made her first appearance in concert in New York and scored an instantaneous success. She sang Massenet's "Pensée d'Automne," an aria from "Carmen" and "Le Campane," by Doda. Mme. Herrera was in excellent voice and again proved to be an artist of fine attainments. After her rendition of the "Carmen" aria she sang as encore numbers two distinctive Spanish songs, receiving much merited applause and many beautiful flowers.

The other participants were Agnes Hanick, soprano, the possessor of a powerful voice, and who was well received, and Dorothea Edwards, who revealed a full, rich contralto voice, displayed to excellent advantage in Tosti's "Serenata di Praga." She was the recipient of much applause and responded to an insistent demand for an encore.

The male singers were: Umberto Sacchetti, tenor, whose success with Tetrazzini, Mary Garden and Frieda Hempel is well known; Giuseppe Opezzo, tenor, an excellent artist; D. de Silva, baritone, who pleased in the Prologue from "Pagliacci," and Ignacio Del Castillo, the accompanist.

The concert was under the management of the Metropolitan Musical Bureau.

Charles de Harrack's Tour.

Charles de Harrack, the royal court pianist, has arranged with Howard Pew for an American concert tour. Mr. Pew managed Arthur Nikisch and the London Symphony Orchestra on their tour through this country in the spring of 1912. Mr. de Harrack has made several American tours, playing several times in New York, Boston and through the East and the Middle West. In Europe and the Orient De Harrack has made numerous concert tours, establishing there a reputation as one of the leading pianists.

On his forthcoming tournee Mr. de Harrack will have the assistance, in numerous recitals, of Howard U. Maxwell, baritone, familiar to the concert public.

Owing to extensive bookings, Mr. de Harrack opens his American campaign September 29 in Lorain, Ohio. The Middle Western territory will be managed by Alfred F. Wands, of Cleveland, who will have personal charge.

Edmund Burke Still in Paris.

Edmund Burke, the Irish baritone, will sail for America so as to be here in ample time for his concert season under the management of Loudon Charlton. Mr. Burke is still in Paris, though he has made one trip to London since the outbreak of the war. His first New York appearance will be a song recital in Aeolian Hall, Sunday evening, November 1.

MARGARET HARRISON SOPRANO

68 West 56th Street New York

DONALD CHALMERS BASSO

Address for the Summer

29 Ocean Pathway, Ocean Grove, N. J.

RECITALS :: ORATORIO :: OPERA

EVAN WILLIAMS

TENOR

Akron - - Ohio

Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU

Horatio Connell

BASS BARITONE

Management HAENSEL & JONES, AEOLIAN HALL, NEW YORK

PHILIP SPOONER TENOR

205 West 57th St., New York City

'Phone, 6510 Columbus

GENEVIEVE FINLAY-STEWART

DRAMATIC CONTRALTO

HAENSEL & JONES Aeolian Hall, New York

THOMAS FARMER Baritone

Engaged for St. Paul by Handel Society, London, May 12th

Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON, 437 Fifth Avenue New York

PAUL DUFAULT

TENOR

Address, 339 West 23rd Street Tel. 7731 Chelsea

CAROLL BADHAM PREYER

TEACHER OF SINGING—Italian Method (Lamperti diploma)

Studio: 27 West 67th Street Tel. Columbus 1123

George CARRÉ

TENOR

15 East 10th St. Tel. 2927 Stuyvesant New York

Christine MILLER Contralto

Personal address: 1003 Heberton Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Management: HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York

REINALD WERRENRATH

BARYTONE

Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU

1 West 34th Street, - - New York

EDGAR STILLMAN-KELLEY

STEINWAY HALL, NEW YORK, N. Y.

REBECCA DAVIDSON PIANISTE

Management: WALTER ANDERSON

171 West 57th Street New York

Joseph Baernstein Regneas

TEACHER OF SINGING

Telephone Schuyler 3786 Studio, 133 W. 80th St., New York

From the first rudiments of tone placing t artistic finishing for Concert, Oratorio and Opera

BARONESS Olga von Türk-Rohn

"Europe's Famous Song Bird"

Season 1914-15 Now Booking

Management

Metropolitan Musical Bureau, New Brunswick, N. J.

CECIL FANNING Bariton

H. B. TURPIN Accompanis

Having returned from a year of concert givin in Germany, Italy and England, are

NOW AVAILABLE FOR RECITALS IN AMERICA

Address: H. B. TURPIN, Dayton, Ohio

MARIE SUNDELIUS Soprano
Exclusive Management
GERTRUDE F. COWEN. 1425 Broadway, New York

MME. GRACE HALL RIHELDAFFER
SOPRANO
624 9th AVE., MUNHALL, PITTSBURGH, PA.

Florence Hinkle
....SOPRANO....
Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau. 1 West 34th St., New York

BYFORD RYAN
Three Years Leading Tenor, Opera Comique, Berlin
Vocal Studio: 28 West 63rd Street - - New York

Lionel Robsarte
Opera Tenor
Instructor to the Profession. Hotel Woodward, N. Y.

ADELAIDE GESCHEIDT
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Instructor of the Miller Vocal Art Science and The Art of Singing
817 Carnegie Hall Tel. 1350 Columbus

JOHN THOMPSON AMERICAN PIANIST
IN AMERICA SEASON 1914-1915
Management: ROBERT P. STRINE, Estey Hall, Philadelphia

Miss LEGINSKA
Hotel Grenoble, Seventh Ave. and 56th St., New York. Tel. 909 Columbus
"One of the most remarkable women pianists now before the public."—N. Y. Tribune, April 22, 1914.

HELEN BIXBY WETZEL
Coloratura Soprano
Now appearing with several Italian Grand Opera Companies.
MILAN, ITALY

GERMAINE SCHNITZER
THE FAMOUS AUSTRIAN PIANIST
In America Season 1914-1915
Direction: R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, New York City
BALDWIN PIANO

LESLEY MARTIN, Bel Canto
STUDIO: 1425 Broadway, New York
SINGERS — Susanne Baker Watson, Cora Cross, Pauline Fredericks, Andrew Mack, Nellie Hart, Marion Stanley, Estelle Ward, Gertrude Hutcheson, George Bemus, George Gillet, John Hendricks, Dr. Eugene Walton Marshall, Fiske O'Hara, Horace Wright, Mabel Wilbur, John H. Stubbs, Edward Foley, Albert Wallerstedt, Umberto Sacchetti and many other singers now before the public in opera and church work.

Season 1914-15
LOUIS SIEGEL
Violin Virtuoso
FIRST AMERICAN TOUR
Management: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York

1914-15 SEASON 1914-15
GRACE POTTER
PIANIST
MARIE HERTENSTEIN
PIANIST
FRANCIS MACMILLEN
VIOLINIST
Exclusive Management S. E. MACMILLEN, 618 Candler Bldg., 220 West 42nd St., New York. Phone Bryant 8520

Oscar Saenger
TEACHER OF SINGING
In the rudiments of tone placing to artistic finishing concert, oratorio, recital and opera. Teacher of famous Opera and Concert singers, among whom are:
Marie Rappold, soprano; Miss Florence Hinkle, soprano; Miss Mabel Watson, soprano; Miss Helen Warrum, soprano; Mme. Bernice de Pasquali, soprano; Mr. Rudolf Berger, tenor; Mr. Heinrich Hensel, tenor; Mr. Orville Harold, tenor; Mr. Paul Althouse, tenor; Mr. John Young, tenor; Miss Eleanor Robeson, contralto; Miss Mildred Potter, contralto; Miss Kathleen Howard, contralto; Mme. Josephine Jacoby, contralto; Miss Sibyl Conklin, contralto; Mr. Henri Scott, basso; Mr. Allen Hinckley, basso; Mr. Louis Kreidler, baritone; Mr. Albert Wiederhold, bass-baritone; Mr. Leon Rains.
687 LENOX STUDIO: 6 EAST 81st St., NEW YORK
Resume Teaching October 1st.

Henri Scott to Be Heard in Concert.

In view of the fact that the Chicago Grand Opera Company has, owing to the war in Europe, abandoned its season in Chicago and Philadelphia, Henri Scott, who has been the leading basso of this company for the past three years, and who was reengaged for this season, will be heard extensively in concert and recitals. He is already widely known as an admirable concert singer, being as thoroughly at home in oratorio and recitals as he is on the operatice stage, which is not the case with the majority of opera singers. During the spring Mr. Scott appeared with great success at the Cincinnati May Music Festival, at Ann Arbor, Evanston, Oberlin, Buffalo, etc.

HENRI SCOTT AS LEPORELLO IN "DON GIOVANNI."

Prominent among the roles Mr. Scott sang with the Chicago Opera Company last season was that of Leporello in "Don Giovanni," one of the most difficult parts in all the bass repertoire. Titta Ruffo sang the title role.

De Rigaud Studio Notes.

On September 28, Clara de Rigaud, the New York vocal teacher, will reopen her studios at 2647 Broadway, with a large class that will include almost all of last year's pupils. Among the newcomers at this studio are Miss Bridgeford, a brilliant coloratura soprano, and Miss Galetti, a contralto of merit. The former studied for two years in Dresden, Germany. Other new pupils will include Marie Cavany, Charlotte Stanton Wall and her manager-husband, Mr. Link. The last two, after successful concert tours, have asked Mme. de Rigaud to book daily lessons for them in October and November, after which they will leave to fill concert engagements. Mme. de Rigaud who had intended to spend the month of September in Berlin, and perhaps the entire season, has, of course, abandoned this plan, for which those who will study with her this year are profoundly thankful.

Laurette Duval, one of Mme. de Rigaud's artist-pupils, who went to Paris in July to fill her concert and opera engagements there, has, by the aid of some of Mme. de Rigaud's friends in Paris, been enabled to return in safety to her home in Providence, R. I.

Another pupil who was to have sung at the Mainz Opera is Annette Breir, who has found shelter with friends of her teacher in Berlin, and who will remain there until conditions have in part, at least, resumed their normal trend.

A New Sibelius Composition.

Breitkopf & Härtel have just issued a new "Valse Triste" by Jean Sibelius, and are using a very attractive circular advertising it in the many forms in which it is published. It is issued in thirteen various combinations of instruments as well as for piano solo. This circular also contains the well known silhouette of Maud Powell, and states that "It was Maud Powell's good fortune to hear, recently, the composer's own interpretation, which she has reproduced as nearly as possible in her latest Victor talking machine record. Hear this record and be convinced of the weird emotional grip of the music."

IN the choice of a piano, as in the building of a home, the object sought is the ideal. Individual ideas differ as to what is ideal in a home, but the judgment of music lovers everywhere proclaims the

STEINWAY

as the ideal piano —because the Steinway is wonderfully perfect in tone, mechanically correct in every detail, and artistically beautiful.

For your ideal home — a Steinway Piano.

STEINWAY & SONS
Steinway Hall
107-109 East 14th St., New York
SUBWAY EXPRESS STATION AT THE DOOR

FOUNDED JANUARY, 1880

MUSICAL COURIER
A WEEKLY JOURNAL
DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND ALLIED ARTS

ESTABLISHED
BY
MARC A. BLUMENBERG

PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY
BY THE

GRAND PRIX
PARIS EXPOSITION
1900

MUSICAL COURIER COMPANY
(Incorporated under the laws of the State of New York)
LOUIS BLUMENBERG, President
ALVIN L. SCHMOEGER, Sec. and Treas.
437 Fifth Ave., S. E. Cor. 39th St. - - - New York
Cable address: Pegujar, New York
Telephone to all Departments 4292, 4293, 4294, 7357 Murray Hill
LEONARD LIEBLING - - - - - EDITOR
H. I. BENNETT - - - - MANAGING EDITOR

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1914.

No. 1800

OFFICES AND REPRESENTATIVES

MIDDLE WEST DEPARTMENT—
Chicago Offices, 615 to 625 Orchestra Building,
Rene Devries, General Representative, in charge.

UNITED STATES AND CANADA

BOSTON—
Blanche Freedman, 108 Hemenway St., Suite 10. 'Phone: B. B. 5554.
SAN FRANCISCO—
Alfred Metzger, Rooms 1009-1010, Kohler & Chase Building, 26 O'Farrell Street.
PHILADELPHIA, PA—
Harold Parry Quicksall, 5719 Windsor Place.
PITTSBURGH, PA.—
Hollis Edison Davenny, 5012 Friendship Ave., E. E.
ST. LOUIS, MO.—
Ernest R. Kroeger, Musical Art Building, St. Louis, Mo.
ST. PAUL, MINN.—
Johnson McClure Bellows, Musical Editor of St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press.
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Miss Ruth Anderson, 49 So. Eighth St.
LOUISVILLE, KY.—Katherine Whipple-Dobbs, 425 Fourth Avenue.
COLUMBUS, OHIO—Miss Emily Church Benham, 1299 Bryden Road.
BUFFALO, N. Y.—Cora Julia Taylor, 819 Richmond Avenue.
NEW ORLEANS—Harry B. Loeb, Box 79.
LOS ANGELES—Mrs. Jane Catherwood, 1110 W. Washington St.
KANSAS CITY—Geneve Lichtenwalter, 600 Studio Bldg.
CINCINNATI—
Mrs. Jessie P. Tyree, 9 The Westmoreland, Mason St., Mt. Auburn.
OMAHA—Jean P. Duffield, 205 Boyds Theatre.
LINCOLN, NEB.—Mrs. E. S. Luce, 1614 O St.
PROVIDENCE, R. I.—William Place, Jr., Jackson Bldg.
DES MOINES—Mrs. Caroline Young Smith, 1082 21st Street.
DENVER—Mrs. Dolores Reedy-Maxwell, 1516 Milwaukee St.
PORTLAND, ORE.—John R. Oatman, 445 Sherlock Bldg.
WICHITA, KANS.—Ralph Brokaw, 109 East 3d St.
VICTORIA, B. C.—Miss May Hamilton, 524 Michigan St.

EUROPEAN

BERLIN, W.—
Arthur M. Abell, Jenaer St. 21.
Cable Address: Abell, Wilmersdorf, Berlin.

PARIS—
H. O Osgood, 43 Boulevard Beausejour.

LONDON—
H. O. Osgood, Swiss Cottage, 16 Adamson Road, N. W. in charge. Telephone: 5379 Hampstead "In Charge."

DRESDEN—
Mrs. E. Potter-Frissell, Eisenstuckatrasse 16.

MOSCOW, RUSSIA—
Ellen von Tideböhl, Arbatte, 34 Deneschny.

ROME, ITALY—
Mrs. Dolly Pattison, 9 Piazza di Spagna.

STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN—
Louisa Upling, Roslagsgatan 19.

LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND—
W. J. Bowden, 22 Fern Grove.

For the names and addresses of correspondents and representatives not in this list, apply to main office.

SUBSCRIPTIONS: (In Advance)

United States	$5.00	Canada	$6.00
Great Britain	£1 8s.	Austria	30 kr.
France	31.25 fr.	Italy	31.25 fr.
Germany	25 m.	Russia	12 r.

Single Copies, Fifteen Cents, at newsstands.
Back Numbers, Twenty-five Cents.

Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class Matter.

THE MUSICAL COURIER is for sale on the principal newsstands in the United States and in the leading music houses, hotels and kiosques in Belgium, England, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Switzerland and Egypt.

American News Company, New York, General Distributing Agents.
Western News Company, Chicago, Western Distributing Agents.
New England News Company, Eastern Distributing Agents.

ADVERTISING RATES:

On reading page, per inch, per year	$400.00	Front pages, per issue	$500.00
On advertising page, per inch, per year	200.00	Line (agate) rate on reading page, per issue	1.00
Column rate, per issue	150.00	Line (agate) rate on advertising page, per issue	.50
Full pages, per issue	400.00

THE MUSICAL COURIER EXTRA
Published every Saturday by Musical Courier Co.
Devoted to the interests of the Piano Trade.

MONDAY PERFORMANCES.

Owing to the large papers which The Musical Courier prints during the regular musical season, it has been found necessary to start the paper to press on Monday evening, so as to insure its going into the mails on Tuesday and its delivery to the subscribers on Wednesday, our day of publication. Reports of Monday performances in New York will, therefore, have to be curtailed to the briefest possible limit in the Musical Courier issue of the same week.

Titta Ruffo sends word that he will be in America in time to fill the concert dates made for him this season.

Louis Blumenberg, president of the Musical Courier Company, arrived in New York from Europe September 18 aboard the Lusitania.

Frank Angold, Vienna correspondent of the Musical Courier, is an Englishman, and has enlisted in the army of his country. He now is on the firing line in France.

Leonard Borwick's manager said recently: "From the way Borwick dates are being demanded in America, I should unhesitatingly class him among the 'six best sellers.'"

Late reports from Chicago tell of a plan to arrange for a season of the Century Opera (New York) at the Auditorium after the close of the run in the metropolis. Nothing definite had been settled upon, however, at latest accounts.

Max Reinhardt's spectacle drama, "The Miracle," will not be seen in New York this winter. A monster production had been planned to take place at Madison Square Garden, financed by Otto H. Kahn and other well known financiers.

An announcement which will be hailed with joy by the American musical fraternity is to the effect that Rafael Joseffy has recovered from his recent severe illness and will resume his piano classes a little later in the autumn at his old studio in Steinway Hall.

Today, September 23, the beginning of the Worcester, Mass., fifty-seventh annual festival, marks the official opening of the Eastern American musical season of 1914-1915. Mendelssohn's "Elijah" and Wolf-Ferrari's "La Vita Nuova" are the big choral works slated for performance at Worcester this week. A special representative of the Musical Courier will review all the concerts in the issue of September 30.

David Bispham plans to appear in a drama next December called "Benjamin Franklin," portraying characteristics of that great American and some eventful episodes in his life. Mr. Bispham's histrionic ability was one of the distinguishing features of his work as an opera singer, and it is to be expected that he will impart to this non-singing role the same vital force and cultured mastery with which he was wont to assume the Wagnerian characters when he served for so many years as a member of the Metropolitan Opera ensemble.

Another convert to a great truth preached for many years by the Musical Courier is exemplified in the person of Milton Aborn, co-director of the Century Opera, who says in a New York Review interview: "Grand opera cannot support itself—it is not a paying business and never will be." Subsidies, subscription lists, guarantee funds and box leases are merely first aids to grand opera. In the long run the venture always perishes when left to shift for itself. The reasons for this state of affairs are social, musical, economical. There always will be found visionaries, however, who think that they can capture profitable public support for a grand opera venture without a guaranteed income of some sort. Let them keep on trying. It stimulates the musical business and amuses the nations.

Jacques Thibaud confirms his recent message to Loudon Charlton, to the effect that he will make his American tour in spite of the war, even though he is at present doing military duty. He explains that it is purely voluntary, as he is exempt, but he asked for a special assignment on the Paris fortifications, and there he has been engaged for some weeks. Thibaud's American tour begins in December, and he will remain in this country all winter.

A Pittsburgh Post interviewer asked John Philip Sousa whether the war would not inspire some European musicians to great compositions. "War," answered the composer-bandmaster, "never inspired great music. The destruction of man by man is not an inspiring thing. To me this element of destructive emotion in humanity seems like a mistaken experiment of nature. The inspiring things are the natural, the inevitable things that are as nature intended them to be."

Dr. Czernowisz, of Sydney, N. S. W., who passed through New York last week on his way home via San Francisco, reported that Willy Burmester, the violinist, was expected at his Finnish home, where the doctor visited in that vicinity a few weeks ago. Mr. Burmester's daughters were seen and they reported that their father had secured passage for America for the whole family. The daughters are to complete their education in America at a Connecticut school which has been selected.

From Boston comes authoritative news that Dr. Karl Muck will sail from Europe for America on September 26. The Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin its Boston season October 16 and 17. This is as planned, and there will be very few missing members of the organization. No dates are to be changed, except the Western trip, which has been canceled. The New York concerts will take place at Carnegie Hall, November 5 and 7, December 3 and 5, January 7 and 9, February 18 and 20, and March 18 and 20.

Andreas Dippel, returned from Europe, declares that he will give his projected New York season of light opera. To the steamship interviewer Mr. Dippel said: "My scenery, costumes and artists are all in Europe; nevertheless I will have something ready for the public in October. A delay of a few weeks probably will be necessary, but there will be a season of light opera even if the artists do not arrive. I can get enough singers in New York both for principal parts and for the chorus if necessary, as every one who can possibly get away from Europe is coming to America."

Great caution should be exercised in regard to accepting the daily newspaper reports concerning the musical artists "slain" in battle abroad. The Musical Courier is in closer touch with sources of musical information than any other paper in the world, and asserts positively that up to the present moment no official report of the killing of any well known musician has been received from the seat of war. At a time like this the merest rumors are rushed into print as facts by irresponsible newsmongers and unscrupulous penny-a-liners, especially when such cable killings are associated with well known names. It is well, therefore, to disbelieve the reported death of Fritz Kreisler, especially as it has not taken place. The same newspapers which chronicled his passing, publish pathetic tales about the death of the German Crown Prince and a few editions later coolly announce that he was leading a wing of the Teutonic army which was holding its own against the Allies.

DR. MUCK'S DRESDEN OFFER.

From our Boston office comes an account of the negotiations between Dr. Karl Muck and Count Seebach, Intendant of the Court Opera House in Dresden, as made public recently in the columns of the Boston Transcript.

According to this story Dr. Muck upon his arrival in Europe last spring was persistently importuned by the Dresden management, who offered him, in return for his services, an entirely free hand in the control of the Opera, in addition to a very large salary. To this salary several rich Dresdeners promised to add an annual contribution which, according to report, would have brought Dr. Muck's remuneration up to $20,000 a year.

To all this Dr. Muck made reply that he was under contract with the Boston Symphony Orchestra for three seasons more, that he was perfectly satisfied with conditions surrounding his work in America and intended to abide by his contract absolutely. Whereupon the promise immediately was made to keep the offer open three years if Dr. Muck would promise then to accept the post. He declined to bind himself in that way, although he admitted that the opportunity at Dresden does appeal to him strongly.

Finally, however, after many conferences Dr. Muck consented to prepare and conduct a few "special performances" of the "Ring" cycle and other Wagner operas at Dresden this September and in May and June of next year. Needless to say, both sets of performances now have been abandoned, and the probabilities are that for some years to come neither the Saxon Government nor the citizens of Dresden will be able to expend large sums for the upbuilding of their Opera under Dr. Muck.

NEW DETROIT MANAGEMENT.

The growth of the field of music in the Middle West is indicated by the announcement of the extension of endeavors in Detroit, where James E. Devoe has been particularly active in recent years. Mr. Devoe announces that he has formed a partnership with William K. Kelsey, a well known newspaper writer and critic of that city.

The firm will carry on the Philharmonic Course which was established in Detroit by Mr. Devoe three years ago, and will endeavor to open similar courses throughout the Middle West territory, especially in towns which seem to have possibilities but lack the individual effort to make them possible, and in addition will conduct a booking department for the benefit of a few of the best artists of Detroit and vicinity. This latter venture will have the attention of Mr. Devoe, who has a wide acquaintance in the entire territory and whose efforts in the past have earned for him the respect and confidence necessary for this work.

The firm will be known as the Devoe-Kelsey Management. The artists secured for the Detroit Philharmonic Course and the dates upon which they will appear are as follows:

October 23—Emmy Destinn, soprano.
Dinh Gilly, baritone.
November 17—Louise Homer, contralto.
November 30—Alma Gluck, soprano.
Efrem Zimbalist, violinist.
January 5—Flonzaley Quartet.
January 29—Riccardo Martin, tenor.
Rudolph Ganz, pianist.
February 9—Julia Culp, soprano.
March 16—Josef Lhevinne, pianist.
April 6—Mme. Schumann-Heink, contralto.

In addition to these concerts, the appearances of Anna Pavlowa and the Russian Ballet in Detroit, Saginaw, Kalamazoo, Ann Arbor and Toledo, Ohio, will be under the Devoe-Kelsey management.

The artists who will be booked by this firm are Louise Allen Lyon, soprano; Harriet Story Maclane, contralto; Charles R. Hargreaves, tenor; Archibald C. Jackson, baritone; William Grafing King, violinist; Dorothy Caroline Conger, classical dancer; Detroit Symphony String Quartet, including William Grafing King, first violin; Pasquale Briglia, second violin; James Cassie, viola, and Luigi Motto, cello.

HONOR WHERE HONOR IS DUE.

Referring to a report that Albert Reiss, the Metropolitan tenor, is a prisoner of war at a concentration camp in France, the Brooklyn Eagle says editorially:

> Fortunately, Reiss is only a prisoner, and we have a firm faith that no harm will come to him unless he gets again on the firing line. He has only to sing "Johannisberg, Johannisberg!" with the fervor which he imparts to it as David in "Die Meistersinger" to melt the heart of the sternest jailer and convince him that he is an artist who should be spared to music and released from the horrors of war. Although only a second tenor, the Metropolitan would find it hard to get along without Reiss. It could better spare bigger men.

To start with, Reiss has not been on the firing line, but was at his villa near Paris when the war broke out, and was held by the French authorities as a German reservist. Furthermore, the Brooklyn Eagle, even though it is obviously in a facetious mood, might well treat the whole subject from a standpoint more in keeping with the tragedy of the war proceedings abroad. Every European operatic artist who now is fighting for his country does so because the law of his land asks him to, but also, it is to be believed, because he loves his country. It is not fair for American newspapers to imply, as many of them do, that opera singers lack patriotism and are at the front only because by a mischance they happened to be abroad when hostilities commenced. It should be considered, in all the sentimental writing indulged in about the musical personages who are soldiers at present, that the nations to which they belong hardly are concerned very much at this moment with the question as to whether or not the Metropolitan, or Chicago, or Boston Operas lack a second tenor, a third basso, a conductor, or even a managing director. Indeed it is fair to assume that neither Kaiser Wilhelm, King George, Czar Nicholas, or President Poincaré and their cabinets, care a jot whether America's opera houses are open or closed this winter.

A soldier is a soldier in the eyes of his country at war, whether his calling is that of a bootblack or an operatic basso, a tenor or a tinsmith, a carpet layer or a violinist. No one seems to bemoan the fate of the great scientists, successful lawyers, gifted poets and famous architects and other professionals who are at the front. Why, then, all this maudlin sympathy for opera singers and other musicians? The MUSICAL COURIER feels that it knows the true temper of those musical artists now in the armies abroad well enough to suggest that they would be the first ones to resent warmly the kind of patronizing in which many of our esteemed American journals are indulging.

Those of our musical friends bearing arms just now will consider it an honor to have done so if they are spared, and not one of them will wish that his music had melted a hard hearted jailer into releasing him so that he could go to America for profit while his brother musicians fought and bled and died for their native land.

SYMPHONIC SAN ANTONIO.

San Antonio, Tex., is again to have a symphony orchestra. About twelve years ago, Carl Hahn organized the San Antonio Symphony Orchestra, and for eight years was its conductor. Upon his then being called to New York, the orchestra was disbanded. Arthur Claasen, formerly director of the New York Liederkranz and of the Brooklyn Arion Singing Society, who now is residing in San Antonio, has reorganized the orchestra and will be the conductor.

WAR AND ADVERTISING.

At a recent meeting of the Six-Point League, New York, an organization which represents 623 leading newspapers, the effect of the European war on newspaper advertising was freely discussed and members present testified as to their individual experiences. Six-Point League members do business with advertisers in a large variety of lines, and it is of interest to record that the feeling was decidedly optimistic and the general tone encouraging. It was shown that steamship and travel advertising comprise the bulk of business that has been definitely cancelled and that advertisers not intimately affected by lack of ocean transportation are going ahead with their fall campaigns. The fact that crops are good and the market ready for them; that the freight rate is settled; that the new currency law is soon to be in operation, and that new export markets are to be open for our trade, means large wealth for the producers of this country and good business for those who seek it in a reasonable manner.

We advise those musicians who think that the foregoing remarks do not stand in close relation to their own line of endeavor, to wake up, come into the year 1914, and get into touch with things as they are and will be. The MUSICAL COURIER clientele of advertisers evidently agrees with the views of the Six-Point delegates, for war conditions abroad have not resulted in any appreciable lessening of desire for publicity here, represented by bids for the musical patronage which our clients have been assured by us will be forthcoming this winter. More than ever it is necessary to keep on the firing line in the way of advertising, as the army that threatens to invade American concert halls for the next seven months is little less than enormous.

CHORAL ART IN WASHINGTON.

In a talk had with Otto Torney Simon, the Washington conductor and pedagogue, upon his recent return from Europe, the MUSICAL COURIER discovered him to be possessed of such exceptionally sound and concise ideas on what constitutes the essentials of artistic vocalism that he has been invited to contribute a series of essays to these columns, setting forth his views. The separate papers will be called "Breath Control in Singing," "The Study of Vocal Physiology," "Science and Singing," "Qualifications Necessary for the Singer," "Register Strain and Its Remedy," "The Construction of a Choral Program," "Light, Shadow and Music" and "The Art Theories of the Motet Choral Society of Washington, D. C." The title of the last named, which, however, is to be the first of the series of Simon articles, refers to the organization that he has been conducting for six years and whose work is the tangible demonstration that his theories are as practical as they are striking. To Mr. Simon beauty represents the basis of the musical art, and musical art he recognizes as one of the greatest factors for spiritual expression. In his work with the Motet Choral Society he has interwoven his method of voice training, and the art, and technic of this body of singers have been praised unreservedly by cultured professional listeners and discriminative laymen in Washington. "Reserve, suggestion, responsiveness to finer and subtler moods, beauty of tone, absolute control of breath, finish in cantilena, and certain special effects in lighting" (illumination of the hall), said Mr. Simon, "are some of the features of the Motet Choral Society in which its performances seek to differ from those of other singing societies."

NOT POPULAR IN GERMANY.

Puccini's "Madame Butterfly" has been dropped from the repertoire of Germany's opera houses because of its Japanese settings. For obvious reasons, the Mikado's realm is not popular in the Kaiser's country at present.

THE PAN-SLAVS.

What is this Slavonic peril we hear so much about today? Is it pan-Slavism or piano-Slavism? And what have we to fear from any kind of pan? The old Arcadian god of the hills and sylvan grottoes, protector of hunters, flocks and herdsmen, son of Hermes and a daughter of Dryopes—that Pan has long been dead. He perished with mythology. He was the inventor of the pipes of Pan, which he was wont to play in the cool of the evening when he awoke from his noonday sleep. The nymphs came forth to dance and gambol to the merry sounds, but the wanderer in the forest solitudes was struck with terror. Today we call Pan's terror a panic, and thus preserve his name long after he himself has been forgotten.

This cannot be the Pan referred to in the word pan-Slavism. The mention of the Slavs causes no panic in America, at any rate.

What have musicians to dread in the Slavonic peril? Does the name of Chopin strike terror, or panic, to our hearts?

Chopin was a Pole, a Slav, a revolutionary man who bid defiance to conventionalities and threw down the gauntlet before all the classical traditions of piano writing. He broke the rules of harmony and defied the contrapuntal authorities, and showed a most unruly disposition with regard to formal structure. We must beware of this dangerous Pole. His example constitutes a peril—a Slavonic peril to thousands of young composers who have no genius.

Then there is Tschaikowsky—another anarchist who had no more respect for the symphonic canons of Haydn and Mozart than George Washington had for a cherry tree. His treatment of the orchestra, too, is little less than sacrilegious beside the chaste restraint of Cherubini. If there is no part for the pipes of Pan in his omnivorous scores it is only because the pipes were not to be had. Yes; Tschaikowsky is certainly a grave Slavonic peril to all the first year students of harmony.

Rimsky-Korsakoff, Borodin, Balakireff, Sergeievich Taneieff, Moussorgsky and other outlaws of that class are a standing menace to Palestrina and Handel. Their works must be vigorously persecuted by all the purists who believe that Mendelssohn's "Elijah" is the Ultima Thule of music, for they are free lances, bucaneers, pirates who sail uncharted seas and scoff at the buoys and lighthouses of the classical Admiralty.

The perils of piano-Slavism are too dreadful to contemplate.

Take Leschetizky, for instance. He is not only a Slavonic pianist himself, but he has grown gray teaching other Slavs how to play the piano. Who can estimate the peril which such Leschetizky pupils as Essipoff, Gabrilowitsch, Hambourg, Paderewski, have caused to the noble army of amateurs and the legions of parlor pianists throughout the world? Are we to sit calmly by and see the keyboard art of our sister Annie and our cousin Harry made ridiculous by the playing of these Slavs?

Leschetizky, too, has still further imperilled the peace of mind of mediocrity by teaching American and English students. Then there are other Slavonic pianists who menace us—De Pachmann, Scharwenka, Slivinski, Hofmann, Siloti and the indomitable Godowsky. Even the name of that dead Russian, Rubinstein, dwarfs into insignificance many a living pianist from Germany and France.

Among the violinists of the past and present the names Henri Wieniawski and Mischa Elman are enough to demonstrate that the Slavonic peril is a real and not an imaginary one. What a continual discouragement such violinists are to the ubiquitous hosts of scrapers throughout the world!

And how about Jean Sibelius? He seemed externally to be a gentleman of culture, a man of high intelligence, and an honest fellow when he visited the MUSICAL COURIER offices a few weeks ago. But, alas! he is a Finn, a subject of the Russian Czar, and consequently a menace to "kultur." We do not know exactly what the peril is, but we presume it comes somewhere under pan-Slavism.

Even at the risk of frightening our readers, we cannot refrain from the morbid pleasure of quoting from Southey's horrible poem, "The March to Moscow." In the first stanza the poet merely relates how Napoleon started for Russia.

The Emperor Nap he would set off
On a summer excursion to Moscow;
The fields were green, and the sky was blue,
Morbleu! Parbleu!
What a pleasant excursion to Moscow!

But this light vein is intended as a cloak to hide the horrors that are approaching.

By the time the eighth stanza is reached we begin to feel what the Slavonic peril meant to Napoleon.

The Russians they stuck close to him
All on the road from Moscow.
There was Tormazow and Jemalow,
And all the others that end in ow;
Milardovitch and Jaladovitch, and Karatschkowitch
And all the others that end in itch;
Schamscheff, Souchosaneff, and Schepaleff,
And all the others that end in eff;
Wasiltschikoff, Kostomaroff, and Tchoglokoff,
And all the others that end in off;
Rajeffsky, and Novereffsky, and Rieffsky,
And all the others that end in effsky;
Oscharoffsky and Rostoffsky,
And all the others that end in offsky;
And Platoff he play'd them off,
And Shouvaloff he shovell'd them off,
And Markoff he mark'd them off;
And Krosnoff he cross'd them off,
And Tuchkoff he touch'd them off,
And Boroskoff he bored them off,
And Kutouskoff he cut them off,
And Parenzoff he pared them off,
And Worronzoff he worried them off,
And Doctoroff he doctor'd them off,
And Rodionoff he flogg'd them off.

Why continue? Can any one not see that such names as these would cast a spell over any program?

But perhaps this Slavonic peril is not as great as it is made out to be. Some of the Slavs may be ignorant; but it is evident from their names that most of them are men of letters.

If we can teach them anything, then let them come. If they can teach us anything, still, say we, let them come.

PHILHARMONIC PLANS.

The New York Philharmonic Society's season of 1914-1915 will include for New York twelve Thursday evening concerts, sixteen Friday afternoon concerts, twelve Sunday afternoon concerts in Carnegie Hall, two Young People's concerts in Aeolian Hall and five Sunday afternoon concerts in Brooklyn.

Among the soloists engaged are Lucrezia Bori, Alma Gluck, Lucille Weingartner-Marcel, Julia Culp, sopranos; Pasquale Amato, baritone; Fritz Kreisler, Efrem Zimbalist, Arrigo Serato, Jacques Thibaud, violinists; Leo Schulz, cellist; Eleanor Spencer, Germaine Schnitzer, Ferruccio Busoni, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, Carl Friedberg and David Sapirstein, pianists. In addition, Kitty Cheatham has been engaged to entertain the little people at the two concerts for them in Aeolian Hall.

Fortunately, the war has less seriously affected the Philharmonic Orchestra than most others. Only two men are absent—LeRoy, the first clarinet, and Parme, the bass clarinet. Both of them have gone to join the French army. In LeRoy's place the management has engaged Albert Chiaffarelli, lately first clarinet of the Chicago Opera.

Josef Stransky has cabled that he will be in New York before the end of the month, when he will resume rehearsals at once.

A new series of concerts is being planned by the Philharmonic for Saturday evenings, in Carnegie Hall, details of which will be announced very soon.

VIENNA'S GLORY.

No city in the world is richer in romance and musical memories than the lovely capital of Austria, Vienna—the Vienna of Gluck, Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, Schubert, Brahms.

In 1787 the Bohemian Gluck was laid to rest in the suburban churchyard of Matzleinsdorf, far from his Parisian triumphs, and forgotten by Queen Marie Antoinette, over whose fair head the storm clouds of the French Revolution were beginning to gather.

In the middle of a December night in 1791, another Bohemian composer, one Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, gave up his struggle with a malignant fever and died in his youthful manhood. They buried him among the paupers in the churchyard of St. Marx, amid the lightning, rain and thunder of a tempest. Even his few friends forsook him and the prince of harmony was laid to rest without music. After this youth who died in winter came an old man who quietly expired when all the birds were singing and the flowers of May were opening to the coming June. This old musician was an Austrian who had struggled up through poverty, and without a proper education, into fame and affluence, to be welcomed by the princes of the world and revered by all the musicians of the age.

Yet Joseph Haydn—for he it was—died unhappy in 1809 because Napoleon and the armies of France were masters of his beloved Vienna. Haydn's grave remained in neglect for years. In 1820 the remains were exhumed by order of Prince Esterhazy and reburied in Eisenstadt. During the journey from Gumpendorf to Eisenstadt the head was lost. After many vicissitudes the skull found its way to the anatomical museum of Vienna, and we are told that in 1909 "it had formed the subject of a public lecture given by Professor Tandler before the Anthropological Society of Vienna."

From 1796 to 1827, the Rheinish composer of Flemish extraction, Beethoven, made Vienna his home.

Schubert spent his short life, from the cradle to the grave, in Vienna. He died in 1828.

Hither, too, came the profound and lofty Prussian, Johannes Brahms, in 1862, to compose the great works that rank beside Beethoven's. Brahms died in 1897 and was buried near Beethoven and Schubert in the Central Cemetery of Vienna.

Gluck, Mozart and Haydn slept through the turmoil of Napoleon's wars.

Beethoven, Schubert and Brahms will rest in peace though all the hosts of Russia or the legions of Prussia batter and bombard to capture or defend Vienna.

For in the silent grave no conversation,
No joyful tread of friends, no voice of lovers,
No careful father's counsel—nothing's heard,
For nothing is, but all oblivion,
Dust, and an endless darkness.

Though the city be demolished, as Troy was by the ancient Greeks, its epic has been written in sweeter music than the verse of Homer. But we know that Vienna will not perish. It may not ever be besieged or captured. Nevertheless, a random shot might easily lay low the noble spire of St. Stephens.

Haydn was once a choir boy in St. Stephen's. His pranks made him unpopular with the Empress who called him a crow because she disliked his breaking voice. When the palace of Schönbrunn was being renovated young Haydn so annoyed the Empress Maria by climbing up the scaffolding at the risk of breaking his neck that she ordered the court musical director to "give the crow a good hiding." In after life the old composer used to joke about his successful appearance at court when a choir boy.

These are some of the romances of old Vienna

They cling to the weatherbeaten stones and haunt he nooks and byways.

Rome has its memories of ancient grandeur and ts stupendous ruins of a mighty past. London has ts literary landmarks everywhere and shrines sa-red to Chaucer, Shakespeare, Milton and a multi-ude of later poets.

But it is to Vienna that the musician must turn or the haunts and environments of such an im-nortal list of great composers.

Let the war come when it will. Destroy the an-ient landmarks. Those statues in the squares and arks add nothing to the renown of Gluck, Mozart, Haydn, Beethoven, Schubert, Brahms. It is the omposers who shed glory on the fame of Vienna.

SPIERING HERE.

Theodore Spiering, the American conductor and iolinist, has arrived in this country, and will make is home among his countrymen, as the condition of ar abroad has made it expedient for him to leave erlin temporarily, where he was the leader of a ourse of orchestral concerts and also taught a large iolin class of private pupils. What the presence f such a musician means to America need hardly e emphasized, as the Spiering name is an accepted nonym for serious art and high accomplishment. ne of the chief benefits derived by this country om the European troubles is that it sends to these nores such fine artists as Theodore Spiering and hers. His plans for the immediate future are not et settled, although he is conducting negotiations several important directions. Evidence of the teem in which Spiering is held by his German col-agues and by the Association of the Volksbühne vhich has a membership of 50,000) lies in the ct that although he is an American he was urged them to remain at his post in the German capital nding the return of more favorable conditions r music. However, an enforced inactivity, even temporary, did not answer to the Spiering tem-rament, and finally caused him to leave with re-et a field where he has been so successful and has ade so many warm personal friends. On the trip ross, the artist was one of a committee which afted a letter to President Wilson, advising him the courtesy and help extended by the German overnment to Americans throughout Germany. or the present the Spiering residence will be in ew York.

THIS IS PECULIAR.

In a New York Sun account of the "Carmen" rformance at the Century Opera last week, we id that the institution "is, as it were, the Stadt eater of this town. There one should expect to ar operatic performances in which merit, but not rld dazzling brilliancy of individual impersona-n, discloses itself, and in which there is a com-ndable general level of effort among the princi-s, supported by a good presentation of the choral l instrumental portions of a score." By the same en, then, the Metropolitan Opera House is a ce where one should expect to hear operatic per-mances in which not merit, but world dazzling lliancy of individual impersonation, discloses it-f, and in which there is no commendable general el of effort among the principals, and no good sentation of the choral and instrumental portions a score.

A DEFERRED TOUR.

André Tourret, the Parisian violinist, and Camille ecreus, pianist, have just notified their manager, E. Johnston, that their tour in America which s to have begun November 15, will have to be ferred until November, 1915. They say it is im-sible for them to return to the United States in e to comply with their agreement for the coming son. Mr. Decreus was notified by the military horities to hold himself in readiness, and may be ed to the front at any hour. Mr. Tourret, lough not subject to military duty, will be as-ed to some position in which he can render ice to his country.

MUSIC OF THE BIBLE.

With some account of the development of modern musical instruments from ancient types, by John Stainer, M. A., Mus. Doc., Magd. Coll. Oxon. New edition with additional illustrations and supplementary notes by the Rev. F. W. Galpin, M. A., F. L. S. London: Novello & Company, Ltd. New York: The H. W. Gray Co., sole agents for the U. S. A.

Modern scholars and explorers have brought to light and explained a great many facts concerning the art and music of Egypt, Babylonia, Philistia and other Oriental lands, of which the world had no clear notion forty years ago when Sir John Stainer first published his "Music of the Bible."

A new edition of his book with copious notes and extensive revisions was therefore necessary in order to keep the work abreast of the times and prevent it from being entirely forgotten. Novello & Company have taken their time in bringing out this new edition, and we believe that the American demand for the work through the H. W. Gray Co. has had a lot to do in rousing the London publishers to reissue it.

In his day and generation John Stainer knew as much about Bible music as any man since ancient times. He was a profound musical scholar who was professor of music at Oxford University. He was therefore able to consult with Oriental specialists whenever he saw fit, and consequently he had always at his disposal the best scholarship of Oxford to explain strange words and historical obscurities.

If the translators of the English Bible had admitted, or could have found as learned a musician as Stainer when they were piling up that granite pyramid of pure English, the King James translation, it is certain that most of the vague terms and mistakes in the musical references of the Bible would never have been permitted to remain.

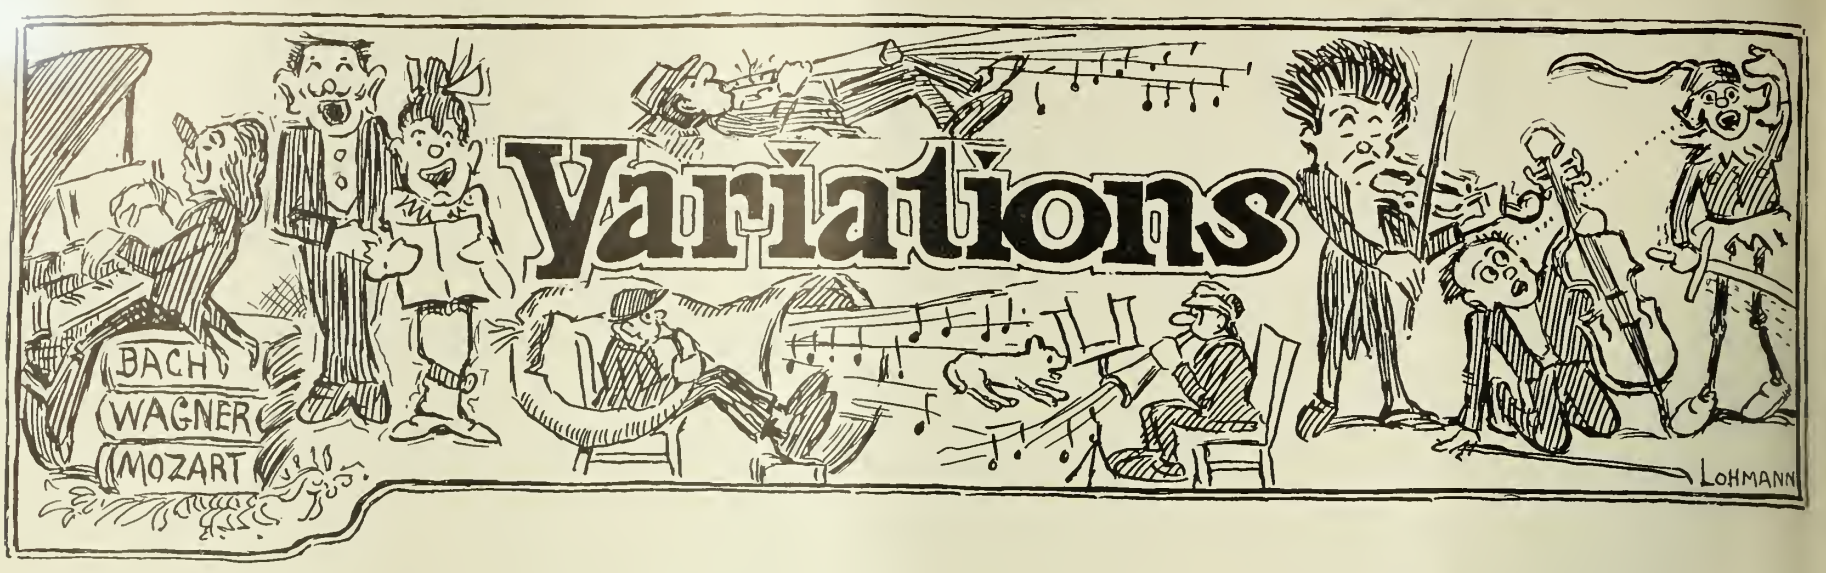
The famous Egyptologist, Dr. Budge, of the British Museum, London, on one occasion said that musicians seldom are exact in their historical and literary references to Egypt, and "will say anything."

We may reply with equal truth that some of the greatest scientific or literary scholars "will say anything" when they write on musical subjects. The learned men of King James' time who translated the Bible in 1611 were no exception to the general rule. In the book of Daniel, for instance, Chapter III, we find a number of musical instruments mentioned, most of which seem familiar to us: "So that at what time ye hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, dulcimer and all kinds of music," etc.

What was a cornet? We know what a cornet is today. Every child knows; and it is certain that when a modern child hears the third chapter of Daniel read he immediately pictures to himself a shiny brass instrument with keys on top and a bell in front.

When the 1611 translation was new to the world the word cornet represented a soft toned wooden pipe covered with leather.

In the original passage the word is something like qeren, which, according to Enoch Hutchinson's "Music of the Bible," published in Boston in 1864, is from the Chaldee qarna, signifying an ox horn in the beginning and subsequently a ram's horn. To translate the ancient qeren into the wood and leather cornet known to the English public of 1611 was no very great inaccuracy. But the same translators employ the word cornet in the sixth chapter of second Samuel, although the original Hebrew word is m'naanim. Hutchinson says: "From the origin of the word we have reason to believe that the instrument intended was one which was shaken. The Vulgate renders it sistra. It was evidently some kind of timbrel which was shaken when played."



It is clear, therefore, that the English translation is wrong, because even in King James' day a cornet was a wind instrument.

The flute mentioned probably refers to an instrument with two reeds—a primitive oboe. In ancient days, however, the word flute was used in the same way that we now use the word pipe. The Hebrew word found in Daniel is mashroqiytha, but the term for the single flute is halil. It is evident, therefore, that the translators were not very sure of the meaning. The next instrument mentioned is the harp, though the original Hebrew has qayth'ros, which is a cithera. The Hebrew word for harp is kinnor. Then we find the good old English sackbut, which was the old name for trombone. But the translators could not have made a greater mistake than in translating sabb'ka into sackbut. Stainer says: "It was therefore not a Hebrew but a Babylonish instrument. It is most unfortunately translated 'sackbut' in our version. The sackbut of Europe was certainly a kind of bass trumpet, in fact, a trombone. . . . It is more probable, therefore, that it (sabb'ka, or sabeca) was a large and powerful harp, of a rich quality of tone."

The psaltery was a stringed instrument played by plucking the strings. Stainer says: "By some strange fatality the translators of the authorized version have dragged in the word "dulcimer" as a translation of symphonia. and not of psanterin; so that the last three instruments mentioned in our version are these: sackbut, psaltery, dulcimer; whereas they should read, harp (sabeca) psaltery or dulcimer (psanterin), bagpipe (symphonia)." According to our author, then, the fifth verse of Daniel III ought to read: "So that at what time ye hear the sound of the keren, mashrokitha, kithros, sabeca, psanterin, and symphonia, ye fall down and worship the golden image that Nebuchadnezzar the King hath set up."

A good many soberly religious persons would be shocked to find that Nebuchadnezzar's grand orchestra of cornets, flutes, harp, sackbuts, psalteries, dulcimers, and all kinds of music was in reality only what to modern ears would be a charivari of cow horns, primitive oboes, lyres, harps, lutes and bagpipes.

The revision of this new edition has been done by the Rev. F. W. Galpin, whose reputation as a musical antiquarian was established by his "Old English Instruments of Music." He has scarcely touched the original text of Sir John's book published in 1879, except to correct an occasional error due to Stainer's excusable ignorance of discoveries made after the book was published. F. W. Galpin has added copious notes and has supplemented each chapter with a few illuminating pages which add great value to the work. The book contains 230 pages, is fully indexed, and beautifully printed on good paper. It is a work which is invaluable to Bible students and to musical scholars alike. In its present form it is destined to become a standard work of reference for many years until new discoveries make another revised edition necessary. Not the least attractive and instructive feature of the book are the eleven plates in photogravure and the many woodcuts and musical examples scattered through the pages. The work differs entirely from the great work of 513, published by Gould & Lincoln, at Boston, Mass., in 1864 and called "Music of the Bible," by Enoch Hutchinson. In the earlier book the Bible is extensively quoted, every line mentioning music being given in full. In the explanatory notes which follow, however, there are many shortcomings due to the general ignorance of ancient art and music which necessarily prevailed until De Sarzec, Peters, Flinders Petrie, Glaser, Wright, Winckler, Garstang, Hogarth, Sir Arthur Evans, Dr. Halbherr and others had made their discoveries. This new edition of Sir John Stainer's "Music of the Bible" does not quote all the Scripture passages, but it gives an unprecedented number of authentic explanations never at the disposal of earlier students of Bible music.

Newman Outflanks Strauss.

Now that ordinary mortals have finished with the Strauss question, the supermen have been taking it up, and for weeks the innocent bystander was enabled to locate himself at a safe distance and watch the duel between Ernest Newman and George Bernard Shaw as their batteries of rhetoric and knowledge hurled charge after charge against each other in polemical bombardment. The cause of the verbal war was Richard Strauss' "The Legend of Joseph," and Ernest Newman undoubtedly started the trouble by saying that the latest work of the composer was the poorest he ever had written. Promptly Shaw, the unbidden Strauss ally, jumped into the breach and began to pour a light fire of raillery against Newman in the public prints. But the hitherto undefeated controversalist had reckoned without the preparedness of his new antagonist, and most of the impartial judges of the long wordy contest now unhesitatingly give the victory to Newman, who drove the older man from trench to trench and redoubt to redoubt until he began to look like a king at chess when he has only one pawn left and finally resigns in order to escape the physical act of being checkmated. The last gun was fired in the London Nation by Newman, and it is such good stuff that readers of "Variations" will, we feel sure, forgive a lengthy extract from it:

"On one point, I admit," says the Newman article, "he has me; I might have expected, indeed, that his eagle eye would detect the one weak spot in my armor. I was rash enough to say that some two hundred European composers could easily have written a work so commonplace as 'Joseph.' But on reflection I see that I was wrong. Not one of them could. I am not like some people I could name: when I recognize that I have done anyone a gross injustice I admit my fault. I apologize to the two hundred.

"And now let me display the anatomy of Mr. Shaw's technique. His first great dodge is to turn a blind eye to every awkward question and every dilemma that is presented to him. I point out to Mr. Shaw that a theme incautiously called by him 'the opening theme' does not, in fact, appear until some time after the opening. Does Mr. Shaw admit that he has blundered ? Not a bit of it! He assures the spectators that while in one sense the theme is not the 'opening theme' because it does not open the work, in a higher, subtler sense it is the opening theme, inasmuch as the music passes into it by 'an irresistible gravitation.' Mr. Shaw's week, I suppose, begins with Tuesday afternoon; for on an enlightened consideration of the calendar it is clear that the whole of Monday and Tuesday morning are merely 'irresistible gravitations' into Tuesday afternoon.

"Mr. Shaw's other most familiar trick is to paint a gross caricature of his adversary's opinions, and then argue, not against the man, but against the caricature. I tell Mr. Shaw, for example, that plenty of musicians besides myself despise 'Joseph.' Whereupon Mr. Shaw appeals to the crowd: 'You see, ladies and gentlemen, this abandoned person actually confesses that he derived his opinion of "Joseph" from other people.' The only exercise I have had throughout this controversy has been chasing round after Mr. Shaw, putting my foot through one after another of his imaginary portraits of me, and substituting a genuine photograph for it. I would not go so far as to say that this inveterate practice of his is primarily conscious and purposive; it seems to derive ultimately from a congenital inability to see what is plain before him without first running round the corner and standing on his head. But this copious natural faculty for seeing truth from an angle that hopelessly distorts it has been developed by the dire necessity of extricating himself, at any cost, from the difficulties into which his many controversies land him—controversies often begun by his incurable mania for lecturing professional people on subjects in which he is only an amateur. In the end it is hard to say where the natural unconscious impulse ceases and the conscious exploitation of it begins. Always there is the unblushing attempt to be the interpreter not only of his own views, but of his opponent's; always the opponent's views are grotesquely manipulated to suit Mr. Shaw's purposes; always from this welter of absurdity is drawn the inference that Mr. Shaw wants. '"Joseph" contains a lot of diatonic music,' runs one of his preposterous syllogisms. 'Mr. Newman dislikes "Joseph"; therefore Mr. Newman dislikes diatonic music,' which is like saying that I never, never, never eat fruit, because Mr. Shaw has seen me decline to have a rotten apple forced down my throat. '"Elektra" seems to me music of an advanced harmonic idiom,' was a former syllogism of Mr. Shaw's: 'Mr. Newman does not like some parts of "Elektra"; therefore Mr. Newman, plodding old fogey that he is, does not like advanced harmonic idioms.'

"Then the tune changes. When Strauss writes another work, so obvious in idea that the brain of a musical rabbit could grasp the bulk of it, Mr. Shaw elaborates an antithetical syllogism: '"Joseph" is simple and rather old-fashioned music; Mr. Newman does not think much of "Joseph"; therefore Mr. Newman is a furious foe of simple and old-fashioned music.' The next misrepresentation follows as a matter of course. 'If Mr. Newman detests simple music of the "old school," he must necessarily lust after the "strange" music of the "new school." Now Stravinsky, in my opinion, writes strange music; therefore Mr. Newman's god is Stravinsky.' This is the latest caricature through which I have to put an avenging foot. In all my life I have not written ten sentences about Stravinsky. Mr. Shaw is really incorrigible. I beg anyone who may do me the honor to be interested in my opinions on music to get them direct from me, not from Mr. Shaw, who is simply not to be trusted in these matters."

Someone should publish all of the Newman-Shaw controversy in pamphlet form. It would make gingery reading even in these exciting days.

Wile Tells on Strauss.

Frederick William Wile, long time Berlin correspondent of the London Daily Mail and the New York Times, was in this city last week for a few days and sailed for Europe on Wednesday, to resume his journalistic activity in London. Many American and English musicians were helped in their Berlin career by the kindly publicity with which Mr. Wile always generously seconded their public efforts, and numerous anxious inquiries went to the State Department at Washington recently when the enterprising journalist was imprisoned in Berlin for knowing too much about their government affairs to suit the imperial officials. Our Ambassador came to Mr. Wile's rescue and he was released and allowed to leave the country. Bobbs, Merrill & Co. has just published a new edition of the successful Wile book, "Men Around the Kaiser," in which, among other literary portraits of prominent contemporary Germans, there is a finely executed essay on Richard Strauss, of whom the author saw much during his Berlin days. To Beau Broadway, of the New York Morning Telegraph, Mr. Wile related this anecdote of the greatest liivng German composer: "It was at a general rehearsal at Dresden of 'Elektra,' and Dr. Strauss rushed down the aisles, and arriving at the footlights suddenly commanded a halt in the performance. Madame Schumann-Heink, the Clytemnestra, was in the throes of a tumultuous vocal episode. 'Leader, leader,' exclaimed Strauss, 'I can still hear the singer.'"

Mr. Wile some thirteen years ago helped to stage the first American minstrel show ever given in Germany, and his collaborators on that occasion were Lou Hirsch (later the composer of "The Gaby Glide" and of several successful London reviews), and the writer of this department of the MUSICAL COURIER.

Wooing the German.

George Everett, the American baritone at the Century Opera, has a plan to stop the contest between Russia and Germany. "There are 100,000 musicians in the Russian army," says Mr. Everett; "mass them on the German frontier and have the whole body play Tschaikowsky's 'Pathetique.' Do you think a music loving German could pull a trigger on Tschaikowsky?" A regiment of Teutonic critics might.

Anglo-German Courtesies.

It would not be well to try Mr. Everett's experiment on the Germans with the music of Elgar. The Kaiser's people are very peevish about everything British just now. In Berlin they have changed the name of the Hotel Westminster to Hotel Linden-Palase, and Hotel Bristol to Hotel Uhl.

The Dismantled Muse.

While some good war poetry has come out of England recently, much bad war poetry is destined to stay within its borders. One of the latter examples is by William Watson (published in the London Times), and is called "To the Troubler of the World." This is the lumbering Watsonian product:

"At last we know you, War-lord. You, that flung
  The gauntlet down, fling down the mask you wore,
  Publish your heart, and let its pent hate pour.
You that had God forever on your tongue.
We are old in war, and if in guile we are young,
  Young also is the spirit that evermore
  Burns in our bosom ev'n as heretofore,
Nor are these thews unbraced, these nerves unstrung.
We do not with God's name make wanton play,
  We are not on such easy terms with Heaven;
But in Earth's hearing we can verily say,
  'Our hands are pure; for peace, for peace, we have striven':
  And not by Earth shall he be soon forgiven
Who lit the fire accurst that flames today."

Geographically Speaking.

And apropos, Mildred, Meuse does not rhyme with muse, or Przemysl with Kneisel.

Too Proof, What?

Chicago, Aug. 25, '14.

DEAR SIR—Send me please one Newspaper too proof.

Yours very truly,
F. TESCHERA. Musician,
5604 S. Laflin St.

Another One.

McHenry, Ill., September 15, 1914.

DEAR SIR—As a subscriber of your very valluable MUSICAL COURIER, permit me congratulate you especially of thé beautiful Photos of the German Royal Kaiser Family in your last number of your very interrestet MUSICAL COURIER.

As a swiss american I sympatise with Germany, and I wish this noble and prosporous Nation the Victory in this war.

Thou I am an american one, and proud of it, but in this war I would like to shoulder my swiss Riffle against the Russians, but owing of six of my Brothers are at the Front in Switzerland, I deem it wiser to attain to my coming Concerttour. Permit me to mention, that Rudolph Ganz the great swiss Pianist and I belong to the same Regiment. my Friend Ganz and I will make some joint Recitals this season. My dear Mr. Liebling, you would greatly oblige me in printing this article.

I beg to be yours very sincerely,

ARNOLD VON DER AUE,
the swiss american Tenor.

Tonal Ghosts.

The scene is a music shop in a little German town. To he shopman enters the conductor of the singing society. "Next month," he says, "comes the anniversary of the leath of Bach. I must put something of his on my program. What have you in stock?"

"Nothing at all," returns the shopman, "but here is a chorus from Gluck that nobody is likely to recognize,"

"On the contrary," retorts the conductor, "I used it a month ago in my Mozart anniversary program."—Jugend.

String Fantasy.

Violinists are beginning to worry about future supplies of imported strings, as the German and French have commandeered all the catgut in order to make casings for the sausages used by the armies. Thus the familiar term "a string of frankfurters" will at last be justified.

The Siege of Hammerstein.

Oscar Hammerstein wonders why the day which President Wilson has set apart for peace prayers, October 4, cannot be made to include supplications for peace also in our local opera war. There is nothing to prevent Oscar from giving opera here except a silly injunction signed by some judge or other. As the Kaiser would say: "What is a scrap of paper among enemies?"

Concert of the Cannon.

Dr. William C. Carl, just returned from Europe, very professionally and very aptly speaks of the happenings abroad as "the most stupendous political fugue the world has ever seen or will ever witness again."

Horrors of War.

One quakes to think—even if the press agents are rubbing their well kept hands with glee—about the number of stories some day to be printed in regard to the personal experiences of those musical artists now fighting in Europe.

A Frontal Attack.

If German music had been boycotted in England, as was at first contemplated, what would have been taught at conservatories there and by private teachers, in place of Bach, Beethoven, Brahms, Mozart, Haydn, Strauss, Franz Wolf, Schubert, Schumann, Weber, Mendelssohn, Liszt, etc. As this fifteen inch question hurtles across the seas to England, we pause for their reply in polyphonic shrapnel.

Lobby Skirmishes.

Who was it that referred recently to some of our estimable fellow citizens and citizenesses as "opera talkers"?

Travelers' Tales.

Some of the wonderful things heard 16,928 times in the MUSICAL COURIER offices during the past month:

"The declaration of war was so sudden."
"I got the last train (or boat) out."
"They wouldn't take paper money."
"There were soldiers everywhere."
"I had to show my passport all the time."
"We had to put out all the lights at night."'
"We were stopped four and one half times by war vessels and made to identify ourselves."
"It seemed so good to see the Statue of Liberty."
"This is the country for me."

Composers as Tacticians.

Arthur Hartmann, the violinist, reached New York from Marseilles last week and although he called at the MUSICAL COURIER offices, he abstained from recounting any harrowing experiences, if he had them. But he did relate a memorable conversation which he overheard between Debussy and Dukas at the home of the former when the Germans were only twenty-five miles from the French capital.

"Looks bad for Paris," commented Hartmann sententiously.

"Bad? What do you mean?" demanded Debussy.

"Yes—what do you mean?" seconded Dukas.

"Well—er—I just thought—I should say——"

"My dear sir, you forget that Joffre is in command. He will not permit the German advance."

"He is unalterably opposed to it." This from Dukas.

"But one should face possibilities. Suppose Paris were taken——"

"That is impossible, eh, Dukas? He does not know what he is saying."

"It is impossible. He knows not at all what he is saying."

"If the French fail to retake Alsace and Lorraine——"

"Fail? Ridiculous."

"Fail? Absurd. We shall not have to take Alsace-Lorraine. It will come to us."

"I hope so. And for your sakes I hope, too, that the Germans do not get into Paris."

Debussy whistled and winked.

Dukas whistled and winked.

"The bayonet—that's what we'll give them—swish—swish—like this—square in the stomach." Debussy imitated the motion.

"We'll fight them with forks if necessary. Zit—zit—in the face—in the eye—squarely through the eye." Dukas imitated the motion.

"Do you suppose," persisted Hartmann, "that if the Germans got to the gates of Paris they would stop for bayonets, or even for forks?"

Debussy whistled again.

So did Dukas.

Then Debussy drew himself up to his full height, put his right hand on his heart and declared: "Cher ami, I give you my word of honor as a gentleman that the Germans will not take Paris."

"Bravo! camarade," shouted Dukas, "I, too, give my word of honor as a gentleman." They embraced furiously.

"Do you believe us?" they cried in unison.

"I do," replied Hartmann, eloquently, and hastening to the steamship office he bought his ticket for America.

LEONARD LIEBLING.

How Wagner Urges War.

[From London Music.]

It is rather curious also, that this doctrine of brute force, which is regarded as the mainspring of modern Prussian militarism, received not a little of its impetus from Wagner's "Ring." Other of the Wagnerian heroes, Lohengrin, or Parsifal, for example, depended for their strength upon the higher spiritual forces; their victories were not those of muscle. But in the "Ring" we have much of this glorification of mere muscle, and whatever Wagner intended him to be, Siegfried, the child of nature, is a type, if not of animal strength, yet of something easy to be mistaken for animal strength. Siegfried conquers, in reality, by means of the talisman, the magical sword; but his conduct at times approaches very near to that of the sheer bounder. It is interesting to note, too, that Siegfriedism ends in tragedy. Siegfried is finally deluded, as brutes are. He forsakes his true wife, and is destroyed by his enemies. The Ring ends in the twilight of the gods and the heroes, a climax of universal destruction—a fatal omen for Siegfriedism and for Germany at the moment. Happily, Wagner's last work was "Parsifal," about which there can be no cavil. In "Parsifal" the Bayreuth master reaffirmed the spiritual values of his earlier work, and such a piece of pure and sacred art as this will do much to heal the wounded hearts of the nations when the fighting is over.

Grace Renee Close Under Friedberg Management.

Grace Renee Close, an Ohio mezzo soprano, whose singing is much praised, will be, during this season, under the management of Annie Friedberg. Miss Close is a native of Toledo and received her early training in that city, after which she studied with various teachers in New York. She has been heard throughout the Middle West with uniform success.

Gilbert Music in Russian.

Henry F. Gilbert's "Comedy Overture" is reported to have been played a few weeks ago (prior to the declaration of war) at two concerts in Russia and to have met with a favorable reception on the part of the critics and other listeners.

Shaievitch Here.

Wladimir Shaievitch, the pianist, who formerly taught in New York, has returned to this city from Europe and will settle in America for the present. Until his plans for the immediate future are matured, Mr. Schaievitch will receive his mail at the MUSICAL COURIER offices.

Dr. Blumenschein Returns from Europe.

Dr. W. L. Blumenschein, of Dayton, Ohio, who was among the marooned musicians abroad, arrived in New York via Canada on Monday. Dr. Blumenschein will, as usual, locate in Dayton, where he has a large class of pupils.

Bogert Moves Studio.

Walter L. Bogert, the vocal instructor, has returned to New York. Mr. Bogert may be found on Tuesdays and Fridays after October 1 at his new studio, 114 West Seventy-second street.

HOW TO JUDGE THE WAR.

[From the American Musician.]

Perhaps in every home, and certainly in every [illegible] throughout the United States, the entire warfare [illegible] many, Russia, France, England, Austria, Servia and Japan has been fought to a finish in words and heated argument and with a precision that the Kaiser, General Joffre and Earl Kitchener know nothing of.

It is the most common failing of all human beings to get a conclusion first, and then try to find reasons to support the conclusion. Needless to say, the scientific method is the exact opposite of this.

In a book called "Herd Instinct," published in 1908, the author, W. Trotter, says: "If we examine the mental furniture of the average man, we shall find it made up of a vast number of judgments of a very precise kind upon subjects of very great variety, complexity and difficulty. He will have fairly settled views upon the origin and nature of the universe and upon what he will probably call its meaning; he will have conclusions as to what is to happen to him at death and after, as to what is and what should be the basis of conduct. He will know how the country should be governed and why it is going to the dogs; why this piece of legislation is good and that bad. He will have strong views upon military and naval strategy, the principles of taxation, the use of alcohol and vaccination, the treatment of influenza, the prevention of hydrophobia, upon municipal trading, the teaching of Greek, upon what is permissible in art, satisfactory in literature and hopeful in science. The bulk of such opinions must necessarily be without rational basis, since many of them are concerned with problems admitted by the expert to be still unsolved, while as to the rest it is clear that the training and experience of no average man can qualify him to have any opinion upon them at all. The rational method adequately used would have told him that on the great majority of these questions there could be for him but one attitude—that of suspended judgment."

The average man, however, is not in the habit of suspending his judgment. On the contrary, he states his opinion with great emphasis. One has only to watch a street orator on a soap box—shaking his fists, pounding the air, gesticulating, turning, twisting, stamping, shouting—to see that it is his emotion and not his mind that is doing the talking. A man who is thinking deeply is quiet and preoccupied. He does not shake a big stick and create a disturbance.

But the average man is not a deep thinker. He is a man of emotions. He gets an idea into his head from an emotional source and he brings all the reasons he can find to support the idea he has already got fixed in his mind. In the scientific study of psychology this emotionally toned idea is called a complex; and the reasons which are invented to support the complex are called rationalizations. If our readers get this explanation well into their heads they will have no trouble in understanding why it is that a man who has a complex fixed in his mind is not susceptible to argument. The properly trained scientific mind, on the other hand, will only hold an idea so long as it thinks the given reasons prove the idea to be right.

In one case the conclusions grow out of the reasons; in the other case the reasons are tacked on to the conclusions. This explains the great difference of opinions among music critics. Each one of them gets a different sort of complex in his head and has to find all the reasons he can to prove what he already believes. If we tell a man that two apples and two apples make four apples he will agree with us without any excitement or warmth of feeling. But if we say that the taste of apples is more agreeable than that of pears we at once lay ourselves open to hostile criticisms. There are no cold and indisputable reasons to prove without a doubt that apples taste better than pears. One is question of taste—a question of likes and dislikes; the other is purely a question for the mind and has nothing to do with likes or dislikes.

One has only to read the letters in the daily papers to see that most of the writers are telling us what their complexes are and are not giving us any reasons at all. A German in Philadelphia, for instance, will write to the paper to prove that the German army will win. It is plain to see that he wants the German army to win, and his anxiety and hope are the cause of the emotion which has given him his complex. He mistakes his complex for solid knowledge and proved fact, and he builds up a lot of weak and unconvincing arguments to support his complex. And the stronger his complex takes hold of his emotions, the less able is he to perceive the weakness of his arguments.

A Frenchman in Chicago, let us say, with the same feelings for the French army that the German has for the German army, will get the complex into his head that the French army must win.

And so it goes. Probably every man in America is inclined to take sides. Most of these same men have complexes which cause them to be sure which side will be victorious. President Wilson has asked the nation to remain strictly neutral, and we at least intend to remain so. But in any case it would never do for us to express any leaning one way or the other. We have readers of German extraction, of French, English, Russian, Austrian, Servian extraction, and it would be foolish on our part to hurt the feelings of any of our readers in any way. Besides, we are supposed to write about music, not war. But we know that this terrible war is uppermost in every one's thoughts, and it may not be amiss for us to refer to it.

There is so much feeling in everybody's mind at present that the public in general is absolutely overloaded with complexes. The emotional strain is so great that any statement is accepted as true if it agrees with the complex, and rejected if it does not fit in with the complex. If the two armies were perfectly equal in every way and stood facing each other without firing a shot or making the least move, we feel certain that the army which had the worst things said about it in the newspapers would be considered by the public to be the defeated army. This statement sounds absurd; but in fact it expresses exactly what has happened so far. Not a living soul at the time we are writing knows which side is going to come out on top. We know that thousands of war critics in America who have never seen a battle, or an army, or a field gun, or a machine gun, or a mortar, or a company of lancers, or anything of importance connected with soldiers and fighting, have already decided which is the victor, and have sealed the fate of Paris, St. Petersburg, London and Berlin. It is a pity those prophets do not tell us what is to become of New York in 1984. Please let us know, as we want to renew our lease.

ANN ARBOR PREPARING AN INTERESTING SEASON.

University School of Music a Vital Factor—A Fine List of Attractions.

Ann Arbor, Mich., September 17, 1914.

The University School of Music, Ann Arbor, Mich., a corporation organized "for the purpose of fostering good music in the University, City of Ann Arbor and the State of Michigan" and which for many years has been true to its purpose, promises to take several important forward steps during the coming year.

Owing to the completion of Hill Auditorium, one of the most complete musical auditoriums in the country, with its immense seating capacity of 5,000, it has been possible greatly to increase the importance of the concerts given on the Choral Union and May Festival series, and hereafter only organizations and artists which represent an important phase of music, and which stand out as typical exponents of their arts, will be scheduled. The numbers on the pre-festival series are such as to attract the attention of music lovers in general:

October 28—Johanna Gadski, song recital.
November 11—Ferruccio Busoni, piano recital.
December 2—Philadelphia Orchestra, Leopold Stokowski, conductor; Theodore Harrison, baritone.
February 17—Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, Dr. Ernst Kunwald, conductor.
March 12—Leo Slezak, song recital.
May 19-22—Twenty-second annual May Festival.

At this time it is, of course, almost impossible to announce particulars regarding the festival programs, other than to say that the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, which has played so important a part in the programs during the past ten years, again will be engaged. Likewise, the University Choral Union under the direction of Director Stanley and the supplementary chorus of school children will be heard.

In the past, many students of the University of Michigan have been able to supplement their literary study by work in practical music taken at the University School of Music, since the two institutions are affiliated in such a way that regular credit toward an A. B. degree is granted for studies completed at the school of music. However, during the past year a much closer relationship has been established between the two institutions in that at a recent meeting of the Board of Regents of the university, the privilege of the use of the university women's gymnasium was extended to school of music girls, as well. The announcement of this regulation has been received very enthusiastically by students and friends of the school of music. Arrangements have also been perfected between the two institutions whereby, in the future, the numerous concerts given on the faculty concert series, historical recital series and the symphony orchestra are to be held in Hill Auditorium in the afternoon, and will be made entirely free to the general public as well as the student body of the two institutions. It is doubtful whether there is any other community in the whole United States where concerts of so elaborate a nature, given under so favorable conditions, may be heard without any admission fee.

A year ago the board of directors of the University School of Music elected a dean of women to serve as general advisor and leader of the women students, and the beneficial and satisfactory results which have accrued from this departure have been a full justification of the action of the board. Through the efforts of Dean Bacher, a women student body of the school was organized under the name of Symphonic League with its own officers and committees, which has been of great assistance as a clearing house for mutual acquaintance, socially and educationally.

Recently, the University School of Music acquired title to a splendid piece of property near the university campus as a site for a new school of music building to be constructed in the future. During the summer, part of the buildings on this property were razed and the grounds put in sightly condition, while other buildings on the property were remodeled as a temporary annex until the construction of the large permanent school building. In this new annex special rooms and parlors have been reserved for the general use of the Symphonic League, where the social activities of the association will be conducted, while tennis courts have been laid out on the grounds for the use of students.

Several changes in the faculty, as usual, have been made, most important of which has been the engagement of Theodore Harrison as head of the vocal department. Mr. Harrison is a native of Philadelphia, where he earned an enviable reputation as concert artist and teacher, after which he spent six years abroad—three years as opera singer in Italy and a similar period as concert artist in Germany. During this time he appeared in practically all of the important music centers and under the most dignified musical auspices.

BUFFALO BREVITIES.

Telephone, North 1445 J,
819 Richmond Avenue,
Buffalo, N. Y., September 12, 1914.

Whether or not the European war will affect the musical activities in Buffalo this season has not been announced by the local managers, but no doubt there will be some changes in the scheduled programs.

Among the first of the music teachers to resume classes is Mrs. Alfred Jury, who has a beautiful new studio in the Kinne Building, at the corner of Main and Utica streets. Her wide experience in concert, oratorio and church work lend to her instruction an inestimable value. Thirty-seven vocal students were enrolled in Mrs. Jury's class last season, an unusually large number.

Marvin Grodzinsky, one of the exponents of the Leschetizky method in Buffalo, announces the opening of his studio, 214 Highland avenue. Mr. Grodzinsky expects to give a number of recitals this season and also to introduce several of his advanced pupils. He has issued a booklet designed to aid parents and students in the selection of a proper teacher. This booklet may be had on application.

Frances Helen Humphrey has not yet returned from Paris, where she has been assisting in relief work. She expects to be in Buffalo the last of the month, when she will take up her work again.

Mary M. Howard, musical critic of the Buffalo Express, has returned from a two months' vacation. In addition to her editorial work, Miss Howard has a large class of students in piano, organ, harmony and sight reading, and is, without doubt, one of the busiest teachers in the city.

Ella B. Snyder, soprano soloist of the First Congregational Church, has been studying for six weeks at Ithaca, N. Y., with J. Jerome Hayes, of New York City. Miss Snyder has decided to teach, owing to a number of applications from admirers of her lovely voice and intelligent use of it.

CORA J. TAYLOR.

A Saenger Contralto for the Worcester Festival

Christine Schutz, who has been studying with Oscar Saenger for the past two seasons, has been engaged as a soloist at the Worcester Festival, which is one of the most important musical events of this country. Miss Schutz has a contralto voice of great range and beauty, and Mr. Saenger expects her to take an important place in the concert, oratorio and recital field.

Frank King Clark Ill.

News reaches the MUSICAL COURIER that Frank King Clark, the vocal teacher, of Berlin, is seriously ill in Lucerne, Switzerland.

Mme. Donalda Recovering.

Paulina Donalda, the soprano, who was operated upon recently for appendicitis, is recovering rapidly at her home in Montreal.

From August 5, 1913, to June 30, 1914, the Frankfurt Opera House presented Wagner's works on fifty-seven occasions, other composers represented being Verdi (35), Mozart (27), Lortzing (15), Puccini (14), and Offenbach (13). In all sixty-two operas, eleven operettas, and two ballets were staged.—London Musical News.

WICHITA MUSICIANS DESIRE TO STANDARDIZE TEACHING

Undertaking Successful Thus Far—Notes and Mention.

Wichita, Kan., September 19, 1914.

Of importance here is the move by the professional musicians to standardize the teaching of Wichita, and in conjunction with the Musicians' Club, the State Music Teachers' Association has taken the work up with a so far local success. The high school authorities have liberally allowed a full credit per year for music, this full point credit counting toward graduation for two years, or they allow a one-half point for four years. In other words, two credits is the total allowed in four years' high school course, but it can be secured in two years' music study. In consideration of this the Musicians' Club appointed a committee which drafted a requirement that all teachers must meet in order to be accredited. The standard demands briefly that those teachers must hold a diploma from a recognized music school, or in lieu of this, five years' teaching experience and pass the examination of the executive board.

The committee has further worked out a satisfactory standard of examination, and many are now securing application blanks. There have also been applications outside of the city for credit on this list. Among the nearby towns Kingman is expecting to follow Wichita's example, and the State Teachers' Association board of examiners, consisting of Theodore Lindberg, Otto L. Fischer, and T. L. Krebs have this work in hand. It is expected that this movement will be Statewide.

The original movement for standardization began in Wichita last year, sponsored by the Musicians' Club, although the idea had been agitated previously in the State meet. The committee which worked out the movement comprised: Frank A. Power, Rafael Navas, Lucius Ades, Theodore Lindberg, T. L. Krebs, Mrs. C. C. Stanley, Jessie Clark and Miss Marsh, the last two of the high school music department.

WICHITA MUSIC NOTES.

Deane Moon, tenor, a new teacher in the Power-Meyers Conservatory, gave the following program at Kingman last week, assisted by Mary Vanderveer, accompanist: "The Wanderer," "My Sweet Repose," "Schubert; "Wenn Ich In Deine Augen Seh," "Du Bist wie eine Blume," "Two Grenadiers," Schumann; "Since You Went Away," Johnson; "Quite True," Woodman; "The Swan," "Long Ago, Sweetheart Mine," MacDowell.

The Wichita College of Music held its ninth annual opening concert at Philharmony Hall, September 10, and the attendance filled the hall.

Ethelyn B. King, of the school of expression of the Wichita College of Music, gave a program of readings, September 15. She was assisted by Louella Weaver, pianist.

The annual meeting of the State Music Teachers' Association will be held in Wichita the first week of December, and the programs outlined and round table talks are expected to surpass all former efforts. A full report will be given in the MUSICAL COURIER. The State Association will push standardization of teachers and some lively discussions are anticipated.

Though late in mentioning this program, the benefit song recital for the library book fund should not pass unnoticed. It was given by Mose Mack Johnson, baritone, August 31 in Philharmony Hall. Mr. Lindberg assisted the cause by donating the Philharmony Hall, and while this recital might be termed a midsummer one, it proved to be excellent in quality. Though for a good cause, it was poorly attended, but Mr. Johnson bravely sang a program taxing in its numbers, and entirely delightful. Several encores brought forth ballads pleasing in their delivery and given with excellent voice quality.

The United States Marine Band is to be heard in The Forum in October. The Kilties Band of Canada will be also here during the Dry Farming Congress next month.

Leida Mills, to whom much is due toward making Wichita a musical point on the map, at one time our local manager of concert stars and big concerts, who has been a guest of Jessie Clark, returned to her home in Portland, Ore., September 6. While here she was the guest of honor at a reception and musicale given by the Wichita Musical Club at Mrs. E. E. Higginson's, on South Seneca. Miss Mills was president of the club for many years.

The plans for the Redpath-Homer series of some twenty-six concerts, lectures, etc., to be given at The Forum at popular prices, are well under way. The entire top of The Forum will be lined with a canvas ceiling, and it is expected to remove some of the acoustic troubles.

Mr. Hawkins, of Denver, representing the San Carlos Opera Company, was in Wichita last week.

Dean Remmick, a graduate pianist of the Power-Meyer Conservatory, has been elected to teach at the Christian College of Enid, Okla.

RALPH BROKAW.

SOME OF THE OPENING ATTRACTIONS OF THE 1914-15 SEASON.

The appended list contains the names of some of the individual artists, orchestras and other organizations that will participate in the inauguration of the season 1914-1915 in America.

SEPTEMBER.

23-25—Fifty-seventh Worcester, Mass., Festival.
23—Florence Hinkle, Worcester Festival.
23—Evan Williams, Worcester Festival.
23—Herbert Witherspoon, Worcester Festival.
23—Mildred Potter, Worcester Festival.
24—Olive Kline, Worcester Festival.
24—Efrem Zimbalist, Worcester Festival.
24—Christine Schutz, Worcester Festival.
24—William H. Pagdin, Worcester Festival.
25—Alma Gluck, Worcester Festival.
25—Rudolph Ganz, Worcester Festival.
27—Alice Nielsen and Riccardo Martin in joint song recital at Washington, D. C.
28—George Dostal, Newark, N. J.

OCTOBER.

1—Olive Fremstad opens tour on Pacific Coast.
1—Harold Bauer, Colorado Springs, Col.
1—Marcella Craft, Maine Festival.
1-3—Maine Music Festival at Bangor.
5-7—Maine Music Festival at Portland.
1-7—Artha Williston, Cordelia Lee Cuyler Black, Salvatore Giordano and Florence Anderson Otis at Maine Festival, Bangor and Portland.
2—Cornelius Van Vliet, Grinnell, Iowa.
2—Jennie Dufau, La Crosse, Wis.
2—Johanna Gadski, Denver, Col.
2—Zoellner String Quartet, Bedford, Ind.
5—Mrs. Allen's Series, Washington, D. C., Olive Fremstad.
5—Enrico Aresoni, Pontiac, Ill.
5—Emma Nagel, Richmond Festival.
5—Ann Ivins, Lockport, N. Y.
5—Ernestine Schumann-Heink, Sioux City, Iowa.
6—Ida Gardner, Schenectady, N. Y.
6—Mary Jordan, Brooklyn, N. Y.
8—Grace Hall Riheldaffer, with Calumet Club, Milwaukee, Wis.
13—Paul Althouse, Chicago Art and Travel Club.
15—Oscar Seagle, Colorado Springs, Col.
15—Denver Philharmonic Orchestra (Horace Tureman, conductor) begins season.
16—Frederic Martin, Wellesley College, Mass.
16—Enrico Palmetto, Ottuma, Iowa.
16—John Barnes Wells, Newburgh, N. Y.
16-17—Philadelphia Orchestra (Leopold Stokowski, conductor) begins season in Philadelphia, Pa.
16-17—Boston Symphony Orchestra (Dr. Karl Muck, conductor) begins season in Boston, Mass.
16-17—Chicago Symphony Orchestra (Frederick Stock, conductor) begins season in Chicago, Ill.
17—Rebecca Davidson, Pittsburgh, Pa.
17—Manuel Quirogo, New York.
18—Theodore Harrison, soloist, Chicago Apollo Club.
18—Marie Sundelius, soloist, Chicago Apollo Club.
18—Louis Siegel, Rochester, N. Y.
19—Edmund Burke, Rochester, N. Y.
20—Heyn Recital Series, Pittsburgh, Pa., Destinn and Gilly.
21—Morse-Rummel, Quebec, P. Q.
22—Emilio de Gogorza, St. Paul, Minn.
22—Caroline Hudson-Alexander, Cleveland, Ohio.
23—New York Symphony Society (Walter Damrosch, conductor) begins season in New York.
23—Carl Friedberg and Arrigo Serato begin American tour at Pittsburgh, Pa.
23—Philharmonic Course, Detroit, Mich., Destinn and Gilly.
23—Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra (Emil Oberhoffer, conductor) begins season in Minneapolis, Minn.
25—Francis Macmillen, Cleveland, Ohio.
25—San Francisco Symphony Orchestra (Henry K. Hadley, conductor) begins season in San Francisco, Cal.
26—Frances Alda and concert company, Newark, N. J.
26—Anna Case and Charles Gilbert Spross, Des Moines, Ia.
27—Luella Ohrman, Toronto, Ont.
27—Margarete Matzenauer, Houston, Tex.
27—John McCormack, Lexington, Ky.
27—Germaine Schnitzer, Briarcliff, N. Y.
28—Jeanne Gerville-Reache, Bridgeport, Conn.
28—Alexander Bloch, New York.
28—Johanna Gadski, Ann Arbor, Mich.
29—Albert Spalding, New York.
29-30—New York Philharmonic Society (Josef Stransky, conductor) begins season in New York.
29-30—Ferruccio Busoni, soloist, New York Philharmonic Society in New York.
30-31—Hugo Kortschak, soloist, Chicago Symphony Orchestra in Chicago.
30-31—Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra (Dr. Ernst Kunwald, conductor) begins season in Cincinnati, Ohio.

NOVEMBER.

1—Portland (Ore.) Symphony Orchestra begins season.
1—Vera Barstow, Manchester, N. H.
2—Lucy Marsh, Easton, Pa.
2—Carl Friedberg, New York.
3—Christine Miller, Galesburg, Ill.
4—Yvonne de Tréville, Brooklyn, N. Y.
5—Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra (Emil Oberhoffer, conductor) begins series in St. Paul, Minn.
5—Boston Symphony Orchestra begins series of concerts in New York.
6—Willy Burmester, soloist, Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra in Minneapolis, Minn.
6—Helen Stanley, Cleveland, Ohio.
6—Boston Symphony Orchestra begins series of concerts in Brooklyn, N. Y.
6—Winnifred Bambrick, Washington, D. C.
6—Marie Kaiser, St. Louis, Mo.
6—St. Louis Symphony Orchestra (Max Zach, conductor) begins season in St. Louis, Mo.
6-7—Olga Samaroff, soloist, with Philadelphia Orchestra in Philadelphia, Pa.
9—Marie Morrisey, New York.
9—Tina Lerner, Bloomington, Ill.
9—Bertha Kathleen Shutts, Brownwood, Tex.
10—Fritschy Course, Kansas City, Mo., Marie Sundelius, soloist.
10—Chicago Symphony Orchestra (Frederick Stock, conductor), Cleveland, Ohio.
10—Philadelphia Orchestra goes on tour.
10—Marie Hertenstein, Lima, Ohio.
12—Charles Edward Clarke, Delaware, Ohio.
12—Julia Culp, soloist, New York Philharmonic Society.
12-13—Jan Sickesz, New York.
14—Vida Llewellyn, New York.
15—Arrigo Serato, soloist, New York Philharmonic Society.
16—Metropolitan Opera season opens in New York.
17—Effie Nichols, Newton, Kan.
18—Florence Blumenschein-Rowe, Winnipeg.
19—Detroit Symphony Orchestra (Weston Gales, conductor), begins season in Detroit, Mich.
19—Bert Williams, Davenport, Ia.
20—Friday Musicales begin at Pittsburgh, Pa. Christine Miller and Harold Bauer will furnish the program.
22—Eleanor Hazzard Peocock, Indianapolis, Ind.
23—Andrea Sarto, Halifax, N. S.
24—Flonzaley Quartet, Waterbury, Conn.
27—Eleanor Spencer, soloist, New York Philharmonic Society.

DECEMBER.

4—Alice Verlet, Columbus, Ohio.
4—Grace Bruce Marcusson, Faribault, Minn.
6—J. J. Landsbury, Prairie du Chien, Wis.
6—Jacques Thibaud, New York.
7—Alice Eldridge, Crawfordsville, Ind.
7—Thuel Burnham, Quincy, Ill.
9—May Mukle, soloist, Pittsburgh Mendelssohn Choir.
9—New York Oratorio Society (Louis Koemmenich, conductor) opens season.
10—Berta Hecker, Muscatine, Ia.
10—Marion Green, Muscatine, Ia.
14—Glenn Dillard Gunn, Keokuk, Ia.
14—William Clare Hall, Evanston, Ill.
15—Dorothea North, Grand Rapids, Mich.
15—Edward Walker, Mt. Vernon, Ia.

JANUARY, 1915.

2—Leo Slezak, Cincinnati Matinee Musical Club.
3—Carl Flesch, soloist, New York Symphony Society.
3—Adele Rosenthal, Houston, Tex.
4—Josef Lhevinne, Boston, Mass.
8—Malvina Parry, Ottawa, Kan.
15—Mrs. King-Clark, Omaha, Neb.
15-16—Arthur Shattuck, soloist, Chicago Symphony Orchestra.
17—Hazel Eden Mudge, Prairie du Chien, Wis.
18—Madge Miller, Manitowoc, Wis.
22—George Frederick Ogden, Muscatine, Ia.
22—Jane Noria, Moberly, Mo.

FEBRUARY.

2—Arthur Alexander, Portland, Ore.
9—George Hamlin and Arthur Shattuck in joint recital, St. Louis, Mo.
15—Antoinette Szumowska, Brooklyn, N. Y.
25—Frederick Morley, Lansing, Mich.

War's Effect on Music History.

New York, September 16, 1914.

To the Musical Courier:

It is hard to write of the awful catastrophe that has fallen upon civilization—it is too full of horrors. All who have been actually upon the scene lived wholly in the present, not only day by day, but hour by hour. But when one is safely out of its dangers and no longer immediately surrounded by its tragedies, one looks beyond the present, and if he is analytical and deeply interested in the world of art and music, he looks searchingly into the future, and this question arises: What effect will it have upon the history of music?

The development of art in every country depends upon the history of her nation. The quality of that art is an expression of its people—and here is a matter for deep thought.

No one who has recently visited France and Germany could fail to be impressed by the decadence in art. The "salon," for example, was deplorable, showing the distressing weakness of present day French art, both in painting and in sculpture, while the Futurist influence in Germany was a menace to all the art. "Where will it lead us?" was constantly being asked; and musicians, called "Purists," cried out against the followers of Strauss and Schönberg.

Side by side with all this, the art of singing has suffered. It was not unusual to hear people say, both in Paris and in Berlin, "I don't go to the opera—the singing is so bad!" The reply to this was always a shrug of the shoulders with outspread hands—no attempt to deny it. Here and there, of course, an individual sang well, but the standard was very low. Bel canto was forgotten in the attempt to declaim, to be dramatic, to make big effects both with voice and in acting. But did it thrill us? Was it a delight to the ear? Critics of art have accused modern French and German painters of returning to the totem stage, and certainly critics of music might justly accuse our composers of returning to the barbaric.

Those who emerge from great sorrow and affliction have a keener sense of values—a more just appreciation of the balance of things, and of what is worth while. Let us then believe that out of this war, terrible as it is, a great good may come to lift up decadent art; and in its place may there be a new birth—art that is sane and sincere!

In the meanwhile, what of ourselves? Will not this winter be a test of America's ability to be independent in music? Lack of confidence in ourselves has been carefully fostered by Europeans for obvious reasons. Let us utilize native talent, and establish a confidence in our ability to found a further national progress in music.

CAROLL BADHAM PREYER.

Anna Case Returns.

Anna Case, the young American soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, returned last Wednesday, September 16, from her first European trip, via Montreal, Canada.

Unlike many others, she had no complaints to make, nor did she suffer any hardships worth mentioning, aside from the natural anxiety of how to get home as the war broke out, and a rather tiresome ride from St. Moritz, Switzerland, to London; but she considered the experience well worth the trouble.

An enforced stay at St. Moritz for three weeks has given her a complete rest, and she has returned to America in the best of health, having gained several pounds in weight since she left New York, in the middle of July.

New Cellist for Philadelphia.

A cellist named Kindler, just arrived from Europe, has been secured by Leopold Stokowski as a member of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra.

Mayer's Son to Fight.

Rudolph Mayer, son of Daniel Mayer, the London concert manager, has joined the British army.

Mme. Schumann-Heink Goes to Chicago.

Mme. Schumann-Heink went to her home in Chicago yesterday (Tuesday).

"I just love Chicago," the contralto told a MUSICAL COURIER representative last week in New York. "I think it is a wonderful city—so progressive and alive to the advantages of all the arts. And I am just crazy about my new house. It is on Michigan avenue. Miss Sattler is already there. She has been the governess of all my children, you know, and is a lovely woman."

Mme. Schumann-Heink had only just returned to her Waldorf-Astoria (New York) apartment from a few days

MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK ON BOARD THE STEAMSHIP ROTTERDAM EN ROUTE TO NEW YORK.
Photo by Herbert Sachs-Hirsch.

spent at her New Jersey farm, her first visit there since her return from Europe on the steamship Rotterdam, September 7.

"Yesterday you could see Schumann-Heink cook!" The contralto was all enthusiasm. "And there was my garden, with such beautiful vegetables!"

"Did you gather them yourself?" asked the interviewer.

"Ja!—and there were Mrs. Bessie, my cow," she humorously explained, "and the chickens laying eggs for us. Oh, they were all glad to see us!"

The "us" included her oldest, her "sailor" son August (whom she has not had with her for a long time), and her daughter Marie.

"Oh, it was good to be there again!" she added, with a happy shrug of satisfaction.

Mme. Schumann-Heink's season begins October 5, at Sioux City, Ia. Before November 1 she is booked to sing in twenty concerts, and every date is filled till June 1.

Alice Shaw a Dependable Artist.

Alice Shaw, who is the contralto soloist at the Euclid Avenue Baptist Church in Cleveland, Ohio, where Gay Donaldson is director of the choir as well as the baritone soloist, will be heard in joint recital this season with Mr. Donaldson.

Mrs. Shaw spent a part of her vacation at Chautauqua, N. Y., where her singing created a very favorable impression. The rest of her leisure time she spent in touring in her own automobile.

Apropos of automobiles and touring, here is a little story told about Mrs. Shaw by a well known citizen of Cleveland:

"On my way to church a few Sundays ago, the street car in which I was riding stopped at a crossing of another line, and, while it was standing there, I noticed an auto crossing the tracks. Suddenly another machine, going in the same direction as myself, went by us at terrific speed. A collision between the two cars seemed inevitable, and it was only the good work on the part of the driver of the first car that prevented it. This driver, who was Mrs. Shaw, as I afterward learned, turned her car quickly down the avenue, while the driver in the second car turned his machine in the direction which she had been going. But he was not so fortunate, for he tore up over the curb, breaking an iron pipe, which he struck, bursting a tire, and his car suffered other damage. Fortunately for him, it did not turn over and he kept right on. As I got off the street car at the church, Mrs. Shaw came driving up as unconcerned as though nothing had happened, sang a solo and a duet in her usual good style during the service, and never so much as hinted that anything untoward had occurred. When told that the episode had been noted, she seemed the most concerned about the people in the other car."

This is just another incident which goes to prove the absolute dependableness of Mrs. Shaw, and those who read the account (which recently appeared in these columns) of her singing before a concert audience at Akron, Ohio, while she suffered from a broken arm, in order that no one need be disappointed, will, no doubt, admire her sterling quality.

First American "Parsifal."

New York, September 21, 1914.

To the Musical Courier:

Can I ask the favor of some information? When did the first five performances of "Parsifal" take place in America, and who comprised the original cast? I have written to several New York daily newspapers regarding the subject, but their answers are, as usual on questions of music (as the MUSICAL COURIER used to show us in its "deadly parallel") very conflicting. Thanking you,

Very truly yours, P. J. WAY.

The performances in question took place December 24 and 31, 1903, and January 7, January 14 and January 21, 1904. The first cast was as follows:

Kundry ..... Milka Ternina
Amfortas ..... Anton van Rooy
Titurel ..... Adolph Mühlmann
Gurnemanz ..... Robert Blass
Klingsor ..... Otto Goritz
Parsifal ..... Alois Burgstaller
The Flower Maidens: Mmes. Camille, Seygard, Fanchon Thompson, Selma Kronold, Helen Mapleson, Lillian Heidelbach, Marcia van Dresser, Josephine Jacoby, Isabelle Bonton, Elsa Harris, Johanna Pöhlmann, Josephine Schaffer, etc.
The Boys' Chorus ..... Choir of Calvary Church

Friedberg and Serato Plans.

Carl Friedberg and Arrigo Serato, who will arrive in America the early part of October for their first American concert tours, will open their season October 23 with the Pittsburgh Art Society in a big joint recital, the opening of that society's season. Friedberg's first New York appearance will be at Carnegie Hall, November 2, while Serato is booked to make his debut in New York with the New York Philharmonic Society November 15.

Special mention should be made of the California tour of Arrigo Serato, an event in music, as he is said to be the first artist who comes to this country for the first time and has a tour booked on the Coast. He will start for the Coast directly after his appearance with the Cincinnati Orchestra, going to Denver, his first stop, where he will appear with the Philharmonic. From there he will proceed to San Francisco and Los Angeles.

The Gifted Hambourgs.

In the Toronto (Canada) Everywoman's World of September, there is a long article about Max Fleischmann, the youthful violin prodigy and pupil of Jan Hambourg, of the Hambourg Conservatory of Music. The lad is referred to as a remarkable player for his tender years. The same issue of the Everywoman's world contains some excellently conceived and well drawn fashion pictures, by Luba Hambourg, another member of this unusually gifted artist family.

Mrs. H. H. A. Beach in America.

Mrs. H. H. A. Beach, the American composer and pianist, who has just returned to America from Munich, will appear this season under the management of M. H. Hanson. Mrs. Beach has recently composed a hymn which has been accepted as the official hymn of the San Francisco Panama Exposition. She will also be represented at the coming Maine Festival, where Marcella Craft will make her debut with two of Mrs. Beach's songs with orchestra.

Bloch's Plans.

Among the passengers on board the steamship Rotterdam, which arrived in New York on September 7, was Alexander Bloch, the talented young violinist, who has been studying with Leopold Auer this summer. Of course, Mr. Bloch was immediately questioned regarding his experiences in reaching this country from war-ridden Europe. He replied that he left Loschwitz, near Dresden, Germany, on August 22 and finally reached Berlin. The trip from Berlin to Bentheim, on the Holland border, which ordinarily consumes about eight hours, on this occasion took thirty hours. Part of this delay was caused by the fact that all transportation remained at a standstill while the German soldiers were being conveyed to the Russian border to repel the attack on the frontier.

Finally arriving at Rotterdam after many hardships Mr. Bloch was greeted by the discouraging news that no tickets would be obtainable until October 17. But in spite of such a misfortune, Mr. Bloch told the steamship authorities that he was "from Missouri" and that he would wait until sailing time in the hope that at the last minute some one might be prevented from using his precious ticket. With such an object at stake, Mr. Bloch waited patiently from eleven p. m. until three o'clock in the morning, when his faith was rewarded and he received two cherished tickets. What matter if they were "first class stecrage," they entitled him to a passage to America and who would grumble when there was such a beacon to beckon him on? Certainly not Mr. Bloch. After receiving the tickets at three o'clock, he literally flew back to his hotel, got his baggage and his cousin, with whom he was traveling, and was back at the wharf at a quarter past four (still a. m.). Precisely at half past four the vessel left her moorings and sailed for the "land of the free and the home of the brave."

Leopold Auer, with whom Mr. Bloch has been studying this summer, is marooned in Loschwitz with such of his pupils as are Russian. He is most courteously treated, but still is under police surveillance, and is not allowed to leave the country or write letters, which is, of course, to be expected.

Mr. Bloch, who has studied for many years with Auer and with Otto Sevcik, expects to concertize this year, his first appearance being at his own recital in Aeolian Hall, New York, which will occur the first week of November. He has been working on his new repertoire, which will include the difficult Paganini concerto, and his audiences may expect some real treats during this season.

In addition to his work in the concert field, Mr. Bloch has decided to teach a limited number of pupils at his studios, 46 West Ninety-fifth street, New York. As the number will of necessity be restricted, owing to his concert appearances, those who are anticipating the pleasure of studying under this able instructor's guidance should make their application as early as possible.

Walter Earnest and L. B. Cain "Snapped."

The accompanying picture was taken along the "stern and rockbound coast" of Maine, and shows Walter Earnest, the Pittsburgh tenor (right), and Llewellyn B. Cain, director of the Saco Valley Festival, on the seashore near Mr. Earnest's summer cottage, which is situated on Casco Bay. Mr. Earnest sang with great success at this festival, which is given each year at Bridgeton, Me., and has been re-engaged for next season.

WALTER EARNEST, THE PITTSBURGH TENOR, AND LLEWELLYN B. CAIN (ON LEFT), DIRECTOR OF SACO VALLEY FESTIVAL.
Taken on the shore of Casco Bay, near the summer cottage of Mr. Earnest, in Maine.

In addition to a most enjoyable vacation, Mr. Earnest has been coaching with Emil Mollenhauer, of Boston. He writes that this season promises to be an extremely busy one, judging from present indications.

Von Ende School of Music Has Opened.

On Monday, September 14, the Von Ende School of Music, New York, entered upon its fall term, with an enrollment at this early date surpassing all expectations.

Klibansky Artist-Pupils Sing.

At the second musicale given at the home of Mrs. Charles A. Hamilton, Ridgefield, Conn., September 16, the following artists participated: Jean Vincent Cooper, alto; Lalla Bright Cannon, soprano; and Chilion Roselle, pianist. Both singers are artist-pupils of Sergei Klibansky, and have unusually attractive voices and personalities. A large and representative audience was present, and fully appreciated the exceptionally good work of the occasion.

Following was the program:

Nacht und Träume.....Schubert
Er ist's.....Hugo Wolf
Traum durch die Dammerung.....Strauss
Mrs. J. V. Cooper.
Aria from La Suive.....Halevy
Lalla B. Cannon.
My Heart Is a Lute.....R. H. Woodmann
Inter Nos.....A. MacFayden
For a Dream's Sake.....A. W. Kramer
Mrs. J. V. Cooper.
A Spirit Flower.....Campbell-Tipton
Serenade.....LaForge
A Rose and a Dream.....Gilberte
Lalla B. Cannon.
Aria, Don Fatale.....Verdi
Mrs. J. V. Cooper.
Träume.....Wagner
Sylvelin.....Sinding
Lalla B. Cannon.
Duets—
Butterfly.....Puccini
Tales of Hoffmann.....Offenbach
Mrs. Cooper and Miss Cannon.

Success, Why?

Some clippings referring to a recent New York performance explain:

The feature of the performance of this graceful pastoral work, rich in lovely melody, was the singing of Mr. Why. He disclosed a bass voice of good quality and range, well schooled in the florid style of Handel. He sang with fluency and spirit and his delivery of the text was delightfully clear and skilfully adjusted to the musical phrases. His singing of the well known air, "O Ruddier Than the Cherry," evoked enthusiastic applause.—New York Globe.

The work is planned mostly for solo singers; they need not only a sound and efficient technic, but also a special understanding of and familiarity with Handel's style. These were shown in the work of T. Foster Why, basso.—New York Times.

To T. Foster Why fell the well known aria, "Ruddier Than the Cherry," which he sang with extraordinary flexibility and a superb resonance.—New York Evening Mail.

Mr. Why, as Polyphemus, was sonorous and effective, his "O Ruddier Than the Cherry" winning especial favor.—New York Evening World.

The chief honors of the performance of the Handel work went to Mr. Why, the Polyphemus.—New York American.

Roderick White's Position.

European critics have expressed surprise regarding Roderick White's ability to achieve such a high position in the world of music in so short a time. Mr. White has won his success through that indefinable little word "genius." Of a stock in which genius has been most prominent in many directions, it assumed the guise of violinistic skill in Roderick, of literature in Stewart Edward and of painting in T. Gilbert, his brothers.

Roderick White secured his technical proficiency from César Thompson and Leopold Auer. Possessing great aptitude for study and an abiding love for his instrument, he made such rapid progress that, even before his debut, his brilliant future was predicted in the European studios.

Owing to the war Mr. White has been compelled to cancel all his engagements and will remain in America. He had made no preparation for appearances in this country, but arrangements are being made for Mr. White to appear in the principal American music centers this season.

Oscar Seagle in New York.

Oscar Seagle arrived in New York on the steamship Baltic, September 18. He came through without incident and his departure from England was in no way hastened. During these stirring war times Mr. Seagle has remained quietly in his country home in Bramber, on the south coast of England, and has gone on as usual with his customary occupations of teaching, studying and rehearsing for his coming tour, and driving or walking about the country by way of recreation. His American tour begins almost immediately in the West and will continue until the late spring, as it did last season.

Arthur Alexander Returns from Paris.

Arthur Alexander, the tenor, who will tour America this season under the management of M. H. Hanson, reached New York last week after some rather exciting experiences in Paris, where he has been residing for some years. Alexander's knowledge of French and of Paris fitted him particularly well for the employment of driving for the Red Cross, a work for which he volunteered his services at the outbreak of the war. His glowing descriptions of the work of the Red Cross and of the American Hospital in Paris speak well for the splendid efficiency of our people over there.

Mr. Alexander will open his American tour at an early date. His success here is assured by his recent successes abroad, where the beauty of his voice, the high musicianly standard of his interpretations, and his splendid accompanying have won him universal recognition.

JERSEY CITY MUSICIANS RETURN.

Schubert Glee Club Elects Leader—Costume Recitalist Prepares Indian Songs—A Piano Recital.

Jersey City, N. J., September 17, 1914.

Practically all of our singers, pianists, organists, teachers, violinists, cellists and choir directors are home again, after restful vacations, spent at the seashore or in the mountains, and are recuperated and ready for the season's work. Prominent among them are James P. Dunn, Jessie M. Fenner, J. Belle Boltwood, Misses Earl, Mary L. Lockhart, Jane Hanks, Harriet Foster-Westcott, Malvina Herr, Buela Blauvelt, Mrs. D. H. Bender, Grace Bender, Roy K. Falconer and Moritz E. Schwarz.

NEW GLEE CLUB LEADER ELECTED.

Roy K. Falconer, organist and choir director of the First Presbyterian Church of this city, has been elected director of the Schubert Glee Club. The board of directors and the new conductor are formulating a very interesting plan of work for the season. The club will start rehearsals this week.

COSTUME RECITALS IN DEMAND.

Henrietta Foster-Westcott's costume recitals are much in demand and the singer has given a great deal of time and study to the selection and finish of a charming program. The American Indian songs by Troyer, Cadman and Lorena Beresford are admirably suited to Mrs. Westcott's sympathetic soprano voice. The "Zuni Tribal Ghost Dance" that closes these special programs is given by the singer with dramatic fervor and intensity.

PIANO CLASS HEARD IN RECITAL.

The piano pupils of Mary L. Lockhart, from Montchair and this city, were greeted by a large audience at their last recital. The program was one of unusual excellence. Assisting Miss Lockhart on the program were Jane Hanks, soprano, with Malvina Herr as accompanist, Ernest G. Russell, violinist, and Guy A. Ponsoni, cellist.

Special mention should be made of two young girls' playing; the Schumann A minor concerto, first movement, by Augusta Hoagland, and the D minor concerto, first movement, Rubinstein, by Helen Tichenor. The following is the program: "Evening Song" (Low), "The Bells" (Virgil), Mary McCabe; quartet, "Moment Musical" (Schubert), Edna Jeanne, Liela Abernethy, Jessie Russell, Dorothy Van Pelt; "Danse des Fèes" (Virgil), Liela Abernethy; duo, "May Dance" (Virgil), Elizabeth Edwards, Miss Lockhart; "May Morning" (Huss), Jessie Russell; theme and variation (Schmoll), gavotte (Reinecke), Robert Lockhart; "L'Hirondelle" (Burgmüller), Edna Jeanne; "Song Without Words" (Klein), Ruth Abernethy; "Lullaby" (Schumann), "Confidence" (Mendelssohn), May Earnshaw; "Flattery" (Ravina), George Earnshaw; "Scarf Dance" (Chaminade), Dorothy Van Pelt; duo, "L'Avalanche" (Heller), "Souvenir de Varsovie" (Henselt), Lillian Luhrman, Miss Lockhart; crescendo (Lassen), Lillian Luhrman; "Vissi d'Arte, Vissi d'Amore," "Tosca" (Puccini), "Die Mainacht" (Brahms), Jane Hanks; "Album Leaf" (Douillet), "Love Song" (Heller), Helen Jeanne; concerto, G minor, first movement (Mendelssohn), Clara Ward, Mr. Russell (violin), Mr. Ponzoni (cello), Miss Lockhart (second piano); "Shadow Dance" (MacDowell), "To a Water Lily" (MacDowell), "Were I a Bird" (Henselt), Marjory Lockhart; concerto, A minor, first movement (Schumann), Augusta Hoagland, Mr. Russell (violin), Mr. Ponzoni (cello), Miss Lockhart, second piano; "Un bel di vendremo" (Puccini), Jane Hanks; concerto, D minor, first movement (Rubinstein), Helen Tichenor, Mr. Russell (violin), Mr. Ponzoni (cello), Miss Lockhart, second piano; sextet, "Danse Macabre" (Saint-Saëns), Mr. Russell (violin), Mr. Ponzoni (cello), Miss Lockhart, Mr. Lasslett, Mrs. Stivers, Miss Tichenor.

Jane Hanks, one of Jersey City's youngest singers, has been endowed by nature with a fine soprano voice of dramatic and sympathetic qualities.

Malvina Herr is also not a stranger to audiences in this community. She was at one time a pupil of Gustave Becker, and later studied at the Loeb Institute of Musical Art. She is a favorite pianist for clubs and private recitals.

For information concerning the MUSICAL COURIER in Jersey City, address, JESSIE BRUCE LOCKHART, 17 Brinckerhoff Street.

May Marshall Cobb's Engagements.

May Marshall Cobb, soprano, of Pittsburgh (Pa.) sang at the last Wooster, Ohio, University commencement concert. Mr. Lytle, in a personal letter to Mrs. Cobb, following this appearance, congratulated her upon her success, saying that she made the distinct "hit" of the evening. Two Wooster papers expressed themselves as follows:

Mrs. Cobb sang several solos. She has a wonderful voice and the audience was much pleased with her work.—Wooster Daily Republican.

Mrs. Cobb's delightful voice and charming appearance captivated the audience at the start, her solos being applauded again and again.—Wooster Voice.

Following this engagement at Wooster, Mrs. Cobb enjoyed a well earned vacation at Nantucket, Mass., returning to Johnstown, Pa., where she was soloist at the Teachers' Institute on August 24, 25 and 26. Such was her success that she received a request to return another year.

Mrs. Cobb writes that she is booked up until January, 1915, with engagements steadily coming in.

Maine Festival Artists.

As already announced in these columns, those who will appear at the Maine music festivals, which are to be held in Bangor, October 1, 2 and 3, and in Portland, October 5, 6 and 7, include Cordelia Lee, Florence Otis, Artha Williston, Nina Morgana, Jean Cooper, Helena Tardivel, Salvatore Giordano, Millo Picco, Carl Morris, Cuyler Black and Ernest J. Hill. Great was the disappointment when it was understood that Emma Eames, the soprano, and Emilio de Gogorza, the baritone, would be unable to reach America in time to participate at this festival. They are now in Italy, according to the recent letters received by officials of the festival. It is understood that Marcella Craft, who returned only recently from Germany, will take the place of Mme. Eames, and this announcement should allay somewhat the disappointment caused by the probable non-appearance of the artist.

William Rogers Chapman is the director of the Maine music festivals.

Lusitania Brings Musical Celebrities.

On the steamship Lusitania, which arrived in New York last Friday, September 18, there were a number of American musical celebrities, among them Dr. William C. Carl, James Sauvage, Harry Rowe Shelley, Harold Land, the young baritone, and Louis Blumenberg. Jeanne Jomelli also returned on the Lusitania.

At the concert which took place on board, and which was gotten up by Mme. Jomelli, about $500 was collected, part of which has been devoted to the Belgian sufferers and a part to the seaman's fund. Those who took part in the concert besides Mme. Jomelli were Dr. William C. Carl, Mr. Sauvage and Mr. Land.

Virgils Will Open Southern School.

Mr. and Mrs. Virgil, of the Virgil School of Music, New York, in view of the impossibility of reopening their school in Berlin this season, have decided to spend the winter months in St. Petersburg, Fla., where they will open a school, October 15. They will leave New York, September 22, and have arranged to spend a few days in Jacksonville and St. Augustine, giving lectures and special lessons before going on to St. Petersburg.

Dudley Buck Studios Open.

Monday, September 21, marked the opening of the vocal studios of Dudley Buck, the vocal instructor, whose address is Aeolian Hall, New York. All applications should be made to his secretary, Elsie T. Cowen, by those who desire to place themselves under the guidance of this teacher for the purpose of perfecting themselves in the art of singing.

Miss Galloway with Music League.

Katherine Galloway, soprano, who has just returned to New York, after having filled successfully a three weeks' engagement in Philadelphia, announces that she will be under the management of the Music League of America for this season.

Alberto Bimboni at Hammerstein's.

Alberto Bimboni has been engaged to play the organ at Hammerstein's new Lexington Opera House, New York.

CENTURY OPERA OPENING.

"Romeo and Juliet" and "Carmen" Are the First Week's Offering—Excellent Casts and Ensemble.

As already announced in these columns, the Century Opera House, New York, opened on Monday evening, September 14, with a brilliant rendition of Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet." With some changes the cast was the same as that with which this opera was given last season, Lois Ewell being the Juliet and Orville Harrold the Romeo. Both of these artists were in good voice and their interpretation was evidently much enjoyed. Alfred Kaufman, who played the part of Friar Laurence last season, was cast in the role of Capulet and was much better suited to this part. He made a dignified and hospitable nobleman and sang the part well. The role of Friar Laurence was taken by Henry Weldon, a new member of the Century Opera Company, and upon this excellent artist the interest of the evening was centered. His appearance and manner, as well as his interpretation of the role, were entirely suited to the character portrayed. After the first scene in which he appeared, he was greeted by a veritable ovation, and the audience would not be satisfied until he had appeared alone, when he was loudly cheered.

The role of Mercutio was again taken, as it was last season, by Thomas Chalmers, whose splendid stage presence and dignified acting were altogether impressive, and whose singing of the part was of a very high order. Mr. Chalmers is an artist of genuine worth. George Everett, who was cast in the role of Gregorio, was particularly noticeable for his unusually effective enunciation, and his acting was strikingly intelligent. Elizabeth Campbell made an attractive Stephano and sang with taste. Hardy Williamson gave a dignified interpretation of Tybalt.

Agide Jacchia conducted excellently, and Jacques Coini, the new artistic director, should be congratulated warmly upon the excellent stage direction. The opera was largely attended and the general excellence of this performance promises well for this season.

On Tuesday evening, at the same house, "Carmen" was given, it being the plan this season to give two operas each week on alternate nights. Each of these operas will run two weeks and they will overlap, so that a new opera will be presented every Tuesday evening, as last season. This arrangement dispenses with the change of cast that was one of the objectionable features from various standpoints of last season.

GEORGE EVERETT.

"Carmen" was also given, with the exception of slight changes, with the same cast which was heard in it last season, Kathleen Howard being the Carmen, Morgan Kingston the Don Jose, and Louis Kreidler the Escamillo. These three artists are so excellent, both vocally and histrionically, that it is difficult to find any criticism to make on their work in this performance.

Kathleen Howard has been criticised for the originality of her interpretation of Carmen, but such criticism is absolutely unjust; her Carmen is certainly not orthodox, but it is a strong and moving interpretation and must convince as being replete with realism and with artistic verity. Some critics have said that it does not coincide with Bizet's conception of the role; but it is said that the Spaniards think there is very little of Bizet's opera which coincides with

ALBERTINA RASCH,
Prima Ballerina, Century Opera Company.

the Spanish spirit. Miss Howard has done much to introduce the genuine spirit of the Spanish cigarette girl into this role, and hers is a strong and impassioned interpretation.

Morgan Kingston sang Don Jose on Tuesday evening with his accustomed beauty of tone and scored a genuine success with the large audience present.

Louis Kreidler made Escamillo a strong and virile personage, and both his appearance and his manner are thoroughly Spanish, and his interpretation is filled with the passion which the role demands. He received much applause, and his "Toreador Song" had to be repeated at every performance. Mr. Kreidler presents a rare combination of truly fine vocal art and great histrionic ability, and he possesses, in addition to these, a wonderfully magnetic personality which never fails to arouse genuine enthusiasm.

KATHLEEN HOWARD AS CARMEN.

The excellent enunciation of George Everett was again noticeable in the role of the Brigadier. Micaela was done by Myrna Sharlow in an attractive and sympathetic manner, and her singing of the part was excellent.

The chorus, ballet and the orchestra in this opera were as excellent as they were on the opening night, and Albertina Rasch was particularly attractive and showed her art to be of a very high order, her toe dancing being marvelous in its accuracy and beauty.

The work was conducted by Josiah Zuro in a musicianly manner, this conductor proving himself to be an artist of fine attainments.

MILTON ABORN. SARGENT ABORN,
Directors of the Century Opera Company, New York.

1,000 VOICES WANTED FOR NEWARK FESTIVAL CHORUS

Five Hundred Clergymen of Newark and Suburbs Have Been Asked to Assist in Organization of Gigantic Chorus—Sunday School Superintendents, Public School Teachers, and Store and Factory Owners Lend Their Aid—Newark Symphony Orchestra to Begin Rehearsals—More Applicants for Musicians' Club—Music Notes.

Newark, N. J., September 21, 1914.

Last week five hundred clergymen of Newark, the Oranges, Glen Ridge, Bloomfield, Montclair, Irvington, Arlington, East Newark, Elizabeth, Verona and other suburbs, were asked to invite their congregations and Sunday schools to assist the Newark Music Festival Association in the organization of the gigantic chorus of one thousand voices, which is now being formed. Choral societies, choir leaders, glee clubs, musical organizations of various kinds, as well as all amateur and professional singers, have been urged to join. The enrollment for the first week has been a large one, and this is especially encouraging, inasmuch as very little advertising has been attempted so far.

The owners of factories, stores, mills, etc., employing a large number of persons, are to be asked to post in prominent places in their establishments the printed notices and placards which are now ready for distribution. Of those who have been approached so far, every one has willingly consented to assist the association, and many have personally urged their employees to join the chorus.

Any one with a fair voice and an ability to read music is invited to join. Each member of the chorus will be asked to pay the small sum of ten cents at each rehearsal in order to help pay the expenses of the rehearsal hall, music, etc.

As announced exclusively in last week's issue of the MUSICAL COURIER, the date of the coming festival has been permanently decided upon for May 4, 5 and 6. "Wagner Night" will open the festival, "Opera Night" will follow, and "Concert Night" will conclude the programs. In addition to the chorus of one thousand, there will be an orchestra of one hundred musicians and six or seven of the world's most noted artists will be the soloists.

An announcement regarding the competition for a local soloist will be made public at an early date.

C. Mortimer Wiske, director of the Newark Festival, will be at the offices of the association every Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, from 10 a. m. until 10 p. m., to receive applications and to give such information as may be desired of him.

The organization committee of the Newark Music Festival Association, of which Alfred L. Dennis is the temporary secretary, is composed of the following members: Forest F. Dryden, James S. Higbie, Hon. Franklin Murphy, Mrs. Spaulding Frazer, Wallace M. Scudder, Hon. Frederick Frelinghuysen, Franklin Conklin, Albert H. Atha, Peter Campbell, Mrs. Jay Ten Eyck, Florence D. Murphy, Rev. Lyman Whitney Allen, Charles Grant Shaffer, General Edwin M. Hine, Louise Westwood, Alfred L. Dennis, C. W. Feigenspan, Major William Bryant, Louis Plaut, Louis Bamberger, Edwin Wickenhoeffer, Frank Mindnich, Alexander Berne, George Kuhn, Daniel E. Hervey, Edward Flannagan, Isabella Sims and Thornton W. Allen.

NEWARK SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA REHEARSALS.

The Newark Symphony Orchestra, which was established last season under the able leadership of Louis Ehrke, will begin rehearsals next Monday, September 28. Several new members have been added to the orchestra, and the list of guarantors has been greatly increased. Mr. Ehrke anticipates a very successful season.

BUSY SEASON FOR NEWARK MUSICIANS' CLUB.

This evening, September 23, the executive committee of the Newark Musicians' Club, will meet in the new studios of Alexander Berne, on Broad street, for the election of new members. Nearly thirty new applications have been received during the summer, and numerous others are expected before the meeting is held. It is believed, however, that a limit will have to be made on the number of both active and associate membership because of the large number of musicians and music lovers who desire to join.

The regular meeting of the club will be held on the second Wednesday in October. A more detailed announcement of this meeting will be published in next week's issue of the MUSICAL COURIER.

MUSIC NOTES.

James Sauvage, the baritone and vocal teacher, of 43 Lincoln Park, has returned from Europe.

The band of the Hamburg-American steamer Vaterland gave two concerts, Sunday afternoon and evening, September 20, in the Vailsburg Amusement Park, for the benefit of the wounded soldiers of Germany and Austria, and the families of the killed, under the auspices of the United Singers of Newark, who sang a number of stirring songs. August Muehe was the conductor.

The fifty-fifth anniversary of the Arion Singing Society was celebrated at Krueger Auditorium, on Thursday evening, September 17, by two hundred members, their families and friends.

The program started with an introductory speech by Chairman William F. Kirst, followed by a review of the history of the society and words of welcome by President Henry Ahl. Gertrude Pfaendler sang various selections, including a composition by the director of the society, Richard Trunk, who has been detained in Germany. Bob Zuber told stories, Charles Mertens gave violin selections, and Margretta Hausman rendered vocal solos. A collation and dancing followed.

Joseph Strissof, violinist in the Century Opera Company Orchestra, has opened a studio in Newark at 59 Stratford place.

Alma Holm, one of the teachers of the Russell method, gave her farewell recital in Newark last week. She has accepted a position in a well known Southern school as the head of the vocal department. A full announcement of this recital will appear in next week's issue of the MUSICAL COURIER.

T. W. A.

MORGAN KINGSTON.
(With Century Opera.)

LOUIS KREIDLER AS ESCAMILLO IN "CARMEN."
(With Century Opera.)

THIS SEASON IN BROOKLYN.

List of Artists Who Will Appear Under the Auspices of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences During 1914-15.

Yvonne de Tréville, colorature soprano, will give a costume recital in the Music Hall, Brooklyn Academy of Music, on Wednesday evening, November 4. The program will be divided into three parts: Part I, eighteenth century, in the costume of the period, as Mlle. de Maupin; Part II, the nineteenth century, as Jenny Lind, and Part III, the twentieth century.

The New York Vocal Quartet—Laura Louise Combs, soprano; Flora Hardie, contralto; Frank Ormsby, tenor; Frederick Martin, bass, with Edith Evans, accompanist—will give a concert in the Music Hall on Thursday evening, November 12.

Ernestine Schumann-Heink, who has in recent years opened the Brooklyn Institute musical season, will give her thirteenth annual song recital under Institute auspices in the Opera House on Thursday evening, November 19.

Julia Culp, soprano, will give a recital on Thursday evening, January 7. A joint song recital by Emilio de Gogorza, baritone, and assisting artist to be announced will be given in the Opera House on Thursday evening, February 4.

The Brooklyn Oratorio Society, Walter Henry Hall, conductor, is expected to give "The Messiah" on a date to be selected during the Christmas holidays.

Five Friday evening Philharmonic concerts will be given be given in the Opera Houseon Saturday afternoons at 3 ductor. The dates are November 6, December 4, January 8, February 19 and March 19. Soloists are scheduled for the first three concerts only—Pasquale Amato, baritone; Harold Bauer, pianist, and Fritz Kreisler, violinist.

The regular series of five Young People's concerts will be given in the Opera House on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The dates and assisting artists are: October 24, Efrem Zimbalist, violinist; November 14, Ferruccio Busoni, pianist; December 12, Mme. Schumann-Heink, contralto; January 30, Carl Flesch, violinist; February 13, Josef Hofmann.

Eight chamber music concerts will be given, three by the Flonzaley Quartet on Sunday afternoons at 3.30 o'clock, November 29, January 24 and March 14; four by the Philharmonic Trio on Friday evenings, November 20, December 18, January 29 and February 26; one by the Tollefsen Trio on Friday evening, December 11.

Fritz Kreisler is booked for a special violin recital in the Opera House on Thursday evening, January 28. A special recital of Indian legends, songs and ceremonies by Bee Mayes (Pe-Ahm-E-Squeet, "Floating Cloud"), in costume, in the Music Hall, on Friday evening, November 27, and Saturday afternoon, November 28. The program at each of these recitals will be different, the Saturday matinee program being especially for children. Five lecture recitals illustrating the programs to be played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on Thursday evenings preceding the concerts by Louis C. Elson, Alfred de Voto, Daniel Gregory Mason and Carl Fiqué.

Six lecture recitals by Carl Fiqué on "The Works of Richard Strauss," on Tuesday evenings, beginning September 29, omitting October 27.

Six piano and violin recitals on "Classical and Modern Violin Sonatas," by Daniel Gregory Mason and Edouard Dethier, on Monday evenings, beginning November 16. The third series of lecture recitals on "The Beethoven Sonatas" (Sonatas XXV to XXXI), by Thomas Whitney Surette and Elfriede Stoffregen, in the Music Hall, on Monday evenings, beginning January 4.

Three descriptive piano recitals by Antoinette Szumowska in the Music Hall on Monday evenings, beginning February 15.

Three lecture recitals on "The Renaissance of English Song," by A. Foxton Ferguson, of London, in the Music Hall, on Monday evenings, beginning April 12.

Special courses of instruction will include a thirty weeks' course by Lotta van Buren on "The Compositions of Richard Wagner."

Wilbur A. Luyster will conduct "sight singing classes," a beginners' class, on Tuesday evenings, meeting at the Academy of Music; a semi-advanced and advanced class, meeting at the Art Building; a course in sight singing and choral work, under Carl G. Schmidt, at the Academy of Music, on Monday evenings; a class for instruction in orchestral playing, under Arnold Volpe, will meet at the Art Building on Saturday evenings.

Ten organ recitals will be given on Sunday afternoons, five by Scott Wheeler, of New York, and five by G. Waring Stebbins, of Brooklyn.

Stojowski Heard From.

Sigismond Stojowski, the Polish pianist-composer, was at the American Consulate in Geneva, Switzerland, recently, arranging for his return to New York to resume his duties at the Von Ende School of Music.

THE PEDAGOGIC SEASON REOPENS IN CHICAGO.

Hints for the Grand Opera Management—General News Items.

Chicago, Ill., September 19, 1914.

The fall term at the schools and private studios has brought to Chicago a large army of music students and from reports at hand this office is now in a position to predict that the season 1914-15 will be one of the best on record for local schools, teachers and musicians of all classes. It might be stated here that the fall season may be somewhat belated, yet at the present time the registration at schools and private studios demonstrates that this season already is in advance of the previous one.

Worth Considering.

The Chicago Grand Opera Company might have secured enough singers to appear in French, German, Italian and English operas, and would have had no trouble about getting together the chorus. As regards the chorus, the schools this year will have more students than heretofore, and it should be remembered that in the past such schools as the Chicago Musical College, American Conservatory, Bush Conservatory, Drake School, Hinshaw Conservatory, the Arcangeli Opera School, the Devries studios, have given operatic performances with students and very large students' choruses have been heard at the Auditorium, for instance, or at the Studebaker Theatre in productions of "Faust," "Carmen," "Romeo and Juliet," "Martha," "Bohemian Girl," "Samson and Delilah," "Freischutz," "Rigoletto," etc. On the other hand, many members of such clubs as the Apollo, Mendelssohn, Madrigal, Irish Choral Society, Marshall Field Choral Society, Columbia School Chorus and many other such institutions might have been broached on the subject of enlisting part of their forces to join the Chicago Opera chorus. A better chorus, younger in appearance, better drilled, more musicianly and better voiced could have been formed by the Chicago Opera Company, and made the basis of an American company, giving operas in the vernacular with a chorus born and raised in this country. The innovation surely would have proved a success and it is a pity that the board of directors did not take the opportunity to show the musical world that where there is a will there is a way and where foreign artists cannot appear, American artists are at hand to fill the vacancies acceptably. It may not be too late even now for the management to take a hint from this suggestion, and if desirable, this office will submit several plans free of charge to the backers of the Chicago Opera Company for the opening on schedule time of the opera season of 1914-15.

Samuel B. Garton with Fisk Teachers' Agency.

Samuel B. Garton, formerly manager of the Chicago Choir Bureau, has been appointed manager of the music department of the Fisk Teachers' Agency. Mr. Garton already has started in his new position, and musicians desirous of consulting with him can find him at 28E. Jackson Boulevard. The Fisk Teachers' Agency may well be proud of being able to secure the services of Mr. Garton, who will undoubtedly prove to be the best manager of the music department the Fisk Teachers' Agency has had in Chicago in many years. His promotion to the managerial post should develop a new aspect to the music department of that agency.

Edward Collins Returns to Chicago.

Edward Collins, the American pianist who toured this country some two years ago as assisting artist with Mme. Schumann-Heink, returned to this city last week from Europe in company with Mme. Schumann-Heink and Katharine Hoffmann, the contralto's well known accompanist. Mr. Collins, who last year joined the Century Opera of New York as assistant conductor, informed this office that in all probability he would make Chicago his home again, and that this season will be devoted to teaching as well as concertizing. Mr. Collins will be located in the Fine Arts building.

Apollo Club's Special Performance.

The Apollo Musical Club of three hundred singers will give a special performance of Elgar's "Caractacus" on Sunday afternoon, October 18, at the Auditorium Theatre. This work was given three years ago by the Apollos and was received with great favor, hence this repetition. Four well known artists will take the solo roles and assist in this performance.

Walter Spry School Interpretation Classes.

The Walter Spry Music School announces that the interpretation classes will be resumed this week and will take place every Wednesday at noon. The first program will be given by James Whittaker, a new member of the faculty and one of America's well known pianists. The program will be:

English suite in A minor.....Bach
Sonata in E major.....Beethoven
Etude in E major.....Czerny
Etude in B flat major.....Cramer
Etude in A flat major.....Heller
Etude in F major.....Ruthard
Etude in C major, op. 10, No. 7.....Chopin

Mr. Spry will give the program September 23, playing the following numbers:

Prelude and fugue in G major (from The Well Tempered Clavichord).....Bach
Transcription-andante (from Surprise Symphony)..Haydn-Saint-Saëns
Sonata in A flat, op. 26.....Beethoven

American Conservatory of Music.

The graduates of the department of public school music of the American Conservatory have secured positions this year as follows: Helen Lee Bidwell, teacher of public school music, Mt. Pleasant, Utah; Allys Field Boyles, supervisor of music, Coffeyville, Kan.; Ruth Clapp, supervisor of music, Urbana, Ill.; Edith Geiger, supervisor of music, Belle Plaine, Ia.; Ebba Goranson, teacher of public school music, State Normal School, Athens, Ga.; Beryl Marie Hawley, teacher of voice, Beaver Dam, Wis.; Elaine Haynes, supervisor of music, Spencer, Ind.; Mabel Holtam, teacher of public school music, Starkwater, N. Dak.; Gertrude Murphy, supervisor of music, Clearfield, Ia.; Adelia Bender, supervisor of music, Almogordo, N. M.; Augusta Sewell, supervisor of music, Monticello, Ill.; Carric Shaw, supervisor of music, New London, Wis.; Nina Stephens, supervisor of music, Henryetta, Okla.; Gertrude Wood, supervisor of music, Springfield, Mo.; Earl Baker, assistant supervisor of music, Minneapolis, Minn.; George Damson, director of public school music, State Normal School, Gunnison, Col.; Harriet Elliott, supervisor of music, Fulton, Ill.; Elizabeth E. Peterson, supervisor of music, Moline, Ill.; Grace Ryan, supervisor of music, Paoli, Ind.; Alma Marie de Young, supervisor of music, Owosso, Mich.: Mae Meyer, supervisor of music, Pentwater, Mich.

President Hattstaedt has outlined a series of Saturday afternoon recitals for this season, which will, it is promised, eclipse even the standard of those of the preceding year. These recitals have become an important factor in the educational scheme of the conservatory and are attended by capacity houses.

Walton Pyre, the newly engaged director of the School of Expression, will have charge of the first recital, Saturday, October 3, and will give a program of select readings which will undoubtedly be of a high class, judging from Mr. Pyre's reputation as a reader and actor.

Mme. Ragna Linne has returned from her European vacation and resumed her work at the conservatory.

Lucy D. Hall will return shortly from Germany, to organize her classes in the Dalcroze Eurhythmics at the conservatory.

Adolf Weidig began his professional duties after a protracted stay in California.

Clarence Loomis has returned after being marooned three weeks in Zurich, Switzerland, and has resumed his position as teacher of piano at the American Conservatory of Music.

Henriette Weber Back from Success in Chautauqua.

Henriette Weber, the lecturer, who has made a name for herself with her opera talks and piano lecture-recitals, in which she has for associate Anne Irene Larkin, has just returned from the East, where she created a sensation with her opera talks. Upon her return Miss Weber was interviewed by a representative of the Musical Courier, who was informed that already the Larkin-Weber recitals are booked in all the leading cities of the East and Central West.

"The only trouble," said Miss Weber, "is that I find we are getting so many engagements, and it is impossible to

FRANCES INGRAM
Management: SHAW & TUCKER Orchestra Building, Chicago

GEORGE SHEFFIELD, Tenor
Management Concert Direction M. H. HANSON,
437 Fifth Ave., New York.
Private address: 4654 Beacon St., Chicago, Ill.

GLENN DILLARD GUNN
PIANIST
421-424 Fine Arts Building - - Chicago, Ill.

LEON SAMETINI
Holland's Greatest VIOLINIST
Management ALMA VOEDISCH
3941 Rokeby Street, Chicago

Lucille STEVENSON SOPRANO
Address: 4438 Berkeley Avenue, Chicago
Telephone, Oakland 1570

LECTURES, OPERA TALKS, AND PIANO LECTURE RECITALS
By
HENRIETTE WEBER
Also the Larkin-Weber Recitals
THE LARKIN-WEBER RECITALS
Are Creating a SENSATION
Engagements booked in all leading cities
Address MISS H. WEBER, Auditorium Building, Chicago, Ill.
or Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway : New York

MARION GREEN
BASSO CANTANTE
Auditorium Building, Chicago
Home Phone: Ravenswood 5774 Studio Phone: Harrison 4868

THOMAS N. MAC BURNEY
BARITONE
Voice Production Song Recitals
Three years assistant to Frank King Clark
Suite 609 Fine Arts Building, Chicago, Ill.
Phone Harrison 6889

HERMAN DEVRIES
Formerly Baritone with the Metropolitan Opera House, New York; Covent Garden, London; Grand Opera and Opera Comique, Paris; Theatre Royal de la Monnare, Brussels, Etc.
VOCAL TEACHER
MRS. HERMAN DEVRIES
ASSOCIATE VOCAL INSTRUCTOR
Studios: 518-528 Fine Arts Building - - - Chicago, Ill.

BUSH TEMPLE CONSERVATORY
N. Clark St. and Chicago Avenue, Chicago
Kenneth M. Bradley, President

SUMMER SESSION
BEGINNING JUNE 22
Special Courses in MUSIC, Expression, Languages, Public School Music, Dramatic Art
Conducted by an unsurpassed faculty, including:
Mme. Julie Rive-King — Herold von Mickwitz — Mme. Justine Wegener
Guy Herbert Woodard — Frank S. Webster — Edgar A. Nelson
Grace Stewart Potter — Eleanor Smith — Edward Ovorek
Mae Julie Riley — Ernest O. Todd — Adelaide G. Lewis
The management announces the exclusive teaching engagement of the world's most famous baritone: CHARLES W. CLARK
Students wishing private lessons with any of the above named Artists should make application in advance.
The Bush Temple Conservatory is the only music school in Chicago which has its own Dormitory.
Reservation of rooms must be made in advance.
For Catalog and Special Literature Address: Edward H. Schwenker, Sec'y

ivide ourselves, so that on the same evening we could ppear in New York and Chicago, or in Detroit and oston, or Philadelphia and Minneapolis. Under such nditions we could accept all the offers we are receiving, it under present rulings, we being after all only human, ave to content ourselves with appearing only seven times weck and thus filling a record breaking season."

Miss Weber looked the picture of health and showed iat work is in itself one of the best recreations.

LEON SAMETINI'S RETURN FROM EUROPE.

Leon Sametini, who was honored recently in Paris with decoration of the Bien Public bestowed upon him by ic French Government, called at this office and informed ne of the representatives of the MUSICAL COURIER that c was glad to be back in Chicago. Mr. Sametini added iat his violin class at the Chicago Musical College this ear is already much larger than that of the previous year, id he spoke most enthusiastically about his material. Above all he was delighted with Claudia Page, who has ist returned from Europe, where she studied under Leopold Auer.

Mr. Sametini's return from Europe was somewhat different from others whose interviews have appeared in the MUSICAL COURIER. Mr. Sametini and his wife, though hey have reasons to be uneasy, as Mrs. Sametini's rother-in-law is in the civic guard in France, informed his office that his return on the steamship Tunisian was ery enjoyable, and that he returned to this country with ll his trunks and experienced a very pleasant vacation.

Minneapolis School of Music.

The fall term of the Minneapolis School of Music has ust opened and classes are now organizing in all departnents. Many of the former students have returned to heir studies and large numbers are registering from the city and all parts of the Northwest, which gives promise of a very busy year.

The vocal department is headed by William H. Pontius. Mrs. G. W. Critten and Stella Spears remain with he school and Esther Jones Guyer has been added.

The piano department is represented by Giuseppe Fabrini, Harrison Wall Johnson, Oda Birkenhauer, Signa C. Olsen, George Riecks, Mrs. Herbert Pendleton, Margaret Hicks, Louise Harrison Adams, Stella Spears, Alma Ekstrom, Helen Carpenter and Lottie Saby.

Karl Scheurer, of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, will be in charge of the violin department, with Jean Koch and Ebba Sundstrom as assistants.

The directors have arranged for faculty recitals to be given in the school recital hall every Saturday morning at eleven o'clock, which are free to all pupils as well as the general public. The first recital was given by Margaret Hicks, pianist, Saturday morning, September 12, who gave an exceptionally interesting program in a brilliant manner. She was assisted by Dr. H. J. Meis, tenor, of Sioux City, pupil of William H. Pontius. Dr. Meis is well known as a concert singer, and his fine tenor voice, which is brilliant and resonant, is sure to make him known throughout the musical world.

All the regular courses in the department of oratory and dramatic art begin this week. The registration in the day school is the largest in the history of the school. The regular evening dramatic classes begin Monday evening, September 14.

Charles M. Holt, director of the Department of Oratory and Dramatic Art, has just returned from the East, where he spent some time looking up plays and other dramatic material for use with classes and the dramatic club this year. Mr. Holt's regular rehearsals with the school stock company begin this week. The company will be made up largely of new people this year, as George Duthie, Fred Congdon, Marie Gale and Edna Hills all have professional engagements.

Dostal Again Creates Sensation.

In an attractive, little pamphlet, issued by R. E. Johnston, the New York manager, among many other flattering press tributes, gained abroad by the artist in question, one sentence toward the bottom of the inside cover page reads thus: "Mr. Dostal, the Bohemian tenor, will concertize in the United States and in Canada during the seasons of 1914-15-16, and the public may prepare itself for a new sensation."

If the writer is not mistaken, this circular was published about two months ago, and it is a fact that in this brief space of time the tenor has filled over twenty important concert engagements, and if press criticisms and the general comment of the public can be depended upon, his every appearance has created a sensation.

On the evening of September 11, the great arena at Toronto, Canada, was filled to overflowing with Canada's representative people, among whom were the Grand Duke and Duchess of Connaught. A concert, conducted by the American Aid Society for the benefit of the Canadian Red Cross Society, was the occasion. Dostal's share of th honors came into prominence early on the program, wh he sang several of Canada's national airs and aroused th audience to a roar of applause. The tenor's lyric v with its wide range and appealing quality, produced effect and his hearers waxed more enthusiastic with each of his successive appearances throughout the evening. In the aria "Una Furtiva Lagrima," from "Elisire d'Amori," the best efforts of the singer seemed to have been achieved. Encores had to be given after every number.

Dostal posssses rare vocal qualities, combined with true musicianship and a personality worthy of his vocal gifts. His American career is without question already assured.

DAVID BISPHAM IN SOME OF HIS FAMOUS OPERATIC ROLES.

Bispham's Sound Logic.

It has been frequently asked how is it that David Bispham has created such a following in America that he has been able to remain here season after season without the supposed necessity of absenting himself occasionally in Europe for a year.

When approached upon this subject, the eminent baritone said: "Eliminating the possibility that I may have something which the people want and appreciate, which may be regarded as the first reason why an American artist is able to remain in his own country, I believe in applying sane business methods to the conduct of any career. I attempt to view what I have for sale in the same way that a merchant regards his goods, and I watch what the others offer so that every one shall not be traveling along the same path. I have never intended to use the stand I have taken for English song and pure speech as a so called 'business asset,' yet it has created a widespread interest, and in the last analysis it has been the best advertising any artist could have employed. This is on account of its educational and patriotic worth, and because it is the thing which should be fostered in an English speaking country."

When asked directly about advertising, Mr. Bispham said:

"I think that advertising is an art just as much as is singing or acting or anything else that we honor with that name. To interest the entire public in what a person has to offer for the public's own benefit or pleasure is surely worth consideration. I do not wish to be misunderstood, I do not mean blatant misstatements and sensational personal matters. I think that these things have made modest people dislike the 'advertising' side of their work, but a dignified presentation of a subject through proper medium should not be objectionable to any one."

One of Mr. Bispham's latest devices has been the employment of miniature photo stamps which are affixed to all literature and letters that go out concerning him. He has a wonderful series of character photographs from which to make reproductions, as he has appeared in nearly all the great baritone roles at the Metropolitan Opera House, in London and in Germany, and he has costumed some of his famous songs such as "Danny Deever," "Uncle Rome" and others for special representation. David Bispham's Alberich, Beckmesser and Kurwenal will ever remain in the memory of opera goers who were devotees of the Metropolitan in the days of the De Reszkes, Plançon, Nordica, Melba, Calvé and Schumann-Heink, and Mr. Bispham's career is one of the most brilliant among the wonderful galaxy of artists who have ever appeared on that time honored stage.

Alice Preston Sings in Newport.

On Friday, September 11, Alice Preston and Francis Rogers gave a song recital before a large and enthusiastic audience in Newport, R. I., at which the artists received much deserved applause. The following program was rendered:

Cattle Song ..... Old French
L'Amour de Moi ..... Old French
Mandoline ..... Debussy
Since Last We Met ..... Rubinstein
Mr. Rogers.

Avril ..... Paulin
Sandmännchen ..... Brahms
Ein Traum ..... Grieg
Miss Preston.

Fantasia in C minor ..... Bach
Mrs. Eustis.

North American Indian Song ..... Cadman
In a Garden ..... Hawley
Sylvelin ..... Sinding
Border Ballad (Scott) ..... Cowen
Mr. Rogers.

Lilacs ..... Marshall Kernochan
The Sleep that Flits o'er Baby's Eyes ..... Carpenter
Psyche ..... Paladilhe
Si tu le veux ..... Koechlin
Miss Preston.

Grivette ..... Gretry
La ci darem ..... Mozart
Miss Preston and Mr. Rogers.

Miss Preston will resume teaching at her studio, 30 East Thirty-fourth srteet, New York, November 1. Judging from the large number of applications thus far received, Miss Preston has every reason to expect a successful season.

Photo by Dover Street Studios, London.
ROBERT MAITLAND,
Bass-baritone.

signs of appreciating what is being offered them. The higher priced seats on the floor are still only indifferently filled, but there was very little room left in the two big balconies last evening.

And opera in English does flourish here as an institution, for be it recorded that the well known Carl Rosa Company began its I-don't-know-how-manyth season on last Monday evening also, presenting the "Tales of Hoffmann" at the Coronet. And when I arrived here, in the beginning of August, the Moody-Manners Company was playing at another suburban theatre.

SALVATION MUSIC.

There are all other varieties of music in London, too. Last Sunday evening I chanced to pass through Camberwell and heard a first rate Salvation Army band. There were over twenty men and I noticed not the slightest "circusy" effect. It was all brass instruments, and while the solo cornet, who had to play all the running passages (which usually fall to the lot of the clarinets), occasionally slipped a cog in his fingering in a most ingenious fashion, the alto, tenor and bass sections were excellent, producing a full mellow tone. They were playing something which seemed familiar and was, as I finally made out, nothing less than a fantasia on the old evening hymn "Lord, Dismiss Us With Thy Blessing." This staid and gentle old tune was put through the most astonishing paces and contortions, ending with a brilliant polonaise.

HERBERT FRYER'S AMERICAN TOUR.

Herbert Fryer, the well known pianist, is one of the Londoners who will spend the coming season in New York. However, Mr. Fryer's visit to America has nothing to do with the war, but is the result of an engagement completed long before there was any hint of strife. He will be one of the piano teacher at the Institute of Musical Art, will take a few private pupils as well, and will also do a great deal of public playing.

As a concert pianist, Mr. Fryer is very well known over here, not only in England but on the Continent as well. His musical education was distinctly English. He studied principally at the Royal Academy of Music, became later an associate of that distinguished association and a member of its teaching staff. But his playing has none of that austerity and coldness which are sometimes apt to be associated with the English school. On the contrary, it is most warm and sympathetic, and he produces a tone of great beauty. He has during his career given over forty recitals in London alone, has played a great deal in the English Provinces, and has made two extensive tours with Kubelik. At various times he has resided on the Continent and while there has played in the great capitals, Berlin, Vienna and Paris, as well as in many other important cities of Germany, Austria, Switzerland, France and Scandinavia. The press criticisms of his work have been uniformly excellent, both in England and on the Continent, as well as on the occasion of a short tour which he made through Canada last season. Mr. Fryer's work in New York will undoubtedly soon win for him there a place equal to that which he has long occupied in the London musical world.

GOING HOME TO ENLIST.

Jean Verd, the French pianist (seated in front), leaving England for Paris; beside him, Jean Binet; standing, right to left, Mrs. Jones, Mr. Campbell, Miss Curley, Mme. Binet, Miss Hasbrook, Leon Rice, Oscar Seagle, H. O. Osgood.

LATER LONDON NEWS.

(Continued from page 5.)

AMONG THE ENLISTED.

Word from Paris says that Charles Bowes, the Paris singing teacher, whose work has often been noticed in our Paris letters, has enlisted in the "Rough Riders," a corps of Americans in Paris who have volunteered to help France out of her troubles. Mr. Bowes is an expert in horsemanship, learned in Western America on the ranch before he ever thought of becoming a professional singer and teacher. Those who know his energetic nature will well understand that he could not wait about in idleness for things to happen but had to take a hand himself. The meager reports make it impossible to know whether or not the corps to which Mr. Bowes belongs are taking active part in the fighting now going on around Paris.

JEAN VERD ACTIVE.

Here is a picture which I meant to send with last week's letter, showing Jean Verd, the French pianist, just leaving Bramber in Sussex to return to Paris, where he now is in the hospital service.

MAITLAND'S PLANS.

Robert Maitland, the English bass baritone, whose name has frequently appeared in our London letters, is leaving shortly for New York, which city he will make his headquarters for a season of professional work in America this coming winter. Mr. Maitland has an enviable reputation, both as an opera and lieder singer on this side of the water. He has sung at Covent Garden Opera, has been four seasons with Mr. Beacham, and was at one time a member of the excellent company at the Hamburg Opera. He has sung in America with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and with many of the leading orchestras here, including the London Symphony, Queen's Hall, Hallé Orchestra, Monteux Orchestra, of Paris, and the orchestra of la Monnaie, of Brussels. He is also well known as a soloist at all of the large English, Scotch and Irish music festivals. As a lieder singer he has won an enviable reputation in recital, not only in England, but in Germany and Holland as well.

MUSIC TRADE CONDITIONS.

The music trade came pretty nearly to a standstill here at the beginning of the war, but confidence has revived rapidly and the music schools and private teachers evidently expect to have pupils, for orders are coming in in almost the normal quantity for this time of year. Those houses which depend on Germany for a regular supply of much of their stock are going to be in difficulty very soon. In fact, some of them already cannot supply certain music asked f I heard of an instance yesterday where a dealer regreti that he would not be able to supply certain music demai ed until "after the war."

HERBERT FRYER.

AMERICAN ENTERPRISE.

The energetic manager of Schirmer's London hou Ernest R. Voight, of New York, with characteristic Am ican enterprise, stole a march on the English publishers issuing with all possible speed a booklet, with very attr tive cover design, containing a simple but excellent rangement of the national song of each of the allied tions—not forgetting Japan—text both in the original l guage and in English. Over 13,000 copies sold in the fi eight days, making Schirmer's by far the busiest shop London at present.

LUCKY THEODORE HARRISON.

Everybody musical from the Continent who could away has taken refuge in London some time during last month. Theodore Harrison, the baritone, has b here with Mrs. Harrison for two weeks. They were luc enough not to have left Paris for a trip to Bayreuth, wh they had planned for just the time when the war bro out. They leave Saturday for America, going to A Arbor, Mich., where Mr. Harrison will take up his dut as director of the vocal department of the University Michigan.

MME. HOSTATER IN LONDON.

Other friends from Paris whom I found here yesterd were Julia Hostater, the lieder singer, with Mr. H tater and their son. The war has canceled the ma engagements which Mme. Hostater had in Germany ne winter, including an appearance with Nikisch and the C wandhaus Orchestra at Leipsic. It is quite possible th Mme. Hostater will be heard in New York this comi season.

GONE TO THE FRONT.

The mail this morning brings two communications fr French friends in Paris. One is from the pianist, Cami Decreus, who has been in America so often with Ysa Although not subject for military service, he has volu teered for the Forty-sixth Infantry and left Paris with regiment on September 4. He writes: "Dites, s. v. qu'a defaut de musique pour l'instant il lui faut manier fusil, et que—s'il a la chance d'etre encore en vie a la de la guerre—il retournerai en Amerique aussitot que c lui sera possible."

The other is from Frédéric Ponsot, the singing teach who was for so long with Mme. Marchesi. He write

NORAH DREWETT
THE FAMOUS PIANIST
SEASON 1914-15
Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON : : : 437 Fifth Avenue, New York
STEINWAY PIANO USED

MRS. KING CLARK
Mezzo Soprano
American Tou
WHOLE SEASON 1914-1
Management, M. H. Hans
437 Fifth Ave. New Yo

"Je vais être appelé pour la défense de Paris et je serai heureux de donner tout mon sang pour ma ville natale."

One sees from these few moving words the magnificently calm determination with which the French are going forth to the defense of their land. M. Ponsot must be, I think, in one of the advance classes of reservists, was undoubtedly kept among the defenders of Paris, and has been spared going into action up to the present. Decreux, a younger man and with the infantry, has very likely been engaged in the tremendous fighting on the Marne which is just concluding.

Good luck to both of you, friends, and may we all meet again after the war!

H. O. Osgood.

"Dawn in the Desert"

By GERTRUDE ROSS

Sung with great success by Mme. Schumann-Heink

WHITE-SMITH COMPANY

Florence Macbeth

PRIMA DONNA COLORATURA
Lately Chicago Grand Opera

DUE IN AMERICA IN NOVEMBER

MARCELLA CRAFT

For five years Prima Donna
Munich Royal Opera

NOW AVAILABLE FOR CONCERTS AND RECITALS

Engaged as Principal and Star Soloist

Maine Festivals
San Francisco Symphony Orchestra
Soloist opening concert, Nov. 6, etc.

Sole Management
CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue :: :: New York
For Pacific Coast Dates Apply to
F. W. HEALY, Head Building, San Francisco, Cal.

Raimund von Zur-Mühlen

The distinguished vocal teacher and coach (for the last ten years in London) will open a New York studio on

December 1st, 1914

The number of pupils which Mr. von Zur-Mühlen can take is strictly limited and prompt application for lessons is advisable.

All communications to
PAUL DRAPER
18 West Eighth Street

PAUL DRAPER

Lieder Singer
Teacher of Voice

Personal address: 18 West 8th Street.
For concerts, recitals, etc., address
Loudon Charlton, Carnegie Hall, New York

BOSTON SYMPHONY CONCERTS ANNOUNCED.

Believed That Kreisler and Thibaud Will Fill Engagements with the Orchestra—Other Current News in Musical Circles.

Boston, Mass., September 18, 1914.

A cable from C. A. Ellis, now in London, has caused the management at Symphony Hall to announce the Boston Symphony season as an assured fact with the first pair of concerts beginning in Boston, October 16 and 17. The concerts scheduled in other cities too will take place on the dates originally named. Of necessity, little new music has been secured for the concerts, though otherwise, even in the matter of soloists, they will conform to their usual standard. It is said that in all probability both Kreisler and Thibaud, now reported at the front, will be able to fill their engagements with the orchestra.

Just a brief idea of the difficulties encountered by Mr. Ellis in arranging for a symphony season under war time conditions may be gleaned from the following: "When the war began, Mr. Ellis was motoring in Bavaria and the Tyrol. On August 1, the first official day of German mobilization, he was in Bayreuth conferring with Dr. Muck about the symphony work for the coming season. He then returned to Munich, and with Dr. Muck, who worked from Bayreuth, sought out the members of the orchestra, their plans and possibility of playing in Boston this fall. Little could be done in Munich, since it was impossible to send letters and telegrams into hostile countries, and Mr. Ellis had great difficulty in getting in touch with his men. When the restraint against foreigners leaving the country were taken off, the manager went to Rotterdam, where he made better progress with his search. Later he met Dr. Muck and they matured plans and engaged the necessary new players."

Sundelius Starts Season at Syracuse.

Though the month of September is usually counted as part of the off season with singers, Marie Sundelius again proves the exception to the rule, as her season opened on the very first day of that month with a concert at Syracuse, New York. Other important dates of Mrs. Sundelius in the near future are: Apollo Club, Chicago, October 5, concert, Chicago, October 18; Cleveland, Ohio, November 3; St. Louis, with the Symphony Orchestra, November 13 and 14. In addition to these Mrs. Sundelius has two dates with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Hartford, Conn., November 24, and Worcester, Mass., March 9. On January 15 she is engaged for an entire recital at Bridgeport, Conn., while in June she is to be soloist at the Swedish Singing Festival to be held at the San Francisco Panama Exposition.

The Tables Are Turned.

The much predicted turning of American students to famous teachers in their own country now that Europe is impossible is actually coming to pass, and is proven by at least one instance in the experience of this writer. At the studios of Arthur J. Hubbard, in Symphony Chambers, not only have more applications for lessons been received than ever before, but several students have come to him who have studied in Europe, but were unable to get back this season. In one case the tables were particularly reversed when a pupil applying for lessons at the Hubbard studios said she had been recommended to him by her former teacher, Signor Cottogni, of Rome, the famous ex-operatic baritone.

Fox-Buonamici School in New Quarters.

A visit paid to the new quarters of the Fox-Buonamici Piano School in the Wesleyan Building, Copley Square, cannot fail to call forth admiring comment. At last this excellent school has accommodations worthy of its high rank in the community, while its enlarged facilities give opportunity for a greater enrollment of students. This result has already been observed, though the school only opened its doors on Monday of this week. Unique in its possession of two splendid musicians and accomplished virtuosi—Felix Fox and Carlo Buonamici—as its directors, this school is indeed in a class by itself, and can offer to ambitious students besides practical advantages a quality of inspiration not often found in schools of its kind.

Blanche Freedman.

Priscilla White Returns to Boston.

Though the memories of a delightful summer, spent for the most part in Switzerland, were undeniably overshadowed by her subsequent war experiences, Priscilla White, the Boston, Mass., vocal instructor, dwelt but briefly on personal discomforts in relating the story of European events as she witnessed them. Miss White, in company with a pupil, Helen Scott, and the latter's mother, were [illegible] from the Italian lakes to Nice when they first heard of the war. By a stroke of good fortune they managed to get over the border into Nice on one of the last trains to leave Italy. An enforced stay of sixteen days at Nice brought final relief in the shape of transportation through to Paris, whence they embarked on the steamer Rochambeau, arriving in New York September 7.

Upon her arrival home Miss White found it necessary to take a short "real" vacation before opening her studio and resuming her classes at Dana Hall School. Thoroughly refreshed by this, she is now well started in her teaching, and is particularly optimistic over the season's outlook, with larger classes than ever at Dana Hall and many pupils applying for private lessons at her Pierce Building studio in Boston.

Spalding Composed Violin Concerto.

When Albert Spalding returned to America early in July of this year the violinist brought with him a number of new compositions he wrote in Florence last spring, among the pieces being a violin concerto in one movement (F minor) and prelude and fugue for piano. Andre Benoist, Spalding's official pianist, who rehearses daily with the violinist, declares the concerto to be a work of scholarly type, beset with tremendous difficulties. Mr. Spalding has promised to perform the concerto in America this season. Mr. Benoist may also have an opportunity to play the prelude and fugue at one of the Spalding concerts.

At his last concert in New York, Spalding played a number of his shorter pieces, works which he later played in Europe with brilliant success. At one of the Spalding concerts at The Hague in October of 1913 the national paper, Het Vaderland, published a lengthy review of the American artist's attainments, and in conclusion remarked as follows about Spalding's creative talents: "It was a pleasant surprise to make the acquaintance of Spalding as a composer: 'Musical Period II' and 'Scherzo Giocoso,' one heard distinctly the 'note personelle.'"

One of the Rotterdam concerts on this tournee was equally a success, and the critics displayed sincere interest in the Spalding pieces. The musical reviewer for the Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant commented eloquently upon Spalding's performance of the Bach suite on his program, and lastly the critic stated: "The full measure of Spalding's great violin talent we were allowed to enjoy after the intermission, when he gave lighter pieces in his very best style. Two of his own compositions were far from uninteresting; the first, 'Musical Period II,' a fine mood picture of rather melancholy character, and the second, a 'Scherzo Giocoso,' here and there very original in harmony, with highly dangerous but well placed double stopping."

While in Stockholm, Spalding particularly delighted with a number of encores; one of his own, according to the Stockholm Aftentidingen, called 'Alabama,' in negro style, "made a great appeal."

HEINRICH GEBHARD Pianist
Management: GEORGE WHIPPLE
162 Tremont Street :: :: :: Boston, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. HUBBARD
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
SYMPHONY CHAMBERS BOSTON.

IRMA SEYDEL
America—Entire Season 1914-1915
Address, THEODORE SEYDEL, 104 Hemenway St., Boston

GEORGE EVERETT
BARITONE—Boston, Covent Garden, Century Opera Companies
Manager, Frederick M. Waterman, 177 Huntington Avenue, Boston

FELIX FOX PIANIST
Summer Classes June 8 to July 25
STEINERT HALL ANNEX - - BOSTON, MASS.

WILLARD FLINT BASS
Soloist Nine Times, HANDEL and HAYDN SOCIETY
246 Huntington Avenue, Boston
Management: Briggs Musical Bureau - Chicago

CLARA TIPPETT
TEACHER OF SINGING
321 Pierce Building - - - Boston, Mass.

Priscilla WHITE Teacher of Singing
602 Pierce Building
BOSTON - MASS.

NEVADA VAN der VEER Mezzo Contralto REED MILLER Tenor
Oratorio :: Concerts :: Recitals
Individually and Jointly
Address, 749 West End Avenue New York City
Or Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th St., New York

Charles BOWES Vocal Instruction
Returning to New York in October
Address: Care of Musical Courier

HARRISON WALL JOHNSON
CONCERT PIANIST
Minneapolis

TINA LERNER
Distinguished Russian Pianist
FOURTH AMERICAN TOUR 1914-15 NOW BOOKING
Management, Loudon Charlton, Carnegie Hall, New York. MASON & HAMLIN PIANO

MME. ROSA OLITZKA
CELEBRATED RUSSIAN CONTRALTO
Engaged as Soloist, Great Texas Saengerfest, May 11 to 14, 1914
AVAILABLE FOR CONCERTS, ORATORIOS and MUSICALES
Manager R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, New York

WILFRIED KLAMROTH
TEACHER OF SINGING
Resumes teaching in New York, October 1, at his new studio,
124 EAST 39th STREET
Until October 1, address at
HILLBOURNE FARM
Vail's Gate, New York

GEORGE
DOSTAL
DISTINGUISHED BOHEMIAN TENOR
First American Concert Tour Season 1914-1915
Exclusive Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, NEW YORK

Accompanist
CECIL TEAGUE
ADDRESS, 131 WEST 42nd STREET, NEW YORK CITY
Telephone, Bryant 4657

MADAME
Artha Williston
Dramatic Soprano

First appearance this season at the Maine Music Festivals in October, singing Elijah
Management:
Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York

Mildred Dilling Returns in Safety.

Although not due until November, Mildred Dilling, the harpist, arrived in New York on Saturday, September 12, from Havre on board the steamship France. She left, after only a few days' stay in the metropolis, for the West, where she is booked for concerts in Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Chicago, St. Louis and other cities. She will return to the metropolis early in November to fill her New York engagements.

Miss Dilling, like many other American musicians and tourists abroad, found the war a source of much trouble and inconvenience. There were many instances, however, when good fortune smiled brightly on this young artist. When money was almost impossible to obtain, she found plenty; when passports were almost unobtainable, she managed to secure a stateroom, and, too, she just escaped the many perils, dangers and inconveniences that so many others encountered at this particular time.

Miss Dilling tells her experiences in a delightful manner, adding to her story that same degree of buoyancy and vigor that are delightful features of her playing.

"I had been working in Paris with Henriette Renie, the composer and harpist, until the very day of the crisis in European affairs," said Miss Dilling. "On July 25, Servia answered Austria and Europe was hurled into a horrible state of war.

MILDRED DILLING BOWLING ON BOARD THE STEAMSHIP FRANCE.

"Mlle. Renie rushed me off at once to Etretat, a remote and peaceful fishing village on the coast of Normandy, where we worked unmolested and away from the turmoil until the last day of August.

"Rumors spread that the Germans were scouting about Rouen in huge motor trucks, and Etretat experienced a 'petit panique.' That horrible night all the inhabitants were troubled with a most excruciating nightmare, as hundreds of mad motor cars, one after the other in agonizing succession, hurled themselves down one hill into the make-believe sleeping village, and up another hill and on to Havre.

"The state of mind of the village was unspeakable until the morning, when, with the ghastly horde of motors past, the people of the village ventured out and learned that it had not been the Germans, but the Belgians on their whirlwind dash. They had escaped with several hundred motors before Namur was taken, and were on to Havre for mysterious military reasons.

"The fever abated for a moment only, as a report soon reached us that the Germans were in hot pursuit. Mlle. Renie dashed into my room and told me that the Germans were only fifteen miles away and that I must leave for Havre in fifteen minutes. Packing was simple, but the going was much harder. The last of the hotels, villas and the Casino were closing, and a stream of motors were carrying all they could to Havre. With remarkable good fortune I found a place for myself and baggage in one of the cars and in forty-five minutes I was in Havre.

"All the way we passed alarming lines of French and English soldiers awaiting the signal to fire. We shouted as loud as we could, 'Don't shoot!' We were allowed to pass, but every kilometre we showed our passports and finally got through the lines unharmed.

"At Havre there were thousands of clamoring refugees from Paris. Nevertheless, with remarkable ease I obtained the sought-after last room in the hotel, and, more miraculous still, a passage on the steamer France.

"A very lovely woman who had heard me play at the Central Presbyterian Church in New York for three years gave me the delightful cabin she had reserved for herself. So I sailed with the hundreds of other fortunate Americans on Sunday morning, September 6.

"As we went out of the harbor we passed the Tennessee, on board which the band was playing 'The Star Spangled Banner' for us. Realizing with great gratitude that we were off for a land of peace and prosperity again, every one flung his last French silver down to the soldiers on the docks.

"The trip across was a very pleasant one, few exciting incidents taking place. We arrived in New York on Saturday night, September 12, at 5.30 o'clock."

With a shrug of her shoulder—she is not very large, but very pretty—Miss Dilling concluded her unusually interesting interview and started for the door. "Yes," she added, "I'm glad to be back, away from worry and trouble—back in the land of millionaires."

Edna Showalter to Enter Recital Field.

Edna Blanche Showalter, American coloratura soprano, is to enter the recital field, and will make a tour of the United States, bookings for which are now being made.

The young singer already has aroused widespread favorable criticism of her singing, by appearances before the American and English public, in such roles as Minnie in "The Girl of the Golden West," Paoletta in "Paoletta," as well as in classical concert programs.

Her voice has been praised particularly for its sweetness, freshness, purity and flexibility, also for its high range.

Clinton D. Robinson, Hotel Colonial, New York, is Miss Showalter's personal representative in America.

Friedrich Hegar, composer and director of the Zurich Conservatory, has resigned his position.

ADA SODER-HUECK
THE EMINENT GERMAN CONTRALTO,
famous for her correct Voice Placement and Tone Development is open for a limited number of engagements. Singers prepared for Church, Concert, Opera. Celebrated Garcia Method taught.
Metropolitan Opera House, 1425 Broadway-New York Phone 6221 Bryan

EMIL J. POLAK
ACCOMPANIST AND COACH
Address: 217 E. 71st St., New York City Telephone 923 Lenox

MARGUERITE DUNLAP
CONTRALTO. Concert—Recital—Oratorio
Exclusive Management: Gertrude F. Cowen, 1451 Broadway, New York

WITHERSPOON
BASS Metropolitan Opera
Available for Concert and Oratorio. Oct 1st. to Jan. 15th.
Address: Management, Wolfsohn Musical Bureau
1 West 34th Street, New York

American Concert Tour of
—AND—
H. U. MAXWELL
Brilliant Baritone
Ch. De HARRACK
EMINENT COURT PIANIST
Address, Howard Pew, care of Musical Courier, Manager of recent tour of Arthur Nikisch and London Symphony Orchestra; also A. F. Wands—Per. Mgr. Middle West, Cleveland, O.

HERBERT FRYER
The Distinguished English Concert Pianist
In America the Whole Season 1914-1915
For Engagements, Etc., Address
WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU, 1 West 34th Street, New York

LORETTA del VALLÉ
SOPRANO COLORATURA
First Time in America
Season 1914-15
OPERA—PRAGUE
OPERA—DRESDEN
OPERA—CASSEL
OPERA—MANHEIM

PUBLICATIONS AND REVIEWS

NOTICE TO PUBLISHERS.

This department is devoted to a review of old and new music publications, musical works, musical literary works and anything pertaining to the publishing of matters in music.

Only such publications and compositions will be reviewed as are deemed worthy of notice, and the MUSICAL COURIER reserves to itself the privilege of rejection. It is also understood that any work or composition or book reviewed in this column relinquishes its copyright to any part or all of its parts so far as a review of the same can be applied. This does not mean that the MUSICAL COURIER assumes or claims any interest in the copyrights; it merely means that we are not to be held for any infringement of copyright by handling copyright publications or works in this department.

Particular attention given to works of American composers and their products.

Boosey & Co., New York.

"In an Old Fashioned Town," a song, with words by Ada Leonora Harris, and music by W. H. Squire, has in it all the elements that go to make a popular song. We are not at all surprised to learn that the sale of this song in England, the land of its origin, has been unusually great. The difference between a great song and a great sale, however, is large. At the same time, it is futile for the artistic minority to find fault with a song which has the approval of the less critical majority. If Boosey & Co. have published a work which will sell in these hard times of war and taxes, they are to be congratulated.

"Carnival Time," a valse song, written and composed by Ivor Novello, is a good example of the natural and singable melodies which this young composer has already given to the song singing world. The accompaniment is full without being difficult and the harmonies are modern without being exaggerated. In the middle of the song the composer has judiciously employed more than a pageful of common time which much relieves the monotony of the waltz rhythm and makes the return to the original tempo unusually effective.

"The Garden of Your Heart," a song, with words by Edward Teschemacher and music by Francis Dorel, is a sentimental ballad of the best type, well written by a good musician, free from commonplace phrases, and yet in English ballad in form and spirit. We commend this song as a good one of its kind and which is not an imitation of something else.

"The Rainbow-Child," a song with words by Marguerite Radclyffe-Hall and music by S. Coleridge-Taylor, is artistically above and beyond the average song. It is typical of the composer, who was a master of the science of musical construction, and whose equipment consisted of an Anglo-Saxon brain and the passionate temperament of the African. A song of this nature is not subject to the caprices of fashion. It is a permanent addition to the list of high class songs to English texts.

"A Heart from Kerry," a song with words by Fred E. Weatherly and music by Edward Beverley, is a good example of an Irish song dressed up and polished for appearance on the concert stage. It has enough Irish to be classed as an Irish song, and it has enough modern harmony and agreeable accompaniment to be pleasing to a cultured audience of any nationality.

"Ninetta," a song, with words by Fred E. Weatherly, and music by A. Herbert Brewer, is a dainty little song of more than usual grace and attractiveness. The music is thoroughly spontaneous and full of vitality. For the origin of the lyric of this song Fred E. Weatherly, consciously or unconsciously, is indebted to the ancient Greek. In Anacreon's odes, the twenty-second in Moore's translations, a lover wishes to be a mirror, a robe, a streamlet, a perfume, a girdle, a necklace of pearls, a pair of sandals, for exactly the same reasons that Fred E. Weatherley's more prosaic and less impassioned lover desires to be a haircomb, a shoebuckle, and an easy chair.

"A Dream Song," words by Fred. G. Bowles, music by Wilfred Sanderson, has the easy flowing melody and unpretentious accompaniment the public has learned to expect from this popular and prolific composer. If this new song will not add to Wilfred Sanderson's reputation, it will at least maintain it.

"The Weathercock," a song with words by Longfellow and music by Liza Lehmann, is a pleasant musical accompaniment to a semi-humorous poem. If the words are clearly enunciated the song will be effective. Without the story, however, the melodic graces of this music will hardly rouse much enthusiasm in an audience. Like everything that Liza Lehmann writes, this music is thoroughly vocal and of value to teachers of singing.

"Parsifal," a new and cheap edition of Wagner's music drama, with the original German text, an English version by Edward Teschemacher, and a piano accompaniment arranged by Guillaume van den Dyck. This edition is uniform in size and style with other operas in Boosey's Royal Edition. The music is beautifully engraved, and printed on a thin, white paper of excellent quality, and there are numerous verbal indications of the orchestration. There are 364 closely printed pages, and the full price without professional discount is $1.50, which is practically two and a half pages for a cent. Such a price as this surely brings this standard work within the reach of the humblest student of music.

Clayton F. Summy Company, Chicago.

THREE SONGS. By W. Ralph Cox. "SOMEBODY LOVES ME," "MARSH ROSEMARY," "THE GREEN LADY."

The first of these songs is simple and unpretentious, though effectively written for both voice and piano, and the coquettish humor of Wm. Lord Reed's lyric is happily expressed by the music.

In the second song, "Marsh Rosemary," words by R. B. Tuthill, the composer shows considerable skill in voicing the changing moods of the poem, and he passes from the lyrical to the dramatic style with ease and effect. The rhythmical variety in the melody adds no little to the piquancy of the song.

In his setting of Fiona Macleod's "Green Lady," the composer has written a somewhat difficult and brilliant accompaniment to a vocal melody which admirably voices the romantic and mystic spirit of the poem.

Forty-four songs, by Jessie L. Gaynor, make a list of which any music publisher might well be proud. There is a certain charm and ingenuous simplicity in all that this popular composer has written. Her music is known to every amateur throughout the United States, and her name is a familiar one on countless programs. The names of the Jessie L. Gaynor songs published by Clayton F. Summy Company are: "And I," "The Night has a Thousand Eyes," "If I Were a Bee," "Cradle Song," "Flower's Cradle Song," "The Discontented Duckling," "Sugar Dolly," "My Dear Jerushy," "Molly," "Serenade," "Sleep My Beloved," "Nocturne," "Nocturne," "Come Down to the River Tonight Love," "If Love Be Won," "The Sunbeam's Kiss," "Spring Song," "The Riddle," "Star of Bethlehem," "Birth and Resurrection" (Easter song), "A Tiny Fish I'd Like to Be," "The Gingerbread-man," "The Jap Doll," "Slumber Boat," "Hush-a-bye, Close Yo' Eye," "Contentment," "Lest Winter Come," "A Valentine," "Maureen," "Only a Rose," "Mistress Mary," "To Astra," "A Query," "Mother Love," "My Top," "Fireflies," "Thou," "Cuddle Doon," "Wearyin' For You," "The Sea O'Dreams," "Send Your Love a Violet Flower," "Pat McGee," "By-Low," "My Baby," "Swing High, Swing Low."

Two Italian songs, with words and music by Gladys Parvis, do not call for an extended review. Both songs are short, simple, tuneful, and without any straining after emotional climaxes. They are useful for teaching purposes, apart from the musical attractiveness. They are called "Upon My Lips" (Ultimo Bacio), and "The Unbelieving One" (L'Incredula).

G. Schirmer, New York.
Boston Music Company, Boston.

New music for the piano:

"Valse in E flat," by Albert von Doenhoff—brilliant, modern in style and of moderate difficulty.

"Scottish March," by T. Hilton-Turvey—simple, ingenuous, though characteristic, and useful as a teaching piece for young pianists.

Three pieces called "Gondoliera," "Moto Perpetuo" and "Tempo di Minuetto," respectively, by James H. Rogers—interesting to advanced amateurs and pupils, well written in a somewhat academic style like etudes and sonatinas.

Three pieces called "Matinée de Printemps," "Dream Fancies" and "Pavlowa," respectively, by A. Goetzl—melodious and moderately difficult compositions that are romantic in spirit and admirably suited to the tastes of cultured amateur pianists.

"Album Leaf," by Harold Sanford—quaint, and possessing the grace and elegance of an Old World minuet.

Six compositions, called "Air de Danse," "Caravane," "Prière dans le Désert," "Intermezzo," "Unsoir à Burano," "L'Ile des Morts" and "Humoresque," respectively, composed by Franco da Venezia—spirited, full of animation and local color, with plenty of that estimable quality conveniently called atmosphere, effectively written for the keyboard and of medium difficulty.

New music for the violin and for cello:

Two Moussorgsky transcriptions for Kathleen Parlow, called "A Tear" and "Gopak," respectively, by A. Walter Kramer.

Prelude to the second act of "Cyrano," by Walter Damrosch.

Sixteen compositions for violin and piano by Ernest Centola—"Berceuse," "Suite Neapolitaine," "Suite Orientale," "Aria," "Valse No. 1," "Petite Suite Militaire," "Deux feuilles d'Album," "Vers le Passe," "Valse No. 2," "Chanson d'Automne," "Pomponnette," "Ronde de Nuit," "Mazurka," "Barcarola," "Chanson triste" and "Novelette No. 2."

"Mélodie," by Charles Huerter.

"Wellenspiel" ("Waves at Play"), a characteristic piece, by Edwin Grasse.

"Inspiration," an intermezzo for the violin, also published for the cello, composed by Leo Edwards.

"Barcarole," for violin, also for cello, composed by Joseph Gotsch.

"Cantilena," from prelude and fugue in E major, arranged by the composer for violin and piano, viola and piano, cello and piano, composed by Horace Wadham Nicholl.

Three pieces for the violin, called "Romance Pathétique," "Sérénade" and "Capriccio," respectively, composed by Henry Ern.

"Memories of the Beach," six pieces for violin and piano, called "Morning," "The Murmur of a Shell," "Shrimping," "The Haunted Cave," "The Sand Castle" and "Sunset," respectively, composed by Alfred Pusey-Keith.

"The Family Music Book," a collection of 252 pieces of piano and vocal music of moderate difficulty, selected from the works of classic and modern composers and including many old favorites universally known.

This volume ought to have an immense sale. We cannot understand how the publisher, G. Schirmer, can afford to engrave, print on good paper, bind in scarlet cloth, and sell 252 pieces, 790 pages, for $1. This beats any and every department store sale bargain we ever heard of.

Breitkopf & Härtel, New York.

Agents for "Graded Lists" of the music of the great composers—Handel, Bach, Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, Weber, Schubert, Mendelssohn, Chopin, Schumann, Wagner and Brahms—a guide for teachers and students, compiled by G, Surtes Talbot, with bibliography, published by the Home Music Study Union, London. This paper bound pamphlet of forty pages gives a complete list of the compositions of the composers mentioned above. "The works of the great composers from Handel to Brahms have been given under four heads: Piano music, including arrangements for two hands; organ music, vocal music, and chamber music. A sound, cheap edition (not necessarily the lowest in price) having then been taken as a standard, the contents of the various volumes have been given in full, with the approximate grading of each item. Editions are complete wherever possible, selections being almost entirely excluded. . . . Grading is a vexed question, as it depends to a great extent on the individual judgment. The division into three broad classes of easy, medium and difficult has been based on technical rather than on interpretive difficulty. Had interpretation been taken as the criterion, paradoxical though it may seem, the easiest would so often have proved the hardest."

We find this little book of great interest, and we cannot see how it can fail to prove of the greatest aid to teachers.

Mme. Alves Returns from Leipsic.

After a period of nine years spent in Leipsic, Germany, Mme. Carl Alves, the vocal instructor, has returned to America and on October 1 will reopen her studios at 48 West Ninetieth street, New York. Mme. Alves has demonstrated repeatedly her ability as a teacher, and students in this country are thankful for her return to these shores.

Myrtle ELVYN
RENOWNED AMERICAN PIANISTE
Now Booking For American Tour 1914-1915
Concert Direction, HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Bldg., Chicago
KIMBALL PIANO USED

DR. WILLIAM C. CARL RETURNS FROM EUROPE

New York Organist and Director of Guilmant Organ School Recounts Some Interesting and Thrilling Experiences in War Stricken Region—Brings Back Many Novelties.

Dr. William C. Carl, director of the Guilmant Organ School and organist of the First Presbyterian Church, New York, returned, Friday, September 18, on the steamship Lusitania after his annual European trip and visit with the Guilmant family in Paris.

"Yes," said Dr. Carl, "I had a delightful visit in Paris as the guest of Felix Guilmant, little dreaming that war was to be declared and the entire civilized world to suffer in consequence. One of my interesting experiences was the opportunity of playing the old organ in the Church of St. Gervais, where François Couperin played for many years. The organ has five manuals and the pedals are not more than 6 inches in length, starting from low B instead of the usual C. The instrument has been well preserved and some of the stops, notably the reeds, were admirably voiced. The priests were especially interested when I played one of Couperin's compositions and the visit was most enjoyable. At Notre Dame, where I had the pleasure of hearing Louis Vierne extemporize, I was more than ever impressed by his marvelous talent and extraordinary musicianship. He played the fantasie in G minor by Bach at the offertory in the true classic style and with a legato rare to hear in these days. Mr. Vierne is one of the world's greatest organists and will probably visit America in the near future. He is about to write his fourth organ symphony, with the dedication of which he has already honored me. Joseph Bonnet, at St. Eustache, who is without question the most sought after organist in Europe, today, had planned a concert tour, to cover nearly every country on the Continent. This is all abandoned now, and I presume he is already at the front. My pupil, Rowland W. Claffey, organist of the American Church, in the Rue de Berri, remained at his post until the government moved to Bordeaux. He has had large success in Paris and had hoped to remain for some time."

"Have you decided upon any new work at the Guilmant Organ School for the coming season?"

"Yes, several important additions will be made. I visited the Paris Conservatoire, the Schola Cantorum, the Royal Academy of Music in London and Trinity College of Music, and shall hope to incorporate ideas which will be of practical use here. The Gregorian chant and plain song will be featured and practical work in playing the church service will receive more attention than ever before. Special classes will be formed in this subject and students required not only to accompany the service but to become familiar with the oratorios and solo accompanying as well."

"It is exceptionally good. Students are applying from all parts of the country in large numbers and we shall doubtless begin the season under the most auspicious conditions. America is bound to become the Mecca of music, and musicians and will in all probability soon be the musical center of the world."

In speaking of the present crisis, Dr. Carl said: "It is the most stupendous political fugue the world has ever seen, or will ever witness again. 'Musical Europe' is completely demoralized. In Switzerland, as soon as the mobilization was effected, music in the parks, cafés, boats and even in the churches was suppressed. The musicians made an appeal through the press, as with their work taken away, nothing was left for actual support. At Bayreuth, when the curtains closed on the first act of 'Parsifal,' the day the troops were called, the stage hands, artists and all who were eligible for military service, including Siegfried Wagner, made a dash to respond, and the audience was forced to leave without the completion of the opera.

"In France, the Opera, Opera Comique, Comedie Francaise, as well as every theatre and place of amusement, have been closed for weeks. I remained some time with Maurice Kufferath, director of the Theatre de la Monnaie, Brussels, who with Mme. Kufferath was spending the summer in Switzerland. M. Kufferath, who, as head of the Grand Opera in the Belgian capital, where so many stars, from the debut of Mme. Melba to the present day, have first made their success, is in a worse plight than most of his confreres. It will doubtless be a long time before operatic matters are normal in Belgium.

"In Trinity College of Music, London, I was told that four of the staff had already gone to the front, although the mobilization in England is voluntary. The only concerts given thus far in London are those at Queen's Hall, under the direction of Sir Henry Wood. I heard Solomon, the boy prodigy pianist, play there a few nights ago, when an admirable rendition of César Franck's D major symphony was played by the orchestra. The audience, although large, was not of the size one expects at these concerts. All is war, nothing but war! Consequently, His Majesty's Theatre is not large enough to accommodate those who want to see the production of 'Drake,' with Sir Herbert Tree in the cast. The musical festivals, for which England is noted, are all abandoned. In the music shops, where at this season of the year the rooms are filled with music, ready to be shipped to the various choral bodies throughout the Dominion, there is not a single copy being sent.

"What effect the war will have in America during the forthcoming musical season remains to be seen. It is, however, the one great chance for our country and should not be lost sight of. America is absolutely capable of taking care of herself. There is no need for students to go abroad, as the facilities in the States equal anything to be found in Europe today. Early this summer, before the war was thought of, a prominent business man, resident in Paris, told me that in his opinion only one in five thousand of those who go abroad for study should do so. In regard to organ music, in which I am naturally interested, our opportunities for studying and hearing the best in music are not surpassed in any other country. Let America now show the world what she can and is capable of doing, and thus take her rightful place with other nations."

ESCAPE FROM SWITZERLAND.

"Where were you when war was declared?"

"In Switzerland," replied Dr. Carl, "where for over four weeks I was trying to escape. The war came as suddenly as a typhoon in the Orient, and before any one realized we were bottled up and unable to do anything but await developments. Too much cannot be said of the kind treatment given by the Swiss people. They cashed checks, gave credit when necessary, and did all in their power to make us comfortable. The English and American Governments tried for weeks to organize special trains, and finally succeeded in doing so. Passports were, of course, 'en rigueur,' and, as well, had to be viséd by the French consul before leaving.

DR. WILLIAM C. CARL.

"I left with 500 passengers on a regular express train from Geneva. In order to secure a seat, I hired a man for ten francs in gold to wait on the line for hours and remain in the seat until I could pass through the station and reach it. Many others did the same. It was necessary to take provisions for the trip and to carry as much hand luggage as possible, on account of the uncertainty of the trunks. All went well until reaching Lyons, when without a moment's warning we were obliged to change cars, with no one to give a word of direction. The scene was indescribable; every one rushing for a train, all with their hand luggage, and no one knowing where to go. I finally found one marked 'Paris,' and secured a seat, utterly exhausted, as was every one, in this mad attempt to reach the French capital.

"How shall I describe Paris? It was like a tomb! I never could imagine a city so changed. Nearly everything closed. The iron shutters in front of countless shops bearing the notice that the 'patron' had gone to the front, and many of the hotels were being used as hospitals. There were no busses and the Metropolitan (subway) was being run by brave women who were replacing their husbands. It was necessary to get a 'permis de sejour,' have the passport signed by the Prefect de Police and also by the English consul before leaving by the first possible train for Boulogne-sur-Mer. This trip was such as never to be effaced from one's memory. Thousands of troops were to be seen in every direction. Eight train loads were on the same track ahead, making a delay for hours. All the men were eager for newspapers, which we either handed or threw to them, as well as chocolate, lead pencils and whatever we could find. A German airship of the Taube type hovered over our train and the next day threw bombs into Paris. We could hear the battle several miles off and passed, at a snail's pace, through the lines at Amiens. Finally Boulogne was reached, but the last boat for the night had left. The next morning saw us off for England—all too happy to get out of the fighting zone. Thuel Burnham, the well known pianist, was among those who escaped by this train, having left Paris at a moment's notice."

"What of your plans?"

"I have many, but first of all I am only too glad to be at home again. While abroad I secured many novelties for the season and had the honor of arranging with Theodore Dubois, the distinguished French composer, who for many years was director of the Paris Conservatoire and organist of La Madeleine, to accept the position of honorary president of the Guilmant Organ School, made vacant by the death of the late Alexandre Guilmant. The honorary committee contains the names of these eminent artists: Eugene Gigout, St. Augustin, Paris; Sir Frederick Bridge, Westminster Abbey, London; Joseph Bonnet, St. Eustache, Paris; Georges Jacob, St. Louis d'Antin, Paris; Charles Tournemire, Ste. Clothilde, Paris; Baron Ferdinand de la Tombelle, French composer; Dr. Charles W. Pearce, Trinity College, London, and John E. West, English organist and composer.

"I will concertize extensively, produce several new works at the First Presbyterian Church and conclude the final arrangements for the reopening of the Guilmant Organ School, scheduled for October 6."

Polak's Success at Toronto.

Emil Polak's public activities are continuing with increasing success at each new appearance. This gifted young American pianist, who is devoting every effort to the art of accompanying and composing, is making for himself an enviable reputation in his chosen work. Demands for his services are constantly forthcoming from many of the foremost artists in this country at the present time.

Of recent occurrence, September 11, was his successful accompanying at the festival concert given in the Arena at Toronto, by the American Aid Society, for the benefit of the Canadian Red Cross Society. On this occasion the solo artists furnished by R. E. Johnston, of New York, were George Dostal, the Bohemian tenor; Jerome Uhl, baritone; Mabel Garrison, soprano, and Eva Mylott, contralto.

The versatility and absolute musical thoroughness which proved the young pianist's qualifications for his work were given plenty of scope on this program, and the ensemble results achieved were highly satisfactory.

Mr. Polak announces the completion of an English ballade, entitled "Proclamation," with words by Thomas Dixon, which has been written exclusively for the tenor George Dostal, and which will be featured by the Bohemian artist on many of his forthcoming concert programs.

Bisbee Pupil at Wells College.

Genevieve Bisbee's talented pupil, Charles Frederic Naegele, gave a successful recital at Wells College, Aurora, N. Y., on September 1. The following program was enthusiastically received by a large audience of music lovers who assembled in the chapel of the college to listen to this young pianist:

Toccata	Schuman
Etude, C minor, op. 10	Chopi
Etude, E major, op. 10	Chopi
Etude, A minor, op. 10	Chopi
Etude, D flat major, op. 25	Chopi
Nocturne, D flat major	Chopi
Hark! Hark! the Lark	Schubert-Lis
Spinning Song	Mendelssoh
Intermezzo	Paula Szal
Prelude, G minor	Rachmanino

In response to the repeated applause, Mr. Naegele added Liszt's transcription of Schubert's "Erlkönig."

Owing to the demands from several Southern pupils Miss Bisbee has determined to open her studio earlier than previously, and she is already at work preparing for a busy season.

Muskingum College Engages Erie Pianist.

Edward H. Freeman, pianist, of Erie, Pa., has accepted a position as director of the conservatory at Muskingum College, New Concord, Ohio. That college and its president, Dr. J. Knox Montgomery, are to be congratulated upon the acquisition of so valuable a member to the faculty.

Alfred Schattmann, a Berlin composer, has finished a three act comic opera called "The Spirits of Kranichstein."

CINCINNATI SYMPHONY SEASON IS ASSURED.

Dr. Kunwald Will Arrive Very Soon—Current Notes of Interest.

Cincinnati, Ohio, September 16, 1914.

It is welcome news to all patrons of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra concerts that Dr. Ernst Kunwald, who spent the summer in Europe and is a subject of Austria, has been released from military duty and is now on the high seas homeward bound. Cincinnati's symphony season will therefore open on schedule time and will, no doubt, be more appreciated than ever, since one or two cities have found it impossible, on account of the many musicians who cannot get back from Europe, to attempt symphony concerts this winter.

CINCINNATI NOTES.

With the return of Frederic Shailer Evans and Marcian Thalberg during the current week, the artist faculty of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music was made complete and plans are now being formulated for a busy artist concert series. Signor Tirindelli is looking forward to an extension in the activities of the Conservatory Orchestra and will begin rehearsals Tuesday, September 22, for the first concert, early in November. There have been many applications made for membership in this excellent organization and Signor Tirindelli will have exceedingly fine material to work with. The theory and composition department has been a strong magnet for many talented young musicians, and Edgar Stillman Kelley found an unusually promising class awaiting him upon his return from abroad.

The first rehearsal of the College of Music Orchestra will be held next Thursday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, in the Odeon. The splendid student body, augmented by a number of new players in each department, will undoubtedly be brought to higher efficiency than ever before. Not only have the violins and cellos been greatly strengthened by a number of exceptionally talented young students of these instruments, but there will also be quite an increase among those specializing on wind instruments. The College Orchestra promises to be equipped on a better basis this year than heretofore, and its members again will profit by the training afforded by this practice and public performance under the tutelage of more than one director. Johannes Miersch again will conduct the orchestral numbers, Louis Victor Saar the accompaniments to the chorus, and Albino Gorno the solo numbers and the opera. This training may be obtained free of charge by well prepared pupils.

The two large concert instruments which afford students of the College of Music the very best facilities for study and practice of pipe organ underwent a thorough reconstruction during the latter part of the summer and have since been pronounced by the builders to be in excellent shape. The organ department, under the instruction of Lillian Arkell Rixford and Adolph H. Stadermann, continues its effective work in the preparation of church and concert organists, and virtually all of the advanced students of the department will occupy positions this coming season.

Among the many excellent appointments received by Conservatory graduates during the summer, those of the past week will be of particular interest. Gertrude Isidor has been made head of the violin department of Lander College, at Greenwood, S. C., and Carrie Small has been elected in the piano faculty of Hamilton College, Lexington, Ky. Miss Isidor, a talented post-graduate from the class of Chevalier Tirindelli and one of this city's rare talents, will be much missed in local musical circles, as will also Miss Small, who has become well known through her frequent successful concert appearances. Miss Small is a graduate from the artist department, having been a pupil of Frederic Shailer Evans for a half dozen years.

Aspiring vocalists of this city and vicinity are actively taking advantage of the presence in Cincinnati of so eminent an exponent of the German lied and German opera as Hans Schroeder, recently added to the faculty of the College of Music. While he was established in Chicago, Mr. Schroeder had several professional singers from this city taking special work in the aforesaid departments in which he excels. In keeping with the policy of the institution constantly to increase its teaching facilities, Mr. Schroeder was prevailed upon to come to Cincinnati and has already declared himself well pleased with his present environment. His voice is one of lovely modulation, and in his interpretations accomplished some legitimate pianissimo effects that not only places his art on a very high plane, but also makes his delivery extremely popular. Aside from his genuine musicianship, Mr. Schroeder is highly educated, a linguist and speaks and sings almost as beautiful English as he does German. His first public evening recital is anticipated with much pleasure, inasmuch as local music lovers have not heard a lieder singer of his qualifications for some time.

Emil Heermann, concertmaster and soloist of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, and Walter Gilewica, the German pianist, who since their affiliation with the faculty of the College of Music have become such intimate associates, are preparing for an evening of sonatas to be given among the first of the college events. It would be difficult to find two artists so well suited by artistic ideals, personality and temperament than Messrs. Heermann and Gilewicz, and their offerings will undoubtedly prove a delightful feature to the ensemble concerts this season.

The engagement of Emil Heermann and Dorothy Fitzpatrick, one of his violin pupils at the College of Music, has been announced. Miss Fitzpatrick is a very talented, as well as an extremely pretty young lady.

Many of the Cincinnati artists returning from Europe have particularly horrifying tales to tell of hardship and hunger and worry about transportation, but Edgar Stillman Kelley has the grisliest tale of all. "I was on a train packed to its limit, trying to get to London and a boat for America, when some soldiers got on with a woman bound with ropes. 'What did she do?' I inquired. 'Do women also make war?' The soldiers guarding her replied: 'She gouged the eyes out of our wounded soldiers left helpless on the field!' Probably all her people had been killed, no doubt some one near and dear to her, and I suppose she lost her mind."

Theodore Bohlmann and his wife, who spent the summer most delightfully in their cottage in Maine, have returned home.

Dr. Fery Lulek's class at the conservatory is rapidly increasing in number and interest. Several of his pupils are preparing for the opera class soon to be established at the conservatory.

Mrs. Edgar Stillman Kelley spent a month at Peterborough, N. H., this summer, and has returned much refreshed to her work at the Conservatory of Music.

Albino Gorno and his wife suffered many hardships in their return voyage from Italy, where they spent the summer. Signor Gorno found a remarkably large class awaiting him at the College of Music ready to begin work.

JESSIE PARTLON TYREE.

Song Dedicated to Nana Genovese.

Novelli, the composer, has dedicated his song, "Vorrei," to Nana Genovese, who has added it to her programs and will sing it at her recitals next winter.

The following reference to the soprano, appeared in the Los Angeles Tribune, August 30, 1914:

Not without reason have been the universal criticisms of operagoers that impresarios in the past have given too much consideration to singing only, irrespective of external aspects and efficient acting. If the star possessed some beauty and could act, they seemed to imagine all that was necessary in the remainder of the company was a passable voice.

NANA GENOVESE AS CARMEN.

There has been a revolution in this respect, not only in America, but in every country in Europe. Impresario Lambardi saw and read understandingly the handwriting on the wall, as is demonstrated from a glimpse of the artists he has, with the aid of Cario Marchetti, the general manager of the Los Angeles National Grand Opera Company, gathered together for the season in this auditorium next January.

None is more prepossessing in appearance than the charming Nana Genovese, a mezzo soprano who has earned a well deserved reputation in Europe and America. She is exceptionally good as Carmen. Many critics compare her rendering of that role in singing and acting to that of the world renowned Mme. Calvé.

Fortunate or unfortunate, as musical connoisseurs may be pleased to consider it, Mme. Genovese is a society woman of great wealth. Singing is her grand passion, and she has spared neither money nor practice. . . .

This young woman is now resting in New York City after a long season of concert work. Impresario Lambardi, who is again back in Los Angeles, says most emphatically that the war in Europe cannot in any serious degree effect the National Grand Opera Company, and that the company will be here to open as advertised.

(Advertisement.)

Marcella Craft's Big Season.

Just before the declaration of war in Europe, Marcella Craft, for five years prima donna of the Royal Opera at Munich, returned to her native land for rest. Manager M. H. Hanson has cut short her rest by pledging Miss Craft to start work immediately. She will begin her first concert tour in America by replacing Emma Eames as principal soloist of the Maine festivals, both at Bangor, October 1, and Portland, October 5. After appearing at Boston, New York and Pittsburgh, she will proceed to San Francisco, being engaged by the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra as its first soloist of the season. On this occasion Miss Craft will be heard in excerpts from "Madama Butterfly." It is in the title role of Butterfly in which she has appeared all over Germany, and she is regarded as one of the best Butterflies and, strange contrast, as one of the best Salomes of the German stage.

Robsarte's Pupils in All Fields.

Lionel Robsarte, the New York singing teacher, formerly prominent on the stage in the Schumann-Heink company and others, now the New York representative of Trabadello, of Paris, has artist pupils prominently before the public in various specialties of vocal music. They are principals on the grand opera, opera comique and light opera stages; in concert, recitals, vaudeville and church circles; as teachers, and on the dramatic stage.

Herewith follows a partial list of those best known in grand and comic opera:

GRAND OPERA STARS.

Lillian Grenville (two years' daily lessons), prima donna soprano; Milan, Brussels, Chicago, Metropolitan and Paris operas.

Mme. Jungmann (two years' daily lessons), prima donna contralto; Elberfeld, Metropolitan, Vienna operas.

Emanuel Iacoletti, tenor (two years' daily lessons), now singing in Naples.

Matias Escheverria, baritone, St. Petersburg, Cairo, Buenos Aires, Havana operas.

Ralph Errole, leading tenor Lombardi and Chicago operas.

Helene Travis, soprano, Mascagni Opera Company.
Aurora Medcn, soprano, Aborn Opera Company.
Mabel Mahlstedt, soprano Aborn Opera Company.
Estelle Hartman, soprano, now singing in Italy.

OPERA COMIQUE AND LIGHT OPERA.

Ruby Norton, soprano.
Jeanetta Methven, coloratura soprano.
Helen Tashman, dramatic soprano.
Nellie Walker, dramatic soprano.
Louise Doré, soprano.
Grace Methven, soprano.
Evelyn Bohlman, soprano.
Marie Smith, contralto.
Agnes Methven, contralto.
Ray Youngman, tenor.
John Hoffman, tenor.
William Evans, tenor.
R. Craig Campbell, tenor.
William Rankin, tenor.
Harry Munro, baritone.
Hal Pierson, baritone.
Orton Love, basso cantante.

PITTSBURGH NOTES.

Pittsburgh, Pa., September 18, 1914.

Josephine B. Kirk, reader, and Florence Stewart-Blackmore, pianist, gave an interesting performance of Maeterlinck-Debussy's "Pelleas et Melisande" in Glenshaw last Saturday afternoon. Both artists are women of charm and culture and brought to this difficult work painstaking care and conscientious effort lightened and warmed by the glow of fine talent and rare insight. Without sacrifice of dramatic intensity, Miss Kirk emphasized the poetic and mystical elements of the drama. She was ably supplemented and supported by Mrs. Blackmore's artistic and finished handling of the piano score.

Among the out of town pupils studying with T. Carl Whitmer during his summer term is Mary Lee Reed, pianist, also organist of the Baptist Church at Fort Smith, Ark. Mr. Whitmer is unusually busy during his summer term, with professionals from other cities who study with him during their vacation period.

Marjorie Keil-Benton, soprano of the First Baptist Church, has returned to her position after a three months' tour of the West with Ferrante's Orchestra of the Redpath Bureau. Mrs. Benton had a very successful trip and is considering several offers for longer tours next season.

HOLLIS EDISON DAVENNY.

The Witeks to Return.

Word has been received by Herwegh von Ende that Anton Witek, violin soloist and concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and his wife, Vita Witek, the pianist, of Berlin, will return to this country early in October and will resume their instruction at the Von Ende School of Music at New York.

Victor Harris Resumes Work.

Victor Harris has already resumed work for the winter at his studio, The Beaufort, 140 West Fifty-seventh street, New York.

The Munich Conservatory (Royal Academy of Musical Art) had 432 pupils last season.

AMERICA'S HOST ABROAD.

[The MUSICAL COURIER is endeavoring to keep the subjoined list up to date. As soon as arrivals are reported in this country their names are removed from this roster. Should there be an oversight, or should any of America's musical personages now abroad not be included in the appended table, the MUSICAL COURIER would be grateful to receive such information so as to be able to keep the reference schedule correct. This list is not confined to Americans exclusively but embraces also all foreign artists resident in this country or who were expected to come here for participation in the musical season of 1914-15.—Editor MUSICAL COURIER.]

A

Arthur M. Abell, J. Allen, Leonora Allen, Richard Aldrich, Pasquale Amato, Paolo Ananian, Frances Alda, Arthur Aldridge.

B

Mrs. A. M. Blair, Birdice Blye, Alice L. Bryant, Mrs. Norah Brandt, Enid Brandt, Jessie Baskerville, Charles Bowes, Eddy Brown, Edmund Burke, John Braun, Alice Bingham, Mrs. George Beck, Helen Blain, Lillian Blauvelt, Carlo Buonamici, Rudolph Berger, Alessandro Bonci, Ferruccio Busoni, Willy Burmester, Amadeo Bassi, Lucrezia Bori, George Barrere, Grace Burnap, Hope Hopkins Burroughs, Wilhelm Bachaus.

C

Enrico Caruso, Julia Claussen, Cleofonte Campanini, Shanna Cumming, Lina Cavalieri, Arthur M. Curry, Mrs. Claude Cunningham, Augusta Cottlow, Pauline Curley, Lucy Call, Grace Cole, Marian Clark, Kittie Cheatham, California University Glee Club, Gertrude Cleophas, Jane Noria-Centannini, Maria Cavan, Julia Culp, Francis Coppicus, Jacques Coini, Ernesto Consolo, Charles Cooper, Andrea Casertani.

D

Adamo Didur, Charles Dalmores, Norah Drewett, J. F. Delma-Heide, Jenny Dufau, Emmy Destinn, Eleonora de Cisneros, Gaston Duchamel, Loretta Del Valle, Camille Decreus.

E

Annie Ellermann, Albert Elkus, Emma Eames, Edwin Evans, C. A. Ellis, William Engle.

F

George Fergusson, Truman Fassett, Mrs. E. Potter-Frissell, Benjamin Fabian, Geraldine Farrar, William Förster, Anna Fitzhugh, Carl Flesch, Edoardo Ferrari-Fontana, Flonzaley Quartet, Sam Franko, Rita Fornia, Carl Friedberg, Adelin Fermin.

G

Giulio Gatti-Casazza, Louise Gunning, Leopold Godowsky, Katherine Golcher, Katharine Goodson, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Gans, Hedwig Glomb, Emily Gresser, Mary Garden, Paolo Gruppe, Emilio de Gogorza, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, Clara Clemens-Gabrilowitsch, Aristodemo Giorgini, William J. Guard, Paolo Gallico, A. J. Goodrich, Otto Goritz, Dinh Gilly, Elena Gerhardt, Archer Gibson, Mr. and Mrs. Felix Garziglia, Mrs. Warner Gibbs.

H

Julia Hostater, Sara Hayman, David Hochstein, Ellis Clark Hammann, George Harris, Jr., Sue Harvard, Margaret Huston, Edwin Hughes, Carl Hillman, William Hinshaw, Edward Hargrave, Elmer G. Hoelzle, Allen Hinckley, Genevieve Houghton, Alfred Hertz, Heinrich Hensel, Frieda Hempel, Marie Hertenstein, Hans Himmer, Edna Hoff, Walter Heermann.

J

Sascha Jacobson,, Anna Taylor Jones, Clayton Johns, Edward Johnson, Hermann Jadlowker.

K

Grace Kerns, Mme. Rider-Kelsey, Earle G. Killeen, Sergei Kotlarsky, Georgia Kober, Adele Krueger, Fritz Kreisler, Dr. Ernst Kunwald, Leopold Kramer, Louis Koemmenich, Walter Kirschbaum, Frank King-Clark, Mrs. Frank King-Clark.

L

Felice Lyne, Hans Letz, Kathleen Lawlor, Leslie Loth, James Liebling, Cordelia Lee, Lucille Laurence, Marie White Longman, Josef Lhevinne, Georges Longy, Frank la Forge, Theodor Lattermann, Henri Le Roy, Mario Lambardi, Dr. and Mrs. Lovette, Edwin H. Lemare, Elizabeth Leonard, Louis Lombard.

M

Charles Henry Meltzer, Florence Macbeth, Zitella Martin, Marguerite Melville, Alma Moodie, Francis Maclennan, Florence Easton Maclennan, Christine Miller, Harry Munro, Marie Mohler, Francis Macmillen, Isolde Menges, Dr. Karl Muck, Ottilie Metzger, Lucian Muratore, Vanni Marcoux, Margarete Matzenauer, André Maquarre, Elisabeth Mack, Hans Merx, John McCormack, Daniel Maquarre, Katharine McNeal, Leopold de Maré, Laya Machat, Mrs. Daisy McKay, Victor Maurel, Carmen Melis, Pietro Minetti.

N

Emma Nevada, Mignon Nevada, Hildegarde Nash, Arthur Newstead.

O

Hendrikje Ohlsen, H. O. Osgood, W. B. Olds, Professor Otto, Mrs. Charles Orchard, Margarete Ober.

P

Paul Petri, Louis Persinger, Mrs. Dolly Pattison, A. Buzzi-Peccia, Henry Perry, Eleanor Pochler, Alfred Piccaver, May Esther Peterson, Ignace Jan Paderewski, Lucille Peck, Eleanor Peocock, Kathleen Parlow, Giorgio Polacco, F. Parme, S. van Praag, Anna Pavlowa.

Q

Alfred Quinn.

R

Titta Ruffo, Kate Rolla, Claude Reddisch, Meta Reddisch, Leon Rains, Elizabeth Reeside, Léon Rothier, Henry Russell, Marie Rappold, Albert Reiss, Jacques Renard, H. Royer, Leon Rice.

S

May Scheider, Gaston Sargent, Viola Gramm-Salzedo, Gladys Seward, Arnolde Stephenson, Carl Stasny, Wager Swayne, Irma Seydel, Theodore Seydel, Arthur Shattuck, Kurt Schindler, Ernest Schelling, Sigismund Stojowski, Albert Stoessel, Oscar Saenger, Andrea de Segurola, C. Wenham Smith, Ethel C. Smith, Carlos Salzedo, Katharine Loyal Phillips Shaw, J. D. Sample, Leo Slezak, Maria Sammarco, Arrigo Serato, Sevcik Quartet, Max Smith, Josef Stransky, Giulio Setti, Leo Schultz, Ann Swinburne, Rudolph E. Schirmer, Arthur P. Schmidt, Bruno Steindel, Umberto Sorrentino, Marcella Sembrich.

T

Louis Cambell-Tipton, Arturo Toscanini, Jacques Thibaud, Luisa Tetrazzini, Otto Tuft, Oswald Thumser, Enrico Tremonti, Elizabeth Topping, Isadore Troostwyck, André Tourret.

U

Otto Urack, Josef Urban, Jacques Urlus.

V

Alice Verlet, Otto A. Voget, Edna ver Haar, Coenraad von Bos, Luisa Villani, Constantin von Sternberg.

W

Felix Weingartner, Helen Bixby Wetzel, Edyth Walker, Hermann Hans Wetzler, Clarence Whitehill, Marie Louise Wagner, Nancy White, G. C. Weitzel, Helen Warrum, Coral Wait, Carolina White, Frank Waller, Beatrice Wheeler, Herman Weil, Anton Witek, Vita Witek, E. Walther, Edith Bower Whiffen, Grace Bonner Williams, Frederic Warren, Mrs. Warren.

Y

Eugen Ysaye.

Z

Alice Zeppilli, Katherine Ziegler.

Returned and Returning.

Louis Blumenberg, president of the MUSICAL COURIER Company, returned to New York last Friday on the steamship Lusitania.

Dr. Wm. C. Carl, the organist, was a passenger on the steamship Lusitania, arriving in New York Friday, September 18.

Louise Gerard-Thiers, the New York vocal teacher, returned from Europe, September 15.

Laurette Duval, a Providence, R. I., singer, has returned to that city from Europe.

Mme. Tecla Vigna, the Cincinnati teacher of singing, has returned from Europe.

Marie Josephine Newlove, pianist, of Minneapolis, expected to sail from Genoa, September 20.

Albino Gorno, of the Cincinnati, Ohio, College of Music, has returned from abroad.

Mildred Dilling, the harpist, arrived from Havre on board the steamship France, September 12.

Andreas Dippel returned from Europe September 15.

Martha Falk-Mayer, sister of Wm. J. Falk, and Beulah Munson, sailed from Liverpool Saturday, September 12, on the Lusitania, which arrived in New York September 18.

Siegfried Philip, the baritone, of Copenhagen, who is to appear in concert in this country, was a passenger on the same boat.

Herman Sandby, first cellist of the Philadelphia Orchestra, has sent word from Copenhagen that he will sail for this country during the latter part of September.

Anna Case, the Metropolitan Opera soprano, returned to New York last week via Montreal.

Caroll Badham Preyer, the New York vocal teacher, formerly of Paris and Berlin, arrived in New York on the steamship Noordam, of the Holland-American Line, August 4. Mme. Preyer sailed from Rotterdam on the second steamer sailing from that port following the declaration of war.

John Adams Warner, a member of the faculty of the D. K. G. Institute of Musical Art, Rochester, N. Y., is back from his summer spent with Godowsky at Ostende.

Marie Deutscher arrived in New York Saturday, September 12. She came on the steamship St. Louis and was obliged to travel steerage.

Ferdinand von Inten came from Europe August 29, on the steamship Olympic.

Regina de Sales has recently returned from Paris.

Anita Rio is expected to arrive in Boston September 24, on the White Star steamship Canopic.

Jeanne Jomelli arrived on the Lusitania, September 18.

James Sauvage, the baritone and teacher, of Newark, N. J., returned from Europe on September 18, on board the steamship Lusitania.

Howard Brockway, the American composer, is back in New York from abroad.

Esperanza Garrigue is due to arrive in New York, September 29, on the steamship Noordam.

Harold Land, of Newark, N. J., baritone and pupil of James Sauvage, of Newark and New York, arrived in New York, September 18, on board the steamship Lusitania.

Arthur Alexander, the tenor, arrived in New York, September 17, on the steamship Patria, from Marseilles.

Arthur Hartmann, the violinist, was a passenger on the steamship Patria, arriving in New York, September 17, from Marseilles.

Maximilian Kramer, European manager of McCann's Tours, Inc., returned to New York, September 15, on the Potsdam.

Minnie Tracey, soprano, has arrived in New York.

Joseph Gotsch, the cellist, and member of the New York Philharmonic Society, arrived in New York on the Finland, September 13.

Harry Rowe Shelley, organist and composer, arrived on the steamship Lusitania, September 18.

Edna Darch, a San Diego, Cal., musician, has returned from Europe.

E. A. Günther arrived in Boston on the freight steamship Socstdyk, September 3.

Nelle Boutelle, soprano, returned on the Philadelphia.

Vernon d'Arnalle, American baritone, is now in America.

Herma Menth, pianist, was a passenger on the Rotterdam, which arrived in New York on Labor Day.

N. Lindsay Norden has arrived in New York. Mr. Norden is director of the Aeolian Choir of Brooklyn.

Harold D. Phillips, of the Peabody Conservatory of Music, Baltimore, has returned from England.

Weldon Hunt, the Boston teacher of voice, has returned to that city from abroad.

Louise Bramhall has arrived in New York from Europe.

Oscar Seagle, the baritone, arrived in New York, Friday, September 18, on the steamship Baltic.

Antonio Scotti, the Metropolitan Opera Company baritone, sailed from London on the Mauretania, September 19.

Mrs. H. H. A. Beach, the American composer, has reached New York from abroad.

Sydney Ellison, the operatic producer, is coming to New York from London on the Cunard steamship Mauretania, which left England September 19.

Theodore Spiering, the conductor-violinist, arrived in New York on Monday morning, September 21.

Harold Bauer, the pianist, is expected to arrive in San Francisco, September 30, from Australia.

George W. Stewart, arrived from Europe on Monday, September 21, on the steamship New Amsterdam.

Richard Arnold was also a passenger on the steamship New Amsterdam, arriving in New York, September 21.

Ada Soder-Hueck, the contralto, is en route to New York aboard the steamship Noordam, which sailed from Rotterdam, September 19.

George Hamlin, the tenor, was due in Boston from Naples, September 22, on the steamship Canopic.

Frank Gittelson, the American violinist, arrived in New York on the steamship New Amsterdam, Monday, September 21.

Thuel Burnham expects to sail from London on September 25 via the Allen Line to Montreal.

Dr. W. L. Blumenschein, of Dayton, Ohio, reached New York on Monday, September 21, via Canada.

Priscilla White, vocal instructor, of Boston, Mass., has returned from Europe.

The League of Music Critics of Germany numbers forty-two members. The League of Those Who Are Not Music Critics, in New York, numbers only five members.—New York Morning Telegraph.

Marguerite Dunlap's Career.

It will be of interest to the clubs and local concert managers to learn that Marguerite Dunlap, the contralto, is about to launch her larger concert career, after being encouraged to do so by the unusual successes which she has been achieving at detached appearances made during the past season or two.

Coming to New York from South Carolina a few years ago, Marguerite Dunlap was taken in hand by Florence Manchester, the vocal pedagogue (who has been the artist's only teacher), and Miss Dunlap's vocalism developed so rapidly that she soon was able to do church solo work and filled positions in time at the First Grace M. E. church, the Clinton Avenue Congregational Church, and the Church of the Saviour, where she is at present.

About four years ago the Victor Talking Machine Company became aware of Miss Dunlap's exceptional voice and musical gifts, and secured her for their mixed quartet and concerted work, and for solo records, her most successful one being "Stille Nacht," which has had a tremendous sale and is familiar to nearly all owners of a Victor library of records.

MARGUERITE DUNLAP,
Contralto.

Miss Dunlap's highly profitable work at the Victor plant kept her engaged so continuously that she found concert traveling to be impossible, but she continued her studies with Mrs. Manchester, and as her services began to be demanded from outside sources, made appearances at nearby places which soon attracted managerial attention and much favorable critical comment, some of which is subjoined in excerpts:

Marguerite Dunlap's voice is mellow, round, luscious, with an appealing quality that is peculiar to a beautifully modulated contralto. She sings with ease, confidence and with a valuable faculty of interpretation. Her rendition of the aria, "Thou Art the Guide of Our Youth," left little to be desired.—Poughkeepsie (N. Y.) Newspress.

She won her audience with her sweet contralto voice solos and it is safe to say that she will be secured to appear in Pittsfield on a second occasion.—Berkshire Evening Eagle, Pittsfield, Mass.

Marguerite Dunlap's voice has a melody and sweetness that touches and draws the audience to her.—Summer Citizen, Asbury Park, N. J.

An exceedingly sweet voice. She sings with much artistic expression and feeling.—Arlington (N. J.) News.

A contralto voice of unusual beauty and range, which creates an impression which can only grow in depth of appreciation as time goes on.—Ottawa (Canada) Evening Journal.

For some fine singing in a group of three varied short songs Marguerite Dunlap received a hearty recall when she gave a very dainty and clever rendering of a quaint little song entitled "Hi Li'l Fellow."—Citizen, Ottawa, Canada.

A real contralto voice, which has distinct dramatic power.—Atlanta (Ga.) Journal.

A voice of superb quality and wide range and a charming personality. The friends she won last night would be pleased to have her come to this city again.—Pittsfield Journal, Pittsfield, Mass.

Sings with personal understanding of the thoughts she expresses. Her voice is particularly beautiful.—Poughkeepsie (N. Y.) Eagle.

Her rich contralto notes never sounded better nor was her interpretation ever more deep and sympathetic than in the role of Ursula.—Allentown (Pa.) Morning Call.

Miss Dunlap's most recent success was scored at the Peterborough (N. H.) MacDowell Festival, when the MUSICAL COURIER found occasion to call attention to her unusual beauty of voice, her uncommon depth of feeling, and her very attractive appearance and personality. As the Boston Globe remarked in its notice of the festival: "Miss Dunlap returned much matured in quality and intensity of tone and in the conception and delivery of her songs. Her singing was that of a woman of mind, feeling and emotion."

Gertrude F. Cowen has secured the services of this brilliantly promising young contralto and now is booking a tour for her which will extend Miss Dunlap's activities over a much larger field than formerly. Of her quick and decisive success wherever she sings there cannot be much question.

NEW YORK BREVITIES.

Mme. Dambmann Resumes—Kriens and His Manifold Activities—The Boices—Studios Reopen.

New York, September 19, 1914.

These "Brevities" will be brief indeed this week, inasmuch as local conditions, the warm weather and our foreign relations are such as to make the season late in beginning. Few teachers have really resumed work in Greater New York; some have not yet succeeded in breaking away from their forced European stay. When it takes five days to travel from Switzerland to Havre, France, and the traveler has to carry his own food, drink and blankets, then there is reason for European delay. This was the case with Dr. William C. Carl, who returned last week.

EMMA A. DAMBMANN RESUMES.

Emma A. Dambmann has resumed vocal instruction at her residence-studio, the Calumet, 340 West Fifty-seventh street. She announces this in a tasteful twelve-page circular containing notices of her own beautiful and much admired singing the past summer at Watch Hill, Musicolony and other resorts; a picture of herself; an essay, "Advice to Aspiring Singers," which was printed in the "Opera Magazine" last season; pictures of some of her leading pupils, with notices of their singing; names of forty pupils of last season, etc., all of which, in compact form, makes good reading. Especially is the "Advice" well worth any one's attention.

AN ATTRACTIVE CIRCULAR.

Charles W. Hyde, basso, issues a tasteful circular letter containing a brief sketch of himself, modestly written, alluding to his being a Cornell University graduate, that he has sung in the choir of the Church of the Divine Paternity and in the Schola Cantorum chorus, and making definite impression in the type written document. It is so different from the usual verbose communication from musical people that attention is called to it.

KRIENS' NEW STUDIO IN CARNEGIE HALL.

Christiaan Kriens, the composer, violinist, teacher of violin at "The Castle" School, director of music at Park Avenue Church, conductor of the large Kriens Symphony Club of 100 members, all amateurs, has been very busy "resting," as he calls it, by working in various forms of musical art at St. John River, Canada. October 1 he will open his fine new studio, 864 Carnegie Hall. The Symphony Club will reorganize soon after October 1, and the concerts will be resumed. Last year these concerts crowded the auditoriums in which they were given; the closing concert, at Aeolian Hall, was especially noteworthy and dignified. All metropolitan newspapers gave it attention.

THE BOICES RESUME.

Mrs. Henry Smock Boice, the teacher of many singers who are known to the public, and her daughter, Susan S. Boice, have had a fine summer's rest. The former has returned to her residence-studio, 43 East Twenty-seventh street, opposite Madison Square Garden, and resumed teaching. She accepts pupils, and takes them in a graduated course, from the beginning to finish. Artists from the Boice Studios appear as soloists at the Maine Festivals, so Mrs. Boice will attend at both Bangor and Portland; she also goes to the Bach Festival, at Bethlehem, Pa. Miss Boice has had a unique summer, being in charge of the music at a splendid camp in Canada. Entertainments in the open, in the woods, with appropriate music composed by herself, all this was very enjoyable in its closeness to nature. Last year they gave "The Piper" and this year Alfred Noyes' "Sherwood Forest," the solos and chorus composed by herself. She also sang some of her own music, all of it being unaccompanied. Quoting her: "We all come back to the cities refreshed, and with an uplift mentally, morally and physically." The present month she is spending at a cottage on the Atlantic Coast, opposite Old Point Comfort, resuming teaching in the two separate Boice studios at 43 East Twenty-seventh street, on October 1.

OWING TO THE WAR

MR. CHARLES W.
CLARK

has cancelled the extensive tour of Great Britain and Ireland booked for him by L. G. Sharpe of London

And Is Available for Recitals and Concerts

FOR THE WHOLE SEASON

Apply for dates to

Concert Direction M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue :: :: New York

Ada Soder-Hueck Returning to America.

Mme. Soder-Hueck is now on her way back to America on the steamship Noordam, which sailed from Rotterdam, September 19. She writes from Oberhof, three thousand feet above sea level, in the famous Thüringen Forest, that on reaching Hamburg in the early summer by the Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, she traveled to Cologne and thence up the Rhine to Mosel and Eifel, and on to Switzerland, where she was caught by the war. She made her way immediately to Berlin, taking eight days for the trip. On this journey she encountered Richard Strauss sitting on his trunk in the aisle of the train. She had the same unpleasant experiences as many others, but, at the time of writing, expected to reach home without further difficulty.

THE GERMAN CONTRALTO ON BOARD THE KAISERIN AUGUSTA VICTORIA.

MME. SODER-HUECK (LEFT) AND A GROUP OF FRIENDS IN THE GARDEN OF THE PARK HOTEL IN FITZMAN ON LAKE LUCERNE.

Bernthaler to Concertize in Middle West.

Carl Bernthaler, the pianist and conductor, of Pittsburgh, and his Festival Orchestra will give a series of orchestral concerts in the principal cities of the Middle West. Mr. Bernthaler has just closed a successful summer season at Pittsburgh.

Carrie Hirschman Detained in America.

Carrie Hirschman, the pianist, who has just returned to New York from the mountains, will begin her professional activities, October 1. Aside from her concert engagements, Carrie Hirschman will be busy with a large class of pupils.

IN ALL THE KEYS.

Eugenie Pappenheim, the former prima donna, now equally famous as a vocal instructor, has returned from her vacation and resumed lessons at her apartment studio, 101 West Seventy-eighth street, New York.

Ida Woodbury Seymour, the Brooklyn soprano, made a very favorable impression at the "Good Luck" summer meetings held by the Murray Grove Association, Murray Grove, N. J. At the missionary rally of August 17 she sang "He Leadeth Me," and on Memorial Sunday, August 22, "Fear Not Ye, O Israel," in Potter Memorial Church, with fine effect. Later, concluding the day's exercises, she very appropriately sang "Goodbye, Sweet Day," by Vannah.

Hattie Clapper Morris, the singer and teacher, has returned safely from Europe via Montreal. She finds the outlook good for her usual busy winter, though her patrons do not begin until next month. In London, where she gave lessons, her artist pupil, Maria Strakosch, the soprano, made a most successful debut in "Faust." Other artists prominently successful in concert, opera, church and elsewhere are her pupils, some of them never having had any other teacher.

Philadelphia is to hear "Martha" early in the autumn. It will be sung by the Behrens Opera Club at the Academy of Music. Thaddeus Rich, concertmaster of the Philadelphia Orchestra, who will conduct the performance, is now in charge of the rehearsals.

Eighteen hundred people listened to Cadman's Indian songs as sung by Mrs. Andrew Crozier, of Pittsburgh, in the big auditorium at Chautauqua, New York.

Marion Weed, of Rochester, N. Y., who was singing in opera in Germany at the outbreak of the war, is taking a course of lessons in nursing, with the intention of offering her assistance as a helper to the Red Cross nurses.

Mme. von Unschuld, Washington, D. C., has returned from the West, where she has been giving lectures and recitals. She is also booked for a series of engagements next season.

Henry Kaspar, the pianist, spent the summer in England. He has prepared programs under the coaching of Tobias Mathay, of London, for a series of recitals to be given during the winter.

Geoffrey O'Hara, a New York musician, has returned to Washington, D. C., from the Southwest, where he went to make phonographic records of the songs of the Navajo Indians. The Indian Bureau is making a collection of these songs, with a view to preserving the music of the disappearing Indian tribes, and of using them in connection with the education of the Indians in the schools.

Newark, N. Y., is considering the advisability of forming a community chorus, to give four or five free concerts during the year.

Lillian Ludwig has been elected directress of the musical department of Blinn Memorial College, Brenham, Tex. Miss Ludwig is a graduate of Baylor Female College at Belton, Tex., and goes to Brenham from Sherman, Tex., where she has taught piano and voice for the past three years.

Having nearly completed a municipal auditorium, the city of Oakland, Cal., is making plans for a series of popular symphony concerts by the People's Philharmonic Orchestra, a local organization.

At a recent musicale given by Elmer S. Joyce, the Bridgeport, Conn., artist, in his home at Musicolony, the soloists included Belle B. Ten Eyck, soprano; Mrs. Howard Baker, contralto; Dr. Franklin Lawson, tenor; Arpad Rodo, violinist; Otto Graff, pianist, and Mrs. Elmer Beardsley and Mrs. Joyce, accompanists.

Marie Josephine Newlove, of Minneapolis, who for seven years has been a pupil of Leschetizky at Vienna, expected to tour Europe this fall, but owing to the present hostilities in that country she has been obliged to alter her plans.

Mr. Fletcher has returned to Toronto, Canada, from New York, where he secured the rights for first production of a number of beautiful new choral works for the Schubert Choir concerts in February next, among which are "The Beatitudes," by Rachmaninoff, and "Sanctus and Benedictus," by Tschaikowsky.

A new feature of Dr. Little's Conservatory of Music, Beaver, Pa., this year will be the opening of the Pittsburgh branch to facilitate the attendance of pupils residing in Pittsburgh and outlying districts other than the Beaver Valley.

From Paris comes this statement: "With a view to keeping up the spirits of the soldiers at the front, the Minister of War, M. Millerand, has authorized the famous Breton poet and singer, Theodore Botrel, author of "La Paimpolaise" and several other popular pieces, to go to sing patriotic songs in the depots, camps and hospitals of the eastern and northern armies."

Cincinnati, Ohio, will resume the rehearsals of its May Festival chorus, October 5, under the direction of Alfred Hartzell.

The St. Paul Musical Academy, a new institution founded by E. Bruce Knowlton, who also is its president, and who comes from Toledo, where he formerly was president of a musical college, has opened for the season. Mr. Knowlton has announced that the work of the college will be presided over by a faculty of thirty, the majority of whom are St. Paul teachers.

A series of faculty concerts are to be given during the school year, the first of which will be presented this month at White Bear, Minn., where a branch school has been started by Minnette Lake Warren.

Rudolf Larsen, late of St. Petersburg, Russia, and for several years a pupil of Professor Auer, has taken up his residence in Toronto, Canada.

Fred Carson, of Trenton, N. J., has been filling many engagements during the summer season at Sea Isle City and Atlantic City, N. J. The baritone has, it is reported, many engagements for the coming season in concert work in Trenton.

Kansas City, Mo., has a recently organized Musical Art Choir. The officers are: Ralph Townley, president; Florence White Miller, vice-president; Mrs. F. M. Holyrod, secretary and treasurer, and George Deane, director.

The Orpheus Quartet, Kansas City, Mo., composed of Marvin Bryan, first tenor; Joseph Sanders, second tenor and pianist; Harry Clay, baritone, and Stanley Norvell, bass, is beginning its second season.

Bernadine Julia and Mary Lee Korn are two talented fourteen year old pianists of New Orleans, La. A benefit concert has been arranged to send them abroad for study.

Spokane, Wash., is said to be duly proud of its 100 voice male chorus, a new organization. H. W. Newton is the director and C. Olin Rice the accompanist.

Alma Webster Powell and Marion Powell, with A. J. Powell, accompanist, were heard in vocal numbers, and Eugenio di Pirani in classical piano selections at a concert at State Line Pavilion, Great Barrington, Mass., given the last week in August.

John C. Bostelmann, Jr., owner and director of the Bostelmann Conservatory of Music, Corning, N. Y., has been elected president and active manager of the Rochester (N. Y.) Conservatory of Music. Florence Belden Weeks was elected vice president, and Floyd H. Spencer, secretary and treasurer. William E. Duckwitz, for seven years director of the Toledo Conservatory of Music, is to be head of the piano department. Other members of the faculty are Hermann Handry, of the Royal Conservatory, Brussels; Edgar G. Frazier, Florence Belden Weeks and Frederick Richards Benson.

More than 100 members of the Singers' Club celebrated "Sincere Day" at the home of Victor W. Sincere, manager of the Bailey Company, Cleveland, Ohio, recently.

Mrs. George S. Richards has been elected president of the Matinee Musical Club, Duluth, Minn.

Despite the war, the Rochester (N. Y.) Orchestra is to have its full list of soloists.

Oscar Gareissen has become one of the directors of the D. K. G. Institute of Musical Art, Rochester, N. Y. Mr. Gareissen is dean of the faculty and head of the department of voice culture and the art of singing. Associated with him are Tom Karl and Leila Livingston. Jennie Beach Mumford, teacher of piano, has been added to the faculty. Hermann Dossenbach is at the head of the violin department, and Alf. Klingenberg is at the head of the piano department. The D. K. G. Institute of Musical Art is the successor to the Dossenbach-Klingenberg School of Music.

Donaldson's Busy Season.

Gay Donaldson, the baritone, of Cleveland, Ohio, well known to churchgoers as the director of the choir at the Euclid Avenue Baptist Church, in addition to being the baritone soloist, is extremely busy preparing for his coming season. Mr. Donaldson will be heard in concert and also in joint recital with Alice Shaw, the Cleveland contralto. The recitals will consist of solos, duets and song cycles and should prove of great interest to music lovers, since both Mrs. Shaw and Mr. Donaldson are splendid artists.

Zoe Fulton with Pittsburgh Orchestra.

One of the most successful soloists who appeared with the Pittsburgh Festival Orchestra during its summer series of concerts on the lawn of the Schenley Hotel, Pittsburgh, was Zoe Fulton, the contralto, of Pittsburgh. Miss Fulton scored with her audience, leaving an excellent impression of her work. Miss Fulton proved convincingly her ability as an artist in concert work, while her worth in the field of opera is well known to her many admirers.

In Harmony.

She (at the ball game)—Why does he make those motions with his arms before he pitches the ball?

He—Those are signals to the catcher. The two men work in concert.

She—Dear me! Is that the concert pitch I've heard about so often?—Boston Transcript.

Address Wanted.

The MUSICAL COURIER office is holding for proper address a letter for Mr. C. Mapes.

RESIDENCE FOR GIRLS—Studying Music, Art, Drama, Languages, Dancing and enjoying New York's unrivaled operas, concerts, museums, and varied cultural advantages. Students have privilege of a piano in room and unrestricted practice. Chaperonage if desired. October 1 to June 1, $400 to $600. For particulars address ALEXANDRA HALL, 152 West Seventy-second Street, New York City. Phone, 988 Columbus.

TO LET

STUDIO TO SUBLET—Large, attractive, moderate rent, central location, two days weekly, by the year; to musician of high class professional standing only; vocalist or violinist preferred. Address A. D. VAN TAGE, care MUSICAL COURIER, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.

TO SUBLET—Beautifully furnished studio for half days or evenings. Best central location. Reference required. Address "PROFESSIONAL," care MUSICAL COURIER, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.

WANTED

WANTED—2 Pianists (for advanced students), one Violinist and one Vocalist (all must be artistic performers) for large Pacific Coast Conservatory. Only very best of credentials (character as well as musical) and satisfactory salary demands will receive consideration. Address "E. M. Y.," care of MUSICAL COURIER, 437 Fifth avenue, New York.

EXPERIENCED young lady harpist, teacher, all around musician, possessing dramatic ability and doing refined novelty, will consider high class engagements from reliable managers. Church, Concert and Symphony Orchestras. Address by letter only, MARIE LODEEN, 34 West Thirty-eighth street, New York.

CENTURY OPERA HOUSE
Central Park West, at 62d & 63d Sts., New York City
'Phone Columbus 8800
SEASON 1914-15
Grand Opera in English and Original Languages.
SEATS ON SALE TEN WEEKS IN ADVANCE.
CENTURY LYCEUM AND CONCERT HALL
(In the Century Opera House)
Available on Rentals for CONCERTS, RECITALS, THEATRICALS, ETC.

SUSANNAH MACAULAY
TEACHER OF SINGING
Perfect Method of Breathing Taught
STUDIO: 143 CARNEGIE HALL, NEW YORK
Composer of "Allah is Great," "The Butterfly," "Ave Maria"

ZOE FULTON
PRIMA DONNA CONTRALTO
Direction: Marc Lagen, 500 5th Ave., New York
Per. Add.: Pennsylvania College for Women, Pittsburg, Pa.

Mrs. MINNIE M. McCONNELL
Voice Culture and Coach
McConnell Vocal Trio
204 Cathedral Parkway, (W. 110th St.) New York
Phone: River 6439

Mme. M. Karweska
GRAND OPERA ARTIST
SOUTHERN RUSSIA, BUDAPEST and VIENNA

REUBEN H. DAVIES
Concert Pianist
Address, care of Musical Courier
437 Fifth Avenue New York

HENRY P. SCHMITT
VIOLIN INSTRUCTION
Residence Studio: 203 W 81st St. New York Tel Schuyler 951

MARIE YAHR Contralto
Oratorio - Concert - Recital and Opera
Phone, Ravenswood 2319. 849 Lakeside Place, Chicago

GAMBLE CONCERT PARTY
CHARLES WILSON GAMBLE, Pilot
BOOKING EVERYWHERE
East End, Pittsburg, Pa.

ETTA EDWARDS VOCAL TEACHER
4000 Delmar Blvd., St. Louis, Mo

Mrs. HALL McALLISTER
TEACHER OF SINGING
Musical Management
407 Pierce Building Bosto

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS
SEP 11 1914

MUSICAL COURIER

A WEEKLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND ITS ALLIED ARTS

Thirty-fifth Year | Price 15 Cents | Subscription $5.00 | Foreign, $6.25 Annually

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 13 | NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1914 | WHOLE NO. 1801

(1) OLIVE KLINE,
Soprano.

(2) MILDRED POTTER,
Contralto.
(Photo copyright by Frank C. Bangs, N. Y.)

(3) CLARENCE E. WHITEHILL,
Baritone.

(4) EVAN WILLIAMS,
Tenor.

(5) FLORENCE HINKLE,
Soprano.

(6) GUSTAV STRUBE,
Conductor of orchestra.

(7) CHRISTINE SCHUTZ,
Contralto.

(8) WILLIAM H. PAGDIN,
Tenor.

(9) HERBERT WITHERSPOON,
Basso.

One of the Orchestral Conductors and Some of the Soloists at the Fifty-Seventh Worcester Music Festival, Held at Worcester, Mass., September 23, 24, 25

INTERNATIONAL MUSICAL AND EDUCATIONAL AGENCY.
Church, Concert and School Positions Secured.
MRS. BABCOCK,
CARNEGIE HALL, New York.
Telephone: 2634 Columbus.

HELENE BARTENWERFFER
MEZZO SOPRANO—VOCAL INSTRUCTOR.
111 W. 74th St. Tel. 4934 Columbus.

M. F. BURT SCHOOL
Sight-Singing, Ear-Training, Musical Stenography. Normal courses in Public and Private School Music. Special coaching for church trials.
New York School, 1202 Carnegie Hall.
Address Brooklyn School, 1202 Lefferts Place.

PAUL SAVAGE,
VOICE CULTURE.
803 Carnegie Hall,
New York.

H. RAWLINS BAKER,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Studio, 622 Aeolian Hall.
Tel. 8296 Bryant.

MAX KNITEL-TREUMANN,
BARITONE.
Voice Culture—Art of Singing.
Studio, Carnegie Hall.
Mail address: Fifth Ave., New Rochelle, N. Y.

: MOCK Miss SUSAN S.
B O I C E.
VOCAL STUDIOS.
43 E. 27th St., N. Y., Tel. 1977 Mad. Sq.

E. PRESSON MILLER,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
826 Carnegie Hall.
Tel. 1350 Columbus.

MARY HISSEM DE MOSS,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
106 W. 90th St. Phone, 3552 River.
Exclusive m'g't of Haensel & Jones, Aeolian Hall.

MME. MINNA SCHLOEMANN,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION—Serious Pupils Only.
10 Manhattan Ave., N. Y. Phone, 4845 Riverside.

HENRY T. FLECK,
Head Musical Department,
Hunter College, New York.
69th St. and Park Ave. - - - Tel. 2443 Plaza.

FLORENCE E. GALE,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals and Concerts.
Instruction, Leschetizky Method.
151 W. 70th St. Telephone, 5331 Columbus.

HATTIE CLAPPER MORRIS,
TEACHER OF SINGING IN ALL BRANCHES.
1730 Broadway, Cor. 55th St.
Telephone, 4117 Columbus.

ZIEGLER INSTITUTE OF NORMAL SINGING
MME. ANNA E. ZIEGLER, Director.
Met. Opera House Bldg., 1425 B'way, New York.
Tel. 1274 Bryant.

HENRIETTA SPEKE-SEELEY,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
1425 Broadway—Metropolitan Opera House.
Residence, 2184 Bathgate Ave. Phone, 3067 Tremont

DUDLEY BUCK,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
Aeolian Hall, 33 West 42nd St.
Phone, 7408 Bryant. New York.

GRAND CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC,
113 West 85th St., New York. Tel. 4152 Schuyler.
Special course for teachers and professionals. Degrees granted. Thorough course for beginners.
Dr. B. Eberhard, Pres. (Thirty-ninth year.)

ELIZABETH TOPPING
PIANO INSTRUCTION.
254 W. 104th St. - - - New York.

ELIZABETH K. PATTERSON,
SOPRANO. TEACHER OF SINGING.
Studio: 257 West 104th Street.
'Phone, 8101 Riverside.

JANET BULLOCK WILLIAMS,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
122 Carnegie Hall.

JAMES P. DUNN,
Composer and Organist, St. Patrick's Church, Jersey City. Instruction, Piano, Organ. Theory and Sight Singing. (Specialty Gregorian Chant and Catholic Church Music.) Phone, 782-R Bergen.

SIGNOR FILOTEO GRECO,
THE ART OF SINGING.
Studio: 62 East Thirty-fourth Street, New York.
Telephone: 4879 Murray Hill.

LOUISE KELLOGG,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
1211 Carnegie Hall. Tel. 1350 Columbus.

MORITZ E. SCHWARZ,
Ass't Organist, Trinity Church, New York.
RECITALS AND INSTRUCTION.
Address Trinity Church, New York.

ADOLF GLOSE,
Concert Pianist, Piano Instruction. Coach for professional and advanced singers.
Residence studio: 81 Morningside Ave., City.
'Phone, 2193-J Morningside.

LISBET HOFFMANN,
PIANIST.
12 Pierce Street, Stapleton (Staten Island).

WILBUR A. LUYSTER,
SIGHT SINGING SPECIALIST.
(Galin-Paris-Chevé Method).
Instructor 8 years at Metropolitan Opera Co. All Singers taught to read (church or otherwise), Rhythm, Ear Training, Supervisors' Course.
Tuesday and Friday Classes. 64 E. 34th St., N. Y.
Tel. 5469-J Bedford. 127 Quincy St., Brooklyn.

Miss EMMA THURSBY,
SOPRANO.
Will receive a limited number of pupils.
Residence, 34 Gramercy Park.
Phone, 3187 Gramercy. New York City.

BRUNO HUHN
231 West 96th St., New York.
STYLE, DICTION, REPERTOIRE, ETC., TO VOCALISTS.

DR. A. MADELEY RICHARDSON
Member of the Faculty of Institute of Musical Art.
VOICE PRODUCTION AND TONE-PLACING.
Teacher of singing, from the earliest stages to Opera, Oratorio and Recital work.
Tel. Morningside 7587. Studio, 490 Riverside Drive.

JOHN W. NICHOLS,
TENOR.
330 W. 58th St., N. Y. C. Phone, 1434 Columbus.

CLAUDE WARFORD,
TENOR.
Metropolitan Opera House.
1425 Broadway, New York.

CARL M. ROEDER,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
607 Carnegie Hall and 423 East 140th St.

FREDERICK E. BRISTOL,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
No. 143 West 42d St., New York.

MR. CHARLES LEE TRACY,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Certified Teacher of the LESCHETIZKY METHOD.
Studio: Carnegie Hall, - - New York City.

JOSEPH PIZZARELLO,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Voice Developed—Style, Opera.
851-852 Carnegie Hall, New York.

WILLIAM NELSON BURRITT,
VOICE SPECIALIST
AND REPERTOIRE BUILDER.
128A East 19th Street.
Tel. Gramercy 3848.

WALTER L. BOGERT,
President N. Y. State Music Teachers' Ass'n, 1913; Member of Advisory, Standards, and Examining Committees, 1914.
Baritone. Teacher of Singing. Lectures and Recitals.
130 Claremont Ave., New York. Tel. 291 Morn'side.
Tuesday and Friday, 114 West 72d St.

Piano Instruction Telephone
Theory of Music 7280 Schuyler
CARL HAHN,
MUSICAL DIRECTOR.
Studio: 172 West 79th St. (The Avonel).

F. W. RIESBERG,
INSTRUCTION—PIANO, ORGAN, HARMONY.
With the "Musical Courier"; Sec'y Manuscript Society; Organist Central Baptist Church, New York. 439 Fifth Ave.; Tel. 4292 Murray Hill.
Residence, Park Hill, Yonkers, N. Y.

JESSIE DAVIS,
PIANIST.
Concerts—Recitals—Lessons.
Studio: 701 Pierce Bldg., Boston.

CARL FIQUÉ, PIANO
KATHERINE NOAK-FIQUÉ,
Dramatic Soprano
FIQUE MUSICAL INSTITUTE,
128 DeKalb Avenue, Brooklyn.

Miss GENEVIEVE BISBEE,
—Leschetizky Method—
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
Also limited number of resident pupils received.
38 East 60th St. 'Phone, 6109 Plaza.

ALICE GARRIGUE MOTT,
ART OF SINGING.
172 West 79th St., New York.

WARD LEWIS,
ACCOMPANIST—With Mr. David Bispham season 1914. With Riheldaffer-Gailey Co. touring West Summer 1914.
547 Riverside Drive, New York.
Phone, 3753 Morningside.

ESPERANZA GARRIGUE,
ART OF SINGING.
Heathcote Hall, 609 West 114th St., New York
Tel. 7814 Morningside.
(Bet. Broadway and Riverside Drive.)

MRS. WILLIS E. BACHELLE
TEACHER OF SINGING.
22 East 33d St., New York City

MME. EMMA A. DAMBMANN,
(MRS. HERMANN G. FRIEDMANN.)
CONTRALTO.
Vocal Instruction, Concerts.
Residence Studio, Hotel Calumet
Phone: Columbus 1628. 340 West 57th

THE NEW YORK INSTITUTE F
VIOLIN PLAYING, PIANO A
VOCAL CULTURE, 230 East 62d St
Complete musical education given to stud from the begining to the highest perfection.
F. & H. CARRI, Director

MARY T. WILLIAMSON,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals, Concerts, Instruction.
Leschetizky Method. 21 East 75th St.
'Phone, 1302 Lenox.

JESSAMINE HARRISON-IRVINE,
Pianist—Accompanist. 864 Carnegie
Instruction—Coaching. New York.
Telephone, 1350 Columbus.

MR. AND MRS. THEO. J. TOEDT
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Home Studio: 163 East 62d St., New Y

T. TERTIUS NOBLE,
ORGANIST AND MASTER OF THE CH
Lessons in Organ, Theory and Composit
St. Thomas' Church, Fifth Ave. and 53d

VON DOENHOFF,
VOICE—HELEN. PIANO—ALF
1186 Madison Ave.
'Phone: 1332 Lenox.

DANIEL VISANSKA, VIOLINIS
Nine years of successful teaching and conce in Berlin. Will accept engagements and a number of pupils.
Address: 25 West 126th St., New Yo
Phone, Harlem 3427.
[In Philadelphia Mondays. Address 182 mond St.]

ELENA DE OLLOQUI,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
111 East 62d St., New York. Tel., 2285

MME. LISETTE JOSTY-HAMMO
"Voice-placing and Singing" through "Co Italian Enunciation."
Metropolitan Opera House Bldg.,
1425 Broadway, New York.

HERBERT WILBER GREEN
SCHOOL OF SINGING.
Director of the Brookfield Summer School of 701 Carnegie Hall, N. Y. City.

MUSICAL COURIER

OL. LXIX.—NO. 13. NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1914. WHOLE NO. 1801.

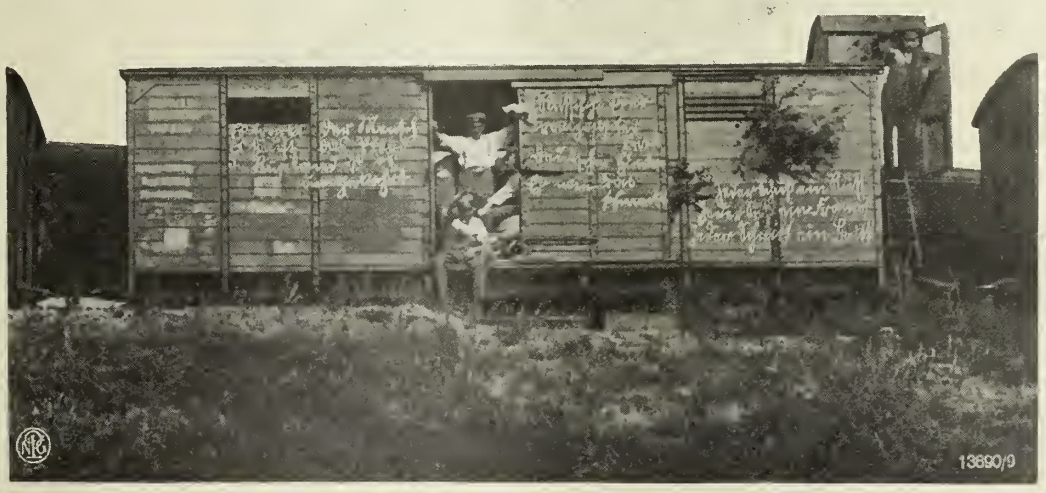
BERLIN SEASON BUSY AND INTERESTING.

otwithstanding the War Music Goes on in the German Capital—The Philharmonic Orchestra Gives Its First Concert—Julia Culp and Ludwig Wüllner Heard in Joint Recital for the Red Cross—The Nikisch Concerts to Be Resumed—Also the Philharmonic and Singakademie Choirs Decide to Give Their Regular Seasons.

Jenaer St. 21,
Berlin, September 14, 1914.

The musical season in Berlin promises to be much more ive and interesting than was thought possible two weeks o. Confidence has been restored to such an extent that merous concert institutions which had decided to re- in inactive during the winter have now announced that y will give their regular series. The Nikisch Philhar- nic, the most important of all Berlin concerts, will be en; the regular series of matinees and evenings of that comparable oratorio society, the Phil- rmonic Choir, under Siegfried Ochs, ll occur as usual; the Singakademie oir, under Georg Schumann, also ll resume activities, while an almost dless number of Red Cross concerts celebrated artists will draw out the triotic public. There will be no arth of concerts of the highest ade; what the war will eliminate ab- utely can easily be dispensed with— endless and tedious concerts by butantes and mediocrities. We are sured of the Royal Opera, the Char- tenburg Opera, the Philharmonic ps, three times a week, in addition the above list of musical entertain- nts—in very truth a remarkable owing for a war capital.

Philharmonic Opens Its Season.



The first concert of the Philharmonic Orchestra occurred ptember 12, and the Pops commenced last night—two eks earlier than usual. The first Philharmonic concert s given for the benefit of the war fund and how far patriotic spirit and a love of music go hand in hand in rlin was evidenced by the immense audience that com- tely filled our largest concert hall. The Philharmonic rchestra was assisted by the Berlin edertafel, which sang several beauti- l old Dutch works for male choir d orchestra with patriotic texts that flected eloquently the mood of the rman nation at the present moment. here were also two baritone solos ng by Otto Teichmann. The choir, der Max Wiedermann's leadership, ng magnificently. The audience ood up en masse while the final num- r, a "Dankgebet," was rendered. Ar- ur Schnabel gave a refined, finished ading of the Beethoven E flat con- rto and Hildebrandt conducted the oriolan" overture and the "Eroica" mphony effectively. The gross re- ipts were turned over to the war nd.

Culp-Wüllner Recital.

Julia Culp and Ludwig Wüllner, o prime favorites with the Berlin blic, were heard in joint recital for e first time on Thursday, the 10th. his concert was given for the Red oss, and Beethoven Hall was sold t. Mme. Culp sang gloriously, her ice sounding fresher and more beau- ful than ever. Her selections were der by Beethoven and Schubert. Wüllner sang a group lieder with impassioned delivery, but he was more im- essive and successful in four recitations by Liliencron d Hauptmann, creating with these a veritable furore. Both artists were in magnificent form and aroused great enthusiasm.

Other Concerts.

Several other important concerts for various charities connected with the war have been given and many more are to follow in the near future. One of particular interest will be given jointly by Ferruccio Busoni and Xaver Scharwenka for the benefit of needy musicians. There are hundreds of such, who have been thrown out of employment through the war. At another concert Conrad Ansorge and Willy Hess will play the "Kreutzer" sonata. At still another the leading soloists of the Royal Opera will participate.

GERMAN FREIGHT CAR USED AS BARRACKS.

Forgotten Millöcker Operetta Revived.

Carl Millöcker's charming forgotten operetta, "The Field Chaplain," was revived, September 5, at the Charlottenburg Opera and scored an emphatic success. It was thirty years ago that the work was first produced in Berlin; it had a great run for one whole season and then disappeared from the boards. It has chiefly the patriotic character of its libretto (which deals with the great uprising of the German people against Napoleon in 1813), to thank for its resurrection, but the music itself is so delightfully spontaneous and melodious that it was well worth bringing out again for the sake of the score alone. In the third act Sudermann's "Kaiserlied" was skillfully introduced, with music by Director Hartmann. The audience listened to this standing. The artists, Hausen, Lordmann, Lieban, and Mmes. Stolzenberg and Schneider, deserve warm praise for their spirited singing and acting. Möricke conducted. Great enthusiasm prevailed after the second act, which closes with the German national hymn, in which the entire audience joined, all standing.

GERMAN TROOPS ENTRAINING.

Germany and Foreigners.

On all sides here one hears nothing but praise for the wonderful attitude of the German authorities and the public at large toward all foreigners, be they friends or enemies. The Russians and English who are here in Berlin in large numbers receive every possible courtesy. Germany does not look upon the individual Russian, French or English citizens as enemies; it is the nation only. The private property of these people here is as safe as it would be in their own countries.

Naturally Russians and Frenchmen holding public positions in Germany have lost their posts, for the patriotic spirit of the people, which is tremendous throughout all classes, demands this. Michael Press, who was engaged by the Dresden Royal Opera Orchestra to succeed Petsi as first concertmaster, has been notified by the management that his contract has been canceled. Press is a Russian.

Outdoor Opera.

Weber's "Freischütz" was recently performed in the open air in the Zoppot forest near Dantzig. With the lovely bay of Dantzig as a background, the performance was impressive.

Cellist Malkin in Trouble.

Joseph Malkin, who has been engaged as solo cellist by Dr. Muck for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is experiencing difficulties in getting out of Germany, as he is a Russian subject.

Flesch Undecided.

Carl Flesch, who was in Berlin for a couple of days last week, is at present undecided whether to sail for America or not. He belongs to the so called Austrian "Landsturm" and he may be called to arms any day.

Arthur M. Abell.

WHAT MAY HAPPEN TO MUSIC

In the London Musical Times Ernest Newman Gives Voice to His Views on the Subject of How the European War Will Affect Music.

"The German publishers will almost certainly be so hard hit that they will be unwilling or unable to speculate in new music of the higher sort. If the war continues for a year or two, every musical undertaking that at the best of times has hard work to keep its finances on the right side will cut down all superfluous expenditure; one effect of which will be that composers must either abate the extravagance of their present demands for performing fees or do without performances. . . .

"It is impossible," he writes, "for the continent to pass through so great a strain as this without a setting free of great funds of dormant emotion, and a turning of old emotions into new channels. These tremendous crises always have a far-reaching nervous effect. Sensitive and delicately poised

Alberto JONAS
Jenaer St. 29, Berlin, W.

HOWARD WELLS
PIANIST AND TEACHER
Authorized representative of
LESCHETIZKY
5428 KIMBARK AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.
Appointments by telephone, Blackstone 1620.

ELEANOR HAZZARD
PEOCOCK
(SOPRANO)
Exclusive Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON
437 FIFTH AVENUE - - - NEW YORK CITY

OLGA AND HELENE CASSIUS
Vocal Instruction
Pupils prepared for the operatic and concert stage. Specialties: Placing of ruined voices, rectifying of wrong methods of breathing by articulation of consonants and voice inflection, and fundamental building of speaking voice. Send for Olga Cassius' "Die Erzieuhung der Stimme und Atmung."
Studio: Prager Str. 35, Berlin, W.

MAURICE VERA KAPLUN
ARONSON
PIANIST-PEDAGOG CONCERT-PIANISTE
BERLIN, W. BOZENER ST. 18

VICTOR HEINZE
Send for free booklet "Studying Music Abroad"
Pianist and Teacher Most modern principles. Thorough artistic education. Eminently successful.
PETER VISCHER STR. 19 BERLIN-FRIEDENAU

VITTORINO MORATTI
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
For four years the only assistant of the late G. B. LAMPERTI
Authorized representative of his method
BERLIN W., MOTZ ST. 53

GEORGE
FERGUSSON
BARITONE
VOCAL INSTRUCTOR
Augsburger St., 64 Berlin W., Germany

SUMMER CLASS FOR THE
LESCHETIZKY METHOD
UNDER INSTRUCTION OF
MRS. POTTER-FRISSELL
IN NEW SCHANDAU-OSTRAU, SAXON SWITZERLAND, GERMANY
Address Villa 6, as above.
Class continues until October 15, 1914

King Clark Studios
Kurfürstendamm 63, Berlin, W.
Cable Address: KINGARK, BERLIN

brains they may drive into a sort of insanity, as the troubles of his time drove Burke toward the end.

"These nerve-racked periods generate a nervous race. The bizarreries and morbidities of the French romantic movement were the direct outcome of the Napoleonic wars; how could these men have healthy minds and healthy bodies, conceived as they were, as De Musset said of his generation, between two battles? And we have only to read De Musset's 'Confession d'un Enfant du Siecle' to realize how inevitable were the cynicism and the materialism of the France of 1830 after the reaction that followed the fever of the Napoleonic epoch. We may depend upon it that this war will have its profound effects on the finer musical minds of the continent. There will be new horizons to envisage new hopes and fears and joys and despairs to be sung.

"There is no doubt that of late music has lacked truly commanding personalities and really vitalizing forces. Now that Strauss has failed us there is no one of whom we can think as having the seeds of the future in him. German music as a whole has settled into a complacent tilling of an almost exhausted field; a few discontented spirits like Schonberg have aspirations toward something new and more personal, but without the capacity to realize them. The French are all small people—very interesting, but indubitably small. Italian music is strangling in the grip of a commercial octopus. Russia is divided between men who see the wisdom of building upon the classical tradition but are not quite big enough to give the tradition an unmistakably new life, and men who reject the past before they are sure of the future, or even of the present.

JULIA CULP,
Who appeared at a Red Cross benefit concert in Berlin, September 10.

"In England Elgar is still the one figure of impressive stature; the men who are almost contemporary with him are not fulfilling their early promise, while in the crowd of younger men it is impossible to distinguish one who has the least chance of making history. Never has there been an epoch of such general musical capacity, but great figures and great ideas are not so plentiful."

People's Symphony Auxiliary Club.

The auxiliary club of the People's Symphony Concerts, announces a series of six Saturday night chamber music concerts for students and wage earners at the auditorium of the Washington Irving High School, New York, at further reduced prices.

These club concerts, devoted to the presentation of chamber music by the most noted organizations, hitherto given at Cooper Union, will move to the beautiful auditorium of Washington Irving High School. To make it possible for a still greater number of music lovers to attend these concerts, the price has been reduced to $1 for six concerts, making the admission price to a single concert less than 17 cents. This puts the music of America's best chamber organizations within the reach of all.

The membership of the People's Concerts Auxiliary Club is recruited among music and art students, teachers, professional people, wage earners, and music lovers generally who cannot afford the ordinary high prices that usually prevail. The enrollment this year is large, and the outlook is for a very successful season.

Among the organizations for this season's concerts are the Kneisel Quartet, the Kaufman Quartet, the St. Cecilia Club, the Tollefsen Trio, and the Olive Mead Quartet. The special educational feature for this year will be a series of talks upon "Musical Form" by Franz X. Arens, the musical director, which will be illustrated by references to the works performed.

The management this year is under the direction of Egmont H. Arens. Membership tickets may be obtained at the office of the society, 32 Union Square. The dates for this season's concerts are October 24, November 28, January 16, February 6, March 6 and April 10.

The People's Symphony orchestral concerts to be given at Carnegie Hall, New York, will have some notable features this year, announcement of which will soon be made.

Arthur Alexander's Rare Gifts.

It is rare indeed that any one person possesses complete mastery of two separate branches of his art. Possessed as most artists are with a genius restricted by certain limitations, there are few who are able to master more than a single branch of music, either the voice or some instrument, or composition, and even in composition it is rare that any musician ever absolutely masters more than one branch of this work. It is this that makes all the more remarkable the versatility of those few who are at one time great singers and great pianists. There have been few such. Although many singers play the piano and many pianists sing, the number of those who do both with such superlative brilliancy that they are both equally useful, is quite rare.

It is this dual ability that makes the work of Arthur Alexander so intensely interesting. It is his complete mastery of the vocal technic, the beauty of his voice, and his no less complete mastery of the piano, and his intense musicianship, his absolutely correct interpretation, which place him in the front rank among contemporary artists. This praise seems almost fulsome, but it is written by one who has often heard the work of Mr. Alexander and who has heard the applause and cheers and has seen the intense enthusiasm in the audience which has greeted this young artist's every effort. That end could only be gained by great technic, a fine musicianship and also no less by a splendid magnetism and all of these essentials Arthur Alexander certainly possesses. Unless signs fail, this young man will win the same instantaneous success in America that he has in Europe. It is impossible to describe in writing the remarkable ease with which Mr. Alexander carries off a program of difficult songs, gliding from one to another with modulations of extreme beauty and brilliancy, verging gradually from the rhythm of one song into the rhythm of another and never for a moment losing the characteristics of the composer whose works he is interpreting.

If any one who reads this has ever taken notice of the work which is done by professional arrangers in selections from the classical operas, he will, no doubt, have detected that wherever the arranger attempts to put his pen to paper to make a slight interlude or interpolate a chord in order to pass from one melody to another, this touch of a strange hand is invariably revealed. It is a curious thing, but it is, with very rare exceptions, a fact. It would seem that an arranger, making selections from "Tannhäuser," or "Lohengrin," or "Madama Butterfly," or "Tosca," or any other opera, would become so imbued with the spirit of the composer that he could make the necessary modulations in exactly the spirit of the composer himself; but this has been proven to be almost an impossibility, and yet some of the best musicians have been employed as arrangers.

Now this case is cited in order to call attention to the fact that Mr. Alexander performs such a feat in his little modulations from song to song and from one composer to another or from the various works of a single composer. His musical instinct is so deep and so varied that he will necessarily introduce chords of his own in the interludes, but never for a moment is there a suggestion of his own individuality. It seems, indeed, when listening to his performance as if the composer himself had written the interlude as well as the accompaniment of his song.

There is another thing that renders Alexander's work particularly noticeable, and that is the fact that he seems to enjoy it himself. There is no stiffness or constraint about his manner. He comes out on the stage and sits down at the piano as if he were about to do something for his own personal amusement, and it is very easy to see from the actions of his hearers that the whole audience is of one opinion as to his convincing magnetism.

Mr. Alexander will appear in America this season under the management of the Concert Direction M. H. Hanson. Although his plan was not to come to America until after the new year, his appearances will begin in the early fall

Steinway Studios, Berlin
Berlin, S. W. Bergmann St. 102
Very accessible, modern, sound-proof studios with Steinway Grands for rent. For terms apply to warerooms
STEINWAY & SONS
Koniggratzer St. 6, :: :: :: :: Berlin, W., 9

Announcement:=

FRANCIS MACMILLEN

POSITIVELY WILL ARRIVE IN AMERICA BY

10—OCTOBER—10

To my Clients and Patrons:

I wish to assure all those who have engaged Mr. Macmillen for the season of 1914-15, that he will arrive in America not later than October 10. He positively will fill all bookings made for him, as well as a selected few from the scores of applications for his services which have been received since it was announced that he would be one of the few violinists of the first rank available for America this season. At present he is in Bagnaia, Italy, the guest for a few days of the Duke and Duchess Lante della Rovere, at their villa at Orte, a few miles from Rome. He will sail for America on one of several ships which are scheduled to leave Naples within the next few days.

Very sincerely yours, S. E. MACMILLEN, 220 West 42nd Street, New York City

ENGLISH FESTIVALS ABANDONED OWING TO WAR.

Opera, Too, Will Be Scarce in London—Concerts Show Less Falling Off—Griffiths to Return to America—D'Aubigné Heading for New York—Personal Notes.

16, Adamson Road, N. W.,
London, September 18, 1914.

That there is not going to be as much music in London and the rest of England this coming season as usual goes without saying, but at the same time it looks as if there was to be some music. The big series of ballad concerts will be held as usual. Sir Henry Wood announces his usual series of symphony concerts, and I understand that Landon Ronald's orchestra is also to give its regular series.

Practically all the great music festivals in the large cities of the Provinces—such a distinctive feature of English music—have been called off. I understand, too, that if present conditions continue neither Covent Garden nor Beecham is likely to have a season. However, let us hope for the best. If the war is settled one way or another by Christmas—and it may be that financial and economic difficulties will bring about some sort of a settlement before the arms of either side have been able to gain any decisive mastery—then there will still be time to think about what shall be done musically in the spring.

Clara Butt's Patriotism.

Probably we shall have very few recitals—either vocal or instrumental—here in the capital. An interesting announcement is that Clara Butt has volunteered to give a concert at the Albert Hall on October 10, all the proceeds of which—and they will undoubtedly be very large—are to go to a relief fund in which the Queen is particularly interested. The Queen herself is the principal patroness of the concert and the great hall will undoubtedly be filled to overflowing. Mme. Butt is now making a provincial tour, the proceeds from all her concerts being devoted to some of the war funds.

A number of the provincial tours which were planned by other artists before the war will also be carried out, but in these cases the artists have agreed to accept a reduction of fees and a percentage of any profits will be devoted to the various relief funds.

Opera in English.

The English opera at the Middlesex has not been a success financially—though, frankly, I doubt if it would have been even in peace times at that particular theatre, which is rather out of the way, in an unpleasant neighborhood and habitually devoted to vaudeville, so that the public is not inclined to look to it for a really good offering in serious opera. As I wrote last week, "Faust" and "Daughter of the Regiment" were splendidly done, but "Carmen," the new offering this week, was not up to the former standard. The first requisite in "Carmen" is a good Carmen, and Christine Oliva was distinctly deficient. Her best quality was an excellent voice, which, however, she did not use well and sang frequently off the key. Like practically all young Carmens, she overacted disturbingly. The rest of the cast was very good, Hughes-Macklin doing well as Don José and Robert Parker, the American bass, being excellent as Escamillo. Even allowing fully for a music hall orchestra and insufficient rehearsals, Hamish MacCunn again failed to make very much of a success of his conducting. The season will close at the end of this week at the Middlesex and the company will be employed to give half hour excerpts from the various operas, at the Coliseum, which is under the same management.

MR. AND MRS. YEATMAN GRIFFITH SPENDING A FEW DAYS AT AN ENGLISH COUNTRY HOUSE AFTER THEIR BUSY SUMMER SEASON IN LONDON.
Reading from right to left: Mr. and Mrs. Yeatman Griffith and Sydney Rosenbloom, English pianist and composer.

Other Operas.

I mentioned last week that the Carl Rosa Company is also for the moment presenting grand opera in English in London before beginning one of its regular provincial tours. Another musical venture in London just now is the Doyly Carte Company, which is giving three weeks of Gilbert and Sullivan at the Coronet.

Promenades.

The Promenades continue the even tenor of their way. A rather unusual novelty this past week was a piano concerto by an Englishwoman, Kathleen Bruckshaw, who herself played the solo part. The critic of the Westminster says: "It contains some very agreeable and effective pages, and taken as a whole it made a very favorable impression." It is said that there was considerable murmuring in the orchestra about being compelled to accompany Louis Pecksai, violinist, who played the Elgar concerto last Tuesday. That seems like drawing the patriotic line rather fine, for Pecksai, though born in Austria, has lived here for over twenty years, ever since his boyhood, and is long a naturalized Englishman. Or was the objection possibly to the Elgar concerto?

Yeatman Griffith.

Yeatman Griffith and Mrs. Griffith are, I am sorry to say, going to leave for New York on October 3, where they will establish a studio until they are able to return here. Circumstances have induced them to make this change. Among their numerous pupils are a great many Americans and American parents are naturally a bit anxious about having their sons and daughters on this side of the water at present—though conditions up to now are absolutely normal here in England and I shall be surprised if they do not continue so. Mr. and Mrs. Griffith will open their New York studio by October 15. All their large American class which has been here will follow them there—there will be nearly twenty-five persons in the Griffith party on the steamer New York—and a number of English pupils are going over as well. Of course pupils from the Continent will be a rarity in any studio this season. The absence of Mr. and Mrs. Griffith will be very much felt in London student life. They have met here with the success which their fine work has well deserved, and their charming house in Maida Vale has become a great center of musical activity. Let us hope they will soon be able to return to this city, of which they are so fond, and of which they had in so short a time—only three years—become so prominent a musical factor.

Notes.

On the other hand, certain teachers from the Continent will make London their headquarters this season. I notice the arrival of Emma Nevada Palmer with her family, who have taken a house here for the winter. Her daughter, Mignon Nevada, has a number of English engagements this season and had many more on the Continent, which have been canceled by this unfortunate war.

Florence Macbeth, perhaps the best known pupil of Mr. and Mrs. Yeatman Griffith, is here. She will sing with the Liverpool Philharmonic Orchestra on October 6 and then is engaged for a short provincial tour. She arrives in New York about November 1 for an extensive series of guest appearances with the Century Opera Company.

Another young American artist who is here at present is Felice Lyne, who, with her mother, was one of the first refugees to get out of Paris, having a most adventurous journey, including a boat journey all the way from Paris to Havre on the Seine. She will sing here a few times before leaving for America in October to begin her concert tour.

And speaking of Miss Lyne, I understand, from latest reports, that her teacher, Lloyd d'Aubigné, wishes to close his Paris house and studio for the winter and to teach in New York.

If the French and British succeed in pushing the Germans a little further away from Paris, I hope to visit that city for a few days next week to look up musical friends and to send the Musical Courier a special letter from the front—at least fronter than London.

H. O. Oscood.

Bethany College Happenings.

Lindsborg, Kan., September 19, 1914.

The musical season of Lindsborg was opened last night by a recital at the Bethany College Chapel. Two new members of the faculty, Arthur E. Uhe, violinist, and Thure Jaderborg, appeared in a joint recital. A large and appreciative audience was present. The playing of Mr. Uhe was all that could be desired. He is a master of his instrument, a brilliant virtuoso. It was a complete and deserved success and confirmed his name as violinist gifted with a perfect style and exceptional mastery of technic and sentiment.

Mr. Jaderborg sang with good diction and received hearty applause.

The following program was rendered:

Sonata, Handel; "In Qucsta Tomba," Beethoven; "The Owl," Wells; "Mother Mine," Edson; "Vuggevise," Bengzon; "Den flygande Holländaren," Myrberg; "Caconna" (Thompson), Bach; "Marie Antoinette," Kriens; "The Chalets Girls Sunday," Bull; "Air," Manton; "Canzonetta," D'Ambrosio; "Nature's Adoration," Beethoven; "Infelice! e tu credevi," from "Ernani," Verdi; "Mother Machree," Olcott-Ball; "My Desire," Nevin; "Border Ballad," Cowen; "Three Caprices," Paganini.

The Musical Art Society again is under the direction of E. Haesener and will give public performances of Rossini's "Stabat Mater" and Gounod's "Faust" in concert form this year. Mr. Uhe is conductor of the Bethany Symphony Orchestra and there is no doubt that the orchestra will live up to and even surpass its former achievements under its able leader. Several concerts will be given by the orchestra this year.

The enrollment at the conservatory is larger than it has been for several years. The voice department especially shows a wonderful increase over the past five years. All the teachers are very busy. E. A. H.

Ottilie Metzger Helps.

Manager Howard E. Potter has just received a letter (written middle of August) from Ottilie Metzger, who has gone to the front as a Red Cross nurse, while Theodore Lattermann, her husband, who is a doctor of medicine in addition to his other accomplishments, has been detailed to the Government Hospital. Mme. Metzger expresses the hope that she and Mr. Lattermann may be able to leave Germany for their concert tour, under the management of the Music League, in America during the month of February.

Frederick E. Bristol Resumes Teaching.

Frederick E. Bristol, the vocal instructor, announces that he will resume teaching at his studio, 143 West Forty second street, New York, on October 12. Advance applications and the return of many former pupils indicate that Mr. Bristol will have a busy season.

HELEN BLAIN CONTRALTO
Address: Usual Agents
Residence: 29 Upper Baker St., Regent's Park, London, N.W.
Telephone 471 Mayfair

YEATMAN GRIFFITH
Teacher of FLORENCE MACBETH, Prima Donna Coloratura and other prominent Artists and Teachers
Studios: Holland House, 143 Malda Vale - London

The most eminent Composers, best Songs and Song Cycles are to be found in the Catalogue of
BOOSEY & CO. NEW YORK and LONDON
FREE on request. THEMATICS of latest important additions
9 East 17th Street New York

HERMANN KLEIN
Teacher of Some of the Most Successful Singers Now Before the Public
Co-Editor, Garcia's "Hints on Singing"; Author, New English Version of "Carmen"; Translator, Metzler's Mastersongs, "Lieder in English."
40 Ave. Road, Regent's Park, N. W., London

Cable: Keynote, London
CONCERT DIRECTION
DANIEL MAYER
Established 1890
Chatham House
George Street
Hanover Square, W.,
LONDON, ENGLAND
ENGLAND'S PREMIER AGENCY

"WILLIAM TELL" AT CENTURY OPERA HOUSE.

Rossini's Opera Resurrected in New York After a Lapse of Twenty Years—"Carmen" Also on the Bill.

"William Tell" was heard for the first time in New York in about twenty years at the Century Opera House on Tuesday evening, September 22, before a large and enthusiastic audience. It would hardly be in place here to take up the question of the merits of this famous old opera, but the fact that it is still played frequently abroad speaks well for its being at least understood by European peoples. In America, however, very little of it is ever heard with the exception of the overture, which has become hackneyed by too frequent use. Rossini's vocal melodies possess for modern American ears very little charm, and in the long run it is probable that the extended recitatives with which this opera is filled will be voted a bore. There is no doubt, however, about the success that this work scored at its production in New York last Tuesday. Undoubtedly that was due largely to the excellent production which was given it by the Century Opera forces. Jacques Coini, the new artistic director, is proving himself invaluable in gaining a cohesion and a solidity which were absent last season.

Of the principals in this cast, Louis Kreidler was splendidly effective in his interpretation of the role of William Tell. His strong and resonant voice is well suited to the role of the Swiss patriot, and he played the part with a dignity that rendered it strongly impressive. His two companions, Arnold and Walter Furst, which roles were taken by Orville Harrold and Henry Welden, respectively, were no less effectively portrayed. The role of Arnold is particularly well suited to Orville Harrold's high voice, and both his singing and acting of the part were on the highest artistic plane. Henry Welden scored no less a success than he did at his debut at this house, his fine vocal attainments and excellent stage presence earning for him much applause and the sympathy of the public.

Kathleen Howard in the role of Hedwig, the wife of Tell, acted with a quiet dignity and charm entirely in place in this role, but far removed from the fiercely fascinating touch which she gave to the role of Carmen in the previous week. This ability to feel and make felt the meaning of roles so divergent shows in some degree Miss Howard's command of the technic of the stage. As Matilda, the daughter of Gessler, Lois Ewell was attractive, although it cannot be said that she is especially well suited to this character.

George Everett gave an effective impersonation of the small role of Leuthold the shepherd.

As for the others in the cast, the same degree of praise cannot be meted out to them. Alfred Kaufman sang and acted the role of Gessler with dignity, but there was little of the terrifying character of the tyrant in his personality. Gilbert Wilson and Louis D'Angelo were neither of them particularly well suited to the parts to which they were assigned. Louis d'Angelo especially was a disappointment after his splendid portrayal last season of the role of the miller in d'Albert's "Tiefland." Hardy Williamson sang the fisherman's song attractively. The one member of the cast who was quite uneffective was Muriel Gough as Tell's son, Jemmy. This lady never for a moment forgot that she was a girl and not a boy, and she sang the music unsatisfactorily.

The ballet was not particularly effective, except in so far as it concerned the solo dancing of Albertina Rasch. Edmund Makalif, who did some splendid things during the last season in company with Miss Rasch, was not effective in this divertissement and seemed uncertain of himself. Miss Rasch, on the contrary, combined the beauty of her dancing and her irresistible charm with exceptional grace, and was greeted with much applause.

The conductor, Agide Jacchia, conducted the overture with poor judgment, permitting the strings to be entirely overshadowed by the brass, and instilled but little life into the body of the opera.

"CARMEN."

"Carmen" alternated during the week with "William Tell" with a slightly different cast from that of the preceding week. The Carmen was Maude Santley, of whom it would be unfair to give a detailed criticism at this time, for she was painfully nervous, and it is evidently necessary for this English singer, who comes to New York bearing many favorable criticisms of her work, to become more accustomed to conditions in this country before her work can be considered critically. It may be said, however, that her singing of the role of Carmen displayed a voice of beautiful quality and often well controlled.

During the week the Toreador was done by Thomas Chalmers instead of Louis Kreidler, and Mr. Chalmers gave one of the best interpretations since his debut last season at the Century. His last season's work will be particularly remembered for his impersonation of the role of the Consul in "Madame Butterfly," which he did with a dignity and charm and a manliness that have rarely been equaled and certainly never been surpassed since this role was created. This same manliness and dignity were evident in Mr. Chalmers' treatment of the Toreador, and he added to it a depth of passion and fire that called forth enthusiastic applause. The cast otherwise was unchanged.

Giuseppe Gaudenzi made his debut in the role of Don Jose on Thursday, September 24, exhibiting some good high notes, but a general ineffectiveness both vocally and histrionically.

The Century Opera Company is to be commended for its attention to the matter of translations, a detail which is of great importance, but which has been sorely neglected in America in the past. Algernon St. John-Brenon has been engaged to make special translations of many of the operas which are to be given this season. This translator's splendid work was at all times noticeable in the performances of "Carmen," where even the stupidities of the original text (oh, yes, it has some) were glossed over and made to sound dignified. Many people will feel that upon this matter of translation the success of the opera in English will largely depend, for it cannot be doubted that when the translation is such as to call for laughter on the part of the audience, even in serious passages (and that has happened heretofore), the esthetic force of the whole work is utterly lost in consequence. It is certainly to be hoped that the Century management will continue this plan and furnish good and dignified translations for all of the works that are given at this house.

Bettina Freeman made her debut at the Century Opera House on Friday, September 26, in the role of Matilda in "William Tell." Miss Freeman has a large and imposing presence. She was dressed in a riding habit, split in front, showing silk stockings and high heeled ball slippers. Her voice is robust but lacks flexibility and brilliancy, and her enunciation is bad.

Mary Lindsay Oliver a Horsewoman.

As Mary Lindsay Oliver, the Scotch pianist, expresses it, "she was practically brought up in the saddle" in Scotland and was constantly seen in the hunting field with the Duke of Buccleuch's foxhounds. The accompanying photo of Miss Oliver was taken at Stanford, Ill. Although she is now back at work in Chicago she expects to indulge in enough horseback riding for the next two months for legitimate exercise. In Scotland Miss Oliver won a name for her horsewomanship, and she says she would be satisfied on a desert island if she had a piano and a horse.

MARY LINDSAY-OLIVER AT HER FAVORITE PASTIME.

Four New Tietjens Songs.

Four songs by Paul Tietjens have just been published by Clayton F. Summy, of Chicago. The titles of these songs are "Woodland Love Song," "Blind," "The Dead Flower" and "Sphinx."

They have been sung frequently from manuscript with great success, and it is perhaps of interest to note that they received their initial performance at the home of A. M. Abell, representative of the MUSICAL COURIER in Berlin. Mr. Abell had invited an exceptionally representative musical audience, and their success on that occasion created a demand for them which was supplied in the primitive method of the employment of a copyist by the various singers who wished to sing the songs. Finally, in order to supply the demand more adequately, Mr. Tietjens submitted them to Mr. Summy, who has now published them.

They are written for soprano, but are equally effective for the other voices. This seems to be especially true of "Woodland Love Song," which is a particularly "grateful" number, and is well suited to end a program. The optional high D at the end in the original key of B flat major furnishes a brilliant climax for high soprano, while it is no less effective in the key of G major, as sung by Adéle Laeis-Baldwin, Mme. King Clark and other contraltos.

Violin Department
INCLUDING
John Frank Rice
Herwegh von Ende
Edwin Wickenhoefer
AND
Anton Witek
Soloist and Concert master of the Boston Symphony Orchestra
THE most complete course in Violin technique and repertoire and all the free supplementary subjects necessary for the fullest musical development.
For catalogue write to Sec'y, Box 7
The von Ende School of Music
44 WEST 85th ST., NEW YORK

Violin Makers' President Optimistic.

After a four months' sojourn at his summer home and atelier at "Mound Park," in Wisconsin's lake region, Knute Reindahl, violin maker, and president of the recently organized American Academy of Violin Makers, arrived in Chicago last week eager and enthusiastic over prospects for American makers this year.

The European conflict, Mr. Reindahl believes, provides an opportunity for all American makers, and especially for those who, while doing very meritorious work, are little known outside their respective cities.

As president of the Academy, Mr. Reindahl expects to take up with its members plans for enlarging the scope and influence of American makers, and reaching the American musical public with the facts regarding the degree of merit in American hand-made violins as compared with European hand-made and semi-hand-made violins.

The third edition of Mr. Reindahl's brochure, "An Artist's Touch," has just come from the press. Needless to say, it is tastefully arranged and artistically printed, and sets forth all the information a prospective purchaser could possibly desire.

The cover shows obverse and reverse sides of the medal awarded to Mr. Reindahl's violins at the Exposition Universelle, Paris, and the frontispiece is in the form of front, back and profile views of the Reindahl "Grand" model, printed in full color.

Throughout the brochure are many reproductions of magnificently carved scrolls, many of them highly ornate, which speak glowingly of Mr. Reindahl's ability as a woodcarver; one specimen of the carving of Antonio Stradivarius is also shown.

Many letters from users and admirers of Reindahl violins are given in the brochure, the signatories being Emile Sauret, Jan Kubelik, Henry Bramsen, Arthur Hartmann, Fritz Kreisler, Hugo Heerman, Chas. Gregorowitz, Axel Skovgaard, S. E. Jacobson, F. E. Haberkorn, Leonora Jackson, Bernard Listemann, Alexander Bull. Besides these, letters from many teachers and students in various parts of this country and Europe are shown.

Wagner Artists Give Benefit Concert.

Alice Nielsen, the Boston and Metropolitan Opera soprano; Riccardo Martin, Metropolitan Opera tenor, and Rudolf Ganz, the Swiss pianist, artists under the management of Charles L. Wagner, New York, gave a Red Cross benefit concert in Washington, D. C., Sunday evening, September 27.

Miss Nielsen opens her season in North Adams, Mass., October 6.

Thuel Burnham in Wales.

Thuel Burnham sends greetings from Penmaenmawr in Wales, on the Irish Sea, where he spent a short time prior to his departure for America. He sails September 25 and begins his tour shortly in the West.

Florence Macbeth's Encomiums.

Herewith are reproduced some laudatory press notices regarding Florence Macbeth's singing on her tour with the Chicago Grand Opera Company last season, as well as referring to her recital given in St. Paul, Minn. Miss Macbeth is one of the young American artists who made an immediate success and was engaged to sing at many places in England for this season, some of which, however, because of the war, have had to be abandoned.

Miss Macbeth soon will arrive in the United States and will be heard at the Century Opera House, New York.

The press notices follow:

The sensation of the evening was the singing of Florence Macbeth. Her "Caro Nome" had to be repeated to satisfy the clamors of the audience. Her voice was so sweet, her coloratura effects were apparently so unstudied, there was such a virginal clarity in her tones, such a rippling lightness, that her voice seemed to be the essence of sound.—Dallas Daily Times Herald, March 5, 1914.

To Florence Macbeth as Gilda the patrons of last night's performance are indebted for a season of enduring pleasure. This coloratura soprano won immediate attention here, she holding every hearer under the strictest attention from her first clear, winging note.—Dallas Morning News, March 5, 1914.

The Gilda was saturated with charm, and the wonderful combination of slenderness of waist with amplitude of tone.—Los Angeles Examiner, March 11, 1914.

Miss Macbeth herself quickly sung herself into the heart of her audience. Her Gilda is sweet, true and unaffected, and her clear, flexible and wonderfully sweet soprano voice blends perfectly with the heavier rich tones of the baritone.—Los Angeles Record, March 11, 1914.

A really new star swung into view last night at the Auditorium in the person of Florence Macbeth.—Los Angeles Tribune, March 11, 1914.

The role of Gilda is essentially for a coloratura of the finest type; at first it seemed as though Miss Macbeth might be too rich in the mezzo quality to attain the real quality of the coloratura, but she very agreeably upset that opinion with the first attack above the middle register.—San Francisco Chronicle, March 17, 1914.

Miss Macbeth had a splendid voice and a charming personality, and while, as she adds on years, she will doubtless develop in the phantasy of coloratura work, she will never appear more suitable to the role than she did last night.—San Francisco Call and Post, March 17, 1914.

Miss Macbeth proved herself adequate. She has a voice of the most limpid clearness and purity, at times diamond like, especially on the upper notes.—San Francisco Bulletin, March 17, 1914.

AS LUCIA.

The misfortune which deprived us of Tita Ruffo gave Florence Macbeth an opportunity for distinction, which she turned to excellent advantage.—San Francisco Examiner, March 28, 1914.

Miss Macbeth scored a decided success, particularly in her rendition of the difficult Mad Scene, which she achieved with impressive technic.—San Francisco Bulletin, March 28, 1914.

AS GILDA.

Miss Macbeth's beautiful bel canto, bell-like in its clarity and yet with a lyric sweetness which saved it from any suggestion of coldness, made her performance an unqualified delight.—Kansas City Journal, April 12, 1914.

FLORENCE MACBETH.

Of Florence Macbeth's Gilda let it be said at once that it is one of the most appealing the writer has ever seen. Vocally she was artistic from start to finish.—St. Paul Pioneer Press, April 21, 1914.

Miss Macbeth came home with her shield undented. Her light clear voice is a flute of true pitch. Its timbre is pleasant, its control absolute, its mezza voce exquisite.—St. Paul Daily News, April 21, 1914.

AS LUCIA.

Florence Macbeth was forced to sing the last half of the aria over again. St. Paul always will welcome its home product when she feels like appearing here.—St. Paul Daily News, April 23, 1914.

The scene was delightfully sung with clear intonation and flawless technic. The passages with the flute were evenly and beautifully done.—St. Paul Pioneer Press, April 23, 1914.

AS GILDA.

Florence Macbeth's Gilda was a charming creation, vocally as well as histrionically.—Minneapolis Journal, April 21, 1914.

Her voice is that purest of all voices; a pure soprano of crystal clarity, of pearly warmth and liquid flexibility.—Minneapolis Morning Tribune, April 21, 1914.

Miss Macbeth was in perfect voice last evening and gave the famous old coloratura aria with tremendous effect.—Minneapolis Morning Tribune, April 23, 1914.

IN RECITAL.

In these somewhat vocally decadent days when the object of well nigh every prima donna is to shriek in big toned arias and to essay

(Continued on page 36.)

A. CARBONE

MASTER IN THE ART OF SINGING

(Late Leading Singer (for twelve seasons) with the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company)

Art of Singing from the first rudiments to the classic "Bel Canto"

School of Opera, with Acting and Modern Languages. Carbone's Breath Controller recommended by famous singers, teachers and physicians as unique apparatus for breathing exercises. Circular sent on application

Thirty Years' Experience. Highest References. AEOLIAN HALL, WEST 42nd STREET, NEW YORK CITY

NELSON AND HIS ORCHESTRAL BAND

OF MINNEAPOLIS

Assisted by Celebrated Soloists, Will Make a Concert Tour During Months of October and November, 1914. For dates address

OTTO L. HEEGER, Mgr., Shiffman Building - St. Paul, Minn.

FLORENCE MULFORD

CONTRALTO

Of the Metropolitan Opera Company

HAENSEL & JONES

Aeolian Hall, 27 West 42d Street NEW YORK

Personal Address:

1104 Broad Street, Newark, N. J.

Phone, 525 W-Market

MAESTRO FRANZ EMERICH

VOCAL INSTRUCTION

and MADAME TERESA EMERICH

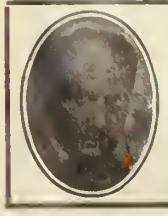
PUPILS PREPARED FOR THE OPERATIC AND CONCERT STAGE

Some Distinguished PUPILS of MAESTRO and MME. EMERICH:

CHARLES DALMORES, tenor, formerly Metropolitan Opera Co. and Covent Garden. Lohengrin of Bayreuth festival.
ADAM DIDUR, basso, Metropolitan Opera Co.
FRANCIS MACLENNAN, tenor, Berlin Royal Opera and Hamburg Opera.
*HANS TANZLER, tenor, Royal Opera, Karlsruhe.
CAVALLIERE MARIO SAMMARCO, baritone, formerly Metropolitan Opera Co. and Covent Garden.
PUTNAM GRISWOLD, basso, formerly Metropolitan Opera Co., Berlin Royal Opera and Covent Garden.
*MARGUERITA SYLVA, Carmen in the guest performance of Caruso at the Berlin Royal Opera.
MARGARETHE MATZENAUER, mezzo-soprano, Metropolitan Opera, New York.
*HELENA FORTI, soprano, Dresden Royal Opera.
MARY CAVAN, soprano, Hamburg Opera and Chicago Opera Co.
HEINRICH HENSEL, Dramatic Tenor, Hamburg, Stadt Theatre.

INSTRUCTION GIVEN IN ENGLISH, GERMAN, FRENCH AND ITALIAN

*The names marked * are those of pupils of Mme. Emerich.* †Telephone Am.tPfalzburg No. 2067 BERLIN, W.W. Nicelsbergerplatz 1



Owing to the Cancellation of his European Dates

GODOWSKY

Will be in America this Season

Management: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, N. Y.

KNABE PIANO USED

RUDOLF BERGER

FAMOUS TENOR of the Metropolitan Opera Company

Available for Concerts May and June, 1915

Management: R. E. JOHNSTON

1451 Broadway - - New York

Sousa's Summer-Autumn Tour.

Sousa and his band opened their twenty-third season at Luna Park, Coney Island, Saturday, August 15, since which "The March King" and his organization have appeared at Ocean Grove, N. J.; Willow Grove, Pa. (22 days' engagement); Pittsburgh Exposition (12 days' engagement); Stamford, Conn.; Harrisburg, Pa.; Canton, Ohio, and other cities.

From today, September 30, the Sousa itinerary is as follows:

SEPTEMBER, 1914.

Wednesday, 30—New Philadelphia, Ohio, matinee, Union Opera House.
Wednesday, 30—Coshocton, Ohio, evening, Sixth Street Theatre.

OCTOBER, 1914.

Thursday, 1—Maricttа, Ohio, matinee, Auditorium Theatre.
Thursday, 1—Parkersburg, W. Va., evening, Camden Theatre.
Friday, 2—Huntington, W. Va., matinee, Huntington Theatre.
Friday, 2—Charleston, W. Va., evening, Opera House.
Saturday, 3—Ironton, Ohio, matinee, Masonic Theatre.
Saturday, 3—Portsmouth, Ohio, evening, Grand Opera House.
Sunday, 4—Columbus, Ohio, matinee and evening, Southern Theatre.
Monday, 5—Xenia, Ohio—matinee, Opera House.
Monday, 5—Dayton, Ohio, evening, Victoria Theatre.
Tuesday, 6—Urbana, Ohio, matinee, Clifford Theatre.
Tuesday, 6—Springfield, Ohio, evening, Fairbanks Theatre.
Wednesday, 7—Fort Wayne, Ind., matinee and evening, Majestic Theatre.
Thursday, 8—Valparaiso, Ind., matinee, Memorial Opera House.
Thursday, 8—Gary, Ind., evening, Gary Theatre.
Friday, 9—South Bend, Ind., matinee and evening, Oliver Theatre.
Saturday, 10—Grand Rapids, Mich., matinee and evening, Powers Theatre.
Sunday, 11—Detroit, Mich., matinee and evening, Detroit Opera House.
Monday, 12—Coldwater, Mich., matinee, Tibbits Opera House.
Monday, 12—Goshen, Ind., evening, Jefferson Theatre.
Tuesday, 13—La Porte, Ind., matinee, Madison Theatre.
Tuesday, 13—Michigan City, Ind., evening, Orpheum Theatre.
Wednesday, 14—Kankakee, Ill., matinee, Remington Theatre.
Wednesday, 14—Streator, Ill., evening, Plumb Opera House.
Thursday, 15—Peoria, Ill., matinee and evening, Majestic Theatre.
Friday, 16—Urbana, Ill., matinee, Illinois Theatre.
Friday, 16—Danville, Ill., evening, Fischer Theatre.
Saturday, 17—Paris, Ill., matinee, Schoaff's Opera House.
Saturday, 17—Terre Haute, Ind., evening, Grand Opera House.
Sunday, 18—Indianapolis, Ind., matinee and evening, Shubert-Murat Theatre.
Monday, 19—Anderson, Ind., matinee, Grand Opera House.
Monday, 19—Marion, Ind., evening, Indiana Theatre.
Tuesday, 20—Elwood, Ind., matinee, Grand Theatre.
Tuesday, 20—Muncie, Ind., evening, Wysor Grand.
Wednesday, 21—Peru, Ind., matinee, Wallace Theatre.
Wednesday, 21—Logansport, Ind., evening, Nelson Theatre.
Thursday, 22—Toledo, Ohio, matinee and evening, Auditorium.
Friday, 23—Tiffin, Ohio, matinee, The Grand.
Friday, 23—Findlay, Ohio, evening, Majestic Theatre.
Saturday, 24—Fremont, Ohio, matinee, Opera House.
Saturday, 24—Sandusky, Ohio, evening, Sandusky Theatre.
Sunday, 25—Cleveland, Ohio, matinee and evening, Hippodrome.
Monday, 26—Warren, Ohio, matinee, Opera House.
Monday, 26—Youngstown, Ohio, evening, Grand Opera House.
Tuesday, 27—Sharon, Pa., matinee, Morgan Grand.
Tuesday, 27—Newcastle, Pa., evening, Opera House.
Wednesday, 28—Franklin, Pa., matinee, Opera House.
Wednesday, 28—Oil City, Pa., evening, Opera House.
Thursday, 29—Titusville, Pa., matinee, Grand Theatre.
Thursday, 29—Warren, Pa., evening, Library Theatre.
Friday, 30—Kane, Pa., matinee, Temple Theatre.
Friday, 30—Bradford, Pa., evening, Bradford Theatre.
Saturday, 31—Niagara Falls, N. Y., matinee and evening, International Theatre.

NOVEMBER, 1914.

Sunday, 1—Buffalo, N. Y., matinee and evening, Tech Theatre.
Monday, 2—Lockport, N. Y., matinee and evening, Temple Theatre.
Tuesday, 3—Batavia, N. Y., matinee, Dellinger Opera House.
Tuesday, 3—Geneva, N. Y., evening, Smith Opera House.
Wednesday, 4—Rochester, N. Y., matinee and evening, Lyceum Theatre.
Thursday, 5—Syracuse, N. Y., matinee and evening, Wieting Opera House.
Friday, 6—Binghamton, N. Y., matinee and evening, Stone Opera House.
Saturday, 7—Middletown, N. Y., matinee, Stratton Theatre.
Saturday, 7—Newburgh, N. Y., evening, Academy of Music.
Sunday, 8—New York City, evening, Hippodrome.
Monday, 9—Danbury, Conn., evening, Taylor Opera House.
Tuesday, 10—New Haven, Conn., matinee and evening, Woolsey Hall.
Wednesday, 11—Providence, R. I., matinee and evening, Infantry Hall.
Thursday, 12—Haverhill, Mass., matinee and evening, Colonial Theatre.
Friday, 13—Manchester, N. H., matinee and evening, Park Theatre.
Saturday, 14—Portland, Me., matinee and evening, Jefferson Theatre.
Monday, 15—Malden, Mass., matinee, Auditorium.
Monday, 15—Boston, Mass., evening, Colonial Theatre.
Monday, 16—Fall River, Mass., matinee and evening, Casino.
Tuesday, 17—Boston, Mass., matinee and evening, Tremont Temple.
Wednesday, 18—Norwich, Conn., matinee, Auditorium Theatre.
Wednesday, 18—New London, Conn., evening, Lyceum Theatre.

Sousa's New York concert will be given in the Hippodrome on Sunday evening, November 8.

Becker Will Open West Side Studio.

Gustav L. Becker will give up his Aeolian Hall studio, New York, having taken in its place, for the greater convenience of his uptown, West Side pupils, a large and well equipped studio at 144 West Seventy-second street. He will also give there a series of lecture-recitals and pupils' musicales with well known assisting artists.

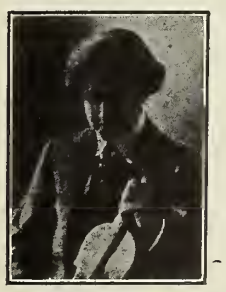
Mr. Becker will continue to teach at his Steinway Hall studio, on Tuesdays, Fridays and Saturdays, this location being more accessible for pupils coming from New Jersey, Staten Island, Long Island and Connecticut.

CLARENCE EDDY
AVAILABLE FOR ORGAN DEDICATIONS AND RECITALS
Address: 510 OAKWOOD BOULEVARD CHICAGO
Season 1914-15

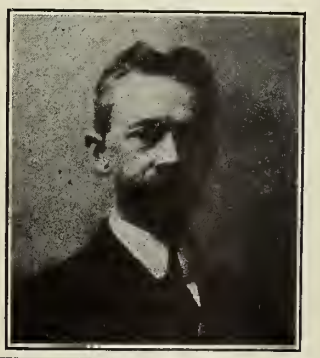
SEASON 1914-1915 MRS. H. H. A. BEACH
M. H. HANSON 437 Fifth Avenue New York
STEINWAY PIANO USED

SEASON 1914-1915 MAUD POWELL
H. Godfrey Turner 1400 B'way, New York

JEZZY DUFAU
COLORATURA SOPRANO
Concert Recital
Chicago-Philadelphia Grand Opera Company
Under Management of HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Building, Chicago



VAN YORX
THEO. ——— Tenor
Studios: 21 West 38th Street, - New York
3701 Murray Hill



GABRILÓWITSCH
THE EMINENT RUSSIAN PIANIST
AMERICAN TOUR JANUARY-APRIL, 1915
Management, LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, N. Y.
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

GIUSEPPE CREATORE AND HIS BAND
NOW BOOKING FOR 1914-1915
OFFICE: 1512 TRIBUNE BUILDING, - - - CHICAGO, ILL.

A NAME TO CONJURE WITH!
THIBAUD
A Violinist Whom France Declares to Be Without an Equal
Thibaud's American visit last winter was the violinistic sensation of the season. His return in the Fall will be an event of first importance.
For Terms and Dates Address LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, New York

U. S. KERR
BASSO CANTANTE--Song Recitals and Oratorio a Specialty
For Bookings Address 538 West 143d Street, New York City 'Phone 3313 Audubon

JULES FALK VIOLINIST
NOW IN AMERICA
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU 1 West 34th Street, New York

The Guilmant Organ School
DR. WILLIAM C. CARL, Director
A School for Students with serious aims, who desire to become expert Organists. REOPENS OCT. 6th.
Send For New Catalogue. 44 West 12th St., N. Y.

LEONARD BORWICK PIANIST
WILL TOUR AMERICA SEASON 1914-15
"Leonard Borwick is an artist gifted not only with refined taste and deep musical feeling, but with the technique of a master."—Berlin Borsen Courier.
Management—WOLFSOHN BUREAU, 1 West 34th St., New York. Steinway Piano Used

MARGUERITE DUNLAP
CONTRALTO. Concert—Recital—Oratorio
Exclusive Management: Gertrude F. Cowen, 1451 Broadway, New York

Roderick WHITE
Violinist
For Information Apply to DRIGGS & Le MASSENA, Inc.,
501 FIFTH AVENUE New York

"The perfection of Quartet playing."—London Daily Mail.
The World's Greatest Chamber Music Organization. The

FLONZALEY QUARTET
Tour 1914-15 Now Booking
Management: LOUDON CHARLTON, 868 Carnegie Hall, New York

Carl Fique
MUSICAL INSTITUTE
128 De Kalb Avenue, Brooklyn
Near Fort Greene Place, Telephone, Prospect 6332
—Piano—Voice Culture—Harmony—
Counterpoint and Composition
Special Courses for Beginners. Practical Course for Teachers

Zoellner Quartet
Coast to Coast
Tour 1914-15
H. Culbertson, Fine Arts Bldg, Chicago

RICCARDO MARTIN
FAMOUS TENOR
Metropolitan Opera Company
Available for Concerts
October, November, 1914. May, 1915
Management:
CHARLES L. WAGNER, 1451 Broadway, N. Y.

MARCELLA CRAFT
For five years Prima Donna
Munich Royal Opera
NOW AVAILABLE FOR CONCERTS AND RECITALS
Engaged as Principal and Star Soloist
Maine Festivals
San Francisco Symphony Orchestra
Soloist opening concert, Nov. 6, etc.
Sole Management
CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue :: :: New York
For Pacific Coast Dates Apply to
F. W. HEALY, Head Building, San Francisco, Cal.

AN EARLY TRIP TO THE NORTHWEST.

Musical Courier Representative Visits Minneapolis and Finds a Spirit of Optimism Prevailing in Musical Circles.

A representative of the MUSICAL COURIER was in the Northwest last week and reported to the Chicago office that the musical season in Minneapolis and in the Dakotas would be one of the biggest in those States. This is due to the demand from Europe for wheat, which crop has been especially large in the above named States, and for which the elevator men are willing to pay a much higher price than in years gone by. Thus Minneapolis and the Dakotas are sure to be prosperous and will spend money especially on music.

The teachers visited were mainly optimistic as to the outcome of the war. Among those may be mentioned Margaret Drew, the pianist and organist at the St. Lawrence Church, who received her interviewer in her spacious studio in the Metropolitan Music Company building. "I expect a very big season and it has opened already most auspiciously," said Miss Drew. She informed the reporter that she had just returned from the West and said that she was invited to a musicale at the residence of Dr. and Mrs. William Horsford, Jr., of Marshfield, a little mill town in Oregon. "The program as well as the talent heard was in every way most satisfactory. It is from the small music centers," said Miss Drew, "that we in Minneapolis must recruit our pupils. Naturally, I have, as well as my colleagues, many pupils from Minneapolis and St. Paul, but it is from the small towns that we get the best of our students. The pupils coming from small towns are more studious than those from large centers. They have less recreation than those living in big cities and devote more time to practice and concentrate their energy on their work."

Leaving Miss Drew, the reporter called on William MacPhail, one of the busiest and most popular violinists in the Northwest. Since visiting Mr. MacPhail several months ago, he has been compelled to remove his school to the third floor of the Metropolitan Music Company building and he occupies today the most of that floor, his quarters being the most spacious of any violin school, not only in the Northwest, but it might be said in the Middle West as well. Nothing but violin is taught at the MacPhail studios and certainly the number of pupils enrolled would be a credit to a school in which many other branches of music are taught. The affable Mr. MacPhail told the representative of the MUSICAL COURIER that he, too, was looking forward to a very busy season for himself and for his assistants. "As heretofore not only will I teach," said he, "but I have already secured many dates to appear as soloist with the leading organizations and clubs in this part of the country and it might be that I will go for a tour during the holidays to the Pacific Coast. Mr. MacPhail who gives chamber music programs with Mrs. MacPhail, will, as heretofore, direct several amateur orchestras in Minneapolis this season.

Many other musicians were visited on this trip, among whom might be mentioned Grace Hudson Boutelle, vocal teacher; also Frederic C. Freemantle, vocal teacher. Many musicians were out of town. These included Cornelius Van Vliet, cellist of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra; Clara Williams, the Northwestern soprano, now under the exclusive management of Gertrude V. O'Hanlon, of Chicago, and Wilma Anderson Gilman, pianist.

A few minutes' conversation with Ruth Anderson, who this summer contributed several articles to the Minneapolis Tribune, and who is the local representative of the MUSICAL COURIER, beside being one of the most popular of Minneapolis' violinists and conductors, proved sufficient to get her valuable opinion, and Miss Anderson also predicts a very busy season for her colleagues.

Wendell Heighton, manager of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, was found at his office; likewise, Carlo Fischer, assistant manager of the orchestra, was discovered as busy as ever dictating letters and writing a few himself on his machine, while red crosses on a large United States map attracted the attention of the MUSICAL COURIER representative, who asked if it was a war map, to which Mr. Heighton replied: "No, not exactly. It is a United States map, and the crosses show some of our dates already booked." Judging from the crosses on that map, and also from the advance prospectus of the Minneapolis Orchestra, the season 1914-15 will be the most successful in the history of that organization.

The writer, as heretofore, derived delight from both Mr. Heighton and Mr. Fischer's simple statements of the big business secured. They are successful men, as neither is a boaster, but through hard work they have succeeded in placing their orchestra among the foremost, not only in the land, but in the world. It was with great regret that the writer left Minneapolis without seeing Emil Oberhoffer, leader of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra and the musical Northwest.

GRACE BOUTELLE.

Grace Boutelle, the vocal teacher, formerly of New York, was visited for the purpose of securing her opinion on the outlook for the season 1914-15. Miss Boutelle expects it to be one of the very best and gives as her reason the heavy crops and the prosperity of the farmers in the Northwest. Miss Boutelle, who is also well known as a prolific writer, showed the visitor some of her last essays on musical topics, which some day doubtless will be published in the MUSICAL COURIER and will prove interesting material to the profession, students and laymen alike.

VISITOR CALLS AT MINNEAPOLIS SCHOOLS.

There are in Minneapolis many schools, but two of them stand out in the forerank among national institutions. The Minneapolis School of Music, which is directed by William H. Pontius and Charles M. Holt, and the Northwestern Conservatory, which is directed by Olive A. Evers, who is ably seconded in her work by Estelle Holbrook.

Messrs. Pontius and Holt were less sanguine than the other teachers seen in Minneapolis as to the effect of the war toward the betterment of the musical Northwest. Mr. Pontius said: "I don't know and I don't believe any one knows how good or poor this season will be for schools. It is too early as yet to tell you that we will have a very good or very bad year. The prospects so far are even better than last year, but this does not prove that this year will be better than the last one, and I will say, as the English say, 'We shall see what we shall see,' and then I will be glad to tell you the real effect of the present situation on our school." While at the Minne-

ADA SODER-HUECK
THE EMINENT GERMAN CONTRALTO,
famous for her correct Voice Placement and Tone Development, is open for a limited number of engagements. Singers prepared for Church, Concert, Opera. Celebrated Garcia Method taught.
Metropolitan Opera House, 1425 Broadway, New York Phone 6221 Bryan

FRANKLIN RIKER
In America Season 1914-15
Personal address: Schuyler Arms, 305 W. 98 St., New York
Phone, 3964 Riverside

Alice Sovereign
MANAGEMENT:
ANTONIA SAWYER, 1425 BROADWAY, N. Y.

LOUISE VIRGINIA
GORSE
Teacher
PIANO, ORGAN AND VOICE
POUGHKEEPSIE - NEW YORK

LORETTA del VALLÉ
SOPRANO COLORATURA
First Time in America
Season 1914-15
OPERA—PRAGUE
OPERA—DRESDEN
OPERA—CASSEL
OPERA—MANHEIM
AMERICAN ENGAGEMENTS
Management ANTONIA SAWYER, 1425 Broadway, New York

apolis School the writer saw in the lobby and in the office many students enrolling with the secretary and the good cheer displayed so early in the season presages well for a very prosperous year at the Minneapolis School.

At the Northwestern Conservatory Miss Evers was seen by the representative of the MUSICAL COURIER in the act of looking over index cards, asking innumerable questions concerning such and such pupils. Miss Evers was not cognizant of the fact that a reporter was listening attentively to all of her inquiries, which were to the effect of determining if such and such pupil had enrolled, if such and such one had taken all of his or her lessons, why such a one had paid only half of the term in advance, why another had not been given her lessons, and the secretary intelligently answered each query and later she informed the writer that daily she and Miss Evers go through a certain part of the index file until every week the card of each pupil is taken out of the box, checked and remarks entered thereon. Thus Miss Evers, though the president of Stanley Hall—one of the best known schools for girls in the country—is in direct touch with the Northwestern Conservatory of Music. Miss Evers cordially received the MUSICAL COURIER representative and asked him many questions confidential in their nature, and instead of being interviewed Miss Evers was the interviewer. Only at the door when bidding good by to the amiable directress was the reporter able to venture to ask if this year would be a successful one for the Northwestern Conservatory. "If heavy registration and good teachers make a good year for a school, then we surely will have it." Miss Evers deplores the war and hopes that peace soon will reign again in Europe.

A. A. VOGELSANG.

Arthur Vogelsang, who for many years was connected with a school in Minneapolis and later on opened a vocal studio, is now the director of his own school, which is in the Frank Building on Eighth street. Mr. Vogelsang stated when interviewed that he expected the season to be very prosperous and added that, in his opinion, the Northwest would not suffer in any way from existing conditions abroad and elsewhere in the country.

Frank Gittelson Returns from Europe.

Frank Gittelson, the young American violinist, arrived in New York last week, having been forced by war conditions to abandon his tour abroad. He was with his father, Dr. Samuel J. Gittelson, in Warnemünde on the Baltic Sea when the war broke out, and saw something of the activities of mobilization, Warnemünde being a naval base for torpedo boats and an aeroplane station. The Gittelsons left this resort as soon as possible after war was declared and went to Berlin, where they remained two weeks. From there they reached Holland safely by one of the Amsterdam special trains which the German Government ran through for the sake of refugees, and they sailed on the steamer New Amsterdam, September 12. Mr. Gittelson tells in a good natured manner the usual exciting experiences and discomforts with which traveling in Germany was associated after the outbreak of the war. But Mr. Gittelson is a young man of such buoyancy that these things certainly do not bother him any, and he seems to have looked upon the whole thing as a new experience in life.

Mr. Gittelson is in America for concert purposes. He is touring the United States under the management of the Wolfsohn Bureau, and makes his debut at an early date. He will be heard, among other places, in Philadelphia, where he will appear as soloist with the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, when he will play the Lalo concerto in F. He will give a recital in Jordan Hall, Boston, and from there will come to New York to play with the New York Symphony Orchestra. Later in the fall, he will give a recital in Philadelphia and immediately afterward will leave for Chicago, where he will be heard in the Brahms concerto (by request) with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. On November 22, Mr. Gittelson will be heard at the first Sunday night concert at the Metropolitan Opera House, and on the following day he will give a recital in New York. From there he will start for an extended tour in the West and South.

Mr. Gittelson is using a Maggini violin which he has recently acquired. This is the well known instrument which was played for many years by Vieuxtemps and afterward formed a part of the collection of the Prince of Chimay, Brussels. This violin is spoken of in reference books of the violin as one of the finest Magginis in existence, and is said to resemble more a Guarnerius than a Maggini. Gittelson also has a Stradivarius, but prefers to play this Maggini.

Owing to his unexpected return to America, Mr. Gittelson was forced to cancel a number of engagements in Europe. He was to have toured Germany, Holland and Belgium during the summer and late fall. This brilliant young violinist has been in Europe for five and a half years, during the first half of which he spent his time studying with Carl Flesch. For the last two years or more he has been engaged mainly with concert work and has won the approval of the very best critics in Europe. The Allgemeine Musik Zeitung compared his style with that of Ysaye, and the Lokal Anzeiger, the Berlin governmental organ, has called him "an artist by the grace of God," a phrase that has been often repeated in connection with his name and has become closely associated with it. Musik, one of the well known musical papers in Germany, and whose criticisms are strictly just, says of him: "This young man, today unknown, will tomorrow be celebrated as a star." Nikisch has styled him the "volcano of the violin," and Dr. Julius Korngold, of Vienna, said of him: "This young artist will in one bound overleap a band of contemporary violinists and land in the front ranks."

FRANK GITTELSON.

One of Gittelson's greatest successes abroad was on May 3 last, when he played at Albert Hall, London, in a Melba concert before an audience of 10,000. He has also been heard with the symphony orchestras of Berlin, Vienna, London, Hamburg, Bremen, Prague, Frankfurt, Cologne, Amsterdam, Breslau, Dresden, Munich, etc.

In addition to being a fine violinist, Gittelson is an excellent mathematician, sharing this gift with many other musical celebrities, for it is not uncommon that the two gifts go hand in hand. He is also an ardent chess player, and while in Amsterdam he defeated the champion chess player of that city. He is a member of the Berlin Chess Club, a club to which membership cannot be obtained unless one's playing is of a high standard.

Franklin Riker Coming to New York.

Franklin Riker, the tenor, who has been studying and singing in Europe for the last three seasons, returns to America this year, having been driven out by the unsettled conditions abroad. While in Europe, he studied with Jean de Reszke in Paris and with Roberto Villani and Salvatore Cottone in Milan. He also spent some of his time in Germany, where he studied with Jacques Rückgold in Munich and Fritz Otto in Berlin. It will be seen that Mr. Riker's studies have covered the entire field of opera, concert, lieder singing and oratorio, and his ability has everywhere been highly spoken of. He has decided to make his headquarters in New York during this season.

FRANKLIN RIKER (LEFT) AND HIS PUPIL, FRED PROTHEROE, AT LUCERNE.

During the Musical Season 1914-15

The Mason & Hamlin Piano

Will Be Heard with the Great Orchestras with the following Pianists:

HAROLD BAUER
OSSIP GABRILOWITSCH
TINA LERNER

Boston Symphony Orchestra, Dr. Karl Muck, Conductor
New York Symphony Orchestra, Walter Damrosch, Conductor
Chicago Symphony Orchestra, Frederick Stock, Conductor
New York Philharmonic Orchestra, Josef Stransky, Conductor
Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, Leopold Stokowski, Conductor
St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, Max Zach, Conductor
Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, Ernst Kunwald, Conductor
San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, Henry Hadley, Conductor
Russian Symphony Orchestra, Modest Altschuler, Conductor
Detroit Symphony Orchestra, Weston Gales, Conductor
Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra, Adolf Tandler, Conductor

HELEN WARE
Exclusive Manager, Laszlo Schwartz
Room 912, 1170 Broadway, New York

EDYTH WALKER
(Imperial Royal Chambersinger, Court of Austria--Hungary)
Dramatic Soprano
Metropolitan, New York.
Covent Garden, London.
Imperial Royal Opera, Vienna.
Royal Opera, Berlin.
Festspielhaus, Bayreuth.
Royal Opera and Wagner Festivals, Munich, etc., etc., etc.
Season 1914-1915 with the
Chicago Opera Company

The Sensation of the Year
CARL
FLESCH
The Great Hungarian Violinist
Second American Tour
ENTIRE SEASON 1914-1915
Management HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York
KNABE PIANO

BARONESS SIGNE VON RAPPE
SOPRANO
Prima Donna, Vienna and Stockholm Operas. Principal Soloist 6th QUADRENNIAL MUSIC FESTIVAL OF THE AMERICAN UNION OF SWEDISH SINGERS, MINNEAPOLIS, JUNE 8-9, 1914.
"A voice of great range and brilliance."
—Minneapolis Tribune, June 9, 1914
American Tour, March-May, 1915
OPERA :: LIEDER :: ORATORIO
in Swedish, Italian, German, French and English
Sole Management:
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., N. Y

Sulli Pupils Win Bridgeport.

Dorothea Marie Burt, soprano, gave a recital at Milford, Conn., recently. She was assisted by Ruth Wilcox, flutist, and Marion Fowler, pianist and accompanist. Miss Burt was heard in three operatic arias from Bellini's "Norma," Massenet's "Manon," and Donizetti's "Lucia di Lammermoor," respectively, as well as in a group of songs by Brahms, Brewer, Hastings, D'Hardelot and Clarke. Miss Burt has a soprano voice of good quality and as her instructor is Giorgio M. Sulli, the vocal teacher of New York, she is well grounded technically. Special mention should also be made of the work of the other two artists, each of whom was commendable in her particular line.

The Bridgeport, Conn., papers had the following to say regarding this concert:

Miss Burt's vocal qualities withstood a severe test at this concert. She sang a recitative and cavatina from Bellini's "Norma." The old Italian school gave little orchestral support to the voice, so it had to stand alone for victory or defeat on its own merits.

DOROTHEA M. BURT,
A pupil of Giorgio M. Sulli, from Milford, Conn.

Miss Burt's interpretation of this archaic recitative proved that her training was European and very technical. Her memory was faultless, and in certain coloratura passages she essayed brilliant effects. The cavatina was sung with equal excellence, betraying the careful technical excellent instruction she had received. A group of five songs, subsequently sung, . . . were heard by the audience with great interest. In her final offering, the mad scene from "Lucia di Lammermoor," Donizetti's triumphant creation, assisted by Miss Wilcox, she touched the apex of her ability as regards color, tone and temperament.

Ruth Wilcox has always been a favorite with the Milford people when she plays her pet instrument. . . . In her playing of the 'Fantasie Pastorale Hongroise," by Doppler, she demonstrated her ability as a soloist of temperament and technical excellence. Her work in "Lucia di Lammermoor" proved that the same finesse in style gave her playing individuality and quality in part, as well as in solo passages.

Miss Fowler's work as an accompanist, sympathetic and correctly true, in time and tone, harmonized well with the soloists.—Bridgeport, Conn., Telegram.

Miss Wilcox and Miss Fowler are well known by the public here and their music is always enjoyed. Their efforts last night met with the approval of all present. Miss Burt is not so well known to Milford audiences, but her singing last evening won her a warm place in the hearts of those present, and it is hoped that she will be heard in Milford again in the near future.—Bridgeport, Conn., Standard.

Eugene Cowles Reopens Studio.

Eugene Cowles, the basso, will receive pupils, Monday and Thursday of each week, beginning October 1, at his studio in room 915, Carnegie Hall, New York.

Mr. Cowles, through his twenty-five years of experience in singing opera both here and abroad, is one of America's best known musicians. He points to his long career and preservation of his voice as evidence of the correctness of his method. He lays particular stress upon distinct enunciation and will endeavor to impart to his pupils the principles of correct, natural and at the same time artistic singing. His instruction includes voice placing as well as coaching for opera, stage and concert.

Mr. Cowles is also known as a composer, among those songs, which have had great vogue, might be mentioned "Forgotten," "Crossing the Bar," "Once in a Purple Twilight," and "How Many Times Do I Love Thee."

Bach Choir Resumes Rehearsals.

Rehearsals of the Bach Choir for the annual spring festival will be resumed Monday, October 5, in the chapel of the Moravian Seminary, Bethlehem, Pa. J. Fred Wolle is the director of the choir.

YVONNE DE
TRÉVILLE
Coloratura Soprano
Grand Opera Prima Donna
NOW IN AMERICA
SEASON 1914-15 BOOKING
Available for Concerts, Musicales, Recitals and Festivals.
New York Recital, Acolian Hall, Afternoon Nov. 6
Brooklyn Recital, Brooklyn Institute, Evening Nov. 4
European Address: 68 rue de l'Aurora, Bruxelles, Belgium
American Address: - 62 De Hart Place, Elizabeth, N. J.
Cable Address: Detreville-Bruxelles

Season 1914-1915
ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, New York
Has the Honor to Present the Violinist
SPALDING
Assisted at the Piano by
ANDRÉ BENOIST
Steinway Piano

Mme. DE VERE-SAPIO
Prima Donna Soprano from Paris Grand Opera; La Scala, Milan; Covent Garden, London; Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., etc., etc., in America Season 1914-15. For terms and dates address:
65 Central Park West, New York.

ROMUALDO SAPIO
Formerly Conductor Metropolitan Opera, New York, and having coached the majority of great operatic artists, among whom: Adelina Patti, Nordica, Tamagno, Etc.
VOCAL STUDIO, 65 CENTRAL PARK WEST, N. Y.

Ellen Keller
VIOLINIST
In America Season 1914-15. NOW BOOKING
Exclusive Management;
Gertrude F. Cowen, 1451 Broadway, New York City

MME. MARIE
RAPPOLD
Celebrated Prima Donna Soprano
of the Metropolitan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts — January to June, 1915
Exclusive Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY

NEW YORK COLLEGE OF MUSIC
128-130 East 58th Street
CARL HEIN Directors AUGUST FRAEMCKI
The college has for its object the universal higher education in all branches of music—Department for those who desire to teach music—Course for Supervisors of Music in Public Schools—Opportunities and training for public appearance—40 Instructors of highest reputation—Newly engaged, Rubin Goldmark, Composition; Michel Sciapiro violin.
CATALOG ON APPLICATION

ARTHUR
SHATTUCK
The Distinguished American
PIANIST
In America Season 1914-15
Management, HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York
Steinway Piano Used

WHITEHILL BASS-BARITONE
Formerly Metropolitan Opera Management: The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th Street, New York

SLEZAK
The Great Dramatic Tenor
In America January, February, March and April, 1915
Exclusive Management:
HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York City
Hardman Piano Used

HENRIETTE BACH
VIOLINIST. Management, Wolfsohn Bureau, 1 W. 34 St., N. Y.

The HAMBOURG CONSERVATORY of MUSIC
PROFESSOR MICHAEL HAMBOURG, JAN and BORIS HAMBOURG, Directors
Unsurpassed faculty of over sixty teachers. Re-opens September 1st
TORONTO, CANADA

GIUSEPPE FABBRINI DISTINGUISHED ITALIAN PIANIST
Minneapolis

LIMA O'BRIEN
ACCOMPANIST
1 West 30th St. :: :: :: :: New York City

FREDERIC C. FREEMANTEL Teacher of Singing
39 South Tenth Street Minneapolis, Minn.

Mr. and Mrs. JOHN DENNIS MEHAN Season 1914-15 Begins Sept. 21, 1914.
STUDIO: 70 CARNEGIE HALL
Telephone Columbus 5946

GAREISSEN STUDIO HALL: 64 East 34th St. NEW YORK CITY.

MABEL
GARRISON
SOPRANO
Metropolitan Opera Company
Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway : : New York City

JANE OSBORN-HANNAH
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Song Recitals Concert and Orchestral Appearances
AVAILABLE ENTIRE SEASON
Personal Management Chas. L. Wagner, 1451 Broadway, New York

JOHN McCORMACK
In America Entire Season 1914-15
EDWIN SCHNEIDER, Accompanist
Always and only under personal management of Chas. L. Wagner 1451 Broadway New York
Steinway Piano Used

RUDOLPH GANZ
"THE PIANIST WITH A MESSAGE"
Returns to America for
Season of 1914-1915
Exclusive Management, CHARLES L. WAGNER
1451 Broadway, New York
Steinway Piano Used

ALICE NIELSEN
Prima Donna Soprano
SEASON 1914-15 AMERICAN CONCERT TOUR
Steinway Piano Used
Personal Management, CHAS. L. WAGNER
1451 BROADWAY - - NEW YORK

A Notable Maplewood Musicale.

Pupils from the Conservatory of Northern Music, New York, Inga Hoegsbro-Christensen directress, gave a musicale at Maplewood, N. J., Saturday, September 19. Mme. Hoegsbro-Christensen has been spending her summer in Maplewood, teaching and preparing herself for concert work.

These were gifted pupils, who appeared on this occasion and they made a favorable impression on their audience. They played from memory, showed artistic ability and good command of technic, in spite of the short time they have been studying. Compositions by Bach, Beethoven, Schumann, Gade, Grieg, Schütte, Merikarto and Brunoff appeared on the program.

Mme. Miler-Narodrny, the Finnish soprano, head of the vocal department of the Conservatory of Northern Music, sang songs by Merikanto and Sibelius, of whom she is a personal friend. She included a group of English songs also. Mme. Miler-Narodrny won her audience by her good voice and artistic interpretations.

Mme. Hoegsbro-Christensen pleased the audience also with the "Wedding March," by Grieg.

Music lovers and teachers at Maplewood and nearby towns were in attendance and the affair proved to be a notable social event as well as an interesting musicale.

Mme. Hoegsbro-Christensen will reopen her Conservatory of Northern Music in New York, November 1.

Off to the War.

These three happy people are not going to war in Europe, but to make war on the finny tribe which abounds in the waters of Lake Otsego, New York, where this picture was taken. These warriors, bold and free, are none other than Nevada van der Veer, the contralto; Reed Miller, the tenor, and Olive Kline, soprano. The group was "snapped" at Camp Happy on the borders of this beautiful lake.

Mme. van der Veer and Mr. Miller already are booked for the following appearances: From October 11 to November 21 they will make a tour of the South and the Middle West, remaining three weeks in each section; on November 23 they will sing in Jamestown, N. Y.; on November 26, in Indianapolis, and on November 30 they will appear at Syracuse, N. Y. Mr. Miller also has been engaged to sing with the Orpheus Club of Cincinnati, December 2, and he will be heard in "The Messiah" performance to be given by the New York Oratorio Society on December 28 and 29.

MUSICAL SPORTS.
From left to right: Nevada Van der Veer, Reed Miller and Olive Kline.

A Lung Taxing Organ.

Vocalists will welcome the suggestion that the opportunity offered by the extensive repairs rendered necssary to the Albert Hall organ should be availed of to lower the pitch of the instrument to the diapason normal. This latter pitch, which is universal on the Continent, gives 435 vibrations a second, at a temperature of 60° F., for the note A above middle C, whereas the corresponding note on the Albert Hall organ is higher by no less than twenty vibrations a second. It is somewhat of an ordeal to sing to this high pitch, particularly in oratorios written when the pitch was a full tone lower than the diapason normal.

The pitch of the Albert Hall organ—455.1 vibrations for A—is actually higher than the highest pitch (453.4) used by the Philharmonic Society under Costa, and exceeds by nearly three vibrations the British army (Kneller Hall) pitch of 452.4. One army band, by the way, has a double set of instruments, as when the Grenadiers' Band was engaged to play at the St. Louis Exhibition it was stipulated that they must play at the diapason normal, whereupon the band was supplied with a complete set of instruments at the low pitch.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A Beethoven society has been formed in Santiago, Cuba.

THE Chickering is well called "The Musician's Piano." Those whose judgment on musical matters is authoritative beyond question, are not chary of their praise for the Chickering.

It has been so for more than ninety years and it is so today. Leaders in the world of music invariably recognize the superior tone qualities, the sympathetic interpretation of this noble instrument.

To own a

Chickering

Piano

is to have a piano which is more than a decorative combination of sound producing mechanisms. It is to own a musical instrument with a glorious history of achievement behind it. It is to own a piano whose possession is proof of the deepest appreciation of all that is best in music.

Chickering & Sons
Boston

Established 1823 Pianos and Players

Division of American Piano Co.

WITHERSPOON

BASS Metropolitan Opera

Available for Concert and Oratorio. Oct 1st. to Jan. 15th.

Address: Management, Wolfsohn Musical Bureau
1 West 34th Street, New York

TINA LERNER

Distinguished Russian Pianist

FOURTH AMERICAN TOUR 1914-15 NOW BOOKING

Management, Loudon Charlton, Carnegie Hall, New York. MASON & HAMLIN PIANO

MME. ROSA OLITZKA

CELEBRATED RUSSIAN CONTRALTO

Engaged as Soloist, Great Texas Saengerfest, May 11 to 14, 1914

AVAILABLE FOR CONCERTS, ORATORIOS and MUSICALES

Manager R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, New York

MARSHALL KERNOCHAN'S

NEW SONGS

1. Lilacs.
2. A Child's Song.

(Two short songs for a high voice)
Range, D sharp below to G sharp above staff.

G. SCHIRMER

There is an improvement in the soft pedal of the Kranich & Bach grands found in no other. In ordinary grands it is impossible to secure a uniform reduction of tone volume throughout the scale when pressing the soft pedal, because the shifting key-board effects no change in the extreme bass whatsoever, reduces the volume one-half in another, and one-third in the treble. The famous "ISO-TONIC" (soft) Pedal in Kranich & Bach grands affects every note in the scale IN EXACTLY THE SAME PROPORTION. Examine this wonderful departure and try the effects possible.

KRANICH & BACH, New York
Send for catalogue describing this invention

The Larkin-Weber Recitals.

A rapid and remarkable achievement of success and popularity is that gained by the two artists who have made the Larkin-Weber recitals a unique and striking example of what energy combined with brains and talent can accomplish.

A little over four years ago Anne Irene Larkin, reader, and Henriette Weber, pianist and lecturer, decided to collaborate in giving recitals of melodrames, that is, readings with music. Although they were begun very modestly, these first efforts of this unique combination met with such pronounced success that Misses Weber and Larkin decided to enter the more ambitious field of opera lecture-recitals and as an initial attempt in this particular field of endeavor they wisely selected Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande." Their success was instantaneous, and their arrangement of the Debussy opera was given over forty times that same season. Spurred on by this recognition, other operas, which by their dramatic as well as their musical value lend themselves readily to this form of presentation, were added to their list until now their repertoire contains a formidable array of operas and shorter melodrames, ranging from standard classics to the latest novelties.

HENRIETTE WEBER.

Photo by Matzene, Chicago.
ANNE IRENE LARKIN.

When Miss Larkin and Miss Weber joined forces, Miss Weber was already well and favorably known as a pianist and lecturer, and latterly her success in talking on musical subjects has been so pronounced that she is now considered to be one of the most popular lecturers before the public, with more demands upon her time than she can fill.

Miss Larkin, though not so well known at that time, already had enjoyed considerable public success as a result of splendid training received from the Columbia Col-

Charles BOWES Vocal Instruction
Returning to New York in October
Address: Care of Musical Courier

"Dawn in the Desert"
By GERTRUDE ROSS
Sung with great success by Mme. Schumann-Heink
WHITE-SMITH COMPANY

HERBERT FRYER
The Distinguished English Concert Pianist
In America the Whole Season 1914-1915
For Engagements, Etc., Address
WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU, 1 West 34th Street, New York

REBARER
420 MADISON AVE., NEW YORK

Florence Macbeth
PRIMA DONNA COLORATURA
Lately Chicago Grand Opera
DUE IN AMERICA IN NOVEMBE

Madame Helene Koelling

COLORATURA SOPRANO
TOUR NOW BOOKING
Management, Antonia Sawyer: 1425 Broadway, N. Y. City

Raimund von Zur-Mühlen

The distinguished vocal teacher and coach (for the last ten years in London) will open a New York studio on

December 1st, 1914

The number of pupils which Mr. von Zur-Mühlen can take is strictly limited and prompt application for lessons is advisable.

All communications to
PAUL DRAPER
18 West Eighth Street

PAUL DRAPER
Lieder Singer
Teacher of Voice
Personal address: 18 West 8th Street.
For concerts, recitals, etc., address
Loudon Charlton, Carnegie Hall, New York

MARGARET HARRISON SOPRANO
8 West 56th Street New York

DONALD CHALMERS BASSO
Address for the Summer
29 Ocean Pathway, Ocean Grove, N. J.
RECITALS :: ORATORIO :: OPERA

EVAN WILLIAMS
TENOR
Akron - - Ohio
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU

Horatio Connell
BASS BARITONE
Management HAENSEL & JONES, AEOLIAN HALL, NEW YORK

PHILIP SPOONER TENOR
205 West 57th St., New York City
'Phone, 6510 Columbus

GENEVIEVE FINLAY-STEWART
DRAMATIC CONTRALTO
HAENSEL & JONES Aeolian Hall, New York

THOMAS FARMER Baritone
Engaged for St. Paul by Handel Society, London, May 12th
Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON, 437 Fifth Aveuue New York

PAUL DUFAULT
TENOR
Returned from successful tour through Australia and New Zealand
NOW IN AMERICA
Address 339 West 23rd Street Tel. 7731 Chelsea

CAROLL BADHAM PREYER
TEACHER OF SINGING—Italian Method (Lamperti diploma)
Studio: 27 West 67th Street Tel. Columbus 1123

George CARRÉ
TENOR
15 East 10th St. Tel. 2927 Stuyvesant New York

Christine MILLER Contralto
Personal address: 1003 Heberton Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.
Management: HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York

REINALD WERRENRATH
BARYTONE
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th Street, - - New York

EDGAR
STILLMAN-KELLEY
STEINWAY HALL, NEW YORK, N. Y.

REBECCA DAVIDSON PIANISTE
Management: WALTER ANDERSON
171 West 57th Street New York

Joseph Baernstein Regneas
TEACHER OF SINGING
Telephone Schuyler 3786 Studio, 133 W. 80th St., New York
From the first rudiments of tone placing to artistic finishing for Concert, Oratorio and Opera

BARONESS Olga von Türk-Rohn SOPRANO
"Europe's Famous Song Bird"
Season 1914-15 Now Booking
Management
Metropolitan Musical Bureau, New Brunswick, N. J.

CECIL FANNING Baritone
H. B. TURPIN Accompanist
Having returned from a year of concert giving in Germany, Italy and England, are
NOW AVAILABLE FOR RECITALS IN AMERICA
Address: H. B. TURPIN, Dayton, Ohio

lege of Expression in Chicago, supplemented by further coaching with Prof. S. H. Clark and Mrs. Milward Adams. But added to this is Miss Larkin's unusual ability as a reader, which has enabled her to build on the ideas of others combined with her own, so that she is now not only a most charming, but certainly in every other respect one of the foremost readers in America.

Incessant combined study and daily rehearsals on the part of the two artists has brought about a remarkable ensemble, which results in their programs being performed with a degree of spontancity and apparent pleasure in the giving that quickly extends itself to the audience, so that their success is not surprising.

The management of the recitals has been in the hands of Henriette Weber, and partly as a result of her tact and tireless energy, partly as a result of the enthusiasm these programs invariably create, the two artists are looking forward to the most brilliant season of their carecr, beginning November 1 with two recitals in New York City, and including appearances in practically all of the leading cities of the East and Central West.

Misses Larkin and Weber have been fortunate in sesecuring Antonia Sawyer, the New York manager, to look after their Eastern interests.

Hazel Eden Mudge in Estes Park.

Hazel Eden Mudge is shown in the accompanying snapshot fceding a chipmunk in Estes Park, where she spent her vacation. The picture was taken at Enos Mills Hotel

HAZEL EDEN MUDGE,
Soprano, spent her vacation in Estes Park. This photo showing Miss Mudge feeding a chipmunk was taken at Enos Mills Hotel, foot of Long's Peak.

at the foot of Long's Peak, which Mrs. Mudge enjoyed climbing many times during her stay in the mountains.

Mme. Rolla Returns.

Kate Rolla, the New York vocal teacher, who since May has been located in Paris, returned to New York, Thursday, September 24, on the steamship New York of the American line. Referring to her recent experiences, Mme. Rolla said to a MUSICAL COURIER reporter:

"We had just time to turn the key and leave. All my stuff is in Paris. At present I am very much interested in one of the biggest charities in France, which is presided over by Mme. Poincaré, the 'l'Appui des artistes.' I intend to get up one of the biggest benefits here for these artists in Paris, at which several of my pupils will sing.

"I was espccially impressed by the dignity of the French, by the dignity which they showed on receiving the news of the declaration of war. I have never seen anything like it. There was scarcely a sound of laughter or music; in fact, the first I heard was on reaching Folkestone, September 2. Even the softest strain from the piano would call forth 'A bas le piano.'"

Mme. Rolla had gone to Paris with the intention of establishing herself in that city. Six of her pupils were en pension with her there, and she will return as soon as affairs regain their normal condition. She is now, however, hunting for apartments in New York, where she will resume teaching shortly.

Stokowski Missed in Munich.

An interesting human document is a letter received by Leopold Stokowski, conductor of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, from the directors of the Concertverein in Munich regarding the abandonment of the festival concerts, of which he was to have conducted the first. The letter informs Mr. Stokowski that every man in the orchestra and most of the directors were leaving for the front, but expressed the hope of a meeting at a more happy time in the future, and the desire of the association to claim Mr. Stokowski's services when their concerts will be resumed.

Katharine Goodson's London Appearance.

Katharine Goodson will be the first pianist of the season to appear in the Royal Albert Hall, London, at the Orchestral Concert, on October 4. She will then play the Grieg concerto—with which her name has always been closely associated—and a group of Chopin solos.

Mme. Kirkby Lunn will be the vocalist.

SOUSA AND HIS BAND
"HEARD THE WORLD AROUND"
Office: 1 West 34th Street
Telephone 6128 Greeley

Alexander BLOCH
CONCERT VIOLINIST
Management, Foster & David, 500 Fifth Avenue, - New York

KIDD KEY CONSERVATORY SHERMAN TEXAS
Hene Richard has been made Director in the Conservatory end le eeeleted by an able corps of teachere. Bendetson Netzorg hae eleo been edded to the Conservatory faculty. For cetelog eddreee
MRS. L. A. KIDD KEY

INEZ BARBOUR SOPRANO
Concert-Recital-Oratorio
Management: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th St., New York

FLORENCE AUSTIN
America's Violinist
Season 1914-1915 Now Booking
Antonia Sawyer has engaged Florence Austin for the Maine Festivals, in Bangor, Oct. 3d, and Portland, Oct. 7th. The management is very happy to secure this talented artist for these two appearances.
Address THOMAS McGRATH, 133 East 34th St., N. Y. Phone, Murray Hill, 2239.

JANE CATHERWOOD SOPRANO and TEACHER
Fowler Apartments, 1110 W. Washington Street
Los Angeles, Cal. Phone 20584

MARIE KAISER
SOPRANO
Manegement: WALTER ANDERSON, 171 West 57th St., New York

MARGARET SHIRLEY
Soprano
Available for Concerts: Recitals, Musicales
IRISH BALLADS A SPECIALTY
Exclusive Management: ANNIE FRIEDBERG, Metropolitan Opera House Bldg., New York

FRANCES ALDA SOPRANO OF THE METROPOLITAN OPERA CO.
Assisted by Gutia Cassini, Cellist, and Frank La Forge, Pianist
SEASON 1914-15 NOW BOOKING
Exclusive Management for Concerts: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York City
Baldwin Piano Used

DRAMATIC MEZZO SOPRANO
SARA HEINEMAN
Concerts and Recitals, also Southern Folk Songs in Costume
3671 Broadway - - New York City

Baroness Evans
Von KLENNER
America's Representative of the GREAT GARCIA VOCAL METHOD
Grand Prix—Paris Exposition, 1900. Summer School—Point Chautauqua, Chautauqua Lake. N. Y. June 25th to Aug. 27th, 1914.
Tradition Languages Repertoire Diction Special Courses for Teachers. Address, New York Studio, 952 Eighth Avenue

THE PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY
of NEW YORK
1914 Seventy-Third Season 1915
JOSEF STRANSKY, Conductor
SUBSCRIPTION SERIES:
New York, Brooklyn, Baltimore and Washington.
TOURS;
New England, New York State, Canada, Middle West, South
Prospectus on application to
FELIX F. LEIFELS, Manager Carnegie Hall, NEW YORK

DJANE LAVOIE-HERZ
CONCERT PIANIST
Touring Canada and United States Season 1914-1915
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.
Steinway Piano used.

Walter Henry Hall
Professor of Choral Music
Columbia University
Address, 49 Claremont Avenue

WILLIAM WHEELER TENOR
Soloist Worcester Festival
O. J. EHRGOTT
156 Fifth Ave.
Personal Representative
Personal Address: 61 Hamilton Place, New York

FRANCIS ROGERS BARITONE
Recital, Oratorio, Concert
Also a few Pupils
563 Park Ave., New York
Management:
LOUDON CHARLTON
Carnegie Hall

LOUISE JANSEN WYLIE Soprano
Management,
Iris Pendleton,
Philharmony Hall,
Wichita - Kansas
New York Address, 736 W. 181st Street

LILLIAN SHERWOOD NEWKIRK
VOICE CULTURE, ITALIAN METHOD.
Special attention to tone production.
1425 Broadway, Metropolitan Opera House Bldg., New York.
Mail address, 11 Morgan Ave., Norwalk, Conn.

Adele Krueger
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Concert, Oratorio, Recital
Management of Miss Annie Friedberg, 1425 Broadway, New York

ALBERT SCHOTT
DRAMATIC TENOR
In America Season 1914-1915. Available for Recitals, etc.
Exclusive Management Concert Direction, M. H. HANSON,
437 Fifth Ave., New York

LEO BRAUN
Voice Culture : Repertoire
Opera Concert Oratorio
Studio: 446 CENTRAL PARK WEST

GEORGE HAMLIN
Will, without fail, fill his engagements in America next February, March and April.
HAENSEL & JONES, AEOLIAN HALL, NEW YORK

MADAME MOLIÈRE
of the Berlin and Hamburg Operas
VOICE CULTURE
Voices tried free during October
Address: 426 Pelham Road, New Rochelle or Metropolitan Opera House

MANUEL QUIROGO
THE WONDERFUL SPANISH VIOLINIST
American Tour Opens Carnegie Hall, October 17th
Direction Sam S. and Lee Shubert
MANAGEMENT, R. E. JOHNSTON,
1451 BROADWAY - - NEW YORK CITY

OVIDE MUSIN'S Virtuoso School of Violin
Recognized as the HIGHEST SCHOOL of violin playing in the United States

Instruction given by this world renowned Virtuoso in person, in the Authentic tempos, style, fingering and bowing of the classical repertory, ancient and modern. Musin's SPECIAL SYSTEM greatly LESSENS the time ordinarily spent in acquiring technic and bow control. Piano, Harmony, with eminent teachers. Singing with Mme. Ovide Musin, Coloratura Soprano. Write for outline of Course by CORRESPONDENCE, and THEMATIC CATALOGUE of compositions and editions by OVIDE MUSIN. Dormitories for limited number of students in School. Practice Unrestricted. CHAPERONAGE. Address the REGISTRAR,

51 West 76th St., New York.

Dolejsi in America.

Robert Dolejsi, the young Chicago violinist, will make a tour of America in 1914-15.

Because of his early evidences of unusual talent, young Dolejsi was sent to Europe to study.

He has studied in private with Sevcik, and was also a member of the master class of violinists at the Royal Conservatory of Vienna, where Sevcik is professor by royal appointment.

Dolejsi is said to be the second American to win the Austrian royal state diploma.

The following press notices show the appreciation of his talent in Austria:

His masterly rendering of the violin part of the A major fantasy and fugue by Josef Marx in the concert of modern composers was worthy of the mature artist.—Freie Presse, Vienna.

Mr. Dolejsi distinguished himself as a chamber music performer of rare excellence in the difficult trio of Suchsland.—Tagblatt, Vienna.

At the Conservatoriums konzert Mr. Dolejsi was decidedly the master pupil of a master class.—Musikbriefe, Vienna.

In the Bach concerto young Dolejsi showed to advantage his broad, full tone and masterly conception.—Piseker Zeitung.

Mr. Dolejsi is the real artist. His appearance is quiet and unassuming and his playing in every instance admirable. In the Scotch fantasy of Bruch, a composition, tended to tax the abilities of any artist, and where the performer can well prove his true worth, Mr. Dolejsi displayed a brilliant technic and a musical conception far beyond his years. He has temperament in abundance, and his full flowing tone and exquisite bowing left nothing to be desired. He was awarded with tremendous applause and responded to several recalls. It is easy to predict a great future for Mr. Dolejsi.—Sumavske Proudy, Bohemia.

Mr. Dolejsi proved himself an artist of high rank in his Vodnan appearance. He made a decided impression with his performance of Max Bruch's Scotch fantasy.—Prague National Press.

The sensation of the evening was the playing of the young violinist Dolejsi, one of the most talented exponents of the master class in Vienna. In the opening bars we knew that an artist of the first order was before us. He carried the audience by his temperamentful performance of the Bohemian variations of Sevcik.—Pisecke Listy, Bohemia.

Robert Dolejsi played here last night the Tartini concerto with orchestral accompaniment. The warm and intelligent playing of this young artist aroused long and hearty applause from one of the largest audiences that has gathered this season.—Jiskra in Tabor.

This promising young artist played the Grieg C minor sonata with tremendous tone and decided musicianship. He finished the program with the difficult Bohemian dance variations of Sevcik, in which he showed his astonishingly sure and brilliant technic.—Otavan, Bohemia. (Advertisement.)

Marie Kaiser Back from Europe.

Marie Kaiser, the soprano, spent the summer in Italy, the accompanying snapshot depicting her in the garden of a hotel in Milan, where she sojourned for a time. Miss

MARIE KAISER IN THE GARDEN OF HER HOTEL IN MILAN.

Kaiser returned recently from abroad and in a letter to the MUSICAL COURIER, she has the following to say:

"While not in any real danger, I saw some very exciting times. Down in Italy I had not even heard of war and in two days I was in the midst of the mobilization of the Swiss army. In Lucerne I met Louis Koemmenich and he advised me to stay there, but against every one's advice, we started back to Italy to get to a seaport. We travelled for days in the trains with the soldiers. Had to change trains every few miles. There were no porters, so I carried my own luggage, and it was heavy, too, but before I got into Italy I felt I could carry a trunk, if necessary."

Finally Miss Kaiser secured passage and left the exciting scenes abroad for the more peaceful ones of New York. It is needless to say that she is glad to be in America again.

CORNELIUS VAN VLIET
Dutch Cellist
2514 Emerson Ave., S., Minneapolis, Minn.

MARGARET KEYES CONTRALTO
WITH CHICAGO GRAND OPERA CO.
Management, THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU, 1 W. 34th St. New York
Personal Address, 600 West 138th St. Phone 1810 Audubon

Angelo CORTESE
America's Distinguished
HARPIST
Management, Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, N. Y.

MARGARET HUSTON
SOPRANO
In Europe Season 1914-15

J. FRED WOLLE
ORGANIST
Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau
1 West 34th Street, New York

Nana GENOVESE
MEZZO SOPRANO. Formerly Manhattan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts, Recitals and Musicales
EXCLUSIVE MANAGEMENT, ANNIE FRIEDBERG, 1425 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

Carl Pohlig
CONDUCTOR
Address: VILLA POHLIG, PLANEGG
near Munich, GERMANY

MADAME ANITA RIO
CELEBRATED AMERICAN PRIMA DONNA SOPRANO
NOW IN AMERICA
CONCERT ORATORIO
Management - - MUSIC LEAGUE OF AMERICA,
HOWARD E. POTTER, Business Manager
AEOLIAN HALL - - - NEW YORK

GIORGIO M. SULLI
Teacher of Carmen Melis, Clara Clemens, Mme. Martha de Lachmann, Reinhold von Warlich, Mario Sammarco, Lena Mason, Tarquinia Tarquini and other well-known singers of Grand Opera or Concerts. Musical Director of the Labor Temple Choir, New York. Teaching during summer, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday only. Special terms.
VOCAL STUDIO, 1425 Broadway
Metropolitan Opera House Building, New York
(Phone, 2762 Bryant)
Public Recitals throughout season for advanced pupils. Write for Circulars.

JAN SICKESZ DUTCH PIANIST
American Tour Begins
October, 1914
Management ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, New York
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

MARIE SUNDELIUS Soprano
Exclusive Management
GERTRUDE F. COWEN. 1451 Broadway, New York

MME. GRACE HALL RIHELDAFFER
SOPRANO
824 9th AVE., MUNHALL, PITTSBURGH, PA.

Florence Hinkle
....SOPRANO....
Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau. 1 West 34th St., New York

BYFORD RYAN
Three Years Leading Tenor, Opera Comique, Berlin
Vocal Studio: 28 West 63rd Street - - New York

Lionel Robsarte
Opera Tenor
Instructor to the Profession. Hotel Woodward, N. Y.

ADELAIDE GESCHEIDT
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Instructor of the Miller Vocal Art Science and The Art of Singing
817 Carnegie Hall Tel. 1350 Columbus

JOHN THOMPSON
AMERICAN PIANIST
Management: Robert P. Strine, Estey Hall, Philadelphia

EMIL J. POLAK
ACCOMPANIST AND COACH
Address: 217 E. 71st St., New York City Telephone 923 Lenox

HELEN BIXBY WETZEL
Coloratura Soprano
Now appearing with several Italian Grand Opera Companies. MILAN, ITALY

GERMAINE SCHNITZER
THE FAMOUS AUSTRIAN PIANIST;
In America Season 1914-1915
Direction: R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, New York City
BALDWIN PIANO

LESLEY MARTIN, Bel Canto
STUDIO: 1425 Broadway, New York
SINGERS — Susanne Baker Watson, Cora Cross, Pauline Fredericks, Andrew Mack, Nellie Hart, Marion Stanley, Estelle Ward, Gertrude Hutcheson, George Bemus, George Gillet, John Hendricks, Dr. Eugene Walton Marshall, Fiske O'Hara, Horace Wright, Mabel Wilbur, John H. Stubbs, Edward Foley, Albert Wallerstedt, Umberto Sacchetti and many other singers now before the public in opera and church work.

Season 1914-15
LOUIS SIEGEL
Violin Virtuoso
FIRST AMERICAN TOUR
Management: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York

1914-15 SEASON 1914-15
GRACE POTTER
PIANIST
MARIE HERTENSTEIN
PIANIST
FRANCIS MACMILLEN
VIOLINIST
Exclusive Management S. E. MACMILLEN, 618 Candler Bldg., 220 West 42nd St., New York. Phone Bryant 8520

Oscar Saenger
TEACHER OF SINGING
From the rudiments of tone placing to artistic finishing for concert, oratorio, recital and opera. Teacher of famous Opera and Concert singers, among whom are:
Mme. Marie Rappold, soprano; Miss Florence Hinkle, soprano; Miss Mabel Garrison, soprano; Miss Helen Warrum, soprano; Mme. Bernice de Pasquali, soprano; Mr. Rudolf Berger, tenor; Mr. Heinrich Hensel, tenor; Mr. Orville Harrold, tenor; Mr. Paul Althouse, tenor; Mr. John Young, tenor; Miss Eva Robeson, contralto; Miss Mildred Potter, contralto; Miss Kathleen Howard, contralto; Mme. Josephine Jacoby, contralto; Miss Sibyl Conklin, contralto; Mr. Henri Scott, basso; Mr. Allen Hinckley, basso; Mr. Louis Seidler, baritone; Mr. Albert Wiederhold, bass-baritone; Mr. Leon Rains, basso.
TEL. 687 LENOX STUDIO: 6 EAST 81st St., NEW YORK
Resume Teaching October 1st.

Birdice Blye Returned from Europe.

Birdice Blye returned to Chicago last Thursday from a five months' tour of Europe. She suffered no hardships nor discomforts in any way in connection with the outbreak of war, although her trip was shortened considerably and she missed a number of engagements she had arranged to fill, in October, in some of the principal cities.

Miss Blye was in the South of France when war was declared, but, with her friends, left immediately for Geneva. After spending some time in Switzerland, they went to Genoa, Italy, for a couple of weeks, until they could secure comfortable sailing, and were fortunate in bringing all their baggage. The passenger list was a distinguished one and included many well known in musical, artistic and literary circles. Miss Blye's trip up to the time of the war was thoroughly delightful and she met many noted people, and was especially pleased to meet Mrs. Hackett frequently, a most charming and brilliant woman who is very proud of the success and distinction achieved by her son, Karleton Hackett.

Miss Blye was entertained by a Scotch lady, Miss Laing, living in Florence, who knew of her in London when Miss Blye was but a child studying with Dr. Henry Wylde, and recalled the progress she made at examination, when she had taken all three medals, all in one year, and which were presented to her at the annual commencement exercises by Sir Julius Benedict, who led her to the front of the stage and aroused a storm of applause by announcing,

BIRDICE BLYE IN VENICE.

"This little American girl has captured all the medals in one year by her extraordinary talent." Another pupil of Dr. Wylde at the same time was Marguerite O'Key, who afterward became Mme. de Pachmann, and later Mme. Labori, wife of Maitre Labori, the famous lawyer in the Dreyfus and Caillaux cases in Paris.

Miss Blye is happy to be at home again, as she is a loyal and enthusiastic American.

The accompanying snapshot of Miss Blye was taken in Venice.

Adelaide Gescheidt Resumes Teaching.

"Vocal Art Science," the product of the combined brains of Dr. Miller and Adelaide Gescheidt, is producing such results that it has been necessary to enlarge the quarters at Carnegie Hall, New York, the annex studio being No. 834. Here an assistant has charge of certain pupils. The Philphonia Club, composed of those studying with Miss Gescheidt, meets at the studio weekly for tone production and analysis. "Such definite results are obtained," says Miss Gescheidt, "that it will not be long before this system will be known as a codified, standardized, practical and common sense method of developing the voice."

Katharine Lee's Success.

Katharine Lee, the pianist and teacher of Norwich, N. Y., who studied at the American Institute of Applied Music, Kate S. Chittenden, dean, has a flourishing class of piano pupils in this youngest city of New York State. Her pupils' recital of last June was a most successful affair. In addition to her other duties, Miss Lee is the president of the Monday Evening Musical Club. This club engages artists like Paul Althouse, John Scott (in a program of his own works), Florence Austin and other well known artists.

STEINWAY PIANOS

Built By Masters for Four Generations

"Excellence" in a piano is more than case, action, strings and pedals.

"Excellence" in a piano is that something, over and above all these, which the genius of the builder puts into it. The Steinway Pianos are the creation of genius.

The name of the Steinway dealer nearest you, together with illustrated literature, will be sent upon request.

STEINWAY & SONS
STEINWAY HALL
107 and 109 East 14th Street :: :: New York

SUBWAY EXPRESS STATION AT THE DOOR

FOUNDED JANUARY, 1880

MUSICAL COURIER
A WEEKLY JOURNAL
DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND ALLIED ARTS

ESTABLISHED
BY
MARC A. BLUMENBERG

PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY
BY THE

GRAND PRIX PARIS EXPOSITION 1900

MUSICAL COURIER COMPANY
(Incorporated under the laws of the State of New York)
LOUIS BLUMENBERG, President
ALVIN L. SCHMOEGER, Sec. and Treas.
437 Fifth Ave., S. E. Cor. 39th St. - - - New York
Cable address: Pegujar, New York
Telephone to all Departments 4292, 4293, 4294, 7357 Murray Hill
LEONARD LIEBLING - - - - - EDITOR
H. I. BENNETT - - - - MANAGING EDITOR

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1914.

No. 1801

OFFICES AND REPRESENTATIVES

MIDDLE WEST DEPARTMENT—
Chicago Offices, 615 to 625 Orchestra Building, Rene Devries, General Representative, in charge.

UNITED STATES AND CANADA

BOSTON—
Blanche Freedman, 108 Hemenway St., Suite 10. 'Phone: B. B. 5554.
SAN FRANCISCO—
Alfred Metzger, Rooms 1009-1010, Kohler & Chase Building, 26 O'Farrell Street.
PHILADELPHIA, PA—
Harold Parry Quicksall, 5719 Windsor Place.
PITTSBURGH, PA.—
Hollis Edison Davenny, 5012 Friendship Ave., E. E.
ST. LOUIS, MO.—
Ernest R. Kroeger, Musical Art Building, St. Louis, Mo.
ST. PAUL, MINN.—
Johnson McClure Bellows, Musical Editor of St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press.
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Miss Ruth Anderson, 49 So. Eighth St.
LOUISVILLE, KY.—Katherine Whipple-Dohbs, 425 Fourth Avenue.
COLUMBUS, OHIO—Miss Emily Church Benham, 1299 Bryden Road.
BUFFALO, N. Y.—Cora Julia Taylor, 819 Richmond Avenue.
NEW ORLEANS—Harry B. Loeb, Box 79.
LOS ANGELES—Mrs. Jane Catherwood, 1110 W. Washington St.
KANSAS CITY—Geneve Lichtenwalter, 600 Studio Bldg.
CINCINNATI—
Mrs. Jessie P. Tyree, 9 The Westmoreland, Mason St., Mt. Auburn.
OMAHA—Jean P. Duffield, 205 Boyds Theatre.
LINCOLN, NEB.—Mrs. E. S. Luce, 1614 O St.
PROVIDENCE, R. I.—William Place, Jr., Jackson Bldg.
DES MOINES—Mrs. Caroline Young Smith, 1082 21st Street.
DENVER—Mrs. Dolores Reedy-Maxwell, 1516 Milwaukee St.
PORTLAND, ORE.—John R. Oatman, 445 Sherlock Bldg.
WICHITA, KANS.—Ralph Brokaw, 109 East 3d St.
VICTORIA, B. C.—Miss May Hamilton, 524 Michigan St.

EUROPEAN

BERLIN, W.—
Arthur M. Abell, Jenaer St. 21.
Cable Address: Abell, Wilmersdorf, Berlin.
PARIS—
H. O. Osgood, 43 Boulevard Beausejour.
LONDON—
H. O. Osgood, care of G. Schirmer, 18 Berners St., London W.
DRESDEN—
Mrs. E. Potter-Frissell, Eisenstuckstrasse 16.
MOSCOW, RUSSIA—
Ellen von Tideböhl, Arbatte, 34 Deneschny.
ROME, ITALY—
Mrs. Dolly Pattison, 9 Piazza di Spagna.
STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN—
Louisa Upling, Roslagsgatan 19.
LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND—
W. J. Bowden, 22 Fern Grove.

For the names and addresses of correspondents and representatives not in this list, apply to main office.

SUBSCRIPTIONS: (In Advance)

United States	$5.00	Canada	$6.00
Great Britain	£1 5s.	Austria	30 kr.
France	31.25 fr.	Italy	31.25 fr.
Germany	25 m.	Russia	12 r.

Single Copies, Fifteen Cents, at newsstands.
Back Numbers, Twenty-five Cents.

Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class Matter.

THE MUSICAL COURIER is for sale on the principal newsstands in the United States and in the leading music houses, hotels and kiosques in Belgium, England, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Switzerland and Egypt.

American News Company, New York, General Distributing Agents.
Western News Company, Chicago, Western Distributing Agents.
New England News Company, Eastern Distributing Agents.

ADVERTISING RATES:

On reading page, per inch, per year	$400.00	Front pages, per issue	$500.00
On advertising page, per inch, per year	200.00	Line (agate) rate on reading page, per issue	1.00
Column rate, per issue	150.00	Line (agate) rate on advertising page, per issue	.50
Full pages, per issue	400.00

THE MUSICAL COURIER EXTRA
Published every Saturday by Musical Courier Co.
Devoted to the interests of the Piano Trade.

METROPOLITAN FOR CHICAGO.

At the moment of going to press the Musical Courier learns that informal negotiations are pending for the Metropolitan Opera Company to appear for one month in Chicago after the close of the regular New York season. Of course, no definite agreement will be reached until the return of Giulio Gatti-Casazza to this country.

BOSTON OPERA NEWS.

A late report reaches the Musical Courier that Henry Russell is on his way to this country and that the regular Boston Opera season probably will be given this winter as usual.

Julia Culp will sail for America on the Noordam, from Rotterdam, on October 24.

Oscar Saenger, the singing master, has just returned to New York and will resume teaching at his studio, 6 East Eighty-first street, on October 1.

Arrigo Serato, the Italian violinist, will arrive from Europe shortly. His New York debut will be effected with the New York Philharmonic Society on November 5.

Rudolf Berger will not make his American tour this winter, as he is in the German army. His wife, Mme. Rappold, also has gone to the front as a Red Cross nurse in order to be near him.

All French and Russian operas have been eliminated from the repertoire of the opera houses in Germany. England continues, however, to perform German and Austrian music at its concerts.

Also, England has its conductor troubles. Michael Balling, leader of the famous Hallé concerts at Manchester, is detained in Germany, and serving as a member of that country's Landsturm.

An "Aid Association for Destitute Artists" has been formed in Berlin, to help deserving musicians who are thrown out of employment at present and cannot find any way of earning a living through their art.

The German Liederkranz Society has just engaged Carl Friedberg, the German pianist, for its first orchestra concert in December. Friedberg is due to arrive for his first American tour the beginning of October.

Maggie Teyte, the soprano, is singing in vaudeville in London, according to an advertisement in a London paper. From another reliable source comes the information that Anton Hekking, the cellist, is playing at a Berlin café.

A London newspaper says that at the current Promenade concerts there, audiences appear to welcome Wagner and the older German school with their accustomed fervor, but patriotism seems to make them look askance at works by living Teutons.

Our Cincinnati office reports that a cablegram received by the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra Association from Dr. Ernst Kunwald announces that he will sail from Rotterdam on October 3. This will bring him to Cincinnati in plenty of time to begin rehearsals with the orchestra. Among the novelties to be produced at the concerts this winter will be many compositions by Americans. Dr. Kunwald has stated his intention to produce symphonies by Edgar Stillman Kelley, Henry K. Hadley and Oldberg, also orchestral pieces by MacDowell, Arthur Foote, Arthur Nevin and other well known American composers. Of the modern European works, Dr. Kunwald hopes to be able to give Mahler's first or fifth symphony, Reger's "Romantische Suite" or "Ballad Suite," several of the compositions of Schoenberg, and pieces by Korngold, Busoni, Standor and César Franck.

Mr. and Mrs. Yeatman Griffith, whose vocal studio in London is well known, have decided, owing to the present state of war, to come to the United States. They will arrive early in October, bringing with them a large class of their singing students.

Owing to the European war, the Hamburg New Opera could not be opened and now announces its bankruptcy. Gotha's Opera premiere is postponed this fall. At Meiningen, the Duke has abrogated the contracts of his singers at the Opera and dismissed them.

It is announced by the management of the Bayreuth Festival that money paid by patrons for the cancelled performances from August 4 to 20 will be refunded. Many German holders of tickets, however, have donated the money due them to the various war funds of their country.

The latest cablegram from Francis Macmillen to his managers announces that he has reached the residence of the Duke and Duchess Lante della Rovere, near Rome. The violinist made the journey by automobile over the St. Gothard Pass. His message states that it required more than two weeks to move from Dresden, Germany, to Rome.

At Mme. Melba's latest Melbourne concert she sang the "Mad Scene" from "Lucia," the "Ave Maria" from Verdi's "Otello," the "Jewel Song" from "Faust," Tosti's "Good Bye," Arditi's "Rosebuds," "Home, Sweet Home," etc. As the concert took place in July, there is no reason to suppose that the absence of Schubert, Schumann, Franz, Brahms, Wolf and Strauss from the Melba program was due to the war. Mme. Melba evidently does not believe in the Lied, or else she applies to it in her mind Lincoln's pithy phrase about something else: "It's all right for those who like it."

Willy Burmester, the German violin virtuoso, has engaged passage on the Holland America Line and will sail from Rotterdam on October 17, which will enable him to arrive in New York in good time for his forthcoming American season. Burmester's coming is a musical event of impressive importance. On the Continent he enjoys remarkable popularity and drawing power. In certain cities of Germany, Burmester receives fees equaled by no other living violinist. Burmester had seventeen important engagements booked for the early part of the season in Germany, but owing to the war he cancelled all contracts, not on his own account, for he was guaranteed in each case, but in order not to embarrass the local managers.

Among the novelties and quasi novelties which the New York Philharmonic Society will perform this season are a concerto for oboe, strings and organ by Handel, Beethoven's triple concerto for piano, violin and cello (the solo parts to be played by Germaine Schnitzer, Leopold Kramer and Leo Schulz), Hadley's symphonic poem, "Lucifer," the "Sinfonietta" of Erich Korngold, Max Reger's serenade for two orchestras, Novak's "Slavic" suite, the "Endymion" suite of Hinton, Stravinsky's "Fireworks," Stojowski's suite, op. 9, a "Meditation" for strings by Burck, an "Oriental Temple Dance" by Laucella, "Rhapsodie Funebre," by Stahlberg, the ballet music from Paderewski's "Manru," the overture to d'Albert's opera, "De Improvisator," Bizet's "Roma," Debussy's "The Children's Corner," Dvorák's "Scherzo Capriccioso" and D'Indy's "Istar." Also there will be one or two Wagner programs and a program devoted entirely to Tschaikowsky.

KREISLER RESURRECTED.

It will be remembered that the MUSICAL COURIER was the only newspaper in America to deny the widely circulated report last week of the death of Fritz Kreisler. It now turns out that the MUSICAL COURIER was right—as it is always in matters of musical news—for this journal is in possession of positive information (whose source cannot be given out but is unquestioned) that Fritz Kreisler is well and safe in Vienna and that with the help of Austrian Government influence he will be enabled to leave that country in time to fill his American concert engagements.

Apropos of the printing and dissemination of misleading war news, the Pacific Coast Musical Review publishes these timely reflections in its current issue:

> Many members of San Francisco's musical cult were shocked last week when some of the daily papers published a dispatch telling of the death of Fritz Kreisler, who was reported to have been shot while serving in the Austrian army. Intelligent readers of newspapers have long ago despaired of finding any attempt at accuracy in the news dispatches concerning war. Editorially every one of the newspapers have told us that the censorship is absolutely impenetrable, that no dispatches are permitted to leave the country, that no correspondents are permitted to come within reach of the theatre of war, and that in fact it is utterly impossible to secure news. And when you turn from the editorial page to the news page you find columns upon columns of news supposed to be official and accurate.
>
> How can any intelligent person believe both the news and editorial utterings of the newspapers? One of them must be inaccurate, and we take it that the editorial announcements are correct and the news items are mainly fiction.

With the same ignorant recklessness that caused most of the American newspapers to slay 300,000 Austrians, to announce the demoralized rout of the Germans and to picture the Russians as marching upon Berlin, the editors murdered Kreisler and Rothier, and doubtless soon will dispose sanguinarily also of Marcoux, Thibaud, Berger, Rachmaninoff and other musicians reported to be at the front.

The MUSICAL COURIER probably will have to save all their lives just as it did that of Kreisler.

PIANISTS' CONTEST.

From reports received it appears that nineteen cities now are represented in the pianists' contest which will take place in Chicago on October 15, 16 and 17, under the auspices of Charles G. Dawes, Frederick Stock and Glenn Dillard Gunn, committee in charge of the orchestra's popular American concerts. The successful contestant will be awarded the appearance in the orchestra's American program of November 2 and a cash prize of $200, awarded by Charles G. Dawes.

Only pianists whose entire training has been received in America can compete. It is the first appeal of the kind addressed to our native musicians and the response indicates a firm belief in American pianistic and pedagogic talent.

The cities represented when the lists were closed Tuesday last were as follows: Cambridge, Mass., Edwin Downs; New Bedford, Mass., Elizabeth Forbes; Hartford, Conn., R. Augustus Lawson; Wilton, N. H., Pasquale Tallarico; Paterson, N. J., Harvery Anderton; Easton, Pa., Earl La Ross; Germantown, Pa., Edith Mills Bly; Cincinnati, Ohio, Irene Gardner, Myra O. Reed and Joseph Adler; Saginaw, Mich., Sue Florence Opp; Muncie, Ind., Carl Bilby; Racine, Wis., Florence Bettray; Milwaukee, Wis., Milton Howard Rush; St. Louis, Mo., Stella Kriegshaber; Down's Grove, Ill., Marion Lower; Naperville, Ill., Bernard Dieter; Flinton, Pa., Carl Jessen; Sioux Falls, S. Dak., Florence Grigsby; Oakland, Cal., Phyllidia Ashley; Tucson, Ariz., Julie Robie; Chicago, Mariea Manley, Dora Heyman, Carrie S. Roberts, Sarah Suttle, Belle Tannenbaum, Carol Robinson, Marie Kryl, Max Vald, Sophia Ackermann, Agnes Bodholdt, Louise Milligan, Joseph Wynne, Margaret Wieland.

REPERTOIRE FOR OPERA IN BOSTON.

Manager Leahy announces for his first week of grand opera to be given at the Boston Theatre, beginning October 5, the appended operas and casts:

Monday evening and Wednesday matinee: "Aida," with Johanna Kristoffy, Blanche Hamilton Fox, Giuseppe Tricario, Ferriccio Corradetti, Pietro de Biasi and Joseph Florian. The conductor will be Arturo Bovi.

Tuesday and Friday evenings: "Carmen," with Alice Gentle, Rena de Sales, Umberto Sacchetti and Pietro Gallazzi.

Wednesday evening and Saturday matinee: "Lucia," with Miriam Ardini, Giuseppe de Crecenzo, Ramon Blanchart and Pietro de Biasi.

Thursday and Saturday evenings: "Trovatore," with Kathryn Lynbrook, Blanche Hamilton Fox, Giuseppe Opezzo, Corradetti and Florian.

CATHEDRALS AND WAR.

Whatever the military advantages gained by the partial spoliation of Rheims Cathedral are, it is nevertheless with a pang that the civilized world hears of the damaging of what the great Scotch historian of architecture, James Fergusson, calls "perhaps the most beautiful structure produced in the Middle Ages."

"Nothing can exceed the majesty of its deeply recessed portals, the beauty of the rose-window that surmounts them, or the elegance of the gallery that completes the façade and serves as a basement to the light and graceful towers that crown the composition."

Since its foundation in 1212 to its bombardment in 1914 it has exerted an influence for good on all the art lovers in the world, directly or indirectly, and it has become enshrined in song and story. Every child has heard the history of the Jackdaw of Rheims, and has learned to associate the name of Rheims with a great church and monks. It may be hard for some of the elder, as well as the younger children to realize that the cathedral in the firing line recently is the same vague, half romantic building somewhere in old Europe, with which we have all been more or less familiar since our youth. Posterity remembers these calamities even when the war and all its causes and exigencies have been long forgotten.

No one can look upon the noble ruins of the Acropolis of Athens and forgive the Venetians for bombarding it, in 1687, and injuring the masterworks of Phidias and Praxiteles which had once been the glory and pride of ancient Athens. The republic of Venice and its doges, with all their sea power, have passed away forever. And the history of Venice, Queen of the Adriatic, is little more than a fairy tale today. But the gaping walls and fallen columns of the Parthenon still tell the world of Venice and cast a shadow over the glory of the dead republic.

Nor can one visit the beautiful cathedrals of England without a feeling of resentment that Cromwell should have done them so much injury during the civil wars of 1642-1645, and could find no better use for some of them than to stable his horses in their long drawn aisles.

It is reported that the new Pope, Benedict XV, considers this attack on the Rheims Cathedral as an act worthy of Attila. The Roman pontiff has, of course, a deeper interest in the welfare of his cathedrals than the preservation of historical monuments and architectural magnificence.

It may be, too, that the Pope's knowledge of French history caused him to speak of Attila; for on these same plains of Champagne, in 451, the army of the Huns under Attila was overwhelmingly defeated, after a prolonged and bloody struggle, by the allied armies of the west under Aëtius, leader of the Romans, and Thedoric, King of the Visigoths. Contemporary historians, for whose accuracy we cannot vouch, assert that there were nearly 300,000 slain left on the field.

But in those barbaric days there was not a building in Europe, outside of Greece and Italy, which was worth preserving. It was nearly eight centuries before the lovely Gothic church at Rheims was begun. And now, after seven hundred years of life, the venerable cathedral which has withstood wind and weather and the "envious siege of time" while all our modern civilization of Europe and America has slowly grown to what it is, must risk its existence and bow its lofty head before the juggernaut of war.

PICTORIAL NEUTRALITY.

In the appended letter is one point worth consideration:

To the Musical Courier:

I don't quite understand why you should print two full pages of the Kaiser and German interests and only one page regarding the other countries. It doesn't look well, particularly when the Germans are such experts at exploiting their merits and near merits. I owe allegiance to none of the countries at war, but I do despise that self laudatory spirit which seems to be a characteristic of the majority of the Germans. Nothing shows refinement more decidedly than letting others sing one's praises.

J. L. STREMAN.

The point which seems to call for an answer in Mr. Streman's letter is his inquiry as to why the MUSICAL COURIER printed two pages of German pictures as against one page of the other countries. There was no malice aforethought in the quantity of the pictures. The MUSICAL COURIER had published a special series of articles (with many illustrations) not long ago, setting forth the development of music in Germany during the Kaiser's reign, and therefore this paper happened to have on hand in its stock cut department at the present time more German pictures than English, French or Russian. Thus is the great political mystery made clear.

The MUSICAL COURIER is in the same position as Mr. Streman in that it owes no allegiance to any of the countries at war, and that is why we cannot discuss the other particularizations in this letter except to say that we have met among the representatives of all nations individuals who exploit their own merits and are self laudatory. With profound regret we feel it our duty to state that many of those persons were Americans.

MUSICAL COURIER HELPS BOSTON.

Anton Witek and ten other members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra sailed for America from Rotterdam on September 19 and are due in New York as the MUSICAL COURIER goes to press. The Boston players were deeply concerned over the possibility of their being seized en route by British cruisers as they all are German or Austrian subjects. Ambassador Gerard, at the request of Arthur M. Abell, Berlin representative of the MUSICAL COURIER, gave the orchestral party a special safe conduct, certifying that they are members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and bound for America on a peaceful mission.

RAGTIME A NATIONAL VICE.

Must not ragtime now be considered one of our national vices?

SADISM.

In the South African Musical Times for June there is a very readable article by Hedley A. Chilvers, called "Criminals Who Loved the Masters." The author of that article appears to be surprised that persons with a mind to appreciate music should also be moral delinquents. He says: "It may seem rather fantastic to advance the proposition seriously that music may be professed and beloved by men with criminal minds; but, howsoever it may appear, there lies in the great bulk of human experience indubitable proof that this is the case. Great criminals may be fine musicians; men who commit the most diabolical offenses against society, as, for instance, the chemist recently sentenced at the Rand sessions, who was a clever pianist, may delight in beauty of sound; and among the many mysteries of the human mind there seem few so fascinating as the juxtaposition of musical and criminal bias."

If Hedley A. Chilvers thinks it strange that criminals should like music we are justified in assuming that he believes music to be productive of probity and honor, or, at any rate, that if music cannot make a man upright it ought to be disliked by criminals. But what has music to do with morality or immorality? A chemist might just as reasonably write to a chemical newspaper and express his surprise that a pianist who was also a fine chemist (and there is one) should be criminal.

Coincidences must not be taken for causes. It is a coincidence that a girl with brown eyes likes chocolate. It is false reasoning to conclude that the chocolate is the cause of the brown eyes, and equally absurd to be surprised that a blue-eyed blonde also likes chocolate.

We refer Hedley A. Chilvers to a little book recently published by the Cambridge University Press in England, called "The Psychology of Insanity." The author of the book, Dr. Bernard Hart, who is lecturer in psychiatry to a medical school in London, and medical superintendent of an asylum, shows that a man may be a pronounced lunatic on certain subjects and perfectly sane on others. He cites the case of a patient who might be firmly convinced that he was a son of George III and still be capable of solving the most abstruse mathematical problems.

But Dr. Hart does not express surprise because a good mathematician might consider himself the son of a king. He merely demonstrates that the mind is like a house with a great many rooms, one or more of which may be shut up tight against light and logic, while the other rooms are open, clean and in order. This little book of 172 pages ought to be in the hands of every one. It explains a great many of the so-called mysteries of the human mind.

Hedley A. Chilvers may come to see that there is nothing incompatible between cruelty and music, if he does not know it already. We do not presume to teach him or to pose as experts in mental troubles and genius. Hedley A. Chilvers may know more about psychiatry than we do, and he may only be trying to make his article interesting to the readers of the South African Musical Times. But we think it is wrong to imply that music and crime are in any way related either for good or bad. A love for music indicates that one part of the brain is properly developed and is performing its normal functions. An impulse to commit a crime shows that another part of the brain is undeveloped or out of order. If a surgeon opened the skull of Shakespeare or a Humboldt and inserted a hard lump no bigger than a pea the towering intellect of those great men would at once be deranged. If the pressure was put on a certain part of the brain they would be unable to move a muscle; if put on another part they would lose their sight; if put on another part they would be unable to reason clearly; if put on still another part they would become violently destructive and try to murder the surgeon; if put on another place they would have powerfully erotic impulses.

Medical experts may smile at our crude and untechnical description. We are not writing for them, however, but for the readers of a musical newspaper. If we have brought home to our readers the conception of the human brain as an organ with many localized functions, we have attained our object.

Hedley A. Chilvers mentions the cruelty of Nero, of an elderly French organist, of the notorious murderer, Charles Peace of London, and of Mrs. Montague, an Englishwoman "who hanged a child up in a closed cupboard until the little one died." All of these degenerates were musical. Why not? We have already stated that music and crime have no relation one with the other. A man may be an excellent pianist and yet have a wooden leg. Byron was a poet in spite of a clubfoot. All this may seem like trifling; but it is not. We only want to shatter the notion that the mind is a simple organ which gives itself entirely to music, or entirely to crime, or entirely to chemistry, or entirely to golf. A man may take a long walk and let his fingers or his ears remain perfectly idle. A man may commit a great crime and not employ his musical faculty at all, or think of astronomy, or be influenced by logarithms. This seems clear enough to us.

A man may have his back broken without injuring his face. But it is undeniable that a hunchback gets a certain characteristic expression on his face. The influence of the deformity is registered in the features. Likewise the influence of degeneracy can be traced in the working of the otherwise healthy brain. That impulse to inflict suffering is called the sadistic impulse, after the Marquis de Sade. It is usually associated with aberrations of the sexual impulse, which for obvious reasons cannot be explained in these columns. We refer those who desire more light on this subject to Dr. J. Richardson Parke's medico-literary treatise on "Human Sexuality." In Nordau's "Degeneration" we read that "Nietzsche is a sufferer from sadism in its most pronounced form, only with him it is confined to the intellectual sphere alone." Dr. R. von Krafft-Ebing says: "The complete contrary of masochism is sadism. While in the former the subject desires to suffer sorrows and to feel himself in subjection to violence, in the latter his aim is to cause sorrows and to exercise violence."

These men of science do not confuse cruelty and music. They recognize sadism as a mental disease which may be found in any kind of mind, great or small.

Its presence, however, influences to a certain extent the entire mind. A composer who has a touch of the sadistic in him will write music fuller of discords and biting accents than will a composer with the healthy humor of a Haydn.

It would be interesting to trace the connection between the sadistic tendency of much modern music and the increase of nervous diseases and emotional degeneracy, due to the stress of modern life, with all its drugs, stimulants and exciting sports and pastimes.

SAMAROFF'S COURTESY.

The MUSICAL COURIER publishes with pleasure the attached letter received from Charles L. Wagner, the manager:

1451 Broadway,
New York, September 24, 1914.

To the Musical Courier:

I want to make public recognition of a most courteous act on the part of Olga Samaroff, in her attitude toward Rudolph Ganz at the Worcester Festival.

As is well known, Mr. Ganz was engaged as the piano soloist for this season. His boat sailed a few days late and through wrong information received by the festival people, they asked to be released and engaged Mme. Samaroff in his place.

Rudolph Ganz arrived in time and when Mme. Samaroff heard of his arrival, she proved herself a great woman, as well as the beautiful artist she has always been, and gave Mr. Ganz his place on the program.

It is a great pleasure to record an unselfish act like this of one great artist toward another and I hope you will give it space in your editorial columns.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) CHARLES L. WAGNER.

A WRONG RIGHTED.

John Towers, the venerable St. Louis singing master and author of a dictionary of operas, has written us a little note in his customary humorous style to tell us we are wrong in our spelling of a certain antiquated French composer's name.

No doubt J. T. is right; he usually is. He has been right for about eighty years; and we sincerely hope that Atropos, the sinister goddess with the shears, will keep her scissors off the lengthy thread of John Towers' life for many years to come, in order that he may put to rights a good many things that are still all wrong.

And now, having paid our graceful compliment and dragged in one of the Mœræ in our endeavors to attain a high literary style, we shall proceed to unload our grievances on the other fellow. His name is C. P. Landon. He collected data and published a compendious work in thirteen volumes called "Galerie historique des hommes les plus célèbres de tous les siècles et de toutes les nations."

In the thirteenth volume, which was published at Paris in 1811, are to be found seventy-two copper plate engravings of various celebrated men of several nations. The fifteenth plate has the name engraved under the portrait, and the name in the text and the index is exactly like the name on the plate —Daleyrac.

Therefore, John Towers, if you assert that the name should be Dalayrac, you must say that the French contemporary of Dal-yrac was wrong too.

So be it. We are glad that our columns are read by such critical authorities.

VOTING FOR OPERAS.

At the Century Opera House the patrons have been asked to vote in order to decide which operas are to be presented during the last ten weeks of the season. The contest closed on September 26, but on September 18 the vote stood as follows:

Aida	5
Samson and Delilah	4
The Barber of Seville	4
Louise	4
Rigoletto	4
Martha	4
La Bohême	4
Madam Butterfly	4
Thais	4
The Tales of Hoffmann	4
Haensel and Gretel	4
The Secret of Suzanne	4
La Gioconda	3
Mignon	3
The Magic Flute	3
The Juggler of Notre Dame	3
The Huguenots	3
Massenet's Manon	3
The Masked Ball	3
Die Wauküre	3
Boris Godounov	3
Tristan and Isolde	3
Fra Diavolo	3
Die Meistersinger	3
Norma	3

MONDAY PERFORMANCES.

Owing to the large papers which The Musical Courier prints during the regular musical season it has been found necessary to start the paper on the press on Monday evening, so as to insure its going into the mails on Tuesday and its delivery to the subscribers on Wednesday, our day of publication. Reports of Monday performances in New York will, therefore, have to be curtailed to the briefest possible limit in the Musical Courier issue of the same week.

THE REASON FOR WAR?

"In 1912," says London Musical News, "the German exports of musical instruments amounted to the value of £3,899,400, while British exports in 1913 amounted to but £567,200. The German trade thus came to nearly seven times that of the United Kingdom. This country buys more German instruments, particularly pianos, than she exports." The same paper advises British piano manufacturers to turn their attention to the market at their doors and to assail also the much greater fields for their enterprise in the principal foreign and colonial markets hitherto supplied by Germany. Of the German exports, about sixty-five per cent. was accounted for by pianos and their parts.

SOMEWHAT SIMILAR.

A correspondent writes: "The war critics remind me of the music critics and the music critics remind me of the MUSICAL COURIER's unforgettable 'deadly parallel' column, 'What the Jury Thinks.'"

IT SOUNDS JUST THE SAME.

Now that Baltimore's grandiose celebration for The Star Spangled Banner" is over, the tune doesn't sound a bit better than it did before.

CORRECT ENOUGH.

New York hotels are said to be asked to pay $500 per year for the use of copyrighted music played by their orchestras, and an association formed for the purpose is declared to be ready to persuade compliance with the help of the society's attorney. There is no reason why copyrighted music should not be protected by its owners and if the composers and authors are to share proportionately in the $500 hotel fees the new movement will have the backing of all fair minded persons in and out of the musical profession.

MUSICIANS RENOUNCE TITLES.

Max Bruch has written to the leading Berlin papers and the Cologne Gazette that he renounces his title (Doctor of Music in honoris causa) conferred upon him by the University of Cambridge in 1893. He asks the MUSICAL COURIER to make known his action in America. A similar request is received from Hans Richter, who notifies us that he has renounced his Doctor titles bestowed upon him by the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge. His English orders he has presented to the Red Cross, "whose blessed activities," as he writes, "include also the wounded English."

NO FRENCH OPERA AT NEW ORLEANS.

Our New Orleans correspondent heralds the abandonment of the regular opera season at New Orleans, owing to present European conditions, which prevent many of the French singers from coming to this country. New Orleans is contemplating an affiliation with an opera company which is just concluding a season in Buenos Aires.

HOW LONG DO MUSICIANS LIVE

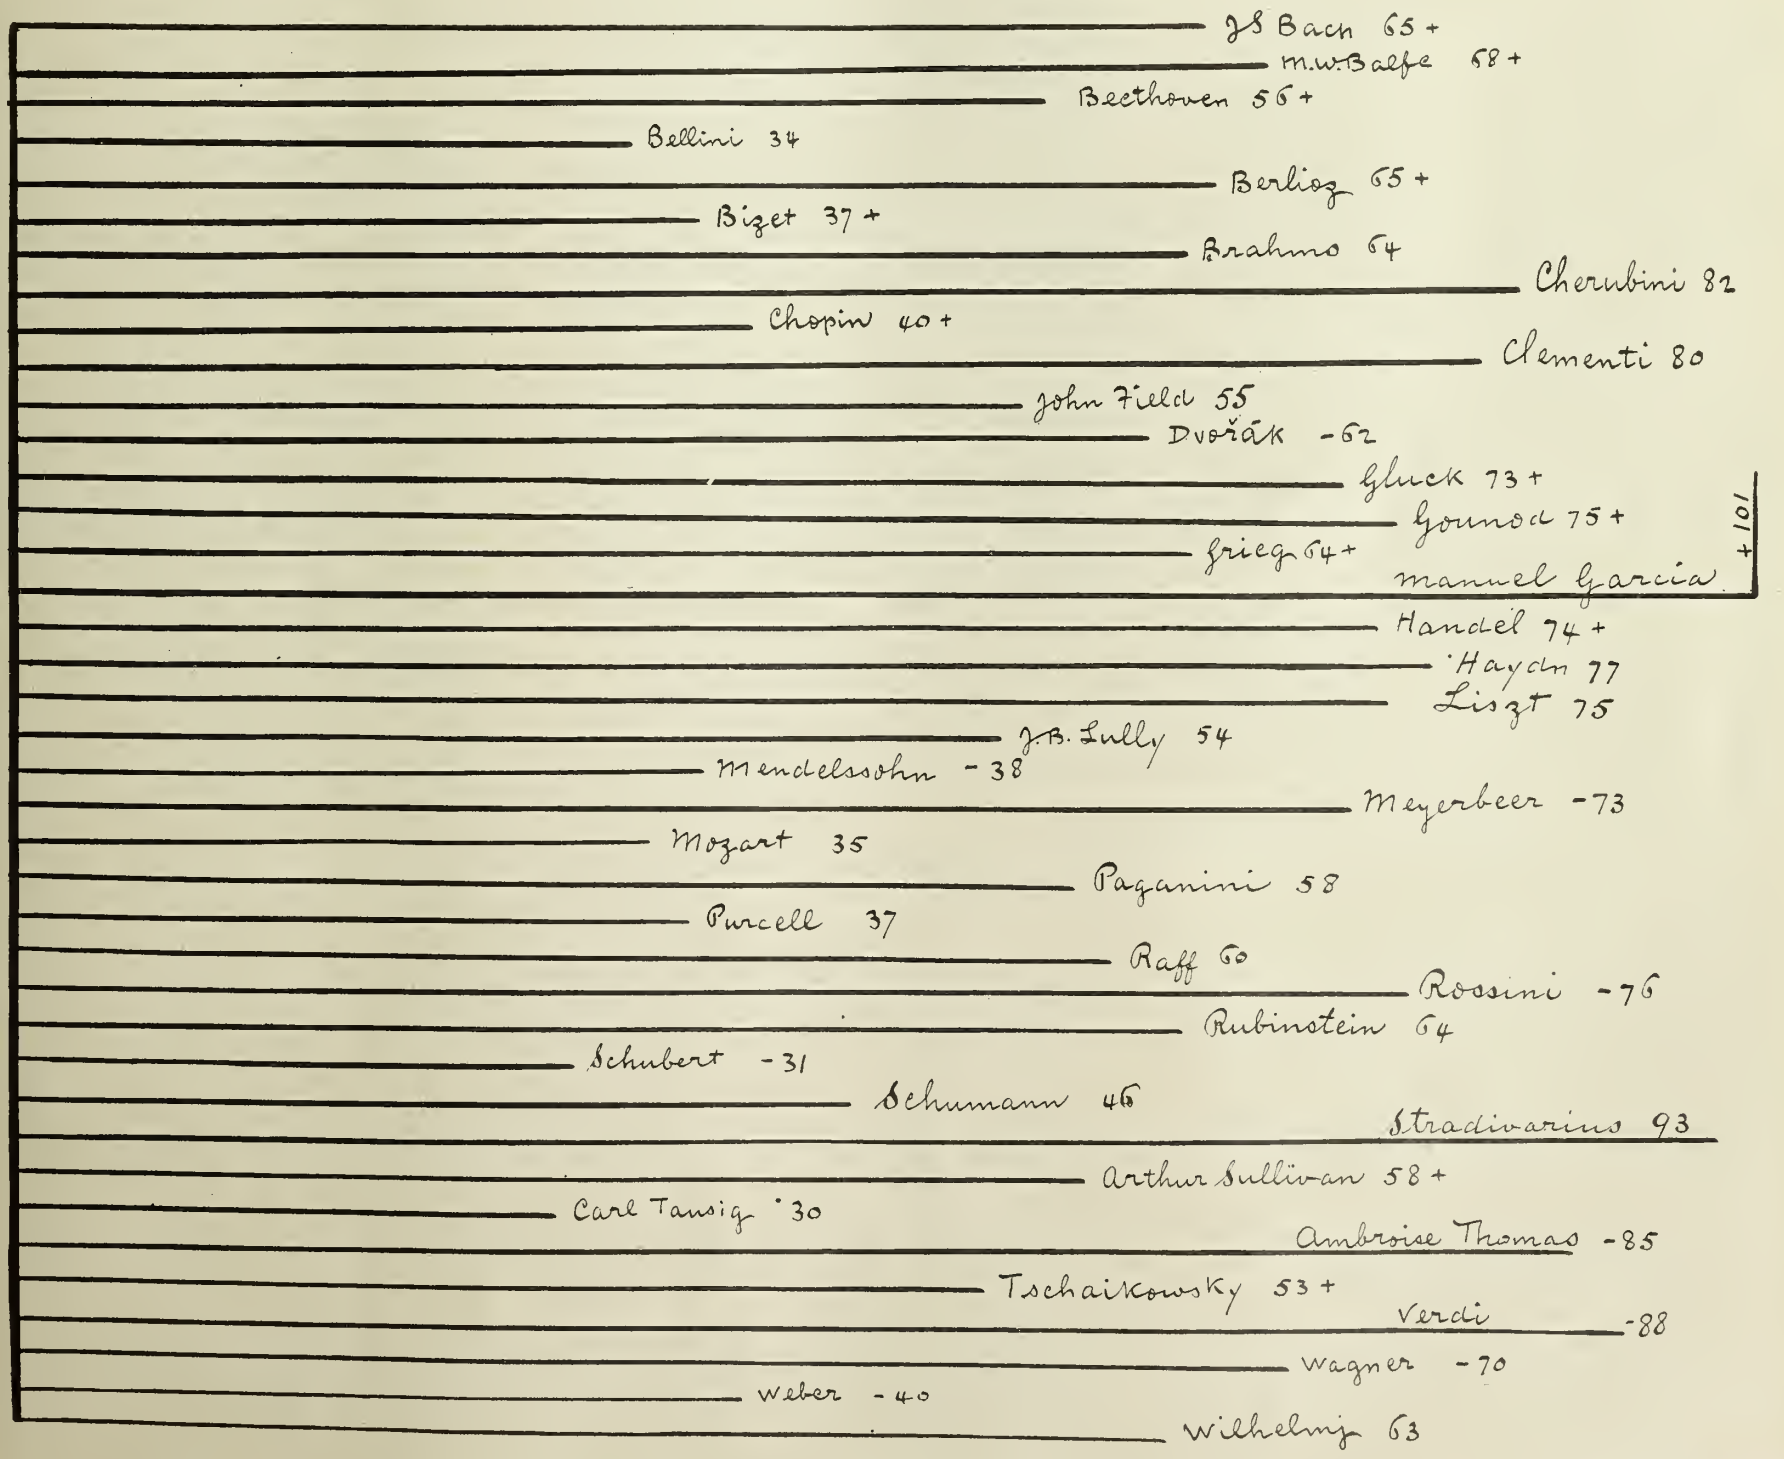
According to the drawing exhibited beneath it appears that a singing teacher and a violin maker live longest, and that a pianist and a composer have the briefest existence. But, as a matter of fact, musicians live as long and no longer than other people.

In the original MS, the length of each line was made according to the number of years each composer lived, allowing an eighth of an inch to a year. The original has been reduced in this reproduction, but the scale of proportion remains the same.

DE GOGORZA COMING.

From Antonia Sawyer, the manager, comes this communication:

1425 Broadway,
New York, September 24, 1914.



To the Musical Courier:

There have been reports that Mr. de Gogorza was not coming to America this season, but I received a letter from him yesterday saying that he would surely be here.

Yours most sincerely,
(Signed) ANTONIA SAWYER.

COURAGEOUS WORDS.

Courage is in the words of the Indianapolis (Ind.) News, which says that America's depraved musical taste is based on its hymns, which, as a rule, are not good music. The statement is worthy of serious consideration, even if no one will quite agree that this nation turned to ragtime because of its inferior church music.

"Oh, War, Where Is Thy Sting?"

As we sit down to write this department of deep observation and serious truths, the singing of the children at the Peace Meeting near Grant's Tomb is distinctly audible through the open window of our home sanctum. The setting sun glows warm and golden over the peaceful Hudson Palisades. A light breeze breaks the river's surface into playful ripples. The soft green sward is covered with hushed crowds awed by the significance of the occasion. Speakers, solemn, eloquent, pacific, portentous, sway the multitudes variously. Then the children sing. Their childish treble voices float upon the October air and rise higher and higher—so high in fact, that they sing "The Star Spangled Banner" nearly a half tone off pitch, and the discord mingles with the cry of the newsboy who is selling extras on Claremont avenue: "Oh, say can you see"—"Von Kluck Surrounded"—"By the dawn's early light?"—"Allies Whip Germans"—"What so proudly we hailed"—"Russians Take Austrian Fortress." Bang! We close our window, and the war in Europe goes on.

Isolated.

"Are all men alike?" asks Prof. Franz Boas, of Columbia University. All except the American composer.

Symphonic Fortification.

We suggest that if the Russian army attack Vienna, the Austrians build breastworks of piles of Bruckner and Mahler symphonies. Their density ought to save the city.

A Singer's War Views.

Eleonora de Cisneros writes to us from Paris under date of September 9: "After all, I am glad to be here; moments like these not only are historic, but also they cause one to live in the real sense of the word; they take us from the small egoism of the eternal contemplation of ourselves and bring to the surace in us those things that count most vitally in our relations with the world. Is it not strange that even in the midst of the brutality of war the sublimest idealism can be found? . . . We that are here today in Paris, feel that in the end, if we live, we will become better men and women from what we have seen and from what we have learned without seeing. . . .

"Of course operatic activity is finished here for the time being, and to an immense number of artists of all kinds that means misery. The Opéra and the Opéra Comique, La Gaité, the Monnaie, of Brussels, and all the provincial opera houses of France are closed—the men being with their regiments, and the women, many of them, engaged in hospital work. Others who remained behind are—hungry!

. . .

"A couple of weeks ago I met Huberdeau full of enthusiasm and good humor. He was leaving that night for the front. Campagnola has gone; also Muratore; Clement is a military chauffeur; Renaud was among the first. Imagine what a chic soldier he will be. Others fighting are Fontaine, the new tenor who was to be at the Chicago Opera this winter; baritone Ghenz, of the Opéra Comique, and Albert Carré, who is a lieutenant-colonel. Armand Crabié and Conductor Chalier are with the heroic Belgians. My husband is awaiting a call from the British headquarters to join a technical corps. . . .

"As for myself, I had been offered an engagement with the Chicago Opera late in the season, but was under contract with Barcelona, Madrid and Berlin for 'guest' appearances, and therefore regretfully declined the Chicago opportunity. The moment those seasons were abandoned owing to the war, I wrote to Campanini declaring my willingness to join his company, when, lo and behold! also the Chicago season is declared 'off.' So here I am, helping along by sewing and soliciting necessities for the hospitals. Along with the battles and the victories must go the work of the women.

"As every ill wind brings some good, so I am sure the American artists now in America will be the gainers in the musical commerce, and all good luck should be theirs, for they worked and waited long to come into their own. Best wishes to all my friends in my native country."

The Progress of Art.

Let no one say hereafter that America is not advancing artistically. We have on our desk a small, neatly printed leather bound volume (flexible cover), which we received as a premium with a box of ten cigarettes purchased by us. The name of the booklet is "Antony and Cleopatra," and the author is William Shakespeare.

The Gallic Tristan.

Very charming and very exquisite, according to the New York Times' Review of Books, is "The Romance of Tristan and Iseult," being an English translation by H. Belloc, of J. Bedier's "Le Roman de Tristan et Iseult," the French version of the old romance as the Gallic troubadours knew and sang it. The description of the boy Tristan is especially appealing: how he was taught "the arts that go with barony—the use of lance and sword and 'scutcheon and bow, and how to cast stone quoits and to leap wide dikes also; and to hate every lie and felony and to keep his given word; and the various kinds of song and harp playing and the hunter's craft; and when the child rode among the young squires you would have said that he and his horse and his armor were all one thing." This French idea of the Tristan legend differs in many interesting essentials from the rugged German conception, and many scholars hold that much of its original poetry has been lost in the ruthless Wagner adaptation. Debussy has been promising us a French musical "Tristan et Iseult," but there is no more sign of it than of the two works that he contracted to do for the Metropolitan Opera some five years ago and which that institution has been announcing faithfully each winter ever since. Debussy and his "Pelleas et Melisande" threaten to repeat the sad history of Rossini and his "William Tell."

Tales of Hofmann.

The war stories told by refugee Josef Hofmann upon his arrival here from Europe last week differed from those of the other fleeing individuals principally in that he was at Lake Geneva when the war broke out and they were not.

Sarcastic Sortie.

"The musical critic," says an impious exchange, "is one who does not sing or play well enough to keep him away from his other work, but who is pleased at any time to establish the rating of visiting artists throughout all eternity."

Bombardment of Watson.

Last week this department undertook to say a few mild words in protest against the war sonnet by William Watson published in the London Times. We reprinted the lucubration by way of emphasizing our distaste. We find that we are not alone in our estimate of the Watson lines, as this reprint from the Morning Telegraph—Algernon St. John Brenon suspected—will show:

"Tennyson, referring to certain experimenters in English verse, described them as frogs croaking coarsely. He should have read William Watson, who was lately moved to pocsy because of the war. He might have spoken more rudely still. Mr. Watson's emotion takes the form of a sonnet. William Wordsworth requested the reading public not to scorn the sonnet. In the hands of one poet he said the sonnet 'became a trumpet, whence he blew soul animating strains, alas! too few.' In the hands of Mr. Watson the sonnet becomes a grating diversion on a penny whistle, the strains of which are, alas! too many.

"Mr. Watson starts off apostrophically, as with a crash of defiance: 'We know you, War Lord!' Then there is an aposiopesis. This term is used not pedantically, but because the use of it in description of the poem lends a sort of dignity to an otherwise bald and unconvincing composition. It means a sudden break into silence. After the aposiopesis, Watson goes on, 'You that flung the gauntlet, fling down the mask you wore, publish your heart and let its pent hate pour.' The Kaiser, despite 'the detractions rude,' to use the phrase of another sonneteer, has often shown himself an obliging fellow, but he might find it hard to achieve the feat of publishing his heart.

"After that Mr. Watson speaks modestly and becomingly of his people:

> "'We are old in war and if in guile we are young,
> Young also in the spirit that evermore
> Burns in our bosom ev'n as heretofore.'

"'Heretofore'—there is a phrase as vile as the 'mob led queen'; but then it rimes with 'pour,' and that is something. It may be also noticed that the first of the three lines cited, is not in verse at all. The words just huddle and limp along like a defeated regiment.

"According to the sensible advice of the President, we are neutral in the War of the Seven Nations. But it will not be a violation of our studied impartiality to warn the London papers that the continued publication of these elephantine poems may have a serious effect upon recruiting.

"Germany finds a better use for poets than England. Germany makes them fight. The English bards seem to have no other function than to irritate."

Ensemble Spirit.

A play now being presented in New York makes this titular appeal: "What Is Love?" It is the feeling which surges into the heart of a prima donna as she counts the numerous recalls of her vocal rivals.

Colorado Inspires Cadman.

Charles Wakefield Cadman, resident in Colorado, is at labor upon a new one act opera, the subject of which will be kept a secret until the completion of the work. He admits, however, that the theme is not Indian. Nelle Eberhardt, of Pittsburgh, is the librettist for Cadman. She also has written the text for many of his published songs.

Piano Proclamation.

Olga Samaroff has in her possession a very interesting souvenir of these war days, in the shape of a billposter announcing a concert she was giving in Marienbad. Over half of the poster the order for the general mobilization of the Austrian army is pasted.

Musical Sporting Note.

Beethoven, as was pointed out exclusively by this column, is a most sagacious horse. Last Thursday he won an Empire City race at the soul satisfying odds of 6 to 1. We almost bet on him.

Are the Poles Musical?

The other day, while visiting relatives in Philadelphia, Arthur Hartmann played a bit upon his fiddle, which he hadn't touched since his recent exciting days in Paris. His music brought the Polish housemaid to the door of his room. She listened in deep silence, but when Hartmann had finished she said: "Watzs ze madyer wit zha moosick? Dot mak mee feel lahk ven somebodyz is died."

Inspiration and Perspiration.

Willie—Paw, what is the difference between genius and talent?

Paw—Talent gets paid every Saturday, my son.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Press Agent Baker Scores.

"Ysaye will be sorry enough that the war kept him in Belgium, especially when he hears of the Kansas fiddle contest, with prizes aggregating $1,000." So writes Charles F. Baker, co-manager of the San Carlo Opera Company. Mr. Baker continues: "The test pieces are 'Ole Zip Coon,' 'Turkey in the Straw,' 'You Gotta Quit Kickin' My Dawg Aroun,' etc. The fiddle prize is $300 for the best fiddler and a thirty-five cent shirt for the worst one. Don't you think that if you put these facts properly before the Belgian Government they will exempt Ysaye from service so that he can hurry over here and get to Kansas in time to participate and protect his championship honors? After all, what is the small matter of Belgium's independence and neutrality, compared with the defense of its honor as the world's leading producer of fiddlers? I beseech you to cable these facts at once to King Albert, formerly of Brussels, and also to extend to him my very warm personal regards and the information that the San Carlo Opera Company has booked the biggest and most profitable season of its career in this country."

We have a sneaking suspicion that Mr. Baker wrote the foregoing in order to get mention in "Variations" for his San Carlo Opera Company. We consider the scheme to make us advertise the San Carlo Opera Company in this manner a very shabby one and hope he will not send us any more clever letters which force us to aid him in his publicity campaign for the San Carlo Opera Company. We have no feeling against the San Carlo Opera Company, but why should we be compelled to give space to the fact that the San Carlo Opera Company has booked the biggest and most profitable season of its career? What is the San Carlo Opera Company to us? Mr. Baker, you did not fool us. We are as shrewd as you are, please remember that.

Opera in English.

A "Lost and Found Bureau" is one of the conveniences at the Century Opera. The other evening a wag approached the custodian of the bureau and asked: "Is this the 'Lost and Found' place?" Upon being assured that it was, he wrinkled his brow, handed the official a book and announced: "I've lost my place in the libretto.

you please find it for me?" The name of the wag? It was that irrepressible jester, Ben Trovato.

A Slam at Us.

An English exchange says: "No better writer of Variations ever has lived than Brahms."

Reprisals.

Will the French horn and the English horn be banished from Germany's orchestras? At any rate, German pianos have been put out of the London Guildhall School of Music.

At the Century Opera.

Morgan Kingston—What a beautiful aria you do in the first act.

Kathleen Howard—Yes, isn't it? (Sings) "Ta-ti-dum-dum-dum-dum"——

Milton Aborn (entering)—No "dum-dums" here, if you please. This is a neutral opera house.

LEONARD LIEBLING.

Richardson for New York.

The extensive growth of the business of G. Dexter Richardson, manager of musical artists, has made it necessary for him to move his headquarters from the Arbuckle Building, Brooklyn, to 501 Fifth avenue, corner of Forty-second street, New York City.

While he will continue to maintain the Brooklyn establishment it will be only as a branch office, for the handling of local Brooklyn musical affairs with which Mr. Richardson is prominently identified.

Besides managing the business affairs of the many musical celebrities on his list, Mr. Richardson is planning a concert series at popular prices for New York, Boston and Philadelphia similar to those which he has given so successfully in Brooklyn for a number of years.

Mr. Richardson feels that the advance bookings made through his offices, and the general outlook warrant him in believing that this will be a banner year for American music.

Dedicated to Helen Bixby Wetzel.

Helen Bixby Wetzel, the young prima donna, is shown in the accompanying snapshot on an Italian balcony. The picture was taken in June. Miss Wetzel has made her

HELEN BIXBY-WETZEL,
On an Italian balcony in June.

biggest success in Italy, where she has sung with several opera companies.

An old Italian operatic critic has dedicated to her the following charming poetic eulogy:

(TRANSLATION.)

To the charming and gracious Helen Bixby Wetzel.
Beautiful and elegant you have the air,
And these not only I say
When I listen to you sing
To me it seems a nightingale.

Form divine possessing
Nature you has molded.
What I say—believe I,
The ideal paggio she will stay.

Go on, O Elena,
The muse of song stays with you,
Among the flowers,
Any serpent you will forbid to go.

The Buckinghamshire Territorial, under their new commandant, Colonel Wethered, are going in for chorus singing practice. This is a good idea. Sung badly enough, these choruses should prove a valuable weapon against a musical foe, such as the Germans.—Punch.

RUDOLPH GANZ AS A SOLDIER.

Swiss Pianist Serves His Country—Released from Army on Account of Illness—Opens American Tour at Worcester Festival.

Rudolph Ganz, the pianist, is seen as a Swiss soldier in one of the accompanying pictures taken in the barracks at Zurich during his recent ten-day service in the Swiss army.

Mr. Ganz was about to leave for America when war was declared, but he was among the first to offer his services to his country when the order came for the mobilization of the Swiss army.

"The mental strain was something awful," Mr. Ganz told a MUSICAL COURIER representative; "there were my engagements in America to be filled and the worry of what might come to me through hardships. I was apt to lose everything. Then I became ill and was released."

Mr. Ganz's send-off from the army was a most cordial one. One of the highest military officials made this appreciative statement: "We haven't many Rudolph Ganzes and we believe he can do more for his country as a pianist than as a private soldier."

RUDOLPH GANZ AS A SWISS SOLDIER.

MR. AND MRS. RUDOLPH GANZ AND THEIR YOUNG SON, ANTON ROY,
In their garden at Clarens, Switzerland.

But Mr. Ganz, the patriotic Swiss, is shown in his own statement: "If I have to go to war, I shall return to my native country at once."

Mr. Ganz's release came just in time for him to catch the steamship Antilles, which reached New York September 24, enabling him to fill his Worcester, Mass., engagement.

In company with other noted musicians, Mr. Ganz came steerage, for which he was obliged to pay a large sum.

Referring to the picture, Mr. Ganz said: "It was taken by my father at six o'clock in the morning as I left home. I didn't look that way after ten days of hardships."

Mr. Ganz's engagements for the season extend from coast to coast.

Speaking of his Idaho and Utah appearances—a new field for the pianist—he remarked humorously: "I shall help them to get in the wheat if they have not enough people to come to my concerts."

Mr. Ganz's Boston recital is scheduled for October 17, and he will give his New York concert, Sunday afternoon, October 18.

Mme. Santley's English Appearances.

Maud Santley, contralto, of the Century Opera Company, New York, made her first appearance as a concert singer at the Royal Albert Hall, London, when she appeared on the same program with Mme. Patti. [illegible] with the diva followed. The next year Mme. Santley was the contralto soloist with Mme. Melba, and after appearances at all the principal London and Provincial concerts, including those of the London Symphony Orchestra, Queen's Hall Promenade, London Ballad and Scottish Orchestra, Mme. Santley made her debut in opera as Carmen with the Carl Rosa Opera Company.

Dr. Hans Richter heard her sing and himself personally introduced and recommended her to the Covent Garden

Copyright by Mishkin Studio, New York.
MAUD SANTLEY AS CARMEN.
Century Opera Company.

syndicate for the principal contralto roles of Waltraute and Fricka in Wagner's "Ring" cycle. Mme. Santley has also appeared in the Italian season of opera at Covent Garden, and has especially happy recollections of playing Maddalena in "Rigoletto" to Tetrazzini's Gilda, Sammarco being the Jester and John McCormack the Duke.

Before leaving for America Mme. Santley had just completed a contract with the Dennof-Beecham Company, having played all the principal contralto parts in "The Ring."

Century Opera Sunday Concert.

The first Sunday night concert of the season was given at the Century Opera House, New York, on September 27, and the excellent work of the orchestra and of the soloists, all of whom were from the regular Century Opera cast, was greatly enjoyed by a large audience. The program follows:

Overture to Rienzi ..... Wagner
Orchestra.
O Mio Fernando, from La Favorita..... ..... Donizetti
Elizabeth Campbell.
Kol Nidrei ..... Bruch
Vladimir Dubinsky, cellist, with orchestra.
Bird Song, from Pagliacci..... Leoncavallo
Myrna Sharlow.
Symphonic poem, Les Preludes ..... Liszt
Orchestra.
Conductor, Josef Pasternack.
Waltz, Blue Danube..... Johann Strauss
Orchestra.
Conductor, Hugo Riesenfeld.
Zaza, Little Gypsy, from Zaza..... Leoncavallo
Thomas Chalmers.
Nobil Signori, from The Huguenots..... ..... Meyerbeer
Maude Santley.
Rudolph's Narrative from La Boheme..... Puccini
Hardy Williamson.
Vulcan's Song, from Philemon and Baucis..... Gounod
Henry Weldon.
Hungarian Rhapsody No. 2..... Liszt
Orchestra.

Henry Weldon, who has been ill for several weeks and who has been able to fill his roles at the Century only with difficulty, was unable to appear at this concert, and his place was taken by Alfred Kaufman, who sang "Hybrias the Cretan," by Elliott. Among the numbers most enjoyed on this program were the "Pagliacci" selection by Myrna Sharlow, whose attractive singing and pleasing voice are always to the taste of Century Opera audiences, and "Zaza" from the same composer by Thomas Chalmers, whose fine baritone has developed remarkably during the year that he has been engaged at the Century, and whose fine physique and strong personal magnetism render his work always successful.

The playing of the orchestra upon this occasion was better than it has ever been, showing more sonority of tone and cohesion in the various parts than upon any previous occasion.

CHICAGO NEWS.

Pithy Paragraphs Tell of Activity in Musical Circles.

Chicago, Ill., September 26, 1914.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Devries already are making plans for recitals and operatic performances for the presentation of their students. The first recital will be given as usual in November. Students who will be heard include Hazel Eden Mudge, Marie Yahr, Maude Roberts, Ethel Magie, Ninette Marchand, May Churchill, Berenice Shaine, Emery Nonnast, Hortense Brunswick, Elsie Gaffey, Dorothy Cannon, Blessing Martin, Lillian Gottlieb, Nellie Freeman, Harriett Durlacher, Frances McCormick, Rose Mary Perigo, De Voe Kine, Letitia Stubbs, May Panoch, Grace E. Lachmann, Filomena Carsone, John Harris and Florian Varconi.

In Milwaukee, where Mr. and Mrs. Devries are engaged by the Wisconsin Conservatory of Music to teach once a week (Mondays), the following operatic performances will be given: In November, two acts of "Carmen"; in January, two acts of "Faust;" in March, several performances of Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet" at the Pabst Theacra, with full orchestra, conducted by William Boeppler, director of the Wisconsin Conservatory of Music, and under Herman Devries' direction.

Charles L. Wagner Writes.

This office is in receipt of the following letter from Charles L. Wagner, the New York manager:

Dear Mr. Devries: One week in January, Mr. McCormack will play: Saint Joe, Saint Paul and Saint Louis.

The Saints be praised.

Faithfully yours,
(Signed) Chas. L. Wagner.

Irene Mitchell in Chicago.

Irene Mitchell, the Kanas City manager, who was in Chicago during the summer months, left this week for her home to look after her interests in that locality. Miss Mitchell renewed many acquaintances while in the "Windy City" and also made many new friends.

Jennette Loudon's New Studios.

Jennette Loudon has informed this office that her studios will be removed to 614 Fine Arts Building, after October 1. The Jennette Loudon Studios are this year more spacious than heretofore. This is due to an especially large enrollment for the classes of piano, harmony, voice, violin and cello. Speaking about the Jennette Loudon Studios, it might be mentioned that Miss Loudon is the pianist of the Beethoven Trio, the other members being Otto B. Roehrborn and Carl Brueckner, of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. The Beethoven Trio will, as heretofore, give chamber music concerts in the Middle West and in Chicago during the musical season.

MME. EDUARD AND HER ARTIST-PUPIL, LOUISE LE BARON.
This picture was taken recently at Ravinia Park, Chicago, where Miss Le Baron had been singing.

The Reporter, of the Strassberger Conservatories,

This office acknowledges receipt of the last issue of The Reporter, published by the Strassberger Conservatories of Music, of St. Louis. Looking over the paper, which is edited by J. W. Sneed, one finds some valuable information concerning the schools, among which is the special announcement of the new acquisition of Fountain Pierce Leigh, of Chicago, to teach exclusively for the Strassberger Conservatories of Music in the piano department. Mr. Leigh was a post graduate of the American Conservatory and Bush Conservatory. He studied with Victor Garwood, Harold von Mickwitz and Julie Rive-King (piano), Clarence Dickinson (organ), Cyril Graham, George Colbourn, Adolf Weidig and Kenneth Bradley (theory). An interesting piece of information contained in The Reporter is to the effect that B. C. Strassberger has received word from Mr. and Mrs. Clemens Strassberger in Europe, sending greetings to all the faculty, pupils and friends of the Strassberger Conservatories after they had toured through southern Italy, Tyrol and Switzerland; they had reached Berlin, Germany. Professor Strassberger hopes to return in the fall in the best health and expects to bring many new points and ideas for the St. Louis twin conservatories.

Kathryn Stevenson to Marry.

Kathryn Stevenson, sister of Lucille Stevenson and daughter of Mrs. Margaret E. Stevenson, will be married to Lorance R. Carter at the home of her parents, Tuesday, September 29. Mr. and Mrs. Carter will leave after the ceremony for Australia, where they will make their home. Miss Stevenson, like her sister, is a soprano and has been heard in Chicago in concert, recital and comic opera. Congratulations from this office to her family, and best wishes to the pretty and talented bride.

Carolyn Willard's Promising Season.

Carolyn Willard, the pianist has had a most successful summer teaching season in Union City, Mich., which closed August 21, since which time she has been enjoying a splendid vacation, both at the Wisconsin lakes, tramping and sailing, and in Milwaukee as the guest of the pianist, Gretchen Gugler.

Miss Willard told a representative from this office that she was glad to be back at work again, and that the prospects for the year are extremely promising.

Marion Green Engaged for Minneapolis Orchestra Tour.

Marion Green, the American basso cantante, has been engaged by Manager Heighton for an eight weeks' tour with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra as well as for one of the Beethoven cycle of concerts in Minneapolis during the regular season. Mr. Green has toured with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, the Louis Symphony Orchestra, and the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, as well as having had appearances with most of the prominent American orchestras in their home cities. His work with orchestra is distinguished by a selection of rarely heard numbers and he has in his repertoire many exclusive compositions. He has had distinguished success in his orchestral appearances. At this time it might not be out of place to comment that Mr. Green has had no European training and has probably sung more concerts in the English language than any other singer in the last ten years. He has always sung exclusively in English. This season he will be heard in many unusual songs of the German masters.

Marie Sundelius to Sing With Apollo Club.

Marie Sundelius, soprano, of Boston, and Gustaf Holmquist, bass, have been engaged by the Apollo Musical Club, for its special performance of Elgar's "Caractacus," Sunday afternoon, October 18, at the Auditorium Theatre. Mme. Sundelius has never sung in Chicago, but Eastern critics have said so much about her beautiful voice and good musicianship that her appearance here is anticipated with pleasure.

American Conservatory Teachers Return.

Ragna Linne has returned from a protracted vacation in France and Germany, which terminated in Norway. An interesting feature was her visit with two of her most talented students, Amy Ellerman and Dorothy Dauncey. The first named, whose glorious contralto voice frequently was heard in American conservatory concerts, had about concluded arrangements to appear in the opera house of

FRANCES INGRAM
Management: SHAW & TUCKER Orchestra Building, Chicago

GEORGE SHEFFIELD, Tenor
Management Concert Direction M. H. HANSON,
437 Fifth Ave., New York.
Private address: 4654 Beacon St., Chicago, Ill.

GLENN DILLARD GUNN
PIANIST
421-424 Fine Arts Building - - Chicago, Ill.

LEON SAMETINI
Holland's Greatest VIOLINIST
Management ALMA VOEDISCH
3941 Rokeby Street, Chicago

Lucille STEVENSON SOPRANO
Address:
4438 Berkeley Avenue, Chicago
Telephone, Oakland 1570

LECTURES, OPERA TALKS, AND PIANO LECTURE RECITALS
By
HENRIETTE WEBER
Also the Larkin-Weber Recitals
THE LARKIN-WEBER RECITALS
Are Creating a SENSATION
Engagements booked in all leading cities
Address MISS H. WEBER, Auditorium Building, Chicago, Ill
or Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway : New York.

MARION GREEN
BASSO CANTANTE
Auditorium Building, Chicago
Home Phone: Ravenswood 5774 Studio Phone: Harrison 4868

THOMAS N. MAC BURNEY
BARITONE
Voice Production Song Recitals
Three years assistant to Frank King Clark
Suite 609 Fine Arts Building, Chicago, Ill.
Phone Harrison 6889

HERMAN DEVRIES
Formerly Baritone with the Metropolitan Opera House, New York; Covent Garden, London; Grand Opera and Opera Comique, Paris; Theatre Royal de la Monnare, Brussels, Etc.
VOCAL TEACHER
MRS. HERMAN DEVRIES
ASSOCIATE VOCAL INSTRUCTOR
Studios: 518-528 Fine Arts Building - - - Chicago, Ill.

BUSH TEMPLE CONSERVATORY
N. Clark St. and Chicago Avenue, Chicago
Kenneth M. Bradley, President

SUMMER SESSION
BEGINNING JUNE 22
Special Courses in MUSIC, Expression, Languages, Public School Music, Dramatic Art
Conducted by an unsurpassed faculty, including:

Mme. Julie Rive-King	Harold von Mickwitz	Mme. Justine Wagner
Guy Herbert Woodard	Frank B. Webster	Edgar A. Nelson
Grace Stewart Potter	Eleanor Smith	Edward Dvorak
Mae Julie Riley	Ernest O. Todd	Adelaide G. Lewis

The management announces the exclusive teaching engagement of the world's most famous baritone: CHARLES W. CLARK
Students wishing private lessons with any of the above named Artists should make application in advance.
The Bush Temple Conservatory is the only music school in Chicago which has its own Dormitory.
Reservation of rooms must be made in advance.
For Catalog and Special Literature Address: Edward H. Schwenker, Sec'y

one of the large cities of Germany, which engagement probably is postponed on account of the war.

Miss Dauncey, who has been under the special instruction and chaperonage of Jean de Reszke, will, if times permit, make her debut in opera next season.

The normal department of the American Conservatory opened Saturday, September 26, with lectures by Victor Garwood on "History of Music," and by the president, John J. Hattstaedt, on "Normal Piano Work." The attendance was unusually large and representative.

Walton Pyre, the new head of the School of Expression, will open the public recital series of the American Conservatory with a dramatic reading, at Kimball Hall, Saturday afternoon, October 3, at 3.30 o'clock. A feature of the program will be the presentation of scenes from the Boker version of "Francesca da Rimini."

The children's department of the American Conservatory opened Saturday, September 26, under the direction of Louise Robyn. A feature of special interest to Americans was the engagement at the Bayreuth Festival in August of Bennett Challis, a former student for five years of Karleton Hackett. Mr. Challis appeared in "Flying Dutchman," in the title role, and afterward as Hagen in "Götterdämmerung." In both operas he made a powerful impression both by his singing and histrionic ability. He is undoubtedly an artist that will assume a first rank in the operatic field.

F. Wight Neumann's Season.

F. Wight Neumann, who has returned from his annual trip abroad without suffering any hardships on account of the war, announces that he has engaged the following artists for this season. He will give the concerts and recitals at the Illinois Theatre and Orchestra Hall.

The opening of Mr. Neumann's season will be a song recital by Johanna Gadski, soprano, Sunday afternoon, October 18, at the Illinois Theatre, followed by [illegible] Margarete Matzenauer, contralto; Carol Robinson, Chicago pianist; joint recital by Rosa Olitzka, contralto, and Ludwig Schmidt, violinist; Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler, pianist; Alma Gluck, soprano; Mr. and Mrs. David Mannes, sonata recital; Carl Friedberg, pianist; Marcella Sembrich, soprano; Arrigo Serato, violinist; Mme. Schumann-Heink, contralto; New York Symphony Orchestra; joint recital, Elena Gerhardt, lieder singer, and Efrem Zimbalist, violinist; Julia Culp, lieder singer; Carl Flesch, violinist; Olga Samaroff, pianist; Leo Slezak, tenor; Josef Hofmann, pianist; Maggie Teyte, soprano. Negotiations are still pending with other artists and organizations.

The Kneisel Quartet will give, as usual, three subscription concerts under Mr. Neumann's management at the Illinois Theatre on Sunday afternoons, November 22, January 31 and March 21.

PUBLICATIONS AND REVIEWS

NOTICE TO PUBLISHERS.

This department is devoted to a review of old and new music publications, musical works, musical literary works and anything pertaining to the publishing of matters in music.

Only such publications and compositions will be reviewed as are deemed worthy of notice, and the Musical Courier reserves to itself the privilege of rejection. It is also understood that any work or composition or book reviewed in this column relinquishes its copyright to any part or all of its parts so far as a review of the same can be applied. This does not mean that the Musical Courier assumes or claims any interest in the copyrights; it merely means that we are not to be held for any infringement of copyright by handling copyright publications or works in this department.

Particular attention given to works of American composers and their products.

Clayton F. Summy Company, Chicago.

"Songman's Pack," laden with pretty wares from many lands; some old songs, translated and harmonized by Nellie Poorman, illustrated by Nell Witters.

This volume contains twenty-five ditties for children taken from French, German, English, Italian, Scotch, Bohemian, Danish, Swiss, Dutch and Irish sources. The music occupies the center of the page and the wide margin is a picture such as children will enjoy. Nothing could be simpler than the accompaniments, which are barely enough to support the tunes. We find the volume an admirable collection and arrangement of elementary music for the very young, and we heartily commend it as such.

"On the Road to Toneland," a set of easy studies for the piano, by Bessie Williams Sherman.

These very elementary studies for the youngest students of the piano are made interesting to the children by simple little word pictures which accompany each little tune. Each one of them can therefore be learned as a song. There are thirty-four of these lessons, clearly printed on good paper and attractive in appearance.

"Miantowona," a melodrama, poem by Thomas Bailey Aldrich, music by John Mokrejs.

In this very modern work the composer has employed the richest of harmonies and sonorous piano passages and chords to furnish a musical background to the recitation of T. B. Aldrich's romantic poem. The story is of a nature that lends itself particularly well to the emotional reinforcement of music, and the music is impassioned and fanciful as befits the poem.

Four songs by Paul Tietjens: "Woodland Love Song," "The Dear Flower," "Blind," "Sphinx."

These are art songs of the best class, and altogether unlike the popular ballad type of song, and the effective accompaniments are intended for pianists of skill and musical experience. These songs properly belong on the recital program, as they are a little too difficult for the amateur by reason of their technical obstacles and their musical interpretation.

White-Smith Publishing Company, Boston.

Four songs by William Lester: "To Phillis," "As a Perfume Doth Remain," "Echo," "Compensation."

These songs are for advanced singers in particular, and may also prove of service to teachers. "To Phillis" is more or less in the old English style, in keeping with Sir Charles Sedley's poem, though the music is much more modern than that of the seventeenth century in which the poet flourished. The many changes of time signature in "Echo" add considerably to the trouble of the singer who tries to learn it. These songs are, nevertheless, well written by a serious musician.

Mme. Rosa Olitzka
Celebrated Russian Contralto
ASSISTED BY
Kathleen Hart, Soprano
Exclusive Management West of Cleveland
By special arrangement R. E. Johnston
Elizabeth Rothwell Wolff, Soprano
From Royal Court Theatre Darmstadt.
Walter Henry Rothwell at the piano, condr.
St. Paul Symphony Orchestra
AND
Miss Edna Gunnar Peterson, Pianist
Mr. Albert Borroff, Basso-Cantante
Lecture Recitals, Oratorio
Mme. Cora Kempre, Soprano
Fresh from European Operatic Triumphs
Miss Esther May Plumb, Contralto
Recitals, Oratorio
Mr. Ridgley Hudson, Tenor
Recitals, Oratorio
Miss Clara Williams, Soprano
Oratorio
Miss Celéne Loveland
Piano Lecture Recitals
AND
Metropolitan Grand Opera Quartette
Exclusive management:
GERTRUDE V. O'HANLON
Cable Building Chicago, Ill.

Songs by Charles Wakefield Cadman: "The Moon Heaven," "I Bind My Hair With Silver," "The Groves of Shiraz," "A Song of Joy," "At Twilight Time," "The Sea Hath a Hundred Moods," "Dandelions," "As in a Rose Jar," "Sweetheart, in Thy Dreaming," "Two Little Songs from Japan," "Call Me No More," "I Hear a Thrush at Eve," and one of the latest of this prolific song writer's compositions, "I Found Him on the Mesa," which is written for Frances Alda. It is full of an Eastern langour and smoldering passion, and is well written for the voice.

"Octave Etude in F," for piano, by Francis Hendricks. This is a brilliant work, requiring much endurance on the part of the player, and a good general technic in addition to flexible wrists. It is more than a mere exercise, and it has a good deal of solid musical merit.

Choice organ selections from the works of various composers: "Gradual," "Postludes," "Processional," "Requiem," "Toccatina," by George E. Whiting; "Elegie," by Youferoff-Gaul; "Bethlehem," "Three Wise Men of the East," by Otto Malling; "Noël Normandie," by Harvey B. Gaul; "Cantilene," by J. Frank Frysinger; "Berceuse," by H. L. Bumgartner; "Fantasia," by J. E. W. Lord; "Madrigal in G," "A Springtime Fantasy," by Frederick Maxson; "At Sunset," by Rolland Diggle; "Will o' the Wisp," a scherzo-toccatina, by Gordon Balch Nevin.

John Church Company, New York.

French songs by various composers: "Chant Hindu," H. Bemberg; "Mandoline," Claude Debussy; "Fleur j'etée," "Les Roses d'Ispahan," Gabriel Fauré; "Le Mariage des Roses," César Franck; "L'heure Exquise," Reynaldo Hahn; "J'ai pleure en rêve," Georges Hüe; "Le Nil," Xavier Leroux; "Ariette," Paul Vidal; "Bergère Légère," "Non je n'irai plus au bois," J. B. Wekerlin.

All of these songs have English words in addition to the French texts and the appearance of the title pages and the printing is pleasing.

Russian songs by various composers: "The Joy of the Dance," A. Arensky; "A Dissonance," A. Borodine; "Hopak," Modest Moussorgsky; "The Floods of Spring," S. Rachmaninoff; "Song of the Shepherd Lehl," N. Rimsky-Korsakow; "The Asra," "The Dream," "Longing," Rubinstein; "Ah; Sad My Heart," "Serenade de Don Juan," Tschaikowsky.

These songs have English texts. Now and then there is a German or a French version in addition to the English. They are, for the most part, more difficult than the average good song, but there is an atmosphere in the Russian songs which is unlike that of other national music. It is this that gives them their vogue among music lovers in spite of their difficulties.

"Tomorrow" (Domani), a song composed by G. Palloni, is smoothly written in the characteristic vocal style of the Italians. It has a simple, natural and pleasing melody, and the accompaniment is easy. It ought to be especially serviceable to teachers.

Five compositions for cello and piano: "Abendlied," "Chanson sans Paroles," "Orientale," "Second Mazurka," composed by A. Saint Amory. These short and effectively written pieces contain no difficulties for the average good cellist, and they are melodious and attractive, as well as free from any subtleties of expression or meaning.

Schlesinger'sche Buck-u. Musikhandlung, Berlin, Germany.

"Vorsatz" (Resolve), song, with German text by Robert E. Prutz, English version by Addie Funk, and music by Ch. de Harrack.

This little lied of two pages is as simple as a folksong and equally unpretentious. Its simple accompaniment makes it within the powers of the least accomplished amateur.

The same may be said of "Irrlict" (marsh-light), by the same composer.

Neither of these songs calls for much comment.

Unabated Borwick Praises.

From Australia come continued reports of the favor with which Leonard Borwick was received there on his recent tour. The Australian Musical News voices the general opinion of the Antipodean press when it remarks that the splendid English pianist, "with his perfect appreciation of fine taste, his sincerity, his high ideals and his splendid executive work, will long remain a cherished memory with those who have come under the spell of his romantic and poetic atmosphere."

Myrtle ELVYN
RENOWNED AMERICAN PIANISTE
Now Booking For American Tour 1914-1915
Concert Direction, HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Bldg., Chicago
KIMBALL PIANO USED

WORCESTER MUSIC FESTIVAL ATTRACTS LARGE ATTENDANCE.

Fifty-seventh Annual Series of Concerts Held in Mechanics Hall—Prominent Soloists Add Lustre to the Occasion—Programs Well Selected—Interesting Notes.

Worcester, Mass., September 25, 1914.

Worcester held its fifty-seventh music festival on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week, when the Worcester County Musical Association gave its annual event, known throughout the music world as one of the important affairs of the year. As on former occasions there was the excellent chorus of four hundred voices, conducted by Dr. Arthur Mees, the orchestra of seventy men drawn from the Boston Symphony Orchestra (Gustav Strube, conductor), and the following soloists: Florence Hinkle, Alma Gluck, Olive Kline, sopranos; Mildred Potter, Christine Schutz, contraltos; Evan Williams, William Pagdin, tenors; Clarence Whitehill, baritone; Herbert Witherspoon, bass; Rudolph Ganz, pianist; Efrem Zimbalist, violinist. Walter W. Farmer was organist of the festival and Arthur J. Bassett pianist.

The festival attendance was large, and many musicians and music lovers from out of town were there. Throughout the series of concerts great enthusiasm prevailed, and on all sides the remark was heard that the fifty-seventh Worcester festival was one of the best yet held during the half century and more of these annual events.

First Concert, Wednesday Evening, September 23.

The first concert was given by the festival chorus of 400 voices, seventy members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Dr. Arthur Mees, conductor; and these soloists: Florence Hinkle, soprano; Mildred Potter, contralto; Evan Williams, tenor; and Herbert Witherspoon, bass. Mendelssohn's "Elijah" was the work performed. This oratorio has been given ten times at these festivals and this, the eleventh, could not have been better. It was a triumph for all who took part and the participants in the program acquitted themselves finely.

It would be difficult to mention the work of any one of the four artists in terms short of the superlative. Evan Williams is a favorite with Worcester audiences. His whole being vibrates with the sincerity of his message. Having sung this same part some forty times, Mr. Williams delivers it with that confidence and ease which a truly big work requires. He was in splendid voice and after each solo was so vociferously applauded that Dr. Mees was obliged to wait a few minutes before continuing with the oratorio.

The audience was equally demonstrative in its appreciation of Miss Hinkle's singing. Her tones rang out with a bell-like clearness. Her interpretation was most artistic and when the concert was over she had two thousand new ardent admirers, some of whom even regarded her singing as the sensation of the festival. Miss Potter, although a newcomer to the festival, had previously sung in concerts in Worcester. She is the possessor of a rich contralto voice, and sings with great intelligence. Worcester festival audiences are seldom demonstrative in their appreciation of newcomers. This however, was not the case with Miss Potter, as she was most enthusiastically received.

Mr. Witherspoon's reengagement as a festival star was a source of great pleasure to his Worcester friends. In the title role he did what was expected of him, and that is much, because his splendid art has always been so consistent that anything but the very best would not be expected of him. Mr. Witherspoon's performance on Wednesday night was dramatic, virile, most convincing and artistic throughout. His magnificent voice and dramatic intensity are perfectly adapted to the part of Elijah.

Second Concert, Thursday Afternoon, September 24.

The second concert of the festival was given by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Efrem Zimbalist and Mildred Potter as soloists. Gustav Strube conducted.

The program included Massenet's "Phedre" overture; the G minor violin concerto by Bruch; a composition for orchestra, "Lorelei," by Gustav Strube; the "Joan of Arc" aria, by Liszt, and his symphonic poem, "Tasso."

Efrem Zimbalist seemed to be in a happy frame of mind. The severe heat, no doubt, affected his violin, but his playing was superb.

Mildred Potter, who sang the difficult "Joan of Arc" aria, is a well schooled, rather than a "natural born singer." Her work was among the most artistic heard at the festival. She sings with intelligence and leaves that impression upon her audience.

Mr. Strube conducted his "Lorelei," a new symphonic poem. This is a work of real beauty, in the contrapuntal treatment of which he has been most happy. The composition throughout shows great variety of ideas. That mutual friendship which exists between the orchestra players and Mr. Strube can even be felt by the audience when Mr. Strube conducts. Having been for many years connected with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the members recognize his sound musical authority and the result is very satisfying to the audience.

Third Concert, Thursday Evening, September 24.

Thursday night a heat wilted audience that almost filled the hall listened to "La Vita Nuova" ("New Life"), Wolf-Ferrari's much talked of cantata. This was the first Worcester performance of this mystic color picture. Better fitted for the opera, it nevertheless has its value as a concert piece. Every year Worcester produces one new oratorio, the repertoire of premiers at the Worcester Festival now holding a unique record among American cities for such productions.

RUDOLPH GANZ.

It is not to be expected that a new oratorio of truly great musical value can be produced each year, but the directors of the festival are always on the lookout for the very best of newly created works. Their efforts in producing one such new work each year is to be most highly commended.

Opinions regarding the merit of "La Vita Nuova" vary. It offers fine opportunities for brilliant choral work—its orchestration is extremely modern and at times very effective. It cannot, however, hold any claim to originality, nor is it expressive of any one school of music. The cantata is founded on portions of Dante's book, of that title, in which the poet tells of his youthful and sincere love for Beatrice and of that wonderful influence she had over his life.

Beatrice, soprano part, comes as an angel to earth and sings about a glorious paradise. Dante, impersonated by a baritone, responds, singing of the triumph of love over death, the whole leading up to a striking chorus of men's and women's voices, augmented by a chorus of boys. This is followed by a baritone solo and chorus. Here an interlude, "Dance of the Angels," for orchestra with piano, is introduced.

A baritone solo takes up the story, while the theme of the dance is reechoed in the orchestration. A chorus of two distinct choirs then carries the theme. The climax follows in the death of Beatrice.

The two soloists chosen to present the work were the talented young soprano, Olive Kline, and Clarence Whitehill, the well known baritone of the Chicago Opera Company.

Miss Kline, who sang the part of Beatrice, is one of the youngest artists of prominence in America. She has a voice of rare beauty and present indications warrant a splendid future for this young American singer.

In the role of Dante, Mr. Whitehill did all that could be done with so difficult and in some instances almost unsingable a part. His voice has great beauty and dramatic power, which was heard to greater advantage in the "Te Deum," by Bruckner, which closed the evening's performance. Mr. Whitehill and Miss Kline also sang the solo parts in the "Te Deum." The other artists were William H. Pagdin, tenor, and Christine Schutz, contralto.

Mr. Pagdin's singing was very satisfactory. His presentation is dramatic and refined. He pleased a large Worcester audience last Christmas in a splendid performance of "The Messiah," and the friends he then made looked forward with a great deal of pleasure to hearing him as a festival artist.

Christine Schutz has a warm and sympathetic contralto. Her voice blends beautifully with other voices. Her part did not make great demands upon her, but what she had to sing she did well.

Fourth Concert, Friday Afternoon, September 25.

The program of the second matinee was a very interesting one, the orchestra playing Schumann's symphony in D minor, the suite, "Mother Goose," by Ravel (first festival performance), and "Finlandia," by Sibelius (also a first festival performance). The soloists were Rudolph Ganz, who played the Tschaikowsky B flat minor concerto, and Olive Kline, who sang an aria by Meyerbeer.

Probably never in the history of Worcester Festivals has a pianist made a deeper impression upon the audience than did Rudolph Ganz in his gigantic performance of Tschaikowsky's well known concerto. Mr. Ganz has returned to America a greater pianist than ever before. His interpretation of the concerto was artistic and virile throughout, while technical difficulties apparently did not exist. In the cadenza the piano fairly sang the music. It was a beautiful performance, at the close of which the audience went wild with enthusiasm. This should prove to be Mr. Ganz's biggest season in America—his performance on Friday warrants this prediction. For an encore the great Swiss virtuoso played a Liszt number.

The other soloist of the afternoon was Olive Kline, who had done such splendid work on the previous evening. The quality of her voice is very beautiful and the future will, no doubt, witness a brilliant career for her. Her aria was the famous "Shadow Song," from "Dinorah," and her thoughtful interpretation and thorough musicianship made it a number greatly enjoyed.

This report would not be complete without a word of praise for the orchestra and the excellent work accomplished by the instrumentalists under the baton of Mr. Strube. Especially enjoyable was "Finlandia," although the two other numbers were on a high plane artistically.

Fifth Concert, Friday Evening, September 25.

The fifth and last concert of the festival was, as in past years, the gala event of the entire series of concerts. This closing event is popularly known as "Artists Night" and the three soloists were enthusiastically received. Each year it has seemed as though this concert was more successful than any preceeding similar ones, and this year is no exception. The program was as follows: An overture, "The Merry Wives of Windsor," Nicolai; Mendelssohn's "Watchman, What of the Night," sung by Evan Williams, who also sang an aria from "Donizetti's "L'Elisir d'Amore"; aria from "Norma," "Casta Diva," by Bellini, sung by Alma Gluck. This was followed by suite number two, "Arlesienne," by Bizet (a first festival performance), played by the Symphony Orchestra, then an aria, "La jolie Fille de Perth" by Bizet (also a first festival performance), sung by Clarence Whitehill.

After a short intermission the orchestra played the comedy overture on negro themes, by Gilbert; Chabrier's "España" and the "Slavonic Dances," by Dvorák. Alma Gluck sang a number of folksongs with piano accompaniment; Clarence Whitehill sang "Dio Possente," an aria from Gounod's "Faust," the program closing with Elgar's chorus, "The Challenge of Thor."

The orchestra again was composed of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Gustav Strube conducting.

Judging by the amount of applause Alma Gluck deserves first mention. The audience gave vent to tremendous enthusiasm over the singing of this artist. Her first aria was superb. This number was encored and for the remainder of the evening it was a "Gluck evening." After her folksongs with piano accompaniment, played by Arthur Bassett, Mme. Gluck remained on the platform singing encore after encore with her husband, Efrem Zimbalist, playing the piano accompaniments. It was a revelation to the Worcester audience to find in Mr. Zimbalist so fine a pianist.

Evan Williams is extremely popular with the festival audiences and in his two numbers and encores he was roundly applauded. He was in splendid voice and sang with that intense feeling and virility that has made his name a household word throughout the country.

Clarence Whitehill also appeared to better advantage than on the previous evening. His voice while especially fitted for the opera is also most satisfying in concert numbers. He has surely gained many friends because of his artistic singing in Worcester.

The orchestra played magnificently under Mr. Strube.

Dr. Mees conducted the very last number on the program for chorus and orchestra and thus came to an end one of the most brilliant successful festivals ever held in the city of Worcester.

Officers for 1914 Festival.

Board of Government: President, William H. Cook; vice-president, J. Vernon Butler; secretary, Harry R. Sinclair; treasurer, George R. Bliss; librarian, Luther M. Lovell.

Directors: Arthur J. Bassett, Charles I. Rice, Rufus B. Fowler, Edward L. Sumner, Walter W. Farmer, Paul B. Morgan, Albert C. Getchell, Matthew J. Whittall.

Honorary Members: G. W. Chadwick (Boston), Wallace Goodrich (Boston), L. Soule (Taunton), C. E. Prior (Hartford, Conn.), Daniel Downey (Worcester), H. W. Parker (New Haven, Conn.), Samuel E. Winslow (Worcester), Charles M. Bent (Worcester), Benjamin T. Hammond (Rome, Italy).

Festival Notes.

It was agreeably surprising to see so many changes in Worcester this year. This beautiful city in the heart of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts now has a splendid new railroad station.

The accommodation for guests also has been improved by the erection of a million dollar hotel, the Bancroft, which in appointment rivals some of the leading hotels in America. During festival week, the Bancroft became the social center for artists, members of the orchestra, and out of town visitors. The orchestral players especially, remembering various hotel experiences in Worcester, were very much pleased with the new arrangements.

Mechanics Hall, where the festival was held, that famous old auditorium, has undergone many changes. There is a new broad staircase which has replaced the two narrow ones at the entrance and a promenade has been arranged on the auditorium floor, where friends gather "a la European."

During the festival, a fashion show was being held in Worcester, and along the streets the splendid displays in shop windows gave the city the appearance of being "dressed as if on parade." This was a most appropriate time to have both the festival and the fashion show, as many out of town visitors came to Worcester to enjoy the good music and the shows in the stores.

The city has a new lighting system, which made the street almost as bright as mid-day. For all of this we congratulate Worcester.

It was pleasing again to hear the splendid Festival Chorus, which has placed Worcester on the musical map of the world. In the chorus and also in the orchestra, were recognized some faces of people who year after year have given their time and enthusiasm toward helping to make the festival one long to be remembered by those fortunate enough to attend.

Luther M. Lovell, the librarian of the Worcester County Musical Association, was most courteous in his attention to all those with whom he came in contact.

Marguerite Dunlap, contralto, attended the festival with her manager, Gertrude F. Cowen, of New York. Other managers in attendance were Charles L. Wagner, Howard Potter and John T. Adams, the latter of the Wolfsohn Musical Bureau; Gwilym Miles, a former festival artist; Jules Jordan, choral conductor of Providence; Mrs. Clarence Whitehill; Mr. and Mrs. Kline, father and mother of Olive Kline; Miss Sims, accompanist for Christine Schutz; Mrs. Gustav Strube and Mrs. Arthur Meers were at the festival, and all stopped at the Bancroft.

Rudolf Ganz, pianist, who played this afternoon (Friday), did not arrive from Genoa, Italy, until Thursday morning. The steamship Antilles was five days late in reaching New York. Not being certain as to the arrival of the steamer at this time, arrangements had been made to have Olga Samaroff appear at the festival in Mr. Ganz's place. However, the latter artist did reach Worcester in time, not alone to play at the concert today, but also in time to rehearse during the morning.

On Thursday morning Charles I. Rice, one of the directors of the festival, took some of the artists on the annual tour of the high schools. Christine Schutz and William Pagdin sang, and Frederick Mahn, one of the violinists of the orchestra, played. Arthur J. Bassett, pianist of the festival, played the accompaniments.

Rehearsals were held Monday and Tuesday mornings, afternoons and evenings; Wednesday morning and afternoon, and Thursday and Friday mornings. All were well attended. The small admission fee charged for hearing each of these rehearsals was a helpful addition to the revenue of the festival.

Minnie E. Ellam is press representative for the Worcester County Musical Association, and her desire to help all who sought information and her ability to combine the artistic features with the business part of the festival made her an invaluable aid to all.

Upon their arrival from Lake George, N. Y., H. E. Eaton, assistant manager of the Bancroft Hotel, had prepared a pleasant little surprise for Alma Gluck and her husband, Efrem Zimbalist. As they entered the beautifully furnished suite prepared for them they were greeted by a Victrola, placed in the rooms, playing one of Alma Gluck's records.

A local evening paper, speaking of a special chorus of boys taking part in the presentation of Wolf-Ferrari's "La Vita Nuova," called it an "all American aggregation of boys." So many of these young "Yankees" bore names other than American that when an analysis was made it was found that this "all American aggregation" consisted of thirty-three Swedish, two Finnish, two Italian, eight Irish and ten, at least by their names, American boys. Upon a little further investigation it was discovered that more than one-half of the members of the large festival chorus were of foreign parentage. Music surely is a great assimilator.

Carolyn King Hunt, teacher of piano, with studios in Boston and Worcester, entertained Thursday afternoon in her Worcester studio. Her guests included artists from the festival forces and many local friends.

May Sleeper Ruggles, vocal teacher of Boston, has reopened her studio in Worcester, where she enjoys continued success with her large class of pupils. She was frequently seen at the rehearsals and concerts of the festival.

Paul Hultman, of the Hultman-McQuaid School, himself a concert pianist of recognized ability, gave an informal reception on Friday afternoon in his studio in the Dah Building for Rudolph Ganz, the festival pianist. Out of town musicians, critics and a number of musicians of the city were among the guests.

Ivan Morowski, a well known festival patron, who was present at all concerts and rehearsals, is also a Worcester teacher. He resumes his classes at the Worcester County School on Thursday, October 1.

J. ALBERT RIKER.

The Bancroft, Worcester, Mass.

Undoubtedly one of the finest hotels in the United States is The Bancroft, which is situated most advantageously at the corner of Franklin and Portland streets, directly opposite and facing Worcester's historic Common, in the very heart of the business and the theatrical districts.

The "welcome" given each guest at the Bancroft is worthy of the reproduction herewith given it:

"Let the guests sojourning here know that in this house our life is simple. What we cannot afford we do not offer, but what good cheer we can give, we give gladly. We make no strike for appearance's sake. We will not swerve from our path.

"Know, also, friend, that we live a life of labor, that we may not neglect it. Therefore, if at times, we separate ourselves from you, do you occupy yourself according to your heart's desire, being sure that no slight to your presence is intended.

"For, while you are with us, we would have you enjoy the blessings of a home, health, love and freedom, and we pray that you may find the final blessing of life—peace.

"We will not defer to you in opinion, or ask you to defer to us. What you think you shall say, if you wish, without giving offense. What we think we also say, believing that the crystal, Truth, has many aspects, and that Love is large enough to encompass them all.

"In this house you may meet those not of your own sort. They may differ from you in nationality, birth, position, possessions, education or affinity. But we are maintaining here a small part of the world's great future democracy; we ask you, therefore, courtesy and tolerance for all alike.

"And, on these stern terms, though you be young or old, proud or plain, rich or poor, resting here you are partaker of our love, and we give you glad welcome."

These words are symbolic of the atmosphere which one feels in this hotel, and such is the aim of its manager and president, Charles S. Averill. With the comforts and privileges of a thoroughly modern hostelry are combined in delightful equation the atmosphere of home and all to which it pertains.

Among the many beautiful rooms is a reception hall, where during the winter season frequent concerts and recitals are given, at which appear those well known in the world of music. The Bancroft Concert Orchestra, a remarkably well trained body of musicians, may be heard in varied programs each afternoon and evening.

Another accommodation which will appeal especially to the automobile contingent is the Automobile Information Bureau, which is maintained especially to help automobile tourists to plan their motoring campaigns through the New England States.

The Hultman-McQuaid School, Worcester.

The Hultman-McQuaid School of Music has grown with such rapid strides that it now has a faculty of fourteen

Copyright by Mishkin Studio, New York.
EFREM ZIMBALIST, ALMA GLUCK,
Soloists at the Worcester Festival.

teachers, among which are instructors of international reputation. The school at present occupies seven large and well equipped studios in the Day Building, having also the use of a large hall for its orchestra. The school is divided into eight departments, viz., piano, vocal, violin, cello, elocution, theory, orchestra, and ensemble playing. The director of each department is an experienced concert performer and teacher, of European training. The faculty comprises Paul Hultman, piano; Robert Morosini, voice; Margarete McQuaid, violin; Rudolf Nagel, cello, theory; Ethel Camilla Jackson, elocution, dramatic art; Hazel Dann, violin; Rudolf Fagerstrom, piano; Grace Ward, violin; Phyllis Lations, piano; Frances Berkowits, violin; Ida Skagerlind, piano, and Blanche Dann, piano.

Symphony Orchestra for Worcester.

Through the efforts of Paul Hultman, Gustav Strube, the composer and conductor, has been engaged to conduct an orchestra in Worcester during this season. This orchestra will be known as the Gustav Strube Symphony Orchestra. Both Worcester and Mr. Hultman are to be congratulated upon this valuable acquisition to the musical life of that city.

A Talented Young Soprano.

Nina Morgana, the young coloratura soprano, was born in Buffalo, N. Y., of Italian parentage. She early disclosed a decided vocal talent, and was sent to Milan, Italy, where she studied with Mme. Arkel. She appeared with great success at La Scala in Milan and in several other opera houses in Italy. Miss Morgana is not unknown to Americans, having sung in concert in New York, Buffalo, Boston, and other large cities of the United States, and everywhere she has met with equal success. The press of Buffalo has called her the successor of Patti, and other papers have been equally enthusiastic in their praise of her art. Before the decision in the injunction suit of Oscar Hammerstein was rendered, the impresario engaged Miss Morgana for his season of opera, the contract being for five years. After hearing her sing, Maestro Campanini engaged her to sing with the Chicago Grand Opera Company this season, but, of course, that has also come to naught.

It must not be supposed, however, that Miss Morgana is idling her time in vain repining. On the contrary, she is busy studying with the New York vocal teacher, A. Carbone. She is available for concerts and musicales during the season, her address being room 1626-27, Aeolian Hall, New York.

NINA MORGANA.

Pietro A. Yon Arrives.

Pietro A. Yon, organist and composer, returned from Europe, Saturday, September 12, on the steamship Europa, of the Italian line, and will open his studios, 836 and 853, Carnegie Hall, New York, October 1. The day after his arrival, Mr. Yon resumed his work as organist at St. Francis Xavier Church, New York.

While in Rome he was well received by the staff of St. Cecilia Academy where, it is claimed, he was graduated as the best organist who ever left that institution.

Mr. Yon selected from the St. Cecilia Academy library some ancient organ compositions, which he will perform in New York during the season of 1914-15. Mr. Yon had an audience with the Rev. Father De Santis, who is president of the Scuola Superiore di Musica Sacra, and was present when Cardinal Bisleti conferred the title of Scuola

OLIVE FREMSTAD.

Pontificia upon the institution. He predicts a brilliant future for this school, which has high ideals, and stands unique in the world of sacred music. Mr. Yon had also the distinction of being presented to His Holiness Pope Pius X. at his last audience.

He was accompanied to Europe by several pupils who continued their studies throughout the summer at Villa Yon in the valley of Aosta; one of these pupils is Gedda G. McNeil, a very gifted organist and composer.

While abroad Mr. Yon composed several songs, motets, two movements of a concerto for oboe and orchestra, and a "Funeral Mass" for four male voices (a capella), which he dedicated to his beloved and ardent promoter of sacred music, Pope Pius X.

Clark Gets His Carfare.

Charles W. Clark, the baritone, who was on a visit to New York last week, opened his season's work by singing a recital at a private house in Pittsburgh—"Just to pay the carfare from Chicago to New York and back," as Mr. Clark put it laughingly, when discussing the unusually early engagement. He admitted that the fee would also permit of his paying a visit or two to the dining car and of staying at a luxurious New York hotel.

Margaret Huston in Canada.

Margaret Huston, the interpreter of songs, who has made a specialty of interpreting the poem so that it carries out the intention of the author as well as of the composer, returned to America, September 28, on the steamship Canopic. She landed in Boston and went immediately to her home in Canada, but will return to New York shortly.

Friml's New Manager.

The contract existing between Arthur Hammerstein and Rudolf Friml, composer of "The Firefly" and "High Jinks," has been dissolved by mutual consent. George Blumenthal, business manager for Emma Trentini, now under the Shubert management, will in the future look after Mr. Friml's musical interests.

Donald Chalmers Moves.

Donald Chalmers, the basso, whose successes have been recorded in these columns, has removed to Putnam Court, 150 West 104th street, New York, Apartment No. 51. Although busily engaged in church work, as he has been for some years, Mr. Chalmers is available for Sunday afternoons and evenings.

Olive Fremstad's Concert Tour.

Olive Fremstad left New York on Friday, September 25, for Seattle, Wash., where she opens her concert tour on Thursday evening, October 1. Mme. Fremstad was accompanied by her secretary, Mary F. Watkins, and her pianist, George F. W. Bruhns. Before leaving New York the artist said to her manager, Walter David, of Foster & David: "I never felt so well in my life. I am looking forward to this splendid series of concerts with great delight and eager anticipation." Mme. Fremstad's first New York appearances for the season will be as soloist with the New York Symphony Orchestra, at Aeolian Hall, on October 31 and November 1. Her recital will be given at Carnegie Hall on the afternoon of December 16. Her concert tour will take her to all the principal cities of the United States. She will have a number of festival appearances in May and then go to her camp in Maine. She has just bought a large tract of land in one of the most beautiful sections of that State and will build a fine home there.

Warford at Gilberté Home.

Claude Warford has returned from his summer's outing, and is again teaching at his studio, Metropolitan Opera House Building, New York.

Part of Mr. Warford's vacation was spent with his friend, Hallet Gilberté, the Maine composer, at his summer home, Lincolnville Beach, Me., as the picture indicates. Besides filling the days with pleasurable activities, a special musical evening was given by Mr. and Mrs. Gilberté and their guest, Mr. Warford, which was largely attended by the summer colony at the Beach.

The following interesting program was given:

Duet, Barcarolle, The Sea.....Gilberté
Messrs. Warford and Gilberté.

Songs—
The Little Red Ribbon.....Hallet Gilberté
An Evening Song.....Hallet Gilberté
Ah! Love but a Day.....Hallet Gilberté
Mr. Warford, accompanied by the composer.

Monologue, A Case of Love.....Anon.
George E. Tebbeti.

Songs written especially for Mr. Gilberté—
My Love.....Max Herberg
Philosophy.....A. Walter Kramer
The Voice.....Claude Warford
Mr. Gilberté.

Reading, The Clown Baby.....Anon.
Mrs. Gilberté.

CLAUDE WARFORD AND HALLET GILBERTÉ REVISING MANUSCRIPTS.

Songs—
Unsounded.....Claude Warford
Allah.....A. Walter Kramer
Les Deux Roses.....Hallet Gilberté
Mr. Warford.

The Royal Philharmonic Society has deposited its collection of MSS. by Beethoven, Haydn, Cherubini, Spohr, Mendelssohn, Cipriani Potter and others, at the British Museum, where they will be accessible to students.—Exchange.

NEW YORK BREVITIES.

Louise Kellogg's Specialty—Mme. Speke-Seeley Returns—T. Tertius Noble and the King—Max Jacobs Opens Season—E. Presson Miller's New Location—Dunn Composes, Orchestrates, Etc.—Tenor Steiner Returns—Calvary Church Choir Resumes—Two Nichols—Notes.

New York, September 25, 1914.

Louise Kellogg, of Carnegie Hall, has had vocal pupils all summer, who have been doing very good work with her. She has just returned from a brief vacation spent in the Berkshire Hills, fresh for the season's work, which has for her, every promise of success. Asked as to her specialty, she said: "French repertoire and diction take much of my time and attention. I had a long and thorough schooling in France on these lines, so feel particularly qualified to get the best results in them."

HENRIETTA SPEKE-SEELEY AT WORK.

Mrs. Speke-Seeley has been on the Maine coast and found it most delightful. "Way Down East" was a good place this year, and she is happy she did not cross the Atlantic, as she had at one time thought of doing. Ivy Belle Squires, one of her artist-pupils, sang at the three days' Masque at Riverhead, L. I. Her singing was greatly admired. October 1 Mrs. Seeley may be found at her studio in the Metropolitan Opera House Building, as usual.

T. TERTIUS NOBLE RETURNS FROM EUROPE.

Mr. Noble writes a member of the staff of the MUSICAL COURIER as follows:

"Soon I shall be starting in full swing. On Sunday, October 4, at 8 p. m. my organ recitals will be resumed, and will continue every Sunday night until further notice. On Tuesday, October 13, at 8 p. m. the rehearsals of the St. Thomas' Festival Chorus will begin. Any ladies or gentlemen wishing to join, should write to Honorable Secretary, St. Thomas' Festival Chorus, Fifty-third street and Fifth avenue, New York. Men are especially needed. There is no expense attached to membership.

"We had a good time in England, but were thankful to be back on American soil."

The following is from the Musical News of London, August 29, showing that music of Mr. Noble was sung before the King and the Queen:

On the occasion of the presence of the King and Queen at Evensong and of Queen Alexandra at the special evening service in Westminster Abbey on Friday in last week, . . . the canticles were sung to Noble's setting in B minor, and the anthem was Dr. Bairstow's "Save Us, O Lord, Waking."

MAX JACOBS OPENS SEASON.

Max Jacobs, the violin virtuoso, head of the string quartet of that name, teacher, and excellent musician, opened his season by appearing as soloist at Forward Hall, benefit of the Fourth Street Clinic, September 22. Mme. Hassler-Fox, contralto, Edna Moreland, soprano, and Ira Jacobs, pianist, accompanist and composer, assisted in a varied program. Mr. Jacobs played these solo pieces:

La Folia ..... Corelli
Serenade Melancolique ..... Tschaikowsky
Mazurka ..... Zarzyki
Song without Words ..... Ira Jacobs
Orientale ..... Zimbalist
Waltz, Schön Rosmarin ..... Kreisler

E. PRESSON MILLER'S NEW STUDIO.

The vocal teacher, E. Presson Miller, has removed from the ninth floor of Carnegie Hall, where he has been for a dozen years, to Studio 826. It is being refitted for him, with improvements well planned to suit his every wish. Mr. Miller numbers many out of town pupils among those under his instruction, the South being especially well represented.

JAMES P. DUNN, COMPOSER, ORGANIST, TEACHER.

James P. Dunn, active in various branches of music, has returned from a stay at Haines Falls, Catskill Mountains, refreshed and ready for the complex duties and pleasures which mark his life. A snapshot picture of Dunn, Junior, shows that lively youth to be as active as his father. While "resting," Mr. Dunn wrote 450 pages of orchestration, composed two one-act operas, and a number of piano and vocal pieces. He is conspicuous in the movement to organize a Jersey City Musicians' Club, of which definite news will be forthcoming next week.

CALVARY CHURCH CHOIR REASSEMBLES.

The choir of Calvary Baptist Church reassembled for the coming season last week, under the direction of Dr. A. Madeley Richardson. There was an unusually large attendance, and the pervading spirit of loyalty and enthusasm was very evident. Determination was expressed on all sides to work together in such a way that the successes of last season shall be eclipsed this coming year.

At the conclusion of the rehearsal a social gathering was held, and among those present were Mrs. E. M. Bowman and Mrs. Bowman Estey, the widow and daughter of the founder of the choir. The music for next Sunday was as follows: 11 a. m.: Quartet, "How Beautiful on the Mountains," Richter; anthem, "Praise God in His Holiness," Tours; Offertory, "Knights of the Cross," Shelley; 7.45 p. m.: Organ recital, concerto in D minor (four movements) Handel; quartet, "O Come Every One That Thirsteth," Mendelssohn; anthem, "Love Divine," Marks; Offertory, "Light in Darkness," Power. A glance at the service papers shows that Dr. Richardson makes much use of works by Shelley.

TWO NICHOLS' FALL TOUR.

John W. Nichols and Mrs. Nichols, the joint recital pair, are busy preparing for their November tour, which will take them as far West as DeWitt, Ark. Their Chicago manager, Ernest L. Briggs, is arranging for a number of appearances in and around Chicago. Mr. Nichols is to appear this season as tenor soloist with both the Chicago Apollo and Mendelssohn Clubs.

TENOR JULIUS STEINER RETURNS FROM EUROPE.

Julius Steiner, the tenor who has been living in Vienna for some years past, where he has been busy teaching, studying and singing, has returned to the metropolis, bearing letters of introduction from various high authorities in the musical world. Among his friends are the Weingartners, who demonstrated their friendship in a most practical way when the war troubles began. Mr. [illegible] gone to Pawtucket, R. I., for a short stay with [illegible]

NOTES.

Georgiana Macpherson, pupil of Joseffy, and medalist of the Paris Conservatoire, is a splendid pianist. She desires pupils, and because of her intimate knowledge of Mr. Joseffy's method, as well as that of the Paris Conservatoire, she will doubtless find herself busy. Her address is 800 Riverside Drive, telephone 5520 Audubon.

Walter H. Robinson, teacher of singing, following a summer spent with his interesting family in the Catskills, will resume vocal instruction at 709 Carnegie Hall, October 1.

Ruby Gerard de Laet, that excellent violinist, formerly a resident of Newark, has been playing at several recitals and musicales. Last season she and Mrs. Stanley Lathrop gave recitals together in various parts of New Jersey. She may be addressed at 72 Fort Washington avenue, New York City.

Bispham as an Auctioneer.

That David Bispham would have made as brilliant a career in a commercial calling as in every phase of vocal and dramatic art was well illustrated upon one occasion when the baritone crossed the ocean in company with Sarah Bernhardt, Mme. Melba and many other celebrities.

In addition to his contribution to the usual concert program given for the benefit of the Sailors' Widows and Children Fund, it fell to the lot of Mr. Bispham to auction a program which had been autographed by all the distinguished people on board. He actually secured $800 for the program, which was added to the receipts from tickets, which in themselves amounted to $1,000. After it was all over a gentleman approached Mr. Bispham and said, with all due admiration and enthusiasm:

"Say, I'm a New York auctioneer, and I want to tell you that was great work you did tonight. Here is my card, and whenever you want to give up singing you just come down to me and I'll give you $10,000 a year to sell our stuff."

Hans Merx in German Army.

Hans Merx, the lieder singer, whose recitals during past seasons have been largely attended and keenly enjoyed in New York, Brooklyn and other cities of the East, and who has been no less successful in Germany and England, has been drafted into the German army and is now at the front. This is to be sincerely regretted, for Mr. Merx is a singer of large capabilities. He was well known in New York and his many friends will regret that the time of his return to this country is now an uncertainty.

Saenger Artist Soloist with Sousa's Band.

Another soprano from the Saenger studios, New York, who has made a success in the short time that she has been before the public, is Grace Hoffman, who has been touring with Sousa's Band this summer. She sang at the Auditorium in Ocean Grove, before one of the largest audiences there this season, and was enthusiastically received.

WILLY BURMESTER'S TOUR

Concert Direction M. H. Hanson begs to announce that information has been received from indicating that he will sail for America on October 17th as arranged. This in reply to many inquiries.

WILLY BURMESTER

We are still booking dates for Mr. Burmester whose tour will continue until late spring. The Steinway Piano will be used on the tour.

Concert Direction M. H. Hanson 437 Fifth Avenue, New York

MARQUIS de TRABADELO
4, rue Marbeuf, Paris

Frederic Ponsot Soul professor de chant diplome par Mme. Mathilde Marchesi
151 Rue de Rome

Jean Verd PIANIST
35 Rue Vineuse - Paris

CAMILLE DECREUS
47 rue de la Tour :: :: :: PARIS

JOHN HEATH PIANIST AND TEACHER
(Care Paris Office, Musical Courier)

VON STEEGE VOICE PLACEMENT
6, Chaussée de la Muette | Opera, Repertoire
Director, Compagnie Internationale Lyrique

E. BERTRAN 28, RUE COPERNIC PARIS
Specialist in Voice Placement
Opera Concert

ELISABETH MACK Gesture Dramatic Action
LECTURE—RECITALS
French and English Readings
America—October to April
Address, care Musical Courier
(Especially for opera students)
Courses Begin April 1, 1914
Paris, 43, rue Michel Ange

Wager SWAYNE Pianists Prepared for Public Appearances
39 Rue de Prony (Parc Monceau) - - PARIS

GABRIEL LAPIERRE
(With Melba and Kubelik in America, Winter, 1913-14)
Teacher of Singing
15 bis Boul. Jules Sandeau - - PARIS

DELMA-HEIDE
30 Rue Marbeuf (Champs-Elysées,) Paris
Maestro di Bel Canto Italiano
Prepares Singers for Opera and Concert in Italian, French, German and English

Jean de Reszke
53 Rue de la Faisanderie
Paris

L. d'AUBIGNÉ
Teacher of Singing
30, AVENUE KLEBER :: :: PARIS

LAMPERTI-VALDA
SCHOOL OF SINGING
61 Avenue Niel - - - Paris, France
All Communications to Be Addressed to
MME. GIULIA VALDA

MR. ARTHUR
ALEXANDER
THE TENOR
whose season was to commence February 20th, next, having escaped from Paris, is Available Now for his famous song recitals, playing his own accompaniments (Steinway Piano)
Management
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., New York

PHILADELPHIA ORCHESTRA PROGRAMS FOR THE SEASON 1914-15.

For its fifteenth season the Philadelphia Orchestra, Leopold Stokowski, conductor, will present the following twenty-five programs in the organization's home city:

OCTOBER 16-17.

Overture, Freischütz ..... Weber
Symphony No. 2 in D major ..... Brahms
Legend of the Swan of Tuonela ..... Sibelius
Spanish Caprice ..... Rimsky-Korsakow

OCTOBER 23-24.

Overture, Le Nozze di Figaro ..... Mozart
Biondina's aria from Il Seraglio ..... Mozart
Alma Gluck.
Excerpts from Rosamunde ..... Schubert
Aria, Ah! Fors e lui, from La Traviata ..... Verdi
Alma Gluck.
Symphony No. 4, in F minor, op. 36 ..... Tschaikowsky

OCTOBER 30-31.

Symphony No. 4, in E flat major (Romantic) ..... Bruckner
Concerto in F, for violin and orchestra ..... Lalo
Frank Gittelson.
Hungarian Rhopsody No. 1 ..... Liszt

NOVEMBER 6-7.

Overture, Die Vorkaufte Braut ..... Smetana
Symphony No. 4, in A (Italian), op. 90 ..... Mendelssohn
Concerto in A minor, op. 54, for piano and orchestra .... Schumann
Olga Samaroff.
Overture, Academic Festival, op. 80 ..... Brahms

NOVEMBER 13-14.

Overture, Arminius ..... Handel
(First time at these concerts.)
Aria, It Is Finished, from St. John's Passion ..... Bach
Aria, My Heart Ever Faithful ..... Bach
Louise Homer.
Symphony No. 8, in F, op. 93 ..... Beethoven
Symphonic poem, Le Rouet d'Omphale, op. 51 ..... Saint-Saëns
Aria, Nobil signor, from Les Huguenots ..... Meyerbeer
Louise Homer.
Carnival in Paris, op. 9 ..... Svendsen

NOVEMBER 20-21.

Symphony No. 3 (Rhenish, in E flat), op. 97 ..... Schumann
Concerto No. 1, in G minor, op. 26, for violin and orchestra .. Bruch
Efrem Zimbalist.
Tone poem, Finlandia, op. 26 ..... Sibelius
(First time at these concerts.)
Russian Dances for violin and orchestra ..... Zimbalist
Efrem Zimbalist.
Overture, The Corsair, op. 21 ..... Berlioz
(First time at these concerts.)

NOVEMBER 27-28.
(Wagner program.)

Parsifal—
Vorspiel.
Epithalamc.
(First time at these concerts.)
Transformation Music and Closing Scene, Act I.
Eine Faust Overture.
Siegfried Idyll.
Kaisermarsch.

DECEMBER 11-12.

Overture, The Magic Flute ..... Mozart
Symphony No. 4, in E minor, op. 98 ..... Brahms Concerto No. 3, in C minor, op. 37 ..... Beethoven
Ferruccio Busoni.
Overture, Oberon ..... Weber

DECEMBER 18-19.

Symphony No. 7, in C major, op. 10 ..... Schubert
Andromache's Lament, from Achilles ..... Bruch
Mme. Schumann-Heink.
Love Scene, from Romeo and Juliet ..... Berlioz
Queen Mah, from Romeo and Juliet ..... Berlioz
Aria, Ah, mon fils, from Le Prophete ..... Meyerheer
Mme. Schumann-Heink.
Overture, The Flying Dutchman ..... Wagner

DECEMBER 25-26.

Pastorale from the Christmas Oratorio ..... Bach
(First time at these concerts.)
Triple concerto for piano, flute, violin and orchestra ..... Bach
Harold Bauer.
Symphony No. 551 (Kochel), in C (Jupiter) ..... Mozart
Symphonic variations for piano and orchestra ..... Franck
Harold Bauer.
Suite, Sigurd Jorsalfar, op. 56 ..... Grieg

JANUARY 1-2.

Symphony in C minor ..... Stock
(First time at these concerts.)
Concerto in D major, for violin and orchestra ..... Paganini
Willy Burmester.
Symphonic poem, Les Preludes ..... Liszt

JANUARY 8-9.

Overture, Fidelio ..... Beethoven
Symphony No. 4, in B flat, op. 60 ..... Beethoven
Aria aus der Widerspanstigen Zahmung ..... Goetz
Elena Gerhardt.
Prelude to Act III, Die Meistersinger ..... Wagner
Stehe Still ..... Wagner
Traume ..... Wagner
Schmerzon ..... Wagner
Elena Gerhardt.
Overture, Rienzi ..... Wagner

JANUARY 15-16.

Symphonic poem, Tasso ..... Liszt
Symphony in B minor, op. 24 ..... Paderewski
(First time at these concerts.)

JANUARY 22-23.

Symphony No. 6 (B. & H.), in G major ..... Haydn
Concerto in D minor, for piano and orchestra ..... Mozart
Ossip Gabrilowitsch.
Concertstück for piano and orchestra, op. 79 ..... Weber
Ossip Gabrilowitsch.
Rondo, Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks ..... Strauss

JANUARY 29-30.

Overture, Manfred, op. 115 ..... Schumann ——— ..... Brahms
Fritz Kreisler.
Symphony No. 5, in C minor, op. 67 ..... Beethoven

FEBRUARY 5-6.

Symphony No. 5, in E minor, op. 95, from The New World .. Dvorák
Concerto in D minor, for violoncello and orchestra ..... Lalo
Herman Sandby.
Suite, L'Arlesienne ..... Bizet

FEBRUARY 12-13.

Suite ..... Lully
(First time at these concerts.)
Concerto in C minor, for piano and orchestra ..... Mozart
Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler.
Symphony No. 1, in G minor ..... Kalienikow
Fantasy on Hungarian melodies for piano and orchestra ..... Liszt
Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler.

FEBRUARY 19-20.

Symphony No. 3, in F major, op. 90 ..... Brahms
——— ..... Beethoven
Carl Flesch.
Overture, Die Meistersinger ..... Wagner

REGINA DE SALES TEACHER OF SINGING
Pupils Prepared for Opera, Oratorio, Concert
40 Rue de Villejust (Ave. du Bois de Boulogne), Paris.

THUEL BURNHAM
PIANIST
IN PARIS ENTIRE SUMMER
119 Rue de la Tour (XVI) Paris

ARNOLDE STEPHENSON SOPRANO
Management: Daniel Mayer, London A. Dandelot, Paris

MARTINUS SIEVEKING Pianist
INSTRUCTION BY A NEW METHOD.
Pupils limited. Results guaranteed.
36, rue Theophile Gautier, Paris, XVI.

WILLY von SADLER
TEACHER OF SINGING (Italian Method)
STUDIO 23, rue de l'Universite - - - PARIS

THE FRANCES E. DEVERELL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS
9 rue de Chaillot, Paris, France (Champs-Elysées). Exclusive residence district. Thorough French Course. Art lectures in great galleries. Season box at Opera. Travel classes. Address Mrs. G. J. Deverell, 109 Cedar St., Lapeer, Michigan, or Mlle. Deville Chabrol, 82 rue Vaneau, Paris.

SHEET MUSIC IN PARIS
The only store carrying a large stock of German, Russian, English and American music as well as French music.
MAX ESCHIG
TWO STORES—
13 Rue Lafitte (Near Boulevard des Italiens)
48 Rue de Rome (Near the Conservatory)

OSCAR SEAGLE
In America Season 1914-1915
Personal Address: Hotel Laurelton, 147 W. 55th St., New York
Management: Loudon Charlton, Carnegie Hall, New York

FEBRUARY 26-27.

verture, Don Giovanni.....Mozart
oncerto No. 4, in G major, op. 58, for piano and orchestra, Beethoven Harold Randolph.
ymphony, Rustic Wedding, op. 26.....Goldmark ıvitation á la Valse.....Weber

MARCH 12-13.

ymphony in E minor, op. 32.....Beach
(First time at these concerts.)
oncerto in D minor, op. 22, for violin and orchestra....Wieniawski Thaddeus Rich.
one poem, Tod und Verklarung, op. 24.....Strauss

MARCH 19-20.
(Nibelungenring program.)
as Rheingold—Entrance of the Gods into Walhalla.
ie Walküre—
Ride of the Valkyries.
Wotan's Farewell and Fire Music.
egfried .....Waldweben ötterdämmerung—
Siegfried's Rhine Journey.
Trauermarsch.
Closing Scene.

MARCH 26-27.

verture, Fingal's Cave, op. 26.....Mendelssohn
ymphony No. 4, in D minor, op. 120.....Schumann oncerto No. 5, in E flat major, Emperor, op. 73, for piano and orchestra .....Beethoven Josef Hofmann.
verture, Leonore No. 3.....Beethoven

APRIL 3-5.

horale from the cantata, Tachet auf Ruft uns die Stimme....Bach
(First time at these concerts.)
ria, Hai gia vinto la cansa, from Le Nozze de Figaro.....Mozart Theodore Harrison.
alian Serenade .....Wolf
ria, Eri tu, from Un Ballo in Maschera.....Verdi
Theodore Harrison.
ymphony No. 5, in E minor, op. 64.....Tschaikowsky

APRIL 9-10.

oumanian Rhapsody No. 2, in D major, op. 11.....Enesco
(First time at these concerts.)
oncerto No. 3, in B minor, op. 61, for violin and orchestra, Saint-Saëns Jacques Thibaud.
ymphony No. 3, in E flat (Eroica), op. 55.....Beethoven

APRIL 16-17.
Request program.

Thirteenth Is Kerr's Lucky Day.

That U. S. Kerr should begin his season of 1914-15 on e dreaded thirteenth seemed decreed. Four requests ıme for his recital on October 13, one from Ohio, ne from Pennsylvania and two from Connecticut. ot because Mr. Kerr is more fond of singing in cultured artford than in other cities—this is his annual recital that city—did he grant that place first choice, but simply cause its request came first.

U. S. KERR.

The dates are arranged as follows: Hartford, October ; Bridgeport, October 15; Scranton, October 21, and oungstown, October 25.

Mr. and Mrs. Kerr were about to sail for Europe in the ring, but were detained at home on account of severe ness in the family. Accordingly their summer was spent the north shore of Boston. Accompanying is a snap-ot of Mr. Kerr strolling on the "Wild New England ore."

In both incidents, that of the thirteenth and being in-rupted in his European trip, Mr. Kerr feels that "all's ll that ends well."

"Does Miss Yeller sing for money?" asked the old fogy. "I don't know," replied the grouch. "The only time I er heard her she seemed to be singing for spite."—Cin-nati Enquirer.

Louise Virginia Gorse's Versatility.

Louise Virginia Gorse is the subject of a two column sketch, with picture, in the Evening Enterprise of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., September 1. Miss Gorse has for years past been vice president of the New York State Music Teachers' Association, and it is safe to say that there are few women musicians who are better known. As a teacher of piano, organ, voice, as solo singer and director, her name is familiar to the entire Hudson River district from Troy to New York. Some of her best known instructors in various branches of music have been John Durege, Albert Ross Parsons, Oscar Saenger, Lewis Diemer, etc. She is a graduate of the musical department of Vassar College.

For some time she was soprano soloist of Calvary Baptist Church, Albany, N. Y. She has also taught music in the Butler Classical Home, Poughkeepsie, and was also organist and director of the choir of the Church of the Corner Stone and St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Newburgh.

LOUISE VIRGINIA GORSE.

Later she was director of music at New Paltz (N. Y.) Normal School, where she became organist and choir director of the Reformed Church.

In 1900 Miss Gorse visited Europe, where she made many helpful observations in the principal centers of music. Returning, she again located in Poughkeepsie, as soloist in the choir of the Church of Christ, and then in the First Congregational Church. In 1909 she accepted the position of organist and director of the First Baptist Church choir.

She gives frequent "musical teas," when qualified pupils play entire programs, and expects to continue them this winter. Numerous concerts and recitals have been under her direction, that of the D. A. R. in 1907 having been most noteworthy. She is a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and chairman of the music committee.

She has been instructor of music at the Riverview Military Academy and Glen Eden. Other institutions through the Central Hudson where she has taught music are Mount St. Mary's Academy, Newburgh; Union Free School, Garrison; the Misses Mackie School, Newburgh; Union Free School, Hyde Park.

The lecture-recital on Schubert, given at Vassar Institute, June 24, by pupils of Miss Gorse, was a most successful affair. Beethoven comes next on her list of historical lecture-recitals. Already a score of pupils have registered, and altogether the prospects for this teacher's season are substantial.

Miersch Pupil Announcement.

The engagement of Dorothy Kirkpatrick to Emile Heerman has just been announced.

Miss Kirkpatrick was a prize pupil of Johannes Miersch, the German violin virtuoso, and, having studied with him in Indianapolis, took advantage of his instruction when he assumed charge of the violin department at the College of Music of Cincinnati, Ohio. Miss Kirkpatrick continued her studies with him until the end of June, 1914, and besides receiving a certificate as violinist "with distinction," will be remembered for her performance of the Beethoven violin concerto last season. This and other solos she rendered in the college orchestra concerts under the direction of her teacher, Johannes Miersch.

Mr. Miersch has quite a number of newcomers in his large violin class and expects a brilliant season of work with his talented pupils. He will also again have the directorship of the college string quartet and the college orchestra.

New Address
PERCY HEMUS
Singer, and Teacher of Singing
64 EAST 34th STREET, NEW YORK
Has resumed teaching Recital Tour in the Spring
Aeolian Hall Recital, Evening November 6th

More Robsarte Professional Pupils.

Continuing the list of professional pupils of Lionel Hayes-Robsarte, the tenor and voice specialist, assistant to A. de Trabadelo, of Paris, there is given herewith a partial roster of his professional pupils who are prominent in concert, church, song recital, vaudeville, etc., as follows:

Helen Lewis, soprano; Alice Carroll, soprano; Mattie McKee, soprano; Flora Hannewald, soprano; Stella Thornton, soprano; Sallie Chaves, soprano; Margaret von Regelman, soprano; Kate Fofler, soprano; Johanna Lubsen, contralto; Tom Hayes, tenor; Arthur Sorensen, tenor; Gustave Aufmkolk, tenor; Vincent Mara, tenor; Sidney Kamna, tenor; Gustavius Liesendahl, tenor; Tomasso Paradiso, tenor; Douglas Robertson, tenor; Thomas Webb Murray, baritone.

Teachers: Clara Elton Fogg, New York; Mabel Fisher, Richmond, Va.; Charles Boylan, Rochester, N. Y.; Albert Tournier, Boston, Mass.

Thais Magrane, the American actress, last two seasons in the title role of "Everywoman." Kenean Buell, director Kalem Film Company; Grace d'Aubigne (Mrs. Robsarte), dramatic soprano, opera, concert and song recitals.

Hildegard Hoffmann Huss Pupil Honored.

Eva Campbell Ogletree, an artist-pupil of Hildegard Hoffmann Huss and well known in New York City and Norfolk, Va., as a delightful soloist and successful young teacher, has been engaged by Walton Perkins for the vocal department of the Conservatory of Chicago. Mrs. Campbell Ogletree, during four years of study with Mrs. Huss, had many successful concert appearances in and near New York, at the same time holding the position of soprano soloist at the First Baptist Church in Elizabeth, N. J.

MR. AND MRS. HENRY HOLDEN HUSS IN THEIR LAKE GEORGE STUDIO.

On her return to Norfolk, her native city, she sang there for four years, holding the soloist position in two of the most prominent churches.

Mrs. Campbell Ogletree has a rarely sympathetic lyric soprano voice, and possesses temperament and dramatic instinct. She has been a great advocate of the American song, being very partial to the beautiful songs of Arthur Foote and Henry Holden Huss, and, among the younger writers, Marion Bauer and A. Walter Kramer.

Franz X. Arens Returns October 1.

Franz X. Arens, the vocal authority, who has been spending the summer on his Oregon fruit ranch, is now conducting a month's course in voice culture in Portland, Ore. He reports that this course has been crowded to its capacity. October 1 will find him agin at his studio, 306 West Fifty-sixth street, New York.

MRS. KING CLARK Mezzo Soprano
American Tour
WHOLE SEASON 1914-15
Management, M. H. Hanson
437 Fifth Ave. New York

LOUIS KOEMMENICH HAS RETURNED FROM EUROPE.

Conductor of the New York Oratorio Society and Mendelssohn Glee Club Tells Experiences to a Musical Courier Representative—Met Some Noted Musicians This Summer—A Piano Purchased for Use on Steamer.

Louis Koemmenich, conductor of the Oratorio Society of New York, and Mendelssohn Glee Club, who has been abroad since last May, arrived in New York on the steamship Antilles, Thursday morning September 24, just in time to begin rehearsals of the above mentioned society on that same evening.

Mr. Koemmenich was met at the pier by members of both the Oratorio Society and Mendelssohn Glee Club. He was accompanied on this summer trip by Mrs. Koemmenich.

Approached by a MUSICAL COURIER representative for a few incidents of his sojourn abroad, Mr. Koemmenich evaded references to his unpleasant experiences, due to the general upheaval in Europe, though he had his share.

For two weeks Mr. and Mrs. Koemmenich's two daughters were utterly lost to them. During the past year they have been in a convent in Belgium, and just after the war was declared had started to meet their parents in Lucerne, when they were stranded on the way without being able to give any information at all in regard to their whereabouts during those two weeks.

"Arrived in Naples, we took the Capri, Sorrento, Amalfi, Pompeii trip, in company with Mr. and Mrs. Howard Brockway," Mr. Koemmenich related.

"From Naples we went to Rome, where we experienced the three days' labor strike. We had to walk, as there were no trolleys, no vehicles running. Soldiers were much in evidence.

"In Rome I was entertained by Professor Sgambati, Giovanni Sgambati, whose 'Requiem' the Oratorio Society is likely to give this season. I was his guest at the final graduation exercises of the St. Cecilia Academy, of which he is the head. Works of several conductors, who directed their own compositions, appeared on the program.

"From Rome we went to Florence, where I met Vittorio Gui, a protege of Toscanini, and one of the most promising of modern Italian writers and conductors. I have his latest songs.

"I tried to persuade several Italian composers to write chorus works, but there is no chance of performance in Italy, as there are no choral societies like ours and those in England and Germany.

"The only Italian composer who writes choral music in larger style is Enrico Bossi. He has written the oratorios 'Canticum Canticorum,' 'Paradise Lost' and 'Joan of Arc.' This last composition is being translated into English for the New York Oratorio Society, and will be given March 24, 1915. The composer visited me in Belaggio, on Lake Como, and played the entire work for me.

"Early in July we toured Switzerland, spending the last week at Lake Geneva, visiting the De Coppets at Villa Flonzaley; Ernest Schelling, at Villa Garengo, where we again met Mr. and Mrs. Brockway, and Grenados, the Spanish composer, and his charming daughter.

"July 31, we were invited to a Paderewski celebration. It was a brilliant gathering. Among those who were present were: Mr. and Mrs. Josef Hofmann, Mme. Sembrich and her husband, Frank la Forge (Mme. Sembrich's accompanist), Timothy Adamowsky (violinist, formerly of the Boston Symphony Orchestra), Efrem Zimbalist, Alma Gluck, Reginald de Koven and Mrs. de Koven, Eleanor Altmann (pianist), former Ambassador Hill, Mrs. Hill and their daughter, etc.

"The latter part of August we received a cablegram that our friends in New York had secured accommodations for us on the Antilles, which was to sail from Genoa.

"We stopped in Milan on our way to the boat and there we met Giulio Gatti-Casazza, who seemed and looked quite worried; Riccardo Martin and Rudolf Schirmer.

"Mr. and Mrs. Josef Hofmann and Rudolf Ganz were also on the Antilles, and although we were obliged to travel second cabin, we had a very pleasant trip. Mr. Hofmann, Mr. Ganz and I bought a piano at Genoa to use on shipboard, which we presented to Captain Boyd at the conclusion of the trip."

OF THE THREE SQUADRONS OF THE CHASSEURS D'AFRIQUE TWENTY-SEVEN MEN SURVIVED.
These were the first prisoners of war, taken in Lörrach, on August 20, 1914.
This photograph was brought from Europe by Louis Koemmenich.

LOUIS KOEMMENICH.

BARRICADE BETWEEN BASEL, SWITZERLAND, AND ST. LUDWIG, ALSACE-LORRAINE.
This photograph was brought from Europe by Louis Koemmenich.

The accompanying photographs show some of the obstacles in Mr. Koemmenich's path during his trip.

A general plan of the work of the Oratorio Society appeared in the September 2 issue of the MUSICAL COURIER.

Rehearsals for the Mendelssohn Glee Club will begin Monday, September 28, earlier than usual, as the club is going to give a concert October 14, at the 150th anniversary of Brown University, Providence, R. I.

Francis Rogers Back for the Winter.

Francis Rogers returned to New York September 25 for the winter. On September 24, he and Mrs. Rogers gave a recital in Lenox, Mass., for the benefit of the Ascension Farm School of Lenox, which netted $750. On October 10, Mr. and Mrs. Rogers will appear at the concert to be given at Tuxedo Park, N. Y., for the Red Cross Society. Mr. Rogers will give his annual New York recital early in November. His residence-studio address is now 115 East Fifty-third street, New York, where he is prepared to teach the art of singing.

This was the Lenox, Mass., program:

Songs—
- Das Veilchen (Goethe) ..... Mozart
- Die Ehre Gottes ..... Beethoven
- Ein Ton ..... Cornelius
- Vittoria ..... Carissimi
- L'Amour de Moi ..... Old French
- Embarquez-vous ..... Godard

Mr. Rogers.

Recitations—
- Vieux Conte ..... Rostand
- Moisson d'Epées ..... Coppée
- The Old Man and Jim ..... Riley
- The Notaire Publique ..... Drummond

Mrs. Rogers.

Songs—
- Venetian Song (Moore) ..... Schumann
- Since First We Met ..... Rubinstein
- Sylvelin ..... Sinding
- The Fairy Pipers ..... Brewer
- Border Ballad (Scott) ..... Cowen

Mr. Rogers.

Monologues—
- The Intelligence Office.
- When the Lad Comes Back.
- The Amalgamation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Rogers.

Dufault Returns from Antipodes.

Following a series of experiences, such as shipwreck and the death of Mme. Nordica, in whose concert company Paul Dufault was the tenor soloist, this artist has returned after more than a year's absence from New York. During this period he sang in Australia, New Zealand, Tasmania, as member of the Nordica Company; then in a series of 125 concerts at the head of his own organization, closing August 15, with a concert in Sydney, New South Wales. It was a tour of phenomenal success for Dufault, who, on a previous trip, had won the hearts of the people of that far off region. He is full of stories of his life, of the death of Nordica, etc., and later the MUSICAL COURIER will print an interview recounting much of this noteworthy trip. He has gone to his farm in Canada for a fortnight, returning to New York thereafter for the season, which promises fine things for this artist.

Frederick Delius' "Fennimore and Gerda," which had been planned for an October production at the Cologne Opera, has been postponed indefinitely.

Dresden's Royal Opera is closed indefinitely.

NEWARK FESTIVAL CHORUS IS GROWING RAPIDLY.

Many Cities, Towns and Villages Represented in Great Organization—1,000 Voices the Slogan—Newspapers and Men and Women of Prominence Join in Movement—Thousands of Posters Distributed—Musical Items of Interest.

Newark, N. J., September 28, 1914.

Just two weeks have passed since the first call for singers for the Newark Music Festival was published. During this time, however, the results have convinced the association and the critics, as well as the general public, that the proposed three day festival is not to be merely a dream, but, indeed, a real series of concerts such as have had no equal in this section of the country. The prospects grow brighter and brighter as each day goes by, and what at first seemed too enormous an undertaking for Newark, is now regarded as ably arranged for a city of such size and prominence. This refers to the initial festival; still greater things are expected for the festivals to follow.

When one realizes that it takes time for a city fully to appreciate an undertaking of this kind, and to become entirely in sympathy with such a movement, much more credit is due C. Mortimer Wiske, the director, and those working with him, for all that has been and is being accomplished in Newark.

In an enterprise of this kind it is particularly gratifying to the organization committee as well as the Newark Music Festival Asociation to be able to claim as earnest supporters of the movement the newspapers, which are doing a great deal to make the festival possible. The Newark Evening News, the Newark Sunday Call, the Newark Star (morning and evening), as well as the various foreign papers, are all thoroughly in sympathy with this musical campaign, and each of the critics has taken a personal interest that must necessarily prove of great benefit. The co-operation of the business men of Newark, both the employers and the employees, and the women, too, is going to make the festival a tremendous success, both artistically and financially.

The list of applicants for membership in the chorus is increasing daily. Singers from every conceivable town and village surrounding Newark have asked to join, and there are many choral societies and glee clubs that have entered in a body. It seems no longer a prediction that the chorus will be made up of 1,000 voices, but more seems certainty.

Every Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, from 10 a. m. until 9 p. m., Mr. Wiske is at the offices of the association to receive applications and to try voices. Every one with a fair voice and an ability to read music is urged to join the chorus.

As announced in a previous issue of the MUSICAL COURIER, the festival is to be held this year in the First Regiment Armory, May 4, 5 and 6, 1915. There will be a "Wagner Night," "Opera Night" and "Concert Night," and noted soloists will take part; there will also be an orchestra of 100 pieces.

This past week thousands of large placards have been distributed throughout Newark and the suburbs and have been placed in conspicuous places. In the center of the city many are displayed to splendid advantage in windows and on counters.

FRANCES ALDA IN CONCERT.

The Auxiliary of the Eighth Avenue Day Nursery has arranged a benefit concert, to be given in the Krueger Auditorium on October 20, which promises to be one of the most important concerts of the season. The soloists will be Frances Alda, the opera soprano; Frank la Forge, accompanist and pianist, and Guta Casini, violoncellist, who has been heard in this vicinity before. Mme. Alda is celebrated not only as an opera singer, but also in concert. She has sung in many concerts in American cities and always with great success. Frank la Forge is one of the best known accompanists now living; he is also a fine solo pianist. Mr. Casini is also an artist of note.

SPECIAL MEETING OF NEWARK MUSICIANS' CLUB.

A special meeting of the Newark Musicians' Club has been called for this evening, Wednesday, September 30, in Lauter's recital hall, Broad street. The regular meeting of the club will be held on October 14, at 41 Spruce street, for which an attractive musical program has been arranged.

NEWARK SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA BEGINS REHEARSALS.

Rehearsals for the concerts of the Newark Symphony Orchestra for the season 1914-1915, will begin tonight, Monday, September 28, at 8 p. m., and continue every Monday evening. Prompt and regular attendance at rehearsals is an essential factor toward extending appreciation of the support which the new organization, through the subscribers, has given the orchestra and by which Mr. Ehrke will be greatly assisted in the work of making the orchestra a permanent institution and thereby hold the support of friends and subscribers. Mr. Ehrke will take up for consideration any new candidates for the various departments of the orchestra and the names of any who have the ability to pass the requirements of the conductor should be sent to him as soon as possible.

OLYMPIC PARK CONCERTS.

An innovation will be inaugurated at Olympic Park beginning Sunday, October 4, when a sacred concert will be given afternoon and evening by the management of that resort in the big dance pavilion. The structure has been equipped with a model steam heating system, so that patrons will not be subjected to discomfort in any sort of weather. The concerts will be continued every Sunday throughout the winter, and will be strictly high class, according to the promoters, who say that the program will be in consonance with those given during the summer.

MUSIC NOTES.

On September 18, Alma Holm, a professional student of the Russell studios, and a teacher in the College of Music, gave a farewell piano recital which proved a delightful affair. Miss Holm, who is an ardent exponent of the Russell method, has accepted a position as a member of the faculty of Columbia College, South Carolina, where she will teach piano and theory. The pianist's program on this occasion included the Italian Concerto, by Bach; the Grieg sonata; a Schumann and Brahms group, and pieces by Debussy and Liszt. The loss of Miss Holm will be greatly felt not only at the College of Music, but also among her many friends in Newark.

The Oratorio Society will begin rehearsals for the first concert of the thirty-sixth season, in Music Hall, Center street, near Park place terminal station, this evening September 28. The society will give the annual performance of "The Messiah" on the occasion of its Christmas concert. The chorus is also to give a special concert in the New Temple Bnai Jeshurun, early in the season. The usual plan of two public concerts and one private concert will be continued. At the first rehearsal reports of last season will be read, and general plans for the chorus discussed and adopted. Singers are invited to be present and to apply for membership, or may write the secretary, at 17 Center street, for an appointment with the director, Mr. Russell.

Louis Svecenski, the viola player of the Kneisel Quartet, arrived in New York last week on an Italian steamer. He had to come in the steerage, but was glad to get back in any way. Hans Letz, the second violin, will probably not be able to get back. His place will be taken by Mr. Gardner, a pupil of Franz Kneisel.

Paul Petri arrived in Newark on Friday on the steamer Adriatic, having made his way from Berlin to Rotterdam and thence to London. He sailed from Liverpool on September 17.

The Beethoven Music Club, of East Orange, has issued its new year book. This volume gives in detail the work to be carried out during the season by its members. The club was organized in 1907 and federated last year, the fifteen members assembling every second week, from October to May, to study schools of music, composers, and illustrate vocally and instrumentally. Mrs. Robert W. Maust, 389 North Grove street, will be the hostess of the club at its opening meeting next Friday afternoon, October 2, when, in addition to the miscellaneous program, Mrs. Edwin T. Murdoch will present a paper on "The Prepolyphonic School."

During the year the club will study the following composers: Domenico Scarlatti, Bach, Handel, Haydn, Beethoven, Schubert, Mendelssohn, Bartholdy, Chopin, Schumann, Brahms, Liszt, Strauss and Rubinstein. A memorial program to Edward MacDowell and a program of Christmas music will characterize the December meetings, while a musicale of much interest will be given in the Woman's Club House of Orange, February 25. Flower day will be observed in April and the season will close with a discussion of the modern school of music at the last three sessions. The officers are: Mrs. Arthur D. Walters, president; Christine van Wagenen, vice president; Mrs. Oscar R. Flynn, corresponding secretary; Miss M. E. van Gunter, recording secretary; Mrs. E. T. Murdoch, treasurer.

T. W. ALLEN.

Florence Macbeth's Encomiums.

(Continued from page 10.)

Brunhilde, Isolde and others of that like, it is often a relief to listen to a singer who knows the meaning of and appreciates the artistic value of the bel canto. Such a one may have to rely, as did the others, including Jenny Lind, Patti, Gerster, Nilsson and Sembrich, upon the operas beloved of our grandfathers, and which in these days of modern and ultra-modern works, are treated with a certain scorn born of comparison, but when one sits back in his seat and listens to singing such as Miss Macbeth gave her audience last night, one cannot help saying to himself: "God bless Donizetti, Meyerbeer and all the rest, who loved melody and immortalized it in their facile scenes and arias."—St. Paul Pioneer Press, April 28, 1914.

Her art is one thing, her voice is distinctly another. Her art is crystalline, lucid and precise to the *n*th degree. Her dexterity with scales, diatonic and chromatic, is uncannily complete. Her mastery of the roulade, the trill and all the complicated figure work with unpronounceable Italian names, is amazing, challenging, dazzling.—St. Paul Daily News, April 28, 1914.

AS GILDA.

Its "Rigoletto" displayed, however, one notable exception, which might even have satisfied the reincarnated Rossini, in the singing of Florence Macbeth. The prize for the evening went, quite deservedly, to Miss Macbeth.—The Bellman, April 25, 1914.

IN RECITAL.

The first number showed Miss Macbeth's wonderful skill in the use of her voice, its purity and sweetness of tone; but its perfection of sweetness and sympathy came most remarkably in the simple little song, "Memory," which reached the heart.—The Faribault Democrat, May 8, 1914.

Dr. Franz Beier, conductor of the Cassel Opera, died recently. He was fifty-seven years old.

William Thorner

VOCAL TEACHER

Mme. Schumann-Heink writes:

"To Mr. Thorner, the best vocal teacher I ever met and whom I strongly recommend.

(Signed) SCHUMANN-HEINK."

Other endorsements by Edouard de Reszke, George Hamlin, Bernardo de Muro, Marguerite Sylva, Georgette Leblanc-Maeterlinck. Teacher of Anna Fitziu, Galli Curci, Carl Cochems and others.

Address 70 West 68th St., New York.

SCHUMANN-HEINK

TOUR—SEASON 1914-15—NOW BOOKING

Direction: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th Street, New York

STEINWAY PIANO USED

KATHARINE COODSON

Management: Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York.

"A POETESS OF THE PIANO"

In America January to April 1915

TOUR NOW BOOKING

KNABE PIANO

PIANOS IN PARIS
Weber & Steck Pianos. Pianolas. Pianola-Pianos
We invite comparison with any and all French makes both as regards quality and price.
Renting for Music Students a Specialty
THE AEOLIAN CO., 32, AVENUE DE L'OPERA

Anita Rio Arrives in Boston on Canopic.

Not more than a few hours after Anita Rio set foot in her native land after an absence of nearly eight years, she greeted the MUSICAL COURIER representative in Boston and during a delightful hour's chat made the interviewer feel that her prolonged absence on the other side though Italy's gain was distinctly America's loss. She reached Boston last Thursday on the steamship Canopic.

A woman of charming personality, vivacious, witty and possessing marked individuality, Mme. Rio entertained her manager, Howard Potter, and the writer with stories of Italy—her career there—the characteristics of the people and their standing musically. It is a pity that many of Mme. Rio's remarks cannot be quoted verbatim for their originality of expression if nothing else, but unfortunately this writer's memory is not equal to the task. On the whole Mme. Rio corroborated what has been said many times that Italy has little musical life outside of its opera, that nearly every one from the cab driver to the barber knows his opera (Italian, of course) perfectly, and displays his knowledge at all times and places—in the opera house and in the street. "It is because of this intimate knowledge that many American singers fail when they try to debut," said Mme. Rio, "since they place themselves, with but a three or four months' acquaintance with the Italian language, before an audience of real critics and connoisseurs."

There was no such experience for Mme. Rio, however, since she is a natural born linguist, a heritage perhaps of her Spanish father and Belgian mother, and it was not more than a few months after her arrival in Italy that she made her debut at the Costanzi in Rome and followed this with appearances at the Teatro Rossini in Venice and other prominent Italian opera houses. During this time she made her home in Milan where her husband, J. Armour Galloway, also an American, is one of the prominent vocal teachers.

It was as a concert and oratorio singer, however, that Mme. Rio made her reputation in this country, and it is to this field that she is now returning under the able management of Howard E. Potter, of New York. A curious coincidence was Mme. Rio's landing in Boston after her very long absence from this country, as it was in this city that she made her first big public appearance as soloist at one of the Handel and Haydn concerts. She also appeared there with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Apollo Club and the Cecilia Society, while throughout New England, in the small towns as well as the larger cities, she is equally well known and liked.

A unique feature of Mme. Rio's oratorio performances is her custom of not using a score. Gifted with a remarkably fine memory she long since abandoned singing from music and thus ridded herself and her audience of one of the distasteful aspects of oratorio singing.

Maverick-Hahn in Syracuse.

Laura Maverick, mezzo-contralto, and Carl Hahn will open the Syracuse Morning Musical recital series, Syracuse, N. Y., October 7. The following program has been arranged for this event:

Aria from Orfeo, Che faro senza, Eurydice.....Gluck
French songs—
Ouvre tes Yeux Bleus.....Massenet
Novembre.....Tremisot
Romance.....Debussy
L'Enamouree.....R. Hahn
Pour Ia Chanter.....Gourod
German songs—
Es blinkt der Thau.....Rubinstein
Sapphische Ode.....Brahms
Verborgenheit.....Wolf
Zueignung.....Strauss
Andacht.....Popper
Tarantello.....Popper
English songs—
When I Bring to You Colored Toys.....John Alden Carpenter
The Sleep that Flits on Baby's Eyes (from Tagore's Gitanjali).....John Alden Carpenter
The Rice Was under Water (from Stars of the Desert), Woodforde-Finden
For a Dream's Sake.....A. Walter Kramer
'Tis All that I Can Say.....Carl Hahn

Andrea Sarto with Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra.

Andrea Sarto, one of the most prominent baritones before the public, came to New York from his summer home at Stonybrook, L. I., recently at the request of his manager, Walter Anderson, and was advised of a large number of bookings already made for the coming season.

These bookings include recitals with clubs and before educational institutions, oratorios and appearances as soloist with different orchestras. An engagement closed while Mr. Sarto was in the office, was to appear as soloist with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, Emil Oberhoffer conductor.

ANITA RIO.

Mr. Sarto has for some years been looked upon as a very artistic and satisfactory singer in New York and the East, but it is only since last season that he has extended his field of activities to the West, and this year he will be heard in most of the important cities as far west as Denver.

Mr. Sarto is first and foremost a "singer." He is not of a school which is "half elocution." He does not overindulge in those latest and newest exotic compositions of the sort which have made such ravages upon the "school of melody."

There is good reason for this, as Mr. Sarto's voice is one of the most beautiful in color and quality to be heard, and he has range and volume, which qualifications enable him to "interpret" and yet always on the beautiful singing voice.

Mr. Sarto, while modest, is an interesting and intelligent talker on the art of singing, and his ideas are well worth the deep consideration of the student.

"God gave me a very beautiful and generous organ," says Mr. Sarto, "and I had by instinct a certain amount of interpretive ability. I began to study when I was very young, and my singing was from the beginning a source of great pleasure to me. I would sing at the homes of m friends, at my instructors' studios (and I have had man instructors) always with success, and so went by my stu dent days amid applause of friendly audiences, while dreamed of the professional career just ahead of me, whe as I thought, I would take the world 'by storm.' I was tol by friends and teachers that I was 'great' and I believe them. It pleased me to believe them, and I would hav believed them had it not pleased me, as I had absolut faith in their advice, and I had at that time no knowledg of what good singing consisted.

"I remember, however, the rude awakening, when launched myself upon my career, to find that I was doin no 'storming'; the audiences who paid to hear me ar knew me only from the program, seemed to be quite di ferent to the ones I had met in the parlor and studio; could find no one fully to agree with me as to the mea ure of my 'greatness.' I had, as I thought, equipped m self for opera and oratorio, but I found when I wished put it to the test, that I had been only a 'studio flower,' 'hothouse plant,' which could not stand the cold blasts a critical audience, but could thrive only under the flatte of instructor and applause of friends.

"Then, for the first time did I realize where I stood, th my student days were past. Yet, while I had lost mu money and valuable time, I had not lost my determinatic and here came the turning point in my career. I associat myself with Joseph Baernstein-Regneas, whom I consid the greatest voice teacher and coach for songs, orato and opera that I have ever met; I have studied with ma instructors in New York and in the different countries Europe, but I have never met an instructor who had l art so well in hand or who taught with such seriousness purpose, such energy and uncompromising honesty a straightforwardness.

"I had always flattered myself that I had been a go student, but I did not know what actual work was u my plans were laid out by Baernstein-Regneas. For first time I received a clear picture of myself—my good well as my weak side—and I can truthfuly say, that musical worth only began in that fateful month of Mar 1910.

"Within a year I had changed my church position, ceived more than twice the remuneration. I faithfully to work memorizing the standard oratorios and innum able songs for recitals. I took up my opera work again I felt myself awakening.

"My engagements each season grew in number and portance, and Mr. Anderson has already booked for more appearances for 1914-15 than I have previously fi during any entire year."

Mr. Sarto confines himself entirely to concert w He has sung in opera abroad and in this country and d ing the regime of Conried he was a member of the Me politan Opera Company. He says that the concert st appeals to him more strongly than the opera stage, that he would rather interpret an 'Elijah' or a 'Requiem oratorio than a Count Luna or Wotan in the opera.

At orchestral appearances, Mr. Sarto invariably o operatic arias as his numbers, and with such breadth style and conviction that he is often tempted by s operatic manager to return to the operatic stage.

When asked why more singers do not forge to the fr Mr. Sarto replied: "Lack of tenacity; it is that 'stic power' that counts, and it was Baernstein-Regneas convinced me beyond a question of a doubt of this In my travels I meet many beautiful voices and with exception they all wish to become 'great' and they 'wis sincerely and religiously—but, 'determine' to get there. persist and determine again and again—that is what k so many from really arriving. In other words, they c their 'wishbone' where their 'backbone' ought to be."

The musician's profession is still more hampered by war since modern military strategy banishes from the battlefield all bands and drum corps.—New York Topics.

HINSHAW
Metropolitan Opera
BARITONE
Berlin Wagner Ring Festival, June 23rd to Aug. 21st
American Tour
DECEMBER TO JU
Management R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway, N. Y.

Mme. OLIVE FREMSTAD
Exclusive Management FOSTER & DAVID, 500 Fifth Avenue, New York
NOW IN AMERICA—DATES BOOKING SEASON 1914-191
STEINWAY PIANO USED

Soloists and Itinerary of Nelson Band.

William Warvelle Nelson and his band will be supported a group of famous soloists on the annual tour of the anization beginning October 5. Among these are Cora

ROSS MILLHOUSE,
Cornet soloist.

mpre, an American artist, who has had marked success opera in Vienna, Nice and Milan, where she was ac- med by the press as one of the foremost dramatic so- nos of the present day; Ross Millhouse, cornet soloist; es B. Sery, euphonium soloist, and J. J. Faricy, flutist. s group of soloists will add greatly to the artistic suc- s of this tour, which has been booked on entirely new original lines, almost exclusively on musical and civic rses and nothing but the highest class of music will be duced. Conspicuous on the programs will be found iphonies, symphonic poems and other works of musical ue, and the usual frivolous and popular numbers used many band programs, will be conspicuous by their ab- ce.

Conductor Nelson has proven conclusively that the pub- wants the very best there is in music from a band, which audience at Harriet have demonstrated.

The itinerary of the first four weeks of the tour is: va City, Iowa; Marshalltown, Iowa; Newton, Iowa;

CORA KEMPRE.

one, Iowa; Ft. Dodge, Iowa; Waterloo, Iowa; Oelwein, va; Cherokee, Iowa; Yankton, S. D.; Wayne, Neb.; anute, Kan.; Iola, Kan.; Ottawa, Kan.; York, Neb.; arney, Neb.; Laramie, Wyo.; Idaho Falls, Idaho; Hel- a, Mont.; Bozeman, Mont.; Billings, Mont.; Miles City, ont.; Bismarck, N. D.; Williston, N. D.; Minot, N. D.; vil's Lake, N. D.; Wausau, Wis.; Waupon, Wis.; Nee- h, Wis.; Oshkosh, Wis., and Ripon, Wis.

Minneapolis School of Music Events.

The regular Saturday morning recital was given in the hool hall September 19 at eleven o'clock, by Louise Har- on Adams, who was recently appointed as one of the in- uctors in the piano department.

Mrs. Adams was graduated from the Cincinnati Con- vatory, where she studied with Frederic Shaler Evans. ter she studied with Josef Lhevinne in New York. She s had considerable experience as concert pianist and companist on tour, which was clearly revealed by her cellent playing of a very choice program on this occa- n.

Graduates of the Public School Music Course, who have cently been appointed to positions, are Louise Petersen, Valley City, S. D.; May Lichter, Jackson, N. D.; Nettie Larsen, Riceville, Iowa.

Selma Wittig, class of 1911-12 is teaching a large class of piano pupils in Bimidji, Minn.

Vivian Pattridge, soprano pupil of William H. Pontius, is busy with a large class in Tracy, Minn.

Alma Shirley, soprano pupil of William H. Pontius and Olga Hesse, pianist, pupil of Signor Fabbrini, have opened a studio at Rice Lake, Wis., and are already busy with promising classes.

The first play of the season to be given by the school players will be "Niobe All Smiles," a modern comedy for which rehearsals have already begun.

Mary G. Kellett gave a recital on Saturday morning, September 19.

Gemünder Violins Damaged by Fire.

In 1906 Richard H. Griffin bought the two original "Gemünder Model Violins" and presented them to the Jesuit College of Columbus, Ohio. With the two expensive bows, encased in alligator skin cases, these valuable instruments recently went through a fire which scorched them badly. The instruments are the same ones which Mr. Gemünder took to Europe in 1907, when they were played upon by Joachim, Halir and other authorities. Miss Zedeler, who accompanied Sousa upon his remarkable world tour, played on an instrument of the same model. It is now the task of the house of Gemünder to restore these instruments so that they will in every respect equal their original condition.

WILLIAM WARVELLE NELSON,
Conductor, Nelson and His Band.

Henrietta Gemünder, op. 1, the first daughter of August M. Gemünder, is, at this writing, twenty-four days old. All the parties immediately concerned, including papa, are doing well.

Mehan Studios Reopen.

The John Dennis Mehan studios, Carnegie Hall, New York, have reopened with the largest registration of pupils in the history of this institution. This is at it should be, because Mr. and Mrs. Mehan are acknowledged vocal authorities, who take a personal interest in every pupil, and advance them vocally and artistically to the fullest measure. One has but to spend a few moments with Mr. Mehan to recognize in him a remarkable, intellectual personality. Busy all summer, they have just returned from a fortnight's vacation at the seashore. His many friends find Mr. Mehan looking better than for some years past.

Marshall Kernochan's Compositions.

The summer just passed has not found Marshall Kernochan idling his time away. On the contrary, he has been "hard at it," as he says, and has completed two songs just published by Schirmer. They are to be reviewed in the columns of the MUSICAL COURIER; enough for the present to say that, like all the Kernochan works, they are extremely melodious and singable.

"The Sleep of Summer," for women's chorus, in four parts, with orchestra, has just been finished. Connoisseurs pronounce this one of his best works.

OWING TO THE WAR

MR. CHARLES W.
CLARK

has cancelled the extensive tour of Great Britain and Ireland booked for him by L. G. Sharpe of London

And Is Available for Recitals and Concerts

FOR THE WHOLE SEASON

Apply for dates to

Concert Direction M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue :: :: New York

Hemus Recital, November 6.

Percy Hemus, the dramatic baritone, known to many people as "the second Bispham," is planning an original and interesting program for his recital at Aeolian Hall, New York, November 6. Part one will consist of standard works by eminent composers, mostly European; part two of a group of songs by American women composers, followed by another group of American men composers.

Mr. Hemus' new and handsomely appointed studios at 64 East Thirty-fourth street, New York, have been refinished, and here he will be found teaching actively six days in the week. As Mr. Hemus' tour will not occur until the spring of next year, he will devote special attention to this branch of the musical art, viz., vocal music in all its phases.

Werrenrath's Recital.

Reinald Werrenrath's seventh annual New York recital will take place Monday evening, October 26, in Aeolian Hall. The program of the baritone will include three songs by Arthur Hinton, the English composer; a group of modern Italian songs, and a group of songs still in manuscript.

JAMES J. FARICY,
Flute virtuoso with Nelson and His Band.

Huss Song at Mme. Homer's First Recital.

Henry Holden Huss has dedicated one of his newest songs, "Sommernacht" (text by Myrza Schaffy), to Louise Homer, who has at once added it to her repertoire, and will sing it for the first time on October 15, at the opening concert of this season in the Brooklyn Institute. Mr. Huss' publishers, G. Schirmer, will issue the song immediately.

BOSTON NOTES.

Boston, Mass., September 26, 1914.

An exceedingly interesting letter received at our Boston office from Heinrich Gebhard merits quotation for the definite information it gives of conditions in Germany previous to and during the war.

Boston, September 19, 1914.

DEAR MISS FREEDMAN: Here I am back again in America, safe and sound with my mother and sister. Not wounded, nor arrested as a spy, nor blown up by a mine. When we sailed off last June so cheerfully, we little dreamed of the terrific catastrophe into which we went. And yet, with the exception of a very trying home voyage, we suffered no hardships whatever.

Terrible and shocking as this unheard of war is, my days in Germany during the first weeks of it will be unforgettable. For in the awfulness of the idea of that war it was inconceivably wonderful to see the patriotism and spontaneous enthusiasm with which the nation rose as one man to defend the country and their Kaiser. On the evening of the mobilization announcement I stood with my sister on the great square of Munich (Odeons Platz) and the power of eloquence with which the throng of 20,000 people sang the "Watch on the Rhine" went beyond any symphony or music drama I ever heard!

